An old lady, 72 years of age, who suffered for many years and was absolutely helpless, found relief. A man who was helpless, unable to rise from his chair, was riding horseback and playing tennis within a year. A little child, paralyzed, was playing about the house after wearing a Philo Burt Appliance three weeks. We have successfully treated more than 45,000 cases the past 20 years.

30 Days' Trial Free

We will prove its value in your own case. There is no reason why you should not accept our offer. The photographs show how light, cool, elastic and easily adjusted the Philo Burt Appliance is — how different from the old torturous plaster, leather or steel jackets.

Every sufferer with a weakened or deformed spine owes it to himself to investigate thoroughly. Price within reach of all.

Send For Our Free Book.

If you will describe the case it will aid us in giving you definite information at once.

PHILO BURT MFG. CO.
834-6 Odd Fellows Temple
JAMESTOWN, N. Y.

FROM MISERY TO COMFORT

STRAITOE

MAKES FEET SHAPELY AND 100% EFFICIENT
STRAIGHTENS TOES
REDUCES ENLARGED JOINTS
BANISHES BUNIONS

SEEING IS BELIEVING!
WEARING IS RELIEVING!

No great length of time—no inconvenience—no discomfort—no pain—no irritation—no special shoes—worn in the shoe—nothing like it on the market—no great outlay.

$2.00 Per Pair (Single Foot $1.25)

All Men's and Women's Sizes

Your dealer can supply you with STRAITOE, or we will. Accept no substitutes.

Write us for Free Booklet on Foot Troubles

THE STRAITOE CO., Inc., 341A Fifth Ave., N.Y.C.

"DON'T SHOUT"

"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. 'How?' With the MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but they are invisible. I would not know I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right.

"The Morley Phone for the

DEAF

is to the ears what glasses are to the eyes. Invisible, comfortable, weightless and harmless. Anyone can adjust it." Over one hundred thousand sold. Write for booklet and testimonials

THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 766, 26 S. 15th St., Phila.

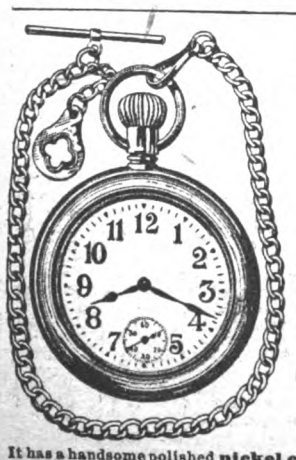
Don't Wear a Truss

BE COMFORTABLE—Wear the Brooks Appliance, the modern scientific invention which gives rupture sufferers immediate relief. It has no obnoxious springs or pads. Automatic Air Cushions bind and draw together the broken parts. No salves or plasters. Durable, Cheap. Sent on trial to prove its worth. Beware of imitations.

MR. C. E. BROOKS

Look for trade-mark bearing portrait and signature of C. E. Brooks which appears on every Appliance. None other genuine. Full information and booklet sent free in plain, sealed envelope.

BROOKS APPLIANCE CO., 157T State St., Marshall, Mich.



The Bee Cell Supporter

A BOON TO WOMANKIND

Made from the purest, softest rubber. Six cups or faces render misplacement absolutely impossible. Endorsed by the medical profession. Send us $2.50 and we will mail you one postpaid in plain package. Money back if not entirely satisfactory. Write for descriptive circular. It's FREE.

The Bee Cell Co., Dept. 168 White Bldg., Buffalo, N. Y.

Gent's Watch and Chain

Reward No. 7696

For A Club Of Six!

A WATCH that any man or boy may feel proud to carry, and an excellent timekeeper. It has a handsome polished nickel case; the movement is American made, stem wind and stem set, the dial is pure white with large plain easily read figures. We have already given away thousands of these watches and they never fail to please and satisfy. Now is the time for you to secure one of these guaranteed watches before the price of them goes up still further as it is pretty sure to do in the near future. We will send you this watch exactly as described, together with a chain, if you will accept the following Club Offer. For a club of only six one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this guaranteed watch, also a handsome chain free by Parcel Post, prepaid. Reward No. 7696. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Subscribers are invited to write to this department asking for any information desired relative to the treatment of animal troubles. Questions will be answered in these columns free by an eminent veterinarian. Describe the trouble fully, sign full name and give your address; direct all correspondence to the Veterinary Department, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

No attention will be given any inquiry which lacks the sender's full name and address, but we will print only initials if so requested.

IT is a fundamental principle of successful horse production to conserve by all means possible flesh a foal puts on while suckling its dam. The most profitable gain is made in the first12 months of life. If a foal be stunted then it never makes up the loss. A draft-bred colt that is to make a ton horse must be made to weigh practically 1,000 pounds by the time it is 12 months old. To that end the mare must not be allowed to work too hard, furnish "heated" milk to her foal or dry up before the foal has learned to eat oats and bran, besides good grass or fine hay. It pays to generously feed the nursing mare and as early as possible have the foal learn to eat oatmeal. Then add a little wheat bran and gradually increase the feed, substituting crushed oat for oatmeal and later allowing sound, whole oats. Don't let the foal run with the mare when she is at work in the field or being driven on the road. Let the mare eat a pound or two of hay when cooling off at noon and strip her udder almost dry at that time before the foal is allowed to nurse.

A good ration for growing purebred draft foals is composed of ground oats, 60 parts; corn meal, 15 parts, bran, 10, and cut alfalfa hay, 15 parts. Of this let the foals clean up all they care to take. Blood worms also cause lack of thrift and more loss of foal flesh than poor feed or inadequate feeding. To prevent them from invading the intestines or doing harm should they gain entrance let the foals help themselves to a mixture of two parts of table salt and one part each of dried sulphate of iron, flowers of sulphur and ground gentian and fenugreke, by weight. Here is an even better "lick" to which foals and calves or sheep and lambs may be allowed free access: Salt, 280 parts; dried sulphate of iron, 16 parts; powdered wood charcoal, 12 parts; flowers of sulphur, 8 parts, by weight. Mix and place where it will not be wetted by rain. If the growth of the bony frame of the colts is poor add to the other feed daily two or three ounces of digester tankage containing ground bone, or one ounce of ground bone, ground rock phosphate (floats) or precipitated phosphate of lime. Feed clover or alfalfa hay in preference to other roughage.

BALKY HORSE.—What would you advise one to do for a balky and kicking horse? H. E.

A.—There is no certain remedy for balking or kicking. It is usually best to get rid of such horses as life is too short to waste time bothering with them. Detracting the horse's attention is most effective for balking. Pick up a foot and pound lightly on the shoe with a stone or hammer or put one ear under the brow band of the bridle for a time. In bad cases casting and hogtying the balking horse and letting him lie there for an hour or so is an effective remedy. Buckle a 10-inch piece of trace chain to the pastern of the leg with which he does the kicking and he may then quit the vice.

EYE TROUBLE.—I would like to know what to do for my sheep. She has a white skum all over her eyeball. E. D. C.

A.—Confine the sheep in a darkened stable. Two or three times daily bathe the eye with a saturated solution of boric acid and in the evening put a little bit of one per cent. yellow oxide of mercury ointment in the eye and also smear some on the upper eyelid. Remove any chaff or other foreign object that may have lodged under the eyelid.

STOCKED LEG.—Will you tell me what to do for my horse that was wire cut on hind leg, just at knee and the hair has not grown in again. When he stands in the stable for a week his leg stocks up as though it was full of pus. D. A.

A.—Never let any horse stand for a single day without taking active exercise when there is no work for him to do. Allow the horse a roomy box stall when in the stable, or turn him loose in the shed when not at work. Twice daily rub some 10 per cent. iodine petrogen or vesogen into the swollen joint. If that does not prove remedial use a proprietary reducing preparation which you can buy at a drug store.

THIN MILK.—I have a cow five years old, that freshened four weeks ago. Her milk doesn't sour, but turns to water after the cream rises. It tastes all right while sweet. She miscarried two calves between the first and last. She eats well and was on the range all winter, until just before the calf came. Can you tell me what is wrong with her milk? I milked her until she became pregnant with this last calf. E. W.

A.—The cow absolutely exhausted her stored up materials from which milk is manufactured by being milked up to calfing time, and not being generously fed mixed meals and clover or alfalfa hay. She may improve if so fed now, but we fear she has tuberculosis which is incurable and contagious and makes the milk dangerous for use by man or animals. Have the tuberculin test applied by a qualified veterinarian and if she reacts dispose of her in the manner prescribed by state law.

WART.—I have a six-year-old mare that has a wart on her nose as large around as one dollar and twice as thick. It cracks and bleeds sometimes. I would like to know of some strong acid that will burn it off. F. H.

A.—Do not apply dilute nitric acid or any strong caustic unless that proves necessary. First try the effects of a thick paste of equal quantities of cold pressed castor oil, salt and flowers of sulphur applied two or three times daily. If that fails, after a thorough trial, rub with a lunar caustic pencil two or three times a week, removing the scab each time it loosens. Apply the acid twice a week as a last resort. After applying lard around the part, or have the growth dissected out by a surgeon.

PIG-EATING SOW.—When my sow, ten months old brought pigs she ate them. I moved the pig bed. Could that cause her to eat them and is she likely to do this the next time? A. B.

A.—Such a sow should be fattened for slaughter as she will be likely to eat her pigs again. Do not allow a sow to eat the afterbirth. That induces an appetite for flesh and the pigs may then be killed and eaten. Allow the sow all the salt she cares to take when she starts to kill her pigs. Feeding salt pork is the popular remedy. Moving the pig bed would not cause it.

GAS CYSTS.—What causes air bubbles on the intestines of hogs and what is the remedy for them? In butchering I have found little air bubbles on the intestines. W. H. P.

A.—This condition is common in hogs and does not seem to cause any inconvenience. It is caused by bacteria and there is no specific remedy. Keep hogs in sanitary pens and yards and keep them free from intestinal parasites.

WORMS OF HOGS.—Please tell me what is the best home remedy for worms in hogs. Do you think lye is good for hogs, or do you think copperas is better? I don't think it pays to give high-priced medicine to hogs. I would rather give home remedies. L. L.

A.—Do not give concentrated lye to hogs. A good mixture, when expensive worm remedies cannot be given is, powdered wood charcoal, 25 pounds, salt, eight pounds, ground rock phosphate, four pounds ground limestone, four pounds, flowers of sulphur, four pounds, powdered copperas, one pound. Keep it in a self feeder to which allow hogs access at all times. It is a good mineral tonic, conditioner and worm preventive.

LAME MARE.—My mare, six years old, was lame in her left front foot all winter. Her foot seems sound. All I can find is a small ridge about an inch above her hoof.

A.—Wash the part clean: then keep cold wet swabs of felt or cotton waste constantly upon the hoof-head for one month. If the lameness then persists clip the hair from the hoof-head and blister it two or three times, if necessary, with a mixture of one dram of powdered cantharides, one dram of biniodide of mercury and one and one-half ounces of lard. Rub it in for fifteen minutes, then tie the mare up short. Wash the blister off in forty-eight hours. Then apply a little lard daily. Repeat blisterings in two or three weeks.

OFF-FLAVORED MILK.—Will you tell me what to do for my cow. She appears to be in good health, but there is a disagreeable odor to her milk and at times her breath is offensive. The milk is slimy. J. L.

A.—The milk is unfit for any purpose. Garget of the udder probably is present and is due to germ infection. The cow may also be affected with tuberculosis. To determine that you should have the tuberculin test applied by a veterinarian. If she does not react it would be best to dry off the milk secretion and fit her for the butcher.

GARGET.—I want information about one of my cows. She will freshen in June. For two months has been unfit for use. It milks ropy and lumpy, some of it like clabber and for the last week or two I find she has a hard lump in one side of the udder. L. A. D.

A.—Germ-infection of a quarter has caused manmitis (garget) and, at the present stage, it is incurable. The lump is a tumor also due to garget. Strip the affected quarter clean every two hours during the day and in the evening rub in a mixture of equal quantities of camphorated oil, carbolized oil, and compound soap liniment. When she "freshens" better let the calf nurse. The affected quarter may be even more severely diseased after the next calfing. Such a cow should be kept isolated and milked last as the infection may be spread by the milker's hand to sound cows.

"Virtue itself offends when coupled with forbidding manners."—Bishop Middleton.

Through the columns of this department free information pertaining to Etiquette, Personal Appearance and kindred subjects will be given in answer to questions by our subscribers, but not more than two questions the same month by any one subscriber. Address Etiquette Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and give your own full name and address. Name will not be published.

LULU PEARL, Minnesota.—Of course the blunder is not yours, when a boy to whom you are not engaged sends you costly gifts. Whether you choose to return such presents or not depends upon the character of the gifts and if you think their retention might embarrass you in any way. We think the best method would be to thank the boy, at the same time telling him pleasantly that he must not make you such valuable presents. You might soften the words by saying you appreciate his friendship and that this is sufficient without his offering expensive evidence of it.

E. B., North Carolina.—Surely you do not enjoy having the earache! It is pretty certain that your mother is right in believing the wearing of your hair over your ears has made those hearing appendages more sensitive to your painful trouble. So there are two reasons for arranging your hair differently: the first, that a sixteen-year-old girl should certainly comply willingly with her mother's wishes; and the second, that it is certainly much better that you should be free from earache, than that your hair should be fixed "just like the other girls." Some day you will know that it is good to be "different," —particularly when the being different is good for you!

B. M. S., Rising Sun, Md.—A girl should not have to suggest the time of a young man's departure from an evening call; he should know enough to take his leave at a suitable and convenient hour for the girl's household. But if he sticks too long, it is certainly correct for you to give him a going-away hint as pleasantly as you can. Blame it on your parents if you like or on yourself, and make some excuse of early rising the next morning. (2) A girl does not rise when a young man is introduced to her, although she would rise in the case of a much older man, or some gentleman who might be a guest of honor.

WORRIED, Sapulpa, Okla.—It is not a very serious breach of etiquette that your card sent with flowers to a sick friend carried no message or word of greeting. It would have been pleasanter to have written upon the card: "Hoping you may soon be well," or, "With best wishes for your speedy recovery." But the flowers themselves were a message of sympathy, and you need not worry about the matter.

B. M., Sanford, Fla.—It would be quite correct for you to have a simple and quiet wedding at your church, with only immediate relatives and close friends present. If you wish, you may invite other less intimate friends to a reception after the ceremony. (2). A grey or blue serge or homespun might be appropriately made and plainly tailored for your going-away gown. These colors would be suitable to your type and coloring, as would be the lighter shades of brown—most popular now. You have our best wishes for your future happiness.

BASHFUL JOHNNY, Texas.—We think the best method of consuming the deliciousness of an ice-cream soda, is to eat the ice-cream first from the glass with a spoon, and then either drink the balance of the liquid or imbibe it luxuriously from a straw. In the case of hot drinks, such as cocoa, chocolate, coffee, etc., these may be drunk from the glass or cup. It would seem strange to drink coffee through a straw, although, at a soda fountain, it might be done without making etiquette totter.

F. F., Ransom, Kansas.—"Oh, Promise Me," the song you mention, and other like music, may be given before the bride and bridegroom arrive in the room for this home wedding and the music should last until the couple have taken their places before the altar. There would be no particular limit to be set upon the amount of this pre-ceremony music, but the rendition of one number should suffice and would seem to us best. (2). We think the rehearsing of a wedding ceremony is always a sensible custom, especially when it is wished that the formal parts of the ceremony be accomplished without hitch or embarrassment. Being married is something in which one is not apt to gain much practice before arriving at the altar! Courage wishes you the best of happiness.

Miss G. M., Sumner, Ill.—The technique of etiquette has established that only the bridegroom is congratulated, while the bride is offered wishes for her happiness. Yet to wish happiness for two is sufficient, and the most reasonable thing, we believe. (2). Thanks and smiles are the sincere and proper responses made by a happy and newly married couple to the wishes and congratulations of friends.

B. Z., Floresville, Texas.—It was an older and more formal time that required a man to stand with his hat off while talking to ladies whom he had just met. Today's etiquette does not demand this although it is yet a correct and happy manner of showing respect—provided no sneezes are forthcoming as an after result of courtesy! (2). A boy may think just what he likes about a girl who will not return his letters and presents after he has asked her to do so. And whatever he thinks, we feel rather sure the girl won't mind a bit. Really are delivered letters the property of the one receiving them? And the same as to gifts—which are not usually sent with any string attached to pull them back. Boys must remember this in these times which so sadly occur now and then. They may want letters and presents back, but, as to legitimately demanding them—that is quite another question. Possession is nine points of the law, and does not change with hearts.

GRAY EYES, Nebo, Ky.—It is rather sure that this boy comes to see you and not your brother and other relatives. We think that it would be sympathetic of them to give up the room to you and your caller after first greetings are over. (2). If you are "not quite sure" that you love this boy, we can tell you that it is sure you do not love him. For if there is one thing about which there is no doubt, it is the spell cast by Cupid. That active little rascal leaves marks as certain as chicken pox, and physical disturbances as overpowering as the flu. A girl of eighteen or nineteen might marry a man some years her senior, but we think a boy of nineteen is much too young to marry. We believe a boy should be old enough to step to the ballot box before he walks up the aisle to the tune of a wedding march. It takes most boys some time to grow up. Haven't you noticed this?

GOLDEN HAIR, Boatwright, Ky.—A boy is supposed to be capable of getting into his overcoat, and a girl should not offer to assist him. On the other hand, etiquette demands that he should aid the girl in putting on her wrap. (2). Yes, you should shake hands with your boy caller when you meet him at the door of your home.

D. S. and T. H., Mississippi.—Yes, it is permitted that your fiance kiss you and you may send him your photograph. It is best that a girl should not distribute her photos among boys who are no more to her than friends or acquaintances, although there is no objection to small and informal snapshots being shared among friends of both sexes. (2) The decorating of a house for a home wedding is affected by the time of year the ceremony is to take place. In the winter one is restricted to green things and potted plants, while in the summer flowers of all sorts may be used to advantage being careful of clashes or color that would be inharmonious. Much can be done at an autumn wedding by the use of foliage, goldenrod, asters, and other natural beauties of the fall of the year. An improvised altar may be most charmingly banked for an autumn wedding ceremony.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 17.)

necessary rule. Appeals unaccompanied by the references required will be destroyed.

Mrs. Mary L. Mallett, Whitehouse, Ky. With an invalid husband, partly blind, this poor woman struggles along on a hard road with her family of five children. Clothes, shoes and cash are badly needed. James Gallday, Quicksburg, Va. This man and wife have six children and illness has prevented their earning proper support for such a big and hungry family. Give them real help over a sorrowful time. Martha Coppell, care of Robert Muring, R 3, Stuart, Va. Here is an old woman who has nobody to help her get the clothes and shoes she needs, to say nothing of food and other comforts. A deserving case. Mrs. M. R. Culver, Roxbury, Vt., sends earnest words of gratitude to all those who sent her clothes and gifts. Also Isaac Price, Lenoir, N. C., writes a letter of thanks to the Cousins, and particularly to the unknown friend that so generously contributed ten dollars from Salina, Kansas. Good for the Sunflower State!

"June stands for Joy! Let us make this true as much as we can for these and other of our League's shut-in and needy members. To know that somebody is thinking of them and wants to help them, means as much as the help itself to such as these who are sorrowfully shut off from helping themselves. Look about you in this first glad month of the opening summer—and then start right in distributing some of June's sunlight in places so dark and full of pain that they need a little joy as a shadow-chaser!

Lovingly,

Uncle Lisha

Comfort's League of Cousins

The League of Cousins was founded as a means of bringing the scattered members of COMFORT'S immense circle of readers into one big, happy family. Its aim is to promote a feeling of kinship and relationship among all readers.

Membership is restricted to COMFORT subscribers and costs fifty-five cents, only five cents more than the regular subscription to COMFORT which is included. The fifty-five cents makes you a member of the League and gives you an attractive League button with the letters "C. L. O. C." a handsome certificate of membership with your name engrossed thereon, and the privilege of having your name in the letter list, also a paid-in-advance subscription to COMFORT. You continue a League member as long as you keep up your subscription to COMFORT. There are no annual dues, after you have once joined all you have to do—to keep in good standing is to keep your subscription to COMFORT paid up.

How to become a Member

Send fifty-five cents to COMFORT'S Subscription Department, Augusta, Maine, with your request to be admitted to COMFORT'S LEAGUE OF COUSINS, and you will at once receive the League button and your membership certificate and number; you will also receive COMFORT for one year. If you are a new subscriber; but if you are already a subscriber your subscription will be renewed or extended one full year beyond date of expiration.

The League numbering over forty thousand members is doubtedly is the greatest society of young people on earth.

Address all letters to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and they will promptly reach the head of the department for which they are intended.

Some Difference

Chauffeur: "Say, Bub, how far is it to Lewisville?"

Boy: "Well, mister, the way you are going now it is just 24,996 miles, but if you turn around it is only four miles."

—Highway Guidance

How Many Pounds Would You Like to Gain in a Week?

If you are thin and want to gain weight, I will send you a sample of the famous Alexander Vitamines absolutely Free. Do not send any money—just your name and address to Alexander Laboratories, 3301 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo.

COMFORT'S Emporium of Bargains and Opportunities gents—200% Profit, Wonderful Little cle. Something new; sells like wildfire. y right in pocket. Write at once for free ple. Albert Mills, Manager, 8049 American ding, Cincinnati, Ohio.

AGENTS WANTED

e Start You In Business, furnishing ything; men and women, $30 to $100 kly operating our "New System Candy ories" home anywhere. Booklet free. W. yer Ragsdale, Drawer 5, East Orange, N. J.

e Start You without a Dollar. Soaps, Ex- ts, Perfumes—Toilet Goods. Experience un- ssary. Carnation Co., Dept. 131, St. Louis.

gents—$50 a week taking orders for anteed hosiery for men, women and chil- . Must wear 12 months or replaced free. tyles and finest line of silk hose. Write sample outfit. Thomas Mfg. Co., Class Dayton, Ohio.

gents—Clean up $100 weekly with ty Nine." Weekly average 100 sales- r profit each. 30-40 sales daily frequently e; demonstrating outfit cinches order. 30 r coin-coaxers. All daily necessities. al brings our unique plans. Davis Pro- s Co., Dept. 505, Chicago.

gents—$15 a day—Easy, quick Sales— Auto—Big weekly Bonus—$1.50 premium to every customer. Simply show our itiful, 7 piece, Solid Aluminum Handle ery Set. Appeals instantly. We deliver collect. Pay daily. New Era Mfg. Co., dadison St., Dept. 32-N, Chicago.

hy Not sell us your spare time? $1.00 per . $9.85 Daily Easy for full time—introduc- New Style Guaranteed Hosiery—57 styles, lors. No capital or experience required. write orders. We deliver and collect. r pay daily, also monthly bonus. Free auto besides. Complete outfit furnished. All s—grades including silks. Mac-O-Chee s Co., Desk 2066, Cincinnati, Ohio.

0% Profit: — Easy seller. Kleanrite. hes clothes without rubbing. Samples free. ever Prod. Co., 1947-A Irving Park, Chicago arge Shirt Manufacturer wants Agents ll complete line of shirts direct to wearer. usive patterns. Big values. Free samples. ison Mills, 503 Broadway, New York.

gents Make $10 Daily—Big line guar- ol Extracts, Food Products, Perfumes, t Goods, Household Necessities. No cap- or experience needed. Free Sample Case instructions. Write for amazing offer. Chim Products Co., Desk 10, Hastings, Nebr.

gents: Make 100%, Toilet Articles, umes, Extracts, Home Necessities. Sample Free. LaDerma Co., Dept. H, St. Louis.

gents: Housewives everywhere delighted new article which removes stains from ing, table linen, etc. Write quick; terri- and sample. Make $2 an hour. Christy, nion, Newark, N. Y.

art Your Own Business as our sole t, selling 100 famous home products. All pare time. Dr. Blair Laboratories, Dept. Lynchburg, Va.

ents: — Davis sold 24 sprapumps and washers in 24 hours. Profits $3.50 each. re deal. Write Sprayer Company, Johns- O.

rtraits, photo pillow tops, frames, sheet res, medallions, merchants' signs, water- and tea aprons, silk and wool hose. og 50 specialties free. 30 days credit. C. Bailey Co., Desk K6, Chicago.

op Throwing Away Your Dull es. Gillette, Enders, Keen-Kutter and -Strop blades can be used dozens of s. Hand Stropping is the best way. Send or Sample. Money back if you want it. ats wanted everywhere. Ira S. Boore & Co., neapolis, Minn.

hur-Lock" for Screen Doors. Catch lock combined: four screws: no chiseling: anteed. 35c postpaid. Agents wanted. sed Steel Products Co., Plantsville, Ct.

gents—Free sample Dr. Elliott's Vege- Oil Soap. 19 full sized packages right of stock. Tea, Coffee, Extracts, Spices, Food ducts, Laundry and Toilet Soap samples. rything furnished. Send postal today. De- ment A-107, Harley Company, Dayton, Ohio.

en, Women — Self-threading Needles easy. Send for prices. Sample 10c. L. er, Box 1250, City Hall Station, New York.

AGENTS WANTED

Everybody uses Extracts. Sell Duo Double Strength Extracts. Complete line necessities. Write today. Duo Co., Dept. E-41, Attica, N.Y.

Ambitious men, write today for attractive proposition, selling subscriptions to America's most popular automobile and sportsman's magazines. Quick sales. Big profits. Pleasant work. Digest Pub. Co., 9525 Butler Bldg., Cincinnati.

Make $25 to $50 Week representing Clows' Famous Philadelphia Hosiery, direct from mill—for men, women, children. Every pair guaranteed. Prices that win. Free book "How to Start" tells the story. George Clows Company, Desk 14, Philadelphia, Pa.

Agents—Make a Dollar an Hour. Sell Mendets, a patent patch for instantly mending leaks in all utensils. Sample package free. Collette Mfg. Co., Dept. 452-B, Amsterdam, N.Y.

Make Money silvering mirrors, all kinds plating, knives, spoons, auto headlights. Outfits furnished. Free booklet. International Laboratories, Dept. D6, 311 Fifth Ave., New York $60—$200 a week. Gold Letters for store windows. Easily applied. Free Samples. Liberal offer to general agents. Metallic Letter Co., 437 N. Clark, Chicago.

Rummage Sales make $50.00 daily. We start you. Representatives wanted everywhere. "Wholesale Distributors", Dept. 72, 609 Division Street, Chicago.

Insyde Tyres inner armor for automobile tires. Prevent punctures and blowouts. Double tire mileage any tires. Tremendous demand. Big profits. Sample and details free. American Accessories Co., B-120, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Agents—New Discovery Makes Jelly "Jell." Big profits, constant repeater. Sample free. Joy-Jel Company, 807 Grand, St. Joseph, Mo.

Big Money and Fast Sales. Every Owner buys Gold Initials for his auto. You charge $1.50; make $1.35. Ten orders daily easy. Write for particulars and free samples. American Monogram Co., Dept. 64, East Orange, N. J.

Rubber Goods Manufacturer offers big opportunity to men and women agents selling household and personal comfort necessities. Write Manufacturer—American Rubber Products Co., Dept. 605, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Agents — Household necessities galore; food products, toilet preparations, extracts, remedies, soaps, beverages, jewelry; catalogs free. Western Products, 606 N. Oakley, Dept. BC, Chicago.

Agents—Sell Neverfail Iron Rust and Stain Remover. Huge profits. Big line. Sample. Write today. Sandford Beal Co., Inc., Newark, N. Y. Dept. D.

Greatest Sensation! Eleven Piece Toilet Article Set selling like blazes at $1.75 with $1.00 dressmakers shears free to each customer. Spring rush on. Foster Reid Co., 73 Winslow Bldg., Station C, Chicago.

$2.00 an hour. Sell Peck's Rivets. Instantly mend Kitchen utensils. Other fast sellers. Sample 10c. Peck Co., Dept. K2, Medina, N. Y.

Shave Without Razor; new discovery, details free. American Pharmacal Co., Box 24, Station A, Cincinnati, O.

Make $30.00 daily taking orders for $3.95 Union made raincoats. Factory prices. Largest commission. Your pay daily. We deliver and collect. American Eagle Raincoat Co., 155 No. Union St., Dept. 306, Chicago.

Agents: Earn $5.00 per hour in your spare time. Write at once for particulars on this money making proposition. Dept. A. Sanitas Co. Inc., 33 Keap St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

$2.00 an hour. Take orders for Mary Rose Frocks direct from the factory. All women prospects. Commissions daily. Rodasi Company, 1158 Fourth, Cincinnati, Ohio.

AGENTS WANTED—WANTED

Big Daily Profit for men and women everywhere selling our Pure Rubber House and Tea Aprons. Many styles. Dainty colors. Quick sellers. No experience necessary. Whole or part time. The Mayneda Company, Desk E, 173 Washington St., Newark, N. J.

AUTOMOBILES

Automobile Owners, Garagemen, Mechanics, send today for free copy of America's most popular motor magazine. Contains helpful articles on overhauling, repairing, ignition, carburetors, batteries, etc. Automobile Digest, 525 Butler Bldg., Cincinnati.

STAMPING NAMES

Stamp Names on key checks. Make $19 per 100. Send 25c for sample and inst. Either Sex. C. Keytag Co., Cohoes, N. Y.

POULTRY

Day Old Chicks, for Sale. Thousands per week. Strong, better hatched, utility and Pure Bred, Circular Free. Old Honesty Hatchery, Dept. C, New Washington, O.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Increase Your Family income knitting socks at home. The way to independence. The Home Profit Knitter is the world's most productive and reliable home knitting machine. Be first in your town. We pay you $1.75 for every dozen pairs, furnish free yarn with each machine and replace yarn used in socks you send us. Enormous demand. Free instruction anywhere. Immediate application necessary. Home Profit Hosiery Co., 858-S. Hudson Avenue, Rochester, New York.

MOTION PICTURE PLAYS

Photoplay Ideas Wanted By 48 Companies. $25-$500 paid. Experience unnecessary; details Free. Producers League, 311, St. Louis.

HELP WANTED

Gov't Positions, $1400-$2300 yearly. Many openings. 36-page information booklet free. Chicago Civil Service College, Dept. K, Chicago.

You Are Wanted. U.S. Government Jobs. $117-$192 month. Many positions. Write immediately for list. Franklin Institute, Dept. T12, Rochester, N. Y.

FEMALE HELP WANTED

$6-$18 a dozen decorating pillow tops at home; pleasant work; experience unnecessary; particulars for stamp. Tapestry Paint Co., 104, LaGrange, Ind.

Ladies—Earn Money Crocheting, Tatting, making aprons and caps. Material furnished. Patterns and plans 35c. Send remittance now. Returned if desired. Kenwood Pattern Co., 6238 So. Park Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Earn money at home during spare time painting lamp shades, pillow tops for us. No canvassing. Easy and interesting work. Experience unnecessary. Nileart Company, 2233, Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

$200 Month salary paid women after taking "Nurses Training" School Course. Apply for details of Free scholarships covering 3 years Board, Room, Tuition, etc., in Free Chicago or N. Y. City schools. American Schools Ass'n, 159 N. State St., Chicago, or 1103 Times Bldg., New York.

Earn $20 weekly, spare time, at home, addressing, mailing, music, circulars. Send 10c for music, information. American Music Co., 1658 Broadway, Dept. 89-E, N. Y.

Wanted—Women—Girls. Learn Dressmaking—Designing at home. $35 week. Big demand. Sewing experience unnecessary. Sample lessons free. Write immediately. Franklin Institute, Dept. T-501 Rochester, N. Y.

Girls—women, over 15. Learn Millinery at home. Big demand. $35 week. Experience unnecessary. Fascinating. Sample lessons free. Write immediately. Franklin Institute, Dept. T-800, Rochester, N. Y.

U. S. Government wants Girls—Women, 18 up. $1140—$2300 year. Steady work. Short hours. Vacation. Experience unnecessary. Common education sufficient. List positions—free. Write immediately. Franklin Institute, Dept. T9, Rochester, N. Y.

HEMSTITCHING AND PICOTING

Our Attachment Fits All Machines $2. with instructions and Special Emb. Needle. C. Rebus Co., Cohoes, N. Y.

Hemstitching and Picoting Attachment. Works on all Sewing Machines. Easily adjusted. Price $2.00 with instructions. Ladies' Art Sales Co., Box 71-G, Hamtramck, Mich.

PATENT ATTORNEYS

Patents—Write for free Guide Book, and Evidence of Conception Blank. Send model or sketch and description for free opinion of its patentable nature. Highest References. Prompt Service. Reasonable Terms. Victor J. Evans & Co., 641 Ninth, Washington, D. C.

Inventors—Desiring to secure patent should write for our book, "How To Get Your Patent." Send model or sketch and description for opinion of its patentable nature. Randolph & Co., Dept. 112, Washington, D. C.

Patents promptly procured. Moderate Fees. Best References. Send Sketch or Model. George P. Kimmel, Master of Patent Law, 27-J, Loan & Trust Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Patents—Send for free book. Contains valuable information for inventors. Send sketch of your invention for Free Opinion of its patentable nature. Prompt service. (Twenty years' experience). Talbert & Talbert, 402 McGill Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Inventions Commercialized on cash or royalty basis. Patented or unpatented. Write Adam Fisher Mfg. Co., 91, St. Louis, Mo.

Patents Procured; Trade Marks Registered — A comprehensive, experienced, prompt service for the protection and development of your ideas. Preliminary advice gladly furnished without charge. Booklet of information and form for disclosing idea free on request. Richard B. Owen, 18 Owen Bldg., Washington, D. C.

MALE HELP WANTED

All men, women, boys, girls, 17 to 60, willing to accept Government Positions, $117-$200, traveling or stationary, write, Mr. Ozment, 104, St. Louis, immediately.

Earn up to $400 Monthly, living expenses paid, in Hotel work. Splendid opportunities for trained men and women—many openings. We have more than we can fill. 80,000 hotel positions to be filled the coming year. We train you at home. Send for free booklet. Standard Business Training Inst., 299 Carlton Court, Buffalo, N. Y.

Firemen, Brakemen, Baggagemen, Sleeping car, train porters (colored). $140-$200. Experience unnecessary. 828 Railway Bureau, East St. Louis, Ill.

Wanted:—Local Manager in each county for outdoor advertising. Big Pay. Whole or spare time. No experience required. National Co., 211 Seventh St., Louisville, Ky.

Firemen, Brakemen, for railroads nearest their homes—everywhere; beginners $150-$250 monthly (Which position?). Railway Association, Desk M-17, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Government needs Railway Mail Clerks, $133 to $192 month. Write for free specimen questions. Columbus Institute, A-2 Columbus, O.

Shoes—Become our local salesman selling high-grade shoes direct to wearer. Quick seller and good commission. Experience not required. Tanners Shoe Mfg. Co., 452 C St., Boston, Mass.

$35 week. Boys—Men. Become Automobile experts. Learn while earning. Write Franklin Institute, Dept. T-410, Rochester, N. Y.

TRICK CARTOONING

23 Trick Drawings with Chalk Talk Instructions, $1.00. Particulars free. Balda Art Service, D. Z, Oshkosh, Wis.

MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

Only $98 Starts you in this business with complete outfit. No experience needed. Details Free. Monarch Theatre Supply Co., 724 So. Wabash Ave., Dept. 51, Chicago.

$35.00 Profit Nightly. Small capital starts you. No experience needed. Our machines are used, endorsed by Govt. institutions. Cat. free. Atlas Moving Picture, 471 Morton Bldg., Chicago.

STORY WRITERS WANTED

Writers—Attention! Stories, poems, plays, etc., are wanted for publication. Submit Mss. or write Literary Bureau, C6, Hannibal, Mo.

PHOTOPLAYS, STORIES

Wanted—Men and women ambitious to make money writing Stories and Movie Plays. Send for wonderful Free Book that tells how. Address Authors' Press, Dept. 31, Auburn, N.Y.

$$$ For Ideas. Photoplay Plots accepted any form; revised, criticised, copyrighted, marketed. Advice free. Universal Scenario Corporation, 941 Western Mutual Life Bldg., Los Angeles, California.

PHOTO FINISHING

First trial offer—Any size kodak film developed and six glossy prints 20c. Cameron Photo Co., C-3418, Burch Ave., Cincinnati, O.

Special Trial Offer: Any size Kodak film developed for 5c; prints 3c each. Over-night service. Get a Free Auto. Ask for details. Roanoke Photo Finishing Co., 228 Bell Ave., Roanoke, Va.

Better Pictures, We make them. A trial will prove it. Roll developed and six snappy prints 20 cts. The Better Photos Co., Box A, Wallingford, Ky.

Special Trial Offer. Your next Kodak film developed 5c, Prints 2c each. Moser & Son, 2122 St. James Ave., Cincinnati, O.

Films developed 5c; Prints 3c each. The new Davo finish. Davis Photo Shop, Dept. C, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Kodak Finishing. Glossy prints from three to six cents each. Quickest service. This ad clipped and mailed with film is good for ten cents. Georgia Developing and Printing House, Box 1481, Atlanta, Ga.

HELP—MALE & FEMALE

Earn $25 Weekly, writing for newspapers, magazines. Experience unnecessary; details Free. Press Syndicate, 451, St. Louis, Mo.

MISCELLANEOUS

Remnant Store, 1510 Vine St., Cincinnati, O. Greatest Dry Goods Bargains on Earth. Agents and Storekeepers supplied.

A $500 Cash Prize is offered to the writer of the best second verse for our future song release "Where Is Your Smile"? Those wishing to compete may receive a free copy of song and rules of contest by addressing, Handy Bros. Music Co., 2573 Eighth Ave., New York.

Switches made from combings. The new way. Write for Style Booklet. Mrs. E. Vandervoort, Davenport, Ia.

FARM WANTED

Wanted—To hear from owner of good Farm for sale. State cash price, full particulars. D. F. Bush, Minneapolis, Minn.

BABY CHICKS

Baby Chicks: 12 best varieties 8c up. Postpaid and guaranteed. Catalog free. Missouri Chickeries, Bx XC, Clinton, Mo.

FARMS FOR SALE

California has more independent men and women than any other state. Investigate at first hand; go now. Round trip summer excursion fares, on the Santa Fe, until Sept 30th, limited to Oct. 31st, liberal stopovers. Opportunities in California for the man of moderate means, who desires to establish a home in a delightful country, are better now than ever. Lands reasonable in price; long time payments granted. California State Land Board offers choice twenty acre farms at Ballico, Merced County, on unusual terms. Write us if interested. California folders free. C. L. Seagraves, General Colonization Agent, Santa Fe Ry., 913 Ry. Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

Want to hear from owner having farm for sale; give particulars and lowest price. John J. Black, Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin.

INSTRUCTION

Used Correspondence courses bought, sold. Bargain list free. Students' Exchange, 45 West 42nd St., New York.

FARM LANDS

Land—Crop Payment or easy terms—along the Northern Pacific Ry., In Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington and Oregon. Free literature. Say what state interests you. H.W. Byerly, 14 Northern Pacific Railway, St. Paul, Minnesota.

---

ur Wheel Chairs in May
3 Is COMFORT'S Total to Date

he recipients of the four May wheel irs are: Reba Martindale, Jasper, as, 134; George Ash, Roundup, Mont., Jessie P. Thornton, Bowling Green, rida, 51; Johnie C. McDaniel, Stidn, Okla., 50. The figures following ir respective names indicate the num- of subscriptions sent in by these ap- cants or by their friends for them. frs. G. E. Martindale, of Jasper, xas, sent in the subscriptions for the air for Reba Martindale but did not state the invalid's age, physical condition or cause of her disability.

LEO COPPLE ENJOYING HER COMFORT WHEEL CHAIR.

George Ash, age 38, has been an invalid from early childhood and now is so crippled in both legs that he cannot walk. He is dependent on his aged mother and stepfather, who are poor and infirm. Mrs. Roy Palmer, who with the assistance of other friends has obtained the subscriptions for this chair, writes that it will afford George much pleasure and be a great help to his mother in caring for him, and she adds that this friendly service has been rendered without the knowledge of the Ash family, and so the wheel chair will come to them as a happy surprise.

Jessie P. Thornton, aged 34, is entirely helpless, due to total paralysis, and dependent on his brother for care and support except for $5.00 a month pension lately granted him by the county.

Johnie C. McDaniel, age 4, is entirely helpless; she cannot sit up or even raise her head which has grown excessively large since she suffered the attack of a disease of unknown nature that caused her crippled condition. She is unable to talk or take any food that requires to be chewed.

Remember the poor shut-ins who are suffering for a wheel chair which they cannot buy because of their poverty. The only hope of many of them ever obtaining one is through COMFORT's Wheel-Chair Club. Help its good work which has already carried the blessing of a wheel chair to nearly seven hundred cripples.

Sincerely yours,
W. H. GANNETT,
Publisher of COMFORT.

P. S. for the information of our many new subscribers let me explain that for each and every 150 one-year subscriptions to COMFORT, at 50 cents each, sent in either singly or in clubs by persons who direct that they are to be credited to COMFORT'S WHEEL-CHAIR CLUB instead of claiming the premiums to which they would be entitled, I give a FIRST-CLASS INVALID WHEEL-CHAIR to some needy crippled Shut-in and pay the freight, too. It is a large and expensive premium for me to give for that number of subscriptions, but I am always glad to do my part a little faster each month than you do yours.

Little Crippled Girl Made Happy by Her COMFORT Wheel Chair

Hillsboro, Ill.

Dear Mr. Gannett:

I enclose picture of our little Cleo enjoying her COMFORT wheel chair. Words cannot express how thankful we are for the chair. She surely enjoys it, and it makes her very happy. We wish to thank our neighbors and friends for their kindness in helping to get the chair for her.

Sincerely yours,
(Mrs.) L. S. Copple.

Comfort's Roll of Honor

The Roll of Honor comprises the names of those who have sent five or more subscriptions, or a dollar or more in money, to credit of the Wheel-Chair Club during the month previous. Following each name is the number of subscriptions or amount of cash sent.

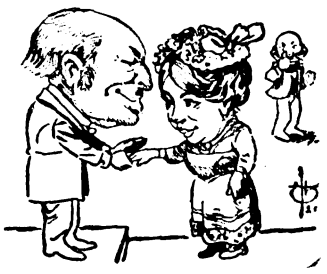
Mrs. G. E. Martindale, Texas, for Reba Martindale, 109 subs; Mrs. Earl Deen, Okla., for Eugene Pinney, 40; Mrs. Orland Jenkins, Ohio, for Mary A. Miller, 39; Mrs. Ida E. Johnson, S. Dak., for Hazel Anna Johnson, 23; Mrs. Sarah Weekly, Mont., for George Ash, 22 subs and $5.50; Mrs. Earl Hartman, Texas, for Herman W. Staples, 21; Mrs. J. R. Tidwell, Miss., for Sherman Tidwell, 21; Mrs. J. W. Long, Ark., for Ethel Long, 20; Mrs. R. J. Carter, Ark., for Herman W. Staples, 19; Mrs. A. L. McAbee, S. C., for Sam J. McAbee, 13; Mrs. Ollie McDaniel, Okla., for Johnie McDaniel, 13; Mrs. J. G. Smathers, N. C., for her little boy, 12; Mrs. Willie N. Levister, S. C., for James Scales, 11; Mrs. Fannie Hill, S. C., for Mr. J. M. Scales, 10; Mrs. Fanny Crocker, S. C., for J. M. Scales, 10; Mrs. May Martin, Va., for E. S. Mitchell, 10; J. M. Davis, Ark., for Aubrey Davis, 9; Jeannette Deskins, for own chair, 8; Mrs. G. B. Newton, Okla., for Aubrey Davis, 8; Mrs. Frank Hellums, Miss., for Sherman Tidwell, 8; Miss Clara B. Cole, Okla., for own chair, 7; Mrs. Mary Denton, Okla., for Lee Roy Denton, 7; Virsie Mases, Ark., for Ethel Long, 6; Mrs. Ella A. Burkdall, Mo., for Mrs. Amanda Wilkinson, 6; Mrs. Harvey O. Ernest, D. C., for George Ash, 6; Mrs. J. H. Burns, Texas, for general, 5; Mrs. A. G. DeShazo, Ark., for general, 5; Mrs. W. C. Gallup, Mo., for George Ash, 2 subs and $5.00; Kate Sorensen, Ill., for general, 1 sub and $1.00; A Florida Friend, for general, $9.00; Mrs. Sinda Bennett, Mo., for general, $2.00; Mrs. H. Jensen, Calif., for general, $2.00; Mrs. Chas. H. Church, for general, $1.30; Mrs. Lewis Rattles, Ind., for general, $1.00; M. Priest, Ore., for general, $1.00; A Friend, for Hazel Johnson, $1.00; Mary M. Kasper, Mich., for general, $1.00; Mrs. Michael Euser, N. Y., for general, $1.00; Mrs. Emma Clifford, Mo., for general, $1.00; Mrs. John Mouser, N. J., for Hazel Anna Johnson, $1.00; John H. Gettemy, Pa., for general, $1.00; Maude Alexander, Tenn., for general, $1.00; Mrs. Adam Lampkowski, Pa., for general, $1.00.

A Ford Gas Attack

The government has waged extensive campaigns with sulphur and carbon disulphide in efforts to kill off prairie dogs by suffocating them in their burrows; the process is expensive and cumbersome. The progressive western farmer, however, now knows that the exhaust gases from a running automobile will speedily poison a man in a closed garage. He applys the principle by slipping a piece of rubber hose over his Ford exhaust pipe; a funnel is slipped into the other end. Backing up to a dog burrow, he claps the funnel over it and runs his engine for a few minutes with a good rich mixture. When he leaves, the dog is dead and buried.—The Wall Street Journal.

Something to See

William was thirsty for knowledge and interesting facts shone like jewels in his brain.



"I read today," he said to Michael, "of the wonderful progress made in aviation. Men can now do anything—absolutely anything—a bird can do."

But Michael was tired of wonders—he was more matter of fact.

"Is that so?" he answered. "Well, when you see an airman fast asleep hanging onto a branch of a tree with one foot, I'll come and have a look!"—New York Mail.

She Had a Man

The minister was shaking hands with a new member of his congregation, a girl fresh from Sweden, and said, cordially; "I would like to know your address, so I can call on you."

"Oh," said the girl innocently, "I have a man."—Atlanta Journal.

The Essential

"And so," read Bess from her book, "they were married and lived happily ever after."

"They did?" exclaimed Mary, eagerly. "Oh, Bess, does it say what kind of a car he bought?"—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Cubby Bear Tries Something New

By Lena B. Ellingwood

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

ONE evening in midsummer Mamma Bruin and Cubby Bear were sitting on the doorstep of their little house, resting after the heat of the day.

Cubby's head was bent forward dejectedly, and Mamma Bruin almost thought he was asleep, until he gave a doleful sigh.

"Why, Cubby Bear!" she exclaimed. "What is the trouble?"

"Oh, I am thinking," he answered, "that there is nothing new to be done—nothing! I have done everything a little bear can do! I have been to Wise Owl's school, I have played all the games any of my friends ever heard about; I have been to the seashore, and climbed the big mountain, and seen a waterfall, and listened to the echoes in the great cave, and had a ride in a merry-go-round. I have fallen into the river, I have been in the misty white fog in the lowlands, I have helped to celebrate every holiday I know of, and I have had every kind of a party there is to have; and there is nothing left to do!"

"There is always plenty to do," said Mamma Bruin. "Plenty of play, and plenty of work (which is play, too, if we are wise enough to make it so), and plenty of wonderful things to see and to hear, and plenty of kind things to do for our friends! And plenty of happiness to enjoy, if only we look for it."

"Perhaps so," sighed Cubby, "but I wish I knew something pleasant to do this very minute."

"Take a look around, and see what you can see," advised Mamma Bruin. "As for me, it is happiness enough to be sitting here on my own doorstep, with my own little Cubby Bear, smelling the sweetness of the Pleasant Forest, and hearing the evening breezes rustle the leaves on the trees."

Cubby Bear sniffed the sweet summer air, and looked up at the bright stars, which twinkled at him cheerfully. Then, like little stars on earth, he saw bright fireflies darting about.

He sprang to his feet, and clapped his paws as a new thought came to him.

"Oh, Mamma Bruin!" he cried. "Just listen! You see those twinkly fireflies, don't you?"

"Yes," answered Mamma Bruin, smiling, "And I saw them before, when you were feeling so dismal. Why do you ask?"

"I have thought of something new to do!" said Cubby. "You have been near the village in the night time—near enough to see that there were lights shining all along the streets. I saw them twice—once when we went for a ride on the merry-go-round, and once when we celebrated the Fourth of July. I liked those light on the streets! They were pretty and we could see things so plainly! Why couldn't we catch fireflies—oh, a great, great many of them, and put them in the trees and bushes to light our Pleasant Forest and have an evening party?"

"Talk it over with some of your friends tomorrow," Mamma Bruin told him. "You can have some fun trying it whether it works well or not. But come, it is time to go in now. Grandma Bear has been in bed an hour or more."

Next day, Cubby Bear found Wise Owl, Racky Coon, Shinyblack Crow, Busy Beaver and Chirpy Chipmunk, and told them of his new idea.

"Don't bother to do it for me," said Wise Owl indifferently. "If you all had as good eyes as mine, you could see even better in the dark than in the light."

"I think I would rather see well in the daytime," Cubby told him, "when everything is bright and cheery."

"I am inclined to think your plan may be a good one," said Shinyblack Crow, "and I wish you would light up the forest while my brother is here."

"Oh, is your brother coming to see you?" asked Cubby. "I did not know you had a brother."

"Oh, yes, and his name is Simeon. He lives in the far West. While he is here I shall invite you all to meet him, and hear him tell stories of the West."

"Oh, get him to tell the stories in the evening, and we will have the fireflies then, for lighting," said Cubby eagerly.

"A grand thing it would be," declared Busy Beaver. "Oh, grand and stylish! I will help catch the lights, Cubby Bear. When is your brother coming, Shinyblack Crow?"

"I expect him the day after tomorrow."

"That very evening we will have our lights. But where can we put our fireflies as we catch them, so that they will not all fly away again—and where could we find enough of them any way?"

"My big covered basket will be just the thing to keep them in," offered Racky Coon, "and there are more fireflies in Blue Bittern's swamp than we should need. I have been there at night, and I know."

"Then we will go there this very night, and again tomorrow night," said Busy Beaver. "Of course we shall have to catch them after it begins to grow dark. Will you all go to help? And we must ask others, too!"

Chirpy Chipmunk was whisking his plumy tail about nervously.

"I don't like to refuse," he began. "Maybe I will go with the others—maybe I will—but I can't say I like the idea very well, plunging around in the mud of the swamp, all in the dark!"

Quite a party of the little woods people started for Blue Bittern's swamp that night, Cubby Bear kindly giving Chirpy Chipmunk and Tillie Turtle a ride in Racky Coon's big basket.

A lively time they had, and not altogether a happy one, for the swamp was very muddy, as Chirpy had feared, and the night was dark.

"I never worked so hard in all my life before!" grumbled Wollie Woodchuck, "the creatures won't stay still to be caught!"

"No," agreed Racky Coon, "and just when you think you're going to put your paw on one, his light goes out, and you can't find him at all!"

As Racky spoke, he sprang after a firefly, but the next moment cried out, "Ow! I've bumped my head against a tree!"

"You have not!" cried an indignant voice in the darkness. "You bumped it against my head, and knocked me down!" It was Minnie Mink.

"Suppose we go home now," said Cubby Bear. "It is too dark to do much, and we can catch more tomorrow night."

"Not in this swamp!" declared Racky Coon firmly.

THE NEXT NIGHT THEY ALL DID BETTER.

"Where's the basket?" asked Wise Ow... "I've got my claws full of fireflies! I w... your eyes were all as good as mine!"

"We can all see fireflies, I should think," said Wollie Woodchuck rather crossly. "... least, we can until they turn off their light...

"Yes, but I can get around without bumping into things," answered Wise Owl.

The next night they did better, and w... Simeon Crow arrived to visit his brother Shinyblack, everything was in readiness.

A pleasant spot near the Big Brook had been chosen for the story-telling, and Cubby and his friends had taken their fireflies from the basket and carefully placed them on bushes and the branches of trees.

The fireflies did not stay where they were put, but flitted all about.

"How pretty, how pretty they look!" ... mired Cubby, eying them with delight. "Like twinkly little stars, coming and going everywhere!"

Then he hurried home to brush his coat and put on his collar and tie, leaving Racky Coon and Busy Beaver in charge.

He was on his way back, with Mamma Bruin and Grandma Bear, who wanted to hear Simeon Crow's Western stories ... when he saw Wollie Woodchuck coming toward him.

"Hurry up, Cubby Bear!" called W... beckoning to him wildly.

"Oh, are we late?" asked Cubby. "Have the stories commenced?"

"No. Simeon Crow has not come yet, ... Shinyblack, either. But something ... is happening!"

"Oh, what, what?"

"The bats!" answered Wollie, in a ... tone. "Bats have come—oh, many of them—and they are eating our lights!"

"O-o-o-oh!" wailed Cubby. "This ... never do! Why does not Wise Owl drive the bats away?"

"He is not there, nor any other bird except little Chickadee Chirrupee, and he is so small the bats only laugh at him and are not afraid."

"Oh, run for Wise Owl!" begged C...

"Run for him yourself!" answered Wo... "I have worked hard enough over this ... business already! Just a piece of foolishness from the start, I call it! I don't believe in being too stylish myself!"

Cubby Bear did not wait to hear W... grumblings, but hurried on, leaving Mamma Bruin and Grandma Bear to follow ... slowly.

Quite a crowd of animals and birds ... collected by now, but the lights for which ... Cubby had worked so hard, and in which ... had taken such pride, were nearly gone. ... two or three fireflies were left to shine on the scene.

A familiar "Caw" was heard near by.

"The crows are coming!" said Minnie M... but Shinyblack alone flew into their ...

"Oh, Shinyblack Crow, I am so sor... was Cubby's greeting. "The bats have put out our lights, and your brother will have to tell his stories in the dark. There is no light, even, for the night is cloudy," and Cubby wiped away a tear.

"There will be no stories tonight, ... said Shinyblack Crow, "so it is just as ... I feel so ashamed to disappoint you a... Simeon was tired from his journey, and ... gone to sleep. I could not budge him! ... a story tonight!' said Simeon. 'They ... be dull and dry if I tried. But you ... your friends to meet me in the morning ... I am fresh and rested, and I will spin ... yarns for them all day long if ... listen, and will bring me my dinner."

"Hurrah!" exclaimed Redtop ... tossing his red cap into the air.

"I am glad!" said Bunny Rabbit. "... babies are half asleep now. They could have listened to the stories tonight, but ... love to hear them in the morning."

"Cheer up, Cubby Bear, and Shinyblack Crow, too," said Racky Coon, "'All's well that ends well,' and neither one of you ... badly. The clouds are breaking in the ... for I see stars shining through, and we ... have a glorious story-day tomorrow."

But Wise Owl moped, for he loved the ... and they left him sitting there alone, ... stories all to himself, in the dark.

Cubby Bear in Book Form

Cubby Bear and his friends of the forest are ... so dear to millions of readers of COMFORT that ... decided to immortalize their names by publishing ... form Cubby's most amusing adventures with ... friends of the forest.

Every story will be illustrated in color and printed ... clear type so that the little folks will enjoy them. ... substantially bound in bright colored covers.

The book will also contain a picture of Mrs. ... with an introduction by this dearly-loved author. ... thousand copies will be printed. If you would ... a copy saved for you when they are ready please ... to "Cubby Bear", care COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, ... will be sure to get one of these entertaining ... will be given in exchange for one subscription to ...

Crumbs of Comfor...

Rest is rust.
Keep strong.
God remembers all.
Hope is half the victory.
Hate ruins all it touches.
Actions make environments.
Keep out of debt and doubt.
Youth has time in its purse.
No two days are just the same.
When you smile another smiles.
Nothing is constructed by hate.
Do your best and let that stand.
Luck is largely a matter of courage.
The greatest joy in life is to serve.
Masterpieces of literature teach us how to lift ... souls higher.
Heaven consists of those hearts who have forgotten selves through love.
In our hunt for wisdom we are often closest ... pause in our pursuit.

Save COMFORT Wrappers—They Are Useful

Keep the wrapper on this magazine and ... your kitchen calendar or put it away in some ... where you can easily find it. The printed inform... is very useful. It enables us immediately to ... subscription order and our mailing stencil. ... save yourself postage and possible delay if you ... the last wrapper received whenever you write. ALWAYS ENCLOSE YOUR WRAPPER IN WRITING US FOR A CHANGE OF ADDRESS. Please save the wrapper.

CONTENTS

	Page
Editorial	2
Dale's Commencement Gown	3
Brownie's Triumph (continued)	4
Comfort Sisters' Corner and Recipes	5
A Forgotten Love (continued)	6
Foods that Have Remedial Virtue	7
Delightful Uses for Rose Petals	8
Comfort's League of Cousins	9
The Pretty Girls' Club	10
When No Meant Yes	11
Mother and Baby	12
Comfort's Knitting and Crocheting Cozy Club for Nimble Fingered Folks	14 and 15
Tribulations of Tourists in Europe	17
Easter Wedding in Mid-Ocean	17
Poultry Farming for Women	18
The Modern Farmer	19
Radio Flashes	20
Automobile and Gas Engine Helps	21
Home Lawyer	22
Family Doctor	22
Talks with Girls	23
Information Bureau	23
Missing Relatives and Friends	23
Veterinary Information	26
Manners and Looks	26
The Emporium of Bargains and Opportunities	27
Four Wheel Chairs in May	27
Cubby Bear Tries Something New	28
Crumbs of Comfort	28

All Subscriptions Cut Off At Expiration

All subscriptions will be cut short off on date of expiration, unless the subscriptions are renewed and paid for. Not even one copy will be sent, after expiration, until the subscription is renewed. If the number over your name on the wrapper on this magazine is 416, it means that this is the last copy of COMFORT you will receive until you renew your subscription. DO IT TODAY.

JULY COMFORT

Special Features for July

"It Happened on the Fourth" An adventure in love with an apparently gay deceiver.

"A World of Boys" A glimpse within Girard College, that unique school for orphan boys the portals of which no clergyman is permitted to enter.

"Our Mutual Friend, the Subway" Loneliness of a big city where it takes an incident to start a romance, and an accident to bring it to a climax.

"The Richest Black Belt in the World" The famous "Black Belt" of New York City wherein dwell a hundred and fifty thousand of the most prosperous negroes in the world.

"Summer Cooking Simplified" Uses for sour milk and cream. Cold Pack Canning.

"Cubby Bear Hunting Herbs" Dr. Squilly Porcupine turns out to be somewhat of a quack.

If the number over your name on the wrapper on this magazine is 416 it means that your subscription expires with this present issue and that you will not receive July COMFORT unless you renew your subscription at once—we can not send you a single copy, after expiration, until you have renewed. Don't miss July COMFORT.

Save money by renewing and extending your subscription two or three years. Use coupon below and do it today.

Please send bills or silver carefully wrapped in paper and securely sealed, or post-office money order. If obliged to send postage-stamps, send two-cent stamps.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: 50 cents a year, $1.00 for three years, 75 cents for a TWO-YEAR renewal, in U. S. or Cuba. (In Canada 65 cents a year.)

SUBSCRIPTION COUPON FOR RENEWAL OR EXTENSION

Publisher of COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

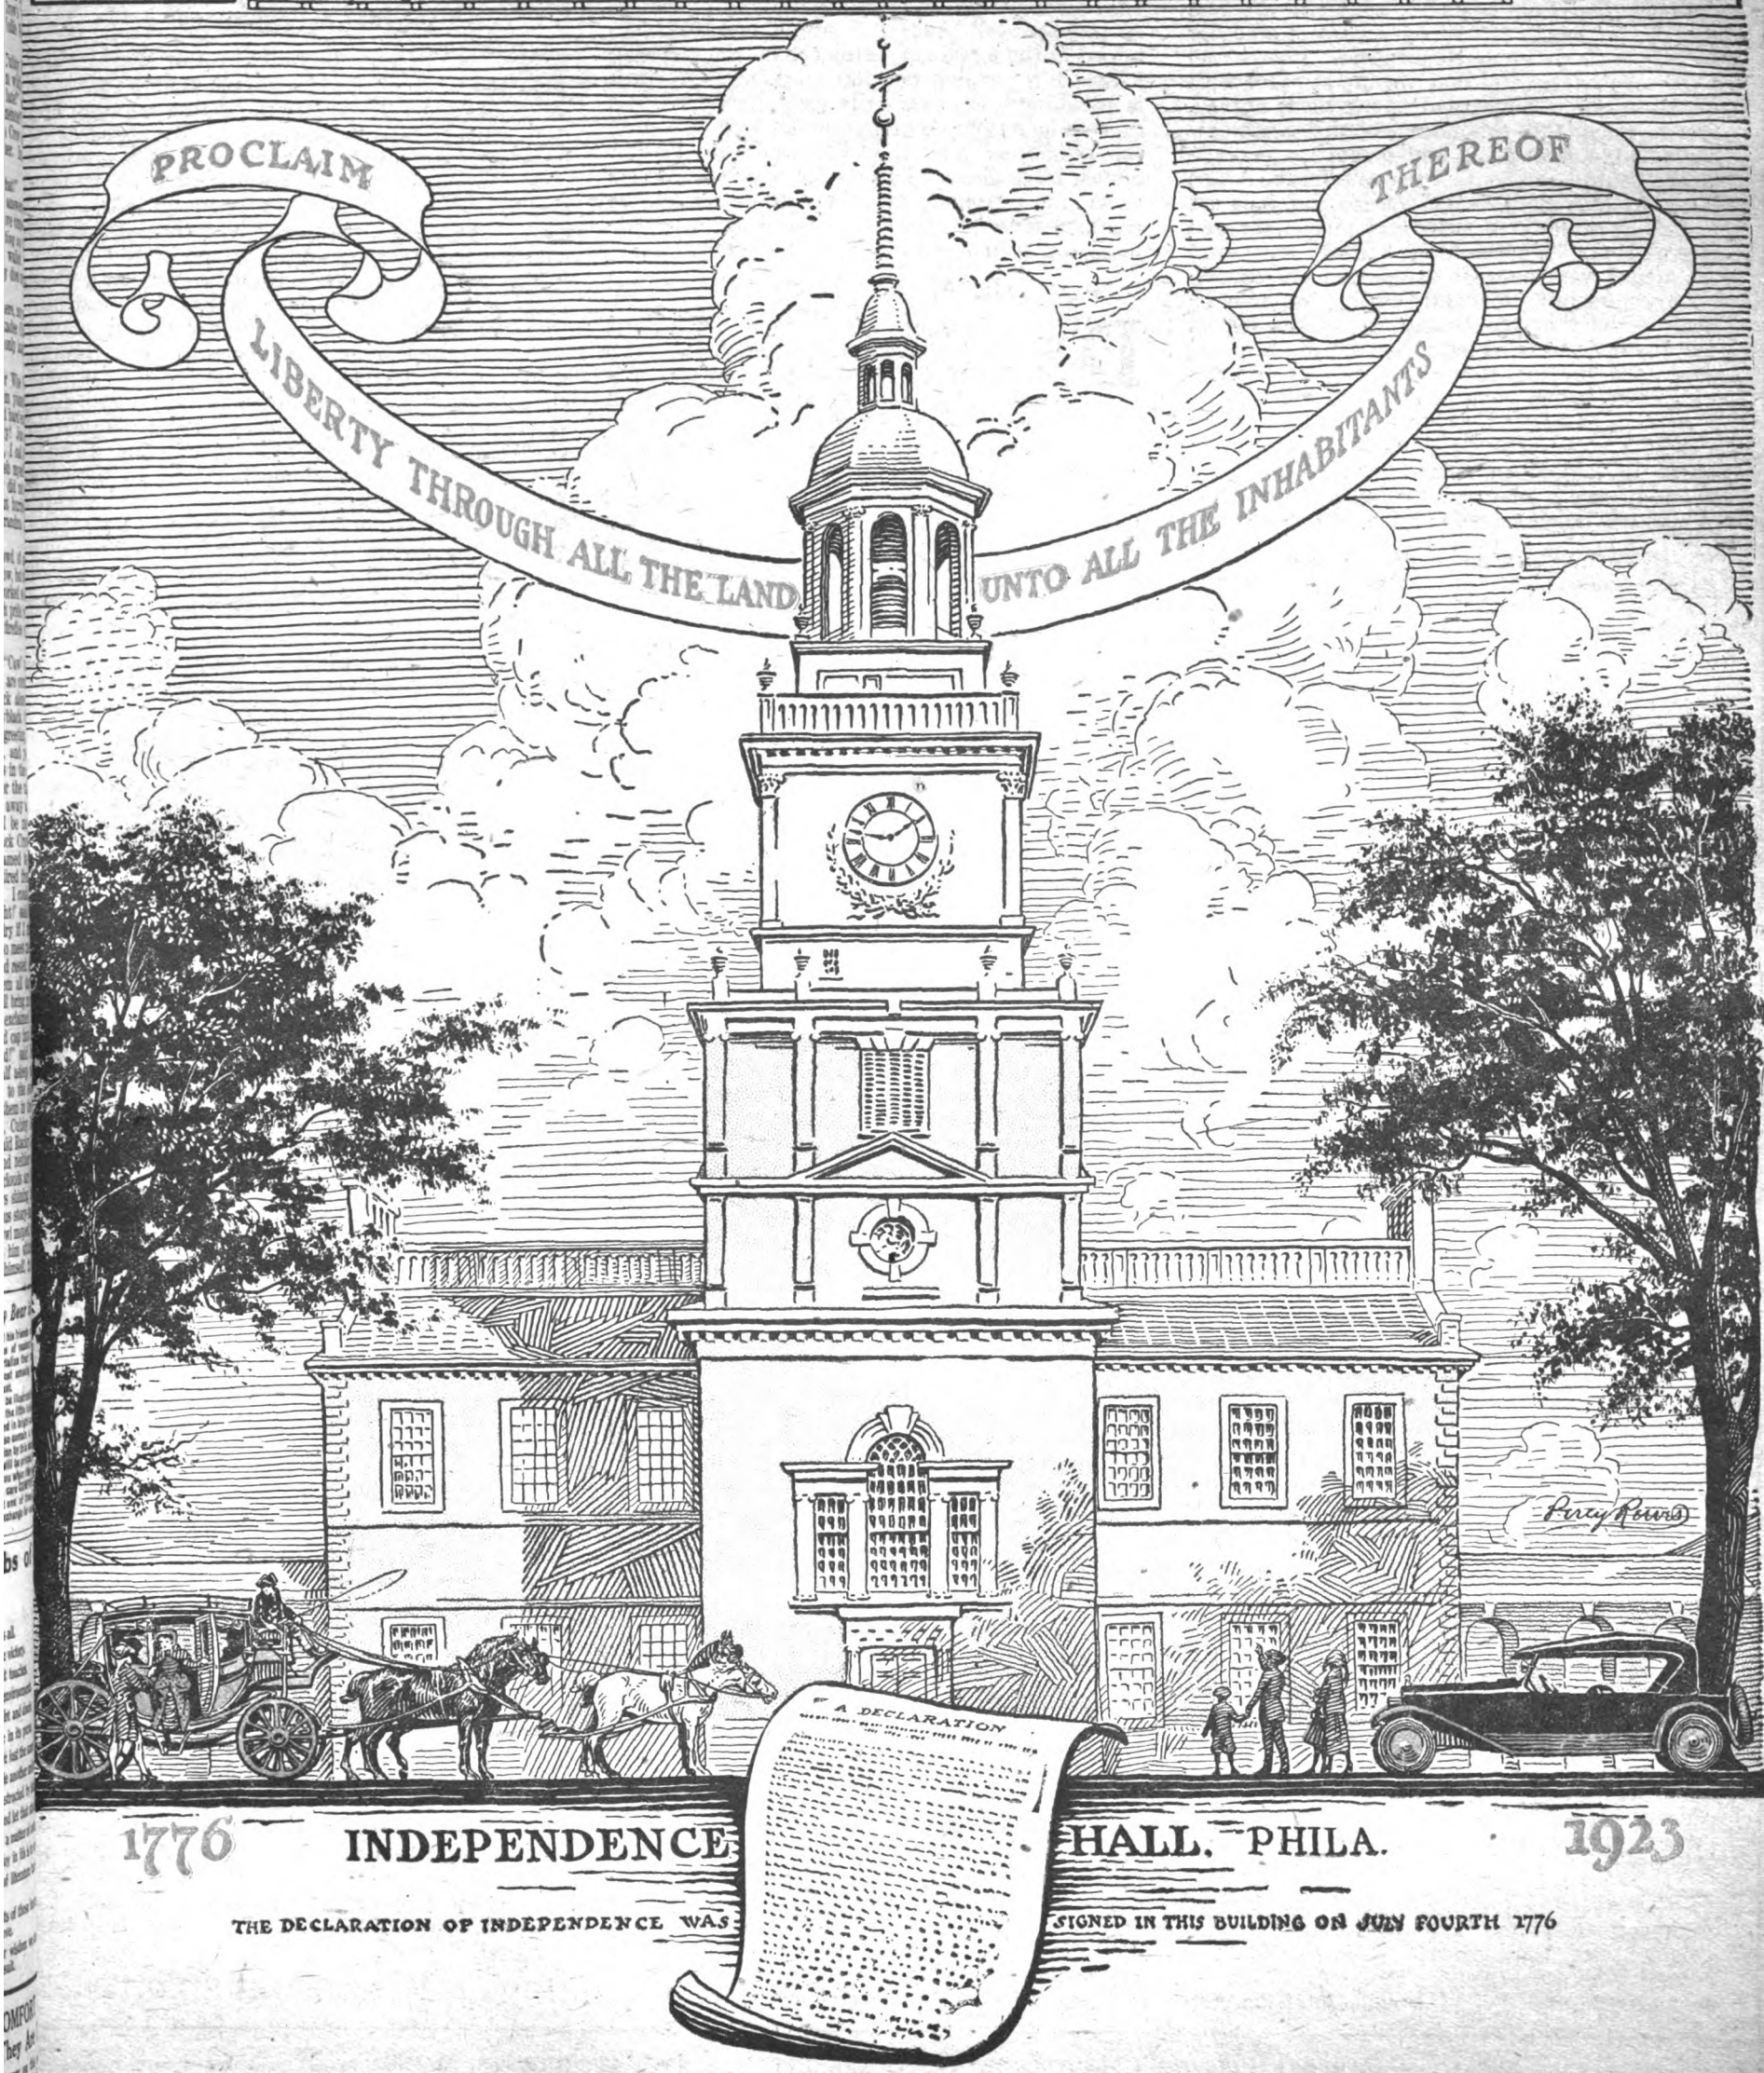
I enclose ..... cents for renewal and extension of my subscription _____ full years from date of expiration.

*Date*_____ *Name*_____

*Post Office*_____ *Street and No.*_____

*R. F. D. No.*_____ *Box No.*_____ *State*_____

June, 1923.



VOL. XXXV
NO. 9

COMFORT

The Key to Happiness and Success in over a Million and a Quarter Homes

Published at Augusta Maine

JULY
1923

1776 INDEPENDENCE HALL, PHILA. 1923

THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE WAS SIGNED IN THIS BUILDING ON JULY FOURTH 1776

Copyright 1923 (Trade-Mark Registered), by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Incorporated.

Table of Contents on Page 28.

The Centennial of the Declaration of the Monroe Doctrine Finds All America Enjoying Peace and Prosperity

WHILE celebrating the glorious Fourth of July in the usual holiday fashion with sports and amusements, let us also take occasion to consider seriously the momentous events and distinctive policies that have not only shaped our country's wonderful progress but also influenced largely the destiny of all other peoples in the Western Hemisphere. First let us be reverently thankful that we are at peace with all the world. Then extending our vision abroad, remark the mighty significance of the great, outstanding fact that peace and prosperity pervade North, Central and South America from the Arctic Ocean to Cape Horn, while Europe and Asia are a seething cauldron of strife and misery through international jealousies and hatreds, wars and threatened wars, internal dissentions and revolutionary uprisings. Without boasting we may be justly proud that the United States has blazed the way and rendered effective aid in bringing about the present status of peaceful security which, founded on international good will, is prevalent throughout the New World. Let us examine and get a clear understanding of the means by which this happy result has been attained, for it is all-important that we resolutely pursue the same undeviating course in the future

By promulgating and making good the Declaration of Independence our forefathers lighted the torch of liberty on these shores 147 years ago. It shone as a beacon guiding and inspiring all other peoples on the American continent to demand and obtain liberty through absolute independence or by concession of self-government to an extent practically amounting, as in the case of Canada, to full liberty. The sorely oppressed Spanish colonies, comprising Mexico and the greater part of Central and South America, in due time followed our example by revolting against their mother country and establishing their independence by force of arms, and in so doing they had the sympathy of our people and our Government, although the latter observed strict neutrality during their wars for independence. This happened in the early part of the past century, and more than a hundred years ago our government recognized their independence and welcomed them to the family of independent American republics.

Washington's Foreign Policy

PRESIDENT Washington, in the fall of 1796, shortly before his retirement from office, issued his famous Farewell Address to the American people for the purpose of warning them, in the interest of their general welfare and for the permanent success of the Government which he had been so largely instrumental in establishing, to avoid certain dangers from which he had steered clear during his administration and which he foresaw with prophetic wisdom would be perpetually recurrent As among the most perilous pitfalls to be shunned he strenuously admonished that we, as a nation, should avoid all foreign alliances and especially with European nations. Regarding the latter he said:

"Europe has a set of primary interests, which to us have none, or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the causes of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves, by artificial ties, in the ordinary vicissitudes of her policies, or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships or enmities. * * * Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity, in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor, or caprice? It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world; * * * "

The profound impression which the Farewell Address made on the people at large when first published has deepened and strengthened from generation to generation as the test of time has demonstrated the eternal soundness of the principles which it enunciates. In order that our national law-makers may keep in mind and heed its counsel it is customary for Congress to commemorate Washington's Birthday on each succeeding anniversary by suspending the regular order of business while the members listen to the reading of the Farewell Address. And the advice contained in the foregoing extract has always been followed in shaping our foreign policy, to which is attributable our present peace and our previous success in having kept out of all except two of the numerous wars that have afflicted Europe almost incessantly. This advice, which has saved us so much trouble, may be epitomized as the common-sense proposition to mind our own business and keep out of other peoples' affairs.

The Monroe Doctrine

DURING Washington's lifetime the United States was the only independent nation on this side of the Atlantic, but soon after his death, which occurred in 1799, the Spanish colonies south of us began their successful struggles for independence, as previously explained, and Brazil, a former Portuguese colony, also cut loose from her European mother in 1822. In the following year Spain asked her associates in the "Holy Alliance" (the then existing league which included all the Christian nations of Europe except Great Britain) to render her and Portugal armed assistance in an attempt to reconquer their lost American colonies. So favorable was the sentiment of continental Europe to this audacious proposal that it seemed likely to be accepted and put in execution. Our statesmen of that day foresaw that European aggression and conquest once begun on the American continent would sooner or later endanger our peace and security.

In order to meet and ward off this menace at the very start President Monroe, on December 2nd, 1823, in his annual message to Congress called attention to the gravity of the situation as it concerned our vital interests, and announced it to be the policy of the United States not to tolerate the conquest or colonization of any independent American country by a European Power. Such, in brief, is the substance and origin of the famous Monroe Doctrine which, ever since it was promulgated, has been resolutely maintained as our national policy to be upheld even by war, if necessary. While it has served our own interests it has been the means of protecting the other American republics from aggression and absorption by European Powers. It may seem strange that a league so powerful and arrogant as was the "Holy Alliance" should have been awed by the defiance of a nation so comparatively weak as was the United States a hundred years ago; but President Monroe's pronouncement was no idle threat, for Great Britain, whose navy ruled the seas, had assured him of her support of our side of the controversy because it was advantageous to her commercial interests to have the Spanish-American republics remain independent. As such they had opened their ports to all nations to trade on equal terms. But if again subjected to Spanish dominion they would be compelled by preferential laws to trade mostly with Spain, as had been the case during their colonial status.

The Monroe Doctrine is not a departure from Washington's injunction to mind our own business and avoid entanglement in European difficulties, but is its corollary in requiring Europe to keep hands off America. In various parts of the country preparations are being made to celebrate the centennial of President Monroe's announcement of the policy that bears his name, notably in Los Angeles, where there will be a Monroe Exposition, and in New York where a committee has been formed to buy the house in which Monroe died, and preserve it as a historical museum. We believe that the great majority of our people are still as strongly as ever in favor of both the Washington and Monroe policies, but an aggressive agitation and propaganda is being promoted by certain interests for the abandonment of both these policies and for entangling us in the multiplicity of strifes that are rending and wrecking Europe and Asia, by having our country join the League of Nations.

Present League of Nations as Unholy as the "Holy Alliance."

FOLLOWING on the heels of the World War the League of Nations when first proposed was generally approved in this country because it was represented by its sponsors to be a sure preventive of war and a safe and rational means of settling international controversies, which, of course, everybody earnestly desired. But public sentiment was reversed as the subsequent discussion of the terms of the treaty in the Senate, leading up to its rejection by that body, showed it to be a very different proposition that instead of safeguarding our peace it would make our Government subservient to a foreign super-government with power to force us to participate in wars that do not concern us and, contrary to the Constitution, without the consent of Congress; also that it would subject our foreign policy and even our domestic laws to possible supervision, revision or annulment by an alien tribunal. After rejection by the Senate, the proposal for us to join the League of Nations was made the issue in the Presidential campaign of 1920 and was turned down by an overwhelming majority at the polls.

The sound judgment of the Senate in rejecting, and of the people in disapproving the League of Nations has been fully demonstrated by the shameful course of events in Europe due to the continual distrust, bickering and strife among members of the League during the past three years. Had we joined we should have been involved in their quarrels. Though the declared purposes of the League of Nations are exalted and benevolent it has failed dismally because of the insincerity, greed and malevolence of its members as did its predecessor, which arrogated to itself all the Christian virtues implied in the sublime name of "Holy Alliance" by which it chose to call itself. Like the present League, the "Holy Alliance" was formed in Paris immediately after a world war (that which ended in the final overthrow of Emperor Napoleon in 1815), and, as previously stated, included all the Christian nations of Europe except Great Britain. Its avowed purposes were "that, in accordance with the precepts of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the principles of justice, charity and peace should be the basis of their internal administration, and of their international relations and the happiness and religious welfare of their subjects should be their great object." Could any expression be higher or nobler? Yet the real design which this beautiful declaration camouflaged was purely selfish, as is well illustrated by its proposed aggression against America. Despite its sanctimonious profession of peaceful intentions the "Holy Alliance" was broken up in 1846 by wars between its members.

"The Christ of the Andes"

THROUGH twenty-five centuries war has been the outstanding feature of the history of Europe, and she has not had enough of it yet, for she is still an armed camp and is ruining herself supporting millions of soldiers. We are asked to join the League of Nations and help pacify Europe. Doubtless in such case we should suffer by getting into bad company but we could not help bring Europe round to peace. Her only possible help must come by a change of heart and a reform of her ways. Let Europe gaze on peaceful America and draw inspiration from "The Christ of the Andes", the bronze statue of Jesus erected on the boundary between Argentena and Chile as a mutual pledge of perpetual peace after these two nations had settled their boundary dispute by arbitration instead of by war for which both had prepared.

COMFORT'S EDITOR.

COMFORT, PUBLISHED MONTHLY BY W. H. GANNETT, PUB., INC., AT AUGUSTA, MAINE.

Subscription price in United States and United States Possessions 50c a year; Canadian subscriptions 65c a year, foreign countries $1.00 a year. No premiums or prizes will be given on Canadian or foreign subscriptions. Please send your renewal just as soon as your subscription expires. We can not send you even one copy of COMFORT, after expiration, until your subscription is Renewed. If you do not get your magazine by the 25th of the month write us and we will send you another copy free. Please notify us immediately in case you move, so that we can change your address and see that you do not miss a single copy. Remember that we must have your former address, as well as your new address to make the change. Be sure to send both. We do not supply back numbers.

Entered at the post office at Augusta, Maine as second-class mail matter. Copyright, 1923 (Trade-Mark Registered), by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

Brownie's Triumph

by Mrs. Georgie Sheldon

Before she had time to analyze her own feelings she became concious of a presence near her.

"Who are you? What's your name?"

He took from his pocket as he spoke an elegant sleeve button.

Copyright, 1879-1880, by Street & Smith.
ewal granted to Mrs. Georgie Sheldon Downs, 1907.
Serial rights by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

rownie Douglas, waiting at Memorial Hall, Centen- l Exposition, Philadelphia, attracts the attention of gentlemen, Adrian Dredmond, an Englishman, and Gordon who recognizes Brownie, she being an inti- e friend of his sisters. Her father, dying before is born, and her mother at her birth, she is adopted her great aunt who gives her her name Mehetabel brings her up to remember she is a direct de- ndant from the Scottish nobility. Her nurse calls Brownie from the first. Adrian Dredmond picks up ostly cuff button with a large D, studded with bril- nts and the word "Brownie" upon the back. That t Miss Mehetabel Douglas tells Brownie the story her betrothal to Lord Dunforth, the ball given by en Capel's aunt, Lady Ruxley, her introduction to nt de Lusan, a man of questionable reputation, her sal to cancel a dance at Lord Dunforth's command, en Capel's treachery in suppressing a note, her seri- illness, her coming to America, where her father mother soon died. She gives Brownie her jewels, uding her engagement ring, coral cross and all other s from Lord Dunforth. That night she dies and up- the reading of the will Mr. Conrad, who has the e of her aunt's property admits using and losing ey entrusted to him, leaving Brownie, after all ts and legacies to the servants are paid, two hun- d dollars. Refusing help, she secures employment ng hats. She is helped by Mattie Burnham, who s her love, and in the public library Brownie, read- to her in French, attracts the attention of an elder- gentleman who asks if she is a teacher and speaks other language, and would she teach. She would mentions Ware and Coolidge where she is em- yed. His card bears the name of Wm. H. Alcott, D., who recommends her to his son-in-law, Mr. lidge, as being competent to superintend the educa- n of his two younger daughters and to be a com- ion and interpreter on a proposed trip to Europe. ng to the Coolidge home, Mrs. Coolidge and the st daughter Isabel admit her personal charms but jealous of her beauty and many accomplishments hope her meeting Wilbur will be avoided. The h fails. Boarding the steamer, Brownie is saved n an accident by Adrian Dredmond. Wilbur re- es him of further care and takes her to his mother sister who realize Wilbur's infatuation for Brownie. rian Dredmond overhears their determination to pre- t Wilbur's further attention. Going to London they e a house near where Miss Mehetabel lived. Wilbur s tickets for the opera and insists that Miss Doug- shall go, too. Selecting her jewels, among which a coral cross, Mrs. Coolidge is surprised to find her radiant and decides it shall not occur again. Adrian edmond entering the Coolidge box, is introduced to ownie and leaving escorts her to the carriage, where receives insults from Mrs. Coolidge. Isabel, envi- s of Brownie's elegant dress and jewels, queries to mother Brownie's honesty. Seeing her go for a lk, Isabel enters Brownie's room and securing her wels takes them to her mother, who requests that ownie, upon her return, be sent to her. She asks ownie if she has anything in her possession not gally hers and accuses her of stealing jewels and thing. Brownie questions her right to ask her, to ter her room and from under lock and key take her wels and demands the return of the casket. Mrs. olidge, refusing, Brownie threatens legal measures for eir return. Wilbur intercedes and promises upon his ther's return justice shall be done. Knowing she is leave he offers her the love and care that will pro- t. She refuses. Wilbur orders a cab and directs at Brownie be driven to "The Washington." Adrian edmond calls; requesting to see Miss Douglas. Isa- l gives a wrong impression and their pain in learn- g she is dishonest. Asking for her address, she does t know and he leaves distressed and indignant. Wil- r sends it and Adrian going to "The Washington" ils to find her. Mr. Coolidge hires a detective with- t success. Going to Lady Peasewell's party, Isabel ears Brownie's jewels. She meets Sir Charles Ran- l, who conducts her to the conservatory. Passing ord Dunforth, he detects the ring and demands where e got it, also the other jewels. Claiming they are irlooms, did Mehetabel Douglas give them to her. ey were my last gift to her. Sir Charles appears and ord Dunforth begs her to forget what has occurred. wo years after Sir Charles's birth there was a pros- ct of an addition to the family. Lady Randal was aveling and returning a year later remarked it was ard to lose one's children. Mr. Coolidge returning to ew York, Lady Randal, who was Helen Capel and a ousin of Lord Dunforth, invites the Coolidges to Vall- gham Hall, Isabel being engaged to Sir Charles. Isa- l walking with him sees Lady Ruxley leaning upon the m of a young woman. The next day a dinner is given y the Earl of Dunforth and Isabel is presented to his randson, Adrian Dredmond, who meets her with scorn nd recognizes the jewels she wears. Introduced to ady Ruxley, she predicts dire things through Isabel oolidge. Adrian saves Brownie from death.

CHAPTER XXIII.

TAKEN BY STORM.

ADRIAN had been obliged to exert the sternest self-control in order to keep back the wild words which were burning upon his lips for utterance after saving Brownie.

He loved her, he knew he loved her, and he longed to pour out the fullness of his heart to her.

But how could he presume to do so, when she was comparatively a stranger to him?

Only twice before had he met her, and he reasoned that it could not be possible that she had any thought of love for him, although he had worshiped her from afar for the last six months.

He felt that he must tell her ere long. He had almost betrayed it tonight, and the hot blood surged into his face as he thought of it, and wondered how she regarded him.

Would she not feel that he was presuming upon the service which he had just rendered her if he should confess it?

And yet, in his heart, he exulted over the event, even while he trembled and grew faint as he realized how near he had come to losing her forever.

The danger and the escape from it had brought them nearer to each other than ever before. She had trusted him, leaned upon him, and even allowed his arm to clasp her unshrinkingly when she could not stand alone.

And now she was under the same roof with him, and would remain several days, she said.

It seemed too much happiness, after all his discouragements and disappointments in seeking her.

Of course, he would not return to London now; of what use would it be, when the object of his search there was found?

No, he would stay here and win her if he could; and when she was his wife, how proud he would be to introduce her to Isabel Coolidge and her mother as the future Lady of Dunforth!

And Brownie!

Who shall describe the tumult that was in her heart, as she sought Lady Ruxley's apartments?

She could not misinterpret Adrian's manner toward her. Had not he almost called her darling? Had not his every tone and look been fraught with that magnetic influence which could not be mistaken?

Did not his horror, when he had found it was she who had been in such peril, bespeak a deeper interest than that of a mere friend?

Ah, yes! and her hands burned with his passionate kisses even now.

How precious—how doubly precious the boon of life would seem to her hereafter, since it had been bestowed upon her by him!

* * * * * * * * * * * *

"I will know my fate this day," said Adrian, the next morning, as he rose from his almost sleepless couch and descended to the breakfast parlor.

For the past six months Brownie had been so continually in his thoughts that she had grown to seem almost a part of himself, and now it seemed to him as if, in the great horror of the night previous, when they had stood so near to death, and together had caught a glimpse, so to speak, of the darkness and gloom of mysterious eternity, it seemed, I say, as if they had tacitly acknowledged and felt that they belonged to each other.

"How now," said his grandfather, as he entered the room; "must you be off today? I was hoping that you would spend several weeks with us."

"I'm sure I cannot see what there is so important to call you back to London," put in Lady Dunforth, reproachfully.

"Do you take it so much at heart? Well, then suppose I compromise the matter, and say that I will remain a few days," Adrian replied, laughingly, though he colored a conscious crimson as he altered his plans.

His lordship gave him a searching glance, as if he did not exactly understand this change; he had been so positive last night about returning.

Lady Dunforth, however, was delighted, and other guests entering at that moment, she imparted the good news, and then all sat down to breakfast.

Adrian was on the watch all day for Brownie, but late hours did not agree with Lady Ruxley, and she did not rise until very late. Then, being in rather a more exacting mood than usual, she kept her companion in constant attendance upon her all day.

It was not until late in the afternoon that Brownie was free to take a stroll by herself; then, her ladyship having fallen into a doze, she donned her hat and shawl and stole out.

She had a strange desire to visit again the spot where she had so nearly lost her life, and view by daylight the havoc which had been wrought.

Walking rapidly, she soon gained the top of the hill, and, turning from the narrow path, she ere long stood upon the precipice where the great shelf of earth had crumbled away.

"Strange that he should be here! Strange that he should have saved me a second time," she murmured to herself, and the rosy color flashed over her beautiful face, as she recalled that scene upon the boat in connection with the events of the night previous.

She could not forget the clinging clasp of his arm; she could not forget his upturned, anxious face, as he dropped upon his knees, nor the burning passionate kisses which he had pressed upon her hands; the horror in his voice when he realized that it was she who had been in such danger; the intense thankfulness which quivered in his tones at her deliverance and the pathos with which he had said it would have been better for them both to have perished beneath that falling mass than that he had not come to save her.

He had told her, too, of his long and anxious search for her in London; and now she lived over again, every moment, and recalled it all, with that beautiful color deepening upon her cheek, and those lovely eyes glowing with a deep tenderness and joy.

She knew it could only be accounted for in one way; he loved her! Her whole being thrilled with the thought.

A strange, rapturous joy surged through her heart, for she knew, despite the difference in their position—for she had heard that he would one day inherit a title, although she had no idea that he was connected with Lord Dunforth—that it was an honorable and deathless love which he bore her.

She would as soon have doubted her own purity as his manliness and truth. And she? Did she love him in return?

Before she had time to analyze her own feelings, she became conscious of a presence near her, though she had heard no step, and looking up, she beheld the object of her thoughts at her side, regarding her with grave, earnest eyes.

"Are you fascinated by the horror of this place, Miss Douglas?" Adrian asked, holding out his hand to her

"I came to see by daylight from what I had been saved," she replied, coloring vividly as she laid her own within it.

"It is even more dreadful than it seemed in the night," he said, shuddering, as he looked below and took in the dizzy depth, while his clasp grew stronger over the little hand, as if he feared to let it go.

"This place," he resumed after a moment, "has been regarded with dread for years. I can remember when I was a little boy of seeing the smallest crack in the earth here, and I was told never to step near it. Every year, as the trees and shrubs growing upon it have become larger, the seam has widened and deepened, until the crash has been expected for a long time. I suppose our extra weight upon it last night was all that was needed to complete the dreadful work. I am glad, though, that it is over with, for everybody as been in suspense about it for so long; but—but do you know, darling, that if it had buried you beneath its cruel weight that the world would have been a blank to me today?"

He paused a moment, just glancing at her, his face growing pale and anxious with his emotion; then he went on rapidly:

"You know now, dear, what I want to say to you. I love you—I love you, my darling, and I want you for my own, my cherished wife.

"I fear you will think me presuming," he hastened to say, as he saw the rich color flash over cheek, neck, and even to the tips of her delicate fingers, "for you have only met me two or three times; but you cannot know how, for the last six months, I have sought you continually, this love growing in my heart all the while.

"Yes," he added, as she gave a slight start of surprise, "I met you first last September, though you were not conscious of the fact, and I meant then to make your acquaintance. But your aunt died, and you went away somewhere, and I, deeply disappointed, lost sight of you entirely. You can judge of my surprise and pleasure when you came aboard the steamer at New York, although you cannot judge of my feelings when you stumbled, and I caught and held you, just a moment, in my arms. I had been thinking of you continually; your bright face dwelt in my heart like a picture, but at that moment I became conscious that you, and you alone, could make life worth the living to me.

"I resolved then that I would know you before the voyage was finished; but you were sick all the time, and I only caught glimpses of you when they bore you from your stateroom to the coach. Then I saw you in London at the opera, and the long-desired introduction took place. I resolved to cultivate the acquaintance, and called at Mr. Coolidge's the day you—you went away.

"They told me you had gone," he resumed, after a pause," though they could not or would not tell me where. Afterward young Coolidge said I would find you at the 'Washington'. I haunted the hotel for a week, and I have searched the city over for you since. But, dearest," he said, clasping the little hand closer,"I have found you now, and can you give me the one precious boon I crave—your priceless love?"

He bent eagerly toward her, his noble, handsome face flushed and hopeful, for her attitude was one of sweet and modest confusion, and she had not even sought to withdraw the hand he was holding.

"Will you, Brownie?" he pleaded, softly.

She flashed one quick look at him from her beautiful eyes as he called her that, and he saw in their clear depths all that he wished or hoped.

She loved him! Her soul answered to his, and clasping her close to his heart, he murmured:

"You are mine, darling—I have won you by the mighty power of my silent, magnetic love, and you will be my wife?"

She lifted her head, which had been resting against his bosom, quickly at these last words, and said, with drooping lashes and quivering lips:

"Mr. Dredmond, you have taken me by storm."

"Yes, and I mean to hold you," he interrupted, gayly, as he noticed her excessive embarrassment; then added, more earnestly: "Brownie, do you, can you love me?"

She smiled faintly at his first words, then with modest frankness gave him the honest answer which she knew was his due.

"If I am truthful, I must confess that my heart does respond to yours; but knowing so little of you, I should have deemed it unmaidenly to have confessed it, even to myself."

"But you do confess it now—you do love me?" he interrupted again, eagerly, and impatient for a more definite reply.

"Yes," she whispered.

"And you will be my wife?" he asked, as his lips met hers.

"Yes, God willing," in tones of solemn sweetness.

"Darling, God has given you to me; I acknowledge the giver as I take the gift. From that first moment when I met you in the Art Gallery in Philadelphia until now this mighty love has been growing within me."

"In the Art Gallery?" questioned Brownie, with a puzzled look.

"Yes, when your friend, Miss Huntington, met with such a series of accidents."

"Oh, was that you with Mr. Gordon?" she demanded, her face dimpling at the remembrance, and she eagerly searched his face. "I remember now; it has haunted me like a strange dream ever since I met you on the boat, where I had seen you before. Now it all comes back to me," she said.

"I found something that day which belongs to you, but not in season to return it to you then," Adrian said.

He took from his pocket as he spoke the elegant sleeve button, which he had always carried with him since.

Brownie exclaimed, joyously, as he saw it:

"Oh, how glad I am to get it—I never thought to see it again; and you have had it all this time?"

"Yes, darling—my Brownie—how I have longed to say it—and I vowed then that I would only yield it up into your own little hands."

"It belonged to auntie once," she explained,"and there are associations connected with it which make it very dear to me."

"And now come to yonder rock and sit down. I want to know all that has happened to you since you left the Coolidges; there has been some mystery connected with it which I could never understand," Adrian said, leading her to a sheltered seat, and sitting down beside her.

And Brownie feeling that she was now no longer alone, but that instead she had a host in him to battle for her, poured forth all the story of her wrongs about the jewels, and the abuse and insult which she had received from Isabel and her mother.

CHAPTER XXIV.

RETROSPECTIVE.

When Brownie, in her despair and desolation, bade farewell to Wilbur and drove away from the Coolidge mansion, it was her intention to go directly to the "Washington," and there await, for a few days at least, whatever destiny might send her.

But this plan was overruled in a way she had not thought of.

The man who drove the cab was more than half intoxicated, and upon turning a corner, he ran into a heavily-loaded team. More by luck than by any good wit, he turned quickly aside, and the cab was almost miraculously disengaged from the other vehicle; but the animals had now become unmanageable from excessive fright. They gave a sudden leap into the air, then bounded forward in a mad and furious race.

The cabby was thrown from his seat into the gutter, and in turning another corner, the carriage was upset. Now, wholly beside themselves, the horses kicked themselves free from the debris, and plunged out of sight, leaving poor Brownie in a state of insensibility, buried beneath the ruins.

The accident had happened in a quiet, aristocratic street of the city; consequently there were few to witness it, and the young girl escaped the curious gaze of the crowd which always gathers about any such event in the more frequented portions.

The massive door of a grand house swung open, and an old lady of over eighty, very peculiar in appearance—for she was bent nearly double, and walked with a cane—appeared, attended by the gray-haired butler of the house.

"Go and bring her in instantly, James," she was saying, when another woman came forward and seemed to protest against the order in a very emphatic manner.

"I tell you it's inhuman, Helen, to let her lie there, to be carried off to some hospital by the police," cried the old woman, in shrill, almost angry tones.

"But, aunt, the house is full now; and if she is badly injured it will not do to move her from here after she has been once attended to."

"I don't care if there are five hundred in the house; that girl shall not be left there to be carried off by the police I tell you. James, go bring her in this instant. Get some one to help you, and take her up to my bedroom."

"But, aunt——"

"Hold your tongue, Helen. You were always hard-hearted as adamant. Go along, I say!" And she flourished her cane about the grave butler's ears in a way to make him move more quickly to execute her orders than was his wont.

He beckoned to two under-servants, and together they proceeded to the overturned carriage, where Brownie could be seen lying prone against the window, her white face upturned and motionless.

They extricated her, and bore her into an upper room, where, in the presence of the brusque and energetic old woman, she was kindly ministered unto, while awaiting the arrival of the family physician.

For three days she continued very ill, being feverish and somewhat delirious, but after that she began to mend rapidly, and at the end of a week she was able to sit up.

Evidently she could not have fallen into better hands, for she was surrounded by every luxury imaginable, and upon questioning the servant who attended her, she was told that she was in the house of Lady Randal.

She wondered why her ladyship did not come to see her, and then sighed to think that she was only a poor, friendless waif, who had been picked out of the streets and ministered unto for charity's sake.

But one day, upon awaking from a long and refreshing sleep, she found the queerest-looking old lady bending over her and scrutinizing her closely. She was nearly bent double, and held a cane in her hand. She uttered a low grunt as Brownie opened her large brown eyes, giving her a surprised look, and then asked, in a sharp, though not unkindly, tone:

"Who are you? What's your name?"

"My name is Douglas," replied Brownie, quietly, her pale face flushing slightly at the blunt question.

"Eh? What? Oh! Dundas," returned the deformed creature, twisting her neck to get a better view of the delicate face. She was evidently hard of hearing, and did not catch the name correctly; but she continued:

"Mehetabel," the young girl said, with her usual quiet smile whenever she pronounced the obnoxious cognomen.

"Ah! Mabel," replied the old woman, only seeing the motion of her lips, and catching the last syllables. "Mabel Dundas! That is a good-sounding name. Now, how old are you?"

Brownie was upon the point of correcting the mistake regarding her name, when she checked herself.

"What matters it," she breathed, with a sad sigh, "whether I am Mehetabel Douglas or Mabel Dundas? It will be all the same to her, and perhaps help to shield me from my enemies."

"I am nearly nineteen," she replied to the question.

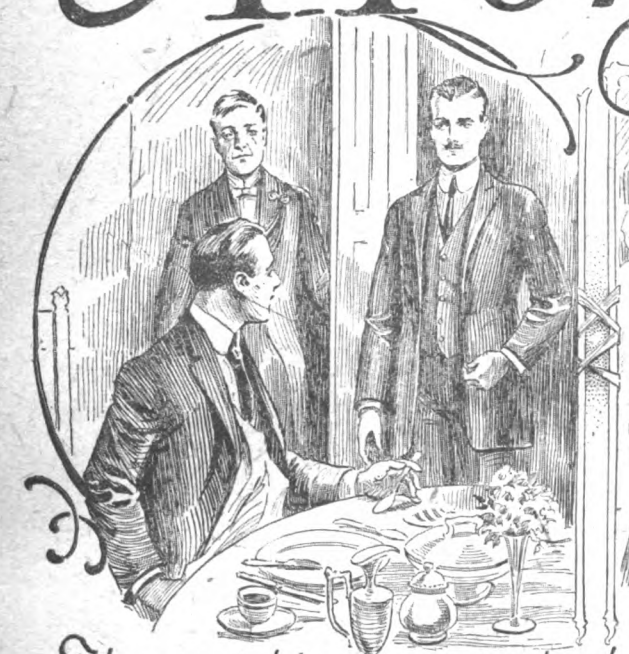
"What? I'm not always so hard of hearing, but I've got a cold today. How old did you say you are?"

"Nearly nineteen," Brownie repeated, speaking louder.

"Do you suffer much?"

"Not very much."

"Where are your friends?"



"I have none," and the sad, sweet eyes filled with tears.

"Humph! That's bad for a pretty face like yours. What do you do for a living?"

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 8.)

A Forgotten Love

by Adelaide Stirling

He expected to see a man rotund, iron-gray and elderly.

That little cuff that he dared not take from Atkins would ruin Jacky.

"You —" but the string of vile names never reached Gillian's ear.

Copyright, 1899, by Street and Smith.
Serial rights by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Tom Hamilton dies poor, leaving two daughters, Gillian and Jacqueline, to the care of his father's housekeeper. Mr. Marchmont, in league with his butler, housekeeper and Lesard, buys Hamilton Place and is anxious to adopt both girls that he may gain admittance to the neighboring houses. Jacky refuses; finding Gill in tears begs her not to stay if unwilling. Gill admits there was someone in London and he writes he cannot have her for his wife. She refuses to give his name. Three months later and she wonders why Marchmont adopted her and wishes there had not been the burglary at Lord Hollis's. Lesard, in love with Jacky, will care for her. If alone she would marry him, but she must go to Gill, who is unhappy. Lesard warns her not to go—it is no place for any woman; but asks her to trust him. Mrs. Gibbs, the housekeeper, engages a new maid, Mary James, who is Jacky in disguise. Gill confesses her fears that Marchmont is an impostor and cautions Jacky to avoid him, and Jacky knows Lesard is right. Mrs. Gibbs tells Jacky she is to accompany Gill and Mr. Marchmont to Sir Simon Wellford's, where there is to be a grand party. Jacky, that night, spies three men, Marchmont, a stranger and Lesard, and hears from him, "here's luck to the ball." She gets Gill ready for the visit and at Lady Wellford's has a room next to Gill's. Sir Charles Vivian takes Gill into dinner. The ball follows and Gill smuggles Jacky in dressed in a white domino, where she recognizes Lesard in the guise of a monk and fails to make him reveal his identity, leaving her baffled. Following him and Gill in search of Jacky, they see the robbery and rather than make an outcry Gill admits he is her husband. With the guests at supper a robbery is committed. Mrs. Fareham's jewels are missing and only Gillian's jewel case left. Detectives arrive and Sir Charles Vivian's statements, as to his movements before the dinner, relieve him and Gill of suspicion. Jacky reads his last letter to Gill, and while loathing the man whom she believes has wronged both, she knows they are not strong and brave enough. Marchmont insists that Gillian shall appear at dinner and Jacky late in the evening slips down-stairs, opens a door, standing behind it. She recognizes the voices of Lesard and Brookes and the latter calls, "All clear," and she sees Marchmont, Brookes and Lesard who is bringing the jewels, which he carries in his belt, the stones removed by Marchmont and Lesard laying the canvas belt in the place uncovered. Struggling she gains the passage back, her hands bleeding. Jacky hears Brookes query why Lesard goes out the other way and what will prevent his coming back and taking it. Gillian goes to walk with Sir Charles Vivian and is joined by Jacky. She admits Jacky is her sister. Jacky discovers a flash of light. She has found the other way and someone is coming out from an opening in the wall which is well concealed by ivy and at the foot is a deep dark pool. It is Lesard. Jacky crawls in—the stones are undisturbed. Going out, she hears Gillian call, "Marchmont is back." He has seen the detective. Unless Lesard fails him he is safe. Gill and Jacky decide to get out at once. Jacky means to take the jewels. Lesard decides to have his share and starts for Hamilton Place. Jacky finds the jewels and is staggered by the weight. She fastens the belt around her body. In the collection is a necklace of stones clear and black. She hears someone coming. It is Lesard. Brookes, suspicious of him, goes with Marchmont to the cellar where he meets with an accident. Lesard, unconscious of Marchmont's presence, secures the black diamonds. Marchmont asks what he is doing and finding the belt gone grasps Lesard and feels a package under his shirt. He denies having the belt but something better—the black diamonds. Marchmont declares he has never touched the belt and if Lesard will put the necklace back he will share with him. Lesard attempts to leave. If he moves, Marchmont threatens to kill. There is the sound of a leap and Marchmont is dead. Jacky, kneeling beside him, leaves a bloody print of her left hand. The sisters make their escape in the dar kand take a train. During the inquest the jury and coroner visit the secret passage and on the margin of the stream is the bloody imprint of a girl's hand. Mrs. Gibbs returning to her room sees Lesard, and it is not the man she knows. He claims I am Lesard and will tell that Mary Gibbs is the same person as Mary Gresham as the man now is and yet is not Lesard who stands here, and all I care to know why you say those girls killed Marchmont. Gillian and Jacky read The Mystery of His Death Solved. Jacky, going out, walks to the house of the Red Mouse and seeing the necklace of black diamonds upon her neck, declares that she buys them from Lesard who she knows is in London, and if he goes free she must hang. She goes back to Gillian who overhears there is a reward for whoever killed Marchmont and the two steal out in the night and return to Jacky's old lodging in Bloomsbury. Crossing the street where the Red Mouse lives, they are followed by Lesard who now can conceal his crime. Gillian going in, Jacky returns to buy food, when she is seized and a heavy hand over her mouth stifles her cry.

CHAPTER XXV.

"THE DEVIL AND THE DEEP SEA."

SIR Charles Vivian was still at breakfast when a man's card was brought in to him.

"Mr. L. V. Lesard," he read. "Now, who the devil is Mr. L. V. Lesard?" Then he saw the address at the bottom of the card, and remembered.

But what did Lesard, the money-lender, the financier, the man who backed wild ventures, who was hand and glove with needy royalties and extorted his interest from princes; who was said to have backed revolutions and known to have in his hands the honor of many a noble house whose heir was but a helpless figurehead; who had risen from being an ordinary adventurer to what he was, a power who could keep cabinet ministers waiting in his offices—what could this man want here?"

"Show him in!" Sir Charles said curtly, after that long two minutes of musing. "Show him in."

He was curious to see the man, though he could not imagine what had brought him. Men like Lesard do not go to visit strangers in the wilds of the country for nothing, and Sir Charles knew it. He had heard the man was as perfectly just in all his dealings as he was hard, and that of all the secrets he held he had never betrayed one, even if the price offered were millions.

But what on earth had brought him to visit Charles Vivian, whose estates were unincumbered and whose tastes were not speculative?

He expected to see a man rotund, iron-gray, elderly, and rose in surprise at seeing one tanned, lean and sinewy, of barely thirty-five years. There was a litheness about the figure of his visitor and a certain nobility in his dark face that made Vivian stare. The man was certainly unlike any of his calling Sir Charles had ever seen, but it was not that. He was convinced that he had seen that easy stride, those hawk eyes, before.

It was even curtly that Louis Lesard apologized for the hour of his visit, not—Vivian noted—for the visit itself. It was with an effort that he entered on his business, after refusing breakfast. Sir Charles had no mind to finish his own when his strange visitor had said his say. It was simple and to the point.

A warrant was out to arrest Gillian and Jacqueline Hamilton for the murder of Paul Marchmont.

"And Jacqueline Hamilton," Lesard ended quietly, "is engaged to be married to me."

Vivian pushed his chair back from the table.

"Why have you come to me? I don't know where they are," he said bluntly.

"I came because I heard you had done your best at the inquest to explain their absence. And because you are the only person who knew Jacqueline was the other girl's sister. In which case," dryly, "it seems to me you might know more."

"I know nothing!" his pleasant face drawn, as he got up to offer his visitor a cigar. "I suppose you know I advised them to go," he blurted out, and I can't understand why you ever allowed your financee to go as lady's maid to that man's house, though of course," hastily, "you couldn't know any more than I did that things were queer there! How queer, I don't know; but——"

"You think that was something behind that murder?" the other man had cut him off shortly. "What could that be but burglary?" and it seemed as though his cool eyes stared Vivian into agreeing with him.

After all, what could there be? Not a word had been spoken by any one to Marchmont's discredit. But it was not for Marchmont's sake that Lesard was keeping up the farce.

"You saw Jacqueline"—the turning of the subject seemed perfectly natural; no one would have imagined the speaker was "between the devil and the deep sea," as he continued, "if the other girl was Jacqueline!"

"There is no doubt," abruptly. "Gillian—Miss Hamilton—told me so. Told me also that her sister had dyed her hair and come in disguise because that was the only way she could get access to her."

Lesard sat perfectly quiet. It was like a blow in the face to him that Jacky had trusted him not at all. Half-a-dozen words from him to Marchmont, and Gillian could have walked out of that ill-omened house in broad daylight, never to return. Ten words telegraphed by Jacky and there would have been no horror like the one that walked with him now by night and day.

He sat with his brows drawn together and could think of nothing that could explain Jacky's silence; could see nothing in the comfortable breakfast-room but the print of Jacky's bloody hand on the granite stone.

If he could only find her! But he knew it was not he who would set finger on the girl he loved, but death, whose hand was cold.

He rose, his face absent, strangely set.

"I won't keep you," he said heavily. "I can only apologize for troubling you. I thought you might help me to find those girls before I am saved the trouble."

He stood leaning against the doorpost, his eyes bent on the other side of the room, his cigar still unlighted in his fingers.

Vivian stared as he saw him.

"I remember you now!" he cried. "I saw you at the Wellford's—at that cursed ball. You were dressed as a monk, you remember? How was it that you did not see Gillian at that ball? She was there."

"A monk! I?" Louis Lesard had caught his breath like a woman. "At that ball, did you say?"

"Certainly! You are not an ordinary-looking man; I should know your walk anywhere after having once seen it. You were leaning against a doorway exactly as you are leaning now, and Gillian, whom I had to leave"—unconscious as yet that it was Jacky—"went over to you. I saw her as I left the room."

"You're wrong—mistaken!" For a man who was telling the truth Lesard was oddly agitated.

"I never was in the Wellford's house. A man like me is not asked to such places. And Gillian would not have gone to speak to me, for I never saw the girl nor she me."

"Then it was some one damned like you," said Sir Charles. "I beg your pardon if it was not you!" His handsome face was red, for, though he believed the man, it was with an effort. His excuse about never being asked to great houses was rot, for Vivian knew he might have been lionized if he had liked.

"It must have been—some one like me," Lesard returned quietly; but his face was livid, his eyes lit with an ugly spark.

Some one like him, who had spoken to Gillian! He saw now for the first time what the reason might have been that had kept Jacky silent. And yet there was no relief in his voice, nothing but black anger.

He had before now cursed the fate that had saddled him with a brother who was his double; had been near to cursing the mother who had loved the father of her two sons so adoringly that she had named both after him—the elder Louis Victor, the younger Victor Louis. For many an ugly trick of Victor Louis had Louis Victor paid. Time and again the elder brother's power had been strained to the utmost to save the younger. But now— he washed his hands of him!

For plain as ink on paper he saw that Victor, for reasons of his own, had been at that ball. What he had said or done was neither here nor there, now. Jacky was lost in London, Victor might be on his way to the Antipodes for all he knew; and one of them, either sweetheart or brother, had killed Paul Marchmont. Mrs. Gibbs certainly had not, nor the cowardly butler. The only ray of comfort was that Victor must have turned Jacky against him, how did not matter.

"The other girl—Jacky—wasn't there?" he asked.

"Maids don't go to balls," dryly.

Lesard nodded. He had forgotten Jacky's disguise.

"What are you going to do?" said Vivian; he fidgeted with a spoon on the tablecloth. "It's no business of mine in a way, but—my God! it makes me sick," he cried sharply. "Two girls like that, alone, with all the world against them, hunted like hares! I'd give all I have to see them cleared. I know they didn't do it, handprint or no handprint, and I don't care," contradicting himself wildly, "if they did. The man was a out-and-out beast. Some one else must have done it—and if I turn the country inside out, I'm going to find out who it was!"

Lesard, leaning against the doorpost, straightened his tall, lean figure like a man who looks death in the face quietly, because his time has come.

"I don't suppose I dare try detectives," the other went on wretchedly.

"Try all the detectives you like," a strange ring in his voice, a strange purpose in his eyes, "the half Scotland Yard is after them now, it can make little difference. You find Jacky," softly, the forgetfully the name crossed his lips, "and I'll find the man who can clear her—and Gillian."

"Then you know?" sharply.

"I know nothing. But I can promise you that I will find the man who can clear them."

His lips were not merely pale as he turned to go, they were utterly bloodless. His fingers groped so carelessly in his pocket were touching a ring from the brother who was his living image; a ring which said merely that he was going abroad for further notice. It was not Victor Lesard who would save Jacky Hamilton's neck. But with there was no longer another shot in the locket, Louis Lesard would be "faithful in his duties."

Yet brave as the man was, he had no words to answer when Sir Charles Vivian asked him to say he was going to London with him.

"By George; I never saw any man so much in love, not even me!" the latter reflected, as he drove his silent companion to the station.

And for once his honest brains worked correctly, "since greater love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for his friend."

Yet it seemed as if this man's courage failed him, for at the station he let the train go off without him.

Sir Charles, leaning out of the carriage window in amaze, saw the station-master had handed Lesard a telegram; but he was too far off to hear the quick oath that broke from the man as he read it.

He had for once trusted too much in the power of his own heavy hand.

The telegram was from the respectable man in black whom Richardson, the detective, had installed in Hamilton Place, ostensibly as a lawyer's clerk.

Neither Mrs. Gibbs nor Brookes had known that Marchmont had been his own man of business, and Lesard had been quick to prompt the detective to profit by their ignorance. But now it seemed as if it had worked to no end. For the cipher telegram was very simple:

"Gibbs and Brookes gone in the night. Let you know as requested."

Lesard jumped into the station fly and was driven over the long country roads to Hamilton Place. Fool that he had been, he had had his finger on Mary Gresham and had not kept it there! For all he knew, she might even now be in security, laughing in her sleeve and moving heaven and earth against the two girls she had hated.

The time seemed interminable until he stood once more in Hamilton Place, which he had such good reason to hate. He walked up and down the gloomy library as if he were too nervous to sit down, nodding bruskly to the man who had been left in charge so unavailingly.

"Well," he asked sharply, "how did they get away?"

Mr. Atkins, the trusted of Scotland Yard, in his clean-shaven lips, all his meek smugness vanished.

I suppose I muffed it—that's all I can say," he returned almost as sharply as his interlocutor. "I'm not trying to excuse myself, but you must see it was a difficult place. There was absolutely nothing to incriminate those two, and all the instructions I had from my chief were to keep them under surveillance and let him know all their movements. There was no excuse for their arrest, nothing. All the servants were to have been paid off tomorrow and the house taken over by the proper people—for unless some relation of Marchmont's turns up everything will go to the Crown, as he left no will.

"For fear our two friends might possibly leave, I had a man watching each door of the house, the result being that I get up this morning and find them gone in the night—hide, hoof and horn! Of course we shall find them again if they're wanted, but it's the reasons for their going beats me."

It did not beat Lesard, but he cursed his self-confidence that had made him forget that Mary Gresham, mad with sorrow and the thirst for vengeance, was safe only as long as he stood before her an embodied threat. Once she had given him the slip, he could not hope to reckon with her.

"The only thing I can think of is that they knew far more than they admitted, and were frightened of what might come out while they were in the house," Atkins pursued, heedless of his auditor's silence. "But if they had anything to do with the murder, they'll find they've made a mighty bad move."

"I don't think they did it. They'd nothing to gain by it," Lesard spoke at last restlessly. "I suppose you've wired to London?"

"First thing this morning; but I fancy they got the start of me and arrived there last night or one or so."

He got up like a man who is personally and professionally annoyed. As far as his chief was concerned, he had kept to the letter of his orders, and wired the movements of the two missing servants. But he saw there was trouble on Lesard's face, and in his mechanical way Mr. Atkins was sorry. He had owed Lesard a debt of gratitude, and had seized at the chance of repaying it by keeping a tight hold on the two people whom Mr. Lesard seemed to suspect—and had failed like any novice.

"How was it none of the men followed them? the doors were watched?" Lesard said suddenly.

The men saw no one come out of the house all the evening or night, that's the odd part of it. But

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 17.)

A MAN'S PRAYER

By Will Thomas Withrow

This famous poem, which has been widely published in the religious and daily press of the United States and Canada, and has brought the author thousands of letters of appreciation, is reproduced in these columns, by special permission of the author.

Lord, if one boon alone, be granted me,
Let me but choose what that one boon shall be;
I shall not ask to live 'mid sheltered bliss,
In soft security—but only this:

Let me be not a coward in the strife
That sweeps across the battle-fields of life;
Let me leave not for other lives to bear,
The burdens that were rightfully my share.

Let me not whine, nor ever seek to shirk,
But cheerfully bear my full load of work,
Then, place a friendly shoulder 'neath the load
Of one who, fainting, falls beside the road.

Let me, O Lord, be clean and unafraid;
Let me go forth to meet life, undismayed;
Until the final hour of life's brief span,
Let me walk upright—let me be A MAN!

Thus, let me live; that when, the day's work done,
I pitch my tent, toward the setting sun,
Lie down to rest, and from my labors cease,
My soul, within its house, shall be at peace!

is Department is conducted solely for the use of COMFORT sisters, whereby they may give expression to their ideas relative to the home and home surroundings, and to all matters pertaining to themselves and families; as well as opening a way for personal correspondence between each other.

r object is to extend a helping hand to COMFORT subscribers; to become coworkers with all who seek friendship, encouragement, sympathy or assistance through the interchange of ideas.

y abuse of this privilege, such as inviting correspondence for the purpose of offering an article for sale, or undertaking to charge a sum of money for ideas, recipes or information mentioned in any letter appearing in this department, if reported, will result in the offender being denied the use of these columns.

not ask us to publish letters requesting money contributions or donations of any sort. Much as we sympathize with the suffering and unfortunate, it is impossible to do this as we would be flooded with similar requests.

ase write only on one side of the paper, and recipes on a separate sheet.

ways give your correct and full name and address, very plainly written; otherwise your letter will receive no attention.

ldress MRS. WHEELER WILKINSON, CARE COMFORT, AUGUSTA, MAINE.

WE are indebted to Mrs. J. D. Burton of Oakdale, Tenn., for a most interesting account of a safe and sane Fourth of July. The readers of COMFORT'S Sisters' Corner seem to possess an uncanny sense of just what is needed and pply it in time to be of the most good. Mrs. urton's letter came when it was needed the most, r all the safe and sane community picnics that had attended were so dull that the children could ot be blamed for wanting to "whoop 'er up," with ·ecrackers and anything else they could get. The ·ogram, as outlined by Mrs. Burton, contains enty of action, but if your community added to , won't you tell us about it, or anything else that nds to foster a community spirit.—Ed.

atriotic Days in the Sunday School

OAKDALE, TENNESSEE.

EAR MRS WILKINSON:

In looking over the report of the Librarian of Con·ess, for the year 1919, I find on page 143, a record of Liberty Loan Circular issued by the Woman's Liberty oan Committee, of Morgan County, Tennessee, which notes Abraham Lincoln's Gettysburg speech in the llowing sentence: "That we here highly resolve at these dead shall not have died in vain."

And following this quotation the circular referred carries the following statement: "An obligation sts upon Morgan County toward the mothers whose arts are broken, and who are watching and waiting see if faith will be kept with their sons who went to ath to end the horrors of a great World War In ese sacrifices generations unborn shall hear the voice a grateful people testifying to the sublime devotion these boys to their country's need, and their unaltering faith in a righteous cause. The fruits of eir noble service are our perpetual heritage."

These words are suggestive of the opportunity and emingly the duty of our Sunday Schools to observe nd thus keep alive the principles for which our soldiers ied. And then there are the heroes who gave their ves for religious freedom. There is a propaganda broad in our land which would nullify every impulse nd public expression which tend to preserve our Naonal ideals and make secure our religious and civil stitutions. It is a thrust at our churches as well as ur government. Any thing therefore that will safeard these principles which are fundamental to the reservation of our form of government are worthy ne consideration of a community.

In keeping with this idea the Oakdale Sunday School ranged a Fourth of July program which proved very tisfactory. That a Sunday School is rendering good mmunity service in directing a patriotic rally of is kind is the opinion of the local leadership.

The town of Oakdale is located in the Tennessee ountains, and it was in a mountain ravine that the rogram was carried out. Mountains rise almost erpendicularly on every side, the Big Emory River uts its way through the hills at this point, and along s banks cling the homes of the inhabitants of Oakdale.

Early on the morning of the Fourth the children, oung people, and adults could be seen emerging from seven hills" of the little town to observe "Independence Day" in a sane manner And after all it was an bservance of the independence of religious liberty ccording to the dictates of the conscience.

The first act of the day was to join in a flag raising t the Railroad Y. M. C. A., of Oakdale, where "Old dory" was floated to the breeze over the association uilding amid the singing of appropriate songs.

From the flag raising the school marched to Rhododendron Falls, on the Morgan County pike, about a alf mile from Oakdale. The waving of small flags y the children enlivened the march to the falls.

The leaders showed good judgment in the selection f a place for the meeting which is very essential for n occasion of this kind. Rhododendron Falls is specially inviting by reason of shade, coolness, and beautiful landscape. A spring of pure water, enclosed in rustic woodwork, is within easy reach of the grounds.

A day or two in advance of the meeting three booths were erected on the grounds by volunteer labor. These were used as follows: in one, flags and novelties were sold; the second served refreshments, such as ice cream and lemonade; and the third disposed of ham, egg, and chicken sandwiches. Young ladies appointed by the school were in charge of the various stands, which were all decorated with our national colors and graced by native ferns as well as the beautiful rhododendron and other wild flowers of the mountains made into bouquets. The amount realized from these sales helped the school to pay its pledges to various enterprises in which it was interested.

The following are some of the numbers which appeared on the program:

10 A. M. Patriotic address.
10.30 Song service and recitations by classes.
11.15 Sack race for boys.
12.00 Basket dinner on the ground and social hour
1.00 P. M. Races on Morgan County pike.
First and second for boys 8 to 12 and 12 to 16
Third and fourth for girls of same ages.
2.00 Races for young men, young women, married men, married women, and stout people.
3.00 Jumping contest;
Standing broad jump.
Running broad jump.
Hop, step, and jump.

People gathered at Rhododendron Falls from many parts of the mountains, and the best of order prevailed. The people of the Community came out to the grounds, enjoyed the day, patronized the booths in charge of the young ladies, and a neighborhood spirit was thereby built up. And it was felt that through these exercises as arranged by the Sunday School, that "faith" had been kept with our country, and that the sacrifices of our soldier "dead were not in vain." Many of the mothers who were present had given up their sons in the great struggle for World freedom, and no doubt were assured by these exercises of the community's appreciation of the sacrifices which were made by their boys. But let us hope and pray that another World catastrophe such as this one may never be repeated. "Flander's Field" is a silent but awful reminder of what happened.

It takes a good deal of thought and preparation to get ready for such a meeting; a month or longer is needed. It is necessary, also, to have a good and safe leader, and to keep uppermost the true objective of the Sunday School. Innocent amusement is all right on days of this kind, but should be carefully planned and wisely directed. See that Christ is honored in the exercises. Many will come who would otherwise attend places more dangerous on the Fourth of July.

Using occasions like this to build up and strengthen Sunday Schools make better communities and should be encouraged wherever local conditions permit.

With best wishes. MRS. J. D. BURTON.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 12.)

Comfort Sisters' Recipes

COMFORT'S Sisters' Pin, awarded as prize for the best recipe, is sent to Mrs. Edward Hingtgan of Bethel, Minn., for her cottage cheese recipes. Send your favorite recipe, taking care that the exact quantities are given. Maybe you'll win the prize next month.—Ed.

COTTAGE CHEESE SAUSAGE.—One cup cottage cheese, one cup dry bread-crumbs (fine), one-quarter cup peanut butter, one-quarter cup chopped peanuts, one-half teaspoon powdered sage, one-half teaspoon thyme, one teaspoon milk, one teaspoon salt, one-quarter teaspoon pepper (black), one-quarter teaspoon soda, one tablespoon chopped onion. Dissolve soda in milk and work into the cheese. Mix all dry ingredients thoroughly with crumbs, add cheese, form into flat cakes, dust with bread-crumbs or cornmeal and fry a delicate brown.

NUT CHEESE LOAF.—Enough for ten people. Two cups chopped nuts, two cups cottage cheese, two cups dry, fine bread-crumbs, two teaspoons salt, one-half teaspoon paprika, one-half teaspoon celery salt, two tablespoons chopped onion, two tablespoons lemon juice, two eggs, one-quarter cup milk, three tablespoons bacon fat. Mix all dry ingredients together, then mix with the cheese and crumbs. Beat the eggs and add. Stir in the milk, then the lemon juice and bacon fat. Pour into greased tin and bake in moderate oven thirty minutes

NUT AND RICE LOAF.—Three cups chopped peanuts, three cups cooked rice, one teaspoon celery salt, one teaspoon onion juice, three teaspoons salt, two beaten eggs, one cup sweet milk. Mix thoroughly. Bake half hour in moderate oven.
Mrs. Edward Hingtgan, Bethel, Minn.

SALMON FRESH PEAS AND POTATO.—Scrape and wipe fish, tie in clean white muslin, place in a steamer over boiling water and closely cover. A three-pound piece of fish should steam about 35 minutes.

FRESH PEAS.—Pour boiling water over the peas until it reaches within one inch of the top, or less if the peas are very tender. Too much water ruins the flavor, and only what will practically boil away should be used. Add a teaspoon of sugar to every quart of peas. Have a hot fire so that the peas will cook rapidly. Cook until they begin to shrink or crinkle. If they are old, the peas will not have this appearance and are cooked until the centers are soft.

SALMON, FRESH PEAS AND POTATOES.

POTATO.—Pare and soak potatoes in cold salted water if they are old but if new they are washed and boiled without peeling. Partly cover potatoes with boiling water and cook rapidly. Drain at once and shake over fire until dry. Mash, add enough hot cream to moisten and beat until light. Season with salt and a little paprika.

If arranged according to illustration, lightly break the salmon into large pieces and arrange in center of a hot platter. Around this arrange the potato and edge with the peas. Use large platter, otherwise it is difficult to serve.

POTATO PUFFS.—Mix together one pint mashed potatoes, one teaspoon salt, one-third teaspoon black pepper, yolks of two eggs, one-quarter cup milk or cream, one tablespoon butter, one tablespoon onion juice and one cup of walnuts cut fine. Shape in small balls, dip each in beaten egg, roll in crumbs and fry brown in deep fat. One tablespoon of chopped parsly may be added before shaping, if wished.
Mrs. J. B. Grigg, San Diego, 351 So. 38th St., Cal.

FRIED BREAD.—Take one bowl of hard dry bread and cover with hot water and steam until very soft. Then using meat drippings or half drippings and half butter, salt and pepper to taste and fry. Take two large green sweet peppers, chop fine and add to bread before frying. When done, serve with tomato sauce.
Mrs. Ethel Tillotson.

EGGLESS RYE MUFFINS.—Two cups of rye flour, four teaspoons of baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, four teaspoons sugar, one cup of milk and one tablespoon melted fat. Mix and sift dry ingredients, add milk and fat Mix quickly, do not beat. Bake in greased muffin pans twenty minutes. This makes twelve muffins.—DODA, North Dakota.

PINEAPPLE PIE.—Mix in a saucepan one cup of cold water, one cup of sugar, one-half cup of cornstarch or flour and one-quarter cup of butter. Set on stove and cook, stirring constantly to prevent scorching. Remove from fire when thick and add one cup of grated pineapple and the yolks of four well-beaten eggs Pour in baked pie shells and cover with meringue made from whites of eggs and two rounding tablespoons of sugar. Set in oven a few minutes to brown meringue. This makes two pies.
MRS. NELL T. NASH, Springdale, Ky.

VINEGAR PIE.—Beat two eggs and one cup of sugar together, add two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, one cup of cream (or milk), and one-half cup of vinegar. Pour into plate lined with pie-crust and bake.—MRS. L. P. VANCE, Bristol, Tenn.

SPANISH RICE.—Put three tablespoons melted bacon grease in an iron frying pan and heat. Wash one heaping cup of rice and drain well, put into the frying pan with one level tablespoon of salt and fry to a golden brown, stir often to keep from burning. When brown add two large onions sliced thin and fry five minutes. Then add one large can of tomatoes and cook until the rice is thoroughly done and rather dry. If more moisture is needed add a little water. The Spanish season this with cayenne pepper but I use black pepper to suit taste.
MRS. JUANITA DIXON, Leonard, Mich.

MOLLASSES CAKE.—One cup sugar and two tablespoons shortening creamed together Add two unbeaten eggs, one cup molasses. Put three cups flour into sifter, also one teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon cloves, little salt, one teaspoon cream of tartar, two teaspoons soda. Remember more soda than cream of tartar. Mix all together well and at the very last add one cup of sweet milk. This makes two medium-sized loaves. Bake slowly about thirty minutes.
MRS. LEON H. FRINK, Plainfield, Conn.

FANCY COOKIES.—Cream one-third cup of butter and gradually add one cup of sugar. Beat in two tablespoons of heavy cream, two beaten eggs and one-half teaspoon of lemon extract. Stir in two cups of flour sifted with two teaspoons of baking powder and enough more flour to roll. If the dough is mixed and allowed to stand where it is cool several hours before handling, less flour can be used. Decorate the tops with plump raisins, nuts and citron, before baking.

FANCY COOKIES.

WALNUT AND COCOANUT CAKE.—One cup butter or butter substitute, three-quarters cup sugar, yolks of three eggs, two tablespoons of condensed milk, one-half cup water, one and three-quarters cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, whites of two eggs, one teaspoon vanilla and three-quarters cup of walnut meats. Cream butter and sugar, add yolks, well beaten, milk and water, and flour sifted with baking powder. Fold in stiffly beaten whites of eggs, add vanilla and walnut meats. Bake in a moderate oven for twenty minutes. Frost with cocoanut frosting.
MRS. CLEADUS HELTON, St. Matthews, Ky.

COOKIES.—Two cups of sugar, one cup each of lard and sweet milk, two eggs, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon soda and vanilla to flavor. Mix as for cake, add enough flour to roll. Bake light brown. Nuts or raisins are sometimes added.
MRS. LOUISE M. SPENCER, Valley Falls, Kans.

HOMEMADE PREPARED MUSTARD.—One egg, well beaten, one-half cup sugar, one cup vinegar, and six tablespoons ground mustard. Cook well, ten to fifteen minutes, stirring frequently. Put in jar.
MRS. LOUIS R. IAGAR, Elliott City, Md.

JELL-O
Ice Cream Powder

What It Is

Jell-O Ice Cream Powder is a powder that makes ice cream by merely stirring it into milk and freezing it. There is nothing else to be added to make the most delicious ice cream, for the sugar and the flavoring are in the powder. It is made in Strawberry, Vanilla, Lemon and Chocolate flavors. It can also be had unflavored if desired.

How to Use It

Stir the contents of one package of Jell-O Ice Cream Powder (any flavor) into a quart of milk, or milk and cream, and freeze in the usual way. (See directions on back of package.) Do not cook or heat the milk. Do not add eggs, sugar, flavoring or anything else, as everything is contained in the package of Jell-O Ice Cream Powder. This will make nearly two quarts of delicious ice cream, and the cost will be only a few cents a quart.

Condensed or evaporated milk, thinned with water, can be used instead of fresh milk, if necessary, and the ice cream made from it will be entirely satisfactory. Use evaporated milk weakened with cold water to the richness of cow's milk; or, if you prefer it very sweet, use condensed milk weakened with cold water to the richness of cow's milk.

PLAIN ICE CREAM

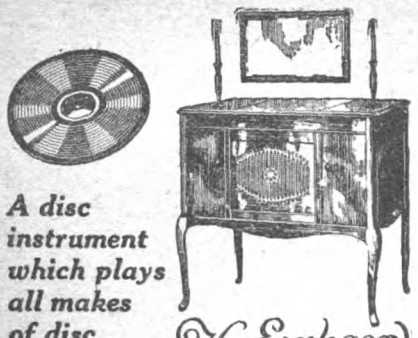
Dissolve the contents of a package of Jell-O Ice Cream Powder (any flavor) in a quart of milk, or three-fourths milk and one-fourth cream mixed. Put Jell-O Ice Cream Powder in a dish and pour on it one cup of the fluid, and stir it to a thick smooth paste to avoid lumps; add rest of the fluid and stir till thoroughly dissolved. Freeze in the usual way.

DELICIOUS CREAM PUDDING

Mix a package of Jell-O Ice Cream Powder (any flavor) with five level tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, and a pinch of salt. Dissolve in a little cold milk, taken from a quart, adding the milk, a little at a time, until you have a smooth paste. Put the rest of the quart of milk in a double boiler, heat to scalding point, stir the powder mixture into it, and cook about fifteen minutes.

PEACH ICE CREAM

Dissolve one package of Vanilla Jell-O Ice Cream Powder and two cups of sugar in one quart of milk and cream mixed, and freeze very thick but not hard. Pare and mash a quart of peaches. Stir them quickly into the frozen cream. Turn the crank rapidly five minutes, then remove the dasher and set away two hours to ripen.



ORANGE SHERBET

Three-quarters of a cup of orange juice and juice of one lemon, two cups of sugar, five cups of water. Grate the rind of two oranges and rub into the sugar. Add the water and boil three minutes. Strain through a cheese cloth. Dissolve in the sugar and water one package of Lemon or Unflavored Jell-O Ice Cream Powder. Add the juice of orange and lemon, and when perfectly cold, freeze. Makes three quarts.

Jell-O Ice Cream Powder is made in four flavors—Vanilla, Strawberry, Lemon and Chocolate. It is also made Unflavored, so the user may add any flavor desired. Sold by grocers and general storekeepers.

THE GENESEE PURE FOOD COMPANY, Le Roy, New York

A disc instrument which plays all makes of disc records

The Embassy Console Phonograph

$1.00 After Trial!

Most Beautiful Phonograph Outfit

An offer which removes all risk and doubt. Enables you to hear its wonderful tone and to inspect its beautiful design. Sent on free trial. You are the sole judge. If you like it, keep it, and send us only $1.00 as first payment, after the free trial. Easy monthly payments after that.

Beautiful Mirror
Elegant Candlesticks FREE
20 Selections

Look at the handsome mirror and candlesticks pictured above. We send them absolutely free. In addition, we include 10 double-faced records—20 selections. Also free.

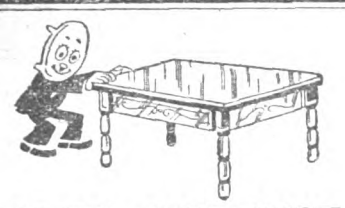
Write for Free Book Send letter or post-card today asking for free book which gives you complete information about this unusual offer. This book is mailed free and prepaid. Write for it today.

F. K. Babson, Dept. 8-370. 19th St., and Marshall Blvd. Chicago, Ill.

ONLY 25c

for Complete Stove

Including handy extinguisher and Can of Sterno Canned Heat



Great for camping, motoring, fishing, hiking, picnics, etc. Equally useful at home. Cook with ft, heat water, warm baby's milk. Thousands of uses. This handy sheet steel folding stove weighs only 8 ounces. Folds flat. Gives heat instantly when needed.

SEND THIS AD and 25c to the Sterno Corporation, 9 East 37th Street, New York City, Dept 29, and we will send you this sample stove prepaid.

STERNO
Canned Heat

The Daily Fuel of a Thousand Uses

Be prepared for the summer vacations. Send for one of these stoves while the offer lasts.

DOMES of SILENCE

"Better than Casters"

Furniture that can be moved easily, saves wear and tear upon furniture and yourself. Domes of Silence on your furniture make this possible. Save floor and floor coverings. Easily attached.

On sale at hardware and department stores

10 cents per set P-419

ROUGH ON RATS

The secret of killing rats

Rats won't eat food they know has killed other rats. That's why ordinary rat poisons fail. Rats remember them from night to night. But Rough on Rats is mixed with other foods, a different food each night. This fools rats. Rough on Rats economically exterminates in three nights. Don't die in house. At drug and general stores. Send for free booklet, "Ending Rats and Mice."

E. S. WELLS, Chemist
Jersey City, N.J.

Only $2 DOWN ONE YEAR TO PAY

$44 Buys the New Butterfly Jr. No. 2½ Light running, easy cleaning, close skimming, durable.

NEW BUTTERFLY Separators are guaranteed a lifetime against defects in material and workmanship. Made also in four larger sizes up to No. 5½ shown here; sold on and on a plan whereby they earn their own cost and more by what they save. Postal brings Free Catalog Folder. Buy from the manufacturer and save money.

30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL

ALBAUGH-DOVER CO., 2162 Marshall Bl. Chicago

JOB FOR YOU AT HOME

Earn $20 to $60 a week. Household Necessities, Delicious Summer Drinks, Up-to-date Jewelry, Perfumes, Toilet Goods, Face Creams, Soaps, Family Remedies, Laundry Supplies, Aluminum Ware, Bath Towels, Flavoring Extracts. Big Profits Write today for catalogues.

WESTERN PRODUCTS CO., 647 N. Oakley, Chicago.

It Happened On The Fourth

Joseph F. Novak

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

"DADDY, Frankie says he's going to shoot me!"

"He did, did he? Well, Sunshine, you tell him that if he's going to shoot you, I'm going to shoot him. But how is he going to do it?"

"With the gun his daddy gave him to celebrate the Fourth of July."

"O, he's going to celebrate by shooting people, is that it?"

"Yes, and Daddy, can't I celebrate too, and won't you buy me some fireworks?"

"What will you do with fireworks?"

"Shoot 'em off, and Daddy, can't I have some son-of-a-guns?"

"Babe! BABE!! BABE!!!"

"Well, that's what all the kids call 'em. On'y now they're beginning to call 'em devil-on-the-walk."

"Well, you had better call them that. The other is a dreadfully bad word."

"But you say it sometimes, Daddy!"

"Do I, you little mentor? All right. I promise you I won't say it again. And now, let us go for the son—I beg your pardon—the devil-on-the-walk."

Arlene Fenton, languidly swinging in the porch swing, gazed with brimming eyes through the masses of greenery that clustered about the porch and beyond to the figure of the man and child to whose conversation she had listened.

They were such a merry family, those new neighbors and she never tired of watching them for Sunshine, as they called the child was a cunning thing to listen to, Mrs. Vincent seemed a mere girl, though Arlene knew that she was close to thirty, while Mr. Vincent was as care-free as a schoolboy when he was at home and in company with Sunshine. He was an ideal companion to his child and now as he marched through the open country-side, he looked a big boy in his white trousers, white oxfords and silk negligee shirt. Sunshine hopped and he pranced as they made for the improvised store set up under the red and white striped awning in a prairie where the opulent display of fireworks filled the hearts of the little boys who hung about with indescribable longing.

How fortunate some girls were! How fortunate Mrs. Vincent in having such a husband! And others! How deceived! And yet, it was well that she knew of Staunton's perfidy before it was too late!

Arlene's thoughts grew suspiciously melodramatic. She was just a little girl after all, twenty-one is not an age of wisdom—then white is white and black is black. So, naturally, when Arlene saw Staunton Corey in a department store, the day before, shopping with a girl several years (yes, a dozen years!) younger than himself, Arlene felt that the light had gone out of her life forever.

There could be no mistake. First of all, she had seen Staunton with her own eyes. Secondly, she knew his sisters and feminine cousins, and lastly, if the girl were a relative why did he take her shopping to such a cheap, trashy store as was Deball's? They carried the cheapest sort of merchandise, no one who was anybody would trade in such a place unless driven to an extremity for some article of which the high grade stores' stock was depleted. It was just such a trick of fate that had brought Arlene to Deball's and there she chanced upon her faithless lover.

Arlene's cheeks burned, as she thought of how she had spied upon them, and what she had seen. Staunton had gone to the dress department, the shoe department, even—even—O, it was unthinkable! And he paid for everything, taking the little receipt stubs that accompany all purchases made in large department stores.

Perhaps people, after all, were right. She had heard it said that she was a fool to become engaged to a man so much older than herself (Staunton was thirty-three), but she had attributed it to the envy of those who had made the remarks and felt they did it just to be nasty.

Well, when Staunton came, she would return his ring and tell him to go, but of course, she would not tell him why—it would be too humiliating. To tell her accepted lover that she had seen him buying clothes and—and—well other wearing apparel for an attractive young girl, would be revolting. Why should he do it? Arlene could think of the matter only in its baldest sense! If she had been a woman of experience, she might have been able to think in veiled terms, but she could not. Wasn't he buying the stuff as a balm for an injured heart? He had let the girl select the stuff and her selections were gaudy rather than expensive. And no doubt they shopped at Deball's rather than at Marshall's where the ultra-ultra did their shopping and where they might have been observed.

Again her eyes wearily sought the sunlit stretches of countryside and presently she noted Mr. Vincent and little Sunshine returning. The little girl was loaded down with harmless fireworks, "sparklers," colored lights, torpedoes and a sack which probably contained the discussed "devil-on-the-walk," together with two large flags. Why that indulgent papa purchased more flags when Sunshine had a great American banner swinging across the lawn and numerous other smaller ones everywhere about, is one of those mysteries even that adoring daddies cannot explain.

They came in at the rear gate and then proceeded to make the morning hideous with the "devil-on-the-walk" (a harmless paste made of sulphur and other materials and formed into small cakes which one scratched upon the walk as if striking a match).

Arlene watched their happy, thoughtless pastime, when suddenly her eyes met those of Sunshine, who immediately called out:

"Miss Arlene, don't you want to come and help shoot off my fireworks?"

Arlene smiled, but did not answer immediately. She had paid the Vincents formal calls, but that was all. Now they were having such a good time Arlene's brain ached, so she smiled in acquiesence and leaving the swing, she crossed the lawn and drew through the hedge which separated the pretty suburban bungalow from her father's mansion.

"You can have some of my devil-on-the-walk, Miss Arlene," Sunshine said, handing Arlene several, "look, you do it this way," and she proceeded to demonstrate.

Mr. Vincent gave an encouraging smile, and the three of them continued with the pastime.

During the while, Mrs Vincent came out of the house, looking very girlish and sweet in her neat house dress. The Vincents kept a cook and a maid, but Mrs. Vincent was a true homemaker, and consequently her household was not managed by servants.

She smiled at Arlene.

"I thought you had gone with your family for a day's outing," she began.

"No," Arlene replied. "I had other plans for the day——"

She stopped, hesitating to take anyone into her confidence. How could she tell anyone that Staunton had promised to come early that morning and had not, as yet, even 'phoned?

"Miss Arlene, can't you go with us to the town celebration and see the fireworks tonight?" Sunshine queried. "I wish you would."

"Hush, dear," said Mrs. Vincent, "possibly Miss Arlene had other plans."

Perhaps it would be best if she did not see Staunton at all when he came, so she said:

"I'll go with you if you want me, Sunshine."

"O, goody! And can't you have lunch with us, Miss Arlene? Your daddy and mamma aren't home, are they?"

"Would you join us, Arlene?" asked Mrs. Vincent in a voice and with a look that made Arlene surrender at once. She had felt, shortly after her formal call, that she would like to be "chummy" with the Vincents, and this seemed to be the opportunity.

"I shall be delighted," Arlene said, and thereafter she demeaned herself as one of the family.

They had a lovely luncheon, and then they sat on the porch listening to the booming of giant crackers and the noise and racket incidental to the celebration of the Fourth until it was time to go to the town celebration.

A committee of the suburb had made a house-to-house canvass, taxing each family a dollar and with this sum had arranged for a general celebration for the village. Parents know their children's fondness for fireworks and readily fell in with the plan whereby the youngsters might enjoy the beauties of fireworks without being subject to the accompanying danger.

At length it was time to go, and they joined the stream of people coming in all directions toward the open space which was devoted to an improvised race-track.

They secured "ring-side" places beside the track, and sat down. Though this was the first year that Mr. Vincent lived in the suburb, still his genial good-nature had already made him well known to the current politicians, and they pressed him to assist with the arrangements, and obligingly he did so, leaving the girls alone.

"Your husband surely is popular, Mrs. Vincent," Arlene remarked. "And so devoted to you and little Sunshine. But how could he be otherwise when you are so lovely and Sunshine such a darling!"

"There is a little secret to everything, dear, and the secret of our happiness is perfect trust in each other."

Arlene looked up quickly. Was Mrs. Vincent reading her thoughts? But there was nothing in Mrs. Vincent's look to indicate that she had merely made anything but a statement nor that she intended a subtler meaning to her words.

"When one is married," Mrs. Vincent continued, "and one's husband is about his business, there are often circumstances which necessitate his being in various neighborhoods where ordinarily he would not go. I never judge by circumstantial evidence." Mrs. Vincent smiled. "I'm afraid you'll think I'm preaching, my dear, but as you are, I understand, engaged, and as you will, in all probability, marry the man of your choice, this little preachment may not come amiss. You may not find him the hero you thought he was, but you'll find him something better than a hero, just a man. And being just a man means a great deal, for heroes receive the homage of the multitude for their heroic acts, yet the ordinary man who must fight in silence, alone and unhonored except for the worship that his wife accords him. And most men find that if they can win that worship, they have gained the world. Look, they are lining up the little children for the races, and I see Sunshine among them. I want her to be a democratic youngster."

So they were: then followed the other children according to age and size up and on through the sexes. Everyone was happy and jolly, it seemed like a great family and Arlene wondered why they, who had come to the suburb when it was young and most exclusive had not taken part in more of these celebrations. She was beginning to realize that there is more happiness in democracy than in exclusiveness. She knew the Vincents were of good families, yet they had broken the bands of conventionality and stood unshackled, free to pick their friends for worth rather than wealth. It was a kind of independence that they had declared. It was a brave thing to do in the exclusive portion of that community even as it had been a great thing for the Fathers of American Independence to declare their independence of England.

After the races, there were contests of all sorts; sawing wood for the ladies, climbing a greased pole for boys; chasing a greased pig and all the other usual stale contests which, somehow, seem never to lose their attractiveness.

Finally the contests were over, and Mr. Vincent came up. Except for a certain dustiness of his white shoes, he was as neat as was his wont.

"Shall we walk home for a snack, Doris, or shall we have a cup of coffee and sinkers at the tent?" He winked at Arlene with the comradeship of a brother, or as if he knew she might be shocked at the suggestion. " What say, Miss Arlene?"

"I should love it!" Arlene exclaimed.

So they went to the tent where coffee, doughnuts, sandwiches and ice-cream were being served, and found a place at one of the long tables. Mr. Vincent beguiled the time with merry quips at the expense of the waitresses, most of them the wives and daughters of the prosperous village.

After they were served, they rose and through the dimming twilight strolled among the trees. The sun was setting in the west in gleaming red-gold.

Little Sunshine clung to her daddy's hand and demonstrated why she didn't win the race in a most persuasive way.

Mrs. Vincent was quiet, and Arlene was busy with her thoughts, for the elevating influence of Mrs. Vincent's words was making its impression.

Perfect trust! she had said. But had she ever been face to face with such a condition as she (Arlene) faced? She said never to judge a matter on circumstantial evidence. Staunton's deflection certainly was not circumstantial evidence. It was the real thing. Could such a performance be explained?

No, her mind said, and yet her heart, that [illegible] which, when we are in love, is superior to the [illegible] said yes. Her reason told her she was a fool [illegible] think it could be explained but she listened to [illegible] heart, and forgave.

All the people who had attended the [illegible] were gradually seating themselves at a point [illegible] vantage to the east of the place where a great [illegible] men were busily setting up great set-pieces [illegible] preparing for the fireworks display.

The Vincents and Arlene found a place and [illegible] themselves. Ere long the spectacle began; [illegible] soon the great rockets were piercing the sky, [illegible] burst scattering stars that rivaled the [illegible] spheres in splendor.

While this was going on, a manly figure crept [illegible] and gently touched Arlene on the shoulder. [illegible] then, a great "flower-pot" erupted, flaring [illegible] Arlene's face as with daylight and she looked [illegible] into Staunton's face. But so happily did she [illegible] that the lines which creased his face disappeared [illegible] as if by magic.

"Sit with Mr. Vincent until the display is [illegible] Staunton," Arlene said, and he did so, sitting [illegible] beside Mr. Vincent who was seated in the [illegible] the ladies.

"You're fortunate to have found us, Mr. Corey," Arlene heard Mr. Vincent say. "There is certainly a mob here," and he waved his hand just as another exploding rocket lit up tiers and tiers of faces, [illegible] eral thousand in all.

"Yes, I was, though I must attribute my [illegible] cess to a face-to-face canvass as it were. I've been wandering up and down for some time. I [illegible] however, that I would find you as the servants [illegible] Arlene had gone with you."

"Rather tough to be obliged to transact [illegible] on a holiday like this," Mr. Vincent went on.

"Yes," Staunton Corey replied, though [illegible] one have read his mind, he would have seen [illegible] Corey wondered if this was how Arlene had [illegible] his absence.

"Yes, it seems hard to oblige one young lady [illegible] the expense of another. Sometimes attorneys are obliged to do the strangest of things. Take, for instance, yesterday. Can you imagine me [illegible] shopping?"

"Shopping!" exclaimed Mr. Vincent.

"Yes—and for a woman, too, or rather, for almost a woman. Such a thoughtless kid to see, I manage the estate of a young girl for [illegible] guardian. The child is an orphan and her [illegible] is not large and consequently every cent that is spent must be rigidly accounted for. Well, she's a working girl and was suddenly told that she must have a vacation commencing today. She was unprepared to go, so she came to my office yesterday morning and asked if I could get her the money for her outfit. Knowing the caliber of her guardian I told her that I could not very well advance the money, but suggested that she go to Marshall's and have the whole account charged and they would make up a bill that I could present to her guardian later, to the court after we had the allowance [illegible]

"She demurred to this stating that Marshall's were too expensive and suggested Deball's. She called them up, but they told me that they sold strictly on a cash basis, as they undersold everybody else. The poor child was so depressed at disappointed that finally, in desperation, I told her I would go shopping with her myself, pay the bills, secure all the check stubbs on her purchases and take a chance on what her guardian would say. So yesterday, you might have found me marching through Deball's outfitting my ward. I never knew what a lot of things one girl needed to outfit herself properly. I felt like a daddy as I followed her from department to department, but I comforted myself in the pleasure that she was saving at least 100% on her purchases."

Staunton paused to light a cigar. Then he continued:

"That wasn't the worst of my trouble. The next was to get her railroad ticket and this was done this morning. I agreed to do that for her as she was going to visit some distant relatives. The girl of it again! She got her railroad [illegible] mixed and when we arrived, we were at the wrong one. Then we scurried around to find the right one and missed the train. There I was, with the child on my hands. I couldn't let her go to the depot alone, so I decided to stay with her, even though I would be late for my appointment with Arlene. I 'phoned, but found the 'phone out of order. Your 'phone is also out of order, by the [illegible] cent. You must have atrocious service."

"We have. Naturally though, if the [illegible] 'phone was out of order mine would also [illegible] are on the same line."

"Well, I was stuck, so I just had to wait until I got the girl off safely to her relatives. I hated to disappoint Miss Fenton, yet," and he was sank so low that Arlene hardly heard, "in a not a generous-hearted girl that I knew she would forgive me since I was only doing what she always delights in doing, making another happy."

Arlene's cheeks burned. Here was perfect trust in her good sense. It shamed her, but there was the redeeming thought that she had determined to forgive even before she had heard his explanation. No thought not to believe entered her mind. The manner in which he told his story had all the earmarks of truth, as indeed it was. She was glad that she had by no look betrayed that for some hours back, her trust in him had been shaken.

With a last glorious display of rockets, bursting bombs and a glowing set-piece reading "GOOD NIGHT", the exhibition closed, and there was a general rising, and a start for home. The crowd pressed on all sides, the roar of starting automobiles and their warning horns rose in deafening clamor.

"Take good care of Miss Arlene, Mr Staunton," said Mrs. Vincent, "and may we ask you to stay a bit with us? We'll treat you to some ice-cream and cake," she laughed mischievously, "that is, provided you'll be very good children, and you know the Fourth of July is imperfect without ice-cream."

"And I'll pass it, Miss Arlene," said Sunshine, suddenly awakened to life from her father's shoulder.

"Then we certainly shall, Sunshine," said Arlene happily, as she placed her hand trustingly on Staunton's arm and let his big figure pilot her through the crowd. They followed up Mr. and Mrs. Vincent.

As they went along, Staunton started immediately to explain.

"O, Staunton!" Arlene exclaimed, "that isn't necessary. I heard what you told to Mr. Vincent, and I understand and I am glad that you did what you did for that poor girl," and for a moment her eyes grew misty with pity as she remembered the poor little finery the girl had selected.

"I was disappointed at not hearing from you, but my disappointment was somewhat offset with my lovely afternoon with Mrs. Vincent. She is a wonderful wife and spoke so highly of you. Vincent. She adores him as much now as when they were married—in fact I think even more—I am so glad that I have become intimate with her.

Slowly they walked along and it was not long before they reached home. They then sat on the cool, dark porch, and listened to the sounds of Mr. and Mrs. Vincent within the house as they prepared the ice-cream for serving.

Presently little Sunshine emerged—the animal quite scared away for the present. She proudly served them with quaint courtesy.

"Don't you just love the glorious Fourth, Miss Arlene?" she asked.

"I always have, dear heart, but I shall remember this one more than any other," Arlene said, putting down her plate to hug the youngster. In so doing she spoke far more than any of her auditors guessed.

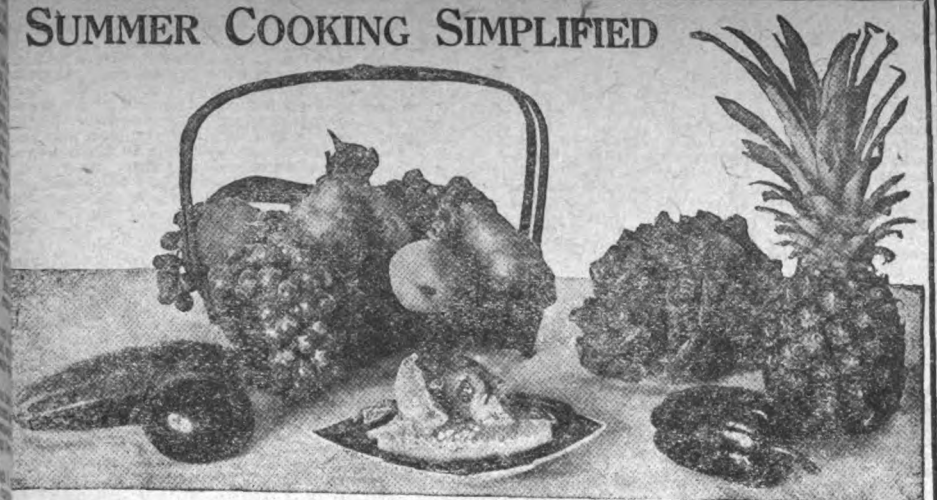
Art Corner Your Pictures—Albums where you can keep them safe and enjoy them always.

Engel

5 Styles Art Corners 5 Colors



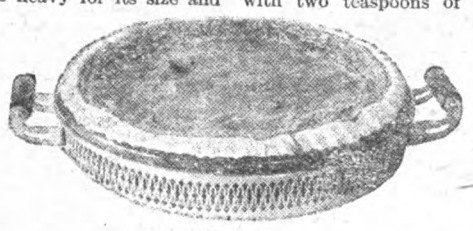
are on sale at Photo Supply and Album counters everywhere. They are the only Quick, Neat, Artistic, No Paste, No Fuss way to mount Kodak Prints. A dime brings you and explains to try. Write

ENGEL MFG. CO.
4711 N. Clark St., Chicago

10¢ Buys 100

Dept. 240.

SUMMER COOKING SIMPLIFIED

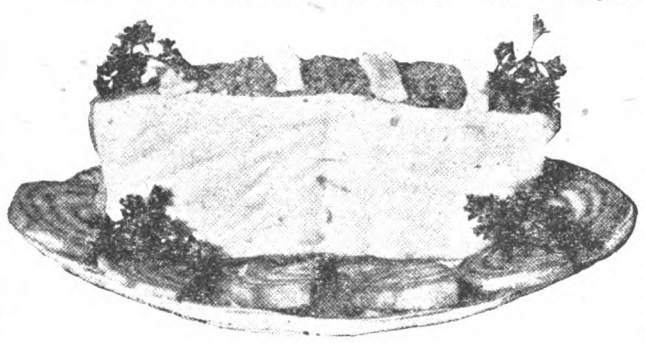


FRUITS AND VEGETABLES—NATURE'S REMEDIES.

By Violet Marsh

THE summer fruits and vegetables offer the housewife a substitute for many a dish that requires long hours of cooking. There is such a long list to choose from, that through variations and combinations the family will not miss the heavier desserts which seem ecessary in the cold months of the year. And then e must not overlook the fact that a veritable ld mine of health lies in cleaning the system of npurities while the foods are at hand which give e body free choice in becoming its own regulator. Beside the dishes that nature gives to us fully pre- ared there are certain foods the housekeeper can ave on hand that will materially assist her in the reparation of meals on hot summer days. Among ese we should put a well-baked ham at the head the list, for it is appetizing and wholesome, every- e likes it, and the last scrap is usable.

In order to prepare this dish to the "King's aste" one must begin by selecting a ham that short and compact, having a small shank, and eighing not over fifteen pounds; twelve is about e best. Compact means heavy for its size and om a young, well-fed imal that has made a pid growth. The skin ill be thin and un- rinkled and the bones nall. Such a ham will ave a liberal layer of t which must never be immed off, for it bastes e ham as it cooks and velops a flavor never tained in a lean ham.



CUSTARD PIE

BAKED HAM.—The en- e process must be slow apid boiling or excessive en heat will spoil the st ham ever grown. Scrub the ham in a pan of ld water to which one teaspoon of cooking soda each quart of water has been added. Now rub in clear water. Trim off the hard skin near e end of bone. Soak several hours in cold water. ace in a large kettle, barely covered with cold ater, and slowly bring to the boiling point. Set ick on the stove where it will slowly simmer two ours after it begins to simmer. Remove from ater and place in a cooker, cover and bake with- t the addition of water in a slow oven for three ours. This time applies to a ham weighing four- en pounds. Remove outside skin, rub liberally ith brown sugar, then with finely rolled cracker umbs, stick with cloves one inch apart, and very owly bake uncovered for one hour.

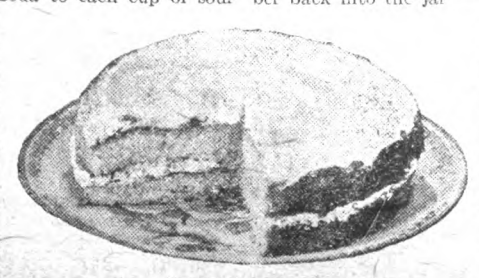
BOILED HAM.—Prepare the same, simmer about ur hours, partly cool in the water, treat and bake e hour as described above for baked ham.

HAM SANDWICHES.—Cut boiled or baked ham ite thin, quickly and lightly fry brown in ham t, and while hot lay it between buttered slices bread. A lettuce leaf is a desirable addition.

HAM SCRAPS.—Chopped, they make a delicious dition to scrambled eggs, or mixed with left-over ashed potato, then made into cakes and fried brown a little ham t, another ap- tizing break- st dish is pre- ared. Moist- ted with a rich hite sauce and ought to the oking point, ou have a de- ious combina- on to serve on ast or to eat ith baked po- toes.

BAKED HALIBUT.

SUMMER CAKE.—Cream one- urth cup of utter, gradu- lly cream in ne-half cup of ugar and then dd one well- eaten egg. easure one and one-half cup of sifted flour and ift again with two and one-half teaspoons of aking powder. Add this alternately with one- alf cup of milk to the butter mixture. Beat ard. Bake in layers in a moderate oven.



FROSTING.—Beat the whites of two eggs, sweeten nd beat in mashed berries. Spread between ayers and over the top.

Sour Milk and Cream

New uses for sour milk and cream are always cceptable when the season of humidity frequently turns" the fresh supply in such an amazingly hort time.

Many cooks will tell you they prefer sour to weet milk for many purposes, and that the cause f most failures are due to the use of too much soda. Only enough should be used to neutralize the acidity f the milk. The use of soda as a leavening is un- eliable. Freshly soured milk calls for less soda han milk which has been in the clabber stage two r more days. This applies also to buttermilk.

In substituting sour for sweet milk, the same ecipes may be followed by allowing one-quarter o one-half teaspoon of soda to each cup of sour milk or buttermilk (the exact amount depending n the age of milk), and one-half teaspoon of bak- ng powder to each cup f flour. Always sift the baking powder and soda with the flour several times for thorough mix- ing and the prevention of brown spots in the food. Never make the mistake of adding the soda to the milk or dissolving it in water, for as soon as the soda is wet, the gas begins to act, and escape, thus causing the food to be of a soggy consistency.

SUMMER CAKE.

Sour cream makes biscuits, corn bread, muffins, gingerbread and cake very tender and light and add a certain flavor not otherwise obtained. On the farm where cream is plenty, one should learn to use it in place of butter. Some housewives say it is cheaper than butter, even where the market price is paid. In salad dressings and sauces, sour cream is unexcelled for flavor.

SOUR MILK BISCUIT.—Measure two and one-half cups of sifted flour, add three-eighths teaspoon of soda, one-half teaspoon of salt and one teaspoon of baking powder and sift twice again. Work three level tablespoons of butter into the flour, or add four tablespoons of thick sour cream to a scant three-fourths cup of sour milk. If the butter is used, use a full three-fourths cup of milk. Combine the milk with the flour, turn onto a lightly floured board and shape the dough without kneading, and lightly roll one-half inch thick. Cut into rounds and bake twelve minutes in a hot oven. This dough can be dropped into gem tins without handling. If the gem pan is iron, it should be first heated.

SPIDER CORNCAKE.—One cup of corn meal, one-fourth cup of flour, one-half teaspoon of soda, one tablespoon of sugar, one level teaspoon of baking powder and one teaspoon of salt, twice sifted together. Heat the spider, tip to one side and put in two tablespoons of butter. Beat two eggs, add them to the meal with two cups of well-soured milk and beat well. Add the melted butter, grease the spider with what remains and pour in the mixture. Bake in a fairly hot oven.

SOUR MILK GRIDDLE CAKES.—Measure two and one-half cups of sifted flour and sift twice again with two teaspoons of baking powder, one-half teaspoon of salt and two-thirds teaspoon of soda. Beat one egg very light, and add with two cups of sour milk to the prepared flour. Beat hard and cook on a hot griddle lightly greased. Cook one side thoroughly before turning.

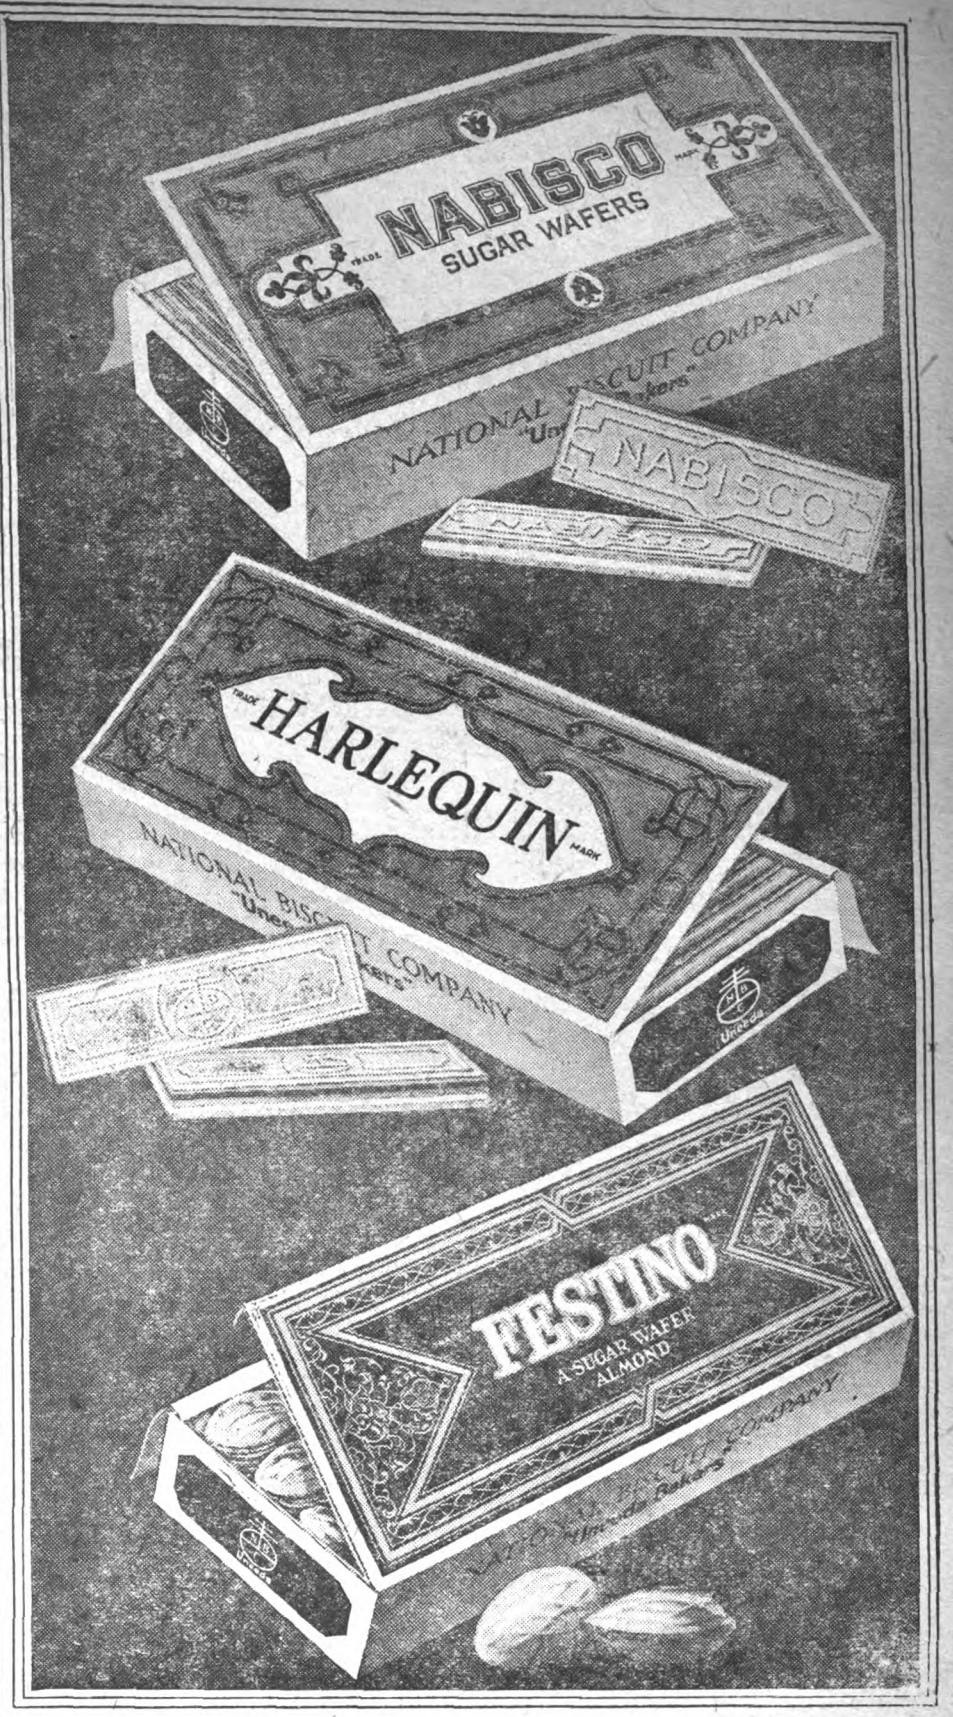
CREAM CAKE.—Put into the mixing bowl one cup of fine brown sugar, two-thirds cup of thin, well-soured cream and two unbeaten eggs. Beat with a rotary egg beater until the mixture is very creamy and light. Sift one and two-thirds cup of sifted flour with two scant teaspoons of baking powder, one-third teaspoon soda, one-half teaspoon of salt, one-fourth teaspoon each of mace and ginger, and one-half teaspoon of cinnamon. Sift several times and add to the above mixture, beating well. Bake in a shallow cake tin thirty-five minutes in a moderate oven.

SOUR CREAM FROSTING.—Stir one-half cup of sour cream and one cup of sugar over a very slow heat until dissolved, then slowly bring to the boiling point and cook to the soft-ball stage without stirring. After the boiling starts, take a wet cloth and rapidly push down the sugar adhering to the sides. During the last few minutes of cooking half a cup of broken walnut meats may be added. Flavor with one teaspoon of vanilla and beat until it will spread. Brown sugar may be used.

SOUR CREAM SALAD DRESSING.—Mix together two teaspoons of flour, two teaspoons of sugar, one scant teaspoon of mustard, one teaspoon of salt and a dash of cayenne. Slowly add one-third cup of vinegar and the beaten yolk of one egg. Put a rounding teaspoon of butter into a small agate dish and set it into a stewpan of boiling water. Add the above mixture and continually stir until it thickens. When cold, add two-thirds cup of heavy sour cream and beat the mixture with an egg beater until stiff.

Sour cream gives an excellent flavor to bean or pea soup, added just before serving. Boiled cabbage or cauliflower or boiled beets are made richer and a fine flavor added by pouring over hot sour cream to which a little salt and paprika has been added.

Canning of Fruit and Vegetables by the Cold Pack Method



The selection of food for canning purposes is of first importance. It must be of good quality and not over-ripe, for any spots that have reached the point of decay may survive the cooking and cause fermentation to occur in a few days after canning.

The next step of equal importance, is to see that the jars are washed clean and then thoroughly sterilized in boiling water. Jars that are emptied and put away with only a "slick and a promise" of future washing when used again cause many canning failures, for any moisture or stickiness will grow mould spores which will require extra sterilization. The only safe method for handling jars is to wash as soon as emptied, then fill with boiling water, let them stand a few minutes, drain and wipe dry with a clean cloth; or, they may be drained laid on their side and dried in the hot closet. Put top on and partially seal. Never put a used rubber back into the jar Prepare fruit and vegetables as if they were to be cooked for the table; then, when the can is opened the contents are ready for use. All material for canning must be free from dirt. Vegetables especially should be well washed and rinsed as they are exposed to more foreign substances than are the berries and fruits.

The object of blanching is to remove any foreign matter that has escaped the washing, or any strong flavors that are undesirable when the vegetable is not cooked in water. Berries and soft fruits are not blanched. To blanch with the best results, have a kettle of boiling water with a good fire under it. Tie into a square of cheese-cloth the right amount to fill one jar. Plunge into the boiling water and begin to count from the time the water begins to boil again. If more of the product is put in, it so lowers the temperature that the product wilts and

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 9.)

Know them by their goodness

EACH person's taste may vary. Yet we all have one thing in common. We all like good things best.

This is one of the reasons why a constant supply of "Uneeda Bakers" products should be kept ready to serve.

Try NABISCO with its zephyr-like wafers enclosing delicious creamy fillings, and HARLEQUIN with its triple layers of golden wafers enclosing a creamy filling of rare delicacy. Then, too, there is FESTINO, the sugar water which looks and tastes like an almond.

At your grocer's you will find a wide variety of sugar wafers all made by the bakers of Uneeda Biscuit, the most famous soda cracker ever known.

NBC Uneeda

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

"Uneeda Bakers"

SALE GENUINE IMPORTED GERMAN

No. 245. Highest type genuine six-power "Foth" prism binoculars, magnifies six times. An object six miles distant appears only one mile away A stage 200 feet away appears about 30 feet near you. Splendid illumination, large field view, perfect mechanical construction. Especially suitable for races, hunting, yachting and traveling. Retailseverywhere at $40. Our special price includes genuine leather plush lined case with fine leather strap, for only $24.50

$1.00 must be sent with order, balance C. O. D. (No orders filled without deposit.)

Genuine Imported German Automatic Pistol "SAUER"

No. 508—Cal. 32 Highest type and finest pistol in appearance as well as in construction ever brought over. Takes 32 cal. U. S. Colt automatic cartridges. Shoots 8 shots to a loading. Greatest accuracy. Made of finest blue steel with hard rubber handle. Real $30 value. Our Special price only $12.50

No. 318. Genuine Automatic Sauer. Cal. 25 Shoots 7 shots, takes U. S. Colt 25 Cal. Automatic cartridges. Special price only $12.25

No. 511. Genuine Imported German Automatic "Mauser". Shoots 10 shots, 32 Cal. U. S. Colt Cartridges. Regular value $30.00. Our special price..... $13.85

No. 510. Genuine Imported German Automatic "Mauser", Shoots 9 shots, 25 Cal. U. S. Colt Cartridges. Regular value, $28.00. Our special price..... $13.50

No. 316. Genuine Imported German Automatic Ortgies. Shoots 9 shots, 32 Cal. U. S. Colt cartridges. $25.00 value—our special price only..... $11.50

No. 317. Genuine Automatic Imported German Ortgies. Shoots 8 shots, 25 Cal. U. S. Colt cartridges. Special price..... $11.00

FREE—Genuine Leather Holster with every gun—Deposit of 35c with order required on guns. Balance C.O.D. Satisfaction guaranteed or your money back. You will enjoy these bargains—bargains like these don't come often. Order Today.

UNION SALES CO., Importers Dept. 894, 15 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

HANDSOME SATIN SLIPPERS

$1.98

Order No. 1272 Sizes—2½ to 8

And Nice Pair of Hose FREE If You Order at Once

It is just impossible for words to truly tell you what an amazing bargain this is. Wonderfully pretty fine Black Satin Slippers, flexible leather soles and heels capped with black cushion comfort rubber. Very latest style, worth much more than our price—yet we include free a nice pair of black hose to match—for a short time only! We make this amazing offer to quickly secure the names of many women readers of this magazine to receive our monthly bargain catalogs.

SEND NO MONEY

ORDER QUICK. Just pay postman on arrival, plus a few pennies postage. If not delighted, every penny refunded at once. Sizes 2½ to 8. Order by No. 1272.

GORDON BATES CO., Dept. 718-A, Minneapolis, Minn.

Salesmen $10 or more per day

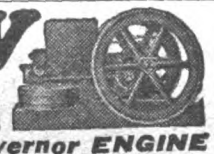
N. F. BORN, VIRGINIA Made $204.00 last week selling direct to wearer our guaranteed, all-wool, tailored-to-measure suits and over-coats at

$24.50 and $28.50

Latest styles; finest fabrics; linings and trimmings High Grade serge or alpaca. Our 25 years experience, perfect equipment, organization, and financial strength enable us to turn out such Superior Garments that sales are easy and repeat orders sure. No experience necessary, we teach you how. Exceptionally Liberal Profits paid you daily at the time each sale is made. We deliver and collect. Complete, attractive outfit absolutely free to salesmen with acceptable references. Territory rapidly being taken up. Make application today for our Fall line—ready early in July.

INTERSTATE TAILORS 404 Pike St. Cincinnati, Ohio

WE PAY $6 a Day



taking orders for Zanol Pure Food Products, Toilet Preparations, Soaps, Laundry and Cleaning Specialties and Household Supplies. Nationally advertised from coast to coast. Not sold in stores. Fast repeaters. Big income every day. Exclusive sale. No capital needed Big money for spare time.

Ford auto absolutely Free to workers. Write for particulars.

American Products Co. 8611 American Building, Cincinnati, Ohio

NEW WITTE

Throttling Governor ENGINE

Simply wonderful. Runs on Kerosene, Distillate, Gasoline or Gas. Vary power at will. Fewer parts. Mechanically perfect. 2 to 25 H-P., all styles. Catalog FREE.

WITTE ENGINE WORKS, 3642 Oakland Avenue, Kansas City, Missouri 3642 Empire Building, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 3642 Fremont Street, San Francisco, California

30 DAY TRIAL

FINE STROP FREE

We will send a STERLING razor on 30 days trial. If satisfactory, costs $1.97. If not, costs nothing. Fine Horsehide Strop FREE. Write today. STERLING COMPANY Suite 15, BALTIMORE, MD.

Brownie's Triumph

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 3.)

"Teach."

"Teach what?"

"Almost anything, except the higher classics."

"Ah! indeed! and only nineteen! Perhaps you are one of those reduced gentlewomen, who go out governessing, and pretend to know everything!" snapped the old woman, with a sneer.

Probably she had been taken in some time during her life by some such person as she described, which accounted for her scorn.

"No, madam; I pretend to nothing. I have a good education, therefore teach for a living, and am only a poor girl without home or friends."

Brownie's cheeks were very red now, but her dignity would have done credit to the highest lady in the land.

The strange woman chuckled audibly, nodded her head two or three times, as if much amused, and then went on with her catechising:

"Do you read French?"

"Yes, madam," replied the young girl, inwardly resenting the woman's brusque manner, yet feeling bound to reverence her gray head.

"And German?"

"Yes, madam."

"Can you play the piano, and sing?"

"I can."

"Have you an engagement now?"

"No, madam."

"Are you desirous of obtaining a situation?"

"I am."

"Can you produce the 'best of references?' "

This question was also accompanied by a sneer.

"I cannot, madam. I have only my qualifications and my own word to recommend me," Brownie answered, with a good deal of spirit.

Again the old woman chuckled, and distorted her neck to look at her, in a way which made Brownie fear she would dislocate it.

"Where were you last?" she demanded.

Evidently the old lady possessed authority in the house, or she would not have assumed this manner toward her. She was very richly dressed, too, and despite her deformity, had the appearance of nobility about her.

Brownie tried to hide her indignation at being so persistently questioned, for she had been kindly treated, having received every care and kindness, although as yet she was unconscious how much of it was due her present tormentor.

"I taught in an American family," she at last replied.

"Ah! Came over with them, didn't you? And you are an American, too, aren't you?" she asked, with a searching look.

Brownie nodded her head wearily; she was becoming very nervous.

"What was the name of the family, and what did they dismiss you for?"

This was going a little too far, and assuming too much.

"Pardon me, madam," Brownie answered, with proud dignity. "I do not understand your motive in interrogating me thus, and prefer not to reply to any more questions. I will simply say, however, that I was not dismissed from my position, but being unkindly treated, I came away of my own accord."

"Good! good! I like that! Nobody can set their heel upon your neck! You are not fond of the inquisition either, nor afraid to say no. You've got pluck, and I like it; but I'm an old woman, and always have my own way, wherever I am. I'll go now, though, for you look tired; but I shall come to see you again." And the strange character, after twisting her neck to get another view of Brownie's fair face, hobbled from the room, striking her cane upon the floor with a vigorous thump at every step, and nodding her head and muttering to herself all the way out.

The next day Brownie was awakened from her nap the same as on the previous day, and was greeted by that same low grunt as she opened her eyes.

She had no idea how long the woman had been gazing at her, nor how she had entered the room, for she had heard neither the opening nor the shutting of a door, nor the thumping of the cane across the floor.

She held in her left hand today a delicate vase of fretted silver, in which there was a single stalk of hyacinths, with a few sprays of feathery heath.

"Better today?" she questioned, briefly.

Brownie smiled a little, as she answered in the affirmative. She saw that the keen gray eye had a softer, kinder gleam in them than they had yesterday.

"Do you like flowers?" asked the strange old lady, holding out a rose to her.

Brownie sat up, her lovely face flushing all over with delight, and put her hand out to receive it.

"You are very kind. They seem like a ray of sunshine after a cold and dismal storm," she said, bending over them to inhale their fragrance.

"Humph! it takes mighty little to make some people chipper," the old woman returned bluntly; yet there was a note of satisfaction in her shrill voice, as if Brownie's appreciation pleased her.

Then she asked:

"Are you getting stronger? Are you able to walk about the room?"

"Oh, yes; I am quite strong today, and have been thinking I must go away soon."

"What for? Aren't you comfortable?" and the old lady spoke more sharply than usual.

"Yes, indeed; too comfortable, I'm afraid. But then, I am depending on strangers, and I ought to be looking out for myself," Brownie said, her cheeks crimsoning with embarrassment.

"Ahem! you'd like me to think you are one of the industrious kind, wouldn't you?" the old woman said, grimly.

Evidently she did not like anything which seemed like self-praise.

"Oh, no," Brownie answered, with a mischievous smile; "I assure you I do not love drudgery a bit better than other people; but when one has not a penny excepting what one earns, it is necessary to bestir one's self."

"Well, if you want to work, and can walk a few steps, come with me. I'll take you at your word, and set you a task right away," said the old creature.

Much amused, and wondering what was coming next, Brownie arose with alacrity, for she had grown weary of being shut up in one room, and longed for a change.

The old woman led the way half across the room, then stopping short and turning suddenly around, she said:

"Perhaps you'd like to know who I am, since I've managed to find out so much about you and your affairs. I'm Lady Ruxley, and I'm aunt to Lady Randal, in whose house you are. She's a hard-hearted creature—Helen is, but she can't come it over me; no, no, not until I lose more of my wits than I have yet," she concluded, with a triumphant chuckle.

Lady Ruxley! Lady Ruxley! Where had she heard that name before, Brownie wondered.

It sounded familiar, and her thoughts went leaping back into the past.

Then all at once it came to her with a force which made her feel faint and sick, and she caught her breath with almost a sob.

Lady Ruxley was that woman at whose ball in London, more than forty years ago, that tragedy in her aunt's life had occurred, and Lady Randal was, without a doubt, the hard-hearted Helen, and that same Helen Capel whose cruel plotting and intrigue had ruined the life of Miss Mehetabel Douglas.

And she had been receiving, and was still receiving, such heavy obligations from the hands of that wicked woman.

CHAPTER XXV.

A LITTLE MATTER OF BUSINESS.

"What's the matter? You are not strong enough to walk! Go back and sit down," commanded Lady Ruxley, as she saw the young woman first flush a deep crimson, and then grow white as a ghost.

But she quickly recovered herself.

"Thank you, but I am perfectly able to go; I was dizzy for a moment, though it has passed now," she returned, quietly, although a tumult of feelings was raging in her bosom.

Giving her another searching glance, her ladyship passed on, and instead of going out at the door, as Brownie expected she would do, she proceeded toward the opposite side of the room, where a set of heavy satin damask curtains hung suspended from the richly-gilded cornice.

Brownie supposed that they concealed a window, but sweeping them aside, her guide conducted her through a lofty archway into a small vestibule, lighted from above through richly-stained panels of glass to another archway also concealed by curtains.

Passing through this she ushered her companion into the sunniest, pleasantest, airiest room in the world.

It was a sort of parlor, library, and music-room combined, and contained every comfort and luxury which the human heart could suggest.

Leading from this large room was a smaller one, in which Brownie caught sight of a narrow bed, simply draped in white.

She afterward learned that the strange old woman, out of the abundant tenderness of her heart for her in her dangerous condition, had given up her own luxurious chamber to her, and slept upon this small couch in an anteroom.

"Sit down" said Lady Ruxley, indicating by a motion of her head a tempting chair standing near a marble table covered with richly bound books.

Brownie obeyed, while her ladyship seated herself in another opposite.

"There" she said, when, by an ingenious contrivance, she had tipped the chair back so that she could look at her without twisting her neck; "now I'll tell you what I want of you. Three weeks ago I sent away my companion because she neglected me. I suppose it was dull staying with such an old dry-bones as I am; and I've had no one since to read to me, or do anything for my amusement. Now, if you want something to do, won't you please read me something from that 'English Review?' "

"With pleasure," Brownie replied, her pale face brightening again with the thought of contributing thus to the poor lonely old woman's comfort.

It seemed almost like the old times with her own auntie, only it would have appeared more real if Lady Ruxley had not been so blunt and sharp, but a little more lovable, like Miss Mehetabel.

She read an hour in clear, distinct tones, which, although her ladyship was hard of hearing, she had no difficulty in catching every word.

"That was reading worth listening to," she said, heaving a sigh of appreciation. "Now put the book aside, and rest a while."

"I am not weary; let me read you something else," she answered.

"No, no; I'll not listen to any more now; but if you do not mind, I'd like you to sit with me a while longer."

"Yes, certainly, if you wish."

"Nobody cares for an old mummy like me," (how Brownie wished she would not call herself such horrid names), "and I do get lonely staying by myself all the time; though the time was when there were few who were not glad to seek the society of Lady Ruxley. Minnett, my maid, is no company, and I've not been able to find any one who was willing to be a companion to a deaf old woman.

"They try to be polite," she went on, garrulously, "to me when I go down into the drawing-room, because they know I'm rich, and they think it won't do to cross me; but I know my room is better than my company. Nobody but Charles cares for his old aunt; he's Lady Randal's son, and as good as gold. He's always civil, and would give me his arm out to dinner as gallantly as to the handsomest belle in the kingdom. He believes in the old proverb about 'honoring the hoary head,' which is more than most young people nowadays do. How is it, young woman—do you like old folks?"

She had run on in a rambling sort of way, but as she asked this question, she turned to Brownie, and eyed her keenly.

"I had a dear aunt, who was all the friend I had in the world since I was a little baby. She was both father and mother to me, and I shall always feel tenderly toward old people for her sake," Brownie replied, the quick tears springing to her eyes.

"Is she dead?"

"Yes she died the fifth of last September."

"Was she old and ugly and withered like me?"

Poor Brownie! it was a hard question, remembering so vividly as she did Miss Mehetabel's fair, lovely face, set in its framework of clustering, silvery curls.

The comparison was not favorable, to say the least, to this antediluvian before her.

She flushed with embarrassment as she gently replied:

"All old people grow wrinkled, you know, and her hair was much whiter than yours.

Lady Ruxley chuckled merrily over this noncommittal answer.

"Young woman you are as wise as a serpent, and as harmless as a dove," and I'm of the opinion that your aunt might have thought considerable of you. What was her name?"

"I was named for her," the young girl replied, evasively.

"Mabel Dundas. It is a pretty name; I like it."

And the queer old lady looked as if she liked the owner of it, too.

The next morning after the servant who waited upon Brownie had attended to all her wants, and left her, there came a rap upon her door. The next moment a handsome woman of about fifty entered. Brownie arose, bowed courteously, and remained standing till she was addressed.

"Miss Dundas," the lady said, "I must apologize to you for any seeming neglect in not coming to see you before, but I have a house full of company; but I have given orders that you should want for nothing. I am Lady Randal, and I have come to have a few moments' conversation with you."

She seated herself, and motioned for Brownie to do the same, then resumed:

"You have had quite a serious accident, and I am glad to see you are better. Are you quite comfortable, and do the servants attend you properly?" and she put up her eye-glasses to inspect the stranger.

"Thank you, I have been very kindly cared for, and am very grateful for the good Samaritan's charity which has provided for my necessities," Brownie answered, trying to speak heartily, although she felt the greatest repugnance toward this woman, who she believed was guilty of so much wrong.

She had a cold, false eye, and a cunning, cruel expression about her handsome mouth

She was just the kind of a woman to ruin the life of any one who stood in her way, Brownie thought.

She laughed lightly but disagreeably at the young girl's words.

"Oh, I do not claim any merit whatever regarding your comfort or necessities. My house was full, and at first I thought it would be impossible to take you in, but Lady Ruxley, who is very eccentric and willful, insisted upon it, and gave up her own chamber for your accommodation, she sleeping, meanwhile, in her maid's room."

Brownie's fair face grew scarlet as she listened to this, and was made to feel, by the indelicate explanation, that Lady Randal, at least, had regarded her in the light of an intruder.

It explained to her, too, what she had at first considered singular—that the rooms should be connected by archways and curtains instead of doors.

"I regret exceedingly," she returned, with dignity, "that I should have put an aged lady like Lady Ruxley to such inconvenience. I laid my plans yesterday to go to some hotel as soon as I should be able, and remain until I fully recover. If you will allow one of your servants to order a carriage for me, I will put my plan into execution at once."

"No, no, Miss Dundas, that would never do at all, and Aunt Ruxley would berate me soundly if she knew I had told you this. She is a very queer woman, as doubtless you discovered yesterday. She will not be crossed in anything, and when her mind is once made up, you can no more move her than you could one of the seven hills of Rome. But," continued the woman, who had never once taken her eyes from the fair young face before her and had read its every expression with a boldness, which made her odious, "I did not come to tell you this—I came upon a little matter of business."

She paused a moment, and Brownie wondered what business she could have with her.

"Aunt Ruxley has taken a great shine to you, so to speak," she resumed, "and has commissioned me to ask you if you would be willing to remain with her as her companion? Wait, if you please, until I get through, Miss Dundas, before you decide," she said, as Brownie looked up in surprise, and then went on, as if she supposed the young girl possessed of no feeling or delicacy: "I do not approve of the plan myself; I never believed in engaging any one in this way, for she says you have no recommendation or credentials beyond your own word. But she has set her heart upon it, and seems to think you will be willing to remain. It is very difficult to get any one of the right sort who is willing to stay and do for her what she requires on account of her peculiarities. We have had several during the last two years. Now, if you think you would like the place, and would exert yourself to please her, we will overlook your lack of credentials, and I think we can arrange to give you the situation. Your salary would be fifty pounds a year. Of course we do not expect," she hastened to add, "that you can do very much until you get strong, and we will make every allowance for that."

Brownie was disgusted with the woman's coarseness, and felt more like refusing the offer than accepting it, but what could she do?

It seemed like flying in the face of Providence to reject it.

She had no credentials, and no good family having children would engage her without, and she knew she was likely to fare no better, if as well, if she returned to her native land; unless she should acknowledge she had failed in her great undertaking, and fall back upon Mr. Conrad's offer to give her a home.

So, after thinking the matter over carefully she decided to accept Lady Randal's offer.

"Does Lady Ruxley remain in town most of the year?" she asked, before giving her answer.

"Oh, no. I ought to have mentioned that we all leave town in a few weeks for our country seat in Kent County, where Lady Ruxley has a home of her own, preferring to live alone rather than endure the noise and confusion of Vallingham Hall. Do you object to the country?"

"Oh, no, I like it."

This intelligence relieved Brownie greatly, for she felt as if she could scarcely endure to live in the same house with this woman.

"It may be a little lonely for you at first," Lady Randal added, "but aunt frequently pays a visit at the Hall, for she likes to know what is going on in the world, I assure you, if she does live alone with her servants most of the time."

"I will accept this position, Lady Randal, and if I can make Lady Ruxley's life more pleasant than it has been I shall be very thankful." Brownie said, gravely, yet a little proudly.

She did not fancy her visitor's patronizing, almost insolent manner, and inwardly resented her bold, fixed stare.

"Very well, then we will call the matter settled," Lady Randal replied, rising, and infinitely relieved that she had been able to secure a companion for her troublesome aunt, though she thought the girl a "proud minx".

She left her with a cool good-morning, and the young girl seemed to breathe freer the moment the door closed after her.

A month later they were settled in that part of a villa, near Vallingham Hall.

Brownie had fully recovered, and was gaining stronger every day.

She really grew quite attached to the old lady when she became better acquainted with her, and found her, with all her oddities, a much more congenial companion than either Mrs. Coolidge or Isabel had been.

She read a great deal, and practiced several hours a day, so that the time slipped by until Lady Randal and her family came down to Vallingham Hall, the advent of which was to open a new era in Brownie Douglas's life.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Get The Book FREE! If you would like to read the whole of this wonderful story at once and learn its thrilling conclusion, rather than wait for the monthly instalments as they appear in Comfort, we will be glad to send you a present of the entire story in book form and a only one one-year subscription (not your own) to Comfort at 50 cents, and we will send you a copy of the book free and postpaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

DON'T SEND A PENNY!

Gold Filled Jeweled Bracelet Watch $6.45

FREE! Extra Silk Ribbon Bracelet High grade small size, Octagonal bracelet watch, beautifully polished. Jeweled movement, carefully timed and adjusted, stem wind and set. Gold-filled case and extension bracelet. Like having 2 watches because you get Free extra silk ribbon bracelet.

Now less than ½ price! SEND NO MONEY! Was $15—now only $6.45. Elegant Jewel case Free. Order this wonderful birthday or anniversary gift, while this sale lasts. We pay postage. If not as listed return same and we'll refund your money. Deposit $6.45 with postman when watch is delivered.

UNIVERSAL WATCH CO., Dept. 182, 1857 Armitage Ave., Chicago

Wanted-Railway Postal Clerks, $133 to $192 Month Many other Gov't Jobs obtainable. Men—women 18 up. WRITE IMMEDIATELY for free list of positions. FRANKLIN INSTITUTE, Dept. W235, Rochester, N. Y.

MUSIC LESSONS FREE

You can read music like this quickly IN YOUR HOME. Write today for our FREE booklet. It tells how to learn to play Piano, Organ, Violin, Mandolin, Guitar, Banjo, etc. Beginners or advanced players. Your only expense about 2c per day for music and postage only. AMERICAN SCHOOL of MUSIC, 16 Lakeside Bldg., CHICAGO

GIVEN WATCH KNIFE AND CHAIN

Real American Watch, 5 year guarantee, fine case, looks and wears like gold. Just sell 12 boxes Mentho-Nova (Wonder Menthol.) Return the $3.00 and receive watch or choice of 147 premiums free. Address

U. S. Supply Company, Dept. 581, Greenville, Pa.

$423.14 PROFIT in one month made by Mr. & Mrs. Burtschi selling Spices, Flavoring Extracts, Baking Powder, Perfumes, Toilet Articles, Medicines, etc. Write for wholesale prices & Agency for your territory. Lacassia Co., Dept. 104, St. Louis, Mo.

COMFORT'S League of Cousins

LEAGUE RULES: To be a comfort to one's parents. To protect the weak and aged. To be kind to dumb animals. To love our country and protect its flag.

CONDUCTED BY UNCLE LISHA

OMFORT for one year and admittance to the League of Cousins for only 55 cents. Join at once. Everybody welcome. ADDRESS all letters to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. See Instructions at the close of this Department]

NOT quite nine years have passed since the beginning in Europe of the Great War in which so many millions of lives were lost and conditions left in the exhausted nations which have affected millions more to death and suffering. Lately, in read- over again Abraham Lincoln's 266 word Gettys- g address, I thought how no comparable speech any like spirit, power and beauty had been ut- ed since the close of Europe's catastrophe. What pelling voice of leadership has said "we here hly resolve that these dead shall not have died vain?" Not to "a new birth of freedom" have broken peoples of Europe been marshalled by se in power, but to a beckoning of new years of dage.

peaking to his hearers at the dedication of the tional Cemetery at Gettysburg, November 19, 3, Abraham Lincoln looked back "fourscore seven years" to the time when our nation was nceived in liberty and dedicated to the propo- on that all men are created equal." Now, as country of Lincoln approaches its 147th birth- , it is well to recall, as he did, the "proposition" which these States were really dedicated by n who fathered them. It is well to look back our birth certificate—the Declaration of Indepen- ce—in this day when so many pens and voices Europe, and many such at home, are endeavor- to lessen the strength of our birthright and us toward ways our forefathers well knew it necessary for us to avoid.

he very restraint and patience of the phrases pted by the Congress in Philadelphia on July 4, 6, attest the strength of spirit behind the mea- ed words: "Nor have we been wanting in at- tions to our British brethern. We have re- ded them of the circumstances of our emigra- and settlement here. . . . . they too have been f to the voice of justice and consanguinity."

only quote these words as a manner of text wing how always, then as now (even after such loody cleansing as the Great War), the ways of opean government have been ways lacking in ice, true-sightedness and national brotherhood. shington knew this, and spoke plainly concern- it in his classic Farewell Address. Lincoln w this, and saw it proven by the attitude of ope toward us during the Civil War. Wood- Wilson knows it today, even if for a time he ught otherwise when he left for France, taking e with hope our own country's ideals of peace, d-justice and open-dealing. Facing united s of Europe's ancient diplomacy, based on fear, nsion of boundaries and greedy rivalries made e bitter by old years and new war, Wilson saw stantly wrested from his plans the principles which originally he had highly stood. Not to e surrendered any of these, but to have turned y from the council table, would have been the er way. I believe he would have then had almost united country behind him. Compro- e was fatal, because it was fatally wrong.

hrough the centuries the Leopard of European omacy has not changed its spot—and they are dy ones. A wise observer, standing above the le, has said: "Because each nation has its own ory of thieving, lies and broken faith, therefore e can only flourish international suspicion and ousy. The nation's bagpipe of righteous in- nation has so often changed its tune according he variation of time and to the grouping of the nces of diplomacy, that it can be enjoyed with usement as the variety performance of the politi- music hall."

n his Farewell Address, Washingto . wrote: rope has a set of primary interests which to ave none, or a very remote relation. . . . .Why our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, nterweaving our destiny with that of any part Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, or and caprice?" These words are as absolute om today as when Washington gravely set n down in 1796. More then all else they be- k his careful parenthood and justify his claim he fatherhood of our country. For indeed our imary interests" are not those of the European ions. Our great democracy is not seeking colo- expansion or the exploitation of subject peoples far lands. Our tax collectors are not armed planes above grain fields of Asia and Africa. are not maintaining and need not maintain ntic military establishments We have no e, overcrowding masses of population hedged narrow bounds which mark old enmities. We not an island empire with far flung lines to pro- . We maintain no expensive trappings of an- t state and we have no caste but that of achieve- t. We have asked no alliances because we e feared no enemies. We need no bulwarking inst any we have harmed, for we have helped, injured, during our country's history.

believe earnestly that the great masses of the ple of the United States thoroughly understand own complete variation from Europe as she is and has been nationally organized, and that are against any entrance of our country into League of Nations, World Court or any other n of political partnership or joint action with ernments whose aims, ambitions and arts of lomatic self-interest now rest, as they have al- s rested, on bases so different from our own. elieve just as earnestly that the time will come n we will have a great International Tribunal, that time is not yet. Nine years of death, tur- l and misery, and thirty million dead, should e made a great cleansing and a change of rt in Europe, but there were few casualties little suffering in foreign offices. When our n-handed and clean-historied country takes place on the bench of any World Tribunal, I t to see her companioned by whiter robes and shifty eyes and aims. For the present, I be- e, we can best celebrate our national anniversary a further declaration on independence from cope until what our fathers in 1776 called "na- justice and magnanimity" has come more to er on the other side of the ocean. For Time ches, and with harsh rods to slow learners.

Now for the letters:

TRINIDAD, COLORADO.

AR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

tried to come in through the family entrance once ore, in order to meet more of my cousins from the er side, but alas, I failed. Please let me get one p through those closed doors.

hat I don't understand is why anyone should con- n a beautiful woman just because she is beautiful, active and wants to remain so, and the many others o can and want to improve themselves by the use of e of the many harmless and helpful cosmetics. Please and agree with me, for many are actually eating r hearts out day after day because they lack beauty. haps you will say that this is useless worry, never- ess it is the truth. There are tragedies without hidden behind drawn faces where hopes are fading he bloom dies in cheeks and lines of care become per and deeper. Few know the bitter heartache and the tears shed by the young girl who is left out of many joyous gatherings and pleasures because she is not pretty and popular, and can anyone but the wife who realizes the fading of her beauty understand the misery of facing those long years to come, unlovely and unloved? A woman's greatest advantage is her intelligence and beauty; for so much depends upon these that once they are obtained it helps her to be successful in her other duties of life.

If you should recollect rightly, even the heroines of our popular novels are all more or less pretty, and you love each one of them, now don't you? Suppose that the author was to introduce you to his heroine as "a girl of disputable size and form, considerable balky, with a rough skin, a red shiny complexion, dark circles beneath her eyes and blackheads plainly visible upon her nose and forehead." Would you read even this far? I doubt it. You'd cast the book aside and soon forget about it. Although the girl might have a virgin soul, a kind disposition and good will power, you wouldn't care just what happened to her in the end—now would you? A few would, perhaps; but I believe that even those few, were they choosing for themselvesf would want a girl who besides the last assets listed would have some attraction to the eye.

Gee whiz! I never intended raving half that long;, I wanted to tell you something of myself and my home country. Well, folks, I live in a very pretty town of about fifteen thousand inhabitants and one very happy cousin. The town is built on the side of a very picturesque lone mountain called Fister's Peak. West of us is Prospect Point around which flows the winding Purgatory River. At the north is Simpson's Rest—so named because Mr. Simpson and his daughter, who lived in caves at the top, held the attacking Indians at bay there once until more forces could be gathered to save the then struggling settlement. Over their graves where they were buried on the top of the height, a large electric sign has been placed. It bears the name of Trinidad and can be seen for several miles at night. We are in the center of a prosperous coal mining district and also have some good oil possibilities. There are cattle and sheep raised near here, but few in number.

Do you remember, Uncle, that I mentioned in my other letter that some day I hoped to be a successful author and playwright? I'll just bet you chuckled up your sleeve at the thought; but listen to this; I have sold one photo-play and have two stories out for criticism since you heard from me. Now what do you think of your worthless niece? Do you blame me when I said that I was a very happy cousin?

Dear cousins, I love horses, dogs, nature, and to have my own way—but then who doesn't? I like to write, ride, hike and hunt—also dance. I am five feet, five; weigh 130 pounds, have dark brown hair, blue-black eyes and a light complexion—both before and after I use powder. Like me, huh? I hope so.

What girl cousin would like to hike through to California with me? I want a real girl who knows what companionship means and one who won't back out when something goes wrong.

Say, I'd most forgotten myself. Why, you might have taken me for a married woman, an old maid, or a rival of our proud, young great-grandmother Bishop! But I'm none of these. I'm just seventeen and harmless, in spite of the fact that my hair was bobbed for over a year and that I once wore flapper clothes.

Please write, all who care to. I'd love to hear from everyone, and will swear by old Tut-tat-tat, oh, you know who I mean, the fellow that a sporting Englishman ordered out of his peaceful sleep in Egypt, that I'll answer. I'd love to have pictures, too.

So long—till we meet again,

BETTY MARIE TYRELL

Gosh, Betty, who's condemning any beautiful attractive girl or woman just because she is and wants to remain thus beautiful and attracting? Not I, Bet; I swear it! The more beautiful nieces I have the happier and prouder I am. And so, by the way, thanks for those nice little photographs you sent. But the real question is whether cosmetics are "harmless and helpful" as your letter cheerfully contends—helpful in manufacturing beauty, and harmless in retaining it. I have to register a negative to this question and to some of your other Trinidad statements. If a wife wants to avoid the "misery" of being "unlovely and unloved," she must take decidedly other means to sidetrack the misery than by running off to the corner drug store. No prescriptions or bottled beautifiers solve such a difficulty, Betty. It requires inside treatment of head and heart. This is your Uncle's observatory opinion, and he considers himself, in his weaker moments, a wise guy.

You tell us, Betty, about the manner in which authors always prefer to introduce the persistently pretty heroines we love, but I don't remember any being introduced somewhat as follows: "Her piquant red mouth, open like a Christmas poinsettia, bespoke a liberal use of Greasom's lipstick. Her finely pencilled eyebrows, artfully arched each morn before her mirror, curved in darkly sweet interrogations above her brilliant eyes. Like a Maryland tomato can label against a marble slab of a kitchen cabinet, her pink cheeks, delicately colored by Foolem's rouge, glowed warmly through a smoothly appliqued coating of Dr. Slick's facial enamel and a dainty pale dusting of Puffem's Peerless Powder. 'How beautiful she is!' he murmured. 'How beautiful in all her simple, natural girlish charm!'

No, Betty, you young author and playwright, the great heroines of fiction—Tess and Lorna and Lucy, as instances—are not described in this manner and their creators do not tell us of their having run up any bills at the drug counters of department stores. Try a little of Hardy and Meredith, Bet. Hardy's novel "The Woodlanders" is one of the greatest ever penned.

I hope you get a happy start on your Pacific coast hike, Betty Marie. Wouldn't it be simply awful if you should meet Cousin Gus somewhere near the Great Divide—just as you had taken your vanity case from the hip pocket of your knickerbockers and were about to powder your blistered little sun-tilted nose!

GOLDEN POND, KENTUCKY.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Will you admit a little boy into your big happy circle? I live on a little farm of 130 acres. I can plan and help father on the farm, but not when I go to school. I am in the fifth grade.

We grow corn, tobacco, oats and hay here. I have no brothers, but have two sisters younger than myself. my birthday is July 28th. How many of the cousins have the same birthday?

Now, Uncle, I hope this will miss the waste-paper basket, for I have a dear aunt in Maryland who I know would be delighted to see a letter in COMFORT from her nephew back home.

I will close now and will try again sometime.

Your loving nephew, MILBURN V. JOINER.

All right, Milburn, old boy, here's your letter in print as a birthday present, and I hope you and your aunt in Maryland and your kid sisters will all be made happy accordingly. It's true that Billy maliciously poked it down in the bottom of the waste-paper basket, but I fished it out from between the cracks with a piece of hay wire. It would be thanks enough if I could see you grin, and you can cut the letter out of COMFORT and pin it to the top of your birthday cake with a hickory toothpick.

I'm glad you draw a strict line between your farmwork and your schoolwork, Milburn. Study hard in your little schoolhouse and work hard on your dad's little farm. Both these things and all well-done duties will go to make, perhaps, a small model of another lad who was born a farm boy in Kentucky 114 years ago. Milburn V., it is not so far from Golden Pond to the White House as it was from Hardin county when your dark-eyed prototype made the trip many years back. How tall are you?—for Abraham Lincoln had long legs, and so could travel all the faster.

HAW RIVER, NORTH CAROLINA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Hello, Uncle dear! If you will let me in for a short stay I'll bring to you not the breezes of Haw River, but a bright and cheering smile. I am terribly lonesome this morning, and it is raining inches, so won't some of the cousins write to me? I will not promise to answer all letters, but I'll answer as many as possible. Also I'll exchange photos, if this green paper, gets by Billy. I read COMFORT every month as soon as it arrives. In my home there is nobody but me and a maiden aunt, so you can see how blue I get sometimes. I like to read all books, and I read all our town and city newspapers.

Dear me! I forgot to say that I am five feet, four inches in height, and have dark brown hair and eyes and medium complexion. I'm known as "Marie of Trodlin Wood."

Your niece and cousin, AGNES M. SYKES.

P. S. Billy, you come to Haw River this summer and we will have some fun swimming and boating. Also I will give you rides in my Essex coupe, and I will promise you all the ice cream and hot dogs you can eat. So come. By-by Bill!

Agnes, your letter gave me a chill of horror. It is surely awful to think of you imprisoned down by the lonely, swirling Haw River, with its dark whirlpools and winds of sighing gloom—and, above all things, a maiden aunt for jailor. Of course I hasten to print your lonely and pitiful appeal. May succor come to you at once.

Yet, as I read further, I see that you must get out once in a while—for your letter mentions an Essex coupe. But I suppose you are granted a few hours of freedom one day a week—but none, of course, on moonlight nights. No, Agnes; Billy thanks you for all your invites, but he says such a damp form of exercise as swimming would affect his lame leg, and a ride with you in the Essex coupe might affect his lame heart. He says to tell you, however, that he is willing to butt in and remonstrate severely with your maiden aunt if she continues her cruel treatment. Something must be done, Agnes, to help you in your sad fate, down in Trodlin Wood by the banks of the Haw.

RACELAND, LOUISIANA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Will you let me in? My hand is tired with writing, as this is the fourth letter I have sent to the League of Cousins. Not one have I seen yet. I've never seen a single letter from Louisiana in the COMFORT, although I know there must be a lot of cousins down here.

I'm five feet, nine inches tall; and have a fair complexion, dark brown hair and brown eyes. Who can guess my age?

I live on a farm here in South Louisiana and it is beautiful now. Raceland is only forty miles from New Orleans, known as the "Paris of America." There is a good gravel road that leads there, and the farmers bring their vegetables in trucks to the market. We raise such crops as corn, cane, potatoes and onions—these last being the main crop. Lots of vegetables, too—such as carrots, beans, and so many other things that it would take ten pages to tell you about them. Shallots, a kind of onion that grows in bunches, are selling at $12 a barrel now. These are all shipped north. So much for that.

We have a big theater here, with a capacity of 500. Also a big dancing hall. We have many stores, a big bank, and gravelled roads which run parallel to the Bayou Lafourche. The old Spanish Trail runs through here.

There are many flappers here just as in any other place. Bobbed hair, lipsticks and rouge are very popular—especially with the girls from 12 years to 18.

With good wishes and happiness to the cousins and you, Uncle, I must close.

From a Sunny Dixieland cousin,

OCTAVE VERRET, JR.

Octave, I know well that you have written four letters, but really I should have waited until you had written four more,—for it takes eight notes to make an Octave, doesn't it? How Bill will groan when he reads this! He so hates what he calls my "frivolous tendencies."

I want to see New Orleans more, perhaps, than I do any other of our country's cities, Octave. I'd like to see St. Charles street, the old French Quarter, and browse and stroll about a little in the vicinity where Lafcadio Hearn once earned a meager newspaper livelihood with his remarkable pen and one good eye that saw so much. New Orleans is famous for its restaurants, I have heard, and this ascendency would not make me like the American Paris any less. But I'm more then forty miles from St. Charles street, and there is no stretch of gravelled road to take me from where my subway ticket would leave off working.

I'm not surprised to hear, Octave, that Raceland is a land true to the race in having its quota of 1923 brand flappers. But I hope that these gay young loses flavor. After removing the product from the boiling water, hold by the cheese-cloth and dip four times in and out of cold water, then turn the product out into a colander to drain. Never allow the product to stand in the water. See table of blanching and cooking below.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 10.)

Summer Cooking Simplified

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 7.)

Pack the jars as closely as possible without breaking or mashing the product. To each quart jar of vegetables add one teaspoon of salt, and boiling water to within half an inch of the top. Syrups are added according to sweetness of fruits. A light syrup is made by adding one cup of water to each cup and a half of sugar and boiling five minutes. Boil longer for a heavier syrup.

A boiler can be used for sterilizing or cooking the product if a rack is made to fit the bottom and give a level foundation. The water should reach to the shoulders of the jars, and the count for time of cooking to begin when the water is actually boiling. Jars put into the water only partially sealed. The lower lever of the wire seal is left up, and screw-tops are turned about two-thirds down. After cooking is finished, remove jars from hot water at once and complete seal. Set out of drafts to cool. To detect any leaks, turn jars upside down and let them remain over night. Leaks indicate rough surfaces, thin rubbers, or mis-fitted tops. In case any seal is found to be imperfect after remedying the defect, the product must be again sterilized.

Table for Blanching and Cooking

Product	Glass Jar	Blanch	Hot water bath
Asparagus,	Pint,	4 minutes,	3 hours.
String Beans,	Quart,	3 to 5 min.,	3 hours.
Lima Beans,	Pint,	3 to 10 min.,	3 hours.
Beets,	Pt. or Qt	5 to 10 min.,	3 hours,
Berries,	pt. or qt.		15 to 20 min.
Carrots,	pt. or qt.	3 to 5 min.,	2 hours.
Cherries,	pt. or qt.	15 seconds,	25 min.
Gooseberries,	pt or qt.		10 minutes.
Greens,	pt or qt.	4 minutes.	3 hours.
Guavas,	pt. or qt.	20 seconds,	25 minutes.
Loganberries,	pt or qt.		15 to 20 min.
Okra, (No salt)	Pint,	6 to 8 min.,	2 hours,
Peaches,	pt. or qt.	scald 1 min.,	20 minutes,
Pears,	pt or qt.	cook 6 min. in syrup,	15 minutes.
Peas,	pt. or qt.	5 minutes,	3 hours.
Pineapple,	Quart,		30 minutes.
Peppers,	Pint,	8 minutes in oven,	30 minutes.
Pimentoes,	Pint,	8 minutes in oven.	30 minutes.
Plums,	pt. or qt.		25 minutes.
Pumpkin,	pt. or qt.	15 min. in steam,	3 hours.
Raspberries,	pt. or qt.		15 minutes.
Spinach,	pt. or qt.	4 minutes,	3 hours.
Squash,	pt. or qt.	15 in steam,	3 hours.
Strawberries,	pt. or qt.		16 minutes.
Tomatoes,	pt. or qt.	scald one min.	30 minutes.

GIVE THEM
Baker's Cocoa
TO DRINK

THE almost unceasing activity with which children work off their surplus energy makes good and nutritious food a continual necessity. Of all the food drinks Baker's Cocoa is the most perfect, supplying as it does much valuable material for the upbuilding of their growing bodies. Just as good for older people. It is delicious, too, of fine flavor and aroma.

Made only by
WALTER BAKER & CO. LTD.
Established 1780
DORCHESTER, MASSACHUSETTS
Booklet of Choice Recipes sent free

How to Make Frozen Desserts

With the proper equipment it is a very simple process to make frozen desserts. Put the ice into a burlap bag and pound with a large wooden mallet until quite fine. Use coarse rock or Liverpool salt. If the mixture freezes too quickly it will be of a granular consistency, so it is of importance to measure salt and ice accurately, three even measures of ice to one measure of salt being the right proportion. Two other points of importance must be observed in order to produce a fine creamy consistency. First the can must never be more than three-fourths full, for in the process of freezing the mixture increases in bulk, and if crowded will be coarse-grained. The second is to let the mixture stand ten minutes after being packed, and then turn the crank with a slow and steady movement.

When the crank begins to turn hard it is an indication that freezing has taken place. It is well to continue turning the crank until the mixture is quite stiff. To pack, remove the dasher, scrape contents into a solid mass, cover and insert a cork stopper into the dash opening. Drain and pack with four parts ice and one of salt. Lay old rug over the freezer.

VANILLA ICE CREAM.—Scald one pint of milk and stir in a little less than one cup of sugar, cool. Whip one pint of cream and add milk and sugar with one and one-half tablespoon of vanilla. Freeze.

FRENCH ICE CREAM.—Mix one even tablespoon of flour one scant cup of sugar, and one-eighth teaspoon of salt, then add one egg slightly beaten and very gradually two cups of scalded milk. Cook in a double-boiler twenty minutes, stirring constantly until it thickens. When cold add one and one-half tablespoon of vanilla, one cup of heavy cream whipped, and two cups of thin cream. Strain through a wire strainer into the freezer. Freeze.

CHOCOLATE ICE CREAM.—Pour the hot custard of French Ice Cream over two squares of melted unsweetened chocolate and proceed as in above recipe. Or, one and one-half square of melted unsweetened chocolate may be added, to the hot milk and sugar in recipe for Vanilla Ice Cream. Cool, add one tablespoon of vanilla and pint of cream whipped. Freeze.

STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM.—Hull, wash and mash two boxes of ripe strawberries, mix with two cups of sugar and let stand two hours. Strain. Scald one and one-half cups of milk and thicken with one tablespoon of flour mixed with cold milk and then thinned with enough more to make one-half cup. Cook twelve minutes in a double-boiler and strain. Cool, add two pints of thin cream and one pint of heavy cream whipped. Freeze to a mush, add the strawberry juice and sugar and continue freezing.

General Recipes

BAKED HALIBUT.—Spread the bottom of pan under the fish with thin slices of salt pork. Lay on the fish which has been well wiped, cut side down. Mix four tablespoons of butter with four of dry flour and spread it over the top end, then cover generously with fine bread-crumbs. Across the top lay narrow strips of salt pork. Place in a moderately hot oven and bake about one hour, to three or four pounds of fish. Lay on hot platter and surround with slices of buttered beets.

CUSTARD PIE.—Line a deep pie plate with good pastry. Slightly beat three eggs, add four level tablespoons of sugar, one-eighth teaspoon of salt, one-fourth teaspoon of grated nutmeg, stir and pour one pint of scalding hot milk over the mixture. Stir and pour into the crust. Bake in a moderately hot oven until when a knife is inserted into the custard it will come out clean. If cooked too long, the custard will whey and be honeycombed. Eat while fresh.

CODFISH, CARROT AND BEET BALLS.—One-half cup each of boiled and mashed carrot and beet, two cups of mashed potato, four tablespoons of heavy cream, one beaten egg, a little chopped green pepper or parsley and one eighth teaspoon of pepper, all beaten together. Pick three-fourths cup of salt codfish into fine shreds, soak three hours in cold water, put into fresh cold water and gradually bring to boiling point, but do not boil. Put into fresh boiling water and let stand at simmering point twenty minutes. Stir into above mixture, add salt if necessary, shape into flat cakes half an inch thick, dip in flour and fry in a little pork fat until brown.

MARLBORO PIE.—Four or five new tart apples sliced without peeling or coring and stewed until soft in as little water as possible. Press through a wire strainer and add three tablespoons of butter while hot. Separate three eggs, beat the yolks and add one cup of sugar, the rind and juice of a lemon and beat into the apple mixture. Lastly add the stiffly beaten whites. Line a deep pie plate with thin pastry, pour in the mixture and bake in a moderately hot oven until the crust is done. Cool, cover with whipped cream and serve fresh.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 9.)

Maidens of Shallots are not every one of 'em violators of the Trick Amendment to the Cosmetic Constitution. It's really not necessary, you know, for an onion diet can give strength and color to complexions that no quality of rouge can equal. And you have plenty of onions—barrels of 'em. Octave, the next time I see any Louisiana shallots in Brooklyn I shall eat a lot of 'em—as a fragrant souvenir of you and Dixie.

LAUPAHOEHOE, HAWAII.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

I have been taking COMFORT for some time now and enjoy every bit of it—especially the letters of the cousins. I have been so interested in them that I thought I would write one myself. It seems so queer not to see in COMFORT letters from Hawaii, nor from this pretty little village. I live in this village near the beach. My favorite pastime is swimming.

Now I'll tell something of myself: I am a brunette. I have dark brown (some say almost black) wavy hair and dark brown eyes. I am in shoes five feet, two inches tall, and I weigh 127 pounds. My age is between 17 and 23.

I love fun and love to play with children. You can't blame me, Uncle, as I have lots of nephews and nieces, and they are all dear little ones.

By the way, Uncle, in Jeff's letter in the February COMFORT he wants some pretty brunette to write to him. Well, Uncle, let me have his address and I'll surely write to Cousin Jeff. If any of the cousins care to write to me I'll be delighted to get their letters. I leave my address with Uncle Lisha.

Best wishes to you, Uncle Lisha, and to the cousins all.

Your niece, BRUNETTE.

Brunette, of course, your favorite pastime is swimming and, although you did not mention it, I'm sure your chief occupation is tickling a guitar or ukelele. It is my firm conviction, based on literature and illustration, that all Hawaiians spend their waking hours equally divided between playing in the waves and playing on melodious strings. Life must be very lovely in Hawaii, Brunette—much more lovely than in Brooklyn. Here we have to get our Hawaiian music canned, like our Hawaiian pineapple. If I can ever learn to play "Three o'clock in the Morning" on a ukelele, and can perfect my at present very imperfect crawl stroke, I am coming out to Hawaii and join the happy throng on the beach at Waikiki.

Brunette, I never think of Hawaiians as covering up their bare and sun-browned toes in shoes, but when they do, I was the more surprised to hear that shoes five feet long were needed. Well, perhaps so much swimming develops the feet as it does with ducks. I hope leather is not scarce and high-priced in beautiful Laupahoehoe. I suppose one could substitute pineapple hide—which always seemed to me to lack uses.

Now, Brunette, I want to say a word here to you and others about Jeff and his address. You are only one of some steen hundred dark-haired cousins that have written asking that I send them news of where Cousin Jeff hangs up his hat and his tanned wishbone. I would like to oblige, but I'm a fearfully busy Uncle with a growing Family. I positively can't write steen hundred letters to fulfill the demands of all the "robust brunettes" who were intrigued by Jeff's charming epistle and more charming description. I have forwarded many letters which have been sent to Jeff in my care, and I will forward all others that may be sent—if they have stamps on 'em, but this is the best I can do. In each instance where a letter may appear in this department without an address, as is the case with your letter, Brunette, the Family must not ask me to send further particulars. Just let 'em send their messages on in my care, and I'll promise to see they go forward as promptly as received. I much prefer that cousins sign their real names and addresses to their letters, and I do not see any legitimate reason for not doing this in cases where the letter does not contain matter of a too personal nature. However, some folks are real bashful, as seems to be the matter with Jeff. But perhaps he'll find that "robust brunette" some day and she will overcome his tanned bashfulness.

SCHAFER, NORTH DAKOTA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Now I will write you a few lines from McKenzie county, North Dakota, because I have never seen any letters from this part of the State. The past winter was the longest I have ever seen since I came to Dakota, and I came here in October, 1908. It was the 20th, the day I was born.

We had a good year—the wheat went from 20 to 30 bushels to the acre. What we need here is more farmers, because there is so much vacant land. Land can still be obtained here real cheap, and the best land in the country, too.

Well, now I must write about myself; I will soon be fifteen years old. I have two brothers and two sisters, and I am next to the oldest. My oldest brother is sixteen, and my other brother is six. My sisters are nothing to write about because they are no good. I have for my property, a young pony, a single buggy, a single harness, a saddle, and a bridle. I have also two cows and two little pigs. I have an electric engine that I run with batteries.

I go to Timber Prong school. It stands a little over a half mile from our place. The teacher's name is Mrs. Barrette. I do not like her very good because she is so cross. She says that I am so tricky, but I do not know of any tricks that I do and I only fool the teacher once in a while.

We have had COMFORT over six years and I think it is the best paper published.

We have a phonograph. My mother got it for her birthday present from my father on the 18th of November, 1915.

Well, I must close now, with best wishes. Do not let that old Goat get a holt of this letter because it is the first I've sent to get published and I want to see it in print.

Your new cousin, MARTIN BERG.

There is a firm touch about your letter, Martin, a persuasive, pervading tinge of strength and declarativeness which is rather astounding in so young a person who has only been dwelling in North Dakota since 1908. I'll bet one of my small store of iron men that you'll raise many acres of thirty bushel wheat some day and become a director in the Timber Prong National Bank of Schafer, N. D. You show an exactitude regarding dates which would always make you know when a note was due!

Martin, you are not very polite in your briefly expressed judgment of your two sisters. Are they as bad as all that? You must be careful that they do not send me in their opinion of you and I be tempted to put it in print! What has happened? Did they bust your electric engine? Or borrow your saddle when you wanted to use it?

About that cross teacher, Mart, you say you only fool her "once in a while." Well, my experience has been that it makes a teacher cross to be fooled even that little bit. They are darn particular and don't want to be fooled at all. And I don't know that I blame 'em. But I rather agree with your self-judgment that you are not tricky. Your letter does not sound that way. Far from it. However, Mrs. Barrette is going to be crosser yet, Martin, if she reads your mention of Bill getting "a holt" of your letter. Well, you hard-hearted young wheat raiser, you see he did not get a holt of it—which I think is the better way of saying it, and the better thing to have happened, don't you?

EDMONDS HILL, KEENE, N. Y.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

I'll describe myself first thing and get that over with. I'm just a common looking country girl and look like dozens of others. I've medium brown hair and eyes and common complexion (never gets powder or rouge) to match. I have a pug nose, freckles and a broad grin. Also I wear glasses. I am five feet, two and a half inches tall and am not much bigger than nothing—weighing about 88 pounds. No use telling you to guess my age, 'cause Uncle Lisha would guess that I'm nineteen, so I might as well confess.

Everybody says they love COMFORT, and I must say it, too. I love all the breezy boy letters and all the sweet girl letters.

I live on a hill three miles and a half from the village at present. Keene is surrounded by mountains and mostly made of hills. The neighbors are all so nice to us. My mother teaches school. My father is dead and so is my sister, so there are only mother and I. But mother is the best ever, I think, and tries to make up for father, sister and brothers. I have lots of dear relatives, too. One, an orphan cousin who has been with us a lot, I call sister, and I have a fifteen-year old boy friend whom I call brother.

I'm taking a correspondence school course in dressmaking, tailoring and millinery. It is very interesting and some day I hope to do these things well.

Say, wouldn't I just love to peep over Bill's shaggy shoulder and see his Album! I'm awfully fond of pictures. Billy, old dear, just you let this pass and I'll send you my picture some day to make some of those pretty ones look prettier beside it. Oh, well; I'm not nearly so homely as I sound, Billy, and maybe you admire pugged noses. I have a picture of you, Uncle Lisha, taken out of COMFORT.

I love to read—especially boys' stories and detective stories. They are most of them so lively and wholesome.

I kept a stand last summer and made and sold fudge.

I think it is lovely to send the wheel chairs. I write to four of the crippled ones, to the sister of one and to the daughter of another. They all write me very nice interesting letters.

Oh, it is so beautiful out today, but the scenery here is very lovely at any time. There is a little chickadee cheeping just outside the window as I write.

Well, I guess this is enough from me, but if you let me in this time I'll surely come again (I hope you won't take this as a threat!).

I'd dearly love to hear from any of you cousins, but I have so many letters to write now that I can't promise about answering yours. Love to all.

Your niece and cousin, MARION MOODY.

The Family may not know from your letter, Marion, but I know that you write to us from the Keene Valley, a well-known and beautiful part of New York State's Adirondack mountains. They are nice mountains, too, where you have picked out to live—full of the pines and ponds and peaks that ought to go with mountains, and with a few mosquitoes and black flies thrown in to help keep things from getting too dull. I like mountains, as I have said often before—especially the kind that have the fur left on and have not been too much man-handled by the lumber interests.

Little as you are, Marion, I note that you keep bigly cheerful—with your pug nose set above your grin and just between your two largest freckles. Having a good mother and liking everybody (including relatives!) helps in keeping you happy, I think. And all this makes me like you all the better, too. I'll see that Bill does not drop any photo paste on your pug nose as he inserts your 88 pounds in his Album—and if he does drop any carelessly I'll make him lick it off—and when he does you must be careful not to sneeze!

MALAGA, P. O. BOX 74, WASH.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

I have just been reading the League of Cousins department and have decided to write to you for the first time. COMFORT is a great paper. I read it from cover to cover and find lots of good reading in it. It was just a few days ago that I got my League button and membership certificate. I was surprised when I opened the envelope and found what there was inside. There are a lot of members to our League of Cousins and I believe there would be even more if everybody knew what was in store for them.

Well, Uncle, I suppose when you looked at my letter and saw it was from Washington, you wondered what kind of a place this is. Malaga is a samll town with a post office, depot, two stores, three apple warehouses and several houses. There are lots of fruit orchards around. Malaga is in the Wenatchee Valley, so I will describe this valley in which we live. I am poor with a pencil and worse with a pen, but I'll make an attempt to tell where it is and what it looks like. Also what we do for a living.

Wenatchee is the center port of Washington, on the Columbia river. The Great Nothern railroad is the only road going through the valley. Wenatchee is

A WORLD OF BOYS

By Mary Bradshaw Tyrrell

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc

WITHIN two miles of the heart of the city of Philadelphia, with a wilderness of brick walls and pavements all around it, is a beautiful breathing space. It is enclosed by a high wall, but through the iron entrance gates there is a glimpse of a noble gray stone Grecian temple with thirty-four massive fluted pillars supporting its wide portico on all sides of the building, the first building and original home of Girard College.

Schoolrooms, residence halls and other structures have sprung up about it, until now on the forty-acre campus is a small city in itself to house this unique institution. Unique it may well be called, for it is safe to say that no other school has such history, such plan and purpose in its foundation, and such forceful wish of the founder transmitted through nearly a century, so that, in very truth, "he, being dead, yet speaketh."

Stephen Girard was a citizen of Old Philadelphia, a multimillionaire when such were few in the land, yet he had been a poverty-stricken orphan boy. Born in France, he went to sea in early youth, was first a cabin boy, then master and part owner of a little sailing vessel. He came to Philadelphia at the beginning of the Revolution, a young man of twenty-five, with enough money saved to set up in business, and for more than fifty years he was a leading spirit in all the affairs of the city. Eccentric, miserly, he was called, but in 1814, when his adopted country was almost overwhelmed by its war debts, he advanced it five million dollars to meet the need of the hour.

He died at eighty-one, leaving his wealth to the city he loved, in generous bequests for the improvement of streets and buildings, and to the State of Pennsylvan a for a system of canals, but most of it was to be used to establish a school for "poor, white, male orphans, between the ages of six and ten years when admitted to the institution, giving the preference, first, to those born within the bounds of the City of Philadelph a; secondly, to those born in Pennsylvania; thirdly, to those born in New York, and lastly, to those born in New Orleans." (New Orleans having shown him kindness in his youthful days of povety.)

The picture of the grim old miser fades out as the memory of his own youthful struggle inspires him with the wish to make life easier for other orphan lads.

As he prescribed with such minuteness the choice of students, so he planned for every detail of their upbringing, physical, mental, and spiritual. The will he drew was ironclad, and even now none of his wishes may be set aside. There are supposed to be legal heirs yet living who could claim the estate, originally more than five million dollars, but now increased seven fold, if the City of Philadelphia, trustee of the estate, or the committee appointed to manage it should evade, by carelessness or intention, any of the terms laid down.

The tradition is that he ordered a wall, thirty feet high, to be built all around the college site, which covers some six or more city blocks. That was an evident absurdity, so the trustees fulfilled his wish by digging a trench twenty feet deep, and burying that much of the wall under ground. Ten feet makes the wall high enough to insure privacy, and the rare view of the perfectly kept lawns within are all the more delightful because they are not easily gained.

In 1848, seventeen years after his death, the first buildings were finished, and the school received its earliest students. It has grown with the passing years, other halls have been added, until now nearly sixteen hundred students are in attendance, and more than eight thousand have gone out from the school, trained to the finest manhood.

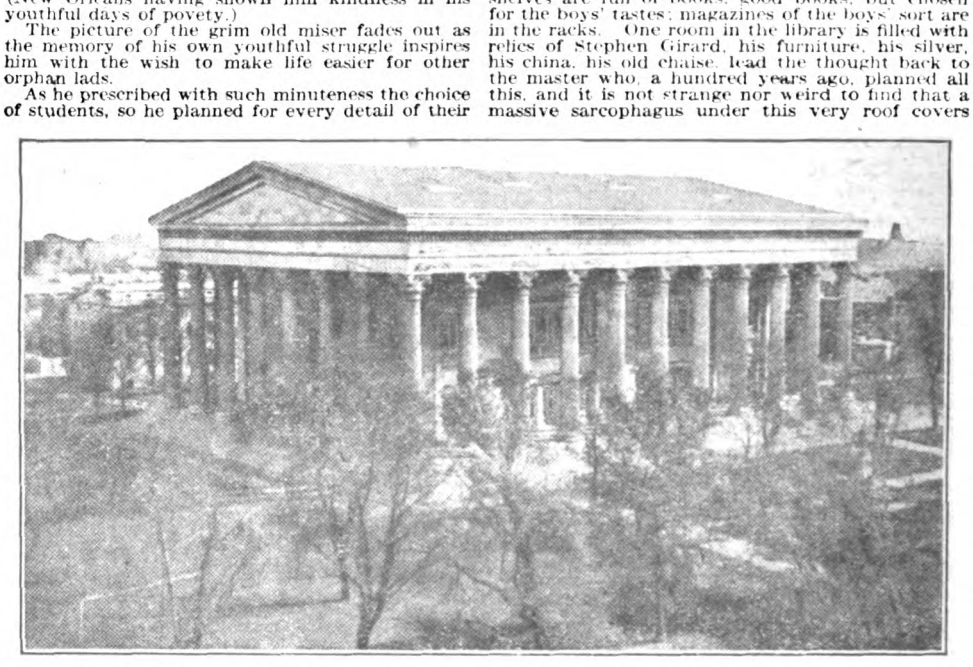
There is a monument on the campus to the Girard boys that fell in the Civil War, and a fine bronze tablet to those who offered themselves in the World War, but Girard's greatest gift is of those who gave long lives not only for, but to, their country. Could Stephen Girard have made a richer bequest to his commonwealth?

The school, though called Girard College, is hardly a college in the technical sense. The boys must be admitted before they are ten years old, and the course covers only the elementary and high school grades, but each boy learns something well enough to earn a living by it, and is fitted into a suitable occupation when he leaves the school. If he has shown any special aptitude for college training he is helped to find a way to secure it.

Stephen Girard specified that the students should have plain but wholesome food, and their bodies should be clean, so this school city is a model of sanitation and of all the things that make for health.

No child is rejected for an physical defect or mental backwardness unless it is such as to absolutely unfit him to profit by the school life. Whatever he lacks in these early years he can regain by careful training and wise and constant oversight.

The boys are in families, thirty or forty boys in each, the younger ones under house "mothers", the older under masters, whose one care it is to see to the home training of their charges. These house mothers and masters have no schoolroom duties.



The boys study in the sitting-rooms of their several Homes, furnished in really homelike fashion; the dining halls have well appointed tables set with linen and silver and such as the best homes might offer, and the menus are planned to give real home diet, perfectly adapted to the growing boy.

Each boy in the dormitory has his own bed and washstand, and the head of each family gives their sleeping quarters real home oversight. Health care is unfailing, a physician and corps of nurses direct the infirmary and the slightest illness sends a boy to them for twenty-four hours' rest in bed under close observation, longer if necessary, and many illnesses are thus cut short. Dentists are on the staff to keep the teeth in the best order, a throat specialist looks out for adenoids and tonsils.

Each and every boy has his place on some athletic team, but while his exercise is supervised carefully he has a chance to make play of it in real, hearty boy fashion. He moves through the daily routine, to schoolroom, to workshop, to study hall, to military drill, to playground, and yet life within the Girard wall never loses the fun and spontaneity of the unquenchable boy.

"Movies" of the right sort for boys, educational yet entertaining, are twice-a-week occurrences; good music, the college band, the orchestra, the glee clubs, the big organ, all awaken the boys' love for music; the pictures that line the halls are the ones that will appeal to the boy. Alexander's series on "The Evolution of The Book" from the Congressional Library paintings, Edwin A. Abbey's series of King Arthur and his Round Table Knights are given the boys in fine reproductions.

The original building is now the library. The shelves are full of books, good books, but chosen for the boys' tastes; magazines of the boys' sort are in the racks. One room in the library is filled with relics of Stephen Girard, his furniture, his silver, his china, his old chaise, lead the thought back to the master who, a hundred years ago, planned all this, and it is not strange nor weird to find that a massive sarcophagus under this very roof covers his ashes, while a wonderfully lifelike statue above it looks out on the Girard boys.

GIRARD COLLEGE LIBRARY BUILDING—THE FIRST OF THE COLLEGE BUILDINGS.

The clause from his will forbidding that "any ecclesiastic, missionary or minister, of any sort whatsoever, shall ever hold or exercise any station or duty whatever in the said college, nor shall any such person ever be admitted for any purpose or as a visitor within the premises," has been the occasion of some unfriendly comment. The rule is enforced rigidly, even unto this day, as all the provisions of that document must be.

But the will goes on to state that this is "to protect the tender minds of the orphans from the clashing doctrines and sectarian warfare" (so bitter a century ago that it might be well to guard against its blighting influence on any such educational undertaking.)

His expressed wish that the students should "have the principles of morality instilled so that on their entrance into active life they may choose the religious tenets their matured reason enables them to prefer," also is regarded. The teachers are selected for their power of moral leadership. The president of the college, Doctor Cheeseman A. Herrick, is an officer and Bible teacher in one of the down town churches, but his pastor, who loves him, makes it a matter for good-natured jest, that there is one family in his congregation he is not expected to visit.

Many of the boys are widows' sons, so two or three times a year they keep Mothers' Day, and invite their women kin to visit them. These are holidays, gala days, the campus is its gayest, with students and visitors overflowing from Halls to walks and lawns.

It is hard to tell which groups are more pathetic, the mothers who look with wistful eyes at their sons, little lads or manly youth, who have gone from their care and are growing away from them, all eager to show the charms of this school home; or those other boys who stand one side, with careless laugh of bluff bravado, to hide the heart hunger for the mothers they have not—now.

The pathos would press deeper if this were not a home, in very truth, for every lonely lad who enters it.

ur Mutual Friend, the Subway

By Gorton Carruth

opyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

VHEN Culver, his day's work done, put his desk to rights, donned his coat and hat and started for the elevator, he had not the remotest suspicion that within ten minutes he, hitherto entirely heart-whole, would be in love. n Miss Winton covered her typewriter and tosprink in front of the mirror before starting e she had not the slightest idea that within minutes she would, unknown to herself capthe heart for which she would eventually give in exchange.

upid's arrows may not have the muzzle velocity lar's latest projectiles but they are pretty swift the same, and they score one hundred per cent. irect hits.

o, Culver's thoughts were not at all out of the mary. They consisted of stray odds and ends flection engendered by his day's work as manathe New York office of the Kalamazoo Carbtor company. These were rapidly dispelled is entirely customary thought that if he would a little speed he could avoid the worst of the at the Brooklyn Bridge station of the sub-

This idea in turn was modified a trifle by eminding himself that he must not forget to an evening paper on the way to the station. dly in the background of his mind was the zation that he was hungry and the sooner he d get home the better.

there was nothing in his mental condition to din why the little god who had allowed him each the age of twenty-eight without even so h as glancing in his direction should now be g in ambush for him in of all places—the sub during the evening rush hour.

or, as above hinted, could anyone have found liss Winton's thoughts any reason why Cupid ld have chosen her for his confederate just . She was thinking that the boss had been rally pleasant that day, that she was hungry, it was time she bought a spring hat, that one e had a tiny rip in it, that she would buy a pathat Miss Cheever had on more paint than d, and that if she would hurry she could get in the subway. True, she was well aware that etty girl looked back at her from the mirror, that idea was wholesomely subordinate to her r ideas, as it always was.

ut whatever the explanation for it, Cupid was ainly on his job. Culver, unconscious of his , bought his paper, suffered himself to be med into a car by one of the blue coated pasger-packers, sighed, grabbed a strap, drew his r from his pocket and began to read. He was sampling the headlines, however, when his er was struck and crumpled in his hands by an- passenger who was still under the impetus he packing process. Culver, annoyed, raised eyes and looked into the eyes of Miss Winton, that instant Cupid, probably perched on one of fans for there was no other room for him, nged his bow-ping!—and Culver experienced ardiac thrill that subtly and delightfully pertted his whole being.

'or he found himself gazing into the eyes of his al. That is, of his ideal from thence forward. ould not be said that up to that moment he ever had an ideal but it was indubitable that ad one now.

n the eyes of the other people in the car she was doubt less glorified but was still worth looking wice.

I beg your pardon," she said evenly.

It's quite all right," returned Culver with rekable composure, considering that he had just n shot under the fifth rib. "It could hardly be ded in this crush," he added hopefully.

No." She cut the monosyllable so short that arely escaped with its life from between her th. Thereupon she turned her shoulder to him began to read her paper.

This behavior of hers was not due to any natural s of friendliness. It was simply her instinctive ence against the advances of a stranger. Miss ton was not a native New Yorker; she had had ew England upbringing and her code of social uette did not recognize the method of getting uainted which is the only one open to so many w York girls—that is, mutual self-introduction h other wayfarers in the hurrying throngs. She l not the power of discrimination that the New k girl acquires. Then, too the fact that she s unusually pretty brought her so many undeble advances that she feared them all.

'He's another," she thought to herself as she ned to her paper and then she promptly disssed him from her mind.

There was only one thing for Culver to do—reto his own paper—and that he did, ostensibly t if there had been printed on the sheet before eyes the news that he had fallen heir to a million lars he would never have seen it. That was for reasons; first, because when he was looking the paper he saw only a blur of words; and second, ause most of the time he wasn't looking at it stealthily over the top of it at the girl beside n.

Her complexion was her own, he noted, and a y good one. Her eyes were blue, her lashes g and thick, her hair brown and smooth, her n round and firm. She was not chewing gum, was reading the editorial page and not the uty hints or advice to the lovelorn. She was out three inches shorter than he was. She wore simple business suit and a small becoming hat. ere was a general air of neatness and calm welling about her. In fact, the oftener he glanced er the top of his paper at her the more firmly she ame his ideal.

While he was thus pleasantly engaged in conming his first impression, the train stopped at Seventy-second street station, the girl thrust r paper under her arm, turned her back on him d began to edge her way out with the rest of the owd.

Culver, as before hinted, labored under the handip of inexperience in affairs of the heart and he s extremely diffident. Moreover, he had also erited a set of quite correct social principles. when it was borne in upon him that they were going to ride together in that train forever he nply stood in pained surprise while she worked r way out. He was still in that condition when e doors were closed and the train went on again. upid, it would seem, had made a mistake.

For New York city is a big town and if two of its izens meet and wish to know each other they uld better introduce themselves at once, for ey may never meet again, even though they live their lives within a mile of each other. Culver, the train went on, was filled with a sense of irmediable loss and berated himself for allowing e girl to escape without establishing an entente rdiale. But, after all, what was a fellow to do? here was nobody to introduce them and you can't troduce yourself to a girl who is so unmistakably the sort that does not wish you to do so. He could ve followed her, but that went against his grain. esides, what good would that do? The same bjection would remain inside or out of the subway. But a natural buoyancy of spirits and a gift for ading a way soon asserted themselves to cheer up e young man.

"She is apparently an office worker," he reasoned, nd since she got off the train at the Brooklyn ridge station it follows that she is employed near ity Hall Square. I also am employed near City all Square. I try, not very successfully, to get ead of the crowd. So, apparently, does she, nce we took the same train. Hence it follows at if I get to the station promptly after five clock and keep my eyes open I will stand a chance f seeing her again—perhaps tomorrow."

Thus encouraged Culver just saved himself from eing carried by his own station and went to his oarding house in a thoughtful, even abstracted ate of mind. It persisted throughout the evenng and caused his astute landlady, who noted it at e supper table to fear that she was in danger of osing her best paying gentleman boarder.

As for Miss Winton, she went serenely home tterly unconscious of the perturbation she had ft in the breast of one of her fellow passengers. Culver's cheerful hopefulness was considerably dashed when he failed to see her the next afternoon. He reached the station early and scanned the homeward bound throngs eagerly as he pushed his way along the platform, but with no result. He even waited until he had let three express trains go by, and there is something pretty serious the matter with a New York man when he does that.

Indeed it was not until four days later that he saw her again. Then, as he stood on the platform he glimpsed her as she was descending the stairway. With some difficulty he worked his way through the crowd until he was near enough so he could enter the same car that she did. Chance favored him, as he thought, and he found himself clinging to a strap beside her again.

Their eyes met and he smiled. The smile was more an involuntary expression of pure pleasure at seeing her again than it was a predetermined effort at friendliness. But Miss Winton's social code did not give her intuition a chance. She encountered the smile with a level, freezing gaze that informed the young man that he was far less interesting to her than the advertising placards above his head. Then she turned her back as before and began to read her paper.

Her thoughts, however, were not as deadly as her look. "Now where have I seen him before?" she wondered, and surprised herself by adding, "he's not at all bad looking." But after a few minutes' effort to place him she gave it up and, as before, dismissed him from her mind. She was not going to allow herself to become interested in a strange young man just because he had smiled at her and was good looking. Not she!

Culver's smile had been severely frostbitten and he discarded it as unornamental.

"Br-r-r-r," he shivered to himself. "And yet some people complain that the subway is hot!"

All the rest of the way he was lost in the contemplation of the difficu ty of the problem before him. How was he going to achieve a socially correct introduction to the girl of his dreams so long as the only place he could meet her was in the subway?

The result of his meditation was the decision to try the effect of continued, but silent, propinquity. So every day he assiduously searched for the girl in the crowd and each time that he located her he maneuvered to ride uptown in the same car and as near her as possible. But often he did not look at her during the whole trip and when by chance their eyes met his glance was as casual and indifferent as hers. Now and then, however, when he thought she wasn't looking, he observed her over the top of his paper and was more and more convinced that she was the only girl in the world for him. Once she surprised him in one of his stealthy observations of her and as before she registered cold rebuff.

Nevertheless, his strategy began in some degree to work. She recognized him from the first as the man who had once smiled at her and who, she had decided, was good-looking. Further observations confirmed her in that opinion. She soon realized that it was not chance that brought them so often together in the same car, and she began to look for him each evening.

"He seems to be a gentleman," she told herself. "He's never rude and he doesn't try to follow me. I wonder—perhaps I could——"

But against her half-formed wish arose a conventional restraint as rock-ribbed as her native state. Consequently the outlook was very dubious for the manager of the Kalamazoo Carburetor Company. After two months of the silent-propinquity tactics he was unable to detect any alteration in the young woman's demeanor that would warrant his even so much as smiling again in her direction.

"This affair may be going by express in one sense," he grumbled to himself, "but it certainly isn't making very swift progress in the way I'd like to see it. A couple of Egyptian mummies could show more speed. Isn't New York the dickens of a town anyhow? Why, if she were living in Podunk and I drifted into town I could get myself invited to a church sociable or a straw ride or a picnic or something like that and get acquainted in no time."

Then Fate took a hand. They were riding uptown clinging to adjacent straps as usual when the train came to a sudden stop. A smell of smoke began to pervade the cars. In a moment the sense of uneasiness that always stirs a carful of subway passengers when the train stops between stations had increased to genuine alarm. Total strangers began to question one another; women and girls giggled and laughed nervously; everywhere people tried to peer out of the windows. It grew warmer and warmer in the packed cars. The air was breathless and stifling for the fans had stopped. Slowly the odor of smoke grew stronger. A woman fainted in the car where Culver and the girl were.

The crowd was panic-ripe and as usual there was the fool to start the panic. There were some blinding flashes of flame outside a car towards the head of the train. Somebody shouted "Fire!" and the stampede was on.

Just before it got under way however, Culver reached Miss Winton's side. She was white-faced and trembling but was doing her best to quiet a nervous woman in the seat before her. It seemed the most natural thing in the world for Culver to touch her shoulder and speak reassuringly and for her to accept his protection with a deep sense of relief. The rock-ribbed, New England social principles vanished before the curling wisps of smoke.

"What shall we do?" she asked quietly.

"Nothing just now except watch out for the crowd," he said. "I don't think there's any other danger."

Then the rush began. In an instant they were torn fron their straps and borne along in the stream of frantic men and women. Culver, protecting her from the buffeting as well as he could, waited until they were forced into the first vestibule and then swung her aside against one of the closed doors and stood before her, shielding her from the torrent of frightened humanity.

"We'll just wait here," he shouted, "until the rush is over. There's a whole lot more danger from that panic-stricken crowd than there is from the fire. The fire is probably just a short circuit up ahead somewhere."

The smoke grew denser and he had her kneel down to get the purer air. Once a fear-crazed Italian, striking savagely at the other passengers was sidetracked in the vestibule and Culver had his hands full for a moment to subdue him. He succeeded also in rescuing a little girl who stumbled and would have been trampled on if he had not snatched her from below the stamping feet. Miss Winton took charge of her and did her best to comfort her.

It was not long before the rush was past them, for their car was the fourth from the front of the train. Then they left the vestibule and followed along through the train in the wake of the crowd, doing what they could for those that had fallen and had been injured.

There was but little said between them as they slowly made their way the length of the train and then followed the other fleeing passengers along the tracks to the nearest station. There they pushed through the excited throng and gained the street as rapidly as possible.

"I'll call a taxi," said Culver.

"No, don't!" she begged. "I'd rather walk. It will do me good. It's only six blocks anyhow."

She was still white and shaky but as she walked along drawing deep lungfuls of the fresh air, the color returned to her cheeks and her nervousness slowly disappeared. Culver was delighted.

"You behaved like a brick," he said with enthusiasm.

"Thank you," she returned quietly. "I'm not sure what I would have done if you hadn't been there to help. I am deeply grateful to you."

Then she demonstrated that the social code was completely fractured.

"My name is Margaret Winton," she said. "What is yours?"

"George Culver," he told her, "and I've been wanting to know what yours was for a long time, and where you live."

She didn't even frown. "And I have felt that way about you," she said, "although perhaps not for so long. And I'll show you where I live." Shades of the Puritans!

He went with her to the door of her home but did not go in.

"May I call some evening when you are feeling more like yourself than you are now?" he asked.

She looked at him smilingly. "I'd love to have you," she said.

Culver was enveloped in a delightful haze and showed a disposition to linger.

"By the way," he said, "where do you work downtown?"

"In the Glidden building—fourth floor—Hayes and Campbell's office."

Culver's jaw dropped and he stared at her dumfounded.

"What's the matter?" she asked in alarm.

"Oh, nothing, nothing. Only my office happens to be right next to yours. The door is just around the corner in the same corridor—the Kalamazoo Carburetor Company's office. And here I've been trying for two months to get acquainted with you. When do you reach your office in the morning?"

"At eight-thirty. And my luncheon hour is from one to two. And I always use the back elevator."

"And I get there at nine, go out for luncheon from twelve to one and always use the front elevator."

He gazed meditatively into the distance.

"It certainly is some town where it takes a subway wreck to introduce next door neighbors!"

Five New Ways

To whiter, cleaner, safer teeth —all late discoveries

Dental science has been seeking ways to better tooth protection.

All old methods proved inadequate. Tooth troubles were constantly increasing. Very few escaped them. Beautiful teeth were seen less often than now.

Dental research found the causes, then evolved five new ways to correct them.

The chief enemy

The chief tooth enemy was found to be film—that viscous film you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays.

Food stains, etc., discolor it. Then it forms dingy coats. Tartar is based on film. Most teeth are thus clouded more or less.

Avoid Harmful Grit

Pepsodent curdles the film and removes it without harmful scouring. Its polishing agent is far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acids. It holds the acids in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Much left intact

Old ways of brushing left much of that film intact, to cloud the teeth and night and day threaten serious damage.

Two ways were found to fight that film. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it, and without any harmful scouring. Able authorities proved those methods effective. They were embodied in a tooth paste called Pepsodent, and dentists the world over began to urge its use.

Other essentials

Other effects were found necessary, and ways were discovered to bring them. All are now embodied in Pepsodent.

Pepsodent stimulates the salivary flow—Nature's great tooth-protector.

It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids, the cause of tooth decay.

It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits on teeth which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

It polishes the teeth so film less easily adheres.

Prettier teeth came to millions

One result is prettier teeth. You see them everywhere—teeth you envy, maybe. But that is only a sign of cleaner, safer teeth. Film-coats, acids and deposits are effectively combated.

Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

Cut out the coupon now.

Pepsodent PAT. OFF. REG. U.S.

The New-Day Dentifrice

A scientific film combatant, which whitens, cleans and protects the teeth without use of harmful grit. Now advised by leading dentists the world over.

1159

10-Day Tube Free

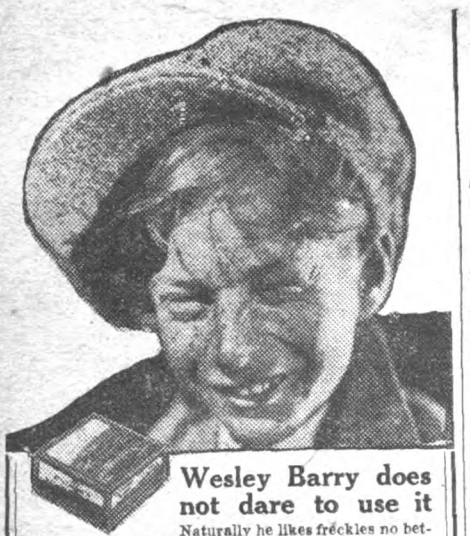
THE PEPSODENT COMPANY
Dept. 117, 1104 S. Wabash Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.

Mail 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent to

.....

.....

Only one tube to a family.



Hot-Weather Rules

1. Load lightly, and drive slowly.
2. Stop in the shade if possible.
3. A sponge on top of the head, or even a cloth, is good if kept wet. If dry it is worse than nothing.
4. Water your horse as often as possible. So long as a horse is working, water in small quantities will not hurt him. But let him drink only a few swallows if he is going to stand still.
5. When he comes in after work, sponge off the harness marks and sweat, his eyes, his nose and mouth, and the dock. Wash his feet but not his legs.
6. If the thermometer is 75 degrees or higher, wipe him all over with a damp sponge, using vinegar water if possible. Do not wash the horse at night.
7. Saturday night, give a bran mash, lukewarm; and add a tablespoonful of saltpeter.
8. Watch your horse. If he stops sweating suddenly, or if he breathes short and quick, or if his ears droop, or if he stands with his legs braced sideways, he is in danger of a heat or sunstroke and needs attention at once.
9. If the horse is overcome by heat, get him into the shade, remove harness and bridle, wash out his mouth, sponge him all over, shower his legs, and give him two ounces of aromatic spirits of ammonia, or two ounces of sweet spirits of nitre, in a pint of water; or give him a pint of coffee warm. Cool his head at once, using cold water, or, if necessary, chopped ice, wrapped in a cloth.
10. If the horse is off his feed, try him with two quarts of oats mixed with bran, and a little water; and add a little salt or sugar. Or give him oatmeal gruel or barley water to drink.
11. Clean your horse at night, so that he can rest well, and clean him thoroughly. The salt dandruff lying on his skin makes him uncomfortable, and often produces sores under the harness.
12. Do not fail to water him at night after he has eaten his hay. If you don't he will be thirsty all night.
13. If it is so hot that the horse sweats in the stable at night, tie him outside, with bedding under him. Unless he cools off during the night, he cannot well stand the next day's heat.

These Rules are prepared by the Boston Work-Horse Relief Association, whose office is at 15 Beacon Street, Boston, Mass. We also publish Stable Rules, Drivers' Rules, Winter Rules and Noon-Feeding Rules. Copies of any of these Rules will be sent free on application.

High Compliment to Judge, Anyhow

Tug has been acting rather queer of late, and it was decided to have him examined as to his sanity. Three doctors arrived, hurried to the Town Hall, stripped the man found there and, after a thorough examination, declared him sane. Leaving the hall, they bumped into Tug, who was being brought in, and were informed that the man they had just examined was the judge of probate. —Frazee (Minn.) Press.

Wesley Barry does not dare to use it

Naturally he likes freckles no better than anyone else. But he is afraid to use Stillman's Freckle Cream for fear the public won't know him without them!

Stillman's Freckle Cream

This famous cream causes freckles to fade gently away while you sleep, giving you a clear white complexion. Used the world over for 33 years. Cannot grow hair. Obtainable in 50c and $1 sizes at drug stores. Look for the purple and gold package. Write for free booklet, "Beauty Parlor Secrets." The Stillman Company, 59 Rosemary Lane, Aurora, Ill.

Write for "Beauty Parlor Secrets" and free perfume offer

Natural Curly Hair

FASHION today demands curls. To be in style, no matter what your age, you must have wavy, curly hair. A marvelous curling liquid transforms the straightest, dull, unruly hair into beautiful, soft, wavy natural curls in only a few moments time.

Just comb a few drops into your hair. In just a short time, straight, lifeless, unmanageable locks are lustrous, soft, wavy—naturally curling. Magical! Yes, because the soft, silken, sheen—the mass of natural curls—the permanent wave effect you've always yearned for and style demands, has come to stay. Stays in curl in hot or rainy weather. Prepared and GUARANTEED by a physician.

Special offer: To quickly introduce this marvelous curling liquid it is now being offered at a special low price. SEND NO MONEY—Just your name and address and a full $5.00 bottle will be sent you—postpaid. On arrival pay postman only $1.43 (no postage). If not satisfied, your money refunded.

SPECIAL OFFER!
$5 Bottle
ONLY $1.43
POSTPAID

Jeffrey Laboratories, Station D30, St. Joseph, Mo.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With Othine—Double Strength

This preparation for the treatment of freckles is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of Othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

GRAY OR FADED HAIR

Restored to its original color.

La Tulle's Herb Tea restores gray or faded hair to its natural color, beauty and softness. It will produce the most abundant tresses from dry, coarse and wiry hair. Prevents dandruff and falling hair. Promotes its growth and gives the hair a soft, glossy and healthy appearance. IT IS NOT A DYE. A package makes one pint. One package postpaid 30 cents, or five packages $1.

LA TULLE'S HERB CO., Dept. D,
1033 W. 39th Place,
LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

GRAY HAIR BANISHED

USE this wonderful new liquid preparation that is highly praised by foremost Fifth Avenue Beauty Salons.

HENALFA RAPIDE

Guaranteed to tint gray or faded hair any shade. Only one application needed. Takes less than five minutes to apply. No previous washing necessary. Will not stain the scalp nor rub off. Leaves hair soft and glossy. Not affected by washing. Every shade, Jet Black to Golden Brown. Sent anywhere for $2 postpaid.

B. Clement, 67 West 49th Street, New York, N.Y.
Consultation and booklet free

Cuticura Soap —IS IDEAL—
For the Hands

Soap, Ointment, Talcum, 25c. everywhere. For samples address: Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. D, Malden, Mass.

The Pretty Girls' Club

Conducted by Katherine Booth

Feeding Our Complexions

THE modern way of securing a bit of red in our cheeks has come to be a pilgrimage to the drugstore and the purchase of a tube of rouge, while if we want our skins clear and white, we reach for the powder puff and coat them heavily with the desired whiteness.

But that's really not the way to achieve beauty! And we can find the color we need, and the clarity of skin, right in the foods we eat, if we are only wise in their choice. Then, with that way of doctoring our complexions, we may be conscious that we have the real thing, instead of a very obvious camouflage, which has to be renewed many times a day.

When the spring and summer come, it is wise to cut out the concentrated foods which are meat, baked beans, and such heavy dishes. We do not need the same amount of heat-producing materials in our body as in the winter, for the sun is taking care of that job, now. We should eat foods which are rich in juices, such as fruit, and in minerals, such as vegetables.

To have a clear healthy skin, the pores must be active in throwing off all impurities, and for that reason we must drink plenty of water so that the heat of the summer which induces perspiration will have plenty of moisture to draw upon. Perspiration will wash out the pores and carry with it impurities which the body is lucky to get rid of.

It is a very good idea to take a certain amount of oil into the system if the elimination is not very free. There are various mineral oils on the market which can be taken daily to aid elimination, and in addition to these medicinal oils, it is wise to make a practice of including salad in one's menu at least once a day, with a French dressing made of three parts oil and one part vinegar with a little salt and paprika. One of the best lunches you could have during the summer is a big dish of tomato salad with chopped celery, and plenty of French dressing.

RAW CARROTS ARE GOOD FOR THE COMPLEXION.

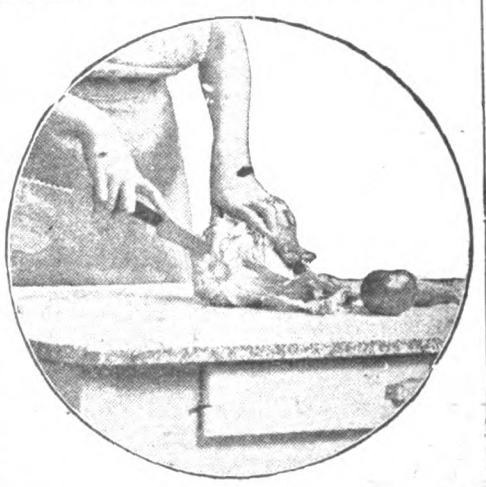
With this eat Graham crackers, buttered or plain, or some crisp slices of hot buttered toast. A dish of baked custard, blanc mange, berries, sliced peaches, or other fruit completes a very excellent meal.

See that carrots appear on your bill of fare very frequently, as they contain elements most desirable for a good complexion. Boil them in plenty of water, after scraping and slicing, and serve them very hot, chopped with butter and salt. Or heat them in a cream sauce, or add a few cooked carrots or some peas left from a previous meal. A serving of carrots, a little boiled rice with butter, Graham or bran bread or muffins, a small helping of salad of some kind, such as lettuce with French dressing, combination salad of odds and ends of vegetables served on lettuce, sliced cucumbers, etc. make a perfectly good meal.

Raw carrots, if scraped, then chewed until liquid, are good for the system. Tomatoes, unless one has an acid stomach, are excellent. Lettuce is rich in minerals the body requires. If one is over weight, a diet of such vegetables will help to rid the body of stored up fat; if one is thin, it must be supplemented by plenty of good bread and butter, preferably whole wheat, by a glass of milk before each meal, by a baked potato or a helping of boiled rice.

Fresh fruits, for the fat, should be eaten without cream and sugar, as strawberries, peaches, cherries, etc; while the thin should add cream and sugar to fruit that assimilates it, such as berries. Eat plenty of apples, always one before going to bed. Melons are excellent for both fat and thin, as their large proportion of liquid is excellent for digestive conditions.

Bathe thoroughly daily, of course, thus expanding and cleansing the pores. And look to the eliminative system. Regular habits of elimination must be formed if you are to have the skin you crave. Fruits, vegetables, plenty of water, all will make it easy to form such habits, on the permanence of which your chance of beauty really depends. So get out your market basket and hie you to the vegetable garden or the vegetable market, and see that you make such a visit daily!



Questions and Answers

KANSAS.—So sorry that the rules of this department prevent answering by mail. As to the effect of a permanent wave, I am told by beauty operators that a certain amount of the hair is broken and combed out; that the treatment is the same as is given to hair before being made up in switches and that in this process they expect quite a per cent. to be broken off. I have many friends who have had their hair permanently waved and who feel it a convenience. They face the loss of a portion of their hair each time—for it has to be renewed, as of course you know—with equanimity. For myself, I regard hair as too difficult to grow to be willing to part with any of it. The treatment of course removes the natural oil of the hair. Its advantages are that it retains its waved appearance for something like six months; its disadvantages that it breaks the hair and causes you to lose a portion of it.

TENNESSEE.—It would be difficult for you to use an electric needle yourself. The operators who give electrolysis wear a magnifying glass over the eyes of great strength so that the little opening through which the hair comes is magnified many times. With this clear sight they carefully insert the needle in the opening and press it down to the very root, holding it a moment while the electricity burns the root. Then they withdraw the needle with equal care. An unskilled operator can scar your face badly. I should not recommend your doing this yourself, and I do not know of any other application of electricity which will kill hair or do anything else but stimulate it. I cannot express an opinion of the article about which you inquire. The ammonia you have purchased may be very strong and require slight dilution before using on the face. Try it on your leg first, to test its strength. Use the ammonia every other day if you do not use the peroxide, but the latter is desirable. It not only bleaches but dries, as you can see if you have ever noticed anybody's hair who has tried to bleach it by peroxide. I should use the two liquids alternately.

LENA.—Sorry not to answer the letter by mail, but rules are rules! You need general attention—that is careful attention to diet, to your bowels, to exercise; for the brown spots and the dark rings under the eyes, the "tired look", etc., are all the result of being below par in health and strength. You must make a real job of getting well and strong. First, drink eight to ten glasses of water a day—that is an easy task to set you, but one that is quite essential to your good health. Next eat only at meals, but be careful to chew each mouthful of food until it is actually liquid before you swallow it—that, too, you can do, and those two things—the water and the mastication—will mean a great deal to your looks and your feelings. Next, exercise daily. It may be that you get a certain amount of outdoor exercise. If not, then make up your mind to spend at least an hour outdoors each day. Take long brisk walks, or play games like tennis, ball, etc. Swim, if you have the opportunity; in fact take all forms of outdoor exercise. The games may not be possible for you, but walking always is. Indoors, exercise for fifteen minutes when you first rise, and another fifteen minutes before you go to bed, with fresh air in the room, and loose clothing on, such as a union suit. Any or all of the exercises given in this column from time to time, will be good for you, for you need all-round exercise. Then, last but most important, choose your food with the idea of building up your health and strength. Your eyes look tired because your body has not sufficient energy. You can only give it energy by feeding it energy-producing foods. Fried foods, such as fried meats, potatoes, eggs, etc., are difficult to digest. They require many hours' more work of your stomach and do not give you the same nourishment as if cooked in any other way, so for that reason avoid them. It is just as easy to broil or roast meat as to fry it, just as easy to bake or boil potatoes as to fry them, just as easy to poach or soft-boil an egg as to fry it. Foods that will build you up are eggs, milk, cream, butter, white or whole wheat bread, fresh vegetables, fish, fruits. For breakfast, eat fruit first: If you cannot get fresh fruit like berries, melons, apples, oranges, you can eat stewed prunes, stewed dried apricots, apple sauce, etc. Dried fruits, like prunes or apricots, should be washed, then soaked all night in plenty of water so that the moisture that was taken out of them by drying may be restored to them before cooking. This makes them swell up to double their size, whereas if they are cooked without soaking they remain small in size. A good dish of stewed prunes, cooked without sugar, is an excellent thing for you, and even if you do not eat it every morning, which would not be a bad idea, you should see that you have prunes at least twice a week. After the fruit in the morning, eat a good dish of cereal, such as oatmeal cooked until it is soft and delicious, or cream of wheat, or any of the uncooked cereals With this eat cream or milk, and drink a glass of milk. Toasted bread with butter is good for you and may be eaten with two soft-boiled or poached eggs. Eggs which are not soft are difficult of digestion and overwork your stomach while failing to give you the right amount of nourishment. A good way to cook eggs is to have water boiling, then put in your eggs and set on the shelf of the stove away from the fire. It takes from six to eight minutes to cook an egg soft in this way, but it will be jellied all through and most digestible. A breakfast such as I have outlined above is full of nourishment, if you will chew each mouthful thoroughly. Do not drink when you have food in your mouth, and cut out all coffee and tea. If you have trouble with constipation, that is the first thing to get at—not with cathartics, but with proper foods and with exercise. Potatoes and white bread are apt to be constipating if you are inclined that way, so in that case omit them from your diet for a time. If you aren't constipated, then eat potatoes to build up flesh, and bread for the same reason. Eat spinach or other greens when you can get them, but do not cook them with meat. Cook them in a very small amount of water, until they are tender, then drain, chop, add salt and butter. Read what I say in our opening talk this month about salads, and try to add salad to your menu. Don't eat pies, and not too much sweet stuff, for that may be your trouble—you may have been eating too many sweets and so your digestion got out of order. Your bowels should move not less than once a day most freely, and it would be better if they moved three times a day. Form the habit of attending to this the first thing in the morning, say ten minutes after your exercises, then again the last thing at night, and some other convenient time during the day. It may take a little time to form the habit, but with plenty of water, fruit, vegetables, and exercise, they will before long straighten themselves out.

LASSIE OF THE PRAIRIES.—The first thing for you to do is to try to gain a little in weight. This will dispose of the wrinkles under your eyes by padding out the skin. Eat fresh berries with cream for breakfast, then cereal with cream, buttered toast, softboiled eggs. See that pototaes or rice form part of at least one meal, the potatoes boiled or baked, preferably the latter. Eat plenty of white bread and butter or whole wheat bread. Drink milk before your breakfast, in the middle of the afternoon, and before going to bed. Get plenty of sleep. At your age, sleep is very essential. You should get not less than nine hours, and ten wouldn't hurt you. Be sure there is fresh air in your sleeping-room. Bathe the entire body daily, for the facial skin depends just as much on the treatment of the body skin as on anything you do for it alone. The blackheads in your nose can be pressed out just as on any other part of the face. Take a soft handkerchief and put one end over your left forefinger, one over the right forefinger, then press the blackhead out with the two forefingers. First, however, before you try to remove blackheads, bathe the face well, and massage for five or ten minutes with fingers dipped in cold cream. This will loosen the blackheads so they will respond more easily to pressure. then you bathe the entire body give it a good rubbing with a Turkish bath towel, to stimulate skin action. When you bathe the face at night, be sure that it is thoroughly clean before you begin to rinse, then use hot water on the face by dipping Turkish wash-cloths in the water and laying folded on the face, pressing them close to the skin, one folded over the upper part of the face, the other over the lower part of the face. This will steam the pores open. Look at the skin after this and see if there is any dirt in any of the pores, if so press it out. Then rinse again in warm water, and finally dash cold water on the face over and over to shock the skin and close the pores. In the morning use only tepid water to wash the face. Do not use hot water on the face except at night in the way I have directed. Any little soil in the daytime can be wiped off with a bit of cotton dipped in cold cream, but be sure the face is not left greasy after this—every bit of cold cream should be carefully wiped off. Don't irritate your face by the pressing out of blackheads. The massage first should loosen them, and as soon as they are out, touch the spot with a little peroxide or boric acid solution. As to the freckles, I should let them alone. You will probably outgrow them. As to the eyelashes, do not rub them, for this makes hairs drop out. Instead, as soon as you rise, bathe them gently, then use a boric acid solution which you can get at your drug store, and an eyecup which you can buy at the same place. Half fill the eyecup with the boric acid, bend your head forward and fit your eye into the little cup, then throw the head back quickly and keeping the eyecup pressed firmly in place, and wink the eyelashes. This will wash the eye out and do away with the accumulations you refer to. Wash the eyes again before you go to bed. By the way, if you want to gain, one good way is to eat a dish of rice with sugar and cream just before retiring. Try it. About the finger nails, have a little nail brush at hand. Soak one hand in warm water in which you have dissolved enough soap to make it milky in appearance. After a minute or two, remove the hand and brush the nails, then with an orange-wood stick gently cleanse under the nail. Do not use a steel nail cleaner or a knife as this hurts the nail and makes it more and more difficult to clean. You can buy an orange-wood stick at your druggist's. Use the flatter end for cleaning. Do not push the stick way down under the nail, but use the edge to gently coax out the dirt. Shape the nail with a nail file. Use a hand lotion to keep your hands soft, and rub a little vaseline into your nails each night, and especially under the nail and around the base of the nail. Have a good hand lotion, though any of the honey and almond preparations which your druggist carries would be good for you:

PREPARING SALAD IS A BIG STEP TOWARD BEAUTY.

To Keep the Hands White

Orange-flower water, two ounces; rosewater, two ounces; borate of soda (borax), one-quarter drachm; spirits of benzoin, one-half dram; bruised almonds, one-half ounce.

Add the almonds to the rosewater and orange-flower water, and shake well, let stand 24 hours, then add the soda, after straining, shake until dissolved, then add the benzoin a drop at a time, constantly shaking the mixture gently.

Address all letters containing questions to KATHERINE BOOTH, care COMFORT,
AUGUSTA, MAINE.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 5.)

WEST VIRGINIA.

DEAR MRS WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I have been a reader of COMFORT for a number of years and have often wanted to write but my love would fall me.

I want to tell you of my trouble When I was a very young girl I met a man I thought I loved and I knew he loved me He finally won me from my innocent ignorant girlhood to a closer relationship with him. Later we quarreled and parted. Several years after I met a man I really loved and we were married. I did not tell him of my past. He knew this man as I had been close friends. He told me, after we were married, that if he ever found out that I had not been loyal to myself he would leave me If I were dying, I think he would.

We have two children. What I want to know is this—must I tell my husband and cause our home to be broken up and my children homeless or must I go on and suffer in mind as I have these years. I don't say I should have told him before we were married. I know I should have but I could not do so.

Mothers, don't hesitate to tell your daughters all they should know. My mother let me learn everything from children older.

I wish the brothers would tell me what they would do if their wives were such as I. I am a true wife and my husband and I have never spoken an unkind word to each other.—MRS. B.

RICHMOND HILL, 5301 METROPOLITAN AVE. L. I.

DEAR SISTER WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

Not knowing of anything the sisters might be interested in I've just sat back and enjoyed every letter that has been in our paper for the past fifteen years. But now I must speak of two letters that appeared in the February issue; one from Mrs. McVey whose husband is so perfect that all he lacks is wings and the other I should judge, from a romantic school girl, Ruby Nelson, whose ideals are a little too high for this age. I do hope she gets a husband of some sort so she will not have to remain a spinster all her days.

At one time I thought of ideals, but mine had to be tall, dark and handsome and have a profession and I positively abhorred a man who smoked or drank a when I did consent to marry my short blond husband man, I made him give up smoking as that was his one bad habit. He did this for me but made himself very miserable. Now, sisters, I married my husband to make him happy and have never regretted it one bit years of my marriage that I started my husband smoking just as soon as I noticed that he really wanted to. He is no better than the average man and as we have no children we can notice each other's faults and how a social tiff now and then but it never amounts to much. For the woman who is always singing hubby's praises I wish to tell of a woman I knew who was constantly bragging about how well she and her George got on together. They never had a cross word, so she said, in thirteen years. Unexpectedly one afternoon I was in her neighborhood and dropped in to pay her a visit. Her young son met me on the porch and when I asked how his Mother and Daddy were he replied, "The policeman took Daddy 'cause he hit Mother and Mother's sick in bed." I could never forgive a man.

MRS. J. OSBORN.

SOMEWHERE IN WEST VIRGINIA.

DEAR MRS WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

Just as sure as COMFORT comes each month I read it and mentally resolve to join in the letter fun, but backslide until another month. Now I have courage to the writing point.

Ruby Nelson has certainly introduced a live subject for discussion which is good, for some of the old ones were worn threadbare.

First let us each be truly thankful that we are not the husbands, for they will feel quite small when they realize they are not the ideal of the gentle Mrs. Hemans.

Really, Friend Ruby, I am inclined to think you do not need a husband at all but a couple of hundred pounds of modeling clay to mould into your ideal husband whom you have described as quite perfect. I do not believe perfect men (or women) exist, if they do I have never seen one, and I am forty-six years old and have met quite a number of people in that time.

Here is my ideal. First, he must be 100 per cent. American, tall and well proportioned. He must be kind, loving, sympathetic, true to himself and family, honest, brave and all that is good and upright.

I have been married twenty-one years and though my husband is not what is called a Christian, he is far above the average husband. We do not always agree

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 13.)

GENUINE DIAMOND
MOUNTED IN SETTING OF 18-K WHITE GOLD

This is not a Diamond "Chip" but a genuine cut sparkling Diamond mounted in a beautiful 18 K Solid White Gold Setting (see picture). We import Diamonds direct, pay no salesman's commissions and that is why we give such wonderful value for only $12.60.

SEND NO MONEY

Send your name and address and one reference and finger size. We will send Ring by Parcel Post Collect. Pay Postman $12.60 and if after wearing Ring 5 days, you do not want it, return it and we will cheerfully refund your money. Our Money Back Guarantee Protects You.
ELITE JEWELRY CO., 68 NASSAU STREET, NEW YORK

KNITTING WOOLS
Send for 330 FREE SAMPLES
Colonial Yarn House
1231-C Cherry St., Phila, Pa.

Clear Your Skin

Your skin can be quickly cleared of Pimples, Blackheads, Acne Eruptions on the face or body, Rashes, Itch, Eczema, Enlarged Pores, Oily or Shiny Skin.

FREE Write today for my FREE Booklet "CLEAR-TONE SKIN," telling how I cured myself after being afflicted for 15 years.

$1000 Cash says I can clear your skin of the above troubles.
E. S. GIVENS, 306 Chemical Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

19¢ per oz. Skein

Sicilian Floss — beautiful silk and wool Peace Dale yarn. Smart sweaters, etc., for Fall and Winter take about 5-7 oz. Newest colors. Send for 10c for samples different yarns. Peace Dale Mills, Dept. 1297, 18 Madison Av., N. Y.

FRECKLES fade and disappear when you use "MURILLO" SUPREME FRECKLE CREAM a sure remedy. Let us prove it. Send 10c for trial package and three other beauty preparations. MURILLO CHEM. CO., Dept. 10, Aurora, Ill.

Through the columns of this department our Doctor's advice regarding maternity and child welfare will be given free in answer to questions by our subscribers. Address Mother and Baby Department, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and be sure to give your full name and address. Names will not be published.

Feeding Baby—Continued

IN our last month's talk we offered some suggestions in regard to feeding baby. The cream-and-water formula given can be used up until the fourth week, then I should use milk, two ounces; water, four ounces; lime-water, one tablespoonful; sugar of milk, one teaspoonful.

Keep increasing the amount of milk, until at the sixth month the baby is taking as much milk as water; for example, milk, three ounces; water, three ounces; lime-water two tablespoonfuls; sugar of milk, one teaspoonful.

Much has been said for and against lime-water for babies, but I thoroughly believe in it and think it has a good effect on the bones and teeth, also it is an alkali and overcomes the tendency to acidity that curdles the milk and causes vomiting.

Go to a competent dentist with a baby whose teeth are decaying, even the milk teeth becoming black and decayed, and he will tell you the cause is nearly always an acid mouth that destroys the enamel.

To make lime-water you can get the tablets at the drugstore with directions of how many to put in a pint of water, or you can take a piece of unslaked lime the size of an egg and put it into two quarts of cold water that has been boiled, stir thoroughly, allow it to settle, then pour off the clear portion for use, add more water to the jar, keep it covered and it can be used until the lime has been all taken up.

In preparing food for baby, wash your hands clean; the pitcher, spoon, and eight ounce graduate should be boiled before using.

In many cases where they report that the food or milk does not agree with baby the reason it does not, is because it has been carelessly prepared.

By a teaspoonful of sugar we mean a level teaspoonful, using a knife for the leveling.

The following formulas have worked well in a great many cases, using whole milk, not top milk, beginning on third day, three-hour schedule;

FIRST WEEK, three ounces of milk; water, ten ounces (cold, that has been boiled); one-half ounce of lime-water; two teaspoonfuls of sugar of milk; five one and one-half ounce feedings every three hours through the day and one night feeding.

SECOND WEEK, five ounces of milk; ten ounces of water; one ounce of lime-water; two teaspoonfuls of sugar of milk.

THIRD WEEK, seven ounces of milk; eleven ounces of water; one ounce of lime-water; one tablespoonful of sugar of milk.

FOURTH TO EIGHTH WEEK, increase milk one ounce each week, and water one-half ounce.

EIGHTH TO TWELFTH WEEK, twelve ounces of milk; thirteen ounces of water; one tablespoonful of sugar of milk, and one ounce of lime-water; give three ounces at a feeding.

THIRD MONTH, sixteen ounces of milk; sixteen ounces of water; two ounces of lime-water; two tablespoonfuls of sugar of milk. Omit night feeding and give four ounces at a feeding.

THIRD TO SIXTH MONTH, increase at the rate of one and one-half ounces of milk each week; the amounts of lime-water and sugar of milk increase amount of each feeding until six ounces are taken at each feeding.

In these last formulas whole milk is used, but if the mother prefers she can use top milk, but if she does she will have to dilute it more; for example, first week; top milk two ounces, or whole milk three, with same amount of water, ten ounces.

THIRD MONTH, top milk, eleven ounces; water, twenty-one ounces, or sixteen ounces whole milk to sixteen ounces of water. Whole milk is where the milk and cream are poured into the pitcher from the bottle, then back into the bottle.

Top milk is where the first six ounces are poured off, or from the bottle.

In feeding a baby modified milk or any kind of prepared food, the most important thing to remember is to prevent indigestion. Use a formula that is weak enough to assure no risk in that respect; this is the only safe way to proceed, as a weak mixture can always be made stronger when the growth of the baby requires it.

The sturdiness of the baby and the strength of its digestion decides what is necessary for its needs. The strong well-cared-for baby will require a much stronger mixture than a less hardy one or one that has had an attack of indigestion.

Lack of caution may not always make a baby ill, but carelessness can very soon be detected by the results that will show.

If the baby vomits you may be certain that the food is not right in some respect, and the thing to do is to prepare some more food, weaker than the formula you are using and then gradually work up to the proper food by degrees.

Make a practice of testing the food before giving it to baby as you can often detect that it is too hot or too cold, sour, etc.

Underfeeding is brought to your attention by the bottle fed baby crying before the next feeding is due; overfeeding is detected by vomiting, restless sleep; loose bowels also indicate too much or too strong food.

Subject for next month's talk, Summer Diseases of Babies.

Questions and Answers

VOMITING OF PREGNANCY.—I would like to know what to do for vomiting during pregnancy as I start in vomiting about the sixth week, and vomit until the fourth month, cannot even keep water down.

"Mother to be."

A.—Vomiting of pregnancy is sometimes an obstinate symptom to relieve, but as it is usually a sympathetic reflex act, the patient should avoid all excitement possible, sexual and otherwise.

Keep the bowels freely open with teaspoonful doses of Fluid Extract of Cascara Sagrada, and do not try to eat any but the most simple foods.

Teaspoonful of dehydrated magnesia, dissolved in one-half glass of cold water and drunk slowly often gives relief, or equal parts of vichy water and milk, taken two or three times a day for nourishment may prove effective.

An abdominal binder, with slight upward and inward pressure often acts as a cure.

PIMPLES.—SUMMER DIARRHŒA.—My 13 months old baby that I am nursing has a great many pimples on her face and forehead, what can I do for them? What is the cause of summer diarrhœa?

Mrs. D. S., Campbell, N. C.

A.—You should wean baby at once, as without doubt the milk does not agree with baby. A baby should be weaned at the eleventh month, and her diet should consist largely of cow's milk, with tablespoonful of lime-water to each feeding, also teaspoonful doses of milk of magnesia often enough to keep bowels open.

You can give baby coddled eggs, baked potato, custards, cooked cereals, toast, molasses cookies, graham crackers, orange juice.

Think if you get the digestion in normal condition the pimples will vanish.

A common cause of summer diarrhœa is teething, but it is often caused by uncooked berries, or food that has not been properly prepared, or properly taken care of during the hot weather.

COLITIS.—Will you tell me what mucous colitis is in infants, also a remedy?

Mrs. A. P., Tekamah, Nebraska.

A.—Colitis is an inflammation of the mucous membrane lining of the colon, one of the large intestines, and is a disease of babies rather than older children. There is a great fullness, or distention of abodmen, diarrhœa, with mucous and blood in the stools, great prostration, and exhaustion and baby becomes very weak.

If you suspect that your baby has colitis, give baby a teaspoonful of castor oil and send for a physician. A mother could not treat the case, therefore I do not think it best to suggest remedies.

WORKING DURING PREGNANCY.—I am four months pregnant and wish to know if it hurts me to work in yard and garden during the cool of the mornings?

Mrs. P. H., Elcaney, Texas.

A.—No, but do not get too tired, or do any heavy lifting.

TUBERCULOSIS.—I have had tuberculosis for two years. Should I nurse my baby that is coming, also what can I do for leucorrhœa?

Mrs. R. M., Sebrie, Ky.

A.—No, you should not nurse baby. For the leucorrhœa, build up your health all you can with outdoor living, careful diet, and bathe yourself with boric acid, two teaspoonfuls to quart of warm water.

CHLOSMA.—My baby girl twenty-two months old has chlosma, on both cheeks, forehead and on body, and am writing to see if you can suggest a cure, or ab leach that will keep it off the face.

Mrs. J. A J., Bridgeport, Ohio.
Mrs. T. G., Dakota, please read.

A.—Get your druggist to put up the following recipe: Hydrargyri Chloridi, Corrosive, six grains; Acidi Acetici, Dil., two drams; Boracic Acid, Powd, sixty grains; Aquæ Rosæ, add to four ounces. Put on poison label. Apply on spots with sterile cotton, night and morning.

SWELLING OF FEET, DATE OF DELIVERY.—Is there anything that I can do to stop the swelling of my hands and feet during pregnancy?

When should I expect my baby, the last day of last menstruation, being Feb. 1st?

Mrs. T. G., Thone, No. Dak.

A.—Without much doubt you should have the urine examined, as swelling of the feet during pregnancy, without varicose veins is a suspicious symptom.

If this is not possible, go on to a milk diet, keep bowels regular with frequent doses of milk of magnesia, also take night and morning a teaspoonful of cream of tartar in glass of water. It would be good judgment to take a sample of the urine to your physician for an examination.

Your baby should arrive Nov. 8th.

MENSTRUATION DURING PREGNANCY.—Does menstruation ever occur during pregnancy and does it prove harmful? Mrs. J. L. R., Pauls Valley, Okla.

A.—Yes, it does, but very rarely, and I have never known of any harm to come from it.

CONSTIPATION.—Is there anything I can do for a seven-year-old girl who is constipated, aside from medicine, Mrs L. M., Navarino, Wis.

A.—Yes, fruit, bran muffins, or the different cereals made from bran, molasses cookies, also get her in the habit of going to the toilet at a certain time.

AUTOMOBILE RIDING —I am an expectant mother and wish to know if it would hurt me to ride sixty miles in an automobile, two or three weeks before baby comes.

Mrs. F. F., Dawsonville, Ga.

A.—No, if the roads are not too rough, and the car is driven carefully.

WEANING BABY.—When should I wean my nine-months-old baby, and what should I feed her? She has eight teeth. Mrs. A. A., Hastings, Neb.

Mrs. S. D. C., Bluff City, Tenn.

A.—Wean her when she is eleven months old, and her diet should consist of cow's milk coddled eggs, baked potato, cooked cereals, custards, toast, and orange juice.

Should teach baby to drink her milk out of a glass, as it lessens the danger from the care of bottles and nipples.

BLOODY STOOLS.—Can you tell me the trouble with my three-year-old boy who for about a year has been passing blood in his stools? He is a large healthy boy, bowels move regularly, never seems to be in pain, but at times there will be a teaspoonful of blood in a movement of the bowels.

Mrs. M. P., Florence, Col.

A.—Without an examination, or knowing previous history this case seems confusing. If the blood is passed after the bowels move, with history of constipation, would suspect that your boy has inflamed rectal veins, often called "bleeding piles." This condition would be relieved by inserting in the rectum an Iodex suppository after each movement.

If the blood comes mixed with the stool, you may have a chronic colitis, and for this would give Elix Lactated Pepsin, and Liq Bismuth, half teaspoonful of each, in water, three times a day.

Have your druggist put up the following: Elix Lactated Pepsin, two ounces; Liq. Bismuth, two ounces, and give one teaspoonful of mixture in water three times a day.

If your boy does not respond to this treatment at once, take him to a physician for an examination, for while he may seem healthy, losing this amount of blood weakens.

SMALL PELVIS.—I am an expectant mother and nearly lost my life when my first baby was born due to small pelvic bones. Am quite stout. What would you advise me to do? "Kansas".

A.—Should advise you to go to the nearest hospital, and if labor was delayed beyond a reasonable length of time, should have a Cæsarean Section operation, which is not dangerous to either mother or child.

BABY SHOULD BE WEANED.—My seventeen-months-old baby is growing tall and slim and her muscles are soft and flabby. She is still nursing at the breast and I have an abundance of milk for her. Please tell me what to do for her. Mary Ebrosson.

A.—We advise weaning baby at once. For the first year if the mother is healthy, milk from the breast is an ideal food, but after that it does not contain the elements of food that a baby needs, and by that time the teeth have come and the baby can eat food. Would suggest that you give baby about one quart of cow's milk during the 24 hours, also give baked potato, coddled eggs, custards, cooked cereals, and cooked vegetables cautiously.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12.)

on everything, far from it. But I think we each have a right to our own opinion. Do not misunderstand me. I believe we all should be Christians but I fear we all fall short of what is meant by the word Christian. How I should like to see those paragons of sweetness who say their husbands never gave them a cross word. I sometimes wonder if it is true and why. Something tells me it is because she "beats him to it," for there are women who have it fairly understood that she gives and he takes.

I believe the fifty-fifty rule in a home is a very good one.

Sisters, would we like to have our husbands tear us into shreds through COMFORT and describe his ideal, which might happen to be a neighbor of whom we are not particularly fond. Suppose I am a narrow-minded egotistical, ugly, sour-faced creature and he should tell all that and more. I believe we married folks would be much happier if we were not so stingy with our love. I married for love and I love my husband just as much, more perhaps, than I did when we were married and enjoy the pet names and little foolish "nothings" sweethearts say when courting. We could improve ourselves if we would live up to our ideals of a wife.

As to the pin-money question, I have not much to say on the subject for I usually have enough so that I do not have to put my hand in his pocket while I say my prayers by the bedside (his pants hang on the post of the bed.) I heard of one woman who did that.

Now if I have not made my ideal husband plain to you I will describe him as I see him sitting across the table from me, writing letters to our daughters who are in school,—just as I see him tonight after twenty-one years of ups and downs. American, six feet, two inches tall, wavy brown hair, touched with grey, brown eyes, the kind you can see worlds of love in, pleasant features, kind hearted, quick tempered, loves his home and family, nature, music, reading, animals and, as I see him, he looks good to me. Of course you would like to know how I look but you will all be welcome to come and see.

Wishing you happiness with your ideals.

MRS. B. B. Mc.

WABASH, INDIANA.

GOOD-MORNING, COMFORT FRIENDS:

Ruby Nelson you are to blame for this letter. I just can't keep still any longer.

I would have my ideal husband to be a God-fearing kindly man and clean in all personal habits, one who enjoys reading the Bible and all good books. I would also want him to be a pal and love me always, not a boss as most husbands are which makes the wife feel like a piece of property. He would have to be near my age or younger. Never again would I marry a man much my senior It never seemed, only during the honeymoon, which was a week, that he was my apl and husband, but my father. So many say, never marry a man younger than yourself. I say you are a lucky woman if you do. My brother and some of my friends married women older than themselves and the women are better off than if they had married older men. I have heard it said, "Better an old man's darling than a young man's slave," but I would reverse that saying. I ask this question? Can a woman love a man who hasn't any respect for her, before her children or friends and who subjects her to the most embarrassing things? I say no. Love and home, to my jolly folks, not silly ones. I do. You will understand why I do after living with a grouch for twenty years. Some say that a woman can't be decent and jolly at the same time but I know better. I can tell by talking once with a man or woman whether I must be careful of what I say. More often the educated man or woman is least to be feared. I find that the most suspicious people are the ones who read little and as a consequence know but little. I find also that the man who caresses children the least, loves his own little ones best but all women who love children love their own the more devotedly.

Don't you think the letters in the February issue were interesting? Where one sister has a fault I find she makes it up by having some other good quality. None of us are without them. To the sister who sent her most comforting verse I will say that mine for everyday use is this:

"Grandma says in her own sweet way,
This world wasn't made in a day, in a day,
Now don't you worry and don't you fret,
Cheer up, Honey, you'll get there yet."

The sisters' letters were a great help to me after God took our darling baby girl, four years ago. Those who have gone through it can understand. Those who haven't cannot possibly do so. "God bless the mothers." Being a mother is the dearest, hardest job on earth. It shouldn't be the hardest if the home is what it should be.

If Maggie Duggins still takes COMFORT I wish she would write to me. She was once a dear, good neighbor.

I wonder what the COMFORT brothers, the ones who are real men, want their ideal wife to be. Let's hear from them. I believe in justice both ways for I'm sure the wife is as much to blame, in many unhappy homes, as the husband.

I am the mother of seven children, one boy and four girls living. I am thirty-three years of age, and though in poor health I am as young at heart as I was when I was sixteen. I enjoy the company of my children.

COMFORT sisters, I love you all but I must admit that those possessing even a wee bit of Irish blood seem nearer.

Kindly thoughts to one and all, MRS. K.

YAMHILL, OREGON.

DEAR SISTERS:

May I come in? I believe I am the first one from Oregon to enter, or, at least, I have not read any letters from here.

I have light hair, blue eyes, fair complexion and am five feet, five inches tall, weigh 113 pounds and am twenty-five years of age.

I live on a rented farm and most of our money is made in prunes when there are lots of them and they bring a good price. We have ten acres of them. How many like a farm? Don't all speak at once. Of course it makes a difference if you have always lived on one. Such has been the case with me and I like it. I like to work out of doors and sometimes my husband and I exchange work. If it is something easy I can do outside, then he comes in and does the housework and he's as neat as any woman. We have a dear little boy, one year old, and he cries after his daddy most of the time. His name is Neil Normand. Am sending his picture and hope to see it in COMFORT. He has been walking since he was ten months old and says several words. He has never seen a sick day.

NEIL NORMAND.

Sisters, did you ever try making baby's rompers out of sugar sacks? Dye them any color you like. I dyed mine orange and made it with a little yoke, then buttonhole stitched it around with black yarn. Did the collar, cuffs, pocket and bottom of legs the same way and it really looked like crepe cloth. I dyed two sacks for this suit but think it could be made from one if care was used in cutting, but it is always best to have plenty. This would be a nice Christmas gift for any little baby. Sacks dyed a pale shade of pink or blue make pretty combination suits.

Can anyone tell me what will keep my silver ware from turning dark? I have polished it several times and wrapped it in tissue paper or a soft cloth but when left for a few days it turns dark.

I must not stay much longer or Mrs. Wilkinson won't let me in again but before I go I must say that I enjoy the COMFORT paper very much, especially the sisters' letters and the baby pictures for I am a lover of babies.

Love to all, MRS. BERTHA JONES.

FRESNO, CALIF.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I have had COMFORT since I was a girl at home and the entire family look forward to its coming.

We raise grapes and peaches of all kinds and, of course, all other kinds of fruit, but raisins and dried peaches, as well as clingstone canning peaches, are the main product of this community.

There is beautiful scenery in the San Joaquin valley. The Sierra Nevada Mountains are east of us and can be reached by an hour's or so drive by automobile. The coast range on the west, with the beaches of Los Angeles, San Francisco and Santa Cruz, can be made in one day. The two National Forests, summer resorts, lakes and many beauty spots can be made from home and back again in one day with plenty of time for fun. Yosemite and the big trees are near, so hot summer days find us off to the mountains with well-filled lunch baskets.

This is the country of automobiles. Horse-drawn vehicles are seldom seen. The auto truck and tractors are fast making the horse a thing of the past. The very poorest have some kind of an automobile and more than one automobile on the average farm is nothing at all.

I am interested in Ruby Nelson's discussion of Ideal Husbands. Of course we will differ as to the ideal, but it seems to me her ideal is surely a "dream man" and not to be found in this mass of human beings.

I am a young married woman, twenty-seven years of age. Have been married seven years to an ideal husband, although he has his faults along with the rest of us. We have two little boys, six and four years of age, and our home life is a happy one.

It seems to me that much rests upon the wives of these ideal husbands. We can't expect them to stay "ideal" if we try their good humor and dispositions by our own shortcomings. We can't expect them to be ideal when they come in and there is no dinner ready, clothes never mended, and the wives away from home most of the time. We can't expect kisses and smiles then. We should try and meet them half way by being an ideal wife and then companionship will be more liable to be in our lives. The best of them will have their own habits. My ideal is a good, honest, clean man, morally and spiritually, as well as a home-loving man who enjoys his family at home or any other place. A man who enjoys church and other good activities with them. I believe a man who can help with the housework sometimes but not at the expense of his own work, which is our bread and butter. I don't want a man to do my share of the housework for me. I enjoy my housework. Of course, it isn't as heavy as many mothers have to do, but I find real pleasure in my work. I am not a crank on housework though I want everything in order and clean but if I want to go with hubby in the auto I can leave my work and not worry about it for when I get back I can go at it with vigor and feel the better for the rest. I drive the car myself and go much through the day. Anyone misses much by not learning to drive. Reading is a good pastime but I don't put it down against anyone if they prefer other recreations. A NATIVE DAUGHTER.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 16.)

Do you want Mary Ann?

She is just a big, fine, darling doll every girl's heart is hungry for. Mary Ann will come to you without costing one cent. She wants a mother to walk with her, sing to her when she cries, rock her to sleep.

Mary Ann Can Walk—Cry Sleep—Wink

Her brown hair is soft and silky. Jointed arms and legs, bright blue eyes that sleep. Cries when you lay her down or take her up. Unbreakable head, eyes won't jar loose. Cute silk cap, pretty figured lawn dress, stockings, patent leather slippers.

She is YOURS for doing me a little favor I will send a Mary Ann doll just as described above in return for a small favor. Just write me today and I will tell you how to get her without cost. Send name and address and say "I want Mary Ann."

Send No Money

THE DOLL MAN, Dept. R, 1102 Ellsworth Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

13 Inches Tall

Be a Nurse

Become Independent

Learn in Spare Time At Home
Earn $30—$35 a week

Every woman should learn. We train Beginners, Practical Nurses, Mothers and Religious Workers by our Fascinating Home-study Method. Leading Chicago System. Endorsed by physicians. Established 22 years.

Earn while learning

If you are over 18 and under 55 years of age write for illustrated catalog and 32 Sample Lesson Pages with FREE details of Money-Back Guarantee and FREE NURSES EQUIPMENT.

Chicago School of Nursing, Dept. 287, 421 S. Ashland Blvd., Chicago

Ma Ma! Ma Ma! BIG Ma-Ma DOLL FREE

When you lay her down she says Ma-Ma loud and plain, not a little squeak. You don't have to press her or squeeze her to make her talk, just lay her down and she does the talking herself. She is 13 inches tall, has Bisque Head and Arms, Stuffed Body, and is dressed like picture—Patent Leather Shoes, etc. We send her Free, for selling only 18 packets of Perfumed Sachet at 10c each. Also Walking Dolls, Crying Dolls, Sleeping Dolls, all free. Everybody wants to buy Sachet. Write now to

JONES MFG. CO. Dept. 820, Attleboro, Mass.

Ma Ma! Ma Ma! Ma Ma! Ma Ma! Ma Ma! Ma Ma!

PAT. APL-10-86

"Mizpah" Baby Nipples

Do not collapse—Prevent much colic
Sample Free to Mothers and Doctors.

Valve (A-B) prevents vacuum. Inside ribs prevent collapsing when child bites nipple. Rim is made so nipple cannot be pulled off bottle. Guard your babe's health. Send no money! We send you a sample nipple free, postpaid on request. Write now to

THE WALTER F. WARE CO., Dept. A Philadelphia, Pa.

LOOMS $9.90
AND UP. BIG MONEY IN WEAVING AT HOME.

No experience necessary to weave beautiful rugs, carpets, etc. on UNION LOOMS from rags and waste material. Home weaving is fascinating and highly profitable. Weavers are rushed with orders. Be sure to send for free loom book. It tells all about weaving and our wonderful low-priced, easily-operated looms.

UNION LOOM WORKS, 272 Factory St., Boonville, N. Y.

BIRD BOOK FREE

Finely illustrated with colored cover. Tells how to care for Parrots, Canaries and Cage Birds. Also tells about Gold Fish and describes and prices our full line of best Bird and Fish Supplies

IOWA BIRD CO., Dept. 17 DES MOINES, IA.

Clothing Agents Sell Golden Rule Clothes. We pay you in advance. Work spare or full time. Make $25.00 to $75.00 weekly. All wool line. New low prices. Satisfaction guaranteed. Express prepaid. Big outfit sent free to experienced salesmen. Write and tell us what you have sold. Act quick.

THE OLD WOOLEN TAILORING CO., Dept. 130, Chicago, Ill.

GIVEN! GENUINE HAWKEYE CAMERA

as pictured. Regular size, uses films; snap-shot and time exposure. It's a beauty. Yours for selling only $1.00 worth (12 boxes) famous Mentho-Nova which everybody should buy on sight. Send no money. We trust you till goods are sold. Many other valuable premiums. What do you want? Write today.

U. S. SUPPLY CO., Dept. H-H, 7, Greenville, Pa.

LADIES ANYWHERE make money crocheting lingerie. Instructions, completed sample and price, 10c in silver (Last Call).

Paris Art Works, 21 New Haven, Conn

"FIBRE-LITE" LIMBS

Easy Payments—Do Nature's Work.
AGENTS WANTED who wear Leg. Good Pay. FREE Fibre Sample. DESCRIBE STUMP TO WORMAN CO., 252-C Hennepin, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN

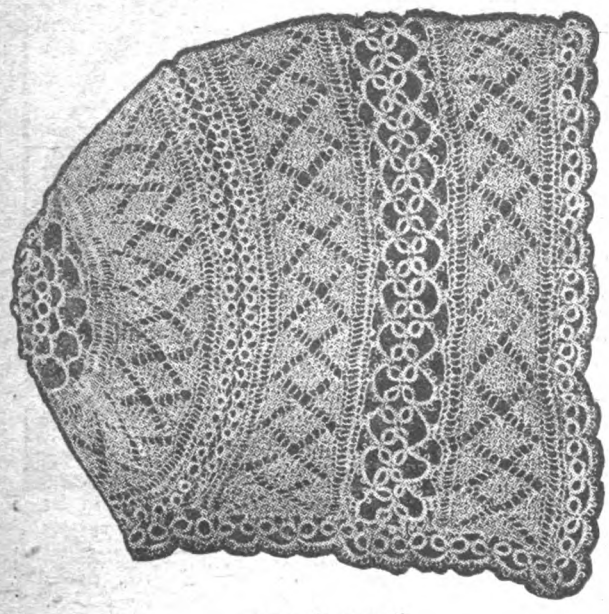
Ford Sedan Given

YOU CAN WIN THIS IDEAL ALL-YEAR CAR

Can you solve this puzzle? Try it and send your answer today. Surely you want this fine new latest model Ford Sedan.

We have given away nearly 50 Autos in the past. Now we will give a new latest model Ford Sedan complete with electric lights and starter, sliding plate glass windows, large tires, demountable rims, freight and tax paid. This is the ideal car for both summer and winter use. Own a car of your own.

Can you make out the two words spelled by the numbers in the picture to right? The alphabet is numbered—A is 1, B is 2, etc. What are the two words? Can you work it out? Send no money with your answer, just the two words and your name and address.



1 21 20 15
6 18 5 5

Send Answer Today Besides Sedan we will give away Talking Machines, Bicycles, Watches, Silverware and hundreds of dollars in cash. Everyone who answers can share in cash and prizes. Nothing difficult to do. Everybody Wins! Someone gets a Sedan, it can be you! Send Answer Today and try for this Sedan.

FORD WILLSON, Mgr. 141 W. Ohio St., Dept. 2498, Chicago, Ill.

A school girl of 14 recently won Auto

Comfort's Knitting and Crocheting

INFANT'S CAP.

Terms Used in Crochet

Ch st., chain stitch, simply a series of loops or stitches each drawn with the hook through the preceding one; s c, single crochet, having a loop on hook, insert hook in work as indicated, draw loop through thread over, and draw through both loops; d c, double crochet, thread over hook, insert hook in work, draw loop through, thread over draw through two loops, thread over, draw through two loops; tr c, treble crochet, thread over hook twice, then work off as in double crochet, there being three groups of two loops to work off instead of two; block, blk, 4 d c preceded and followed by a space; sp, formed by ch between 2 doubles; skip, sk, to miss, omit or not work over a certain number of preceding stitches.

Terms Used in Tatting

D. s. double stitch; p. picot; l. p. long picot; s. p. shorter than usual picot; ch. chain, a succession of double stitches made with two threads; pkt. picot and knot together. * indicates a repetition.

Infant's Cap

By Emma Hutchinson

MATERIALS. One ball No. 70 white mercerized crochet cotton, one pair No. 16 steel knitting needles, two balls tatting cotton, tatting shuttle.

To copy this especially dainty little hand-made cap, first make the tatted medallion for the crown as follows

One large ring of 8 picots with 2 d s between, close, tie thread securely and cut.

2nd round—1 small ring of 3 d s, join to p of large ring, 3 d s, close. Ch with shuttle and extra thread of 3 d s, 1 p, 3 d s. Repeat rings and chains, join, tie securely and cut thread.

3rd round—1 ring, 2 d s, 1 p, 2 d s, join to p of ch, 2 d s, 1 p, 2 d s, close with two threads ch 2 d s, 1 p, 2 d s, 1 p, 2 d s, 1 p, 2 d s, 1 ring same as last, joining last p to first p of first ring. One 3 p, ch, 1 ring, joining to p of second ch of 2nd round and to first p of last ring. Repeat, joining all sides, picots of rings and joining every other ring to chains in 2nd round.

4th round—1 small ring of 2 d s, join to center p of ch in last round, 2 d s, close. Ch 3 d s, 1 p, 3 d s, 1 p, 3 d s, 1 p, 3 d s, 1 small ring same as before joined to next ch. Repeat rings and chains around, tie and cut thread.

Knitted Diamond Insertion for Cap

Cast on 22 stitches, knit across plain.

1st row—Sl 1, k 1, o, n, n, o, k 11, o, n, o, n, k 1.

2nd row—Sl 1, knit rest plain; all even rows are the same.

3rd row—Sl 1, k 1, o, n, k 2, o, n, k 7, n, o, k 2, o, n, k 1.

5th row—Sl 1, k 1, o, n, k 3, o, n, k 5, n, o, k 3, o, n, k 1.

7th row—Sl 1, k 1, o, n, k 4, o, n, k 3, n, o, k 4, o, n, k 1.

9th row—Sl 1, k 1, o, n, k 5, o, n, k 1, n, o, k 5, o, n, k 1.

11th row—Sl 1, k 1, o, n, k 6, o, k 3 together o, k 6, o, n, k 1.

12th row—Sl 1, k 10, n, k 9.

13th row—Sl 1, k 1, o, n, k 7, o, k 7, o, n, k 1.

14th row—And all even rows following like 2nd.

15th row—Sl 1, k 1, o, n, k 5, n, o, k 1, o, n, k 5, o, n, k 1.

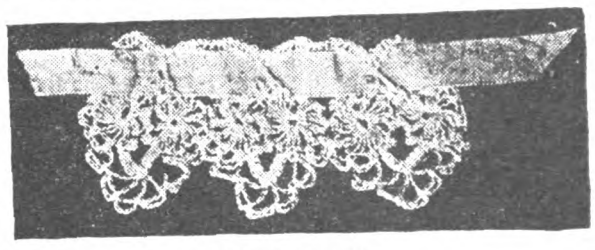
17th row—Sl 1, k 1, o, n, k 4, n, o, k 3, o, n, k 4, o, n, k 1.

19th row—Sl 1, k 1, o, n, k 3, n, o, k 5, o, n, k 3, o, n, k 1.

21st row—Sl 1, k 1, o, n, k 2, n, o, k 7, o, n, k 2, o, n, k 1.

23rd row—Sl 1, k 1, o, n, k 1, n, o, k 9, o, n, k 1, o, n, k 1.

24th row—Sl 1, knit rest plain, and repeat from first row.



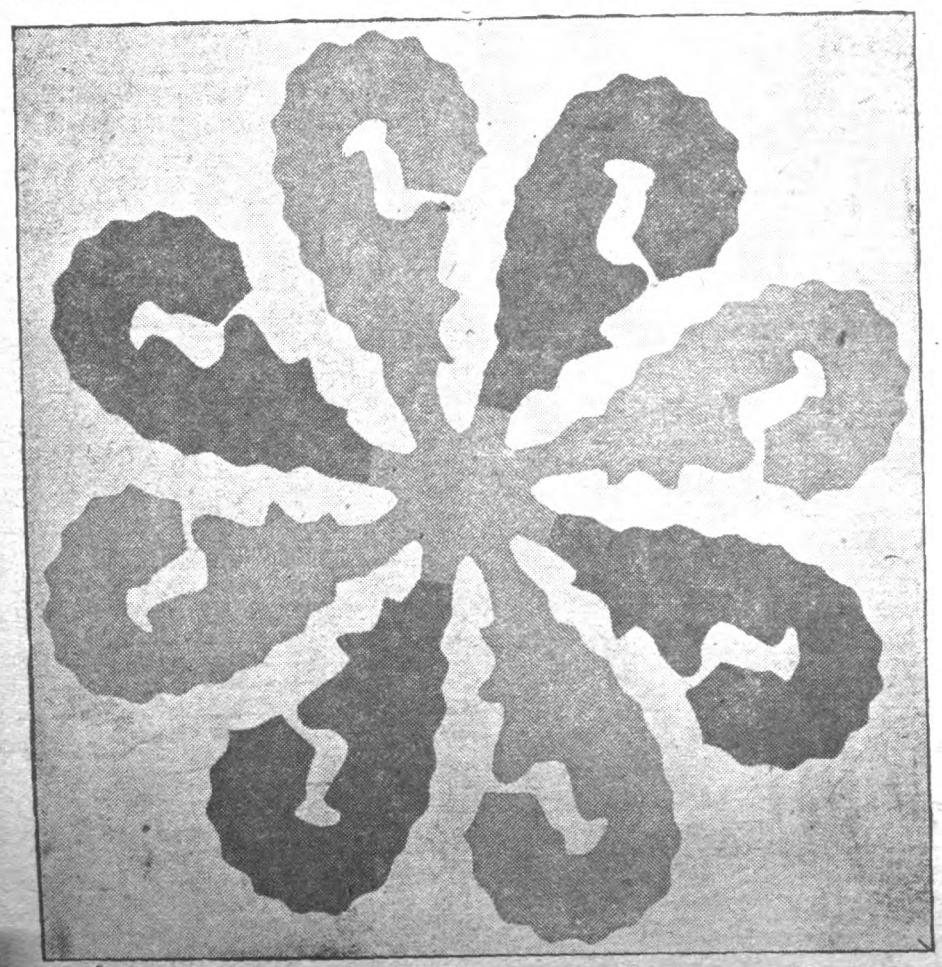
Complete the length necessary for the first row of insertion around the crown of the cap, bind off easily. With the same thread begin at one end of the knitting and overcast a short space on one edge, join to center picot of chain in last round of medallion. Overcast edge of knitting, drawing up a trifle and join to next ch. Continue around, joining the two ends of the insertion in the center of back of crown of the cap.

In making this first strip of knitting finish work so that the joining will complete a pattern, then the seam will be scarcely noticeable.

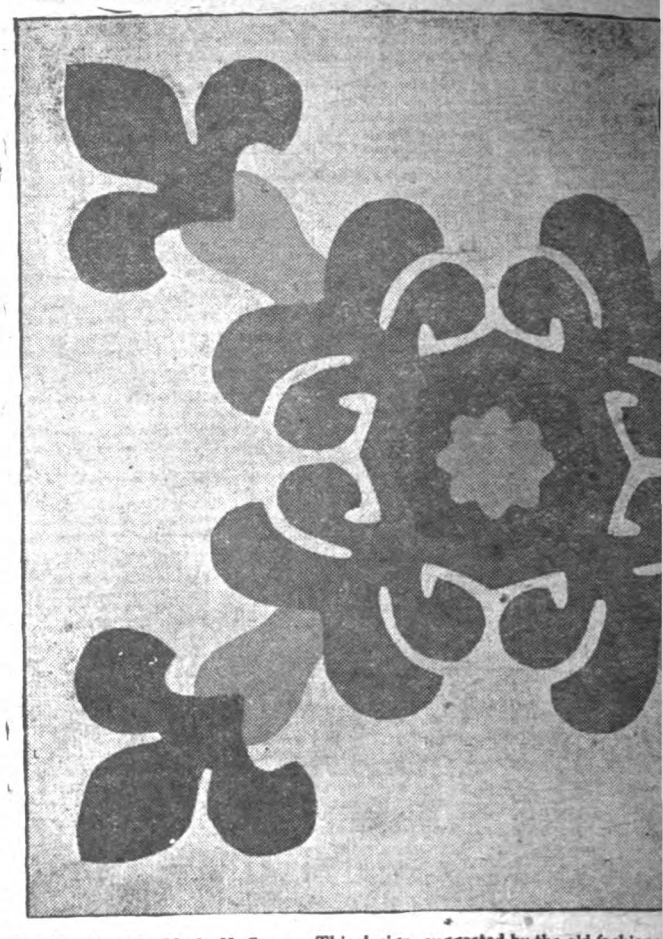
Next add a round of tatting. Make ring 2 d s, 1 p, 2 d s, join to free edge of the knitted insertion at the seam. 2 d s, 1 p, 2 d s, close. Leave short space of thread, make second ring, joining to insertion and the first ring. Two more rings, Fifth ring has 3 free picots, sixth ring join to insertion and first p of fourth ring. Next ring, join first p to last p of sixth ring. Repeat making 2 rows of rings in opposite directions, each ring joined to the previous ring on that side and 1 row of rings joined to the knitted insertion. Finish back of the neck with 3 single rings, like the first 4.

Knit 2 strips of insertion the necessary length and bind off.

For tatted band of insertion, begin by making ring 3 d s, 1 p, 3 d s, 1 p, 3 d s 1 p, 3 d s, close. Ch 2 d s, 1 p, *1 d s, 1 p, repeat from * making 5 p, 2 d s, one 3 p ring same as last joining 2nd p to center p of last ring, as close as possible to second ring make another ring having 3 picots all free. One ch of 5 p, 1 ring, joining to center p of last ring. Another ring as close as possible, 1 ch, 1 ring joined to last. Repeat working in this way until tatting is of right length.



LINGERIE BEADING.



To have the work just right it is best to sew the second knitted band in place. This is joined to the tatted rings leaving the 7 single rings free for the back of the neck. The wide tatted band can be joined as made or with needle and thread.

End tatting with a ch and 1 ring. Make a second row of rings and chains the same as the first, joining two rings to two rings to form groups of four as shown in our illustration.

Add the third strip of knitted insertion and finish the edge of the cap with one row of rings and chains made the same, as in the wide insertion.

Patterns similar to this and the design on the opposite page are popular with quilt makers. This "Princess Feather" copied by Miss Lou E. Evans is of red and green on white. The green applique is cut in one piece, red feathers of the same pattern being placed alternately.

Bleeding Heart by Marie H. Carey. This design, suggested by the old-fashione quilt. Coloring—Center, yellow, followed by red, then double green leave heart-like pieces.

Lingerie Beading

This pattern is very lacy, worked of No. 70 or 80 cotton.

Ch 10, join in 5th st to form ring *15 d c, in ring, join by sl st to first double. 1 d c in 1st st of first ch. Ch 10, form ring of 5 sts, fill with 15 d c, join. 1 s c in nearest st of first ring, ch 3, 1 sl st, in 3rd st of 1st ring, repeat picots around. Picot half around second ring, ch 7, join to top of first ring, 9 s c under ch 7, ch 5, turn. 1 d c on last s c, 1 d c on 7th s c, ch 3, 1 d c in same st, ch 3, 2 d c in next s c with ch between, ch 3, 2 d c in 3 s c with ch between, ch 3, sl st to first ring, turn, ch 3, with sl sts between every 2 doubles. Complete picots around second ring, 1 d c in 1st of first ch. Ch 8, 1 d c in 5th st from hook, sl st to 2nd p of second ring, 2 more doubles in same st with last d c. Ch 15, form ring of last 5 sts, repeat from * join picots of third ring to picots of second ring.

Filet Point Edging

Begin with ch 33 sts, turn.

1st row—1 d c in 9th st from ch. Ch 2 sk 2, 7 d c in next 7 sts ch 2, sk 2, 1 d c, ch 2, 1 d c in same st with last double, 6 d c in next 6 sts, ch 2, sk 2, 1 d c in next st, ch 5, 1 s c in first st of ch, ch 3, turn.

2nd row—Make shell of 5 d c with picots of 5 d c with picots of chains 3 between the doubles, in the end space of the first row. Ch 2, 1 d c on d c, ch 2, 1 d c on next d c thus making 2 sps, ch 5, 1 d c on 6th double in first row. Ch 2, 1 d c on next double, 2 more sps, ch 5, 2 sps, ch 5, turn.

3rd row—2 sps, 5 d c under ch 5, 3 sps, ch 2, 1 d c in same st with last double, 5 d c under ch 5, 1 sp, ch 5, 1 s c under ch 2 between shell and double. Ch 3, turn.

4th row—Shell as before worked in space at end of third row. Ch 2 1 d c, ch 2, 1 d c, ch 5, 1 d c in 6th d c, 1 d c in 7th d c (in every other row the first space is made in this manner, increasing the spaces and thus forming the point) 4 more sps, ch 5, 2 sps on 2 sps, ch 5, turn.

5th row—2 sps, 5 d c under ch, 6 sps, making the last sp before the doubles as in the third row. 5 d c under ch, 1 sp, ch 5, 1 s c, ch 3, turn.

6th row—Shell in end of fifth row. 2 sps, 5 d c, 7 sps, 5 d c, 2 sps, ch 5, turn.

7th row—2 sps, ch 5, 8 sps, ch 5, 1 sp, ch 5, 1 s c, ch 3, turn.

8th row—Shell in end of last row. 2 sps, 5 d c, 9 sps, 5 d c, 2 sps, ch 5, turn.

9th row—2 sps, 5 d c 10 sps, 5 d c, 1 sp, ch 5, 1 s c, ch 3, turn.

10th row—Shell, 2 sps, ch 5, 11 sps, ch 5, 2 sps, ch 5, turn.

11th row—2 sps, 5 d c, 12 sps, 5 d c, 1 sp, ch 5, 1 s c, ch 3, turn.

12th row—Shell, 2 sps, ch 5, 13 sps, ch 5, 2 sps, ch 5, turn.

13th row—2 sps, 5 d c, 14 sps, 5 d c, 1 sp, ch 5, 1 s c, ch 3, turn.

14th row—Shell, 2 sps, ch 5, 10 sps, ch 5, sk 4 sps 1 sp on last sp, ch 5, 2 sps, ch 5, turn.

15th row—2 sps, 5 d c, 2 sps, 5 d c, 1 sp, ch 5, 1 s c in top of third double in last row. Ch 3, turn.

Repeat from second row. This pattern can be made wider by working more rows before beginning the repeat.

Fan Point Lace

Begin with ch 25 sts, turn.

1st row—1 d c in 9th st from hook, ch 2, sk 2, 1 d c thus forming 2 spaces. 4 d c in next 4 sts, ch 5, sk 4, 1 d c, ch 3, 1 d c in same st with last double. Ch 5, sk 4, 1 d c, ch 3, 1 d c in same st with last double, ch 3, turn.

2nd row—Shell of 5 d c under ch 3, between 2 doubles in last row, ch 5, shell 5 d c between next 2 doubles, ch 5, 3 d c under ch 5, 4 d c on 4 d c, 2 sps over sps, ch 5, turn.

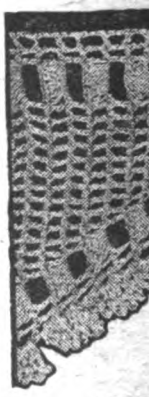
3rd row—2 sps, 7 d c on d c, 3 d c under ch 5, ch 5, 1 d c, ch 3, 1 d c worked in top of 3rd double of shell, ch 5, 2 doubles with ch between on next shell, ch 3, turn.

4th row—1 shell, ch 5, 1 shell, ch 5, 3 d c under ch, 1 d c on each d c, 2 sps, ch 5, turn.

5th row—2 sps, 1 d c on each d c, 3 d c under ch, 2 d c with ch 5, between row, ch 3, turn.

6th row—Sa doubles as in th 2 sps, ch 5, turn

7th row—2 s with ch betwee 8th double.



Repeat from also be increas fore beginning

Effective

Work one r row of spaces lows: s c over 3 s c in end sp, turn, sl st to fo 1 p, 3 s c, 1 p, 3 of 3 sps, s c ov

Simpl

Either white for this simple hem with a lo second st, ch 2 ch 5, turn, 1 d 1 d c in next s Repeat, ch 2, and form pic chain.

Imi

This tiny e makes a daint dren's clothin wear.

Ch 20 sts, to form a sm * 2 sc, 1 picot to * 6 times, st. Ch 20, f ch 1, sl st t finish same a

Club for Nimble Fingered Folks

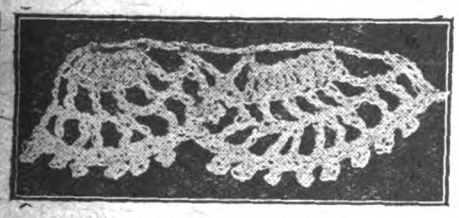
By Mrs. Wheeler Wilkinson, Ed.

The Temperance Ball by Mrs. E. E. Gates has a center of yellow, surrounded with red; buds green tipped with yellow; outer blossom red with yellow eye, all leaves and stems green, background white.

Terms Used in Knitting

K, knit plain; o, over; o 2, over twice; n, narrow 2 stitches together; p, purl, meaning an inversion of stitches; sl, slip a stitch; tog, together; sl and b, k p, knit plain; stars and parenthesis indicate slip and bind; repetition of work by knitting certain number of times. before proceeding.

Narrow Fan Crochet



CHAIN 10 sts, join in ring, ch 3,.

1st row—10 doubles in ring, ch 3, turn.

2nd row—1 d c in 2nd, 4th, 6th, 8th and 10th doubles with ch 2 between each, ch 2, 1 treble crochet in ring, ch 5, turn.

3rd row—1 d c in first sp, ch 2, 1 d c in next sp, ch 2, in next 2 sps with 2 doubles with a ch between, ch 2, 1 d c in last, ch 2, 1 d c under end ch in last row, ch 1, turn.

4th row—1 s c, ch 3, sl st to form picot, 1 s c in first sp, 1 s c, 1 p, 1 s c in each of the following sps, ch 3, 1 double treble (thread over hook 4 times), in top of treble crochet, ch 5, 1 d tr c in double treble, ch 3, turn. If one works loosely, trebles can be used instead of the double trebles.

NARROW FAN CROCHET.

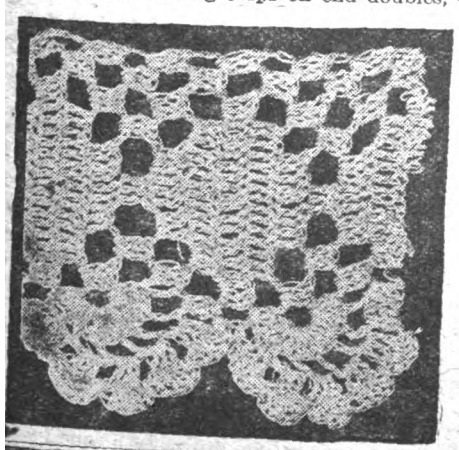
Repeat pattern from the first row.

Pillow-Case Lace

Begin with ch 38 sts, turn.



1st row—1 d c in 9th st from hook, 21 d c in next 21 sts, ch 2, sk 2, 4 d c, ch 5.

2nd row—1 d c on 4th d c in last row, 2 d c under ch, 1 d c on next d c, ch 2, sk 2, d c, 15 more doubles on doubles, ch 2, 1 d c on 1st doubles in last row, ch 5, turn.

3rd row—3 d c in sp, 1 d c on d c, ch 2, sk 2, 10 d c on 10 d c, ch 2, sk 2, 1 d c on d c, 2 d c in sp, 1 d c on d c, ch 2, sk 2, 4 d c, worked as last group of 4 doubles, ch 5, turn.

4th row—4 d c in sp, ch 2, 4 d c in sp, ch 2, 4 d c on center doubles, ch 2, 4 d c, ch 2, 1 d c on last d c in last row, 18 d c under end ch 5, sl st to top of doubles in 2nd row, ch 5, turn.

5th row—1 d c on 3rd double, ch 2, sk 1, 1 d c, repeat making 9 sps on end doubles, 4 c in sp, ch 2, 10 d c over 2 sps and 4 d c, ch 2, d c, ch 2, 4 d c, ch 5, turn.

PILLOW-CASE LACE.

6th row—4 d c in sp, ch 2, 16 d c, ch 2, 4 d c, 1, 3 d c in each sp on end scallop, with a 1 between, ch 1, turn.

7th row—5 d c in center d c of each group 3 doubles, with sl st under ch 1.

8th row—Same as first row.

Simple Knitted Lace

By Edna Miller

Cast on 12 sts.

1st row—K across plain.

2nd row—Put needle under thread then over, narrow twice, k 2, pick up 1 st, o, and n 3 times.

3rd row—K 9, o, n twice.

4th row—Needle under and over thread as in 2nd row, n twice, k 3, pick up 1 st, o and n 3 times.

5th row—K 10, o, n twice.

6th row—Needle under and over thread, n twice, k 4, pick up 1 st, o and n 3 times.

7th row—K 11, o, n twice.

8th row—Needle under and over, n twice, k 5, pick up 1 st, o and n 3 times.

9th row—K 12, o, n twice.

10th row—Needle under and over, n twice, k 6, pick up 1 st, o and n 3 times. Bind off all but 12 sts and repeat from 1st row.

Knitted Star Counterpane

By Mrs. Minnie Beck

This block was copied from an old hand-made coverlet completed in 1874. Knitted blocks are now combined with plain linen squares or the same size, knitted squares of stockinette stitch (k 1 row, p 1 row) or filet crocheted squares, as preferred. The original cover however was all of this star pattern, worked up into strips and then joined together.

For a block cast on 50 stitches. For the border which is of plain knitting on all four sides knit 10 rows plain.

11th row—K 8, p 9, k 1, p 14, k 1, p 9, k 8.

12th row—K this and every other even row up to the 30th row plain.

13th row—K 8, p 9, k 2, p 12, k 2, p 9, k 8.

15th row—K 8, p 9, k 3, p 10, k 3, p 9, k 8.

17th row—K 8, p 9, k 4, p 8, k 4, p 9, k 8.

19th row—K 8, p 9, k 5, p 6, k 5, p 9, k 8.

21st row—K 8, p 9, k 6, p 4, k 6, p 9, k 8.

23rd row—K 8, p 9, k 7, p 2, k 7, p 9, k 8.

25th row—K 8, p 9, k 16, p 9, k 8.

27th row—K 8, p 1, k 15, p 2, k 15, p 1, k 8.

29th row—K 8, p 2, k 13, p 4, k 13, p 2, k 8.

31st row—K 8, p 3, k 11, p 6, k 11, p 3, k 8.

32nd row—K 23, p 4, k 23.

33rd row—K 8, p 4, k 9, p 2, k 4, p 2, k 9, p 4, k 8.

34th row—Same as 32nd row.

35th row—K 8, p 5, k 7, p 3, k 4, p 3, k 7, p 5, k 8.

36th row—Same as 32nd row.

37th row—K 8, p 6, k 5, p 4, k 4, p 4, k 5, p 6, k 8.

38th row—Same as 32nd row.

39th row—K 8, p 7, k 3, p 1, k 4, p 4, k 4, k 4, p 1, k 3, p 7, k 8.

Be very sure that this row is worked correctly, or the 3 center blocks will not come right.

40th row—K 19, p 4, k 4, p 4, k 19.

41st row—K 8, p 8, k 1, p 2, k 4, p 4, k 4, p 2, k 1, p 8, k 8.

42nd row—Same as 40th row.

43rd row—K 8, p 8, k 1, p 2, k 4, p 4, k 4, p 2, k 1, p 8, k 8.

44th row—Same as 40th row.

45th row—K 8, p 7, k 3, p 1, k 4, p 4, k 4, p 1, k 3, p 7, k 8.

46th row—K 18, p 1, k 4, p 4, k 4, p 1, k 18.

47th row—K 8, p 6, k 5, p 4, k 4, p 4, k 5, p 6, k 8.

48th row—Same as 32nd row.

49th row—K 8, p 5, k 7, p 3, k 4, p 3, k 7, p 5, k 8.

50th row—Same as 32nd row.

51st row—K 8, p 4, k 9, p 2, k 4, p 2, k 9, p 4, k 8.

52nd row—Same as 32nd row.

53rd row—K 8, p 3, k 11, p 6, k 11, p 3, k 8.

54th row and following even rows to 72nd row k back plain.

55th row—K 8, p 2, k 13, p 4, k 13, p 2, k 8.

57th row—K 8, p 1, k 15, p 2, k 15, p 1, k 8.

59th row—K 8, p 9, k 16, p 9, k 8.

61st row—K 8, p 9, k 7, p 2, k 7, p 9, k 8.

63rd row—K 8, p 9, k 6, p 4, k 6, p 4, k 6, p 9, k 8.

65th row—K 8, p 9, k 5, p 6, k 5, p 9, k 8.

67th row—K 8, p 9, k 4, p 8, k 4, p 9, k 8.

69th row—K 8, p 9, k 3, p 10, k 3, p 9, k 8.

71st row—K 8, p 9, k 2, p 12, k 2, p 9, k 8.

73rd row—K 8, p 9, k 1, p 14, k 1, p 9, k 8.

Knit next 10 rows plain to complete border.

Bind off until one wishes to knit strips, then repeat from first row.

Knitted Fringe

By Mrs. W. C. Tilden

Suitable in different lengths for bedspreads, bath towels or knitted tidies.

Cast on 14 or more stitches.

1st row—K 2, o, n, k 1, o, n, k 7.

2nd row—K 8, o, n, k 1, o, n, k 1.

Repeat these two rows. The first 8 sts are for the heading, the remaining 6 sts are dropped from the needle when the fringe is of the required length. Bind off the 8 stitches and unravel the dropped stitches for the fringe. Cut evenly.

Rose Filet Shoulder Shawl

Materials—6 skeins white or colored Shetland floss, one fine bone hook.

Begin with ch 320 sts, turn.

1st row—105 sps., ch 5, turn.

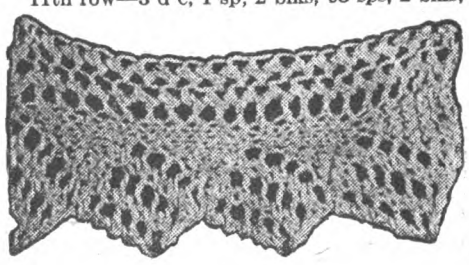
2nd row—8 sps, 2 blks, * 3 sps, 2 blks, repeat from * 14 times, 9 sps, ch 5, turn.

3rd row—7 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk * 1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, repeat from * 14 times, 8 sps, ch 5, turn.

4th row—3 sps * 1 blk, 2 sps, repeat from * 32 times, 1 blk, 4 sps, ch 5, turn.

5th row—2 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, * 2 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp repeat from * 15 times, 2 blks, 3 sps, ch 5, turn.

6th row—3 sps, 1 blk * 5 sps, 1 blk, repeat from * 16 times, 4 sps, ch 5, turn.



7th row—105 sps.

8th row—2 sps, 6 d c, 95 sps, 6 d c, 3 sps, ch 5, turn.

9th row—1 sp, 3 d c, 99 sps, 3 d c, 2 sps, ch 5, turn.

10th row—3 d c, 2 sps, 3 d c, 95 sps, 3 d c, 2 sps, 3 d c, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

11th row—3 d c, 1 sp, 2 blks, 93 sps, 2 blks,

KNITTED LACE.

1 sp, 3 d c, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

12th row—Same as 10th row.

13th row—Same as 9th row.

14th row—Same as 8th row.

15th row—Same as 9th row.

16th row—3 d c, 2 sps, 3 d c * 5 sps, 3 d c, repeat from * 16 times, 2 sps, 3 d c, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

17th row—3 d c, 1 sp, 2 blks * 3 sps, 2 blks, repeat from * 16 times, 1 sp, 3 d c, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

18th row—Same as 16th row.

19th row—Same as 15th row.

20th row—Same as 14th row.

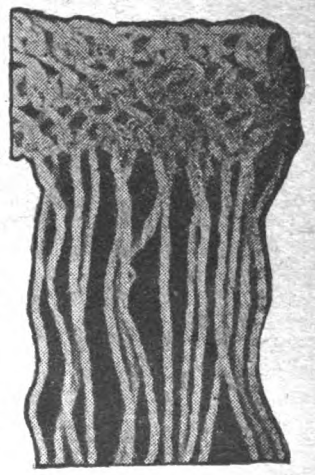
21st row—Same as 15th row.

22nd row—3 d c, 2 sps, 3 d c, 17 sps, 3 d c, * 57 sps, repeat from * backward to beginning of row.

23rd row—3 d c, 1 sp, 2 blks, 16 sps, 6 d c, * 57 sps, repeat from * backwards.

24th row—3 d c, 2 sps, 3 d c, 12 sps, 2 blks, 3 sps, 3 d c * 57 sps, repeat from * backwards.

25th row—1 sp, 3 d c, 14 sps, 2 blks, 2 sps, 6 d c, 3 sps, 3 d c * 47 sps, repeat from * backwards.



26th row—2 sps, 6 d c, 13 sps, 2 blks, 2 sps, 3 d c, 1 sp, 3 d c * 49 sps, repeat backwards from *.

27th row—1 sp, 3 d c, 18 sps, 6 d c, 2 sps, 3 d c, 2 sps, 6 d c * 45 sps, repeat from * backwards.

28th row—3 d c, 2 sps, 3 d c, 14 sps, 6 d c, 1 sp, 6 d c, 1 sp, 3 d c, 4 sps, 3 d c * 43 sps, repeat from * backwards.

29th row—3 d c, 1 sp, 2 blks, 12 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 9 d c, 1 sp, 3 d c * 51 sps, repeat from * backwards.

30th row—3 d c, 2 sps, 1 blk, 11 sps, 12 d c, 1 sp, 9 d c, 1 sp, 3 d c * 51 sps, repeat from * backwards.

KNITTED FRINGE.

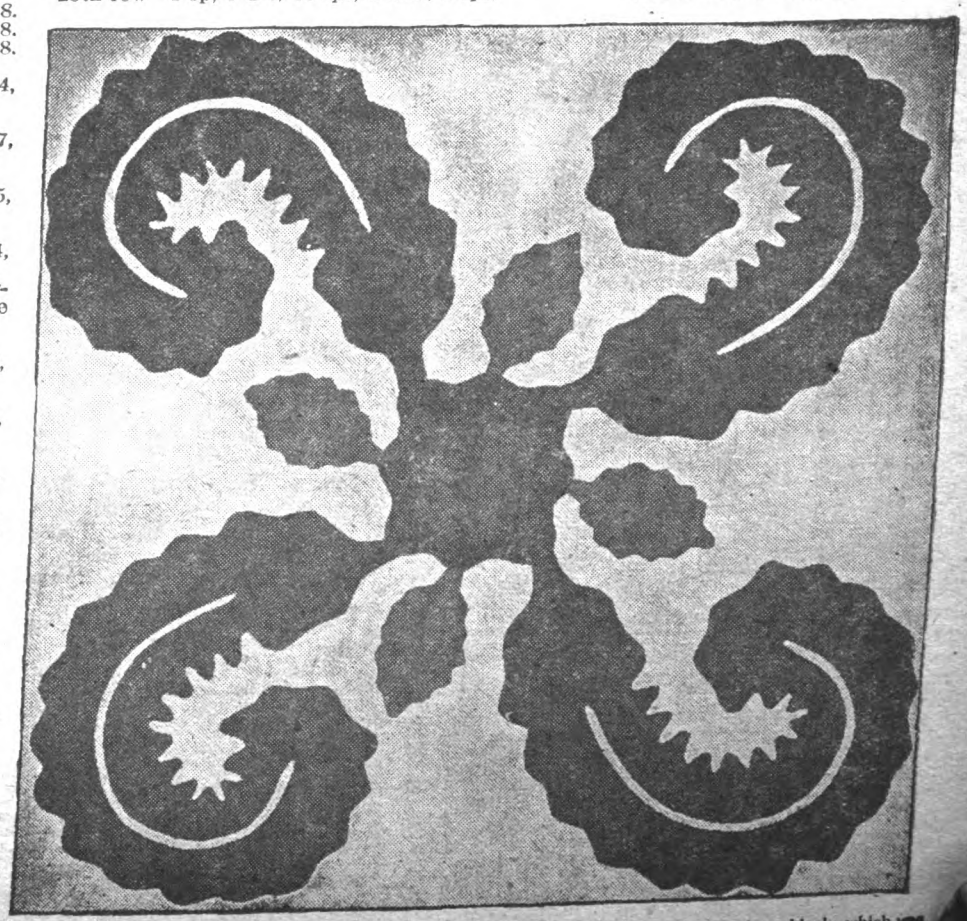
31st row—1 sp, 3 d c, 14 sps, 1 blk, 8 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 6 d c, 1 sp, 6 d c * 49 sps, repeat from * backwards.

32nd row—2 sps, 6 d c, 21 sps, 3 d c, 1 sp, 3 d c * 47 sps, repeat from * backwards.

33rd row—1 sp, 3 d c, 23 sps, 3 d c * 51 sps, repeat from * backwards.

34th row—3 d c, 2 sps, 3 d c, 11 sps, 9 d c, 3 sps, 6 d c, 1 sp, 3 d c, 1 sp, 3 d c * 49 sps, repeat from * backwards.

35th row—3 d c, 1 sp, 9 d c, 9 sps, 15 d c, 1 sp, 12 d c, 2 sps, 3 d c * 49 sps, repeat from * backwards.



36th row—3 d c, 2 sps, 3 d c, 10 sps, 6 d c, 1 sp, 24 d c, 2 sps, 6 d c * 45 sps, repeat from * backwards.

37th row—1 sp, 3 d c, 13 sps, 6 d c, 3 sps, 3 d c, 1 sp, 9 d c, 2 sps, 12 d c * 41 sps, repeat from * backwards.

38th row—2 sps, 6 d c, 10 sps, 6 d c, 1 sp, 9 d c, 1 sp, 6 d c, 5 sps, 3 d c, 1 sp, 6 d c, * 39 sps, repeat from * backwards.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 16.)

KNITTED STAR COUNTERPANE.

Applique patterns such as this are known both as "Prince's" and "Princess" feather. In the above block, which was submitted by Mrs. Jacob D. Maury, the red is a one-piece applique, on an unbleached cotton foundation.

BIGGEST BARGAIN EVER OFFERED!

ONLY $3.98 On Arrival

Bertha Collar of Lace and Net

$15 VALUE

King "Tut" FLOWERED Paisley and Canton Crepe

Almost unbelievable at our special low price but—see for yourself, without any risk and entirely on approval. Can you imagine, only $3.98 for this latest style, original Paris model of King "Tut" flowered Paisley in many colored Egyptian pattern and highly lustrous mercerized cotton CANTON CREPE. The most beautiful dress of the season, Waist, newest overlapping panels and sleeves of Paisley. Stylish long length skirt, newest flare cuffs and belt forming into big bow are of French Blue cotton Canton Crepe. Smart Bertha collar of finest quality Valenciennes lace and ruffled French net. This dress is finely tailored of the best quality materials and has every popular style feature shown this season. Tak advantage of this once-in-a-life-time opportunity to be stylishly dressed and at such a low cost.

Paisley Panels

Latest Paris Style

MONEY BACK IF NOT SATISFIED

SIZES for Women 32 to 46 For Misses 14, 16 and 18

Be Sure to State Size

Send No Money

But rush your order Now! Give us name, address and size. Pay the mailman as good faith deposit $3.98 plus a few cents for postage when the package arrives. Then examine the dress to your heart's content. Note the splendid material and the trim stylish lines. If not satisfied return to us and we will refund every cent of your money.

Fred'k M. Dunham & Co., Dept. A 246 CHICAGO

"KING-TUT" TWO TONE SANDAL

$1.98

Sizes 2½ to 8

"TUT" Sandals—the craze of the season—the last word in correct footwear for ladies. And Gordon Bates offers the very newest—"KING TUT" sandals in Two-Tone—a combination of Patent Leather and brown kid-finished leather, with Egyptian cutouts on vamp, sides, etc., just as pictured. Fine leather soles, live rubber heels. The very latest—only $1.98—and that's less than half style center prices. And to make it the most amazing bargain ever advertised, a pair of ladies' hose to match, included free with all orders.

And Pair of Hose to Match FREE

Order No. 1253

SEND NO MONEY Understand—HOSE FREE, and send no money. Pay postman on arrival, plus few pennies postage. Money back, every penny quick, if you're not delighted. Sizes 2½ to 8. Order No. 1253.

Gordon Bates Co., Dept. 718, Minneapolis, Minn.

GOLD FILLED FOB FREE

Gold Filled 25-Year Watch

Agents! You pay only $3.40, you get $15 for this high-grade jeweled watch. Was $25. Easy to sell 2 to 5 daily, $6.60 profit on every sale!

New Octagon thinnest model, guaranteed 25-year gold filled case. Accurate to the second! For a limited time Gold Filled Fob FREE! Biggest money maker in years! Selling instructions sent with your sample.

$8.40

Don't Send a Penny

Pay $3.40, Agents! wholesale price, on delivery. We pay postage. Not one cent for the fob. Don't wait, order TODAY!

Agents Wanted! Sensational Offer to first Agent in each locality. A big money getter.

GOLD WATCH CO. 3513 Michigan Bl. Dep. 134 Chicago

FREE Book

Anyone Can Learn to Play

The origin and history of that wonderful instrument—the

SAXOPHONE

The Buescher Saxophone is the easiest of all wind instruments to play. With the aid of the first three lessons, which are sent without charge, the scale can be mastered in an hour; in a few weeks you can be playing popular music. The Saxophone is the most popular instrument for Home Entertainment, Church, Lodge of School, or for Orchestra Dance Music.

Easy to pay You may try any Buescher Saxophone, Cornet, Trumphet, Trombone or other instrument 6 days in your own home. If satisfied, pay for it by easy payments. Mention instrument interested in when sending for Free Book.

BUESCHER BAND INSTRUMENT CO.
8090 Buescher Block Elkhart, Ind.

Kill The Hair Root

My method is the only way to prevent the hair from growing again. Easy, painless, harmless. No scars. Booklet free. Write today enclosing 3 stamps. We teach beauty culture.
D. J. MAHLER, 117-A, Mahler Park, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

WHY NOT spend Spring, Summer and Fall gathering butterflies, insects? I buy hundreds of kinds for collections. Some worth 5 to 5? each. Simple outdoor work with my instructions, pictures, price-list. Send 10c (not stamps) for my Illustrated Prospectus before sending butterflies. MR. SINCLAIR, Dealer in Insects, Dept. 27, Ocean Park, Calif.

The Richest Black Belt in the World

By Frances L. Garside

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

TOY shops whose windows contain only black dolls; fashion plates in the windows of dressmaking establishments with the figures having black faces, and a superabundance of beauty parlors, indicates that one has reached the famous Black Belt of New York City, a district extending between 130th street and 150th twenty blocks north and south, and extending east from Eighth Avenue to Harlem River, a distance of six or seven blocks.

Its population is between 150,000 to 175,000. All are negroes. Around the edge of the district is a white fringe, growing thinner and thinner as the white folks composing it move farther away. Steadily the negroes advance to the west and to the north. "We do not intend to stop," said one, "until we have reached Riverside Drive. We have the money to own homes there; we intend to own them." One negress, a daughter of the late Madame Walker, who made three million in less than twenty years by discovering a remedy that would take the kink out of hair, owns a home across the road from the Helen Gould Shepherd estate, above Tarrytown, on the Hudson. It is the most beautiful, and most costly, house in that section.

The wealth of the negroes in the Black Belt has never been estimated; there are few sections of New York City that evidence greater prosperity. "We do not care for apartments," said a real estate dealer, also a negro, "we want to own our own homes; I cannot supply the demand for private houses."

They have their own theaters, and their preference is always for the moving picture form of entertainment. They have their own hotels, billiard halls, three daily newspapers, grocery and drygoods stores; they have their own churches, costly and imposing buildings, prescribing salvation in every form. They have a Christian Science church; a Catholic and Episcopal, and, of course, the usual large sprinking of Baptist and Methodist. The priests are white; the Episcopal church has a white rector and a colored curate. All the other leaders are of the African race. A colored policeman guides the traffic on the most congested corner. He was put there as an experiment, and the captain of that precinct finds that he does a better job that a white officer might do, his race showing no desire to resent his orders.

He lacks the dignity of the white man. With a movement of his arm, and an uplift of his hand, the white man commands, and the world not only stands still; it holds its breath. The negro officer lifts his hand in such a half-hearted, deprecatory sort of way, it is a marvel traffic doesn't sit down on its haunches and laugh. One could almost fancy him laughing with it, in a sheepish sort of way. It was raining hard the day I stood on a corner and watched him; one of those dismal, persistent rains, that remind one of overturned headstones in a cemetery, and the futility of all endeavor.

He lifted an apologetic hand to the north, and beckoned to cross-town traffic in a manner that was more wistful than commanding. His gestures reminded me of an elevator boy who said one day some years ago when the rain began with a dismal sunrise and continued all day; "Folks on days like this ought to stay in bed and eat fried chicken." The policeman didn't have any more energy in his movements than just that, yet he is said to be a success.

The public library in this black belt is as large and well-equipped as any branch library in the city. Its clientele is 95 per cent. colored. The librarian is a white woman; some of her girl assistants are white; some are colored. One cannot tell by the difference of attire which is which; the colored are as efficient as the white.

"What class of reading does the colored race prefer? I find no difference. The readers here are as omniverous of the latest fiction as the white and read the same class of serious literature. I have been librarian where I have met all nationalities; I have waited on our own white Americans, the negroes, Chinese, French, Hungarians, Russian Jews and Italians; I was for a number of years librarian in the Ghetto district. It is my opinion that of all these peoples, those who uniformly select the books containing the most information and who do the most serious reading, are the Russian Jews."

There is, perhaps, no section of a city anywhere in the world that contains, per block, as many beauty parlors as this rich black belt in the city of New York. They are on every street, and are generously patronized. A notable one occupies a four-story building; the interior is a marvel in pale gray furnishings; there are steam rooms for the complexion, manicure parlors, and an endless number of little rooms where one may get the wave removed from one's hair. This is the most lucrative business in New York City today, the wave having a habit of returning every time it rains, and there is seldom a drought of any duration.

Those who put in permanent waves for the white folks do not reap as rich a harvest for the reason that the permanent wave is permanent six months. The colored beauty parlor is the better investment.

I have walked the length and width of this black belt and have never seen man, woman or child, showing evidence of poverty. Every one is well dressed; every one is dressed in the latest style. If one dared take a measuring rod on Fifth Avenue, use it there and with the same measuring stick make comparisons in the Black Belt, he would find the skirts as short in the latter district. The hose are as costly and as thin, and the heels are as high.

In the public schools white and colored children sit together; this is true of the ward schools all over the city attended by both races. In many instances, white children are prodded up the rough trail to knowledge by colored teachers. In some sections, notably along the fringe, colored men have purchased apartment houses, and white folks are their tenants.

If one holds in memory dear an old colored mammy with her "Honey chile" mode of address, one need not look for her counterpart in New York City. Either Father Time spares the colored folks of this city or the beauty parlors are responsible, for, one may look in every direction and never see an aged negress.

Perhaps they are remaining in the West, or the South, where one may sun one's self in peace with none of the nagging torment of ambition.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 13.)

EUREKA, BOX 550, CALIF.

DEAR MRS WILKINSON:

I have received so many letters in answer to mine in March COMFORT that it keeps the pocketbook empty buying stamps and writing paper.

Please, sisters, and brothers too, when writing enclose a stamped envelope if you wish a reply. I am not rich in this world's goods. I appreciate the letters and enjoy answering them, even though it is work, but I cannot afford to buy stamps for so many letters.

Dear Lonely Woman of Martinsbury, W. Va., I do not think you ought to pray God to send your husband back to you. Commit him to God's care and pray "Lord, Thy will not mine, be done." I cannot pray as you want me to. Please write to me, signing your full name and address, for I believe I can help you.

Your COMFORT sister, MRS. ALLIE CROWLEY.

LAWTON, BOX 1257, OKLA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND ALL:

I think Ruby Nelson has suggested an interesting subject for discussion—your ideal husband.

I also enjoyed reading Mrs. McVey's COMFORT romance and hope there are many more as happy.

Now for a few words on my ideal husband—to be. First, he should be a Christian, which of course, includes that he will not use liquor or have any filthy immoral habits. I think there is more harmony if the husband and the wife are both members of the same church. Second, he should have some purpose in life and be capable of supplying a comfortable living. Third, he should have a kind, sympathetic disposition and be just as polite and attentive to his wife through married life as he was in courtship days. He shouldn't see more faults in his wife than in anyone else. Fourth, I should like my husband to be a real pal with me and have perfect faith and trust in me. I do not want him to expect me to be a beggar, in the financial affairs of the home. I should like my husband to make me an equal partner with him so that there need be no secrets on either side. I want him to feel free to talk over his problems with me knowing that he will always find me a sympathetic hearer. Next, my husband should have more respect for womanhood in general and me in particular, than to stand on the street and make slighting remarks as women pass by or to speak of his wife as "the old woman," or "old hen." My ideal husband should take pride in his personal appearance, and not look like a tramp just because he is married. I want our likes and dislikes to be as much in common as possible for I think the more things we agree upon the better we will get along.

Lovers should be perfectly honest each with the other so as to show their true character and nature. Oftentimes young men and women are not true to themselves. They appear in each other's society to be the embodiment of goodness and sweetness, the personification of lofty principles and holy love, when in fact they are full of human weaknesses and frailties. I think a couple should be near the same age, and that they should make it a plan to talk over in a plain and sensible manner the problems that may come up in married life and try to come to an agreement.

I shall be glad to hear from any who care to write.

ETHEL LANDERS.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

After my request for letters appeared in COMFORT I received many lovely, interesting letters which I shall answer, with the exception of a few Endless Prayer Chain letters.

Mrs. Wilkinson, do you approve of these Prayer Chain letters? I do not think you do. The letters sent to me said that if I broke the chain some awful misfortune would befall me and if I did not I would have great Luck the 7th day. I wish you would tell me what you think about it. I am sure neither you nor the sisters want COMFORT used for such a purpose.

Very truly yours, Mrs. H. WEBSTER.

Mrs. Webster.—Indeed I do not believe in Chain Prayer letters. I've thrown away hundreds of them and no terrible misfortune has come to me yet. If it does come I shall never feel that it could have been averted by my sending out any more of these superstitious letters. Unfortunately, though, it is impossible for COMFORT to prevent the writers sending them to addresses secured from its pages.—Ed.

LAVACA, ARK.

HOWDY PEOPLE:

Just thought I'd express myself on this ideal husband business. First I want to say I wouldn't want to live with any person, man or woman, who measured up to Sister Ruby's ideal. Ruby says there isn't any such critter; anyway, he doesn't sound human to me for everybody has some faults if they are human. I'm so human and have so many faults I just couldn't stand a person who was perfect. I have what I think is an ideal husband. I thought so when we were first married and now after ten years of "wedded bliss" I still think so. Hubby uses tobacco in two forms, also calls me "old woman" when he has something to tell his "pal" and I call him "old man" real often. But I can't see where the "disrespect to womanhood" comes in on that for I know you couldn't find a man anywhere who has more respect for women than this husband of mine. I think an ideal husband is one who can make his wife happy and there oughtn't to be any set rules for him to follow.

Now I would like to know if Sister Ruby is married and if she thinks she would make a good match for her ideal husband. I'm not throwing any slurs, for I don't mean it that way but I've never seen a woman yet who would be a fit mate for a person such as Ruby describes. I just wondered if there were even one.

This husband of mine hasn't any bad habits, or at least, I don't think he has, and he is a jolly, good-hearted fellow, and has succeeded in making his family one of the happiest living and I am perfectly satisfied with him.

MRS. D. L. ROGERS.

ILLINOIS.

HELLO EVERYBODY:

May I come in and join you in the discussion of an ideal husband? I quite agree with Ruby Nelson, but I would like to add a little to what she has said.

An ideal husband would be careful of his personal appearance. He would not forget to comb his hair, brush his teeth and dress neatly, no matter what his occupation might be. The ideal husband would show that he appreciates having his home kept clean and neat and the well cooked and favorite foods that his wife prepares for him. He would also show that he appreciates having his wife dress becomingly and notice when she wore a certain colored dress he likes. The ideal husband would remember his wife's birthday and any other days they used to celebrate, and surprise her with flowers, books, candy, a magazine, jewelry or whatever he can afford. Anyway, he should smile and show that he remembered. In helping rear the children he should be interested in their school, their work and their play.

It is just possible that if some of our masculine friends would tell their opinion of an ideal wife we could help them become ideal husbands.

I think if we would remember these lines, composed by Everett Ellis, we would be happier.

"There is beauty all around,
When there's love at home.
There is joy in every sound,
When there's love at home.
Peace and plenty there abide,
Smiling sweet on every side,
Time doth softly, sweetly glide,
When there's love at home."

ERMINA.

FAIRMOUNT, INDIANA.

SISTERS AND HIMS:

I have been reading my February COMFORT and I want to say that Babe expressed my opinions as I did not have the nerve to express them.

Mrs. McVey had a genuine COMFORT romance, didn't she? I wish more of you would tell of yours. We all like love stories.

Mrs. Wilkinson invites us to an Ideal Husband party. I want to add my bit as I have not an ideal husband.

He should not be smaller than I am, and he should weigh more than one hundred pounds. He must be able to smile a little, once in a while. He must be honest and he must be a clean talker as there is nothing more disgusting to me than a vulgar talking person. I would prefer an even tempered man or if he has a high temper he should be able to control it. I could not love a drunkard so a drinking man is not even to be considered in my picture. He could chew tobacco if he wanted to but I would rather he didn't. I don't mind smoking. He must not be a poolroom frequenter nor lounge around on the street corners just to kill time nor should he hang to my apron strings. He must be a regular man and not a sissy. He should be a comrade and jolly. He would not have to take me to every show that came to town. I prefer to sit at home and read or talk but I could enjoy a show if he wanted to go rather than have him go alone so someone could talk about him running around to shows alone. I think if he had the traits I admire I could forgive his lesser evils.

SHORTY.

RAINBOW MINES, WATSON, UTAH.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

We live in a small gilsonite mining camp by the name of Rainbow. Have any of you ever seen gilsonite? It reminds one of coal, only the "select" is more bright and shiny. The mines here at Rainbow are close to six feet wide and one place in "Sunshine" cut is about three hundred feet deep. The ore goes straight down through solid rock. As the diggers go deeper, timbers have to be put in. The timbers are long logs or poles, twelve or more inches in diameter. They are put in from wall to wall and wedged there. The purpose of these timbers is to keep the walls from closing in so rapidly. In Sunshine and Pigeon cuts, that have been abandoned, the walls have been closing in so fast that get out they did, somehow! I'm extremely sorry, Mr. Lesard. I would have been only too glad to keep them under supervision."

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 20.)

A Forgotten Love

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 4.)

Lesard stopped in his restless walking to and fro and began to laugh: the laugh of anger that serves instead of an oath. He saw quite well now how the woman he would have terrorized had slipped out of his grasp.

"Why, it's simple as water, man!" he cried. "I beg your pardon, but I should have thought the way they got out of the house would have been plain to a country policeman. Come with me!"

He picked up a small oil-lamp, a priceless toy of wrought silver its late owner had had fitted with a glaringly inartistic modern burner, and ruthlessly appropriated the candles and matches from the writing-table. He would have all the light he could get where he was going. But to the astonishment of Mr. Atkins, he led the way out of the house.

"I never thought of this," the latter confessed, as they stood by the dark pool at the entrance to the secret passage. "I knew, of course, that it must lead into the house somewhere, but my orders were that neither my men nor any one else should go exploring until Richardson came down. You see it's bricked up and sealed. Richardson had it done before the funeral."

Lesard looked up coolly from where he knelt among the parted ivy.

"I see it has been bricked up—also sealed!" he retorted. "But it's neither, now."

Mr Atkins gave way to deplorable language when he saw that strong hands and a crowbar had successfully deposited the slight brickwork barrier in the dark waters of the pool. The passage was open.

"But this was done from the inside! How did they get into the cave? We haven't been able to get a trace of a passage in the house."

"We will now," incisively. "Take this candle and come after me, carefully. It's no catch, inside!"

And in five minutes Mr. Atkins, shaking at his perilous passage over the dark stream, agreed with him. Not all Klondike, nor the applause of his whole profession, would have made him face this place alone.

The clammy vault he saw in the light of Lesard's lamp, dripping with slime and moisture; the deadly chill of the close air; more than all, the rush of the black, swirling stream appalled him. Brookes and Mrs. Gibbs must have had good reason to get out of his ken to have dared a place like this.

He stood motionless with cowardice and looked down at the hard stone under his feet to get his dizzy eyes away from the black water that drew them till his head swam. But something on the rock at his feet made him cry out. Though he had known it was there, it was a very difficult thing to see it. Mr. Atkins did clerical work at Scotland Yard; he was not used to sights like this.

His candle dropped grease liberally as he pointed dumbly to that bloody print of a small, fine hand, fresh and red in the damp and airless cave as if it had been done yesterday.

Lesard only nodded. The mad thought ran through him that if he had come here first—alone—that damning piece of evidence would have been there no longer. But it was too late now. Atkins said something, and Lesard very nearly turned on him furiously. It was as though some evil spirit dwelt in the place and drove men beyond themselves, he thought, as with all his might he crowded his passion down. For Atkins had spoken out what Lesard thought, night and day.

"She'll swing for that—the girl!" he had said, feeling sick and cold as he spoke. And he never knew how near he had come to lying colder still in that black water that ran off underground and told no tales.

But Lesard's anger was shortlived. He turned with shame at his own madness from the man who had only said what all the world was saying.

"It's a bad job, however you take it!" he commented for the mere sake of hearing his own voice calm and even in this evil place. He stared about him as he had not had the heart to do on the only other time he had entered it, and with a heavy soul turned away to the opening of that curved passage which must lead somewhere. There was nothing in the dark and dripping place to teach him more than he already knew; yet suddenly he pulled up, standing.

"Atkins, look here!" he cried. "What's that?"

"A patch of darker stone, do you mean? Just damp." Mr. Atkins had but one idea, and that was to get out.

But Lesard was down on his knees, lamp in hand. Damp would have stained the stone floor blackish-green, as it had stained the walls, and this irregular patch was brown, ugly, telltale.

"Look again," he said slowly. "That is blood, cleaned up in a hurry with water or something. I've seen blood-stained rock before."

"It's easily seen." Mr. Atkins forgot his awe of the place in the sudden vision of the credit that would be his if he solved the mystery of the Marchmont murder. He took out his penknife to scratch off some scales of rock, but instead he pounced on something like a cat on a mouse.

It was tiny shreds of some blue and red woolen caught and imbedded in the rough surface of the stone.

"The man was killed down here," said Lesard quietly. "That has come off the rugs of that room up-stairs where they said they found him. They must have wiped up the blood with them. Before they carried the man up-stairs they must have brought down those rugs and saturated them with the blood that stained this stone."

"They! Those girls?"

"No! Some one else," and he felt as he spoke as if each short word had been a nail driven into his own coffin.

He stayed Atkins' hand as he would have disturbed the threads.

"Leave them for Richardson," he said authoritatively. "Come with me into the passage."

Half an hour later the two came down the passage again. Atkins triumphant, yet convinced that suspicious as had been the flight of Brookes and Gibbs by that passage they had not been the murderers. For he held in his hand a white cuff such as ladies' maids wear, as it was stained red.

There had been drops of blood all the way, also, never noticed by those carriers of the dead. And the way into the house was plain now, for the stone had never been replaced after the midnight flitting of the missing pair.

But Lesard's heart was like lead.

He was quite certain that if Mrs. Gibbs had been guilty she would never have dared to defy him as she was doing now. There was more in that midnight flitting than fright. And that little cuff that he dared not take from Atkins would ruin Jacky. Not even he ever imagined that it might have been dropped first and stained like the floor afterward.

Atkins, who led the way, stopped short.

"What's that glittering?" he cried, and ran to a crevice of rock underneath one of the air slits.

He picked up a tiny gold pencil and turned stupidly to Lesard.

"Why, it's yours!" he exclaimed, "and there's blood on it. How could your pencil have come here?"

"I was in here with Richardson," the answer came coolly enough. "I must have dropped it. That's rust not blood."

And he slipped it quietly into his own pocket, cursing the man who had had it engraved L. V. Lesard.

"Good-by," he said, when they stood outside. "I'm going to London," for he was wild with terror for Jacky, and certain Gibbs was on her track.

Mr. Atkins, left alone, thought no more of the pencil till it was brought to his mind by a shock of horror and surprise.

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE HOUNDS ON HER TRACK.

Six hours is a time so short that it is neither here nor there to the happy of this world—but by just what beggarly space did Louis Lesard reach London late!

That small, bare room, entered in darkness, as though they were thieves, had looked to Gillian Hamilton like heaven. To Jacky, remembering how the Lesard she had loved had been wont to come there, how it was within these four walls he had told her he loved her, it was—well, only the terror of death could have made her return to it.

The girl who shared it was away, and that was one good thing. Jacky could never have parried her questions, her allusions to the times that would be no more.

"There's a bedroom off this," she had whispered, when the gas was burning and the blinds down. "We can sleep in peace for one night, anyhow. But first I must get something to eat."

She spoke almost gaily, with how great an effort! The old, homely surroundings cut her to the heart, and, weary as she was, she was glad of the few minutes' respite from that familiar room that she would get in the open street.

"Don't go to sleep, Gill, you'll have to let me in when I bring the potatoes. You can't sit here with the door unlocked. I wonder why we always have to fall back on potatoes?"

Gillian, lying on the sofa half-dead with weariness, only nodded, never dreaming of that hell of old thoughts and new that was in Jacky's mind. Her deadly fatigue, the groundless feeling of security, that had come over her with finding a refuge even for one night, had bound her body and soul. Once she raised her head to listen sleepily for the footsteps which were surely due; twice she wondered vaguely what was keeping Jacky—poor Jacky, who must be worn out! And then a mist came over her burning eyes, a sudden stillness on her lax body.

Heavy, unconscious as a log, Gillian lay, while the room grew hot with the gas-jet that burned noisily, and the hours crept by with relentless feet. It was not till the sun was rising that she woke from that sleep which was the first she had known for many nights; but then she sprang up, dizzy and reeling.

It was daylight—daylight—and Jacky had never come back!

Frantic, careless who heard her, Gillian ran into the bedroom and drew up the blinds. The wan light of the London morning showed her a bed unslept in, a disused room.

Oh! Had Jacky come back and been afraid to knock loudly enough to rouse her?

Spurred by a hope she knew was vain, Gillian ran to the sitting-room door and threw it wide. But there was no Jacky curled up and waiting on the threshold, no sign of her in the dirty, ill-lit passage. Numb, ghastly, tearless, Gillian drew back and stood trembling like a terrified dog.

"Where can she be?" she thought. "Nothing would keep her but trouble!" She had a vision of Jacky run over, lying bleeding in the street; only to know that it could not be that, for there had been no traffic in the quiet street when Jacky went out.

"The police—it must be the police!" she sobbed, without tears. "If I knew she had been arrested I'd go and give myself up to the nearest policeman; but suppose I did and there was nothing the matter—suppose Jacky came back and found me gone! I'd only have run my head—both our heads—into a noose for nothing. What can I do?" staring at the blank walls as if they might help her.

As the light grew, despair drove her down-stairs, out into the street, not daring to let go the door, lest it might shut and leave her outside with no latch-key; she stared up and down the damp, ugly street. There was no Jacky anywhere, and a sudden fright of unseen eyes even here in the loneliest hour of the day, drove Gillian indoors with flying feet.

"After all, it mayn't be anything!" She stood in Jacky's room again, panting; "it may be a good reason that's keeping her. And she's got the key, she can always get in. All I can do is to wait."

Not even to herself would she say what she was waiting for. If the police had seized on Jacky the evening would tell her, for it would be in the first paper that came out. Till evening she must sit there, sick for Jacky's sake, helpless in her suspense. And it was not yet seven o'clock! The day that must be lived through stretched out before her like eternity.

Motionless, she sat in Jacky's armchair, her eyes shut, her lax arms hanging at her sides. But for her breathing it might have been a corpse that sat alone in an empty room, so waxenly transparent was the colorless face and so blue the hollows under the eyes.

As each hour rang brazenly from some clock outside she set her teeth like a woman in agony. Eight o'clock; nine; ten; eleven, and no Jacky!

"Some evening papers come out at three," she kept saying to herself, checking off an hour each time the bells clanged. "I'll know then!"

Her hunger and exhaustion made her dreamy. Sometimes her thoughts wandered a little, but always the sound of the hour brought her to herself.

"Oh, God! will it ever be evening?" she muttered when at last she heard the twelve strokes of noon. But they had not died away before she leaped to her feet, wild with joy.

There was a low, guarded whisper at her door, a gentle, covert tapping.

"Let me in, it's I!" came softly through the key-hole. If Jacky's voice was hoarse, what wonder!

Choking back a scream of joy, Gillian flew to the door, unlocked it, flung it wide.

"Jacky!" all her soul was in her voice that came so hardly through her dry throat, her feverish lips. "Oh, Jacky! I thought you never——"

She fell back, cowering, with a strange, strangled cry.

Mrs. Gibbs, her swollen face triumphant, her small, brown eyes full of a malice so dreadful that Gillian covered her own not to see them, stood on the threshold.

"So, I've run you to earth, my lady!" she cried, showing her short, uneven teeth, her purplish gums in the smile of a brute victorious. "You didn't think when you ran away that you'd left your address behind you! You and your precious sister. Where is she?" suddenly. "Ain't she here?" peering past Gillian's shoulder.

The girl shook her head, speechless. She could not know Mrs. Gibbs was rather relieved than otherwise at Jacky's absence; Mary James knew too much! She flourished something in Gillian's eyes.

"I found that in Marchmont's drawer, him that you murdered!"

Gillian's own handwriting swam before her eyes as she saw the woman held a letter, one of those to Jacky that she had truly fancied were never posted. There in black and white she read what had brought doom on her.

"Miss J. Hamilton, 17 Blake Street, Bloomsbury."

Thank God, oh, thank God! Jacky had never come back.

"I found it yesterday, and I didn't let the grass grow after that." Mrs. Gibbs' fury rose till she could hardly keep her hands off the girl before her. "Mary Gibbs that wasn't good enough for you to speak to"—mincingly she tried to imitate Gillian's voice—"we'll see who's on top now, me that loved him, or you that hated him. Me that will stand by to see you swing! You——" but the string of vile names never reached Gillian's ears.

"Gently, gently! There's no need for all that," said a man's voice in cool authority behind the maddened housekeeper.

Gillian, who had never spoken since that first cry, saw a man in plain clothes at Mrs. Gibbs' shoulders; behind him a policeman.

The hounds were on the hare.

Get The Book FREE! If you would like to read the whole of this wonderful story at once and learn its thrilling conclusion, rather than wait for the monthly installments as they appear in COMFORT, we shall be glad to make you a present of the complete story in book form. Send us only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, and we will send you a copy of the book free and postpaid.
Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

A Whistle and a Challenge

By A. W. Peach

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

IT was a dark world and an unhappy one to Randell; and anything that suggested sunshine and happiness grated upon his nerves that had long been worn by a brave effort to face his affliction without complaint. It mattered little that the hideous fire into which he had plunged to rescue the two office girls had given him a chance to win a name as a hero; the fact remained that his effort had cost him his eyesight. It mattered little, too, that his firm had secured able medical attendance. He was blind, and the long months had brought him no hope.

Now, just beyond the porch to which he had been led, he could hear a boy's cheery whistling, and the gay tune, filled with a rollicking happiness, drove him into anger. He touched the bell that had been placed on the table near him, and when a voice spoke kindly out of the silence, he said sharply:

"Will you ask that kid to stop that whistling? He's over in that direction!"

He heard footsteps leave, and suddenly the whistling stopped short, and silence came save for the sound of the footsteps that were his only signal from the darkness about him.

"You will not be bothered any more," the voice of his nurse said quietly.

A bit of his old nature came to command. "I am sorry I feel the way I do; but it's too happy a whistle for me," he added, lapsing back into his old despair.

He heard the tuneful whistle after that, but it was muffled as if it came from within two rooms, and there was something about it, too, that suggested the whistler had suddenly remembered the warning to stop his merry music.

The next day, he heard quick footsteps, and a clear boyish voice said: "Hello, I'm the chap who was whistling yesterday, but I've cut it out. I thought I'd come over and see you. I've heard about you. You certainly did a brave thing."

Randell was in the mood to hurry the owner of the whistle home, but some remnant of his old kindness was still with him.

"No, it was what any man would do; and it does not help now," he said bitterly.

"It ought to," the clear voice came to his consciousness, "be a pleasant memory. Suppose you had not done it, what then?"

Randell laughed harshly. "I could see; now I can't—and never will!"

"Say, do you play checkers?"

Randell felt a throb of interest. It had been his favorite indoor game, and he loved to play it. Before his mind's eye the checker-board appeared. But he shook his head—because he had gotten into the habit of shaking his head.

"I'm a shark at it," the voice said challengingly." How about it—two out of three games? I can trim you—make a bet?"

Randell smiled faintly. "Look here, son, you have plenty of nerve. I'll show you a few things about checkers."

"I'll get a board. I thought you weren't a quitter."

There was a sound of light feet scurrying away, leaving Randell with a new thought: was he giving other people the idea he was a quitter? The thought hurt, for above all things in other days he himself had hated a quitter.

His opponent returned, and the game commenced. Randell lost the first one as a result of the strangeness of guiding his men on a board that to a large degree he had to imagine. The second game he won to the disgust of his small opponent, the third he lost to his own vocal disgust.

"We'll make a tournament of it," his conqueror said gleefully. "I can trim everybody in my house, and I guess I can trim you."

"Is that so?" Randell heard himself say with mild heat. "I'll take you on, but I'm sorry for you."

"I'll do the worrying," said the happy voice, and the light feet went from hearing.

It was the beginning of pleasant days for Randell. From the checker playing, they drifted to reading: and the reading carried Randell from his own dark world out into the splendid world that dead minds yet living had opened up for the blind minds of men. He caught a new interest, faint but abiding; and always his keen-thinking little friend in some subtle way held out to him the invigorating hint of his first challenge—are you a quitter?

Randell did not know he was improving until he heard the surgeon speaking inside the house. "He is improving physically and mentally, and that means much. In two weeks I will see what I can do for him."

The two weeks went by, and Randell in the meantime was always listening for the light step of "sonny," the clear, sweet voice that had taken on a friendly tenderness when he had been told of the coming operation and the momentous result hanging upon it—the light of day or the abiding darkness of eternal night.

Randell faced the issue without complaint. He had found himself, and had made up his mind that even if luck was against him, no one would hear a whimper from him. He would not be a quitter.

At last the day came for his departure to the hospital.

"Lots of spunk?" his friend queried gently.

"Spunk to the end," he answered.

The good bys were brief, simple, after the immemorial way of those strong of heart.

Black days followed until the wonderful hour when the bandages were lifted, and he saw dimly and heard the surgeon's pleased assurance that he would see almost as well as before the fire.

A week later, he found his way to the home of the nurse who had taken care of him.

"I want to see the kid who helped me get my nerve. I'm going to tell him how much I think of——" he began.

A whistle came to them. Turning, Randell hurried across the street, tracing the elusive tune. He turned the corner of the house, and looked into the garden. There the whistler stood, flowers in hand—a slight, winsome figure in white, dark-headed, dark-eyed; and the eyes opened wide as they saw him.

The two stood in silence for a moment. She was the first to rally, and she came toward him with her hands out.

"My blind man—oh, it is good to see you and know!" she said so quietly and gladly that Randell felt himself strangely stirred.

"But I thought you—you—were a boy!" he said awkwardly, not over his first surprise.

She laughed. "I did deceive you. You see, I am quite a mimic, and I thought we would be more—more friendly if you thought I was just what I guess I am—more or less of a boy. You'll forgive me the deception, won't you?"

With her dark eyes upon him, her face, that rivaled the flowers in her hand lifted to his, he could find words for just what his heart told him:

"Forgive you! You have been my good angel. 'Forgive'——"

"Even my whistling?" she asked shyly, for there was tension in the air.

"Even that," he said, smiling faintly, yet knowing that her eyes were answering his in the old way when lips cannot say all that lips would like to say.

A philatelic agency for the sale of stamps to collectors has been opened by the Post Office Department in Washington.

NEW Style OLIVER NOW READY

1923 Model

Every trained typist can operate the new Oliver without loss of speed or output. Why? Because it has the Standard 3-Bank Keyboard

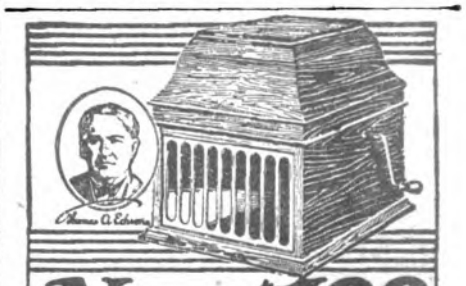
Send today for catalog explaining this new 1923 typewriter. The New Oliver—Quiet Speedster—is the crowning achievement of 28 years of manufacturing. Absolutely standard 3-bank keyboard, almost silent action, AND unquestionably the most durable typewriter built. You'll like the beautiful, clear, legible typing of the Oliver. The perfect alignment and the symmetrical spacing. No typing equals it.



SAVE $25 to $50

The superb new model Oliver is offered at the lowest price and on the easiest terms ever offered for a FIRST QUALITY standard typewriter. It has every modern improvement and many original features. Simplified construction and efficient manufacturing make it possible for us to make our money-saving offer on the NEW Oliver.

A Week's Free Trial—Send for Details Get the FACTS about our FREE TRIAL OFFER. Our catalog explains all. No money in advance. Terms as low as $5 a month if you decide to buy. Return at our expense if not delighted.

CATALOG FREE It illustrates every detail and explains fully all the features of the New Oliver, the Quiet Speedster with the standard 3-bank keyboard, the most durable of all typewriters. Learn WHY and HOW you can save $25 to $50, or more, on each machine—the world's best. No charge. No obligation.

THE OLIVER TYPEWRITER COMPANY
160A Oliver Typewriter Building Chicago

Now $100 Down

KEEP the New Edison Amberola—Edison's great phonograph with the diamond stylus reproducer—and your choice of records, for only $1.00. Pay balance at rate of only a few cents a day. Hear it in your own home before you decide. Only $1.00 down. Seize this opportunity.

Write for Book

Get our New Edison catalog. Your name and address on a post card or letter is enough. Find out about this offer—while this offer lasts.

F. K. BABSON, Edison Phonograph Dists.
19th St. and Marshall Blvd., Dept 8-970, Chicago, Ill.

MAKE MONEY AT HOME

15 to 50 Dollars a week for your Spare Time—No Canvassing—Experience Unnecessary. Write today. Free Outfit.

United Show Card Studio, 245 Dinan Bldg., Detroit, Mich.
Dear Sir:—Please send me your Booklet & terms free.
Name .....
Address .....
City ..... State .....

BLUE WHITE Luxite Diamond
If you can tell it from a Diamond Send it Back!

1 CARAT RINGS $2.98. Not one diamond in a thousand has the blue, dazzling brilliancy of "Luxite Diamonds." They're PERFECT; few diamonds are! Stand acid and all other tests. Only experts can tell you haven't paid $150.00. Hand engraved solitaire ring 14K gold $2., guaranteed!

$2.98 C.O.D.

DON'T SEND A PENNY! Send only name, address and paper strip which fits end to end around finger. When ring comes deposit only $2.98 with postman. We pay postage! Money back if not delighted. Free Beautiful full-size BAR PIN, set with Luxite Diamonds, platinoid finish, free with ring.

GARFIELD IMPORTING CO., 3839 W. ROOSEVELT RD., Dept. 488, CHICAGO

CLIMAX TROMBONE OUTFIT $5.25 Down—then pay only $5 per month for six months!

Climax Trombone; perfect slide action; EASY BLOWING; handsomely engraved bell; polished brass; beautiful, sonorous tone; complete with side-opening, flannel-lined Keratol case; professional mouthpiece, lyre, mute; self-instructor. Money-back Guarantee! ORDER NOW! For sale by your Music Merchant.

LYON & HEALY, 65-89, Jackson Blvd., Chicago

$25 A DAY Selling Shirts

Large shirt manufacturer wants agents to sell complete line of shirts, pajamas, and night shirts direct to wearer. Advertised brand—exclusive patterns—easy to sell. No experience or capital required. Entirely new proposition. Write for free samples.

Madison Shirt Co., 503 Broadway, N.Y.C.

GIVEN Take your choice—Genuine Pathfinder Watch, real compass in stem, guaranteed timekeeper, stem wind and set, unbreakable crystal. Or fine Boy Scout Knife with screw driver and many other implements. Sell only 12 boxes famous Mentho-Nova, 25c box. Send no money, we trust you until goods are sold. Then premium is yours. Order now.

U. S. SUPPLY COMPANY
Dept. F-H, 7, Greenville, Pa.

THIS KNIFE FREE for selling 8 boxes ROSEBUD at 25c each and remitting $2.00. Knife has best steel blades, we put your name on. Order Rosebud at once.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO., Box 232, Woodsboro, Md.

In 1877 New York City Had Two Telephones

In 1897	21,595	In 1908	310,000
In 1900	56,000	In 1915	562,000
In 1905	190,000	In 1920	890,000

On April 1, 1922, New York City had 1,010,056 telephones—more than in the entire United States in 1900.

Chicken Lice Vanish In Twenty-Four Hours

Amazing New Discovery Banishes Vermin Like Magic—Makes Fowls Grow and Lay More Eggs

Practical Poultryman Offers $1 For Every Louse You Can Find.

Lice, chiggers, fleas, mites, etc., probably steal one-third to one-half of the poultry raiser's profits by sucking the very life blood from the flock. But there is no longer any reason why you should suffer this loss since the perfection of a remarkable new mineral formula by science.

Not only does this wonderful method do away with the bother and trouble of greasing, dusting and spraying, but it practically assures doubling your profits because you get more eggs and fatter broilers.

The Lousy Chicken Loses You Money

With this simple, scientific system you merely drop a few mineral tablets in the fowls' drinking water. The tablets quickly dissolve and within a day or two after the fowls drink the water, the lice, fleas, etc., leave like magic. For instance, J. H. Veach, of Logansport, La., writes "The lice left my flock like a swarm of gnats on a sultry morning," and Fergstrand Bros., the widely known Pennsylvania raisers of pure bred poultry, say they will give a dollar for any louse you can find on their poultry since using Paratabs.

This wonderful mineral compound simply puts elements into the fowls' blood which the lice cannot stand, yet is warranted not to flavor the eggs or meat in any way.

Over 150,000 poultry raisers have used this formula known as Paratabs with great success. Many say they would not think of doing without it.

The Healthy, Lice-Free Hen Doubles Your Profits

Lady Jewel, who laid 305 eggs in one year.

Simply address a post card or letter to M. B. Smith, 3309 Coca Cola Bldg., Kansas City, Mo. Don't send any money at all. Mr. Smith will immediately send you two large $1.00 packages (enough for a season) at a special introductory price of only $1.00. Pay the postman only $1.00 and postage. You can easily sell one package to a friend and thus gets yours free. Try Paratabs 10 days. If the lice are not all gone, your hens laying more eggs, and strutting around full of life and pep—if for any reason you are not satisfied, simply say so and your money will be returned.

This is a special introductory offer good for only a short time and should be accepted at once, as a big bank says Mr. Smith does as he agrees, furthermore, your money is fully protected by ample bank deposits.

Successful Small Flock Poultry Keeping

A GUIDE FOR ALL WHO KEEP POULTRY ON A SMALL SCALE.

Gift No. 1762.

This brand-new, down-to-the-minute book is certain to prove a highly popular addition to the farm library. It is a complete, practical and thoroughly reliable guide for all beginners, especially those interested in small-scale poultry keeping. It deals with the every-day work in the poultry yard in a plain and simple manner and omits nothing that is essential to a thorough understanding of the subject. It enables the beginner to apply the latest and most successful methods to his particular conditions, whatever these may be, and practically insures his success.

104 Pages, 8½x12 In.

LIST OF CHAPTERS IN BOOK

Advantages in Back-Yard Poultry Keeping.
Reports from Successful Small-Flock Owners.
The Back-Yard Poultry Plant as a Source of Profit.
Helpful Reports from Money-Making Flocks.
How To Insure Success—What Not To Do
How To Hatch and Rear Chicks Successfully.
Some Practical Poultry Houses and How To Build Them.
Feeding the Back-Yard Laying Flock.
General Care and Management of the Laying Flock.
Egg Production Without Outdoor Runs.
Profitable Markets for Surplus Poultry Products.
What the Beginner Wants to Know About Breeds.
Mating and Management of Breeding Flocks.
Successful Methods of Breeding Exhibition Fowls.
Culling Methods for the Back-Yard Poultry Keeper.
How Artificial Light Increases Winter Production.
Protecting the Health of the Back-Yard Flock.

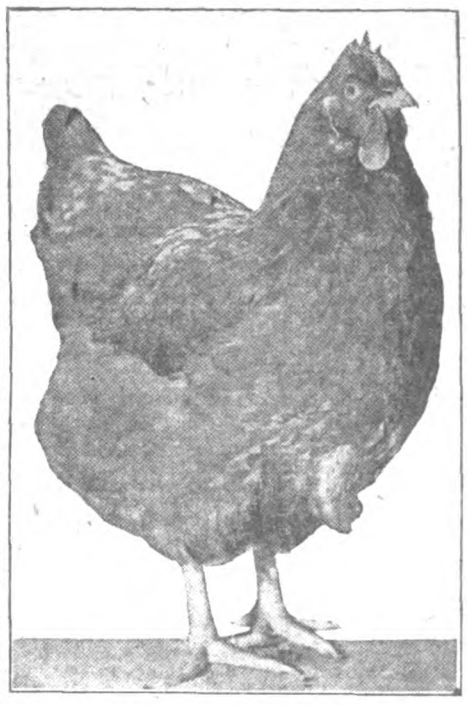
AN EGG FACTORY IN EVERY BACK YARD.

It is true economy for almost any household to have a flock of fowls in the yard, regardless of location. Modern methods of poultry keeping are not only simple and easy to apply, but they reduce expense and eliminate risk and uncertainty. Any person, anywhere, who will follow the simple, easily understood directions given in this book can keep fowls successfully—NO DOUBT WHATEVER ABOUT THIS.

An especially interesting feature consists of the numerous reports from persons who are successfully keeping fowls on a small scale and who tell, in their own words, just how they do it and what returns they are realizing. These inspiring reports are full of practical suggestions for others.

"Successful Back-Yard Poultry Keeping" is illustrated with attractive half-tone photo-engravings (over 100 of them), is printed on supercalendered book paper, contains 104 pages, 8½ by 12 inches, and has a beautiful art cover by Schilling.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each we will send you free and postpaid the book "Successful Back-Yard Poultry Keeping." Reward No. 1762.



Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

BY KATE V. SAINT MAUR.

Growing Stock and Moulting Hens

CHICKS that grow rapidly are always the most profitable, so don't neglect the half-grown birds. Of course, I don't believe in forcing young pullets by the use of stimulants into abnormally early production, but young pullets which are forced along on good food with plenty of fresh air and exercise will surely develop size and vigor before the egg organs are affected, as they depend largely on heat for growth, so that it frequently happens that neglected youngsters who have fed principally on corn are left too long in heated brooders or allowed to crowd together in small brood coops at night, develop the egg organs at the expense of bodily growth and constitutional vigor, and such birds may commence to lay very early in the fall, but the eggs will be small and the supply soon give out, leaving you with an undersized, sickly bird, which will never be profitable. But when pullets are grown right—given room, airy coops at night, free range or large yard, and fed a wholesome ration, there is no danger of their developing too fast.

RHODE ISLAND RED HEN.

When chicks are eight weeks old, they should be separated from their mothers, and the families divided; the young pullets being relegated to colony coops in an orchard or partly shaded meadow, where they will have extensive free range; the cockerels being placed in the semi-confinement of wards, as their ultimate fate is the frying pan, which necessitates plump bodies, while free range would only develop frame and muscle.

Our colony houses are six feet long, three feet wide, thirty-six inches high in front, and twenty-four at the back. They are made of light scantling, the ends, back and roof being covered with roofing paper; and the front to within eight inches of the ground, with unbleached muslin, which insures perfect ventilation and prevents rain beating in upon the birds when they are upon the roosts, which are fixed a foot from the bottom and nine inches from the back of the coop. Two holes are made, nine inches apart, in the middle of each end of the coop, and a heavy rope knotted through them, to form handles.

The coops having no flooring, and the whole construction being light, they are easily removed to fresh ground every week, and so kept clean with little trouble—an important item when there is a large quantity being used. Having a large orchard, we placed the coops in rows thirty feet apart, as two sides of the orchard adjoin woodland through which a never failing spring stream runs, so the birds have a splendid range.

Twenty birds are placed in each coop. The first week a portable yard, five feet long, is placed in front of each coop, so that the young chicks cannot wander off and get lost, as they surely would in strange quarters. During that time a self-feeding hopper and a drinking fountain are placed inside of the coop. When the yard is removed, the individual vessels are dispensed with, large drinking tubs and food hoppers being stationed midway between every four coops, to reduce time and labor in caring for the birds.

The large hoppers are nothing more than boxes, five feet long, two feet wide and six inches deep, over which is placed an A-shaped cover, made of slats, one inch apart, to prevent the birds getting into the box and scratching the grain on to the ground, where it will be wasted. For water, five gallon kegs are used, with an automatic escape which keeps a small pan continually full. Both feed and water are placed under a rough shelter, to protect them from sun and rain. Using such large receptacles, it is only necessary to fill them every other day.

Feed consists of a dry mash, composed of ten pounds of wheat bran, ten pounds of ground oats, 1 pound of white middlings, 1 pound old process oil meal, and ten pounds of beef scraps well mixed. In addition to that, they receive at night a feed of wheat and cracked corn, two parts of the former to one of the latter. About half a pint is scattered in front of each coop about four P. M.

Grit is supplied in large quantities. Being near a stone crusher, we buy the screenings by the cart load and dump it in heaps on the outskirts of the orchard where it does not show, but is quite accessible to the chicks.

On these rations, without any variation, the pullets are kept until September, when they are transferred to their winter quarters.

Pullets which have to be grown in confinement should have a well-littered coop of good size, and having large openings. That is, the greater portion of one side should be wire. The pullets should not be crowded nor should they be grown in large flocks. They should be fed practically the same as those on free range. They should have the dry mash before mentioned, grit, charcoal and shells, and be fed grain and green food. Where the green food is lettuce, lawn clippings or garden refuse, they should have two grain feeds a day, and this should be scattered in litter, not too deep. Where sprouted oats are used for greens, one feed a day of hard grain is sufficient.

Cockerels and old hens should not be allowed with growing pullets. Where the cockerels are allowed to run with pullets neither will mature to full size. Too often we see cockerels and pullets allowed free range on the farm, and all allowed to mix together. Good stock can not be grown in this manner, and the future egg yield of the flock will not be as large as it would be if more care were given the growing stock.

Cockerels intended for breeders should have every advantage that will tend to full and perfect development, and I prefer, when possible, to give them free range, isolated from hens and pullets. Next to free range comes large yards with well-littered coops or roosts out of doors. Good cockerels as I ever raised lived all summer in a large yard without a coop. Poles were set up in the shade of a large apple tree, and on these the cockerels roosted. In the event of a storm they sought the protection of a tree. They were a hardy, close feathered bunch, and stood the rigors of a severe winter in an open house with the utmost comfort. At best they should only have a roof to protect them from the rain.

It is strange that few people except the real poultry farmers realize that July is one of the most important months in the year. The desire to have eggs in zero weather invariably compels good attention to hens in summer. Baby chicks arouse interest in spring, but as the weather gets warmer, eggs are plentiful, and the pretty fluffy babies, developed into long, lanky creatures, seem nothing but a nuisance specially designed to destroy the garden, so the poor things are shut up on small quarters, and wofully neglected. During the fall and winter I am repeatedly asked how to make pullets and hens lay, but I can rarely suggest a remedy, because nine times out of ten it is the result of blunders made the preceding summer.

If poultry is to be profitable, the old and young stock must have been kept apart, because it is impossible to feed correctly when they are all together. Young birds need plenty of nutritious food to push them along quickly, and laying hens must be put on special rations to bring about early moulting, which is the foundation of a good supply of winter eggs.

Moulting

About July 5th commence to cut down the feed gradually until at the end of two weeks forty hens are having a pint of oats and a pint of wheat mixed, night and morning. Scatter it amongst cut straw or some litter, so they will have to scratch for every grain. The first of August, commence to increase the rations, and keep it up for a week, so that by the fifteenth they are getting two quarts of mash in the morning, a quart of meat scraps and a pint of cracked corn at noon, and wheat and oats and barley at night. Give them just about all they will eat up clean in fifteen minutes. The morning mash should be composed of two parts ground feed (corn or oats) one part white middlings and one part oil meal mixed with scalding milk or water. The semi-starvation followed by the heavy feed forces the moulting season and allows plenty of time to get in condition before October, when their rations should be made up of the essentials of egg production, which are clover hay, bran, wheat, corn and animal food.

You see, it takes about three months for hens to get rid of their old feathers and put on a new coat, and if the process is not forced in some way, they will not commence before August, which would make it October before they finished. Of course, that would be time enough if it happened to be a warm, late fall, but if cold weather sets in, as it often does, in November, hens would not lay before spring, as moulting leaves them in a more or less debilitated condition.

Lots of people make the mistake of selling off hens as soon as they cease laying at this season, which means that they are really parting with the birds which would make the real winter layers. Hens that lay through the summer and do not cease until the fall will be idle and unprofitable in the winter. It is the general disregard of the moulting period which causes so many failures in the winter supply of eggs. The rule should be to sell off all the hens which have been laying steadily through the summer and commenced to shed feathers in September. Growing feathers is a trying ordeal, and the consequence is that when the hen begins to moult she ceases to lay, for she cannot produce eggs and feathers at the same time. Feathers are largely composed of nitrogen and mineral matter. That is why the food at moulting time has to be so very nutritious. To feed nothing but corn at such a time is simply waste, as the hen cannot produce new feathers on such a diet. If she were on free range she would have a better chance of gathering the necessary material, but even then, if the feathering process is delayed too long, the hen becomes exhausted, and is susceptible to cold and all sorts of diseases. This is the real reason why roup and swelled heads are so prevalent in the fall.

A PRIZE BARRED ROCK COCK.

Young birds hatched out in April or thereabouts, usually commence to lay in November, because they have not been subject to the drain upon the constitution caused by moulting. But chickens that have been hatched in February or early March are very liable to moult in the late fall, just when they should be commencing to lay. For this reason it is well to market all the first hatched chickens, and hold over those hatched late in March or through April, to increase the laying flock.

Cull all young stock down closely. Don't keep

July, the Hot Month

A SMALL boy once described July as "The firecracker month, when our dog lies under the porch with his tongue hangin' out." And, perhaps as a happy afterthought, he adds: "The month when we have sweet corn on the cob every day." A happy, kinky haired little Missouri darky says July is "W'en de fust waterm llions is ripe and de moom am bright." It would be difficult to find a way of describing July that would fit all parts of this great land of ours, but perhaps the smell of new-mown hay comes closest to the mark.

July is the month of Independence Day, the glorious Fourth of July, but for the farmer there is no independence at present Too much work to be done now. The corn to be laid-by in some places; in others it will soon get its last cultivation. But haying is the hot, sweaty job that keeps us in the field early and late, with one eye cocked at the sky occasionally to see if rain threatens. This is one time of the year when, no matter how much other crops may need moisture, rain is unwelcome. But when the hay is all in the barn then "Let 'er rain."

Garden work will require a little time now and then, if the soil is to be kept loosened to prevent loss of moisture and to keep down the weeds. If the men folks of the family see to this chore, the Missus and the girls will take care of picking peas and beans, and lettuce to set before us as salad. Remember that, if they did not one tap more than convert garden truck into tasty food, their share would be more than done. But, on most farms at least, the women do all or too much of the gardening; they also prepare the dinners for us hungry men; we eat until our belts are tight Shouldn't we do more of the work in exchange?

By the way, during July is the time to select your sweet corn, and we take it for granted that sweet corn has not been overlooked in planting the kitchen garden. It seems like privation, we admit, to set aside some of the earliest maturing ears to be saved for seed, but with an eye to the future that should be done, and now is the right time to do it. Leave some of the early maturing ears on the stalks to ripen. Perhaps it might be best to mark these ears in some way, say with a piece of white rag tied around the base of the ears, to prevent them from being pulled by mistake and making their appearance on the dinner table. For an ordinary garden half-a-dozen ears will supply more than enough seed, and a surplus to be kept for reseeding in case of early frost or loss from other causes. Allow the ears to fully ripen. When they are completely ripe and dry on the stalks, pull and husk them, then store in some dry place such as the attic. Keep out of the reach of mice, one of the worst enemies of corn of any kind in storage. Before winter comes, put the ears where they will not freeze and thus have their vitality and germinating qualities injured. Then next spring run a germination test; you will no doubt find that the seed tests high, and that the crop grown from it will ripen early to grace our tables and tickle our appreciative palates. "Sweet corn with butter—yum, yum; nothing we like better than more of it, say we."

"Swat the Fly!"

We would like to stop right here, with the taste of sweet corn in our mouth, but we cannot do that without doing an injustice to the livestock. Why is that? Well, July is the fly month, and we must do all we can to make life easier and more comfortable for horses and cows on the farm. Perhaps the old mare and her spindly legged foal are out on pasture where there is no shade? If so bring them in every day and use the sprayer on them, applying some good fly repellent made according to the instructions given by the manufacturer and printed plainly on the container. Sometimes an overdose of fly spray causes more torture than the flies themselves, if the spray is mixed too strong or is allowed to get into the eyes of animals. A farmer once asked, "Does it hurt?" and we told him to try it in his own eyes. That is a safe test for many things on the farm or elsewhere. Cows, too, should be protected from flies by spraying, but care should be taken to keep spray off the udder which is tender and likely to blister. If pastures are poorly shaded, and if there is little or no brush in which cows may seek shelter from flies, it is often best to keep them in the stable during the day, then turn them out during the night. When this is done hang cloths over the windows to darken them, keeping the stable cool, but still allowing plenty of fresh air to enter.

Summer garget of cows' udders is often troublesome in hot weather, and many dairymen attribute this trouble to flies which are attracted to the tiny droplets of milk that may accumulate on the tips of the teats. Infection may possibly result from this cause. The habit of standing "belly-deep" in cold water to escape flies and enjoy the refreshing coolness of the water may also cause garget in summer, for the udder is chilled by the water. To prevent, or lessen the danger of garget, apply carbolized vaseline to the tips of the teats after each milking, then see that cows are not permitted to stand in water so deep that the udders are immersed. Use fly spray in the stables of horses and cows, we should have added. No cow can produce up to capacity, and no work horse can render its best service, when pestered nigh onto distraction by the pesky flies. Do all you can to keep the pests out of stables and away from livestock. It pays.

Grow Kale for Winter Use

Kale, a member of the cabbage family, is well worth while trying in the farm kitchen garden, though it is not often found therein. The leaves of this plant are used for greens and are available in late fall and winter, when other green vegetables are none too plentiful.

In nothern States kale should be planted during the first or second week of July. Plant seed in shallow rows two and one-half feet apart in well prepared soil. When plants have become well established, thin out leaving the lustiest ones from twelve to fifteen inches apart in the rows. To keep the soil from drying out, and to promote rapid and normal growth, cultivate and hoe often during hot, dry weather.

As the plants reach maturity in the fall, the leaves may be cut off a few at a time for household use. Other plants will continue to grow in spite of heavy frost almost up to snowfall. It is best, however to cover them on the close approach of winter. For this purpose use straw, marsh hay, or half-barrels inverted over the plants. Protected in this manner, kale willl bleach well and will remain crisp and fresh to be a welcome addition to the farm table.

How to Waterproof Canvas

Haying season is the time that the canvas covers or caps are needed for covering clover or alfalfa cocks, and that the big stack cover is dug out of its resting place in the machine shed to be spread over the newly made hay stack. How often we have seen both caps and stack covers, not old but looking old, brought out for use and discarded as useless? Often they were mildewed or the fabric rotted. Perhaps they were damp when folded and put away; more likely than not the injury is in a large measure due to the effects of sunlight as much as moisture. And the best part of it is that such injury can be prevented by treating with pigments and waterproofing mixtures. Now, when new canvases are being bought, is the time to treat them to protect them from damage and to lengthen their period of service.

Many farmers will laugh at the statement that sunlight damages canvas. Though it is a recent discovery, and therefore known to few, it is quite true. The Federal Bureau of Chemistry found that when canvas was waterproofed and treated with chemicals to prevent mildew, it still failed to last as it should, but when pigments of some sort were added to keep out the light, the fiber remained strong. Several pigments were found to be suitable for use, allowing for choice on the part of the user. For a buff to khaki color, use yellow ochre; for a darker buff to light brown, use raw sienna; for dark red or reddish brown, use burnt sienna; for olive brown, use raw umber; and for dark brown, use burnt umber. These pigments will have a familiar sound, as they are the same ones commonly used in paints.

Two formulas have been extensively used with fine results. These are;

Formula No. 1.

Dark or yellow petrolatum (vaseline), 8½ pounds;
Beeswax, 1½ pounds;
Gasolene, 3 gallons;
Kerosene, 2 gallons;
Earth pigment (dry or ground in linseed oil), one pound to each gallon of prepared solution.

Formula No. 2.

Asphalt (petroleum or Berudez).... 7½ pounds;
Dark or yellow petrolatum (vaseline) 2½ pounds;
Gasolene 3 gallons;
Kerosene, 2 gallons;
Earth pigment (dry or ground in linseed oil), one pound in each gallon of prepared solution.

The quantities given in the two formulas are sufficient for treating about 40 square yards of canvas when brushed on one side only. Canvas treated with Mixture No.2 will probably be somewhat more water-resistant than canvas treated with Mixture No. 1, but it will also be darker because of the asphalt. The second formula may also be preferred for the reason that asphalt is usually cheaper, especially when used in large amounts.

For canvas that is intended to remain in a fixed position, such as wagon covers, boiled linseed oil containing 1 pound of pigment to the gallon may be used. This treatment stiffens the canvas, however, and is not suitable for covers that are frequently folded. For flexible covers lamp black with linseed oil was found to be among the best. Aluminum bronzing powder and, for a white color, zinc oxide are also good, but the latter stiffens the canvas more than any of the other pigments.

These new formulas including pigments that protect canvas from the damaging effects of the sun, combined with the waterproofing and mildew-preventing qualities of the other ingredients, should find a wide field of usefulness on the farm. In addition to stack covers and hay caps, the use of canvas covers for protecting commodities of all kinds is made necessary by the increased number of heavy motor trucks now in use for long hauls.

Heavy Milkers Need Grain

Cows that give a large flow of milk should receive some grain, no matter how good the pasture may be, if the milk flow is to be maintained and body flesh is to be kept in correct condition. On poor pasture the feeding of grain is not a matter of choice; it is a necessity, if the cows are to do well.

To make a grain mixture that will balance pasture grass throughout the entire season is impossible. In the early spring, pasture grass contains much more protien than it does later in the season. In hot weather droughts affect the growth of pasture grasses, making the use of different grains necessary to properly balance the ration at this time. Corn meal, wheat bran, oats, cottonseed meal, oilmeal and gluten feed are some of the best feeds to use for cows on pasture. From 3 to 10 pounds of grain daily are the extreme limits usually followed for feeding grain to pastured milk cows, the increase being made gradually as pastures become scant about July. During very dry weather grass becomes low in succulence; now is the time to call the summer silo into play—if there is one on the farm. But comparatively few farms yet are equipped with what in time will come to be regarded as a dairying necessity. Therefore the only alternative is to cut and feed some kind of green feed, such as corn. When silage is fed, see that the grain mixture is rich in protein, the ingredient which silage lacks.

A sample grain ration for late summer pasture is: 200 pounds corn meal, 150 pounds ground oats, 150 pounds cottonseed meal, 150 pounds gluten feed. (Corn silage if possible).

A sample grain ration for early pastures is: 300 pounds corn meal, 100 pounds ground oats, 100 pounds gluten feed, 50 pounds cottonseed meal.

Look Before You Load

Failure to thoroughly inspect all cars intended for livestock shipments before they are loaded is an oversight that costs American farmers many thousands of dollars each year. A little thought and care, perhaps a bit of work with a saw and hammer and nails, and the easily and quickly made repairs would cut this loss down to a minimum.

To illustrate the need of car inspection and repairs that should be made personally by every farmer who ships livestock: Recently a careful inspection of some 700 carloads of livestock arriving at seven of the large markets was conducted by supervisors of the packers and stockyards administration of the Department of Agriculture. Of the cars inspected in this investigation, 7 had holes in the floor, 91 had projecting nails in the walls, and 88 had cleats that might—and probably did—cause bad bruises or other serious injuries. Of the cars inspected, 82 were entirely lacking in bedding of any kind, a large factor in the safety and comfort of animals in transit to market.

Last year one middlewestern market reported 1,700 cattle and more than 2,000 hogs found crippled in cars on arrival at their destination. A large eastern market reports more than 1,000 crippled hogs received in one month. These numbers are small in comparison to the total receipts at the large markets, it is true, but they look mighty large to the shippers who own animals crippled in transit.

The railroads maintain a very thorough car inspection service at the large markets, but by no means all of the cars sent to small country shipping points have moved directly from these terminals where inspections have been made. As a direct consequence many cars have defects that may easily cripple animals in transit or even cause death. No matter who is to blame for the condition of stock cars, it is to the interest of every shipper to conduct an inspection of his own, for even an inspected car may have become defective between the time of its inspection and its delivery at the loading chute. Certainly it is "up to the shipper" to see that sufficient bedding of the right sort is provided. Frequently partitions are used in stock cars, and because of this a careful inspection must be made for projecting nails and cleats that may have been left when such partitions were removed. Go over the floor carefully and patch any holes that are found, for the floor is the most important part of the car. See that all doors are in good repair, that they slide readily on the overhead track, and that they fit so that they may be secured with the lock-bolt after stock is on board. Often a little axle grease on the sliding track and rollers saves much heavy lifting and pushing when stock are fed or watered enroute to market. See that the doorstops or cross staves are present when the car is received, and that they are placed across doors and the doors themselves fastened to stay shut when loading is completed.

Summer Shipping Hints

During the hot weather of mid-summer overheating, particularly of hogs, is a common cause of loss. For this reason hogs should be conveyed from the farm to the loading point in trucks or wagons if it is possible to do so. If they must be driven on foot, drive them slowly allowing plenty of time for resting along the way. Hogs should be in the loading pens at the railroad for at least two or three hours before loading time; this permits them to rest and become thoroughly cooled off before they are put aboard the cars.

In summer clean bedding is essential, and every shipper should insist upon it, which he has a perfect right to do. Old bedding is particularly bad if it has been left from several previous shipments, as such moist and filthy bedding heats and ferments to give off an offensive odor and increase inside-of-car temperature. Experienced shippers have learned that sand is the ideal bedding for hogs, as this may be thoroughly wet down before loading, and the moist sand keeps the cars cool in transit.

Iceing hog cars is a practice that is rapidly growing in popularity due to lowered hog losses and improved condition of animals on arrival at their destination. Iceing may be done in two or three ways. One plan used extensively, and recommended by the Kansas Livestock Association, is to place two large cakes of ice, 200 pounds in weight at the ends of hog cars bedded with sand. Another plan is to break up two or three large cakes into 50 pound chunks, scatter them about in the car, and cover them with sand. Either of these plans keeps the sand moist and cool, and will appreciably lower the inside-of-car temperature for from one to two days on the road. Still another plan is to hang 100 pound cakes, three of them in most cases, in burlap sacks at the ends and middle of hog cars. Double bags are usually used, and these containing the ice are suspended by strong ropes from the car ceiling. As the cars rock and roll from side to side, the melting ice drips cold water over the entire interior, cooling the air, keeping the sand damp, and increasing the comfort of the inmates.

Lighter Loading Is Safest

In cold weather heavy loading seldom does harm; on the other hand it sometimes is beneficial, as body heat makes for comfort. But in extremely hot weather the present minimum of 17,000 pounds is too much for long hauls, and it is often more economical in the long run for shippers to pay freight charges on "air" and clad lighter. Crowding too many fat hogs into cars in hot weather is one of the commonest causes of loss, and the loss is almost entirely preventable.

New Federal Rye Grades

With the rye harvest either completed or well under way in many parts of the country, the new Federal rye grades just announced and becoming effective on July 1st, 1923, may be of interest and value to readers who raise the crop. According to the new regulations, rye is any grain that consists of 50 per cent. or more of rye before dockage, and when free from dockage contains not more than 10 per cent. of any cereal grain other than rye. Five grades are provided for as follows:

Grade No. 1 is rye of cool and natural odor, having a test weight per bushel of at least 56 pounds. It may contain not more than 13 per cent. of moisture, not more than 2 per cent. of damaged kernels and no heat-damaged kernels. It may contain not more than 3 per cent. of foreign material other than dockage, this 3 per cent. to include not more than 1 per cent. of foreign matter other than wheat.

Grade No.2 is rye of cool and natural odor, having a test weight per bushel of at least 54 pounds. It may contain not more than 14 per cent. of moisture 4 per cent. of damaged kernels, no heat-damaged kernels, not more than 6 per cent. of foreign matter other than dockage of which not more than 2 per cent. is grain other than wheat.

Grade No. 3 must weigh at least 52 pounds per bushel, may contain not more than 15 per cent. of moisture, not more than 7 per cent. of damaged kernels of which not more than ½ per cent. are heat-damaged, and not more than 10 per cent. foreign matter other than dockage of which not more than 4 per cent. is grain other than wheat.

Grade No. 4 shall be cool but may be musty or slightly sour and must weigh at least 49 pounds per bushel. It may contain not more than 16 per cent. of moisture, not more than 15 per cent. of damaged kernels containing not more than 3 per cent. of heat-damaged kernels, not more than 10 per cent. foreign matter other than dockage of which not more than 6 per cent. is grain other than wheat.

Sample Grade rye is all rye that does not come within any of the grades from 1 to 4, inclusive, or which has any commercially objectionable foreign odor except of smut, garlic, wild onions, or is very sour, or is heating, hot, or otherwise of distinctly low quality, or contains small stones or cinders that cannot be screened out.

Complete copies of the standards may be obtained free upon request from the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., or from any licensed Government grain inspector or supervisor.

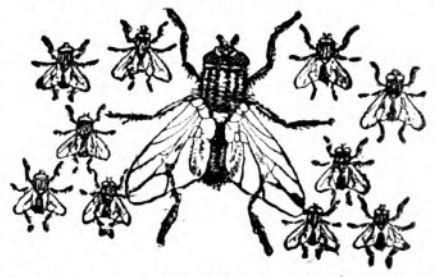
Why Kill Harmless Snakes?

"There goes a snake! Kill it, quick." And ninety-nine men out of every hundred, whether they be barefoot boys or gray-haired grandpas, will pick up a stick or a stone and "do their durnedest" to kill the pesky snake.

Why is this true? Why does the sight of a scared, squirming harmless snake make us wish to kill it? Is it to give vent to the unrestrained human desire to kill, or is it because so many of us honestly believe that every snake is the enemy of men? To our way of thinking, the latter belief is the best explanation of our snake killing proclivities, and we might well add that snake killing is a pastime that costs farmers many dollars each year. Why? For the very simple reason that most of our common snakes are entirely harmless to man—but on the other hand they are the sworn enemies of mice and insects that destroy his crops.

Snakes may be roughly classed as poisonous and harmless. In this country the poisonous kinds are comparatively scarce in most localities. Moreover, they are the constant victims of man, and in time will be entirely exterminated. As any old resident will state, rattlers that were once numerous in his locality are now almost if not entirely unknown. Other venomous species are going the same way of the transgressor.

But the harmless species are far more numerous, and they have a necessary place in the program of Nature. They are not pests. They are not in any way dangerous to human life. Nor do they "suck cows in pasture" or do any of the many impossible things attributed to them by the ignorant or misinformed. Rather, the harmless snakes are man's willing servants and helpers, and should be so considered by all who have killed them on sight.



The commonest snake found generally throughout the country is the garter snake, often called also the grass snake—the correct name of a much smaller and entirely green snake that is far less common. Then there is the pine snake found in wooded country; the blue racer; the bull snake that is the enemy of the rattler; certain moccasins that are harmless except for the deadly water moccasin of the southern swamps. With a few exceptions our common snakes are not climbers, but live upon the ground, seek shelter in piles of stones or in grass or brush, and live upon food found in fields, swamps and thickets. Field mice in grain fields always attract garter snakes; pine snakes, though seldom seen, make life precarious for mice in old deserted buildings or in stack bottoms where they follow the mice into holes or burrows. Frogs and toads, along with mice, chipmunks, gophers and even rats, form a large part of the natural food of snakes. An occasional ground-nesting bird is also caught, but most birds have but little fear of snakes, trusting to flight for safety. Insects of all kinds form the principal food of all snakes of the harmless sorts, but particularly of the baby garter snakes found in hay fields in July. Here the snakes live and thrive and grow on the crickets and grasshoppers that do untold damage to growing crops—and the snakes are killed for their good work as insect killers in return. Is that a fair deal, for the snakes or for the farmer either?

We make a serious mistake when we teach children to fear snakes; we do wrong when we teach them to kill them. Why, just watch a garter snake scurry for cover when it is disturbed in its mousing in the grain field! Does it try to do harm to humans? Certainly not; furthermore it can't, being without fangs or poison sacks. All it asks is to be let alone. Willingly it gets out of man's way. Consider the work snakes do, know the facts, then give the harmless snakes a chance. They will pay us well for it in return.

EASY NOW TO RID YOUR PLACE OF FLIES

Widely Known Scientist Discovers Wonderful Chemical that is Fatal to Flies. Not a Poison—Harmless to Stock.

Flies are one of the most dangerous and annoying things with which the farmer has to contend. Now, through the discovery of E. R. Alexander, widely known scientist, you can rid your house and barns and livestock of these pests almost instantly, and with no trouble at all. This discovery is in the form of an organic chemical that is fatal to flies, and similar pests, such as chiggers, mosquitoes and moths.

This new discovery, which is called Alexander's Rid-O-Fly, is not a poison. Though it kills flies like magic, farm animals and human beings are not affected by it at all. In addition to killing these insects, Rid-O-Fly is a strong repellant. Flies will not come near stock or buildings where Rid-O-Fly has been used. Rid-o-Fly is particularly valuable for cows and horses, as it is a known fact that flies do untold harm to these animals.

So confident is Dr. Alexander that his discovery will rid your house, barns and live stock of these pests that he offers to send a $3.00 supply for only $1.25 on the guarantee that if Rid-O-Fly does not solve your fly problems it will cost you nothing. Two big Kansas City Banks guarantee the reliability of this offer.

SEND NO MONEY—just your name and address to the Alexander Laboratories, 1505 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., and this introductory offer will be mailed at once.

Through the columns of this department subscribers may have free advice from the eminent specialists and experts of our Agricultural Staff on questions relating to farming, live stock and dairying.

Address Modern Farmer, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published.

Questions and Answers

DO COPPER SPRAYS INCREASE POTATO YIELDS?—I have always thought that the sprays, such as Bordeaux mixture, that we used on our potatoes did nothing else but control diseases, but now I hear that such sprays have an influence on the yield and on the potatoes themselves. Is this true? The argument came up recently at our Grange meeting, and I want to be better posted. Wm. McK., Colo.

A.—Your question brings up a new and interesting point. According to extended investigations conducted by the Department of Agriculture, spraying with Bordeaux mixture or with other sprays containing copper not only controls potato diseases and increases yields in this way, but increases the keeping qualitits of potatoes in storage and even influences the composition of the tubers themselves. Even where no disease is present, Bordeaux mixture has a stimulating effect upon potato foliage and promotes growth and development of tubers. The U. S. Bureau of Chemistry has shown that copper containing sprays increase the nitrogen and starch constituents of potato tubers. Results of experiments conducted in seven eastern and central states show an average of 2,591 pounds of solids in potatoes per acre for the non-copper sprayed plants; 3,430 pounds for the plants sprayed with a copper spray. This represents an average increase of 48 bushels or 32.4 per cent., with the employment of copper-bearing sprays as the only possible explanation, as variety, soil, management and fertilization were the same in each case. Judging from these facts, the use of copper sprays of some kind on the potato crop has another important value besides disease prevention.

WHEN TO CUT WHEAT.—There seems to be an argument out in this part of the country as to the best time to cut wheat. Some say, "Let it get dead ripe;" others say, "Cut it well on the green side." As I have been out here only two years, I'm not a wheat growing expert yet, so come to you for the advice I feel certain you will give me. E. W. B., Idaho.

A.—As a general rule, wheat may be cut with safety when the straw has lost most of its green color and the grains are not entirely hard. If cut sooner than this, shriveled kernels will result. If left standing until it is dead ripe, the kernels will be likely to bleach, and

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 20.)

WANTED
U.S. RAILWAY
MAIL CLERKS

$1600 to $2300 Year

Men—Boys 18 to 35

Mail Coupon Immediately

Steady work No Layoffs
Paid Vacations
Travel—See your country
Common education sufficient.
MAIL COUPON AT ONCE.

Franklin Institute, Dept. W218, Rochester, N.Y.
Sirs: Send me without charge, (1) Specimen Railway Postal Clerk Examination questions; (2) Tell me how I can get a U. S. Government job; (3) Send list of Government jobs obtainable.
Name .....
Address .....

Poems Requested

The following poems have been requested by readers of COMFORT and sent for publication.

He Giveth His Beloved Sleep

BY ELVIRA MILLER SLAUGHTER.

He giveth His beloved sleep,
The pure, the upright and the just;
Their kindly deeds like angels keep
God's watch above the sacred dust.
Be comforted, all ye who weep,
He giveth His beloved sleep.

He giveth His beloved sleep,
To uplands beautiful and fair;
Behold, the Shepherd calls His sheep
And ministering angels lead them there
Beyond death's darkness and its chill
To pastures green and waters still.

He giveth His beloved sleep,
Those who are faint and pain oppressed;
Beyond earth's shadows broad and deep
They seek a land of heavenly rest,
Some spot afar from mortal eyes,
Across the hills of paradise.

There is a country fair and sweet,
In realms of everlasting day,
Prepared for those whose weary feet
Have passed upon life's rugged way,
There, laden with ripe sheaves, they reap—
He giveth His beloved sleep.

He giveth His beloved sleep
Through all the future thronging years;
How beautiful that thought, how deep,
Too great for grief, too sweet for tears.
Be comforted, then, ye who weep,
He giveth His beloved sleep.

Requested in the July COMFORT. Sent in by Mrs. John Sensbch, 5816 Madison Rd., Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Old Sod Shanty on the Claim

(Requested.)

I am looking rather seedy now,
While holding down my claim,
And my vituals are not always served the best;
And the mice play slyly round me
As I nestle down to sleep
In my little old sod shanty in the west.

Chorus

Oh, the hinges are of leather
And the windows have no glass,
While the board-roof lets the howling blizzard in;
And I hear the hungry coyote
As he sneaks up through the grass,
Round the little old sod shanty on the claim.

Yet I rather like the novelty
Of living in this way,
Though my bill of fare is always rather tame;
I am happy as a clam
On this land of Uncle Sam,
In my little old sod shanty on the claim.

Chorus

Oh, when I left my eastern home,
A bachelor so gay,
To try and win my way to wealth and fame,
I little thought that I'd come down
To burning twisted hay
In my little old sod shanty on the claim.

Chorus

My clothes are plastered o'er with dough,
I'm looking like a fright,
And everything is scattered 'round the room;
But I wouldn't give the freedom
That I have out in the west
For the bauble of an eastern mansion home.

Chorus

Still I wish that some kind-hearted girl
Would pity on me take,
And relieve me of the mess that I am in;
Oh, the angel, how I'd bless her,
If this her home she'd make,
In my little old sod shanty on the claim.

Chorus

And when we'd made our fortune
On the prairies of the west,
Just as happy as two lovers we'd remain;
We'd forget the cares and troubles
That we'd endured at first
In our little old sod shanty on the claim.

Chorus

And if the fates should bless us,
With now and then, an heir,
To cheer our hearts with honest pride and flame,
Oh, then we'd be content
For the toil that we have spent
In the little old sod shanty on the claim.

Written in 1880 by Will Kelsey for Old Settlers' Reunion.

Rock-a-by Baby

"Rock-a-by baby, on the tree top,
When the wind blows the cradle will rock;
When the bough breaks the cradle will fall,
And down will come baby, cradle and all.

"Oh, rock-a-by, rock-a-by, mother is near,
Then, rock-a-by, rock-a-by, nothing to fear,
For angels of slumber are hovering near,
So, rock-a-by, baby, mother is here.

"Rock-a-by baby, the meadow's in bloom,
Laugh at the sunbeams that dance in the room;
Echo the birds wth your own baby tone,
Coo in the sunshine and flowers of June.

"Rock-a-by, baby, so cloudless the skies,
Blue as the depths of your own laughing eyes,
Sweet is the lullaby over your nest
That tenderly sings little baby to rest.

"Rock-a-by, baby, the meadow's in bloom,
May never the frosts pall the beauty in gloom,
Be the world ever bright as today it is seen,
Rock-a-by, baby, thy cradle is green."

Sent in by Portland, Oregon, subscriber.

A Poem

BY CLARA BETES.

O universal spirit God,
We live and move in Thee;
Thy presence fills all space and time
E'en to eternity.

No paths can lead away from Thee,
Since Thou art everywhere;
And no condition can there be Beyond Thy love and care.

Like rays from one great central sun,
Like drops from one great sea;
Great Oversoul we are a part
Of Thy infinity.

Sent in by M. O. Mackintosh, Canton, 402 W. Maple St., Illinois.

Just Be the Best

"If you can't be the pine on top of the hill,
Be a scrub in the valley—but be
The best little scrub by the side of the rill,
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.

"If you can't be a bush be a bit of the grass
And some highway happier make;
If you can't be a "muskie" then just be a bass,
But the liveliest bass in the lake.

"We all can't be captains, some have to be crew,
There's something for all of us here;
There's work to be done and we've all got to do
Our part in a way that's sincere.

"If you can't be a highway then just be a trail,
If you can't be a sun be a star;
It isn't by size that you win or fail,
Be the best of whatever you are."

—Author unknown.

Summer Radio

THERE seems to be a general feeling among Radio fans that as soon as summer comes with hot weather and lightning, Radio must cease. Many have already put aside their sets and are missing the best Radio that we have yet had. There is some foundation for this belief but it is far from being true.

The large stations will continue to broadcast during the entire summer and with the increased power of some of the best stations there is little or no doubt that reception will be good and Radio will become one of the chief pastimes at the beaches and summer resorts. Nearly all Radio fans will enjoy their annual vacation during the summer months and this will afford a splendid opportunity to do the experimenting and constructing so many have wanted to do but were cramped for time.

One of the greatest assets to Radio for the summer camp and beaches is the new dry cell tubes which have come into such extensive use during the past few months. The release of the new tube using flashlight batteries to light the filament has greatly increased the facilities of building portable outfits and the large Radio manufacturing plants have developed a very efficient set for this purpose and using these tubes.

Probably everyone in the Radio field realizes that lightning has a very decided effect upon Radio reception and it is very unwise to try to use the set during an electrical storm although it is doubtful whether the set would be damaged unless the lightning struck very close by. In case the installation is properly equipped with lightning arrester, there is little danger from lightning in fact, the whole system tends to serve as a lightning arrester as the rods now in use on many buildings for that purpose are based upon the same principal.

Although it is more or less of an experiment, there are several fans using Radio sets on their autos and many of them report excellent results. In order to use such a set it is necessary to use suitable values of inductance on the antenna coil and also the type of tube used will have a decided effect upon the results. The U V L99 tube is probably the best suited for this type of set and as this tube is of the flashlight battery type it is also very convenient for any portable set.

Many are planning to take their radio sets into the woods this summer and it will be well to remember that trees especially serve as an absorber of radio waves. An aerial erected in close proximity to a group of trees is likely to prove very efficient. In picking a location for the aerial, look for an open space and avoid having the aerial wire touch a tree or stretch near enough to allow a branch to swing against the wire.

In using the radio with the auto many are at loss to know just how to get a suitable aerial and ground It is more or less a matter of experiment but one very good method is to connect the aerial lead to the emergency brake handle and use a sharp iron rod driven into the ground for a ground. It is better to use a little more elaborate scheme and stretch a temporary aerial from a handy tree to the auto and use the engine for a ground. The windshield serves as an excellent insulator for the aerial wire, bringing it through the small crack between the upper and lower portions of the windshield. Do not expect results equal to a properly installed set for it is impossible to obtain such results, but a great deal of amusement may be had by trying out the various experiments on portable sets.

Questions and Answers

Q.—Where is the Bureau of Standards located? What is the address? J. L. B., Elm Spring, Ark.

A.—The Bureau of Standards is located in Washington D. C., and a letter will reach them with that address.

Q.—In using a 60 cycle transformer in place of an "A" battery it causes a loud hum in the receivers. What could I do to eliminate it?

W. J. B., New Bedford, Mass.

A.—It is not considered practical to use 60 cycle A. C. current to light receiving tube filaments. It is possible to partially eliminate the hum by using a filter circuit composed of two choke coils and two condensers.

The condensers should be approximately 1 M. F. capacity and the choke coils 1 M. H. each. You may find it necessary to use the choke in only one leg of the circuit instead of both.

Q.—Can a crystal detector pick up signals over 100 miles and if so, what hook-up? How can a 43 plate condenser be made?

Can a piece of ordinary crystal such as a piece of an old sugar bowl be used instead of galena?

J. G., Margo, Sask.

A.—A crystal detector will not usually pick up signals from a broadcasting station over 25 miles.

It is almost impossible for you to make a 43 plate condenser unless you have excellent equipment and the process is too long to describe in this department. It is very much cheaper to buy a condenser.

No, some crystals such as galena, or iron pyrite must be used in radio.

Q.—Will you please tell me the parts needed to receive wireless from 300 to 500 miles.

O. A., Hancock, Wis.

A.—The sets described in COMFORT as using regeneration are capable of receiving that distance under favorable conditions.

Q.—In using a 150 foot single wire aerial would as good results be obtained if the lead-in wire led from the center of the aerial as if it were led from near one end? Is it better to have aerial level or one end lower than the other?

H. R. S., Woodbine, Iowa.

A.—Best results would probably be obtained by taking the lead from near one end, as otherwise your aerial would be too short.

For receiving, only, it seems best to have the aerial level, if possible, although not at all necessary.

It is true that the aerial should point in the general direction of the station to be received and the lead taken from the end nearest the broadcasting station.

Q.—Please let me know where I can get some instructions, directions and facts about making an Aeriola Senior radio receiving set.

C. L., Chesterfield, Ill

A.—The Aeriola Senior set is manufactured by the Westinghouse Electric Manufacturing Company of Springfield, Massachusetts. Whether they will furnish specifications of the set we do not know but advise your writing direct to them.

The Modern Farmer

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 19.)

shattering and loss of grain will also ensue. Another objection to dead ripe wheat is that it is more difficult to handle. In the great wheat belt of the Dakotas, wheat harvesting begins as soon as the straw for three or four inches below the heads turns yellow and dry; this early start enables the completion of the harvest before the last of the crop becomes over-ripe. Variety also has a good deal to do with the time of cutting. For instance, the white soft wheats of the Pacific coast may be allowed to fully ripen, then stand for weeks in the fields unharvested if necessary, without suffering damage or loss. But some varieties of northern hard spring wheats, such as Velvet Chaff, must be cut "on the green side" to prevent shattering. Marquis, now one of the most popular spring varieties, is an early maturer that will not shatter if left to become over-ripe—but it is very difficult to thresh if cut too late. For your especial guidance, since you do not mention the variety of wheat you are raising, it will be well for you to closely watch the "old timers" in your locality, the fellows who have made a success of farming and therefore "know the ropes."

ERADICATING MORNING GLORIES.—Please tell me how is the best way to get rid of wild morning glories that threaten to choke out my crops in some parts of my fields. I plan on putting some land into winter wheat, but am afraid that these pretty, pesky climbers will kill it out.

R. R. G., Illinois.

A.—The best way to kill wild morning glories is to plow the land along about the end of July, during a dry spell if possible. This you could do nicely on the land that is to go into winter wheat. If there is time, it may be best to first plow to a depth of about three inches; about a week later plow again to a depth of eight inches or more. Under all conditions keep the land worked with a disc to prevent green growth. Wherever this plan is followed there will be a marked decrease in the morning glories the following season.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 16.)

the timbers are broken in two, as you would break a toothpick.

At the present time there are about fourteen diggers. They have to dig fifty-one sacks of ore for one day's tally. These sacks are not to weigh less than about 220 pounds each. When they have their tally the teamster hoists the sacks, the sack landers land them and load them onto tram cars and the tram men load them on flat cars ready for the train to take.

The diggers go into the holes by way of ladders that are screened in to prevent the men from falling. It is interesting to watch the men work. The gilsonite is much harder to wash off than coal dust as it contains oil and sticks like glue. No open lights or smoking are allowed near the mines, as the dust in the mines explodes and the fire will sweep the length of the holes which are all connected. Anyone found carrying matches is discharged, there is so much danger. We have lived here a year and there have been several accidents, but no one killed. My husband digs in No. 20, Hell's Hole.

I am nearly nineteen, and have been married two years. I am five feet, five inches tall, with dark hair which is bobbed. My eyes are dark brown and complexon is fair.

I would like to hear from some of the sisters and will answer as many as I can.

Wishing you all success,

GERRY.

ROCKFORD, 2621 CANNON ST., ILL.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

I have been a subscriber to this paper for a few years and the sisters' letters appeal to me more than anything else, though every department is good.

I wonder if any of the sisters can suggest a cure for stammering. My little girl, five years old, has stammered for two years. I have tried to have her talk slowly but with no success. I have asked doctors but they say she will outgrow it. She is a nervous child. If anyone can help me I will be very grateful.

MRS. A. V. ANDERSON.

TENNESSEE.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

I want to thank you all for the good and encouraging letters I received. They caused me to see matters from a different viewpoint and I do not feel troubled as I did when I wrote the first letter. I thought I could never live through this but I am thankful that the burden has rolled away and everything is going well. I am going to answer the letters as I can but should I miss any I want to thank you one and all, through dear old COMFORT, for the kindness and sympathy shown me. May God bless you all.

Your sister in COMFORT,

A WORRIED MOTHER.

LINCOLN, 3282 HOLDREDGE ST., NEB.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

Dear old COMFORT hasn't missed coming to my house for twenty-six years. No, I'm not an old lady but I do enjoy the paper and read it from cover to cover. Sometimes I would feel that I couldn't afford the different papers but some other was the one selected to be dropped.

I know a great many of you girls by names, and the boys too. We like to see that the men are interested in us, and to have their opinions on things which we choose in our way to discuss and it does 'em good to explode, especially the bachelors who have no one else to tell what they think. I have a big spot in my heart for them in their lonely lives and some of them are lonely even if they won't admit it.

How many of you read about Emil Coue? I think it is wonderful advice he gives, to say each morning when you awake, "Day by day in every way I am getting better and better." It makes one feel such an uplift and makes happiness radiate in and about us; to be better in every way means so much and to think happiness makes happiness. The mind has so much to do with the condition. Sisters, can't we learn to say it and see the results. It is said it takes 65 muscles to make a frown and but thirteen to smile. Don't use that excess energy in a frown.

I am thirty-nine years young, with brown hair and blue eyes and a fair complexion. I am five feet tall—and day by day in every way I am getting better and better.

MRS. MAY GAMBLE.

Best Ways of Doing Things Around the Home

When you clean your congoleum rugs, wring out your mop in skimmed milk and go over surface, then rub with clean cloth.

Cut out best parts of wornout underwear, hem and use for towels for the children. Homely, yes, but easier to wash then a linen towel.

MRS. PEARL GRISSOM, ATOKA, OKLA.

Add one teaspoonful of Epsom Salts to each pail of water that colored clothes are rinsed in. This keeps them from fading.—MRS. L. A. DEANE, Moshum, Tenn.

To get rid of moths use formaldehyde. Saturate small rags in this and put in chests, and burn some on a shovel of hot coals in the room where there are moths. Close the room closely while burning it, being sure there is no danger of the coals setting fire to the room.

MISS BERTHA ARMBURST, Zanesville, R. R. 7, O.

To keep cut flowers a long time, put a piece of any mild soap in the water.

A nice hanging basket is made from a carrot. Cut off about four inches from top, make center hollow, put a small stick through it and hang it upsidedown in a sunny window. Keep the hollow filled with water.

As you iron clothes pin a piece of brown paper to those that need mending. This saves looking them over later.—MRS. LILLIE GINTER, York County, Pa.

When cleaning greens add a handful of salt to the second water. This will make the sand sink to the bottom of the pan and another rinsing will leave the greens perfectly clean.

To keep raisins from sinking to the bottom of the cake, roll them in melted butter before stirring into the batter.

To clean velvet, dust lightly with pipe clay, then brush with a clean brush.

To remove coffee stains from materials, brush the spot with pure glycerine, rinse in lukewarm water and press on the wrong side.

Wrap cheese in a white cloth wrung out of vinegar and the cheese will remain fresh and soft for a long time.

Line the pan in which you bake fish with waxed paper and you will not have a greasy, sticky dish to wash.

Rub your new tins with lard and heat thoroughly in oven and they will never rust.

Ride Select sizes of Ran sample Ran ered free,
12 Mon for our Tires
price. Sav
Mea
AIR RADIO

Wanted
School in ne
EMMA RUCK

How to m
Directions
This appear

To hear fr sas.—JOHN

I should quilts.—MRS

LeRoy Su
Wash., woul
Sheep."

Mrs. Irvin song "Charl

Mrs. Alice wishes to he about living

Mrs. Stell a shut-in, w day, August

M. Dillma to hear from

The follow
Write first as

Mrs. Bud

Mrs. Clar
Ark., Novem

Blanche M
April 1922 to

Mrs. Frank
Ill., May, 19

Mrs. Jesse

Mrs. Jennie
March 1906.

Miss Etta

Mrs. Claud
May, June, J

Mrs. E. T
Mich., Octob

Mrs. Dexte and Decembe

Mrs. H. A December, 19

Hansene S.
Montana, Oct

Mrs. Ross
February and

Siste COMFORT SISTERS with handsome choice of red Sisters" deepl
If you are s year subscripti and we will se paid. Or, if y a one-year ren you the Pin i
Reward No.
Ad

Let Cub
Play W
BOTH
What are

What interest is here telling game to play wi or are these tw

So real and Rabbit to COM scoured around resemble in ever
Ellingwood has

Cubby is a bi blue overalls an inches tall. H as any cinnamon shiny beads. H
just a half inch all in white with ribbon around h

We hunted a destructible mat playmates becau boy and girl wi and take them t right in the for had a big mill tough as wood t paint makes ther ral lifelike color

With these t stories of Cubby fore. You can

Given To Y
each we will se
Rabbit free and Addr

2 TIRES FOR $9.45

FREE TUBE WITH EACH TIRE

Sensational Cut in Standard Tire Prices!

Here is another of our record-breaking sales! Two tires for less than the usual cost of one, and a free inner tube with each tire! No double treads or second tires. Thousands of steady customers are getting full mileage out of these tires and you, too, can get 12,000 Miles

You can see the mileage in our tires. Order and prove it, but order now! Supply limited and going fast!

Note Big Saving on Orders for Two Tires

Size	1 Tire	2 Tires	Size	1 Tire	2 Tires
28x3	$6.95	$ 9.45	34x4	$13.25	$21.95
30x3	7.25	11.95	32x4½	13.45	22.45
30x3½	8.25	13.95	33x4½	13.95	22.95
32x3½	9.45	15.95	34x4½	14.45	23.45
31x4	10.65	17.45	35x4½	14.95	24.90
32x4	11.85	19.75	36x5	15.90	26.45
33x4	12.45	20.90	37x5	16.45	27.45

SEND NO MONEY We require no deposit. Shipment C. O. D. subject to examination and approval. Return same at our expense if not fully satisfied. You take no risk whatever.

ALBANY TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY
1504 S. Michigan Ave. Dept. 30G, Chicago, Illinois

Cord Tires at Cut Prices

$6.75

8000 Mile Guarantee 30X3½

NO PRICE ADVANCE

on GEM CORDS—the tire that gives 8000 miles satisfactory service. Cut your tire costs by these excellent tires at low prices. Best tire ever seen.

SEND NO MONEY

All GEM CORDS shipped C. O. D. Take tire home and examine it; if it isn't the best buy you ever made, return the tire and get all your money back.

Size	Cords	Tubes	Size	Cords	Tubes
30x3	$6.15	$1.05	32x4½	$13.45	$2.00
30x3½	6.75	1.25	33x4½	13.95	2.10
32x3½	8.45	1.55	34x4½	14.50	2.25
31x4	9.75	1.65	35x4½	14.95	2.50
32x4	10.25	1.75	36x4½	15.25	2.50
33x4	10.75	1.90	33x5	16.00	2.75
34x4	11.25	1.95	35x5	17.00	3.00

Do Not Delay. Order your season's cord tires now at these Bargain Prices. 5% discount for cash with order.

GEM RUBBER CO., 1315 S. Oakley Blvd. Dept. 260, Chicago, Illinois

2 TIRES FOR $9.30

2 Tubes FREE

Standard Tire Prices SMASHED!

First time you can buy 12,000 miles of service for only $9.30. During this sale 2 tires for much less than usual cost of one! Tires fabricated by the STEWART PROCESS give remarkable service on good and bad roads. You, too, can get

12,000 Miles

During this cut-price sale, we give you absolutely Free a Standard, brand new tube with every tire! 2 tubes free with 2 Tires! Be sure to state if straight side or clincher is wanted.

Size	1 Tire & 1 Tube	2 Tires & 2 Tubes
28x3	$ 6.50	$ 9.30
30x3	6.70	10.65
30x3½	7.40	12.55
32x3½	8.95	14.50
31x4	10.15	16.40
32x4	10.30	17.35
33x4	11.90	18.30
34x4	12.30	19.35
32x4½	12.55	20.10
33x4½	13.10	21.10
34x4½	13.40	21.90
35x4½	13.90	22.95
35x5	14.90	24.85
37x5	15.10	25.65

FREE Examination

Send deposit of $1 for each tire ordered. Send only $2 if you order 2 tires. We ship C. O. D. for balance and allow examination. If not absolutely satisfied, return unused and we'll refund every cent of your deposit! You take no risk whatever! If you prefer to remit with order, deduct 5 per cent. Money-Back Guarantee

Stewart Tire Co., Dept. 403, 21st & Racine Ave., Chicago

AGENTS! FREE $8.00 OUTFIT

$100 to $200 a Week!

Take orders for the only auto lubrication which forces Heavy Oil at 2,000 pounds hydraulic pressure into chassis bearings. Makes grease, grease cups and grease "systems" out of date. Driver Agents: Write for free sample offer.

SAAL HEAVY OIL System Biggest money-making opportunity for 1923.

100% Lubrication Makes autos and trucks ride better and last longer. Chassis lubrication now a white-collar job with service-station results. Big inducement to first agent in each locality. Write today.

H. G. SAAL CO., 1800 Montrose Ave., Dept. 241, CHICAGO

Auto Owners WANTED!

To use and introduce the DIMPLED TUBE

Outlasts four ordinary tubes. Overcomes friction heat, increases tire life 25% to 50%, is leak proof, prevents flat tires. Big Money Maker for agents, salesmen and garage men.

30 DAYS FREE TRIAL. TWO YEAR GUARANTEE. Write today for special introductory offer and big money making plan. Dept. 104,

WOLVERINE CLIMAX CO., Detroit, Mich.

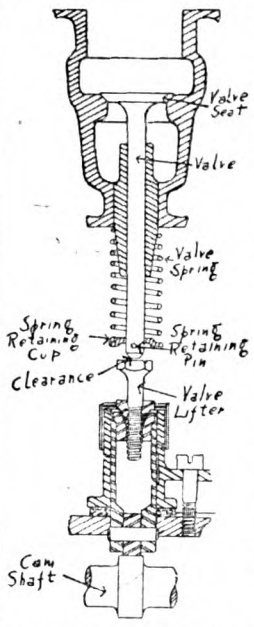
Tire Agents Wanted Use and Introduce MELLINGER CORD TIRES

12,000 Miles Guaranteed!

Lowest Wholesale Prices in America. Shipped prepaid on approval. Make big money all or part time. No capital or experience. Sample sections furnished.

FREE TIRES FOR YOUR CAR to one user in each locality.

Simply send name today for valuable book, tells how thousands have gone into big business. SPECIAL AGENTS' OFFER, Wholesale Prices and FREE SAMPLE KIT.



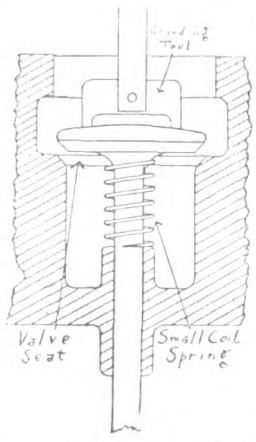
MELLINGER TIRE & RUBBER CO. $600,000 Capital. DEPT. 506, KANSAS CITY, MO.

Automobile and Gas Engine Helps

Questions relating to gasolene engines and automobiles, by our subscribers, addressed to COMFORT Auto Dept., Augusta, Maine, will be answered by our expert, free, in the columns of this department. Full name and address is required, but initials only will be printed. That we may intelligently diagnose your trouble please state the year in which your car was made.

Valve Grinding

IF the engine is to deliver its full efficiency, good compression in the cylinders must be maintained. If the cylinder head is fastened on tightly, the piston rings and the valves are the two factors to which attention must be directed. Ordinarily the valves will be the first to release compression. Manufacturers usually recommend the grinding of the valves about once a year, although this matter should be governed by the service in which the car is placed. Valve grinding is not a difficult operation and should be easily handled by the average owner. A simple means of gaining a fairly accurate check on compression is to open all the relief cocks except one and turn the engine over slowly with the hand crank. Open this relief cock and close the relief cock in another cylinder. After trying each cylinder separately you will have gained an idea as to whether or not the same resistance is met with in each cylinder.



If the resistance is weak or is not the same in each cylinder then it is a good idea to pay attention to the valves. The first step is to remove the cylinder head (if removable type), covers and the like in order that the valves may be taken out. A lifting tool shaped like a two-prong fork to pry under the valve spring retaining cup so that the spring may be compressed sufficiently to remove the retaining pin or key near the end of the valve stem. After removing the retaining pin or key, the valve can be picked out of its seat. Remove each valve and mark or label each one so that it can be replaced in the cylinder from which it was taken.

Examine the valve stems. If they show considerable wear, the best economy is to replace the valve with a new one.

The exhaust valves may show pit marks. This is due to the valve face being exposed to the terrific heat of the exhaust gases. If the valve is not deeply pitted, grinding may be sufficient to make the valve compression tight. However, if the valve is deeply pitted, the valve should be refaced. If the valve head is warped, a new valve is needed.

Valve seats are also susceptible to warping, and when such is the case, they must be recut before a valve can be properly ground into a seat. However, we will assume that the valves and seats are not warped.

Before proceeding with the grinding operation it is well to plug all openings leading to the cylinder bore with rags or waste as it is imperative that all grinding compound be kept out of the bore. Valve grinding compound can be purchased at any hardware store. Clean all carbon from the valves and cylinders. Now moisten the finger with cylinder oil and smear on the seat of the valve to be ground. Place a little of the valve grinding compound on the finger and smear lightly and evenly on the face of the valve. Don't use much grinding compound. Place the valve in its seat and with a screw-driver or other special tool engage the slot or holes in the the valve head. With just enough pressure to keep the grinding tool engaged with the valve proceed to turn the valve first in one direction and then the other. As the grinding continues it will be necessary to occasionally raise the valve from its seat and give one-half turn before placing in seat again. This will insure an even grinding action. It is common practice to place a light coil spring under the valve as shown in cut which has just sufficient strength to raise the valve off its seat when pressure on the valve grinding tool is released. A valve is ground sufficiently when a thin but clearly defined silver ring appears on the full circumference of the valve face.

However it is excellent practice to test the seat. Wash the valve and seat with gasolene or kerosene and then smear the face of the valve with Prussian blue. After placing valve in its seat turn valve with grinding tool about a quarter turn. Remove valve and the blue on the seat will indicate whether or not the grinding is complete.

After grinding each valve, wash the valves, guides, etc, thoroughly with gasolene or kerosene as it is important that all of the grinding compound be removed. A particle of this compound reaching the cylinder bore can do considerable damage. Likewise compound in the valve stem guides will cause rapid wear on the guides and stems.

After the grinding and washing operations are complete be sure to remove the waste or rags which were used to prevent the compound from getting into the cylinders.

Helpful Pointers

Idling Miss

Leaky intake valve guides and manifold very often are the cause of misfiring when the engine is running at an idling speed. The leaks permit extra air to be taken into the cylinders where it mixes with the mixture taken from the carburetor. The mixture contains too much air and thus being thrown out of balance causes irregular engine action. An easy way to find the trouble is to run the engine at an idling speed and then to squirt gasolene on the intake manifold joints and down the intake valve stem guides. If this proceedure changes the operation of the engine then a leak is the cause of the misfiring.

Precautions to Prevent Trouble

Never start on a trip without first having made certain that you have plenty of gasolene, oil and water. These three are essential to the operation of any engine except the air cooled type which does not need water.

You can't cheat a car on rubber. Before starting on a long trip make certain the tires are in good condition, as otherwise you are apt to have all the joy taken out of the journey.

The law requires number plates. The law also requires that they be placed so that they may be seen. Bumpers are accessories and not required by law. If your car bumpers hide the number plates you may be required to see the judge to the extent of a few dollars plus costs.

All thoughts do not run in the same channel. Radio outfits receive nothing until tuned in. When you decide to stop or turn, make sure that the fellow behind is "listening in." Stick out your hand so that he will understand that you are going to stop or turn.

When driving on a road where there is traffic do not brush off the ashes of your cigar with a flourish of the arm outside of the car. Also do not hold conversation with a passenger and endeavor to make your argument more forceful by continually sticking the hand out of the car. It is many times understood as a signal to stop or turn and keeps the fellow following behind you uncertain as to your intentions.

Water for Battery

The electrolyte in the storage battery consists of distilled water and sulphuric acid. In time, the water evaporates but the acid does not. The water and not the acid must, therefore be replaced at regular intervals. Pure distilled water only must be used. The water which we drink is said to be pure yet it contains certain elements which are injurious to the battery. Pure distilled water is cheap. It can be obtained from any drug store and is generally given free at any battery service station. However, when distilled water cannot be conveniently obtained, rain water will give good results. The water should be caught in a glass, rubber, china, or lead vessel which is left in the open. Rain water which has been in contact with metal surface such as eave troughs, etc, will not do. If you desire to use rain water leave the vessel in the open during the storm.

Curtain Fasteners

Many manufacturers are using a curtain fastener known as the "Lift-the-Dot" type. This fastener locks on three sides when snapped into place and resists all attempts to unlock it until the DOT is lifted. The open side is indicated by a large DOT and unless the fastener is lifted at this point it will pull out of the curtain rather than release its grip. This fastener is simple and durable if the operator will only follow instructions relative to its operation.

Skidding

Skidding is a condition over which the driver has no positive control. It is commonly caused by sudden application of the brakes on slippery pavement or turning corners at a high rate of speed. It is a condition which could be averted, but when it exists the driver may take certain steps and leave the rest to Good Lady Fortune. The skid is due to the centrifugal action developed by the car which causes the rear end to swing out to the outside of the curve. When the skid occurs, the brakes should be released and the front wheels turned in the same direction as the car is sliding. Do not throw out the clutch. Cautious driving will avert skids.

Snap Fasteners

When a snap fastener of the glove type refuses the usual effort to release it from its post do not keep tugging on the curtain as there is danger of ripping the curtain. A much better method is to use the blade of a screw-driver to pry the fastener from its post.

Use of Grease Gun

A grease gun which forces the lubricant out under pressure is standard equipment on many present day cars. The end of the gun is usually in the form of a bayonet coupling which engages with a nipple on the chassis. After forcing grease through a nipple do not disconnect the bayonet coupling until you have first given the gun plunger about two or three turns in the reverse direction. This will relieve the pressure and prevent waste of lubricant directly after the gun is disconnected.

Washing Car

Never wash the car in the hot sun as the water may dry on the body before you have the opportunity to wipe it off, with a chamois wrung out of clear water. A streaked finish will be the result.

Clean Terminals

Refusal of the starting motor to operate is not always due to a run-down battery. The battery may be in good condition but if the battery terminals are loose or corroded, the resistance set up may be too great to insure the necessary flow of current for the motor. The terminals should be carefully cleaned with sandpaper and then tightly drawn up. A little vaseline smeared on the terminals will then seal the joints and prevent corrosion.

Answers to Inquiries

CYLINDERS FLOOD WITH OIL.—My Studebaker light six, 1921 model, leaks so much oil that it drowns the spark although I have had three new sets of piston rings put in, and finally a scrape ring put into each cylinder, but all to no effect. I would like to know if there is any way to stop the trouble without putting in new pistons.

W. M. P., Schoolfield, Va.

A.—The safest method out of your difficulty is to write to the manufacturer of your car and describe your trouble in detail. In my opinion, the manufacturer is the only one properly qualified to suggest alterations in the oiling system. Lack of oil will quickly ruin an engine and when a change must be made, the manufacturer should suggest it. The maker of your car is the Studebaker Motor Car Corp., South Bend, Ind. Address your letter to the attention of the service Dept.

DIFFICULT TO START WHEN COOL.—My 1917 model Ford is hard to start when it has stood a while and the engine is not hot, unless hot water is poured on the manifold, and then it starts immediately. What is the matter? (2) Does carbon remover sold in liquid form remove all the carbon? Will it injure the engine?

E. M., Eureka, W. Va.

A.—Open the needle valve of the carburetor a trifle more and use the choke and your starting troubles will probably disappear. Personally, I am not in favor of the so called liquid carbon removers. The Ford head is easily removed and it is a simple matter to do a thorough job of carbon scraping. It is beyond me to state whether the liquid removers would prove injurious to the engine. I should require a guarantee of this nature before using an agent of that kind.

DIM LIGHTS.—The lights of my 1917 model Ford car which are connected with the magneto are giving poor light, so dim that it is almost useless. Please tell me the remedy to get better lights.

H. E. R., Catawba Sanatorium, Va.

A.—Providing you are using lights of the proper candle power and voltage, the lack of light is probably due to an accumulation of foreign matter under the spring of the magneto plug. If the cleaning of the plug does not improve the current strength, the indication is that the magnets are weak and they should be recharged.

CHARGING MAGNETO.—I find many useful hints in COMFORT. I would like to know how to charge a Ford magneto. I have a good 4-bar K. W magneto. Can I use it to advantage for the charging job?

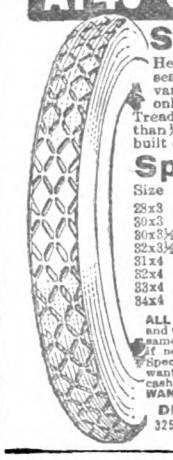
L. A. P., Mo.

A.—In a great many cases, the magneto is said to have lost its strength when in reality it has not. Very

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 22.)

AGENTS! BIG MONEY SELLING

"A Double-Duty Device" For A Single Price"



Sentree

Make $10 to $20 a day selling Sentree, a wonderful new device to guard motor efficiency! Warns against engine overheating by flashing red signal and blowing whistle. Condenses all vapor into liquids, keeping water always in radiator. Saves oil and gas. No competitors, every auto owner a prospect. GET YOUR SENTREE FREE! Write now for full details!

ALERT ALARM COMPANY
607 N. LaSalle Street, Chicago, Ill.

NEW-TREAD TIRES AT 40¢ ON THE DOLLAR

Send No Money!

Here is a real opportunity to cut your season's tire bill notwithstanding advances in prices. For a limited period only we offer our famous Diamond-Treaded Tires — as illustrated — at less than ½. Made of NEW LIVE RUBBER and built on the best carcases money can buy.

Special Sale Prices

Size	Tire	Tube	Size	Tire	Tube
28x3	$4.95	$1.25	36x4	$8.65	$2.35
30x3	4.95	1.35	32x4½	8.85	2.40
30x3½	6.85	1.40	33x4½	9.00	2.45
32x3½	6.50	1.50	34x4½	9.15	2.50
31x4	7.00	1.60	35x4½	9.25	2.60
32x4	7.50	1.85	36x4½	9.45	2.70
33x4	7.85	2.15	35x5	9.75	2.80
34x4	8.10	2.25	37x5	9.85	2.90

ALL OUR TUBES ARE NEW FRESH STOCK and Guaranteed for One Year. Shipment made same day order is received. Pay on arrival and if not satisfied, return AT OUR EXPENSE. Specify whether straight side or clincher wanted. FIVE PER CENT DISCOUNT when cash accompanies order. DEALER AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY LOCALITY.

DIAMOND-TREAD TIRE WORKS
3253 S. Morgan St., Chicago, Illinois

30X3½ CORD NEW TIRE $2.00 PRICE

GUARANTEED 8 MONTHS AT HALF PRICE

These are Goodrich, Goodyear, Firestone, Fisk and other best known standard make tires. All slightly used, but readily give our customers thousands of miles of splendid service.

LOWEST TIRE PRICES IN AMERICA

	Tires	New Tubes		Tires	New Tubes
30x3	$1.90	$ .90	32x4½	$3.75	$1.65
30x3½	2.00	.90	33x4½	3.75	1.65
32x3½	2.50	.90	34x4½	4.00	1.65
31x4	2.75	.90	35x4½	4.25	1.65
32x4	3.00	1.40	36x4½	4.25	1.65
33x4	3.25	1.40	35x5	4.25	1.95
34x4	3.50	1.40	37x5	4.25	1.95

SEND ONLY $1.00 for each tire shipped. Balance C.O.D. Express shipments sent section unwrapped for inspection. Tires guaranteed eight months. Another tire given at half price for any not perfectly satisfactory. Dealers and Agents wanted everywhere. WRITE—RUSH ORDERS.

ROSE TIRE CORPORATION
Dept. C123, 1526 S. WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

CAR OWNERS WANTED!

To use and introduce the greatest improvement in Inner Tubes since autos were invented. Air gauge in valve stem of every Tube shows at a glance through the Unbreakable Transparent Valve Cover amount of air in tires. (5)

AIR-GAGE Heavy Duty Tubes

—sell on sight to almost every car owner because they save trouble, time, worry and expense. Add one-third to life of tires. Paul salesmen make big profits selling direct to car owners. Our million dollar factory can use 500 more salesmen at once. Experience not necessary. Big illustrated Free Book tells how the Paul Plan will start you in this big money-making business without capital. Write for Free Book Today.

THE PAUL RUBBER CO., Dept. 7, Salisbury, N.C.

FREE TO AGENTS!

$100 to $200 a Week! Driver Agents! Put a Lu-Min-Us-Cap on your car free and write orders day and night! $35 electric-lighted outfit free to men without cars. $8.50 Ford size $7.50.

Illuminates. Theft-proofs MOTOMETER! A millionaire can't buy a more gorgeous ornament for his car, but price within reach of all. Parking lights, driving lights, trouble lights, ALL IN ONE. Write for information and how to get yours FREE.

W. C. Perkins & Co., Dept. 110 3949 Sheridan Rd., CHICAGO

Sell TIRES DIRECT FROM FACTORY

We want one auto owner in each locality to use and advertise Armour Cords. You can make big money and get your own tires Free by simply sending us orders from friends and neighbors. No Capital or Experience needed. We deliver and collect direct. Pay you daily.

Most Liberal Tire Guarantee Ever Written

Armour Cords are Bonded against Accidental Damage, Wear and Tear, Tread Separation, Blistering, Blow-Outs and Rim-Cutting for 10,000 miles. We are actual manufacturers. Write today for Great Special Offer to Agents and low Factory Prices.

ARMOUR TIRE & RUBBER CO., Dept 95, DAYTON, O.

Through the columns of this department subscribers may have free advice from our eminent legal adviser on all questions of law except divorce matters.

Address Home Lawyer, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published.

Mrs. R. E. H., Tennessee.—Under the laws of your state we are of the opinion that your mother's homestead rights in the homestead property of her first husband will expire upon her death, and that her children by her second marriage will not inherit any interest therein from her.

Mrs. C. L. S., Kansas;—We think the discharge papers of the soldier you mention belong to him and not to his mother or wife.

Mrs. E. K. S., Virginia.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that the rights of the man who owns the easement of a right of way across the neighbor's property would depend upon the terms of the agreement creating such casement and that you should examine same in order to determine his rights.

No Name, California.—We think the court records of the county in the state where your father resided at the time of his death should show what disposition was made of his property, and if your brother and sister refuse to give you proper information we think you should have the records examined.

Mrs. F. L. C., Wyoming.—Under the laws of Iowa, we are of the opinion that if your grandfather left no will, and if your father predeceased him, your father's children are entitled to his share in the estate, provided you do not neglect to prosecute your rights until they are barred by the statute of limitations.

Mrs. L. L., Maine.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that in cases where the parents are separated, the custody of the children is a question for the courts to decide, taking into consideration the welfare of such children, we think, however, the courts would be slow to award such custody to a father who has failed to provide a home or support for either his wife or child.

S. K., Kentucky.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that if the present holder of the disputed strip of land and his predecessors have held undisputed possessions of this property for a period of 26 years, and if the record claimants to this property were under no legal disabilities, the present holder could establish a possessory title to same, provided he properly defends any action brought to eject him therefrom.

T. B., South Dakota.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that children or descendants of children may be disinherited by will, provided such will is so worded as to show that such omission was intentional, and provided testator possesses testamentary capacity and is not under undue influence of any other person.

G. P. B., Tennessee.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that a married man, cannot by will bar his wife's right of dower in his real estate, but that he can have a provision in his will giving her other property in lieu of her rights in his estate and that upon his death she would have a right to elect as to whether to accept the terms of the will or her intestacy rights in the estate.

J. L. K., Minnesota.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man having no will, and no child nor descendant, the whole estate, after payment of debts and expenses would go to the surviving widow.

Mrs. T. W. S. G., Texas.—Under the laws of your state we are of the opnion that upon the death of either husband or wife one-half of the common or community property goes to the survivor and the remainder, in the absence of testamentary disposition, to the child or children of the deceased; we think any party in interest can compel a division of such property in the proper action brought for the purpose; we think a local attorney would be necessary to bring such an action.

Mrs. B. L M., West Virginia.—We do not think the validity of your marriage was affected by your misstatement of your age at the time of procuring your marriage license. We think you might have been punished for such misstatement or that it might have been used as a basis for an annullment action. We think that under the laws of your state females become of age at twenty-one years.

Mrs. C. H. C., Illinois.—If the property in Indiana stands in your stepfather's name, we think it necessary for your mother to survive him in order to have intestacy inheritance rights in his property. (2) Under the laws of Texas we think if the property you mention is community property and there are no children nor descendants of children, the whole of said property will go to surviving husband or wife upon the death of either.

A. D., Montana.—Under the laws of your state, we think your household goods are subject to assessment for taxes.

R. R., Oregon.—If your debtor refuses to pay his debt to you, we think you can collect same from any property he may own not exempt by law from levy under execution, in the proper action brought for the purpose.

E. R. C., Illinois.—Under the laws of Wisconsin, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will and leaving no child nor descendant, the whole estate, after payment of debts and expenses, would go to the surviving widow.

C. S., Missouri.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that females become of age at 18 years, but that she cannot vote until she is 21 years of age.

Mrs. M. D., Georgia.—We think it will be necessary for you to employ a lawyer in the state where the property, upon which you hold a mortgage, is located in order to bring a foreclosure action on your mortgage.

Mrs. A. C., California.—Under the laws of your state we are of the opinion that a possessory title may be acquired to real property by holding absolute undisputed possession of such property using and enjoying same, and paying taxes thereon, for a term of not less than five years, which said period is extended in cases of disabilities.

Miss A. M., Kansas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that estates of joint tenants, or tenants by entirety, descend and pass by devise in the same manner as the estates of tenants in common, survivorship having been abolished, so that property held in the names of both husband and wife, upon the death of one, without a will does not all go to the survivor, as formerly, but goes one-half to the survivor, and the other half is administered as the estate of the decedent, going according to the intestacy laws depending upon who is left, but the whole property would, in the absence of a will, go to the surviving husband or wife in case there were no children nor descendants.

Mrs. N. H., Florida.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that in the absence of a bargain to the effect that your husband shall have free rent upon the property belonging to his father's estate, he would be liable to the other heirs for their share of a reasonable sum for his use and occupation of the land.

Mrs. B. K., Ohio.—We think you should have an examination made of the will under which you and your sister received a remainder interest in the property you mention for if as you state your father had but a life estate in this property his wife or widow would have no interest therein, except that she would be entitled to support from him if he is still living.

A. G., Pennsylvania.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that in cases where the parents are separated the custody of the small children is a question for the courts to decide taking into consideration the welfare of such small children.

F. H. W., Kansas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of your husband, leaving no will, and leaving but one child, you would be entitled to hold your half interest in the real estate standing in both of your names, and in addition thereto certain small allowances, and one-half of his estate both real and personal, so that you would be entitled to a three-quarter interest in the equity of the real estate standing in both of your names, your own one-half interest and one-half (being one-quarter of the whole) of his share in such property inheritance.

D. R. P., Oklahoma.—If as you state the title to the property you mention stands in your mother's name and if she had possession of same for a period of 37 years, we do not think your father's children by a former marriage have any interest therein, unless your mother is dead and left them some provision by will.

Mrs. E. C., Ohio.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that an action brought for the recovery of money upon an agreement, contract or promise in writing must be brought within fifteen years from the date of the last acknowledgment of the indebtedness.

A. M., Wisconsin.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that the remarriage of the man you mention, during the lifetime of his wife, from whom he was not divorced, was a bigamous and criminal marriage, and that he is liable to punishment for contracting same.

Mrs. J. E. C., North Carolina.—If your debtor has been properly discharged in bankruptcy, and if your claim was properly set forth in his schedule of creditors in the bankruptcy proceeding we think you cannot now recover from him.

Mrs. V. W., West Virginia.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will and leaving no child nor descendant, his surviving widow would receive dower of a one-third interest in his real estate, and the whole of the personal estate, absolutely after payment of debts and expenses, the balance of the real estate going to his parents, brothers and sisters depending upon who is left. We think he can, by will, reduce his widow's share in the personal estate to one-third, but that he cannot, by will, bar her right of dower in the real estate.

The remedies and advice here given are intended only for simple cases; serious cases should be taken to your local doctor.

Address, The Family Doctor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published.

Mrs. B. B., Cohasset, Minn.—Tea leaves should not be eaten. Avoid excessive draughts of coffee. As a tonic take after meals a tablespoonful of Basham's mixture well diluted after meals.

Mrs. W. C., Mt. Airy, N. C.—You probably were torn externally during labor. Be examined and if there is any lacerations of the parts have them restored

"Bowlegged" better give his full name and address if he expects an answer to his question. This also applies to others who fail to observe this rule.

Mrs. C. M. R., Oacoma, S. D.—The cause of epileptic fits is unknown. In the case of your husband, the fits have been caused by excessive eating of rich food. If this is so, his diet should be confined to very simple foods and not much at a time. He should keep his bowels free, drink plenty of water and take ten grains of bromide of sodium every four hours dissolved in a wine glass of water.

Mrs. T. N., Fairland, Okla.—The chronic discharge from the ear was caused by inflammation of the middle ear. Douche the ear with a saturated solution of boracic acid. After douching the ear instill in the ear five drops three times a day of the following solution. Fifteen drops of tincture of iodine, fifteen drops of carbolic acid, dissolved in an ounce of equal parts of rose water and alcohol. Use the drops three times a day. Soreness of the breast each month is normal. The "twitchings" of the parts mentioned are of nervous origin and does not need treatment

Mrs. G. B. F., Blairsville, Ga.—Have your husband consult some good dentist for the condition of his teeth and gums. He can also in the meantime rinse out his mouth with Dobell's solution. Your condition is due to inflammation of the bladder. Have your local doctor wash out the bladder daily. You can also take five-grain tablets of urotropin after meals.

Mr. F. C. P., Tacoma, Wash.—Cigarettes do not cause constipation. For the nervous indigestion, take after meals one five-grain pill of asafetida. Spray your nose with Dobell's solution three times a day.

Miss E. S., Newton, Miss.—Your trouble and your sister's trouble may be a mild form of epilepsy. A careful diet, one free from sweets and pastries, and keeping the bowels free daily will help much toward preventing the spells. For your constipation you can take daily morning and night two teaspoonfuls of fluid extract of cascara sagrada.

Mrs. G. F. S., Scranton, Pa.—The irregular and excessive menstruation may be due to thinness of the blood. Have your sister take after meals a tablespoonful of Basham's mixture well diluted.

Mrs. J. T. T., Reagan, Tenn.—Your trouble is probably an intercostal neuralgia. Take after meals two teaspoons of Warburg's tincture well diluted

Mr. R. W., Overall, Tenn.—You probably have an enlarged prostate gland which needs special treatment. In the meantime you can take after meals five-grain tablets of urotropin.

Miss A. I. H., Cane, Tenn.—You probably have a chronic malaria following the "flu". Try two teaspoonfuls of Warburg's tincture well diluted after meals. Also for the inflamed lids apply to the eyelids at night a one per cent. ointment of yellow oxide of mercury.

Mrs. G. E. B., Elmwood, Wis.—We think your husband's opinion is correct. If you wish to reduce you can follow the following direction. On alternate days live on divided doses of a quart of skim-milk. On the other days live on green vegetables and meats, avoiding sweets of all kinds, including pastries. Drink plenty of water, exercise daily, dividing the exercises into three sessions daily of at least half an hour each. If you follow these directions, you will gradually reduce.

Mrs. A. B., Bradford, Mass.—You have a form of articular rheumatism (rheumatism of the joints). Rub the terminal joints in oil of wintergreen. Avoid sweets of all kinds. Take after meals, five-grain tablets of salicylate of sodium, well diluted

Mrs. M. K., West Monterey, Pa.—Hemorrhoids of long standing will cause all kinds of nervous phenomena, besides discomfort. Operation is the only method of cure in your case.

Miss R. P., Afton, Texas.—Hard lumps in the breasts of females should always receive prompt attention to determine their nature. You should consult some good surgeon at once and if he thinks it necessary, have the lumps removed at once.

Miss D. C., Vardman, Miss.—For your chronic diarrhea live almost exclusively on boiled milk and toast. Take a teaspoonful of the following mixture well diluted three or four times a day. Bismuth subnitrate sixty grains, dilute nitric acid one-half ounce, paregoric one-half ounce and cinnamon water enough to make two ounces.

Mrs. E. D. S., Tahlequah, Okla.—When writing this department, hereafter, give full name. You have a chronic bronchitis. At night, over the upper chest, apply a large mustard plaster, made of equal parts of flour and Coleman's mustard. For your cough take a teaspoonful of the following mixture. Thirty grains of iodide of ammonium, one ounce of syrup of tolu, and one ounce of water. You can take this in the above dose four times a day.

Mrs. W. H. B. Canon City, Colo.—Your boy should have his tonsils and adenoids operated on at once.

Miss F A., Keezeltown, Va.—Paint the enlarged lymphatic gland once a week with tincture of iodide of potassium well diluted.

Mrs. L. D. M., Westville, New Jersey.—Have the wart removed by the electric cautery.

Mr J. G., Luzerne, Pa.—Wash or shampoo the hair as you have been doing and apply daily for some time a lotion of resorcin. A two per cent. is about the right strength dissolved in equal parts of alcohol and water.

Mrs. G. S., Rector, Ark.—For your cough you can try a teaspoonful of pertussin well diluted between meals. Better have your sputum examined and find out whether or not you have tuberculosis.

Mrs. H. O. R., Health Springs, S. C.—For your chronic constipation take morning and night two teaspoonfuls of fluid extract of cascara sagrada well diluted. Locally for the hemorrhoids, you can apply compound gall ointment. If the hemorrhoids are very painful and protrude have them operated on at once.

Miss M. M., Weston, Ohio.—Your head trouble and ovarian condition may have some connection. Douche the vagina with a normal salt solution hot and see what this will do for you.

NOW $295 FREE T Until O

If you write NOW! The old house of Wing wishes you to try one of its rare ins home until October 1 FREE. Freight paid both ways. Return if you wish. Easy

Founded 1868 The Famous Win

Hear the rich inspiring tone, the secret of which for three generations has been fly. Save from $150 to $300 at reduced prices—40-year guarantee. Factory price

Write for "The Book of Complete Information About Pianos." 140 page World says: "Every one should have this book." Free and prepai

WING & SON, 13th Street & 9th Ave., Dept. B-370, New drops of tincture of iron in the drinking water is a good tonic, ahd it is advisable to use it if chickens commence to look pale around the gills, or droopy in any way.

Poultry Farming for Women

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 18.)

Subscribers are entitled to advice of our Poultry Editor free, through the columns of this department. Address Poultry Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. BE SURE to give your full name and address, otherwise your letter will receive no attention.

Correspondence

G. L. M.—Yes, ducks will lay without a drake, but of course the egg will not hatch. Any of the general purpose fowls, such as Wyandottes and Rhode Island Reds, would be suitable for the vicinity you name.

J. F. E.—The morning feed would be better if composed of ground oats, corn, wheat bran, middlings and meat scraps. All brands of meat scraps are apt to upset birds and cause diarrhea, if suddenly introduced into their feed in any quantity. When first starting, put about a tablespoonful to every quart of grain, and increase the quantity very gradually. In this way you will have no trouble.

I. M. C.—It is really better to use hens which are two or three years old in breeding pens, but I have seen splendid chicks hatched from birds just ending their pullet year, especially when they were mated to a two or three-year-old rooster.

W. F.—Your letter interested me very much. It is so nice to hear of a young boy seriously starting in to keep poultry for profit while still in school. I know a young man who started just as you have done. By the time he was seventeen he had a good paying business. And now, at twenty-eight years of age, he has an incubator that holds twenty-five hundred eggs, sells baby chicks all through the summer, and has a laying flock which averages three hundred and fifty birds, from which he markets eggs all through the winter, and realizes a much larger income than his father, who is a doctor. About your hens not laying last winter, perhaps you did not give them enough vegetable and animal food, which hens must have to produce eggs. In the September and October issues of COMFORT, I will treat the subject of feeding hens for winter eggs If I can give you any further advice, please write me, and I shall be glad to help you. It is against our rules to recommend breeders in this column.

L. M. J.—The birds have mange, which is caused by a very minute mite, which, when once introduced into a flock, spreads rapidly from fowl to fowl. It leaves at the base of the feathers, where it causes intense itching, which causes the birds to pull out the feathers, and also gets other birds in the flock into the habit of feather pulling. If you pull out a few feathers near any of the bare spots, you will notice what appears like dandruff at the base. The best cure is to mix one part of flour of sulphur with three parts of vaseline or lard, and rub well into the bare spots and the base of the surrounding feathers. Repeat the treatment two or three times at intervals of a week. Also, use a good insect powder on all the birds of the flock. Clean and disinfect the house and fixtures. Fresh lime slaked with boiling water or skim milk must be used. Add one ounce of powdered glue and six ounces of crude carbolic acid to every gallon. This makes a good whitewash that sticks like paint, and kills undesirable inmates of cracks and crevices. Yes, most sheep dips are serviceable, but they make the walls of the house look so dirty, that I think whitewash is to be preferred.

M. L. A.—If you turn to the first part of this department, you will find a cure for gapes.

(Editor's Note). It is against our rules to recommend breeders in this column, so I cannot answer letters about Muscovy and Crested ducks.

Automobile and Gas Engine Helps

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 21.)

often lint and other foreign matter will accumulate under the magneto plug contact spring. Cleaning away the foreign matter will frequently restore a strong current. Many garages are now equipped to charge magnets without necessitating their removal from the car. I would suggest that you search for such a shop in case you are certain that the magnets need recharging. Regarding the installation of another make of magneto, I believe your chief difficulty would be in establishing a drive for this instrument. If you can install and properly time it, there is no reason why it should not give satisfaction for ignition purposes.

SPRING CRANK-SHAFT.—I have to put a new rear main bearing on the crank-shaft of my 1919 model Ford about every two months to keep it so I can crank and start it on the magneto. I know of several other Ford cars that are in the same fix. Can you tell me what causes such rapid wear of that bearing?

H. C. M., Seneca, S. C.

A.—If as you state, it is necessary to replace the rear bearing cap every two months, my opinion is that the crankshaft must be sprung. The wear is much too rapid and can only be the result of an abnormal condition.

De

Sa

New

Here's go ness. Th nounces which ha hear as derful de to believe chance to by prepai
They do deposit—
They send
They are ing that amaze and being retu ready acce results.
endure the from a co with your from whic your place your talen tion has,
name and poration,
N. Y., fo
—Advertis

The hig
25 cal. made—w safeties new it pocket blue ste
Shoots
BB 119
20 Sh ty mul extra m
Our No
Both siz
PAY POS
CONSU

Sens
Our big Cord t
Cord gu son's s sands o full mil
Size
30x3.....
30x3½...
32x3½...
31x4.....
32x4.....
33x4.....

Just se wait! P sational for inst
SUPRE

130 New Transfer Pa

All The Latest Stylish Designs For Milady's Dress, Lingerie And A Linen and Fancy Work, Also Hoops, Stiletto, Embroide

COMFORT needleworkers will welcome this splendid new transfer outfit consisting of five large sheets of patterns, five skeins embroidery cotton, different colors; hoops, bone stiletto and book on embroidery stitches. This grand pattern assortment, which easily surpasses anything we ever offered before, includes more than one hundred thirty new stylish motifs for all kinds of wearing apparel, table linen, towels, handkerchiefs and many beautiful articles of fancy work for home decoration. They may be used singly and in innumerable combinations. There are designs for corset covers, petticoats, collars, borders and sprays for dresses, lingerie, etc., borders for braid, towels, etc., anchors, repeat scallops in five different sizes, two sizes of fancy scallops, fleur-de-lis, French knots, child's dress, Dutch figures, scarf end for Bulgarian work rose design for pillow, corners for table covers, centerpieces, lunch cloths, handkerchiefs, etc., etc., 17-inch butterfly centerpiece, doilies, one complete 2¾-inch Old English alphabet, one complete 1½-inch initial block alphabet, one complete ½-inch initial script alphabet, and various other designs—over one hundred thirty in all.

The patterns may be instantly transferred to any material by simply rubbing with bowl of a spoon or by pressing with a hot iron. They can be used at least six times with satisfactory results.

Remember—in addition to all these patterns, we also include free of charge, five skeins good embroidery cotton in different colors, hoops, bone stiletto and a book illustrating and describing all the principal embroidery stitches, making embroidery so simple that a child can do it.

We will make you a present of this big transfer outfit if you will accept the following

Special Offer. For a club of two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this complete transfer outfit, exactly as described, free by mail postpaid. Reward No. 9272.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Comfort's Information Bureau

Under this heading all questions by COMFORT subscribers on subjects not relating to the special departments elsewhere in the paper, will be answered, as far as may be. COMFORT readers are advised to read carefully the advertisements this paper, as they will often find in them hat they seek through their questions addressed this Bureau. They will thus save time, labor id postage.

o attention will be given any inquiry which lacks the ndor's full name and address but we will print only itials if so requested.

Mrs. A. T., Omak, Wash.—Do you not mean to inire concerning Sylvester Graham, who died in Northmpton, Mass., Sept. 11, 1851? It was he who beame the father of the popular theory of hygiene and et which has come to be known as "Grahamism." 'hat we now call "graham flour" derives its name om Dr. Graham, who wrote a treatise on "Bread and readmaking." Practically all of this early reformer's eas have been adopted by latter day exponents of ysical culture and hygienic diet. We believe there as much of good sense and healthful helpfulness in ie teachings of Graham The more natural the forms which we can take our food, the better for our natural ody. Too much of our diet today consists of conntrated and de-vitalized food, making weak stomachs id weak bodies. A valuable dairy cow is often fed ore carefully and sensibly than the man who owns er.

Mrs. W. P., West Virginia.—Diamonds are not a oduct of your state, except in jewelers' windows, and e feel certain you have not discovered any of these aluable gems. Show your mysterious "rocks" to me professor of geology or high school teacher, who e think could promptly identify their place in the st of minerals. (2). You did not give the date of our U. S. coin, so we are unable to advise you conrning its possible value.

R. H. C., Arkansas.—Write to the Bureau of Navation, Navy Department, Washington, D. C., for formation concerning the nearest U. S. Navy reuiting station. The present entering base pay of n enlisted man in the navy is $21 a month. There assuredly "opportunity for travel" in the navy, as he fleet makes annual cruises for target practice and aneuvers. The sleeping quarters of men on the rger ships are comfortably arranged. Apply to your arest recruiting office for the specific details you reuire. (2). A marine is what might be termed a "sea soldier," that is, he is one of an armed and trained rce stationed aboard battleships and at navy yards d naval stations. A marine is something very ifferent from the "U. S merchant marine." This st is a term used to include both privately owned nd Shipping Board owned vessels for transportation nd commercial purposes, and not serving as war essels.

O. S., Shumway, Ill.—The Carnegie Hero Fund ommission is maintained by a form of endowment nd has offices at 2507 Oliver Building, Pittsburgh, a. You may address the secretary of the Commislon, Mr. F. M. Wilmot, concerning the particulars our letter details.

W. G. D., Opp, Ala.—Few people have exact knowldge of the great area and enormous possibilities of laska. This mightiest territory of the U. S. has an rea of 590,884 square miles—about twice that of the ig state of Texas, and almost four times that of Calfornia. From north to south Alaska stretches a ength of 1200 miles—equal to the distance between ew Orleans and Minneapolis. In breadth, the territory possesses 800 miles!—and all this immense ountry has today a population less than one-half of our Alabama cities of Mobile or Birmingham.

The northern half of Alaska has many swamps which un back to low rising hills. This section is chiefly opulated by small tribes of Indians who live along he streams. The southern half of the territory is mountainous, and along the coast in the southeast rise such mighty peaks as Mt. Elias—over 18,000 eet high. The highest mountain in the U. S., Mt. cKinley, is situated in the central portion of Alaska nd has a height of over 20,000 feet.

The main industry of Alaska is mining, and the country contains some of the largest quartz veins in he world. In 1917 the production of gold was more han $15,000,000. There are great coal deposits—oth anthracite and bituminous—which have received ittle development. Small deposits of petroleum have een located. Salmon fishing is one of the important ndustries—over $70,000,000 being invested in this. The agricultural development of Alaska is limited by limate and sparseness of population. At present t is principally represented by truck farms near the arger towns and cities. All of the hardier vegetables, except corn, can be successfully raised. Rain is abundant and, in the short hot summers, temperatures of over ninety degrees are not uncommon. Our Department of Agriculture has established experiment stalions, and oats and wheat have been produced successfully in favored localities. Sheep and cattle have been raised in small numbers, and this industry is being developed.

As to lumber, about 27,000,000 acres of forest are under control of the Forestry Service of the Department of Agriculture. Lumber in these national forests s being cut so as to provide a permanent supply. In 1912, for instance, 45,000,000 feet of timber were sold. A map will show you that Alaska is lined with a chain of islands. Channels between these can be navigated by the largest steamers. In the interior is the Yukon river—one of the largest in the world. This s navigable for a length of over 1500 miles. There are many new railroads being built—one having been authorized by our Congress for a length of not over 1000 miles. This is nearing completion. All this great northern wonderland was bought by our Government from Russia, in 1867, for $7,200,000—one of the biggest real estate bargains ever known! But we warn you that Alaska is much colder in winter than Opp, Alabama, and you should remember this before you move north to the thriving city of Juneau.

Mrs. E. S., Ballinger, Tex.—There are no vacant public acres in the big state in which you live.

D. A. V., South Carolina.—The letters "M. A." are used to signify "Master of Arts," while the abbreviation "D. D." signifies "Doctor of Divinity." It would be preferable for an Episcopal clergyman to be able to possess the last of these two degrees after his name.

Mrs. H. Singer, 116 Union St., Elizabeth, N. J.—wishes information from COMFORT readers in the southern states as the best locality for an invalid desiring a warmer climate. Mrs Singer's husband is a painter by trade. Write to her direct, please, any kind readers of this column who can aid.

L. B. M., Seneca, S. C.—January is named from Janus, the double-faced god of the Romans; February received its name from februa, the Roman feast of expiation and lustration which was held on the fifteenth of this month. March is from the Latin word martius, pertaining to Mars. This was the first month in ths ancient Roman calendar. April, which the Romans knew as Aprilis, is supposed to have been derived from the Latin verb aperire, meaning to open. May is from the Latin Manius. June is thought to be derived either from juniores, the Latin for young men, or from Juno, a Roman goddess. Others have ascribed the month to Junius Brutus, the first consul, or the Latin verb jungo, to join. July was first known to the Romans as Quintilis, but it was changed to July by proposal of Mark Anthony who wished thereby to honor Julius Cæsar. August was named from Augustus Cæsar, after first having been known as Sextilis. September is from the Latin septem, signifying seven. This having been the seventh month of the Roman year which began in March. October was the Roman eighth month, and its name is derived from octo, eight. November, for the same reason of number, is from the Latin word for nine, novem. December, again, takes its name from the Latin word for ten, decem. (2) In southern and western Europe the days of the week have names of Latin origin, but the names that we use are Anglo-Saxon derived mostly from the names of the gods of Norse mythology. Sunday is the sun's day, Monday the moon's day, Tuesday is named after the Anglo-Saxon god of war, Tiw. Wednesday means Woden's Day—the Anglo-Saxons having thus honored one of their gods. Thursday is Thor's day, in honor of the Norse god Thor, the thunderer Friday is the day of Frigga—she being the wife of the Norse god Odin. Saturday is the one exception, being the Roman god Saturn's day.

E. S., Peru, Ind.—A vanishing ink can be made from a weak solution of iodide of starch. Characters written with this solution will disappear completely in about four weeks, leaving the paper blank. Also there is an ink visible only in the dark. This is made from a mixture of three quarters of a dram of phosphorus dissolved with three quarters of an ounce of oil of cinnamon Mix, cork well, and heat till thoroughly dissolved and united. This is best done by placing the bottle containing the mixture in hot water. A letter written with this ink can only be read in a dark room when the letters will appear like fire. It is best to write in a large flowing hand, that the words may be more easily read.

Mrs. P. S. L., Granite, Okla.—The vacant public lands of the U. S. are controlled through a bureau in the Department of the Interior. Address this department at Washington, D. C. concerning any specific information you desire. There are acres for homesteading yet remaining in twenty-four states. Your letter mentions no particular section of the country in which you are interested regarding settlement.

Talks with Girls

Conducted by Cousin Marion

In writing this department always sign your true name and give your address; if not, your letter will receive no attention. Name will not be published.

I will string the beads of my hours
On a string of beautiful purpose;
To do better work,
To learn a little more,
To be a little stronger,
A little wiser and a little kinder every day.
—Elizabeth Towne.

THE average "beautiful thought" is so far above the common, everyday mortal as to be discouraging, but all of us can live up to this. Start in by being a little kinder every day and it will not be difficult to achieve the rest.

PENNSYLVANIA BLUE EYES.—You should tell him frankly that you have no intention of marrying him, then he can never say you deceived him, wasted his life, etc., and all the other incriminations a man can think of when he feels that he is the injured one. He may take you at your word and find some other girl, so be sure you know your own mind and then you won't be obliged to write and ask me how to get him back. It is easier to keep a man's love than to regain it.

BROWN EYES OF VIRGINIA.—Just keep on doing as you have done in the past. Eventually he will realize that he isn't wanted.

MISS O., Georgia.—Aren't you making rather a mountain of a mole hill, though that's a poor metaphor I'll admit. You didn't love him, he didn't love you, so why should you care if your chum has taken him away from you,—if she could take what you never possessed. I am much surprised that you should let her see that it hurts you. Suppose you just wait and see if matters are not adjusted satisfactorily.

BROKEN-HEARTED, Texas.—My, my, but chums are getting meaner and meaner every day. Here's another who has taken her friend's sweetheart. If he is so easily captured, let her have him and keep him if she can.

B. T. H—From your letter I should judge you sensible and wise enough to decide for yourself what is best for you to do. His lack of education shouldn't keep you from marrying him if his other qualities are so desirable and he is anxious to learn more. It is the man who has no education and is content to remain so, that I don't approve of. You can teach him, but marry him first—you've been engaged long enough as it is—lest after you have taught him things he should know, he should decide he could do better. I don't mean that you should marry him at once, but take into consideration your age and his, how much of a financial start he has and how much longer you can afford to wait for him without injuring your own matrimonial prospects, just supposing he decides he doesn't want to marry you. Men have been known to change their minds.

ETHEL, Virginia.—There is no "best" month in which to get married. It is people and not seasons that count. However, in your case, I strongly advise a month in 1928—not before.

M. Y., Penn.—Why not try a little judicious flattery on your sister. Tell her that people say you are fortunate in living with her so you can learn housekeeping from her, she is such a good housekeeper, etc. She may make an effort to live up to your praise, though I'm beginning to think that neat housekeepers, like poets, are born and not made. You can keep your room and belongings neat and clean. Study hard and fit yourself for work so you can be self supporting. It is a grand and glorious feeling.

BROWN EYES, North Dakota.—Of course it is all right for you to wear bright colors. I'm 'eaps and 'eaps older than you and I expect to go on wearing bright colors for years and years In fact, I'm seriously considering the purchase of some red shoes. Suit yourself about going to dances. I shouldn't if I didn't want to.

PUG NOSE, Tennessee.—It is only natural that you should take an interest in boys and like to be with them and I don't blame you a bit, but don't lose your head. You have an advantage in that you realize you are too young to have a sweetheart or to be in love. Just keep on being a jolly, friendly girl and save your love until you are old enough to know where it is best to bestow it. I would rather not discuss religion but I can't agree with you that a person is a "sinner" just because he doesn't belong to your church or mine.

BLACK EYES, Indiana.—If you want a husband who will snoop and spy on you all the time, then make up with him, but think it over first A man is the same after marriage as before, only more so You will have to decide just how much surveillance you can endure.

LITTLE GIRL, Ky.—If you should return his picture, now that he is married, it would be likely to cause more or less unpleasantness for him. His wife, if she is at all like the average woman, would be likely to say, "Why did you give her your picture?" Either destroy it or put it away with the rest of the photographs that accumulate in a home Do not write to the man with whom you wish to get better acquainted. Be pleasant when you meet him but let him take the initiative.

MARY, Texas.—Your letter has been sent to the Etiquette Department, as almost all of your questions were for that department. Besides, I wouldn't write a letter on the violently pink paper you sent me. Pink stationery to me is as a red cloth to a bull. It makes me furious. Please don't send any more.

BETTY, Georgia.—You would be very unwise to wait for this boy of seventeen. By the time he is old enough to marry,—and he shouldn't for six years, anyway—you would be twenty-eight years old and the chances are he would be in love with a sweet young thing of eighteen at that time. Better not think of him as a possible husband. In fact he would be most impossible.

M. P., Anaconda.—If your home life is really as unhappy as it appeared to you when you wrote to me, then you might marry and take a chance that you would be happier. It couldn't be much worse You didn't say whether the man wanted to marry you or not, or whether he was able financially to care for you. That's an important thing to consider, particularly as your health isn't good.

TROUBLED, Illinois.—It is most unfair of your sister to ask you to give up the love of a good man particularly as you have already given up the greater part of your girlhood to care for her. She is old enough to realize what she is doing and how she is hurting herself by going around with a disreputable man and she should give him up without making it a condition that you give up your fiance. Tell her you have no intention of spoiling your life even if she does seem determined to spoil hers.

DOROTHEA. So. Dak'.—It would be quite proper to write to his sister for information concerning his whereabouts. He may have been injured or taken sick on his trip and unable to write to you.

HELEN, Okla.—You are still too young to know your own mind; maybe not too young, but lacking in stability. You thought you were in love with your husband; now you think you are in love with another man, a married man, and if you could marry him you would be very likely to think you were in love with someone else—your first husband maybe. Of course if you were happy with him it might be different, but there are too many complications for a happy second marriage. I've noticed that unhappy wives are likely to think themselves in love with other men. The chances are that your husband is better than the average husband so try finding qualities about him to love and resolve to be contented. Abraham Lincoln said, "I have found that most people are about as happy as they have made up their minds to be." Make up your mind to be happy and to make your husband happy. You are much better off than a great many women who write to me. It is all right to "live well" but at the same time you should endeavor to save a part of your husband's salary. It is unfortunate that he has to help his mother and sisters and brothers but perhaps if he sees that you are trying to save money he will feel more like telling them to go to work for themselves. He deserves considerable consideration from you and so does the wife of the "other man." It sometimes happens that a baby brings happiness to a home. Think it over.

JACKIE, Tenn.—It would seem that there was some truth in the stories you have heard, and my advice is to give him up, for good this time, and don't have any relapses. He isn't worth the unhappiness he has brought and would continue to bring to you.

There, I hope I've helped someone.

COUSIN MARION.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 10.)

in a capable and dignified manner Yet Bill's ideas regarding diet could hardly be taken as establishing an average, I think.

Dwight, co-operation is good when men will actually co-operate. The trouble is that too many of 'em are still in the stage where they think they can do better by operating on each other. This has been a situation which has worked destruction to many communistic experimen s begun with high hopes. Man is an animal who persists in wanting to own things. He wishes to have his individual bone buried in the garden or in a safe deposit box. He likes to gnaw it and gloat over it alone, and has been known to growl and make fearful demonstrations when any boneless brother approaches his property. It is only rare spirits, rising above the flesh, who can have "all things in common." I have never heard before of the Louisiana colony, Dwight. Thanks for your news of it. Any tidings of men who co-operate more than they operate is encouraging.

League Shut-in and Mercy Work for July

"Inasmuch as you have done it unto the least of these you have done it unto Me."

Written references from doctor and postmaster must positively accompany all appeals from shut-ins. Every month brings to me many letters which disregard this simple and necessary rule. Appeals unaccompanied by the references required will be destroyed.

R. O. Bissett, R. 2, Box 92, Middlesex, N. C. Helpless and crippled by rheumatism for 31 years, this man's condition is a pitiful one. He is unable to move himself in any manner and weighs but 85 pounds. Mrs. E. A. Robinson, 215 Bell St., Montgomery Ala. A widow of sixty, feeble, alone in the world, and with little means of support. Mrs. Leona Reece, Laurel Fork, Va. With four girls of ages ranging from 7 to 15, and one boy of 4, this poor widow faces an uphill fight in struggling to support her family. Clothes and cash are the ammunition of life she needs. Mrs. Lizzie Hale, Boons Camp, Ky. Another overburdened widow with four children—the oldest a boy of 11 years. Has always done her best to keep her home and head above water until ill health now adds more of a handicap. Give her a boost. Dollie Vernon, Leaksville, N. C. Afflicted and with afflicted children, this poor woman is in real need of aid. John Robinson, 1133 Phillips Ave., Springfield. Ill. A 68 year old sufferer without means of support. Mrs. Emma Craddock, Price, N. C. Ill health has overtaken this woman and her husband and forces an appeal for aid now in their latter years. They would help themselves if they could. Mrs. R. V. Davis, Newport, Tenn. A widow with three children for whom she is just able to earn food. The oldest child, a boy of 8 years, is deaf and dumb. The mother asks aid so that she may place this child in a school for the deaf and dumb. Mrs. Mary F. Lawton, Cameron, N. C. An almost helpless old lady of 76 who asks only a postcard shower of cheer for her loneliness. Give it to her, cousins. Mrs. Dartha Grigg, R. R. 1, Box 33, Glen Allen, Ala. Crippled and bedridden, aid is asked in the form of clothes or cash. Through my error, I am sorry to say, this shut-in's address was wrongly given as in Pennsylvania, when first printed in this list in the February COMFORT. Lulu Thornburgh, Patterson, Wayne Co., Mo. Helpless from rheumatism and shut-in and lonely, aid and cheer from the outside world mean much to this sufferer. Send her cash and some thoughts of love.

Summer's sunshine must come mostly by mail to the shut-in and suffering who are on our long list this month. Turn the bright side of your hearts and pocketbooks toward them and give them help.

I want to call your attention again here to the regulation always stated in this department concerning proper letters from postmaster and physician which must accompany appeals from shut-ins and needy ones who ask for listing in this column. Original and genuine letters are required. For the safeguarding of our generous members, and in justice to those who carefully comply with the necessary ruling, no attention can be given to appeals that do not comply with the stated conditions.

Lovingly,

Uncle Lisha

Comfort's League of Cousins

The League of Cousins was founded as a means of bringing the scattered members of COMFORT'S immense circle of readers into one big, happy family. Its aim is to promote a feeling of kinship and relationship among all readers.

Membership is restricted to COMFORT subscribers and costs fifty-five cents, only five cents more than the regular subscription to COMFORT which is included. The fifty-five cents makes you a member of the League and gives you an attractive League button with the letters "C. L. O. C.," a handsome certificate of membership with your name engrossed thereon, and the privilege of having your name in the letter list, also a paid-in-advance subscription to COMFORT. You continue a League member as long as you keep up your subscription to COMFORT. There are no annual dues, so after you have once joined all you have to do to keep in good standing is to keep your subscription to COMFORT paid up.

How to become a Member

Send fifty-five cents to COMFORT'S Subscription Department, Augusta, Maine, with your request to be admitted into COMFORT'S LEAGUE OF COUSINS, and you will at once receive the League button and your membership certificate and number; you will also receive COMFORT for one year if you are a new subscriber; but if you are already a subscriber your subscription will be renewed or extended one full year beyond date of expiration.

The League numbering over forty thousand members, undoubtedly is the greatest society of young people on earth.

Address all letters to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and they will promptly reach the head of the department for which they are intended.

The Rainbow

"The flowers live by the tears that fall
From the sad face of the skies,
And life would have no joys at all
Were there no watery eyes.

"Love thou thy sorrows; grief shall bring
Its own excuse in after years:
The rainbow! See how fair a thing
God hath built up from tears."
—Author unknown.

Crooked Spines STRAIGHTENED

Cure Yourself or Your Child at Home, Without Pain or Inconvenience, of any Spinal Deformity with the Wonderful PHILO BURT METHOD.

No matter how old you are, or how long you have suffered, or what kind of spinal deformity you have, there is benefit and a possible cure for you. The Philo Burt Appliance is as firm as steel and yet flexible and very comfortable to wear. It gives an even, perfect support to the weakened or deformed spine. It is as easy to take off or put on as a coat, causes no inconvenience, and does not chafe or irritate. No one can notice you wearing it.

Cure Yourself At Home

The Appliance is made to fit each individual case. It weighs ounces where other supports weigh pounds. The price is within the reach of all. Hundreds of doctors recommend it.

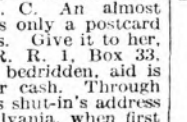
We GUARANTEE Satisfaction and LET YOU USE IT 30 DAYS.

If you or your child are suffering from spinal trouble of any nature, write me at once for our new book with full information and references. Describe case fully so we can advice you intelligently. The Philo Burt Method consisting of a scientific appliance and a course of especial exercises, has produced wonder benefits or cure in over 45,000 cases.

Philo Burt Company, 334-7 Odd Fellows Temple, Jamestown, N. Y.

Importer's Sale

We are large importers of fine watches. Save over 60% of market price by ordering direct from us. Your choice of either high-grade watch. No. 1, octagon or round case, 14Kt. gold-filled, 20 yr. case with 20 yr. gold-filled link bracelet. 6 jewels. Gold dial. Stem wind and set. Adjusted and regulated. $16 value, our price ONLY $7.25 prepaid. No. 2, 14Kt. White gold-filled 25 yr. case. Silk grosgrain ribbon, gold-filled clasp. Beautiful white dial. Sapphire crown, tonneau shape, 6 jewels. Regulated adjusted. Fully guaranteed. $18 value. Our special price ONLY $7.55, prepaid. Order today. Send no money. Pay on arrival. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded promptly.



SUPREME JEWELRY MFG. CO., Dept. 589, 434 Broadway, New York

MAKE MONEY AT HOME

YOU can earn from $1 to $2 an hour in your spare time writing show cards. Quickly and easily learned by our new, simple "Instructograph" method. No canvassing or soliciting; we teach you how, guarantee you steady work at home no matter where you live, and pay you cash each week.

Full particulars and Booklet Free.
AMERICAN SHOW CARD SCHOOL
238 Ryrie Building Toronto, Can

You Can Save $35.00

$4.45 and up Parcels Postpaid

Recover it yourself. Custom tailor made to fit all makes and models. Roof and quarters sewed together, with rear fasteners, welts and tacks, complete. Anybody can put it on. Give name, year, model number of your car. Catalog FREE. Agents wanted.

LIBERTY TOP & TIRE CO. Dept. F1 Cincinnati, O.

FORDS run 34 Miles on Gallon of Gasoline

Wonderful new carburetor. Reduces gasoline bills one-half to one-third Increases power of motors from 30 to 50%. Start easy in coldest weather.

SENT ON 30 DAYS' TRIAL

Fits any car. Attach yourself. Fords make 34 miles to gallon. Other cars show proportionate saving. Send make of car. Special 30-day trial offer. Agents wanted.

A&R FRICTION CARBURETOR CO.
Dept. 3720 Dayton, Ohio

LEARN MUSIC AT HOME!

Special Short Time Offer—Easy Lessons Free—Piano, Organ, Violin, Banjo, Mandolin, Guitar, Cornet, Harp, Cello, Singing, etc. You pay only for music and postage—which is small. No extras. Beginners or advanced pupils. Plain, simple, systematic. Twenty-five years' success. Start at once. Send for special short time offer and free booklet and sample lesson by return mail. Address U. S. School of Music, 47 Brunswick Building, New York City.

Military finish air rifle. Sell 8 Boxes Mentho-Nova at 25c.
U.S. Supply Co. Dept. CH-7, Greenville, Pa.

The Bee Cell Supporter
A BOON TO WOMANKIND

Made from the purest, softest rubber. Six cups or faces render misplacement absolutely impossible. Endorsed by the medical profession. Send us $2.50 and we will mail you one postpaid in plain package. Money back if not entirely satisfactory. Write for descriptive circular. It's FREE.

The Bee Cell Co., Dept. 168 White Bldg., Buffalo, N. Y.

MAKE Your OWN Summer Drink, delicious, refreshing, healthful with Geiger's Orangeolo. Send 15 cents for package; makes a gallon. Geiger Co., 6540 N. Maplewood Ave., Chicago, Ill.

CARDS, Dice, Magic Goods, Novelties, Catalog Free D. M. SMYTHE Co., Newark, Mo.

FREE Dress Making Lessons

Any girl or woman, 15 or over, can easily learn DRESS DESIGNING and MAKING in 10 WEEKS, using spare moments. Designers earn $40 to $100 a Week

Why pay $15 for a $6 Dress?

Cut Here

Franklin Institute Dept. W641 Rochester, N. Y.
Kindly send me free sample lessons in Dress Designing and Making.
Name .....
Address .....

Six Silver Teaspoons

The Ever Popular "Avon" Design

BY buying in large quantities we are enabled to offer our readers this handsome set of six teaspoons for the ridiculously small club mentioned below. They are six inches long, made of pure nickel-silver, so there is no brass to show through, and they will never have that dingy or tarnished appearance even after years of constant use. The design is the beautiful "Avon" deeply embossed on the handles.

The rich design and splendid wearing qualities of these teaspoons combine to make this the most attractive premium offered in years. Our illustration does not do them justice. They must be seen to be appreciated. We know they will exceed your highest expectations.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you six of these fine Nickel-Silver Teaspoons free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 9682.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Useful Gifts for Our Club Raisers

Antique Jewel Box

For A Club Of Two

IT seems hardly necessary to describe this beautiful Jewel Box as our illustration speaks for itself. It is made entirely of rich oxidized silver which will never tarnish. It is heavily embossed on all sides and on the cover. It is silk lined throughout and sufficiently large for all kinds of small articles of jewelry, trinkets, etc., measuring four inches in length, two and a half inches wide and two inches high.

Every girl and woman delights in the possession of a real jewel box for her dresser and our offer places this one easily within the reach of all. Like everything else, they cost a good price in the stores but we buy direct from the factory, hence we are able to make the following very liberal offer.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each we will send you this handsome Jewel Box free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 9952.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Box Of Initial Stationery

Latest Style Monogram

IT is now the height of fashion and evidence of the very best taste to use stationery with your own monogram initial or "crest" on it. In this offer we give you two dozen sheets white linen stationery 10 1-2 by 6 1-4 inches in size, each sheet beautifully embossed in colors with any monogram initial you desire and two dozen envelopes. Just think how nice it will be when writing to your friends to have your own letter crest monogram intal embossed n colors on this high-grade fine qaulity stationery. Remember you get one full quire of choice paper and twenty-four envelopes in this complete writer's outfit. Don't hesitate to send for this premium today because you will surely be delighted with it.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you a box of this Initial Stationery free by parcel post, prepaid. When ordering be sure to specify what monogram initial you want. Reward No. 9482.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Writing Outfit

For Home And School

HERE is someth home and by —a big value-ass needed for writing is, of course, great which is made of long and 2½ inch style, with a snap veniently be carrie dren's lunch baske
three high-grade quality penholder reality two pencils
pencil sharpener,
10-inch ruler and
ing cup with cove

This Outfit is Lead Pencil Comp
tee of its fine qua
please our reader children going to as handy in the penholder, etc., a grown people like

Given To You! we will send you t
Outfit exactly as al prepaid. Reward N

Address

Silver Salt And Pepper

New Colonial Design

For Only Two Subscriptions.

THIS hand-Silver Salt and Pepper Set is the last word in style and service. The new "Colonial" is without doubt one of the most fashionable designs ever introduced. And the set will give years of service because both Salt and Pepper are heavily quadruple silver plated. They are three inches in height, of good weight and on account of their broad bases cannot easily be overturned, thus spilling salt and pepper on the tablecloth.

Solid Sterling Silver Sets are being made in this same popular pattern. As a matter of fact, it is difficult to distinguish the above set from one made of sterling silver.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each we will send you this beautiful quadruple silver plated Salt and Pepper Set free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 81B14.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

LOCKET AND CHAIN

For A Club Of 2

Rolled Gold Plate!

Warranted For 5 Years!

MOST every young lady wants a Locket and Chain. Other styles of neck ornaments may come and go but a gold Locket and Chain is always fashionable, can be worn with any dress and at any season of the year. The locket offered here is one of the latest designs. One side of it is beautifully engraved as shown in the illustration while the other side is plain. It measures exactly one inch in diameter and on the inside there is space for two pictures. The cable chain is 15 inches long and both Chain and Locket are made of heavy rolled gold plate that is absolutely guaranteed to stand an acid test and warranted for five years. It is dainty, refined and attractive and we are sure that it will more than please everybody. This locket and chain guaranteed to be exactly as described is yours free upon the terms of the following

PREMIUM NO. 8SB13

Club Offer. For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this guaranteed rolled gold Locket and Chain free by Parcel Post prepaid. Reward No. 8SB43.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Needleworkers' Companion

142 Needles For Every Possible Need. Arranged In A Handsome Leatherette Case

Gift No. 1132

GIVEN FOR TWO SUBSCRIPTIONS.

EVERY woman wants this big-value needle assortment—a needle for every need—142 needles in all, in a handy case of leatherette. The assortment contains 75 gold-eyed sewing needles, 15 silk and cotton darners, 15 milliner's needles, 15 embroidery needles, 3 rug or tapestry needles, 3 chenille needles, 1 steel stiletto, 1 steel tape or ribbon, 2 steel crochet needles, 1 steel bodkin or tape, 1 punch-work needle, 2 medium yarn darners, 2 medium and 2 fine cotton darners, 2 medium and 2 fine wool darners—142 useful needles in all, enough to last for several years.

The case is handsomely bound with leatherette, is 5x11 inches in size when open and 3x5 inches closed. All the needles are made of the finest steel, with eyes perfectly beveled and gaged, and are far ahead of ordinary needles usually sold in stores. This case contains the newest Rapid Needle Threader which will help you to thread the finest needle quickly and easily.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each we will send you this Needle Case exactly as described free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 1132.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Beautiful Gold Decorated 31-Piece Dinner Set

For A Club Of Only Twelve

SO many women prefer the simple yet refined gold lined pattern in a Dinner Set, we have decided to offer this splendid 31-piece Set, consisting of six plates, six cups, six saucers, six fruit or cereal dishes, six individual butters and one platter. Each piece, which is full size for family use, is snowy white, without flaws or imperfections, decorated with a dainty gold edging and gold line. This is a design that is found in the most aristocratic homes—a design that you will never tire of. It is burned into the ware underneath the glaze so that it will never wear off.

This set is made by one of the best Potteries in the United States so we know it will please you—in fact, we are sure you will be delighted when you unpack it in your home and realize what a perfect set of dishes you have obtained without cost.

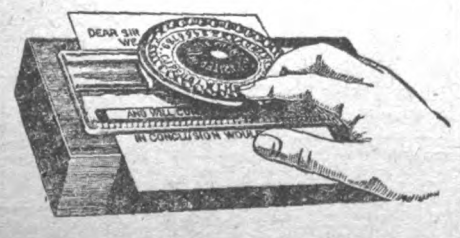
We are having these sets carefully packed so as to prevent breakage, and shipped by express direct from the Pottery in Ohio. The only expense to you will be the express charges, but these will amount to but a small fraction of what the dishes would cost in a retail store.

It will take you but a few hours of your spare time to earn this beautiful Dinner Set if you will accept the following special offer:

Given To You! For twelve one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, this gold decorated, 31-piece Dinner Set will be shipped to you by express, charges collect. And this is not all. We guarantee safe delivery. If you find any of the dishes cracked or broken upon arrival we will replace them for you free of all charge. Reward No. 73512.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Stamped Pillow Top, Back And Fringe



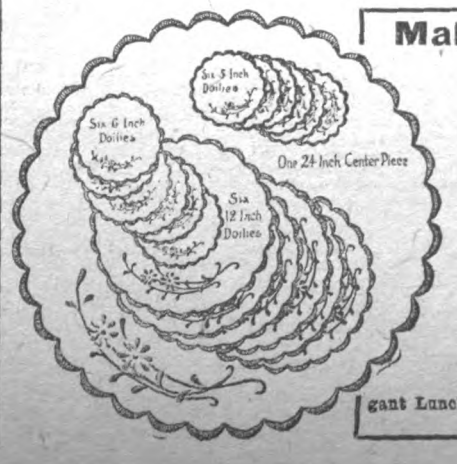
Reward No. 9382.

A Handsome Design

THIS beautiful Pillow comes stamped on natural linen. It is 18x20 inches in size, exclusive of the fringe, which is four inches wide. The design should be worked in colors—rose, pink, blue, green and brown are perhaps the most effective shades. The basket is embroidered in satin and outline stitches, the flowers in French knots, the leaves either in satin or lazy daisy stitch.

Special Offer. For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this Pillow complete—top, back and fringe—free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 9382.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.



Little Giant Typewriter

A REAL machine that writes very distinctly. Has every letter in the alphabet, all the numerals from 1 to 10 and punctuation marks. Uses any size letter paper up to 5 inches wide. For correspondence, making out invoices, statements, addressing envelopes, etc., this machine will do the work well. It is very easy to operate, in fact, a child can write on it after a little practice.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this Typewriter free and prepaid. Reward No. 1202.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Make This Handsome 19-Piece Luncheon Set

We Will Give You The Patterns

ONE 24-inch Centerpiece, six 12-inch Doilies, six 6-inch Doilies and six 5-inch Doilies of the simple yet elegant design shown in our illustration. They can be made of the usual white material, such as linen, Butcher cloth, etc., worked in shades to match dishes used in serving, or of colored material to match decorations in the room, with the flowers embroidered in orange, with brown centers, green leaves and stems. Use buttonhole stitch for the borders, all-over embroidery or satin stitch for the flowers, outline stitch for the stems, and either satin or lazy daisy stitch for the leaves.

Special Offer. For only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents we will send you the transfer patterns for this elegant Luncheon Set free by mail postpaid. Reward No. 8381.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Go

Compl

This F
1 Fancy
Reel, 2
Lines A Snelled
1 Trollin
ers, 1 F
3 Swive

Ever qualit will gi

Not o dandy ferent tively have hi part or any La or Pon to catch marvel

CLUB OFFE cents each, we will packed in a nice b
Reward No. 731
Addres

Beautifu

24 Kt

THIS beautiful of purposes—f popcorn, etc. It in the above illustr width and two inch plated outside and it makes a handso should last a lifeti facturer for 10 ye

We will send ye upon the terms of

Given To Yo

each we will sen
Lined Bonbon Di
Reward No. 9942.

Addres

2-Piece Toilet Set

THIS is a good grade Toilet Set, consisting of comb and brush.
The comb is seven inches long,
with coarse and fine teeth, and co
chite" green finis long, two and a h
bristles, and is
"Malachite" green back. We have sets and it never

Given To Y

50 cents each we Brush Set free and

Addres

VETERINARY INFORMATION

Subscribers are invited to write to this department asking for any information desired relative to the treatment of animal troubles. Questions will be answered in these columns free by an eminent veterinarian. Describe the trouble fully, sign full name and give your address; direct all correspondence to the Veterinary Department, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

No attention will be given any inquiry which lacks the sender's full name and address, but we will print only initials if so requested.

RESEARCH WORKERS of several of the agricultural experiment stations of the country have been seeking a preventive and remedy for chicken-pox or contagious epithelioma of fowls Notable success has been achieved by Dr J. R Beach of the California station in the use of vaccine against the disease and his namesake, Dr. B. A. Beach of the Wisconsin station has also thrown much light upon the subject. It would seem that vaccine prepared from chicken-pox virus confers a considerable degree or resistance against the disease but does not confer complete protection against severe artificial infection. The effects of inoculation with the virus of the disease upon chickens that have been vaccinated is mild compared with those shown by similariy inoculated birds that have not been vaccinated. The vaccine has also been proved to have considerable curative value when used on diseased birds. So effective has the vaccine proved as a means of promptly checking outbreaks of chicken-pox and canker that is now said to be in general use in the poultry yards of California. There it has been found that the length of immunity produced by chicken-pox vaccine may vary from two months to more than two years. The chief use of the vaccine is to check the spread of the disease in flocks already infected. We have not seen it prescribed for application in uninfected flocks. According to Dr. Beach of California the efficacy of the vaccine depends upon the degree of virulence of the virus it contains since there is considerable variation in the virulence of different lots of virus and there is at present no successful method of standardizing the virulence of the virus, there is necessarily considerable variation in different lots of vaccine. This fault may be overcome in time, but we have not heard that it has, as yet, been removed. It is certain, however, that poultrymen whose flocks are affected will be justified in giving vaccination a trial under the supervision of a competent veterinarian.

LAME CATTLE.—I have a cow that became crippled in her hind feet and got so she couldn't stand on them; then it went into her front feet. She stayed that way three weeks. Many of the cattle here have been in that condition. D. S

A.—Prolonged excessive feeding of cottonseed meals and hulls often causes such lameness in Southern cattle and the trouble usually is associated with inflammation of the eyes which show a blood-red line around the pupils Hemorrhagic septicemia is another possible cause and often proves fatal but without making an investigation we cannot determine the exact cause Better report the matter to the state veterinarian or take it up with the veterinary department of the state agriculture experiment station as the authorities there will be conversant with local conditions

POLL-EVIL.—Is there a cure for poll-evil? I have a valuable mare that has it so badly she can hardly get her head to the ground to graze. F. E. S.

A.—You do not describe the condition present, but we take it that pus is discharging from one or more openings in a swelling or just behind the ears. If that is the case dead or diseased cartilage causes inflammation of pus and should be removed by a qualified surgeon. Indiscriminate cutting is dangerous in a case of poll-evil as important blood vessels and other structures are present in the affected part. Until you can have an expert operate, syringe out the opening daily with a 1-to-1000 solution of bichloride of mercury and then pack the openings full of boric acid. The disease is curable when professionally treated.

KICKING COW.—Will you tell me how to manage a kicking cow? Mrs. F. A. G.

A.—Buckle a wide strap around the hind leg just above the hocks, or put a strap or rope around the body just in front of the udder. Pad it where it crosses the milk veins and tighten it when kicking starts. If the teats are sore apply melted unsalted lard each evening.

ABSCESS.—I have an American fox dog that was injured over the eye and pus formed. I would like to know if there is a remedy for it or not. D. K.

A.—A bruise or infection of a wound caused formation of an abscess filled with pus which should have been liberated by making a free incision. Treatment would then consist in keeping it clean and disinfected by swabbing with peroxide of hydrogen, twice daily and then dusting it with finely powdered boric acid. A bullet or other foreign object possibly present, should of course be looked for and removed at the time of lancing the abscess

STRUCTURE OF TEETH.—Please tell me if a horse sheds his back teeth, or are the caps just shed? Has a horse's tooth a nerve and enamel? F E D

A.—The first three grinding teeth above and below are called premolars and at first are temporary or milk teeth Their roots are absorbed in time, then the "caps," "shells" or "crowns" are pushed off by the incoming permanent teeth and drop out of the mouth. Sometimes they lodge, cause ill-thrift and should be removed The three back grinders above and below in each jaw, are permanent from the first The nerve of the tooth is in the root. The tooth proper is composed of enamel, dentine and cement in folds. Each ingredient has a different density, the enamel being the hardest. Consequently the grinding surface of the tooth always remains rough as the three ingredients or structures wear off at different rates of speed.

GOITER.—Can you tell me why my pigs die? They farrowed February 22 and lived for three or four weeks on the sow's milk and weighed between 15 and 19 pounds. Do young pigs have goiters? (2) What is a good worm expeller for pigs? O. D. R.

A.—Pigs are commonly affected with goiter and when that disease is present usually are born hairless It may be prevented by giving the pregnant sow one or two grains of iodide of potash daily in water or feed during the last half of pregnancy. (2) To expel worms give 30 drops of oil of chenopodium and one-half an ounce of castor oil for every 50 pounds of body weight. Withhold feed for 24 hours before treatment. Give the medicine by means of a syringe in the mouth. Repeat it in two weeks. Pigs in places long used by hogs almost invariably are infested with worms. Keep them absolutely away from such places.

CANKER OF EAR.—I have a valuable hunting dog of the hound breed that has a yellow discharge from his ears with an offensive odor. It seems to affect his throat. G. E B.

A.—Twice daily perfectly cleanse the ears with swabs of cotton batting tied on a small stick and saturated with peroxide of hydrogen or wood alcohol Then dry well and fill cavity of ear with finely powdered boric acid. Make the dog live an active outdoor life and feed a light laxative ration. Always dry the ears after the dog has been swimming or has been bathed.

HARD MILKER.—I have a cow that has been fresh about two months She gives a large amount of milk but openings in her teats seem to be too small. Is there some way the teats could be opened? G B.

A.—Teat plugs or dilators may be used to increase the caliber of the teat ducts so that milking may be made easier. Such instruments must be sterilized by boiling for 15 minutes each time before use else they will be sure to cause infection which may end in destructive mammitis (garget). The best dilator is one of glove-stretcher pattern. It is used several times daily increasing the degree of dilatation gradually until the duct is sufficiently enlarged. Veterinarians own such instruments which may be bought from any dealer in veterinary supplies and from some of the large mail-order houses.

COUGHING COW.—We have a cow that gets strangled when she eats or after she drinks, she is nine years old, gives lots of milk, is in good condition, and eats heartily. She has rock salt where she can get it all the time. Does it cause her to cough? We give her the best of feed, we thought she might have something in her windpipe. Mrs O. J. R.

A.—Examine the mouth as some sharp object may have lodged in the tongue, cheeks or throat and be the cause of the choking and coughing spells, or sharp points on the teeth possibly may be having that effect. If nothing of the sort can be found better have the cow tested with tuberculin, as tuberculosis would be a possible cause especially if the cow is not native-born.

MAMMITIS.—The left fore teat of my cow's udder is swollen and the milk is yellow and lumpy. Can you give me the cause and what to do? Mrs. E. W. G.

A.—Isolate the cow at once and have her milked by a person who does not attend to the other cows or at least milk her last She is affected with mammitis and the infection is readily conveyed from cow to cow by the milker's hands or may be contracted by the teats coming in contact with floors or ground contaminated by the abnormal fluid from the affected quarters of the udder Cleanse, disinfect and whitewash the stall she has occupied including the floor and gutter. Let a calf nurse until the milk flow diminishes in the sound quarters and then fit her for the butcher. Wo do not think that treatment will succeed or pay.

LOCO POISONING.—I have a gelding, six years old, that is locoed What can I do for him? A. B. C

A.—If you can keep the locoed horse absolutely away from loco weed and give him sound grass or hay and grain, he may recover in time if given Fowler's solution of arsenic. Give him two drams night and morning for a week, then one-half an ounce and even more later if seen to be necessary. It may be sprinkled on feed or given in a little water. Also give enough Epsom salt in water daily to relax the bowels if the usual constipation is present Discontinue the arsenic solution gradually, when no longer needed, taking at least 10 days to the process.

COUGHING COW.—Will you please tel me what will cure "distemper" in cows. My cow has a cough and her nose runs and she seems to jerk a little when she gets her breath. Her calf is three weeks old. She gives six quarts of milk at night and four and one-half in the morning. Is the milk all right to use? Mrs. J. E. Y.

A.—Cows do not suffer with a disease called "distemper" as do horses and dogs, but may have catarrhal fever As tuberculosis always is to be suspected when a cow shows the symptons you mention, you should have the cow in question tested with tuberculin. If she proves to be affected her milk will be dangerous for use by man or animals and as the disease is also incurable and contagious she will have to be disposed of in the manner the veterinarian will recommend.

"Virtue itself offends when coupled with forbidding manners."—Bishop Middleton.

Through the columns of this department free information pertaining to Etiquette, Personal Appearance and kindred subjects will be given in answer to questions by our subscribers, but not more than two questions the same month by any one subscriber. Address Etiquette Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and give your own full name and address. Name will not be published.

HAPPY KID, Rocky, Okla.—Custom decrees that the engagement ring be worn on the third finger of the left hand—that is, the finger next to the "pinkie," as we used to call it when I was a "happy kid" in pinafores ages and ages ago. (2) "Are long engagements dangerous?" you ask: Well, it depends upon how long the marriage agreement might be and with whom it was made. An engagement with a burglar, for instance, might be dangerous even for the short period of three weeks. But for various reasons, we do not think an engagement should be longer than a certain number of months. A year or more is too long, unless circumstances of some sort absolutely demand the delay, or some vicissitude postpones the wedding day It is taken for granted that if a man asks a girl to marry him, he has known and loved her for a reasonable length of time and she has also established a negative or an affirmative opinion of his character and her own liking for him. If they decide to marry, then, there is no reason for further delay than convenience may dictate and propriety demand. We believe in short engagements—and long happinesses!

E. N., Mabel, N. C.—See reply above to Happy Kid, Rocky, Okla., concerning length of the engagement period. (2) You do not give your age, which we are guessing as eighteen. For a girl of that age, who was five feet, three inches in height, an ideal weight has been placed as 120 pounds. Subtract a pound if you are a year younger—or subtract two pounds if you are sweet sixteen!

M. J.—Guy's Mills, Wis.—You do not give your age, but we answer that no young girl should correspond or maintain any acquaintance with a boy or young man of which her mother may be ignorant. If there is concealment there must be a reason for the secrecy—and if there is such a reason, it must be a wrong one. Come out in the open, it is always the better way. (2) For a girl of your height and coloring, the darker shades of green and the lighter shades of brown would be most suitable. Avoid light blue, pale green, and any of the lighter shades of pink. Any shade of yellow you may wear with happy results, we think; also tints of gray, dark red, and as much white, black and navy blue as you wish.

GRAY EYES, Pennsylvania.—Tell your escort at the restaurant what you think you would like to eat, and let him then give the order for both to the waiter. (2) You need not rise when this young man is presented to you.

BROWN EYES OF TENNESSEE.—A lady is not "introduced to a man," but he to her. No set phrases are necessary, and a man should not say: "Glad to meet-cher!" or anything resembling such a sentence. The man may bow, with a "how do you do?" which expresses pleasure, and may shake hands if the lady extends her hand for this ceremony. After that let conversation take its happy course and acquaintanceship ripple on undisturbed down the social stream.

H. E. B., Vona, Colo.—It is certain that a lady could not take time to remove her glove before shaking hands in the acknowledgment of an introduction, and she needs to make no apology if her hands are covered at the time an introduction takes place.

M. O., Ackerman, Miss.—Most assuredly it would be proper to give your teacher his established dignity of title and call him "Mr. Ray." In fact, any other manner of addressing him we would consider unsuitable.

A. W. AND A. M. W., Magnolia, Ark.—What do we think about a boy who has been corresponding with a girl for over a year and will not come to see her? Well, we have the decided opinion that the girl should cease her thinking about this reserved young letter writer. It seems most likely to us that he may be going to see another girl who is not so far off that he has to pay calls by mail. (2) If this boy and girl have been "going together" for four years and have "a bust up every month," it certainly looks as if there was a clash of temperament somewhere which would bode ill for future happiness when they might start "going together" for the long journey of married years. True love does not always run smooth, but it need not be as full of bumps as a back road in spring, or as liable to "bust ups" as a four-year-old Ford tire.

M. W., Mississippi.—Yes, you may properly ask this boy into your home after he has escorted you back from church or any evening entertainment. When he calls for you, to escort you any place, you should also ask him in. It is taken for granted that you would not be waiting for him with hat and wraps on ready to leave the house. If you fear that any conversation of your calling escort is delaying things so that you will be starting too late for the evening's entertainment, it would be quite proper for you to suggest this, should your happy caller be neglectful of the flight of the minutes.

J. B., Hollis, Okla.—It is correct that you should thank your escort after the return from an evening's entertainment to which he has taken you. Say: "Thank you for taking me; I enjoyed it ever so much"—or some phrases of like nature and pleasantness.

E. M. W., Gulfsport, Miss.—As for a "sign in winking," it is assuredly a sign of bad manners. (2) A girl may let a boy take her by the arm to offer assistance or protection when such extra care may be needed at a crowded crossing or in like circumstances. (3) We permit you to exceed this department's regulation of two questions a month, that we may tell you earnestly and distinctly that "when a girl's mother won't let her have fellows," this girl should not meet them away from home, unknown to her mother and in contradiction of her wishes and instructions.

Tyke, Mississippi.—You may thank your fiance as heartily as you wish for the engagement ring he gives you—even a kiss would not be too much. (2) You may give your fiance any article of personal jewelry for a birthday or Christmas gift. A scarf pin, a pair of initialed cuff links a pencil, a fountain pen, a cigarette case—any of these would be appropriate gifts.

UNCERTAIN, Munich, N. D.—How much a boy really cares for a girl can never be judged by the number of times he wants to kiss her. Most boys wish to kiss every girl they "go" with, and if girls were a little more chary of cheeks and lips, these affectionate youngsters would become better-mannered and not expect to be granted so much liberty. A kiss is a sign of affection a girl should give only to the man to whom she is engaged. Let your companion on your rides find out that this is your opinion—and to stick to it. We think he will respect you the more—and you will not lose his affection—if it is real affection worth retaining.

BROWN EYES, Mississippi.—Mind your parents first—and let the boys come later. You must not ask us to let you do what your parents think unwise. Also you do not tell us your age. (2) Yes; you should assuredly ask this boy into your house when he comes to take you to church.

It Is Well to Remember

That every promise is a debt.
That two wrongs never make a right.
That a stitch in time saves nine.
That it is never too late to mend.
That shrouds are made without pockets.
That he is well paid who is satisfied.
That it is better to be innocent than penitent.
That there is no worse joke than a true one.
That it is much easier to be critical than correct.
That it is easier to give advice than to follow it.
That there would be no shadows if there were no sunshine.
That the most profound joy has more of gravity than gaiety in it.
That character is what you are; reputation is what people think you are.
That there is nothing so strong or safe in an emergency of life as the simple truth.
That if you are going to do a good thing, do it now; if you are going to do a mean thing, wait—don't do it.

Missing Relatives and Friends

For the convenience of its subscribers, COMFORT reopens the "Missing Relatives and Friends" column.

To the readers of COMFORT is extended the privilege of inserting three-line notices in this column if they will secure only one new yearly subscriber to COMFORT at 50c. If you wish to find a missing relative or friend you can insert a three-line notice containing not over 22 words in this column by securing only one new subscription at 50c. If a longer notice is required send one 50c subscription for each additional seven words.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Uncle Jerome Forrester or Aunt Mary Blackman, please notify Mrs. Rosella Gross, Bartlesville, Route 1, Box 176, Okla.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Alice Ann Richards and James Brewer Richards, last heard from in Minnesota, please notify William Francis Richards, Alamosa, Colo.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Norman E. Herrington, last heard from in Friendship, Indiana. Your mother needs you. Reward given to anyone who can give me his address. Annie L. Herrington, El Centro, 239 4th St., Calif.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Charlie L. Parsons, went from Sioux City, Iowa to Mexia, Texas the first of April 1922. Last heard from in Mexia, Texas. Age 22, about 5½ feet tall, fair complexion, dark brown hair and blue eyes. Please write his sister, Mrs. Annie Martin, Crofton, Route 1, Ky.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of my husband Admiral Dewey Cowan, last heard from in Marshall, Illinois. Fair complexion, blue eyes, dark hair. Age 24 years. Please notify his wife Mrs. A. D. Cowan, Casa, Ark.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Mr. Dave and Annie Mae Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Wyatt, last heard of in Winston Salem, N. C., please notify Mr. A. R. Wyatt, Stewart, Ala.

To the man I met between Elreno and Oklahoma City, Okla., about the 20th of November, 1922. I only had a short talk and should have made better use of my time Please write Mrs. A. L. Brown, Fairfax, Box 446, Okla.

She Has a Long Reach

The killing took place at St. Charles and Gravier Streets. Then she turned and handed the weapon to a policeman, Corporal Michael Buckley, who stood about 50 feet away.—New York American.

William T. Tilden, 2nd, world's champion, was challened to play ping pong, a game he did not know, against the junior champion of the Germantown Y. M. C. A. Tilden lost the first set then won two straight and the match.

Costs You Nothing to Try It

The NATURAL BODY BRACE

Cures Female Weakness—Makes Walking and Work Easy

Endorsed by Every Physician Who Has Used It. Adjustable to Fit All Figures. Simple in Construction. Comfortable.

Ninety-eight per cent of its wearers are pleased. Thousands of them write like this:

"720 Ward St., Jacksonville, Fla.

I have found your Body Brace to be all that you say for it. I feel like a new woman, after complaining for about 8 years with womb troubles, whites, cramps at menstruation, constipation, kidney trouble, palpitation of heart, backache, headache, pains in abdomen, etc. I have not had a pain since wearing the Brace. I feel like a girl of sixteen.

Mrs. Edward H. Carr."

Money Refunded if Brace is Not Satisfactory. Send for Full Information with Illustrated Book, free. Address

HOWARD C. RASH, Pres.,
The Natural Body Brace Co.
Box 379, Salina, Kansas
This Brace Is Fine for Men Also

Don't Wear a Truss

BE COMFORTABLE—Wear the Brooks Appliance, the modern scientific invention which gives rupture sufferers immediate relief. It has no obnoxious springs or pads. Automatic Air Cushions bind and draw together the broken parts. No salves or plasters. Durable. Cheap. Sent on trial to prove its worth. Beware of imitations. MR. C. E. BROOKS
Look for trade-mark bearing portrait and signature of C. E. Brooks which appears on every Appliance. None other genuine. Full information and booklet sent free in plain, sealed envelope.
BROOKS APPLIANCE CO., 157T State St., Marshall, Mich.

An Everpointed Pencil for Only One Subscription

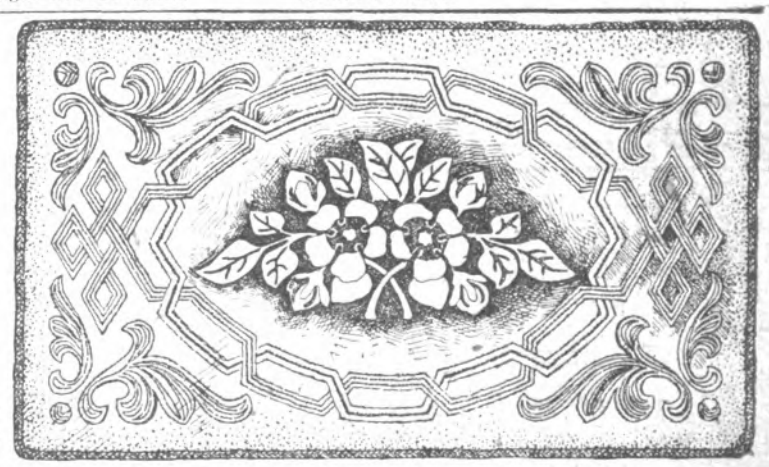
Reward No. 8851

The American public and COMFORT'S million readers have waited a long time for this perfect writing pencil. Without hesitation we can pronounce the Everpointed, the newest product of the American Pencil Company, the most superior self-pointing pencil on the market.

In appearance it looks like solid gold but is not gold nor is it brass. It is "gilt nickle," the latest metallic substance. The more you carry it the brighter it gets. It cannot wear out nor can it wear off. With its delicate chasing and flashing jeweled top it makes one of the most beautiful pencils you ever saw.

It is as useful as it is beautiful. If you carry an Everpointed your lead is always sharp. No more soiled fingers. No more whittling. The Everpointed is always ready for use. Nothing to get out of order. It writes right every time. A slight turn and a fresh lead is ever ready.

Twelve perfect universal size leads—sixteen inches of lead in all—are contained in the magazine under the top—enough for a year's ordinary use. New leads are simply pushed in from the front, as illustrated. A convenient eraser is also concealed under the cap.



The Everpointed comes in two lengths, one of 5½ inches for men, with a safety clip; the other 4 inches for women. Specify which model you prefer.

Given To You! For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50c we will send you an Everpointed pencil by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 8851.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

The heaviest wood in the world is the black ironwood of Florida. When thoroughly dried it is 30 per cent. heavier than water, consequently it will not float.

Free Outfit For Home Rug Making

TO those of our readers who desire to take up the fascinating and profitable work of home rug-making, we are prepared to furnish everything necessary for the work. For a club of only four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you free, by parcel post prepaid, one large piece of burlap for a rug 31 by 54 inches in size, stamped with the handsome "link" design illustrated above. We will also send you one steel hook, complete instructions for making the rug and instructions as to what color to use and where—the signal numbers in these instructions corresponding with the same numbers stamped on the burlap. Reward No. 8054.

If you prefer to pay cash, we will send you the stamped burlap prepaid for $1.00 and the hook prepaid for 25 cents. ($1.25 for both.)

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

For A Club of 11

Daisy Pump Action Repeating Air Rifle

Reward No. 72311

THIS is the new Daisy pump air rifle—an air rifle with a genuine pump action. It is a repeater—you fill the magazine full of shot—pull the slide toward the stock and it is all loaded, cocked and ready to fire. You can fire the Daisy almost as fast as you can pull the trigger without taking it from your shoulder. This is why it is so far ahead of any other air rifle you ever saw. In appearance the "Daisy" is a beauty. From end of stock to end of barrel it is 38 inches long, weighs 3 1-4 pounds, all metal parts are of steel with non-rusting blue gun metal finish, the stock is of genuine black walnut, hand polished, and it has adjustable sights front and rear. It is a take-down model, or in other words, the barrel may be removed from the stock which makes it a gun very convenient to carry on long trips as it can be packed in a very small space. We will make you a present of a "Pump Action Daisy" and send it to you by Parcel Post prepaid if you will accept the following

Club Offer. For a club of eleven one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you a Daisy Pump Action Repeating Air Rifle exactly as described above by Parcel Post prepaid. (Reward No. 72311.)

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

How Beautiful!

These New Beads Are All The Rage

Gift No. 1562

WALK down Fifth Avenue, New York, attend a Chicago opera, ride on the Pullman cars or frequent the most exclusive society places—there you will find a predominating number of women decked in these new rainbow colored beads.

TWO 46-INCH STRINGS FOR TWO SUBSCRIPTIONS

When worn in pairs of different colors these beads give the most stunning appearance imaginable. They come in pearl gray, red, green, orange and silver gray. They are made of light weight metal and strung on fine stout wire. If you like to wear attractive neck ornaments here is the sensation of the year.

Our offer includes two long 46-inch strings of these beads in pretty contrasting color combinations. You'll be delighted with what you receive.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you free and prepaid two 46-inch strings of colored beads. Reward No. 1562. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Wear a Gold Pencil Around Your Neck

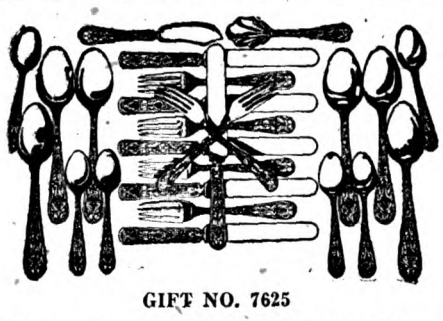
Reward No. 1532.

The height of style and utmost convenience are embodied in this new gold-filled self-sharpening pencil with its long neck ribbon.

Everyone who has used a self-sharpening pencil knows how convenient it is to have an ever sharp point with the simple turn of the barrel of the pencil. You have it in this attractive pencil and in addition you have a pencil that not only pushes out the lead but pulls it back, so it will not break. Our offer also includes a dozen extra leads in a handy little metal box.

Given for Two Subscriptions

The pencil itself is gold-filled and handsomely chased as shown in the illustration. The illustration is full size.



The ribbon, which is attached to the pencil with a firm snap catch, is 34 inches long, selvaged edges and of exceedingly good quality silk finish. The gold-filled ornament shown on the ribbon can be moved to any desired position.

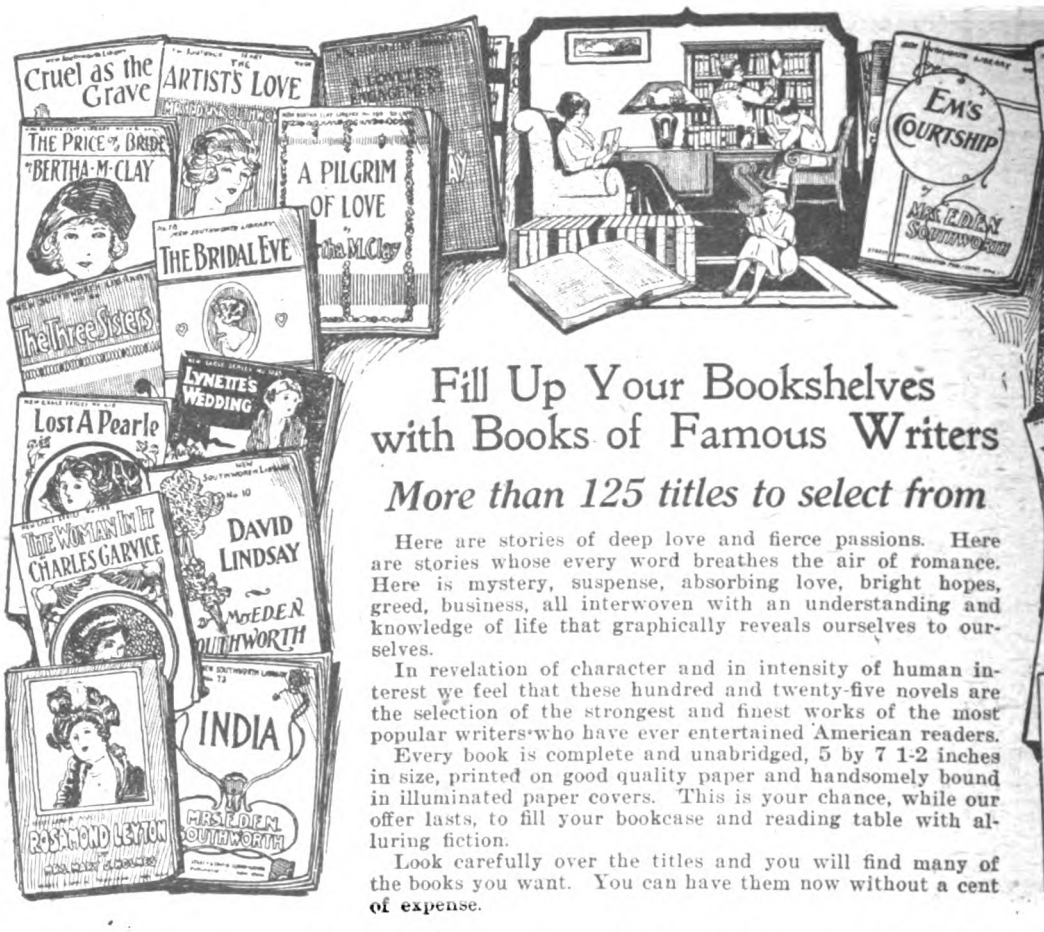
If you searched through all the jewelry stores in the country you could hardly find a more attractive, stylish or convenient pencil than this.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this gold-filled pencil and neck ribbon with box of 12 extra leads all free and prepaid. Reward No. 1532.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

26-Piece Table Set

GIFT NO. 7625



Given For A Club Of Only Five

WE have made many offers of table-ware, but this is the first time we have been able to offer a complete set of 26 Pieces in return for so small a club. And please don't think that because we are giving this set on such liberal terms that it is plated on a brass base and consequently will change color and have that "brassy" look just as soon as the plating wears off. On the contrary, it has a white metal base; therefore each and every piece is the same color all the way through and will not show signs of wear, even after years of constant use. As shown in the above illustration, there are 26 pieces in this set—6 Knives, 6 Forks, 6 Teaspoons, 6 Tablespoons, Sugar Shell and Butter Knife. Each piece is full regulation size for family use, the handles are handsomely embossed and the blades of the knives and the bowls of the teaspoons and tablespoons are perfectly plain and bright polished. It is only because we buy this set in large quantities direct from the factory that we are able to secure it at a price that enables us to offer it as a reward for so few subscriptions. It is by far the greatest value we have offered and we guarantee every set sent out for a period of five years.

Given To You! For a club of five one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this 26-Piece Table Set free by Parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 7625.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

The Pick of the Country's Favorit

Fill Up Your Bookshelves with Books of Famous Writers

More than 125 titles to select from

Here are stories of deep love and fierce passions. Here are stories whose every word breathes the air of romance. Here is mystery, suspense, absorbing love, bright hopes, greed, business, all interwoven with an understanding and knowledge of life that graphically reveals ourselves to ourselves.

In revelation of character and in intensity of human interest we feel that these hundred and twenty-five novels are the selection of the strongest and finest works of the most popular writers who have ever entertained American readers.

Every book is complete and unabridged, 5 by 7 1-2 inches in size, printed on good quality paper and handsomely bound in illuminated paper covers. This is your chance, while our offer lasts, to fill your bookcase and reading table with alluring fiction.

Look carefully over the titles and you will find many of the books you want. You can have them now without a cent of expense.

Ida Reade Allen

E 1124 The Breath of Slander
E 1115 A Blue Grass Heroine
E 1066 No Man's Wife

Bertha M. Clay

C 95 Love's Warfare
C 102 The Price of a Bride
C 107 A Woman's Temptation
C 109 A Struggle for the Right
C 116 Blossom and Fruit
C 117 Lady Muriel's Secret
C 123 The Hidden Sin
C 128 Lady Latimer's Escape
C 129 A Woman's Error
C 130 A Loveless Engagement
C 133 The Chains of Jealousy
C 138 When Love and Hate Conflict
C 140 A Pilgrim of Love
C 142 Lost for Love
C 147 A Fateful Passion
C 150 An Evil Heart
C 158 Lady Ona's Sin
C 165 A Poisoned Heart

Marie Corelli

S 16 A Romance of Two Worlds
S 42 Vendetta

"The Duchess"

S 150 A Mental Struggle
S 141 Lady Valworth's Diamonds
S 134 A Modern Circe

Geraldine Fleming

E 1120 Sold for Gold
E 1062 The Curse of Beauty
E 1043 Love That Was Cursed

May Agnes Fleming

E 481 Wedded, Yet No Wife
E 136 The Unseen Bridegroom
E 9 The Virginia Heiress

Wenona Gilman

E 1087 The Tide of Fate
E 1070 Evelyn the Actress

Charles Garvice

E 17 Leslie's Loyalty
E 50 Her Ransom
E 84 Imogene
E 95 A Wilful Maid
E 250 A Woman's Soul
E 272 So Fair, So False
E 304 Stanch as a Woman
E 305 Led by Love. Sequel to "Stanch as a Woman"
E 635 A Coronet of Shame
E 655 Linked by Fate
E 758 The Woman in It

H. Rider Haggard

S 152 Colonel Quaritch, V. C.
S 108 Allan Quartermain
S 80 King Solomon Mines
S 75 She

Mary J. Holmes

S 2 Rosamond Leyton
S 216 Georgie's Secret
S 230 The Unloved Husband

Rudyard Kipling

S 166 The Phantom Rickshaw
S 31 The Light That Failed
S 72 Plain Tales From the Hills

Laura J. Libbey

E 1112 Mischievous Maid Faynie
E 138 A Fatal Wooing

Mrs. Harriet Lewis

E 213 The Heiress of Egremont
S 232 Neva's Choice
S 221 Sundered Hearts
S 213 Cecil's Triumph

Mrs. Alex McVeigh Miller

E 1085 Lynette's Wedding
E 1078 The Shadow Between Them
E 1050 Married in Error

W. Clark Russell

S 143 John Holdsworth, Chief Mate
S 129 Love and Shipwreck

Mrs. Georgie Sheldon

E 7 Two Keys
E 1 Queen Bess
E 44 That Dowdy
E 66 Witch Hazel
E 111 Faithful Shirley
E 122 Grazia's Mistake
E 133 Max
E 166 The Masked Bridal
E 177 A True Aristocrat
E 188 Dorothy Arnold's Escape
E 210 Wild Oats
E 219 Lost: A Pearle
E 244 A Hoiden's Conquest
E 266 The Wellfleet Mystery
E 415 Trixy
E 511 The Golden Key
E 512 A Heritage of Love. Sequel to "The Golden Key"
E 519 The Magic Cameo
E 520 The Heatherford Fortune. Sequel to "The Magic Cameo"
E 676 My Lady Beth

Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth

4 Em's Courtship. Sequel to "Em"
10 David Lindsay. "Sequel to "Gloria"
22 A Leap in the Dark
23 The Mysterious Marriage. Sequel to "A Leap in the Dark"
24 Her Mother's Secret
29 The Unloved Wife
30 When the Shadow Darkens
31 Lilith. Sequel to "When the Shadow Darkens"
44 The Changed Brides, or "Winning Her Way"
45 The Bride's Fate. Sequel to "The Changed Brides"
48 Cruel as the Grave, or "The Hallowe'en Mystery"
49 Tried for Her Life. Sequel to "Cruel as the Grave"
73 India, or "The Pearl of Pearle River"
78 The Bridal Eve
86 The Three Sisters
91 The Artist' Love

Robert Louis Stevenson

S 149 The Suicide Club
S 125 The Master of Ballantrae
S 83 Kidnapped
S 58 Treasure Island

Miscellaneous

E 1100 An Angel of Evil, Effie Adelaide Rowlands
E 1096 A Bachelor Girl, Lucy May Russell
S 78 Beyond the City, A. Conan Doyle
S 51 Camille Alexandre Dumas
S 67 The Cruise of the Cachalot," Frank T. Bullen
E 1127 Daredevil Betty, Evelyn Malcolm
S 147 The Dead Secret, Wilkie Collins
S 60 Dead Man's Rock, "Q" (A. T. Quiller-Couch)
S 14 East Lynne, Mrs. Henry Wood
S 138 Elsie Venner Oliver Wendell Holmes
E 1084 Ethel's Secret, Charlotte M. Stanley
E 1088 Her Husband's Other Wife, Emma Garrison Jones

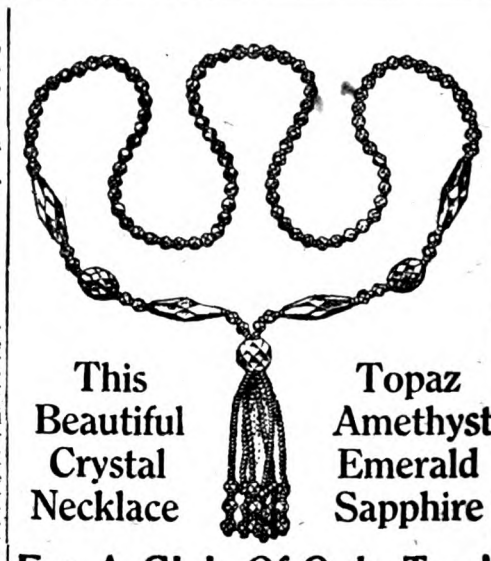
Given To You

For one one-year subsc COMFORT at 50c we w free. For a club of two o we will send you any 3 the books by number a name so that you will be want. Suggest one extra tute if necessary.

ADDRESS COMFORT

Sterling Silver Ring!

Set With Your Own Birthstone. Your Choice For Only One Subscription



THESE handsome silver birthstone rings are the very latest. Every woman or girl who wants to be in style should wear one. Each ring is guaranteed sterling silver, with attractively designed open work, beautifully executed and finished. The imt. gems are perfectly cut, unusually deep, with that rare brilliancy so seldom found except in rings of the very highest quality. The twelve different gems and their corresponding months are as follows:

January, Garnet; February, Amethyst; March, Bloodstone; April, Diamond; May, Emerald; June, Agate; July, Ruby; August, Sardonyx; September, Sapphire; October, Opal; November, Topaz; December, Turquoise.

Heretofore the prices of solid silver rings have been too high to permit us to make an offer of this kind and it is only by a fortunate purchase of a large quantity of them taken in one lot that we are able to make the offer now. Don't delay if you want one of these handsome and stylish rings—we may not be able to secure any more of them at a reduced price. We will send you your choice of these rings if you will send us two subscriptions.

Given To You! For ONE one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50c, we will send you free and postpaid one of these beautiful Sterling silver birthstone rings. Be sure to give size and number of ring wanted.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

This Beautiful Crystal Necklace

Topaz Amethyst Emerald Sapphire

For A Club Of Only Two!

RIGHT from New York, the center of fashion, comes this new, stylish necklace and we were indeed fortunate in obtaining a good supply of them. We only wish we could show it in its actual colors because mere words fail to do it justice. It is thirty inches long, composed of brilliant crystal cut beads, alternating with seed beads, with transparent long oval and round bead ornamentations and tassel. It comes in four different colors—Topaz, Amethyst, Emerald and Sapphire.

City people of course have no difficulty in obtaining the newest styles in necklaces. But COMFORT'S women and girl readers live in the country, far from the up-to-date stores—and that's why we make this offer. This is your opportunity to secure a necklace as handsome and stylish as any that will be seen anywhere this season. And best of all, it will not cost you one cent if you will accept the following special offer.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each we will send you this beautiful crystal bead necklace free by parcel post prepaid. Please be sure to mention color wanted. Reward No. 1142.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

12 Films And Instruction Book

Hawk-I

THE "Hawk-Eye" Kodak Co., so you that it is a you can depend up ing and satisfactor takes a picture 2¼ reliable quick act adapted for either and has two brillian may be taken eithe of the camera. It twelve films. This camera and taken o ing away with the room every time yo that there must be ers, old and young, just this opportunity without paying a bi pared to give away Eyes" as club rewa you not only the ca pack containing tw book telling you a A to Z.

Given To You FORT at 50 cents e "Hawk-Eye" Camers ing twelve films an free by parcel post Address

COMFORT'S Emporium of Bargains and Opportunities

AGENTS WANTED

Make $30.00 daily taking orders for $3.95 ion made raincoats. Factory prices. Largest nmission. Your pay daily. We deliver and llect. American Eagle Raincoat Co., 155 . Union St., Dept. 334, Chicago.

Use Insyde Tyres in your old casings and from 3 to 5 thousand miles more service. ositively prevent punctures and blowouts. ed over and over again. Low priced. Big oney Saver. Agents wanted. Write for rms. American Accessories Co., Dept. 720 Cincinnati, Ohio.

Agents—Sell necessities like Tea, Coffee, aking Powder Flavors, Perfumes, Soaps d other products; used every day in the year; peat over and over again. Every home a stomer and regular user The smart and experienced agents handle this line, why not you. rite today for money-making plan; don't delay Territory going fast. American Products . 9639 American Bldg. Cincinnati, Ohio.

Big Money and Fast Sales. Every Owner vs Gold Initials for his auto. You charge .50; make $1.35 Ten orders daily easy. Write r particulars and free samples. American onogram Co. Dept. 64, East Orange, N. J.

Rubber Goods Manufacturer offers big pportunity to men and women agents selling ousehold and personal comfort necessities rite Manufacturer—American Rubber Prodcts Co Dept 705 Pittsburgh, Pa.

Start Your Own Business as our sole gent, selling 100 famous home products. All spare time. Dr. Blair Laboratories, Dept. 1, Lynchburg, Va.

300% Profit:—Easy seller Kleanrite. ashes clothes without rubbing Samples free. estever Prod.Co.,1947-A Irving Park,Chicago

Agents—Make a Dollar an Hour. Sell endets, a patent patch for instantly mending aks in all utensils. Sample package free. ollette Mfg. Co.,Dept.452-B,Amsterdam, N.Y.

We Start You without a Dollar. Soaps, Extracts, Perfumes—Toilet Goods. Experience unecessary Carnation Co., Dept. 131, St. Louis.

Everybody uses Extracts. Sell Duo Double trength Extracts. Complete line necessities. Write today. Duo Co., Dept. E 41, Attica, N.Y.

Ambitious men, write today for attractive roposition, selling subscriptions to America's ost popular automobile and sportsman's agazines. Quick sales. Big profits. Pleasant ork. Digest Pub Co. 9525 Butler Bldg., Cinnnati.

Greatest Sensation! Eleven Piece Toilet rticle Set selling like blazes at $1.75 with 1.00 dressmakers shears free to each customer Spring rush on. Foster Reid Co., 3 Winslow Bldg., Station C Chicago.

Make Money silvering mirrors, all kinds plating knives, spoons, auto headlights. Outits furnished. Free booklet. International Laboratories, Dept. D6,311 Fifth Ave., New York

Agents Men or women, $200 a month. Year ound position. No layoffs. Take orders for ennings New Style Hosiery. Written guarntee of satisfaction or new hose free. Write for utfit. Jennings Mfg. Co., Dept. 223, Dayton, Ohio.

Agents—New Discovery Makes Jelly "Jell." ig profits, constant repeater. Sample free. oy-Jel Company, 807 Grand St. Joseph, Mo.

Agents: Make 100% Toilet Articles, erfumes, Extracts, Home Necessities. Sample ase Free. LaDerma Co., Dept. H, St. Louis.

$61.50 Weekly introducing and selling a ew gas light burner for kerosene lamps. Beautiful light No chimney No mantle. Samples ree. Experience not necessary. Write today. Luther Mfg Co., Dept. 484. Cincinnati, Ohio.

$5 to $15 Daily Easy—Introducing New tyle Guaranteed Hosiery. Must wear or replaced free. No capital or experience required Just show samples, write orders. We eliver and collect. Your pay in advance. Outfit furnished all colors grades including silks. Mac-O-Chee Mills Co., Desk 2067, Cincinnati, O

AGENTS WANTED

Men, Women—Self-threading Needles sell easy. Send for prices. Sample 10c. L. Miller, Box 1250, City Hall Station, New York.

Large Shirt Manufacturer wants Agents to sell complete line of shirts direct to wearer. Exclusive patterns. Big values. Free samples. Madison Mills, 503 Broadway, New York.

Agents—$15 a day—Easy, quick Sales—Free Auto—Big weekly Bonus—$1.50 premium Free to every customer. Simply show our Beautiful, 7 piece, Solid Aluminum Handle Cutlery Set. Appeals instantly We deliver and collect. Pay daily. New Era Mfg. Co., 803 Madison St., Dept. 32-P, Chicago.

Agents! A sale in every home for our beautiful Dress Goods, Silks and General Yard Goods. Quick sales! Big profits! Large book of nearly 1000 handsome fabric samples furnished to agents. National Importing & Mfg. Co., Dept. 24X, 573 Broadway, New York.

Agents Make $10 Daily—Big line guaranteed Extracts, Food Products, Perfumes, Toilet Goods, Household Necessities. No capital or experience needed. Free Sample Case and instructions. Write for amazing offer. Perkins Products Co., Desk 10, Hastings, Nebr.

We Start You In Business, furnishing everything; men and women, $30 to $100 weekly operating our "New System Candy Factories" home anywhere. Booklet free. W. Hillyer Ragsdale, Drawer 5, East Orange, N. J.

Agents: A Brand New Hosiery proposition for men, women and children. Must wear 12 months or replaced free. All styles, colors and finest silk hose. You can sell at less than store prices. Write for samples. Thomas Mfg. Co., Class 619, Dayton, Ohio.

Rummage Sales make $50.00 daily. We start you. Representatives wanted everywhere. "Wholesale Distributors" Dept. 72, 609 Division Street, Chicago.

FEMALE HELP WANTED

$200 Month salary paid women after taking "Nurses Training" School Course. Apply for details of Free scholarships covering 3 years Board, Room, Tuition, etc., in Free Chicago or N. Y. City schools. American Schools Ass'n, 159 N. State St., Chicago, or 1103 Times Bldg., New York.

Ladies wanted everywhere; opportunity earn money home spare time; particulars for stamp. Eller Company, D-3, 27 Warren St., New York.

Wanted—Girls, Women over 15. Learn Millinery at home. $35 week. Summer demand big. Sample lessons free. Write today sure. Franklin Institute, Dept. W800, Rochester, N.Y.

Ladies—Earn Money Crocheting, Tatting, making aprons and caps. Material furnished. Patterns and plans 35c. Send remittance now. Returned if desired. Kenwood Pattern Co., 6238 So. Park Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Girls—Women. Learn Gown Designing—Making. $40 week. Learn while earning. Fascinating. Sewing experience unnecessary. Sample lessons free. Write immediately. Franklin Institute, Dept. W501, Rochester, N.Y.

Earn money at home during spare time painting lamp shades, pillow tops for us. No canvassing. Easy and interesting work. Experience unnecessary. Nileart Company, 2233, Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

$6-$18 a dozen decorating pillow tops at home; pleasant work; experience unnecessary; particulars for stamp. Tapestry Paint Co., 104, LaGrange, Ind.

Look! You Are Wanted. Girls-Women 18 up. $95-150 Month. Government Jobs. Steady Work. Common education sufficient. List positions free. Write today sure. Franklin Institute Dept. W9, Rochester, N. Y.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Increase Your Family income knitting socks at home. The way to independence. The Home Profit Knitter is the world's most productive and reliable home knitting machine. Be first in your town. We pay you $1.75 for every dozen pairs, furnish free yarn with each machine and replace yarn used in socks you send us. Enormous demand. Free instruction anywhere. Immediate application necessary. Home Profit Hosiery Co., 858-S. Hudson Avenue, Rochester, New York.

MALE HELP WANTED

Government needs Railway Mail Clerks, $133 to $192 month. Write for free specimen questions. Columbus Institute, A-2 Columbus, O.

Wanted,—Boys—Men, Be Auto Experts. $45 week Write immediately. Franklin Institute, Dept. W410, Rochester, N. Y.

Firemen, Brakemen, Baggagemen, Sleeping car, train porters (colored). $140-$200. Experience unnecessary. 828 Railway Bureau, E. St. Louis, Ill.

Earn up to $400 Monthly, living expenses paid, in Hotel work. Splendid opportunities for trained men and women—many openings. We have more than we can fill. 80,000 hotel positions to be filled the coming year. We train you at home. Send for free booklet. Standard Business Training Inst., 299 Carlton Court, Buffalo, N. Y.

REMNANTS

Remnants, new mill ends, standard widths. Gingham, Chambray, Voile, Scrim, Prints, Toweling, Muslin & Etc., one to ten yard lengths. Red Hot Bargain, samples 10c. bundle 25c, 10 yards assorted $1.00 postpaid. 50 yards $4.00 (not prepaid). Circulars free. 10 home work plans free with every order (no trash). Address—Kentucky Sales Co., Chambers, Kentucky.

Remnant Store, 1510 Vine St., Cincinnati, O. Greatest Dry Goods Bargains on Earth. Agents and Storekeepers supplied.

BUSINESS CHANCES

Stop Plodding! be Successful. Operate a Tire Repair Shop. Make big profits in any locality. We teach you and furnish Complete equipments $100 up. Book of Opportunity free. Haywood's, 1301 South Oakley Avenue, Chicago.

Make Good Money, During Spare Time; Wonderful Opportunity. Let us start you in a paying business by mail. Write at once. Keith's Promoting Company, Long Branch, N. J.

FOR SALE

Leaf Tobacco; five pounds chewing $1.75; ten, $3.00; twenty, $5.25. five pounds smoking $1.25; ten, $2.00; twenty, $3.50. Pipe & Recipe free. Send no money, pay when received. United Tobacco Growers, Mayfield, Ky.

Leaf Tobacco. Chewing or smoking 5 lbs. $1.50; 10 lbs. $2.50. Pay when received, pipe and recipe free. Farmers Tobacco Union, Paducah, Ky.

ENTERTAINMENTS

304 Parodies, Recitations, Minstrel & Joke Books $1.25. 12 Vaudeville Acts $1. Everything $2. E. L. Gamble, Playwright, East Liverpool, O.

MISCELLANEOUS

A $500 Cash Prize is offered to the writer of the best second verse for our future song release "Where Is Your Smile". Those wishing to compete may receive a free copy of song and rules of contest by addressing, Handy Bros. Music Co., 2573 Eighth Ave., New York.

170 Popular Songs with music postpaid 25c. Address: Albert Brooks, 2303 West Monroe St., Chicago.

Exchange Letters and Postcards, Either sex. Write Correspondence Club, 1013-89th St., Woodhaven, N. Y. (Stamp).

Switches made from combings. The new way. Write for Style Booklet. Mrs. E. Vandervoort, Davenport, Ia.

PATENT ATTORNEYS

Patents—Write for free Guide Book, and Evidence of Conception Blank. Send model or sketch and description for free opinion of its patentable nature. Highest References. Prompt Service. Reasonable Terms. Victor J. Evans & Co., 641 Ninth, Washington, D. C.

Patents promptly procured. Moderate Fees. Best References. Send Sketch or Model. George P. Kimmel, Master of Patent Law, 27-K, Loan & Trust Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Patents Procured; Trade Marks Registered—A comprehensive, experienced, prompt service for the protection and development of your ideas. Preliminary advice gladly furnished without charge. Booklet of information and form for disclosing idea free on request. Richard B. Owen, 18 Owen Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Inventors—Desiring to secure patent should write for our book, "How To Get Your Patent." Send model or sketch and description for opinion of its patentable nature. Randolph & Co., Dept. 112, Washington, D. C.

MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

$35.00 Profit Nightly. Small capital starts you. No experience needed. Our machines are used, endorsed by Govt. institutions. Cat. free. Atlas Moving Picture, 471 Morton Bldg., Chicago.

OLD MONEY

$2 to $500 Each paid for hundreds of old or odd Coins. You may have. Very valuable coins. Send 10c for Ill's Coin Value Book, 4x6. Get Posted. We pay Cash. Clark Coin Co., Ave. 20, Le Roy, N. Y.

BOOKS

X-woundmarked Seer Emmerich, and her splendid visions, Nativity, Egypt, Cana; 4 books for 20c. Klein Co., Brandon, Minn.

STAMPING NAMES

Stamp Names on key checks. Make $19 per 100. Send 25c for sample and inst. Either Sex. C. Keytag Co., Cohoes, N. Y.

BABY CHICKS

Baby Chicks: 12 best varieties 8c up. Postpaid and guaranteed. Catalog free. Missouri Chickeries, Bx XC, Clinton, Mo.

PRINTING

Printed Stationery. 200 Letter Heads and 100 Envelopes with your name and address for $1.00. Calling cards, 100 for 50c. J. W. Read, 3401 Parnell Ave., Chicago, Ill.

LAND

Land Opportunity! 20, 40, 80 ac. tracts near thriving city in lower Mich; only $10 to $50 down; bal. long time. Write today for free illustrated booklet. Swigart Land Co., C1246 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Chicago.

MAIL ORDER BUSINESS

$25,000. I made it small Mail Order Business. Booklet Free. Tells How Plan 25c Free 12 Articles worth $3. A. C. Scott, Cohoes, N Y.

HEMSTITCHING AND PICOTING

Hemstitching and Picoting Attachment, works on all Sewing Machines. Easily adjusted. Price $2.00 prepaid with complete instructions. The only attachment that does good work. Ladies' Art Sales Co., Box 71-G, Hamtramck, Mich.

Guaranteed Hemstitching and Picoting Attachment. New. Fits any sewing machine. $2.00 prepaid or sent C.O.D. Literature free. Agents wanted. LaFlesh Hemstitching Co., Dept D, Sedalia, Mo.

PHOTOPLAYS STORIES

Wanted—Men and women ambitious to make money writing Stories and Movie Plays. Send for wonderful Free Book that tells how. Address Authors' Press, Dept. 31, Auburn, N.Y.

$$$ For Ideas. Photoplay Plots accepted any form; revised, criticised, copyrighted, marketed. Advice free. Universal Scenario Corporation, 941 Western Mutual Life Bldg., Los Angeles, California.

FARMS FOR SALE

California has more independent men and women than any other state. Investigate at first hand; go now. Round trip summer excursion fares, on the Santa Fe, until Sept 30th, limited to Oct. 31st, liberal stopovers. Opportunities in California for the man of moderate means, who desires to establish a home in a delightful country, are better now than ever. Lands reasonable in price; long time payments granted. California State Land Board offers choice twenty acre farms at Ballico, Merced County on unusual terms. Write us if interested. California folders free. C. L. Seagraves, General Colonization Agent, Santa Fe Ry. 913 Ry. Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

PHOTO FINISHING

Kodak Prints 3c, Developing 5c per roll This is our regular price. Altine Photo Co., Dept. A, 1982 Kinney Ave., Cincinnati, O.

Better Pictures, We make them. A trial will prove it. Roll developed and six snappy prints 20 cts. The Better Photos Co., Box A, Wallingford, Ky

First trial offer—Any size kodak film developed and six glossy prints 20c. Cameron Photo Co., C-3418, Burch Ave., Cincinnati O.

Films developed 5c; Prints 3c each. The new Davo finish. Davis Photo Shop, Dept. C, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Special Trial Offer. Your next Kodak film developed 5c, Prints 2c each. Moser & Son, 2122 St. James Ave., Cincinnati, O.

Special Trial Offer: Any size Kodak film developed for 5c; prints 3c each. Over-night service. Get a Free Auto. Ask for details. Roanoke Photo Finishing Co., 228 Bell Ave., Roanoke, Va.

HELP WANTED

All men, women, boys, girls, 17 to 60, willing to accept Government Positions, $117-$200, traveling or stationary, write, Mr. Osment, 104, St. Louis, immediately.

Earn $25 Weekly, writing for newspapers, magazines. Experience unnecessary; details Free. Press Syndicate, 451, St. Louis, Mo.

Gov't Positions, $1400-$2300 yearly. Many openings. 36-page information booklet free. Chicago Civil Service College, Dept. K, Chicago.

Wanted—Men 18-35. Railway Postal Clerks. $1600-$2300 year. List Positions—free. Franklin Institute, Dept. W12, Rochester, N. Y.

STORY WRITERS WANTED

Writers—Attention! Stories, poems, plays, etc., are wanted for publication. Submit Mss or write Literary Bureau, C6, Hannibal, Mo.

INSTRUCTION

Sell us your spare time. You can earn Fifteen to Fifty dollars weekly writing showcards at home, no canvassing; pleasant profitable profession; easily quickly learned by our simple graphic block system; artistic ability unnecessary. We instruct you and supply work. Wilson Methods, Limited, Dept. 68, Toronto, Canada.

FARM WANTED

Farm Wanted:—Immediately from owner, any location. Send description; lowest price. Mr. Adams, 1931 Forest, St. Louis, Mo.

Five Wheel Chairs in June

693 Is COMFORT'S Total to Date

The recipients of the five June wheel chairs are: Mothers' Class of Christian Church, Franklin Ohio, 153; Oneda Gartman, Sheridan, Ark., 96; Charlie L. Scales Adamsburg S. C., 83; Sam J. McAbee Rockbuck, S. C., 67; Robert E. Hill, White Bluffs, Tenn., 58.

J. OLIVER SMALLEY ENJOYING HIS COMFORT WHEEL CHAIR.

Mothers' Class of Christian Church sent the 153 subscriptions all at once enclosed with a letter from Mrs. Harry Hurst explaining that their chair is not for any particular individual but is for community use to be loaned to invalids temporarily in need of a wheel chair.

Oneda Gartman, aged 10, is, and has been from birth, a helpless cripple due to paralysis.

Charlie L. Scales, aged 7, has no use of his legs and little use of his hands, due to tuberculosis of the bones with which he has been afflicted the past six years. This wheel chair will afford the boy relief and lighten his mother's labors in caring for him.

Sam J. McAbee, age 29, has been a helpless invalid from birth and cannot feed or help himself in any way; he cannot even sit up except by being strapped in a rocking-chair. His mother writes that he is mentally bright and wants to be out of doors all the time and will very much enjoy his wheel chair.

Robert E. Hill, age 58, has been afflicted with rheumatism the past four years and confined to his room and bed the last two and a half years. His wheel chair will enable him to get out of his room at times and will help his good wife in caring for him.

Five wheel chairs is a creditable achievement for June, but let us try to equal or better it for July.

Sincerely yours,
W. H. GANNETT,
Publisher of COMFORT.

P. S. for the information of our many new subscribers let me explain that for each and every 150 one-year subscriptions to COMFORT, at 50 cents each, sent in either singly or in clubs by persons who direct that they are to be credited to COMFORT'S WHEEL-CHAIR CLUB instead of claiming the premiums to which they would be entitled, I give a FIRST-CLASS INVALID WHEEL-CHAIR to some needy crippled Shut-in and pay the freight, too. It is a large and expensive premium for me to give for that number of subscriptions, but I am always glad to do my part a little faster each month than you do yours.

COMFORT Wheel Chair Makes Happy Christmas for Cripple

Henagar, Ala.

Dear Mr. Gannett:

We are sending you a picture of J. Oliver Smalley in his COMFORT wheel chair. We are highly pleased with the chair and we send our many thanks to you and our friends who assisted in obtaining it for him. It was a happy Christmas Eve when the chair was uncrated and he was placed in it with a nice Christmas box in his lap which was given him by a dear friend, Mrs. Brenton.

Very truly yours,
(Mrs.) I. L. Smalley.

Comfort's Roll of Honor

The Roll of Honor comprises the names of those who have sent five or more subscriptions, or a dollar or more in money, to credit of the Wheel-Chair Club during the month previous. Following each name is the number of subscriptions or amount of cash sent.

Mrs. Harry Hurst, Ohio, for Mothers' Class of Christian Church, 153 subs; Mrs. T. E Stewart, Texas, for Andrew Vieregge, 45; Mrs. Lessie Ault, Ark., for Oneda Gartman, 39; Mrs. J. E. Harris, Okla., for Eugene Phinney, 32; J. M. Scales, S. C., for Charley Scales, 32; Mrs. W. T. Allen, Ark., for Oneda Gartman, 27; Mrs. Phœbe Bratton, for Oneda Gartman, 24; Belle Green, Miss., for Mrs. Kattie Tidwell, 21; Mary L. Faubin, Texas, for Geo. Adams, 20; Mrs. G. E. Martindale, Texas, for Reba Martindale, 19, Mrs. A. L. McAbee, S. C., for Sam J. McAbee, 27; Mrs. Mary McMurray, W. Va., for Mary Anna Smith, 15; Mrs. M. B. Hall, Ark., for Mrs. Albert Phillips, 14; Miss Nina Sentell, S. C., for Miss Mattie Haynes, 10; Mrs. Frankie Owens, Tenn., for R. E. Hill, 10 subs and $4.00; Mrs A. W. Metcalf, Conn, for Mrs. R. B. Bank's little boy, $5.00, A Florida Friend, Fla., for general, $5.00, Mrs. Fannie Hill, S. C., for Charlie Scales, 4 subs and $1.00; Mrs. W. E. Gallup, Mo., for Geo. Ash, 3 subs and 50c.; L. W. Yockey, Calif., for general, $1.00; Lafayette Swanson, N. C., for own chair, $1.00; Mrs. D. A. Conaster, Ark., for Ethel Long, 8 subs; Mrs. J. E. Smothers, N. C., for Andrew Smothers, 14; Mrs. Hardin Grimes, Texas, for Deward Grimes, 7 sub and $2.00; Sarah Weekley, Mont., for Geo. Ash., 6 sub and 50c.; Mrs. Roy Palmer, Mont., for Geo. Ash, 11 subs and $2.50; Mrs. C. B. Arter, Kans., for E. W. Belfield, 6 subs; Mrs. Nicey Cole, Mo., for Miss Ada Cole, 6; Mrs Virgie Myles, W. Va., for Lafayette Swanson, 5; Myrtle Robbins, Texas, for Hazel Burdette, 6; Laura Frase, Md., for J. L. Swanson, 5; Miss Cornelia Cress, D. C., for Lafayette Swanson, 5; Mrs. W. M. Tout, Ga., for G. R. Wheeler, 5; Mrs. Mollie Pratt, Ala., for general, $1.50.

A Serious Case

"After the crash," said the first hospital surgeon to the second, "I ran over to where it lay on the pavement, and when I raised it up I saw at once that its ribs were smashed, while a gaping hole was torn in its—"

"Pardon me, doctor," broke in a medical student who happened to come up at that moment, "but if you have no objection I'd like to take a few notes on that accident case."

He pulled his notebook from his pocket.

"Was the case a man or a woman?" he inquired.

"No," the surgeon informed him; "I was talking about my umbrella."—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

The Dead Speaketh

The public is our reference. We refer you to those whom we have served. They will convince you of our efficiency and of our fairness. They will tell you that at all times we are thoroughly dependable. H. S. Cunningham. Funeral Director and Embalmer.

(Newport News, Va., Daily Press.)

If longer skirts the girls will wear
(As they are sure to do)
The men, we know, are bound to wear
Their faces longer, too.
(Cincinnati Enquirer.)

If shorter skirts are now taboo,
(We do not say you're wrong)
Men's faces may be longer, too
But they won't look so long.

Restricted Freedom

Sweet Young Thing (at cabaret).—I wonder why the men will dance so awkwardly in here?

Mrs. Blackstone (grimly).—That isn't awkwardness, my dear. They're over careful not to bump against each other's hip pockets!—New York Sun.

All Set

"Miss Brown, Mr. Gotrocks is at the door."

"Is his picture on the mantel?"

"Yes, miss."

"Are the roses he sent me on the center table?"

"Yes, miss."

"Is that book he gave me on the couch?"

"Yes, miss."

"Is his box of candy on the piano?"

"Yes, miss."

"Well, put the dog he bought me in the living-room and ask him in. I'll be down as soon as I put on the wrist watch he sent me."—New York Evening World.

Such Girls Are Scarce

Freeman Goodwin was married to a Normal young lady on Tuesday. Particulars next week.

(Tonica News.)

Green at the Business

A young lady went into a music shop and tripped up to the counter, where a new clerk was busy, and in her sweetest tones asked: "Have you Kissed Me in the Moonlight'?"

"No! It must have been the man at the other counter. I've only been here a week."

Nearly All In

"And now I'll take your temperature," said the doctor.

"All right, Doc," replied the patient sadly, "that's about all I have left for you to take."

Clearly Told

Tourist.—So this is the famous "Lover's Leap." Can you tell me its true story?

Native.—Oi bain't sure, sur, but Oi believe an old gal proposed to a feller on this spot an' 'e gave one yell an' jumped off.—Daily Mail.

Cubby Bear Hunting Herbs

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

DR. Squilly Porcupine was laid up at home with a hurt paw.

He had been repairing his house, with the help of Busy Beaver, the forest carpenter, and a heavy timber had fallen on his left hind paw, breaking two toes

Dr. Squilly's friends gathered around him, brought him good things to eat, told him all the news of the forest, and helped Busy Beaver to finish the repairing on the house.

One morinng, Cubby Bear found Squilly greatly excited.

"A sick Flicker has come to me to be taken care of," said Squilly Porcupine, "and I have not the right kind of medicine to give him. If I had not hurt my paw, I could go out and find the things I need to make more—but I cannot do it now."

Cubby glanced around the room, but saw no one.

"Where is the Flicker?" he asked. "Did he fly away again?"

"Oh, no! he was hardly able to get here. He is in my hospital. Go and see him."

A large, decaying maple tree, half of its great branches dead and leafless, stood close by Squilly's house, and in a hollow place in the tree trunk, near the ground, he had his "hospital."

Looking in through the open doorway, Cubby Bear could see the Flicker lying on the bed. He seemed to be a very sick bird indeed; his eyes were closed, his brilliant plumage rumpled untidily.

"I'm sorry I didn't have the right kind of medicine for him," said Squilly Porcupine, who had hobbled to his own doorway, close by. "I gave him all the kinds I had, one after another, but they seemed to make him worse instead of better! And I cannot hunt the forest over for the roots and barks I need."

"Could I do it for you?" asked Cubby.

"Oh, would you?" exclaimed Squilly joyously.

By this time, others of the little forest people were coming to call on Squilly, and heard what was being said.

"We will all help," offered Minnie Mink, and the others agreed, feeling sorry for the poor, sick Flicker, whose moans were pitiful to hear.

"I will be nurse," said Redtop Woodpecker, "for the Flickers are distant cousins of mine."

"Now listen closely while I tell you what I want," said Dr. Squilly Porcupine. He liked to give orders, and his prickly quills stuck out with importance. "Chirpy Chipmunk, do you know the leaves of the goldthread when you see them?"

"I—think so," answered Chirpy. "The roots of the plant are like bright threads of gold."

"Yes, that is right. You may dig me as many of those yellow roots as you can carry.

"Next, I must have some blackberry root. Minnie Mink, you are a good digger——"

"Wollie Woodchuck can dig much better than I," interrupted Minnie, who did not fancy going among blackberry prickles.

"I have another errand for him," answered Squilly; "and you were the one who offered the help of everybody!"

Minnie said no more, but meekly departed.

Mollie Muskrat, you do not mind wetting your feet, I know! You may bring some blueflag from the wet, marshy place near the river, where Blue Bittern lives.

"Racky Coon may pick a basket full of Crimson clover tops, and if he should spy out any four-leaved clovers, put them in for good luck.

"Pigweed, mullein flowers, dandelion and yarrow anybody can find. Whoever likes may go for those. Bunny Rabbit shall find me some tetterwort."

"But I don't know what that is,' objected Bunny.

"Anyone-can show you," said Squilly impatiently, and Bunny started off, not daring to say more.

"Cubby Bear, do you know the skunk-cabbage and Solomon's seal?"

"I—have eaten cabbage," said Cubby slowly, "but it did not look at all like Sammie Skunk; and I have heard that a seal is an animal!"

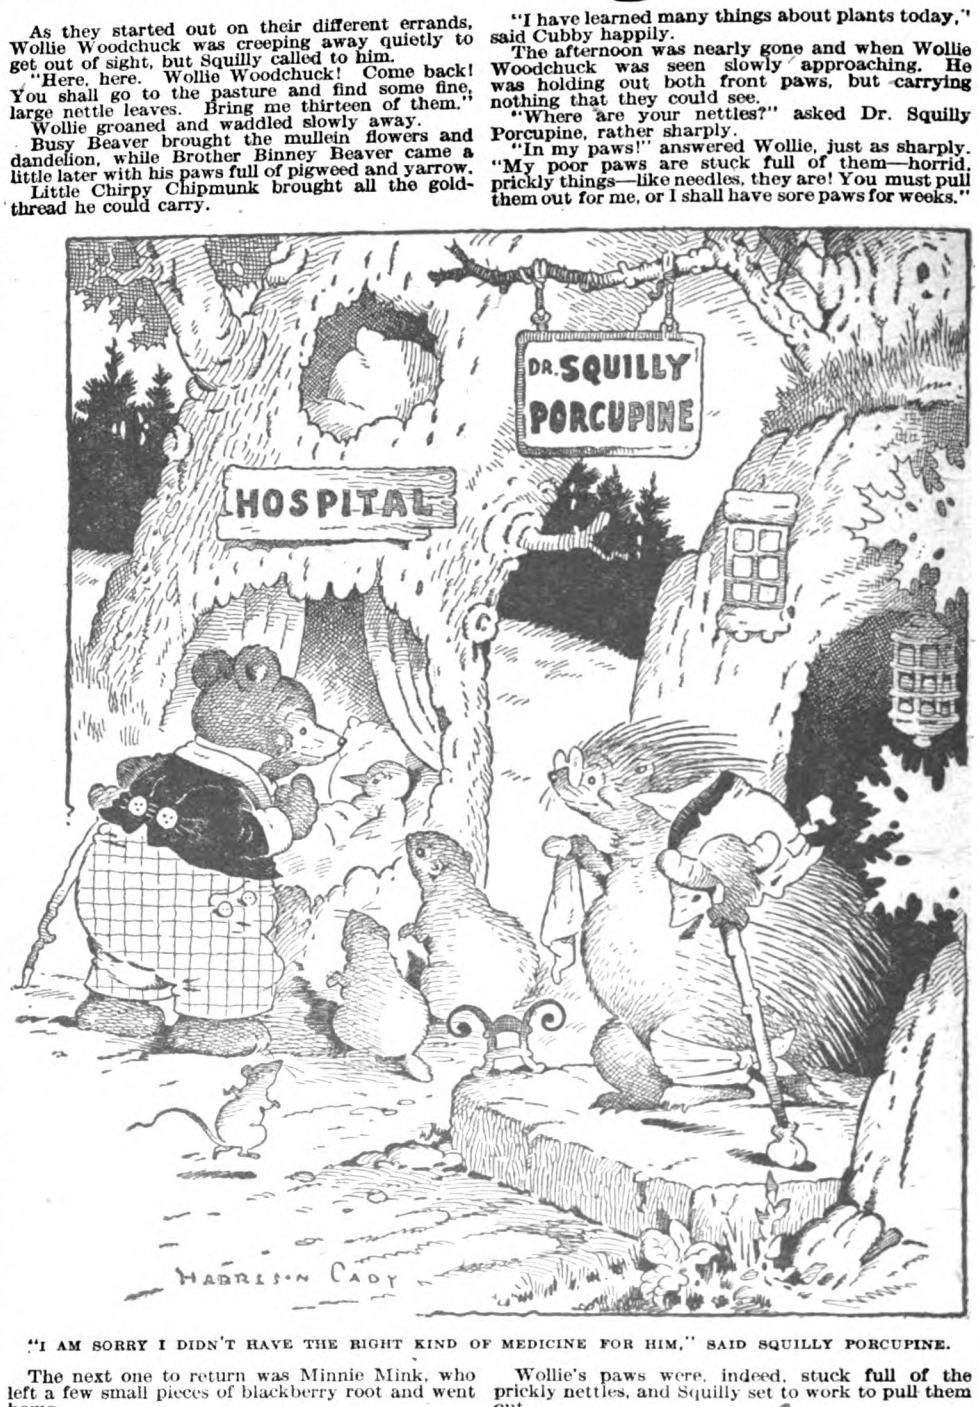
"Pooh, pooh!" broke in Wise Owl, glad of a chance to show his wisdom. "The skunk-cabbage is a plant whose proper name is sym-plo-car-pus. And there is an animal called the seal, Cubby Bear, but Solomon's seal is a little white flower. I know them both, and Cubby and I will look for them together."

As they started out on their different errands, Wollie Woodchuck was creeping away quietly to get out of sight, but Squilly called to him.

"Here, here. Wollie Woodchuck! Come back! You shall go to the pasture and find some fine, large nettle leaves. Bring me thirteen of them."

Wollie groaned and waddled slowly away.

Busy Beaver brought the mullein flowers and dandelion, while Brother Binney Beaver came a little later with his paws full of pigweed and yarrow.



Little Chirpy Chipmunk brought all the goldthread he could carry.

"I have learned many things about plants today," said Cubby happily.

The afternoon was nearly gone and when Wollie Woodchuck was seen slowly approaching. He was holding out both front paws, but carrying nothing that they could see.

"Where are your nettles?" asked Dr. Squilly Porcupine, rather sharply.

"In my paws!" answered Wollie, just as sharply. "My poor paws are stuck full of them—horrid, prickly things—like needles, they are! You must pull them out for me, or I shall have sore paws for weeks."

"I AM SORRY I DIDN'T HAVE THE RIGHT KIND OF MEDICINE FOR HIM," SAID SQUILLY PORCUPINE.

The next one to return was Minnie Mink, who left a few small pieces of blackberry root and went home.

"Oh, look at Racky Coon!" cried Chirpy Chipmunk. "How pretty he looks."

Racky smilingly trotted up to Squilly's door. Pretty he looked, indeed, for he had made his crimson clover blossoms into a crown for his head, and long chains to hang around his neck.

Some time later, Cubby Bear and Wise Owl came back triumphantly with their skunk-cabbage and Solomon's seal.

Wollie's paws were, indeed, stuck full of the prickly nettles, and Squilly set to work to pull them out.

"Who else will go for the nettle leaves? I need thirteen of them," he said.

No one offered

"Oh, well, I can get along without them, if I must," sighed Squilly. "But they help to warm the patient up, and make him feel alive!"

"My paws feel altogether too much alive!" grumbled Wollie.

"Has no one seen Bunny Rabbit, with the tetterwort I

"He was answered W nothing tha known how
"Dear me must all go
"I know
"You wa Bear," orde to Mamma me, to mak
The tette searching f
Wise Owl d
To Mamm
rejoicing.
Mamma mixture sh the medicin while they
"Here Cu
in his paws is a little b buds of th
Squilly him will put it
Cubby B off proudly
Robbie Re sang:

"Hou
To
We h
In

"Don't b
Muskrat.
So Cubb
But, holdin
he could no
Poor Cub a big pine t out of the g
He caugh to save him
cious burde
Mamma dozen piece
And the hard to ge into the thi
"Oh, my
"It does my!" excla has gone fo
You must g
cupine. N
Poor Cub and slowly, others staye
All but o
by his side.
Bear—I'll s
When the gave Squill
"For you
"Mamma
Then, sa dent.
"The poo
he ended.
"But Cub
Chirpy.
Squilly w salve into h
"Just wh
Mamma Br broke her n for spilling the Flicker more than home. An here, but be icine would I left out th
"You for
"Not I," would I tell
no! Why, when they and be look animal amo

CONTENTS

	Page
Editorial	2
Brownie's Triumph (continued)	3
A Forgotten Love (continued)	4
A Man's Prayer	4
Comfort Sisters' Corner and Recipes	5
It Happened on the Fourth	6
Summer Cooking Simplified	7
Comfort's League of Cousins	9
A World of Boys	10
Our Mutual Friend, the Subway	11
Hot-Weather Rules	11
The Pretty Girls' Club	12
Mother and Baby	13
Comfort's Knitting and Crocheting Cozy Club for Nimble Fingered Folks	14 and 15
The Richest Black Belt in the World	16
A Whistle and a Challenge	17
Poultry Farming for Women	18
The Modern Farmer	19
Poems Requested	20
Radio Flashes	20
Automobile and Gas Engine Helps	21
Home Lawyer	22
Family Doctor	22
Information Bureau	23
Talks with Girls	23
Veterinary Information	25
Manners and Looks	25
Missing Relatives and Friends	25
The Emporium of Bargains and Opportunities	27
Five Wheel Chairs in June	27
Cubby Bear Hunting Herbs	28
Crumbs of Comfort	28

All Subscriptions Cut Off
At Expiration

All subscriptions will be cut short off on date of expiration, unless the subscriptions are renewed and paid for. Not even one copy will be sent, after expiration, until the subscription is renewed. If the number over your name on the wrapper on this magazine is 417, it means that this is the last copy of COMFORT you will receive until you renew your subscription. DO IT TODAY.

AUGUST COMFORT

Mid-Summer Short-Story Number

with its eight choice stories, all complete, will treat our readers to a feast of fine fiction that is elevating and instructive as well as intensely interesting.

August Stories

"'Neath Mid-Summer Moonlight" Hearts lost and won in a daring escapade.

"Molly's Ghost" Whether you believe in spirit manifestations or not, Molly's ghost was quite substantial.

"At Crumpet's Corner" Attempted theft of a miser's hoard, a queer old lady, a smart girl, a gallant lover.

"You Never Can Tell" A detective story in which "the girl" vamps the criminal and catches him.

"When Silas Went Camping" Ludicrous mishaps bring a camping party to grief.

"The Promise" A flirt's revenge gives a man a taste of hell that makes his heaven of true love the happier.

"Haley's Iron Heart" The "bad man" of the hills "squares himself with God." An inspiring story.

"Cubby Bear and the Traps" Foxy Reynard gets caught in a trap; Cubby Bear pulls him out.

If the number over your name on the wrapper on this magazine is 417 it means that your subscription expires with this present issue and that you will not receive August COMFORT unless you renew your subscription at once—we can not send you a single copy, after expiration, until you have renewed. Don't miss August COMFORT.

Save money by renewing and extending your subscription two or three years. Use coupon below and do it today.

Please send bills or silver carefully wrapped in paper and securely sealed, or post-office money order. If obliged to send postage-stamps, send two-cent stamps.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: 50 cents a year, $1.00 for three years, 75 cents for a TWO-YEAR renewal, in U. S. or Cuba. (In Canada 65 cents a year.)

SUBSCRIPTION COUPON FOR RENEWAL OR EXTENSION

Publisher of COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

I enclose ..... cents for renewal and extension of my subscription ..... full years from date of expiration.

Date ..... Name .....

Post Office ..... Street and No. .....

R. F. D. No. ..... Box No. ..... State .....

July, 1923

VOL. XXXV
NO. 10

Mid-Summer Short-Story Number

COMFORT

The Key to Happiness and Success in over a Million and a Quarter Homes

Published at Augusta Maine

AUGUST
1923

See story "'Neath Mid-Summer Moonlight" on page 12

Copyright 1923 (Trade-Mark Registered), by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Incorporated.

Table of Contents on Page 8.

With the Collapse of De Valera's Insurrection a Brighter Era Is Dawning for Ireland

THE recently announced triumph of the constitutional government of the Irish Free State in crushing the murderous insurrection which instigated and directed by Eamonn De Valera, for the past year and a half has been the scourge of that distressed country, is welcomed with joyful acclaim by all true friends of Ireland, for in it they see the removal of the last obstacle to permanent peace throughout the island and the beginning of an era of hopeful promise for the progress and prosperity of its people.

It is amazing that De Valera should have been able to enlist any considerable following among the Irish in Ireland and the people of Irish ancestry in America in support of his armed rebellion against, and attempted forcible overthrow of the government instituted by the Irish people through their chosen representatives elected for that purpose by a large popular majority. This man, who poses as the most uncompromising of Irish patriots, was born in New York City in 1889. He bears the surname of his Spanish father, and his only claim to Irish lineage is through his mother. After his father's death, which occurred when the boy was very young, his mother took him to Ireland where he was reared by her relations from whom he absorbed intense anti-British prejudices. He rounded out his education with the regular college course at the Royal University of Ireland. He took an active part in the Sinn Fein movement for the freedom of Ireland and when that organization in January, 1919, proclaimed the so-called "Republic of Ireland," he assumed the title of President, and from that time even to the present day has claimed the authority and attempted to exercise the functions of that pretended office.

It should be clearly understood, however, that the sentiment of the Irish people was far from unanimous on the aims and purposes of the Sinn Feiners. In the northern counties constituting Ulster District a large majority of the people was bitterly opposed not only to secession from the British Empire but also to the compromise proposal to institute an Irish Parliament for the government of all Ireland. This was because of the age-old feud between the North and South of Ireland, due to religious and racial differences and conflicting commercial and industrial interests. Ulster being much the smaller and weaker feared oppression by the South. Even in the South, where the Sinn Feiners were largely in the majority there was a considerable element opposed to secession.

Invoking in their own behalf the principle of "self-determination of small nations" (promulgated by President Wilson as one of his "fourteen points" for the settlement of the World War problems but abandoned by him at the Paris Peace Conference) the Sinn Feiners demanded independence for the "Republic of Ireland" which they had proclaimed, but, inconsistently denying Ulster this right, insisted on forcing the northern counties to join the "Republic" against their will. After two years of bloody and destructive civil war aimed at forcing the British government to recognize the independence of the "Republic of Ireland", and at compelling Ulster to join the "Republic", a truce was arranged between Sinn Fein and the British government for the purpose of holding a conference in the hope of reaching an agreement to end the war on mutually acceptable terms.

But by act of the British Parliament, prior to the truce loyal Ulster, at her own request, had been set off from the rest of Ireland and constituted a separate member of the United Kingdom with full powers of local self-government exercised through a district parliament of her own choosing. With her bitterness against the "South" intensified by the raids of the "Republican" army and spies from which she had suffered severely, Ulster took no part in the peace negotiations except to insist that in any event no change should be made in her status, declaring that she would never submit to having her destiny linked with and controlled by the rest of Ireland.

Birth of the Irish Free State

THE happy outcome of the conference was a treaty of peace based on honorable terms of mutual concessions. Although the British absolutely refused to recognize the independence of the "Republic of Ireland" or to consider any proposal that involved secession, they conceded to all Ireland, except Ulster (which was excluded at its own request), the largest measure of national freedom and self-government consistent with loyal membership in that great commonwealth of nations associated for mutual benefit and common welfare, known as the British Empire. In accepting this compromise offer the Sinn Fein representatives secured for their countrymen in substance, though not in precisely the same form, the liberty for which they had fought, yielding on their part only the non-essential points of secession and the inclusion of Ulster.

The treaty agreed upon by the conference was to become effective if and when ratified by the British Parliament and by an Irish Parliament to be elected by the Irish people for the purpose of deciding the question of its final acceptance on their behalf. In terms it provided that all, except Ulster, should constitute the Irish Free State, having a status in its relation to the Empire similar to that of Canada, with an administrative government and legislative parliament of its own vested with full power to make its own laws and regulate its internal affairs including all forms of taxation and the expenditure of its revenues, and even to maintain an army for its protection. The powers of government conferred on the Irish Free State exceed those possessed by a State under the U. S. Constitution. As a member of the British Empire its relations with foreign countries are necessarily handled by the diplomatic and consular representatives of the Imperial Government.

The treaty was ratified by the British Parliament and by the Irish Parliament backed by the approval of a substantial majority of the Irish people expressed at the polls. Thus the Irish Free State came into existence some year and a half ago as the legitimate, constitutional government of all Ireland except Ulster. Although ably and conscientiously conducted by men of high character and devoted patriotism, all of whom have risked and some of whom have sacrificed their lives in its service, it has struggled through a difficult, stormy and perilous career because of De Valera's rebellion waged with a barbarous and sneaking ferocity that would shame Villa or any other of the notorious Mexican insurrecto chiefs.

"President" De Valera Turns Insurrecto

MOST of the Sinn Fein leaders, including the best and bravest of those who had served in the "Republican" army fighting the British, loyally supported the Irish Free State government. But De Valera, who had strenuously opposed the acceptance of the treaty, was loth to lose his fat job of "President" of the defunct "Republic of Ireland," as America could still be tapped for millions of dollars to carry on the cause of independent Ireland. So he kept up the mockery of pretending to exercise the authority of "President," and as soon as the Free State government had been installed and the British troops withdrawn from the island he started an insurrection for the avowed purpose of overthrowing the Free State government and reinstating himself in power. With a small but pestiferous following of malcontents and fanatics, and plentifully supplied with American cash, he succeeded until very recently in making Ireland very unsafe and uncomfortable by the guerrilla warfare of assassination, bombing and burning which he directed from some place of comparative safety so not to risk his own precious skin.

Bear in mind that ernment measures up to as expressed in his fa for it is the government
Irish people, for the Iri ernment established and will of the majority of less many of the Irish p pendence; some, and p
Valera, many even of Irish Free State as a co ferred complete indepen reasonable prospect of Whatever their national process of reasoning led they did, for substantial
State compromise rathe
the British in the forlorn ance from the Empire, t for themselves, and it w
the minority to submit t
as that decision was for

After peace had bee had withdrawn, leaving selves, it was sheer wic plunge war-weary Irela this case fratricidal, civi minority of his countryn own State government.
cusable because the ad
State government was in ers of unquestionable pa the British in the late w cluding such notable Griffith and Michael Colli
at their posts of duty by

De Valera and his method of fighting war, of murderers and spies never fought in the open from ambush, and sprea through the land by bu
vate as well as public pr ands in the hills or snea cities in disguise to pe
Theirs was guerrilla warf kind to meet and overco hunt down these raiders of the infant Free State sistent pursuit has gradu bers and restricted their with the holding-up of finally induced them to sistance, as futile.

This decision on the came to light through the cation, late in June, of De day" addressed to the o so-called "Republican ar resistance against the au
State to be useless and h ing them to lay down the ing. This information is the failure of De Valera terms with the Free S was taken to indicate th his rope. The Free Sta refusing to consider any on the ground that the agreement of any sort w tion from crime. Unco all that was left open to government, and that it sense of honor, for it woul ting himself in the power
he will find means to sneal

The general opinion, is that the collapse of De the stability of the Irish F the end of political distu and it is confidently prec
Ireland will make a rapid

COMF

COMFORT, PUBLISHED MONTHLY BY W. H. GANNETT, PUB., INC., AT AUGUSTA, MAINE.

Subscription price in United States and United States Possessions 50c a year; Canadian subscriptions 65c a year, foreign countries $1.00 a year. No premiums or prizes will be given o tions. Please send your renewal just as soon as your subscription expires. We can not send you even one copy of COMFORT, after expiration, until your subs you do not get your magazine by the 25th of the month write us and we will send you another copy free. Please notify us immediately in case you move, so that we can change your a miss a single copy. Remember that we must have your former address, as well as your new address to make the change. Be sure to send both. We do not supply back numbe

Entered at the post office at Augusta, Maine as second-class mail matter. Copyright, 1923 (Trade-Mark Registered), by W. H. G

FREE 10-Piece White Enameled Kitchen Set

nderful 32-Piece Aluminum Set splendid pure Aluminum Cooking Outfit consists of arate pieces, as follows: 2 Big Bread Pans; 1 Dough-Cutter—detachable inside cutter; 2 Loose Bottom Cake Pans—top diam. 8¾ in., 4 pieces; 1 Combina-eakettle and Rice Boiler with lid—3 pieces; 1 Sauce et—2 qts., 1½ qts., 1 qt.—3 pieces; 1 Sauce Pan Lid; per; 1 Colander; 1 Measuring Cup—pint size; 1 Per-or—2 pieces; 2 Pie Pans—top diameter 9¾ inches; tor Set, consisting of Stand, Salt and Pepper Shak-nd Toothpick Holder—4 pieces; 1 Tea or Coffee er; 1 Fry Pan, heavily tinned steel handle, very metal of uniform thickness.

o a wonderful cooker set of 5 pieces from which an make 11 separate utensil combinations as fol-Preserving Kettle; Convex Kettle for vegetables, asts, etc.; Combination Cooker; Casserole for baking , macaroni, etc; Pudding Pan, also used as a milk Tubed Cake Pan, removable tube; Colander, also as strainer; Self-Basting Roaster; Corn Popper; ner Set for steaming potatoes, etc.; Double Boiler oking cereals or steaming vegetables.

No Money Down!

t a penny now. Just mail the coupon and Hartman will nd you this splendid complete 32-piece Aluminum Cooking t, and also the Free 10-piece Combination Kitchen Set. When e goods arrive, make the first payment of only $2.00 on the uminum Set. Pay nothing for the Kitchen Set—it is FREE. e both sets 30 Days, on Free Trial, and if not more than satisfied, send them back and we will refund your money and pay transportation both ways. If you keep them, pay for the Aluminum Set, a little every month. Keep the Kitchen Set as a gift from Hartman.

Complete 32-Pc. Aluminum Set and FREE Kitchen Set

FREE

10-Piece Kitchen Set

Not a penny to pay for this set. You get it absolutely free with the Aluminum Set.

- Potato Masher
- Mixing Spoon
- Measuring Spoon
- Ice Pick
- Egg and Cream Beater
- Can Opener
- Vegetable and Pan Brush
- Fork
- Egg and Cake Turner
- Wall Rack

All have white enamel handles and hang on wall rack—keeping them conveniently at hand.

This is Hartman's famous, special, selected set of heavy gauge Aluminum Ware—a complete cooking outfit, light to handle, easy to clean, always bright as silver. Will never chip, crack or rust. So durable that we guarantee it for life. 32 utensils—everything you need for baking, boiling, roasting, frying. Just read the list above. You want and need everything there. Your kitchen is not complete without them. You really can't appreciate this splendid set until you see and use it. Then you will realize what a wonderful bargain it is. And without a penny's cost—absolutely free—you get a Combination Kitchen Set which gives you 10 utensils with pretty white handles—all hung in a row—where you can reach them conveniently.

Nearly a Year to Pay

Hartman gives the world's most liberal terms and the world's greatest values in dependable merchandise, and this offer proves it. You pay only $2 and postage on arrival (this on the Aluminum Set—not a penny to pay at any time on the Kitchen Set). Then, if after 30 days' trial you decide to keep it, pay a little every month. Take nearly a year to pay.

Order by No. 417EEMA7. Price for Aluminum Set, $18.95. No money down. $2 and postage on arrival. Balance $2 monthly. 10-Piece Kitchen Set is FREE.

Mail the Coupon Don't hesitate. Send at once, while this offer holds good. Not a penny's risk. Order NOW, while you can get the Kitchen Set Free.

HARTMAN Furniture & Carpet Co.
Dept. 5546 Chicago, Illinois

Copyright, 1923, by Hartman's, Chicago

FREE BARGAIN CATALOG FREE GIFTS

316 pages of the most astounding bargains in furniture, rugs, carpets, sewing machines, silverware, jewelry—everything for the home; also farm machinery, etc.—all sold on our easy monthly payment terms and 30 days' free trial. Also explains Hartman's gift plan by which you receive many splendid articles, such as glassware, dishes, silverware, tablecloths, napkins, etc., absolutely FREE with your purchases. Send a postal for this big free bargain catalog today.
"Let Hartman Feather YOUR Nest"

Hartman Furniture & Carpet Co.
Dept. 5546 Chicago, Illinois

Send the 32-Piece Complete Aluminum Cooking Set
No. 417EEMA7, Price $18.95, and 10-Piece Kitchen Set. Will pay $2 and postage on the Aluminum Set on arrival. Kitchen Set is free. I am to have 30 days' free trial. If not satisfied, I will ship both sets back. If I keep them, I will pay you $2 monthly until the price of the Aluminum Set, $18.95, is paid. Title remains with you until final payment is made.

Name..... Occupation.....

R. F. D., Box No. or Street and No.....

Post Office..... State.....
(If your shipping point is different from your post office, fill in line below)

Send shipment to.....

Brownie's Triumph

by Mrs. Georgie Sheldon

He raised the blushing face so that he could look into the lovely eyes.

She was ever tenderly mindful of her comfort.

"Then go! Marry your plebeian beggar and never darken Dunforth's doors again!"

Copyright, 1879-1880, by Street & Smith.
Renewal granted to Mrs. Georgie Sheldon Downs, 1907.
Serial rights by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Brownie Douglas, waiting at Memorial Hall, Centennial Exposition, Philadelphia, attracts the attention of two gentlemen, Adrian Dredmond, an Englishman, and Mr. Gordon who recognizes Brownie, she being an intimate friend of his sisters. Her father, dying before she is born, and her mother at her birth, she is adopted by her great aunt who gives her her name Mehetabel and brings her up to remember she is a direct descendant from the Scottish nobility. Her nurse calls her Brownie from the first. Adrian Dredmond picks up a costly cuff button with a large D, studded with brilliants and the word "Brownie" upon the back. That night Miss Mehetabel Douglas tells Brownie the story of her betrothal to Lord Dunforth, the ball given by Helen Capel's aunt, Lady Ruxley, her introduction to Count de Lusan, a man of questionable reputation, her refusal to cancel a dance at Lord Dunforth's command, Helen Capel's treachery in suppressing a note, her serious illness, her coming to America, where her father and mother soon died. She gives Brownie her jewels, including her engagement ring, coral cross and all other gifts from Lord Dunforth. That night she dies and upon the reading of the will Mr. Conrad, who has the care of her aunt's property admits using and losing money entrusted to him, leaving Brownie, after all debts and legacies to the servants are paid, two hundred dollars. Refusing help, she secures employment wiring hats. She is helped by Mattie Burnham, who wins her love, and in the public library Brownie, reading to her in French, attracts the attention of an elderly gentleman who asks if she is a teacher and speaks any other language, and would she teach. She would and mentions Ware and Coolidge where she is employed. His card bears the name of Wm. H. Alcott, M. D., who recommends her to his son-in-law, Mr. Coolidge, as being competent to superintend the education of his two younger daughters and to be a companion and interpreter on a proposed trip to Europe. Going to the Coolidge home, Mrs. Coolidge and the eldest daughter Isabel admit her personal charms but are jealous of her beauty and many accomplishments and hope her meeting Wilbur will be avoided. The wish fails. Boarding the steamer, Brownie is saved from an accident by Adrian Dredmond. Wilbur relieves him of further care and takes her to his mother and sister who realize Wilbur's infatuation for Brownie. Adrian Dredmond overhears their determination to prevent Wilbur's further attention. Going to London they take a house near where Miss Mehetabel lived. Wilbur buys tickets for the opera and insists that Miss Douglas shall go, too. Selecting her jewels, among which is a coral cross, Mrs. Coolidge is surprised to find her so radiant and decides it shall not occur again. Adrian Dredmond entering the Coolidge box, is introduced to Brownie and leaving escorts her to the carriage, where she receives insults from Mrs. Coolidge. Isabel, envious of Brownie's elegant dress and jewels, queries to her mother Brownie's honesty. Seeing her go for a walk, Isabel enters Brownie's room and securing her jewels takes them to her mother, who requests that Brownie, upon her return, be sent to her. She asks Brownie if she has anything in her possession not legally hers and accuses her of stealing jewels and clothing. Brownie questions her right to ask her, to enter her room and from under lock and key take her jewels and demands the return of the casket. Mrs. Coolidge, refusing, Brownie threatens legal measures for their return. Wilbur intercedes and promises upon his father's return justice shall be done. Knowing she is to leave he offers her the love and care that will protect. She refuses. Wilbur orders a cab and directs that Brownie be driven to "The Washington." Adrian Dredmond calls, requesting to see Miss Douglas. Isabel gives a wrong impression and their pain in learning she is dishonest. Asking for her address, she does not know and he leaves distressed and indignant. Wilbur sends it and Adrian going to "The Washington" fails to find her. Mr. Coolidge hires a detective without success. Going to Lady Peasewell's party, Isabel wears Brownie's jewels. She meets Sir Charles Randal, who conducts her to the conservatory. Passing Lord Dunforth, he detects the ring and demands where she got it, also the other jewels. Claiming they are heirlooms, did Mehetabel Douglas give them to her. They were my last gift to her. Sir Charles appears and Lord Dunforth begs her to forget what has occurred. Two years after Sir Charles's birth there was a prospect of an addition to the family. Lady Randal was traveling and returning a year later remarked it was hard to lose one's children. Mr. Coolidge returning to New York, Lady Randal, who was Helen Capel and a cousin of Lord Dunforth, invites the Coolidges to Vallingham Hall, Isabel being engaged to Sir Charles. Isabel walking with him sees Lady Ruxley leaning upon the arm of a young woman. The next day a dinner is given by the Earl of Dunforth and Isabel is presented to his grandson, Adrian Dredmond, who meets her with scorn and recognizes the jewels she wears. Introduced to Lady Ruxley, she predicts dire things through Isabel Coolidge. Adrian saves Brownie from death and determines to make her his wife.

CHAPTER XXVI.

"AND YOU WILL BE MY WIFE!"

THE events contained in the last two chapters Brownie related in substance to Adrian, as they sat together upon the rock where he had first discovered who she was the night previous.

I suppose you know Miss Isabel is engaged to Sir Charles Randal," Adrian said, when she had concluded.

"Sir Charles Randal! No!" replied Brownie, growing pale at the intelligence.

"What! you have been an inmate of their family so long, and not know of this importtant circumstance."

"I saw but very little of the family while I was at their house in London. I was with Lady Ruxley constantly, and scarcely went out until we came down to West Malling, which we did a month before the family at the Hall; and we have not seen much of them since, but live very quietly and pleasantly at the villa."

"It is too bad, for Charles really deserves a better fate," said Adrian, with a clouded brow.

"By the way," and Brownie glanced up mischievously, "do you know that that honor was intended for you?"

"I surmised as much from certain circumstances which came to my knowledge," he replied, with a scornful curl of his fine lips. "But," he added, a moment after, as he gathered her close in his arms, "she will find that there was one who could look beneath the surface. My darling—my darling—my pure little pearl! what is she compared with you?"

"Lady Ruxley will be very much disappointed, Adrian."

"I presume so. I should be somewhat surprised if she were not. But is Lady Ruxley of more consequence than some one else whom you know?" the young man asked, as, placing one finger beneath her chin, he raised the blushing face so that he could look into the lovely eyes.

"No; oh, no—but——" with a little smile.

"But what, dear?" questioned her lover, tenderly, as he saw the sensitive lips quivering.

"But, Adrian, I may as well say it first as last—I shrink from the ordeal which I know must come."

"What ordeal?" he asked, very gravely.

"I have heard that you are allied to a noble house—that you are some time to inherit great possessions and a title, though just what that title is I know not; and I fear that your proud kinsmen will scorn the idea of a poor, friendless waif like me becoming your wife."

"Who informed you that I was heir to such 'great expectations,'" he asked, with a quiet smile.

"It was spoken of often by Mrs. Coolidge and her daughter."

"And do you deem yourself unworthy to be my wife on account of your poverty?"

"No!" and the bright head was lifted proudly now, the lovely eyes glowed with a fire which told that, despite her lack of wealth and position, she considered herself the equal of the proudest in the land.

"What then? Suppose you and I were suddenly to change places, would you deem me to be unworthy to be your husband because I had lost my wealth?"

"No! I should be proud——"

He stopped her lips with tender kisses.

"And I, my darling, should be proud to call you my wife were you the lowliest-born in all England. But you are not; you are my equal in birth and station, and it is only an accident which has placed you where any one is liable to be. A man often misses his expectations, and I am only plain Adrian Dredmond as yet; surely you are not afraid of me, if you are of those whom you choose to term my high-born kinsmen."

Brownie nestled closer to him as she replied, with dignity:

"I am afraid of no one, yet one naturally shrinks from bringing contempt upon one whom one loves, and you know the ways of the world, Adrian."

"You never can bring comtempt upon me. The world may say what it pleases—and I warn you it will not dare say very much—you and I are the parties most interested in this matter, and since I am of age, and capable of choosing my own wife, I think we will call no one else into the consultation," he said decisively.

Brownie laughed at his way of settling the matter.

"You have not answered me yet, darling," he added, a moment after; "you have given yourself to me?"

"Yes, Adrian, I am proud to give myself to you?"

"And you will be my wife?" drawing her closer.

"Yes".

"Whenever I say?"

She lifted her eyes again to read his, but their light dazzled her, and with her own lashes drooping shyly upon her crimson cheeks, she murmured:

"Whenever you will, dear."

"Then, my Brownie with your permission, I will see Lady Ruxley immediately, after which I shall wish to introduce you to those high-born kinsmen of mine."

"Not today, Adrian, please. I cannot bear you to speak to Lady Ruxley today. I have hardly got used to my own happiness yet. Let it rest until we go back to the villa, and then I will not say you nay," pleaded the young girl, earnestly.

Her joy was something so new and sacred that she felt unwilling to impart the knowledge of it yet to any one.

"Very well, darling, let it be as you wish. That will not be very long to wait, and meantime I shall call the high and mighty ones into counsel," he replied, with a sly laugh, which brought the ever-ready color into her cheeks again.

CHAPTER XXVII.

"SHE IS NOT BENEATH ME."

Contrary to her own and Brownie's expectations, and somewhat to the disappointment of the latter, Lady Ruxley decided to return to West Malling the next afternoon. She had taken cold the night previous, and was not so well as usual, and thought she would feel better to be at home.

"I shall come soon, my darling," Adrian had managed to whisper, as he handed Brownie into the carriage, and then stood wistfully watching it until it was out of sight.

Lady Ruxley reached home about five, where she found awaiting her a summons to Vallingham Hall.

Lady Randal was planning a musical soiree, to come off the following week, and requested her aunt to lend her Miss Dundas's services for the occasion. She also stated that it would take three or four days' practice to prepare for the occasion; meanwhile they were invited to make the Hall their home, she promising that her ladyship should have every comfort and attention, and be assigned rooms in as quiet a portion of the house as possible.

"It will do the child good; she has perked up wonderfully in the last two days by just going over to Dunforth Castle," mused the old lady, who continued to marvel at the wondrous change in her usually sad companion.

Wholly unmindful of the aches and pains which had hurried her home from Dunforth Castle, she rang the bell a furious peal for her maid.

"Pack up a week's supply of clothing, and have it ready by ten tomorrow. We go to Vallingham Hall for a seven days' visit."

With which command, she left the astonished Minnett and hobbled away to find Brownie and impart the news to her.

Brownie, as soon as she had removed her wrappings, repaired to the conservatory, and was greatly surprised when she heard Lady Ruxley's cane come clinking over the tiled floor, supposing her to be snug in bed, and enjoying the delights of a rousing rum-sweat—her favorite remedy for colds and rheumatics.

"I thought I should find you here," her ladyship said, as Brownie arose quickly and came forward to lead her to a chair. "You like birds and flowers, don't you?" she added, keenly regarding the lovely, smiling face and sparkling eyes.

"Yes, my lady, I am exceedingly fond of them. But are you not imprudent to come here, where it is so damp, with your cold?" she asked, as she seated her and placed a hassock at her feet. She was ever tenderly mindful of her comfort.

"No, no, child; I'm all right now I am home again. I never feel well when I'm visiting—that is," she hastened to add "in strange places. It did you good, though; you have more color, and look brighter.

"Yes, I am much better than when I first came to West Malling," Brownie admitted, with a conscious blush.

"Yes, the trip to the castle did you much good, undoubtedly," persisted her ladyship, nodding and chuckling knowingly.

"It was a change, you know."

"Yes, yes; that's it. Young folks need change. I was a fool not to think of it before. I might have known that a young, bright thing like you would droop and pine hived up with a crooning old owl like me for company."

"Pray, dear Lady Ruxley, do not talk so!" Brownie interrupted, eagerly, and much distressed at her words. "Indeed, I have been very happy with you—much more so than I was during the five months previous."

"I know—I know all about it. You're plucky, and you will not own it to me. But you've been lonely and sad. I've got eyes and I can see for myself. You went away from here pale, sad and quiet; you come back rosy, happy, almost gay, and the life, music, and company up yonder was what you needed, and you shall have some more of it. I like to see folks bright and chipper about me."

Brownie felt more and more guilty.

But her next words filled her with still deeper dismay. They've got a houseful of company, as usual, up at the Hall, and we go there too, tomorrow, to stop a few days."

"Indeed, Lady Ruxley, I hope you are not going on my account. I do not desire or need company, and I should really prefer to remain quietly here," she said, in distress.

"Oh! I've got eyes—good ones, too, if they are old; besides, Lady Randal desires it. She is getting up a soiree, and desires your services as musician. She sent a note today, asking me."

"But—but you are not well. Really, I think it would be best for neither of us to go."

"Oh, I'm all right, and I've given Minnett orders to have everything in readiness by tomorrow at ten. You will please be ready by that time too," returned her ladyship, somewhat impatiently, who thought the young girl hesitated about going only on her account.

That settled it, of course.

Brownie could not refuse point-blank to go, but her heart grew faint within her at the thought of meeting the Coolidges, and particularly under an assumed name.

Of course, she could not avoid meeting them, and doubtless they would reveal all the past to both Lady Randal and Lady Ruxley.

They would tell their story about the jewels, and of that scence with Wilbur, and the way she had left their employ.

Yet what need had she to fear Isabel Coolidge, or, indeed, anyone, now that she had Adrian to lean upon and protect her?

With this brighter thought in her mind, she sought her own room to prepare for her absence and the approaching gayeties, which, after all, she began to anticipate with something of pleasure and interest.

Meanwhile, a very different scene was being enacted in Dunforth Castle.

As soon as Lady Ruxley's carriage was driven from sight Adrian Dredmond turned to his grandfather, saying, gravely:

"Can I have a private interview with you, sir?"

"Yes, yes, my boy, of course, come into my sanctum at once."

He led the way to the luxuriously-appointed library, where a cheerful fire in the grate toned the chill air to just the right temperature, and gave the lofty, beautiful room an appearance of homelike comfort.

"Well, now, what is it, Ad?" the old man asked, familiarly, as he threw himself into his easy-chair, and bent a look of pride upon the young lover's handsome, animated face.

Adrian colored, but, coming to the point at once said:

"Sir, I desire your permission to marry."

"Bless my soul, my boy! What's this?" and he sat up and stared at his grandson for a moment, as if he had never thought of such a thing before in connection with him.

"Well, well," he added next; "you took me rather by surprise; that's a fact; but, after all, you couldn't please me better. Aha! that accounts for your hurry to get back to London, doesn't it?"

"Yes—no," replied Adrian, somewhat confused, and yet half-laughing at his grandfather's comical surprise and ready acquiescence to his request.

"Yes—no," repeated his lordship, with a merry twinkle in his eye; "that is rather a doubtful reply. But, seriously, Adrian, my boy, nothing would give me greater satisfaction than to see you settled in life; and I have no doubt but that the lady of your choice is in every way desirable."

"She is, sir, a perfect lady, highly educated and accomplished, and there never was, in my opinion, a more beautiful Countess of Dunforth than she will make," returned the ardent lover, who felt that everything was progressing finely.

"Yes, yes; that is always so with lovers. I remember——"

What he remembered he did not say, but his face grew wan and sad, as he suddenly checked himself.

Then he resumed, more gravely:

"The lady is of good birth, of course?"

"Yes, sir, excellent," Adrian returned, recalling what his friend Gordon had said about Miss Mehetabel's "family tree." Then he added: "Her misfortune of a very serious nature has deprived her during the last six or eight months of all her property, and death of her last friend."

"That is bad, truly, my boy; but, then, you will have enough, and to spare, and I would be the last one to put anything in the way of your happiness for the lack of filthy lucre. You love the lady, of course?" and he searched the noble face that he loved so well.

"As my own life!" Adrian said, earnestly.

"Ah! you have been a sly dog to get so far in this and we never suspect it. Who is the fair inamorata?"

"You would not deem it anything out of the way, I presume, sir, if a lady of good birth should be reduced to the necessity of becoming a governess or a companion?" Adrian asked, ignoring the question, and determined to lay all the facts before his grandfather before telling his darling's name.

"Zounds, Adrian! Has it been so bad as this in the case of your ladylove?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then the quicker you marry her, and relieve her dire necessity the better," his lordship said, little thinking how he was committing himself.

"Thank you. Yes, sir, it came to that, as I told you some six or eight months ago."

"But—what is this? Why, you were in America at that time," and he began to fidget uneasily.

"Yes, sir; I met the lady in America."

"Ah, ha!"

This time Lord Dunforth scowled disapprobation. He had the English prejudice against English nobility inter-marrying with American plebeism, so called.

Adrian noticed his look, and his heart sank.

"My lord," he said, "you have seen the lady, and acknowledged her loveliness. I heard you tell Sir Charles that she was very beautiful, and too much of a lady for the position which she occupies. I assure you, and I speak advisedly, that she is of good birth, and fitted in every way to be my wife. She is companion to Lady Ruxley. Have I still your permission to marry her?"

His lordship stared at his grandson in dismay.

"Miss Dundas, Adrian!" he exclaimed, aghast, his fine face flushing a deep crimson.

"Miss Douglas, my lord," corrected Adrian, somewhat proudly.

His lordship did not notice the correction. His head was bent in deep thought, his brow was knotted, his lips compressed. At length, looking up, he said, with emotion:

"My boy, your happiness is of the greatest importance to me, and has always been my first consideration. I know what it is to love deeply, and the anguish which follows the loss of a loved one—" his voice quivered painfully. "But," he added, "it is better to give up an unworthy love than to marry beneath you, and then repent of it when it is too late."

"Sir, the lady is not unworthy, and I shall never repent making her my wife," Adrian said, indignantly; then continued, speaking rapidly: "I told you that she descended from a highly respectable family. They were English, too, and removed to America many years ago. They were very wealthy at that time, but a series of misfortunes deprived them of this. I learned this from my friend, Gordon, whom, you remember, I met two years ago in Germany. He vouched for her respectability, and told me he had seen the 'family tree,' and that they traced back their ancestry to the Scottish nobility."

"But it must be very remote. Besides, she was born and reared in America, and has not a friend living, as you say, to prove her respectability, and all this would be very disagreeable to establish."

"The fact that I have chosen her for my wife would be sufficient to establish her respectability without any questioning," replied Adrian, proudly.

"But I want you to have an English wife, Adrian—one who will fill her position proudly and creditably."

"I am as eager for that, my lord, as you can possibly be," said the young man, with a quiet smile, as he thought how perfectly Brownie would reign in those grand old halls.

"How came she to be in England if she was so reduced in circumstances?"

"She came over as governess with a family, in the same steamer with myself."

"How does it happen that they did not retain her—that she left them to be companion to a woman like Lady Ruxley?" demanded his lordship, his face beginning to grow stern and set.

Adrian colored vividly. He knew it did not sound well, but he was truth itself, and replied:

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 7.)

This Department is conducted solely for the use of COMFORT sisters, whereby they may give expression to their ideas relative to the home and home surroundings, and to all matters pertaining to themselves and families; as well as opening a way for personal correspondence between each other.

Our object is to extend a helping hand to COMFORT subscribers; to become coworkers with all who seek friendship, encouragement, sympathy or assistance through the interchange of ideas.

Any abuse of this privilege, such as inviting correspondence for the purpose of offering an article for sale, or undertaking to charge a sum of money for ideas, recipes or information mentioned in any letter appearing in this department, if reported, will result in the offender being denied the use of these columns.

Do not ask us to publish letters requesting money contributions or donations of any sort. Much as we sympathize with the suffering and unfortunate, it is impossible to do this as we would be flooded with similar requests.

Please write only on one side of the paper, and recipes on a separate sheet.

Always give your correct and full name and address, very plainly written; otherwise your letter will receive no attention.

Address MRS. WHEELER WILKINSON, CARE COMFORT, AUGUSTA, MAINE.

AUGUST weather is not conducive to serious thought, so the subject as outlined in Mrs. Adams's letter will, be left, no doubt, until cooler days for consideration. It is a new subject for us—just what constitutes the duty of the parent to the child and the child to the parent, and should bring forth some good letters. I always look forward with pleasure to the opinions of the COMFORT readers on any subject under discussion, or not, but feel selfish because I read so many clever letters and share so few. However, it isn't my fault, and the readers have the satisfaction of knowing that their letters were enjoyed by my humble self, even if they weren't printed—Ed.

SCIO, OHIO.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I am a lover of dear old COMFORT and have been a reader for a long time. I want to talk on a subject I have never seen discussed in our corner. It is, "The Real Debt, How Much Do We Owe Our Children?" Should we "scrimp" to give them advantages they do not appreciate and cannot use? I feel this is a problem all parents will have to solve sooner or later. Sometimes I wonder now much our children really owe us, anyhow, and where we got the idea that they owe us anything.

There's the commandment, "Honor thy father and mother," but it seems inadequate to cover the question and is too often misused. I fear, as a sort of refuge to flee to in justifying ourselves when we have failed to make a success of life. An amazing number of us don't worry about the far future while our children are growing up. We sort of take it for granted that they will take care of us when they are grown, after all we've done for them. We somehow feel we have the right to expect them to do it because they "owe it to us." But do they? We brought these children into the world without consulting them as to whether they wanted to live or not. We've thrust life and its perplexities sorrows and burdens on them, willynilly. It seems to me, then, that just because we have made them face these very problems and difficulties that we are the ones who owe a lot to them and that first and foremost we owe them a sporting chance at a fair start in life without puzzling their great inexperience with further handicaps. We cannot give this to them unless we see to it that they start out in life unburdened with elderly, crochety, disillusioned people who simply can't fit into new homes or new lives. True, we care for our children lovingly and tenderly throughout their helpless, dependent years, toil and sorrow for them and struggle to "bring them up" but didn't we rather invite all this when we had them? And why should there be any obligations to us for looking after them in those years? They couldn't help being helpless any more than they could help being here and it was only just that we look after them when they couldn't look after themselves. Surely it is taking a mean advantage, just because of this, to expect them to burden themselves with us at a time when they are already overburdened with learning to live and when they need to be free to meet the difficulties without added complications. I'm far from saying children shouldn't take care of their parents in their old age if it is necessary. They should. Nobody can help misfortunes that come late in life, upsets plans and makes this dependence obligatory and the child who fails to provide under these circumstances deserves nothing but scorn, though, even then, he should be providing because he loves his parents and not because he "owes" it to them through the accident of having been their child.

I am only saying that parents should see to it in their young days that they provide for their old age, even at the risk of making the children go without something when they are little. A chance to strike out alone will mean far more to them than anything else we can give them and we shouldn't lose sight of the fact that anything else but going alone is asking them to give up the right to found their own lives, live their own ways and be a free individual, and this right is not selfishness, but only fair and natural.

There are many cases where the dependence of old people on young people should never have been, cases when it could have been avoided. The old folks lived their lives, got all they could out of it, squandered their youth, capacities, even health, foolishly, refused to be far sighted and wise and are making their children pay for it. Many kinds of foolishness on their part can bring about this situation, but most often it is due to their own misguided conception of what they really owed their children, or vanity in wanting to give them advantages equal to, or above, someone else's. The children didn't want these "advantages," had no aptitude for them and forgot them as soon as they were actually grown up. Music lessons, dancing lessons, vocal lessons, special courses and college educations have used up young fortunes that should have been saved for old age, and have caused more unhappiness and injustice than almost anything else. All of these things are excellent in their place if they can be afforded and enough left over, but they are absolutely nonessential except in the cases of outstanding talent, and often cause tremendous sacrifices at the time and later. Unless we are wealthy, why keep Susie thumping at a piano or gurgling vocal lessons for years when she isn't gifted and gets little out of it and gives it all up when her first baby comes. Why war with Willie to give him advantages he scorns and that will come to naught as soon as he gets his first job and settles down. Why dress and live and have homes beyond our means "for the children's sake?" Often we are building up a false pride that will make them discontented in their own lives because they can't keep up with what they have been accustomed to. Why beggar ourselves and our future, in which lies old age, in order to give the children a college education. College educations they should have by all means if they really want them, but there's nothing to hinder their working their way through college if it must be a choice between that or giving them money that stands for our own independence in later years. Working won't hurt them and even if they think us stingy at the time, the day will come when they will see our wisdom and call us blessed,—the day when they want to marry and are free to do so without anxiety as to what is to become of the old folks. The old folks had gumption enough to look out for themselves at the proper time. Any child of parents in moderate circumstances will take care of himself, given a chance, and he will work twice as hard to educate himself for what he wants to be and be all the better for it. If it is the most that can be afforded, then give him a good, comfortable home, full of honest love and faith and the right sort of principles and a simple education and let it go at that. He can get the rest for himself and when he faces life unshackled by us because of that frugality, we will be giving him his first real chance and all debts between us will be squared. His youth is as honestly his, you know, as ever ours was ours. His adult life is as absolutely his own as our old age

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 14.)

Comfort Sisters' Recipes

THE recipe sent by Mrs. J. I. Salter, McKenzie, Alabama, for Chocolate Layer Cake, wins the COMFORT'S Sisters' Pin for this month. To be sure, economical souls, like mine, will shudder at the thought of using six eggs for one cake, but she gives such accurate measurements and such explicit directions for combining the different ingredients that she deserves the prize.—Ed.

CHOCOLATE LAYER CAKE.—One cup butter, two cups sugar, six eggs, three cups flour, one cup water, two heaping teaspoons baking powder, and two teaspoons vanilla. Cream butter and sugar and beat well, then add the eggs, one at a time, beating well after each one is added. Add baking powder to well-sifted flour, then add the flour and water alternately, a little flour then a little water and so on until all is used. Lastly add flavoring and beat well. Bake in four layers and fill before cold. A good chocolate filling which I sometimes use is made as follows: Two cups sugar, one cup sweet milk, three level tablespoons cocoa, lump of butter size of egg and two teaspoons vanilla. Mix the sugar and cocoa well, add milk and butter. Put over fire and boil several minutes, not too fast. Try, by putting a little in a saucer and beating it. If it seems creamy remove it from fire and add flavoring and beat for a while with egg beater, as this makes it of a smoother consistency. When creamy spread between and on top of layers. Nuts may be added if desired.

Mrs. J. I. Salter, McKenzie, Alabama.

VEGETABLE SOUP.—One medium-sized cabbage head, three potatoes, four or five pods of okra, two green and two ripe peppers, two large onions and five large tomatoes, all carefully cleaned and chopped together. Cover with water and put on to boil, adding boiling water as it boils away. Cook until all are tender. Season with four level tablespoons of meat drippings, two teaspoons salt and one teaspoon pepper.

Ora Wells, Granbury, Texas.

SUMMER SWEETS.—By making a cooked fondant, a basis for a variety of sweets is obtained. Put together five cups of sugar, one and one-half cup of boiling water and one-fourth teaspoon of cream of tartar. Stir and bring to a boil, then cook without stirring until a little dropped in cold water will just hold together in a soft ball. The boiling mixture must be watched, and as soon as the sugar begins to adhere to the sides of the pan, it must be wiped off with the fingers. To do this, first wet the hand in cold water, quickly remove a portion of the sugar and again dip the fingers in cold water. Continue until all the sugar is removed. Pour onto platters that have been wiped with a lightly oiled cloth. Before the edges begin to harden, begin working the fondant with a broad-bladed knife; a spatula is best. Continue until smooth and creamy. Put into a covered dish and over it place a cloth. Let stand until the following day. Fondant is much more satisfactory when made on a clear, dry day. Take a portion of the fondant and work in raisins that have been scalded, rinsed through several waters and spread to dry without hardening. Nuts are worked in the same way, the fondant rolled, and then dipped into melted unsweetened chocolate. The fondant can be mixed with peanut butter and used as a date filling.

SUMMER SWEETS.

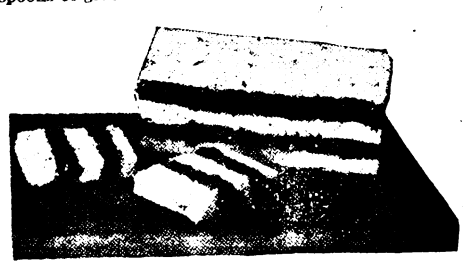
SWEET CORN.—Leave on the inner husks. Put in a kettle of water and see that the water covers every bit of the corn. Add one tablespoon of sugar to the water, but no salt, as salt hardens the corn. Boil rapidly, twelve minutes. If you wish to have a very delicious dish, strip the boiled corn from the cob, pour over it a generous supply of cream and butter and another tablespoon of sugar, add a little salt and turn it into an earthern baking dish and put in oven long enough to brown top.

Mrs. Minnie O. Mackintosh, San Diego, 3932 Cleveland Ave., Cal.



LETTUCE SALAD.—Three bunches of lettuce, or size according to family, two cups shredded cabbage, one-half cup onion chopped fine, one green pepper, if preferred, and three slices fried bacon cut in squares. Mix thoroughly and put in dish, then pour over following dressing, heated to boiling point. One-half cup vinegar diluted with water, one tablespoon butter and one-half cup sugar.—Mrs. W. C. Dorsett, Danville, Ind.

CHICKEN SALAD.—One quart cold boiled chicken, cut into small cubes, one pint finely cut celery, one teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, two hard boiled eggs, two cups mayonnaise dressing, and six olives. Mix chicken, which should be very tender, with celery, seasoning and one egg cut into small pieces; marinate with a little French dressing and let stand in cold place one hour. Spread mayonnaise over top, garnish with olives and remaining egg cut in slices. Dust with paprika.

Miss Claudye Lee Steem, Swiftown, Miss.

PEAR DUMPLINGS.—Peel, core and chop six ripe pears, add one-half teaspoon grated nutmeg, four tablespoons butter, four beaten eggs and four tablespoons of sugar. Mix well and to this mixture add enough fine bread-crumbs to make stiff and smooth. Mold into egg-shaped balls with the bowl of a large spoon, drop into boiling water and simmer thirty minutes. Drain and sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar. Serve with sweet sauce.—(No name given.)

PICNIC LOAF.—Slice a loaf of bread lengthwise, first evening the top and squaring the ends. Also slice brown bread but not quite as thick. Cream one-half cup of butter until light, and stir into it four tablespoons of grated cheese, or use one-third cup of butter and one cream cheese. Add one cup of minced ham, season with salt and paprika and stir until well blended. Spread the mixture between each layer of bread, wrap closely in a napkin until ready to use and then cut in slices. Serve with some kind of fruit, such as pears, apples, or peaches.

PICNIC LOAF.

DATE BARS.—Take one cup each of dates cut in halves, nut meats broken, sugar and flour, two eggs, one-half teaspoon salt and one-half teaspoon baking powder. Beat the eggs, add the dates, nuts and sugar, then the flour sifted with the salt and baking powder. If more moisture is needed, add a little milk. Bake in a sheet and cut in strips.

Blanche Maresch, Manitowoc, Wis.

COOKED SALAD DRESSING.—Two egg yolks, three-fourths cup milk, one-fourth cup vinegar, two and one-half tablespoons butter, one teaspoon salt, three-fourths tablespoons of flour and one teaspoon mustard. Mix all the dry ingredients with the egg yolks, beat until light and add the melted butter, cold milk, and hot vinegar. Cook in double boiler until the mixture coats the spoon. If it curdles, place the boiler at once into a pan containing cold water and beat until smooth. One whole egg may be used in place of two yolks.

MAYONNAISE DRESSING.—One egg yolk, one teaspoon salt, one-half teaspoon mustard, one-eighth teaspoon cayenne, one tablespoon sugar, one cup salad oil (olive, cottonseed, peanut, or other), two tablespoons lemon juice and vinegar. Put the egg yolk into a cold bowl; add the seasonings and mix until smooth; then add the oil, one drop at a time, stirring constantly. As it thickens, thin with vinegar and lemon juice.

JELL-O

Ice Cream Powder

Jell-O Ice Cream Powder contains all the ingredients of ice cream except the milk. The sugar, flavoring and everything else are in the powder. All there is to do is to stir the powder in milk and freeze it.

To make everything perfectly plain, the following recipe is given:

To Make Ice Cream

Stir a package of Jell-O Ice Cream Powder, of any flavor, into a quart of milk, or milk and cream mixed, and freeze it.

Ice cream made in this cheap and easy way is the best kind of ice cream—as good as any made by professional cooks or experienced caterers. The amount saved depends, of course, upon the price of milk. With milk at 12 cents a quart the cost of a quart of ice cream made of Jell-O Ice Cream Powder is somewhere between 18 and 20 cents—for a package of the powder and a quart of milk make about two quarts of ice cream.

Condensed or evaporated milk, thinned with water, can be used instead of fresh milk, if necessary, and the ice cream made from it will be entirely satisfactory.

THE FLAVORS

The different flavors of Jell-O Ice Cream Powder are as follows: Vanilla, Strawberry, Lemon, Chocolate, Unflavored.

Sold in all groceries and general stores at 2 packages for 25 cents.

Puddings, Sherbets and Ices

Other dainties besides ice creams are made of Jell-O Ice Cream Powder. All are so delightful that the recipes are given here.

CREAM RICE PUDDING

Cook one-half cup of rice until soft, then add one quart milk, one package Lemon Jell-O Ice Cream Powder, a little nutmeg, a stick of cinnamon and a pinch of salt. Cook in a double boiler until creamy. Can be served hot or cold. If desired add half a cup of raisins.

ORANGE SHERBET

Three-quarters of a cup of orange juice and juice of one lemon, two cups of sugar, five cups of water. Grate the rind of two oranges and rub into the sugar. Add the water and boil three minutes. Strain through a cheese cloth. Dissolve in the sugar and water one package of Lemon or Unflavored Jell-O Ice Cream Powder. Add the juice of orange and lemon, and when perfectly cold, freeze. Makes three quarts.

LEMON SHERBET

Three-quarters of a cup of lemon juice, two cups of sugar, five cups of water. Grate the rind of two lemons and rub into the sugar. Add the water and boil three minutes. Strain through a cheese-cloth. Dissolve in the sugar and water one package of Lemon or Unflavored Jell-O Ice Cream Powder. Add the lemon juice, and when perfectly cold, freeze. This makes about three quarts of delicious sherbet.

STRAWBERRY ICE CREAM

Dissolve a package of Strawberry Jell-O Ice Cream Powder in a pint of cold milk. Crush one-half box of fresh strawberries with one-half cup sugar and add to milk and partially freeze. Have whipped one cup of heavy cream. Open freezer, add cream and finish freezing. Any kind of fresh or canned fruit can be used in place of strawberries.

Plain strawberry ice cream is made of Strawberry Jell-O Ice Cream Powder without the addition of strawberries.

RASPBERRY ICE

To a box or a pint can of raspberries add one-half cup of sugar, crush and rub through a sieve to remove seeds. Add juice of two lemons. Measure, and add enough water to make five cups. Dissolve one package of Strawberry Jell-O Ice Cream Powder in this liquid and freeze.

THE GENESEE PURE FOOD COMPANY, Le Roy, New York

A Forgotten Love

by Adelaide Stirling

"The luck's mine to-night!" he thought triumphantly.

Poison or not, the smell of it reminded her that she was ravenous.

She rushed to the door in a frenzy.

Copyright, 1899, by Street and Smith.
Serial rights by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE MERCY OF THE MERCILESS.

A HEAVY hand over her mouth, an arm of steel round her young body, so tight she could not draw breath, a sudden agony in her back that sickened her, and Jacky Hamilton lay in Lesard's arms like a dead thing, her head hanging lifelessly from his shoulder.

It had been a piece of devil's work, the brutality of a savage too quickly done to let the girl even cry out, far less struggle. As Lesard seized her he had raised his knee, and it caught her at the back of her waist as his hand on her face swayed her resistlessly backward toward him.

That he might have crippled her for life he cared not one whit; it was no time for delicate scruple. This girl or Gillian had seen him take those diamonds, had also, for all he knew, seen Marchmont die. He feared no one on earth but these two sisters, and soon he would fear them no longer. For one he had, and the other——"

He laughed to himself as he shifted his burden and turned down a dark alley. The other was Gillian! There would be little trouble in bringing Gillian to his house of her own free will.

"The luck's mine tonight!" he thought triumphantly. "And bless the luck too, that there wasn't a policeman mousing round here when this little fool came out!"

But for all he blessed his luck he was careful not to presume on it, and pursued his way through a devious maze of dark alleys and short cuts till he reached his own abode.

It was a dingy street, quasi-respectable. To have chosen too rough a neighborhood would have been dangerous, for a saying that is notoriously untrue is that "tiger does not eat tiger."

The house went for an empty one. The front door was never opened, the blinds never raised in its dirty windows. Its tenant kept up the tradition by flitting in and out of a back window after dark like a bat.

He went that way now, through a disused mews that was a great convenience to him, for opening the front door might have betrayed the house contained a tenant who paid no rent.

He fastened his window behind him after his unostentatious entrance, and carried his burden to a room originally meant for boxes.

It had no windows, and the gas was turned off, naturally, from an ostensibly unoccupied house. Lesard lit two candles that were stuck in bottles and regarded his bedroom cynically. An old sofa and a broken legged table made up its luxurious furnishing. But it was a safe retreat as long as he was careful, and that he always was, for it had been part of his plan for years to have no address, camping calmly in empty houses, often changed, so that there was but one Lesard in the directory.

The girl had moaned as he laid her down on the sofa. A mocking devil in his eyes, he sat down and regarded her. There was only Gillian now!

He yawned suddenly and stretched himself. She had been a good lump to carry all that devious way. He tried to remember if he had met any one, and felt satisfied that only a few rags of humanity had seen him—waifs who mattered no more than starving cats.

"By George!" he said to himself, laughing, "I feel virtuously sleepy. Now I come to think of it, I've been up all night. I'll go and sleep somewhere, for it won't do my young friend any harm to wake and scream herself hoarse, since nobody can hear her. A box-room in the very middle of an attic has its advantages. Yet kicking at the door might be resounding—if she can kick!" congratulating himself on that touch of his knee to her back that for all he knew might have paralyzed her.

A stray end of rope, a few deft turns round girl and rickety sofa, and Mr. Lesard was free to go to bed. That a built-in window-seat in what had been a drawing-room was all his bed but did not trouble him. He fell dreamlessly asleep, much pleased with the lucky coincidences of the night, and determined to seek Gillian the next day, that is if it seemed practicable to leave his retreat in daylight.

While he slept Jacky Hamilton lay motionless up-stairs in the half-consciousness of pain.

When at last she stirred a sharp wrench in her made her feel faint, but she thought at first it was weakness that would not let her lift her head.

"Gill," she said, "where are you?" And then things cleared and steadied before her eyes.

This was no place Gillian had ever known or would ever set foot in! The flaring candles nearly burned down to the black bottles that held them, the lurching table propped against the wall, the ill-smelling horsehair sofa she lay on, were sordid and dreadful.

Her terror broke out in a sudden cry.

"Oh, I'm tied! Tied!" she shrieked aloud, and tore at the rope that held her. But she could not find the knot and the effort only hurt her. She could not even turn under her cords, and all her body yearned to sit up. Yet she scarcely felt that in her fright and anxiety to know where she was.

What had happened to her she remembered now.

"I went out for potatoes," she said to herself slowly, "and a man jumped at me from behind like an animal. Oh, what was the matter with me that I didn't fight and scream? Surely there must have been people somewhere." Smarting tears of rage stung her eyes, and she could not lift her hand to wipe them away.

"It's an awful place it must be an awful man who brought me here! If he meant to rob me he won't get much," remembering that lonely sixpence in her pocket. "But Gill! oh! my Gill!"

And the certainty of the terror that Gill would feel made a lump rise in her throat.

"Surely, surely, when he finds how poor I am he'll let me go!" she thought, with a pitiful effort at bravery, and wondered the while if she had been locked in to starve. Every sickening tale she had ever heard of girls kidnapped in London came back to her, till she ground her teeth.

"If I were just an ordinary girl with nothing hanging over me," she thought, "or if I hadn't left Gill alone to bear whatever happens, I could stand it. I could be brave. But now I can't, I can't!"

She lay back exhausted. Her hunger and weariness made her cords less irksome than if she had been strong and well, and presently she realized it. For as her strength came back a little her forced position grew unbearable.

She panted, struggled, and could not change it. As the minutes dragged by she grew to have but one thought, one desire in which Gill was forgotten. Just to sit up, only for one half-hour—for that Jacky Hamilton would have gone on her knees to the worst ruffian in London.

One candle had burned out long ago. As she lay with every drop of her blood a separate torture, the other flared up, guttered, and went out.

Almost without knowing it she screamed and screamed again, long, piercing wails that went eerily through the deserted house where there was but one man to hear them. She shrieked till she could shriek no more, and only the echo of her own voice rang back from the dirty walls.

She was alone for death, perhaps, to take her, and she would have sold her very soul now for freedom and a light, for even a box of matches that she might not die in the dark.

When her voice had failed for hoarseness, when she had tried to pray and could only jabber Gillian's name, she lay still, and shut her eyes not to see the blackness round her. And so was lying when some one opened the door.

For a moment the man looked at her.

Her hat had gone long ago, the burned gold of her hair shone round her head, her face was tear-stained and her mouth twisted with pain—and yet—

"She's prettier than Gillian!" he thought swiftly. "But all I hope is that she's as big a fool."

He swung back the door, letting the light he carried flash on Jacky's closed eyes.

"Good morning, Miss Hamilton," he said coolly, and Jacky, turning her head, cried out again as she saw once more the mocking devil in Lesard's eyes.

For Lesard it was! Well dressed, freshly shaved—he was never without his pocket-case of razors—dark, lean, saturnine, he was facing her, the man she had loved.

Well, she had no love now!

How he had found her was a mystery, but she knew unerringly that it was he who had carried her off. Lesard—who had loved her!

With an intuition that cut at her heart like a knife she knew he would never let her go from this place. Her prayers for freedom died on her lips.

"Would you like your cords undone?" he inquired, throwing his head back to glance at her in the old way, yet jeeringly, as he had never done—to her!

Sick with horror of him, she could not answer.

Perhaps he pitied her; more like her paleness frightened him, since he had no wish that she should die—if she would hear reason. However it was, she felt his deft fingers that were so strong undo her cords, felt him hold a cup to her lips.

"It's coffee, not poison," he said, as she would have pushed it away. "But just as you like, of course!" with that shrug of the shoulders.

Poison or not, the smell of it reminded her that she was ravenous. The strong black stuff was like nectar she could not pass by. She drank thirstily, and felt new strength run like fire through her. And she needed all her strength.

As he took away the cup she raised herself slowly, with sense enough to know that to start to her feet would be to faint. Yet that was only her second thought, her first was of Lesard himself. What was it in his voice that sounded strange, different?

And had she been blind before not to have seen the evil in his handsome, Indian face?

He sat down on an empty box opposite her, and lit a cigarette, his face bent down over it.

Oh! he had changed—changed, indeed. For the very curve of his strong, thin hand was cruel.

"Well," he said, his eyes on her face now, "have you had enough of this?" knowing quite well that even yet her hands and feet were almost unbearable with "pins and needles."

To his surprise, she covered her face with her hands. He did not know that it was for very shame that she had ever loved him.

Her eyes flashed as she let her hands drop—flashed hard as steel for all her terror.

"Does it make any difference if I have?" she cried bitterly. "Oh! I knew long ago that you were a liar—a thief—but I never knew till tonight that you were a coward. For it takes a coward to hurt a girl."

"So you knew I was a liar, did you?" with slow amusement, but she saw the lurking devil under it. "How, may I ask? For till tonight you never knew me!"

The difference in his voice, his very attitude, from the Lesard she had known came over her afresh. He was right—till tonight she had never known him.

Once more she looked him in the eyes.

"There is nothing that can't be said between you and me—now!" she said, watching him deliberately. But if she expected him to remember his own words she was mistaken. He heard them unmoved from the very lips he had kissed.

Jacky Hamilton's face grew blank, vacant.

Had he no soul—no heart? Or had he only what most men have, a conveniently short memory! For he was answering her words that had been an appeal in disguise.

"Exactly; nothing!" he agreed. "I suppose that is why you called me a liar—and other things," with an evil significance that made her remember she was in his power, shut up she knew not where.

"What do you want of me?" she cried sharply, and in the pause after his answer she turned cold.

"You called me a thief just now. I want to know what you meant."

But she did not speak. She knew now why he had carried her off. Had he seen her in the cave? Ever since played with her and Gillian like a cat with mice? If he had he knew—her breath came short—that she and Gillian were the—only—witnesses!

But she never flinched. He could do no worse now than give her death instead of the life he had made so bitter. She had no fear of being given up by him to the police, for she knew too much for him to dare that, and he knew that she knew.

But this was the man who had told her to trust him!

"Speak, you little fool!" he broke into the long silence with a rage that was uncontrollable. "Do you want me to break your neck?"

As if something had torn through the veil of flesh between their naked souls, Jacky Hamilton saw the man as he was, spirit and body as he was.

Like a flash she was off her feet, wild, exultant, here in her prison that she might never leave.

A quick carnation in her cheeks, a crimson on her young lips, a light borrowed surely from heaven in her wide, clear eyes, she faced him, transfigured with a strange rapture.

"You are not Lesard!" she cried, and pointed at him.

For a moment he was staggered out of countenance, then he recovered himself.

"Ask Gillian," he said wickedly. "She ought to know, for she's my wife!"

Jacky caught at her heart, but from joy, a joy that made her blood leap in her, that filled the sordid room with the very glory of Paradise. This man who was Gillian's husband was the man she had seen at the Wellford's ball, had let into the house at midnight, had followed into the underground darkness—but he was not Lesard!

But her keen joy turned to agony as he spoke: "So you thought I was my brother, Louis?" he jeered at her. "Oh, you little, little fool!"

His brother—her Lesard's brother!

This was what the real Lesard had meant, then, when he said she would need to be loyal to him; and she had never been loyal at all.

A resemblance, a voice and eyes, a trick of the shoulders—a well-acted lie—and she had cast aside the man who had been soul of her soul without the benefit of a doubt.

For the man before her tried to be like Lesard, she saw that now. Alone with her, careless of appearances, half the likeness in voice and face dropped.

If she had hated him before she could have killed him now. Because of him she had cast away her own, turned from all that made life good—she sat down suddenly, weak—shaking.

If she had not found out in time—if this man had not caught her she would have sworn Lesard's life away—the real Lesard's, in whose shoes this man masqueraded. But now the man who said he was Gillian's husband had put himself in her power, if she could get out!

She had not cared before that she was a prisoner one-tenth of what she cared now—except for Gillian's sake had not thought life a thing to covert, since the man she loved was what he was. But now life burned in her. She would live, to pay her debts and Gillian's to this sham Lesard! She looked at him with steadier eyes than his own.

"I don't care especially what your name is," she said slowly, "and I suppose you had your reasons for bringing me here. It was clever, in a way, but not clever enough."

"By——, I'm tired of this!" he caught her viciously by the shoulders. "I brought you here because you were dangerous."

"Because I saw you take the black diamonds or because I know you murdered Marchmont?" she asked quietly.

So she did know! It had been she, not Gillian, who had stopped the Red Mouse in the street. She who—his fingers were bruising her shoulders, his face terrible as he stooped over her.

"What you know doesn't matter," he said in her ear, so close that his lips touched it and made her shriek with horror of him. "Do you understand that?"

His face was hideous now that he was so close to her, all the beauty gone from it, and the very joy of its new unlikeness to the face she loved made her voice perfectly steady as she answered:

"I may not matter, but I am not the only person who knows enough to hang you!"

CHAPTER XXVIII.

"YOU'VE HANGED YOUR LOVER."

To her utter astonishment, the man let her at once from his hold.

"Ah!" he said quietly, looking at her as she stood flushed and palpitating before him, torn with the thoughts that dragged her every way at once. "I'm rather obliged to you. You have reminded me. There is Gillian! I had better go to Blake Street and see about—Gillian."

Gillian! What had Jacky done?

"Settle with me," she cried, wildly enough. "Let Gillian be! You've wronged her enough. Oh, I tell you if it had not been for Gillian I would have gone to the police long ago!"

"You!" he threw back his head and laughed so like the other Lesard that she felt sick. "You, with your hand print on the cellar stones! Why, you utter idiot, you are in a worse place than I, even supposing you were free at this moment. There are no witnesses against me but you and Gill, and you—will not do much. You forget that even if I let you go there is all the dead weight of circumstantial evidence against you. There is no hiding that you were in the cave, and had"—he laughed again—"touched Marchmont!"

"Gill—you won't hurt Gill?" she pleaded frantically. But his answer frightened her.

"She is my wife. I will do what I like with her."

"Not if I give in; if I promise you anything."

Without knowing it, she was wringing her hands.

"If you will put it all on the other Lesard—the one you know," caustically; "tell the Red Mouse I was he who stole the diamonds; tell the police it was either you or he did the murder!" The words came out calmly.

He had no idea how much this girl knew of his brother, but from her face it had been a good deal. Jacky's eager head dropped.

To die—to see Lesard die—either of them for this man, who was so callously wicked.

"No," she thought, her head hanging, her eyes on the ground; "no, not even for Gill. My life is my own, and I'll fight for it; and if I have to give in, I can die for my Lesard."

Quite simply she thought it; and then she held her head up proudly.

"If I don't give in, what are you going to do with me—and Gill?" she asked.

With the deliberation of cruelty he answered:

"Gill is my wife. I am going away, and I'll take her with me. You can stay here. When they find you not even my brother will know you!"

The simplicity of it all appalled her.

"Gill won't go with you, she hates you!"

"That makes no difference; she will do as I say. She was never a spitfire like you. I liked her rather, till things—till Marchmont"—hastily—"put ahead of me."

Something flashed over Jacky.

"She was never your wife—never! Or you would have stuck to her and carried out Tom Hamilton's scheme yourself."

"So you know that much, do you?" with a shrug of his shoulders. "Well, let me tell you, you can judge me! I got tired of Gillian before I was about Marchmont's little game. There, you have it in a nutshell. I couldn't brave Marchmont afterward, for he was an ugly customer; and, besides, I hadn't the money to work the thing as he did, though if Gillian had been less of a fool and had not bored me, I might have tried it. You have yourself and your chatter to the Red Mouse to blame if you disapprove of Gillian's future."

He turned, settled his coat, was going! She clenched her hands to keep in the prayers, the mad promises, that were on her lips. Only too well did she know what Gillian's future would be with this man. A daily suffering, an hourly martyrdom, neglect and ill treatment her portion as soon as he felt it safe to amuse himself, secure in her faithfulness, her terror of what hung over him.

But not even for Gillian would she speak—not yet! Not till that wild shot she had fired in the dark, of which no one knew, should miss fire.

She prayed he might go out, stay long, be seen; prayed with no better anchors for her prayers than the greed and fright of a wicked woman and that one thing she had done before she and Gillian fled from their lodgings in the Northend Road.

When she dared look up her hands ached with their convulsive clasping, and Lesard was gone. Gone to get Gillian for his slave and victim, and there was nothing Jacky could do, a prisoner, with death her only release.

He had left the light, that was one thing.

She stared round her and saw there was no way out; nothing but the four walls, the locked door, the boarded-over skylight that she could not reach. But the latter told her she was in the attic of a house, though the house stood she knew not where. There was still some coffee in the cup, she seized it and drank thirstily.

"My head's dizzy and my back aches," she said aloud, trying to force herself to think coherently, "and there's no way for me to get out, for the sofa and table together won't reach nearly to the sky-light. And I wish I had a piece of bread!" Her own words made her laugh hysterically, brought still in spite of her weakness. For this man was not Lesard! All her old worship of her lover had come back to her sore heart, and with it a new hope that, wild as it was, kept her from despair. There was one chance in a hundred that he might not get Gillian, one chance in fifty that the Red Mouse—oh, he little knew what he did when he sold those jewels to the Red Mouse! Nor what power he had put into Jacky Hamilton's hand.

She dropped to her knees and prayed as she had never prayed before; like some desperate man alone abandoned in a desert prays under a burning sky for water. As she prayed something bade her put out the light.

Trembling, she got up, and with the faith of a child, extinguished the pale lamp that seemed her only friend. The darkness frightened her, so black, so full of horror, and she dared not move. When she stood she stayed, leaning her aching back against the wall.

It was always night in this dreadful room. Outside it might be sunlight, and she was here! She had herself hurried on the coming of the great darkness that waited for her; that if it had not been for Gillian she could have met with a quick heart, since her Lesard had been neither a liar nor a thief, nor—with a leap of her heart—Gillian's husband!

The sudden grate of a key in the lock made her start with terror and astonishment. The noise of the opening door was like thunder in her ears. Was it Lesard—had he come back? She knew he had, though the open doorway was as dark as the room.

"What—where's the light?—damn you!" his voice was close to her and she shrank away as he

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 28.)

DINNERS FOR THE THRESHERS AND HARVESTERS

MINT JULEP.

By Violet Marsh

HAVING something on hand from which a cool, refreshing drink can be quickly made is more gratifying to a guest on a hot summer day than any other thing a hostess may serve. It requires no accompaniment, but if convenient a n bread and butter sandwich, a cracker or a bit plain cake is acceptable.

The above illustration gives an idea of how this ople service may appear, and what can be done th berry and fruit juices, a few sprigs of mint, ne sugar and water. A plate of small thin dwiches are added and a tiny bowl of pansies e a decorative touch.

recipe for mint julep given below.

The principal subject at I wish to talk about is month is what the eparation of dinners on ecial occasions, such as reshing and harvesting ys means to the house-fe on the farm. Upper-ost in her mind is the sire to provide food that appetizing and sub-antial, and plenty of for she expects large petites and the more that is eaten the better is e "proof of the pudding."

CHOCOLATE PIE.

Do not undertake a great variety of food unless ou have an abundance of trained assistance is y advice. But even with plenty of help, the mple well-balanced meal that is well cooked and nple is preferred by most men. Select dishes at can be largely prepared the day before and the early morning.

Last month I gave recipes for cooking ham and mphasized the usefulness of a cold baked or boiled am in hot weather. As this can be prepared in ivance and is generally liked, it becomes an im-ortant dish where large numbers are to be served. old boiled leg of mutton is another excellent immer meat, and is cooked the day before serving. oth these meats should be served with a relish of risp cabbage salad or kohl slaw, and hot vegetables. till another dish that hearty appetites always ppreciate is a beef stew with dumplings. It can e made the day before using, and really improves y standing over night. It should be reheated ith care so to guard against scorching or mashing he vegetables.

Veal may be made into an appetizing loaf and erved cold. Do not use eal unless you are sure f its age and time of illing. Veal taken from calf less than eight eeks old is very un-holesome. Unlike other eat, veal does not im-rove by long hanging nd should be eaten soon fter being dressed. Hot tewed tomatoes well easoned with butter, epper and salt make a elicious relish with cold eal.

Hot scalloped salmon or the housewife who is ar from market and de-ends on canned meats nd fish is a very de-endable dish. Where t is the main dish, it should be made extra rich with butter and cream. New England baked beans and brown bread are a "stand-by" when serving out-of-door work-ers and will combine well with the salmon scallop. With the addition of raw tomatoes or cucumbers an excellent meal is made.

SALMON ESCALLOP.

A well scalloped dish of potatoes is "king" when served with cold meats. At the start they require a little more preparation, but when baked you have a dish that requires no additional butter or gravy and is very satisfying. Shallow pans can be used for baking the scallop which does not require immediate serving the same as baked or mashed potatoes do.

One substantial vegetable besides potato, such as corn on the cob, string beans or new boiled cabbage will be ample. Lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers always help to round out a good dinner, but they add to the work materially, and their place can be entirely filled by having fresh ripe fruit on the table, or cooled melons.

It has been said that "every man has a sweet tooth" and the best way of gratifying this is with chocolate or lemon pie. The work of making these is nearly completed the day before using. Serve tea or coffee, hot or cold, but reserve the lemonade to drink between meals, for it disagrees with many people when taken with food.

Recipes for Above Named Dishes

BOILED LEG OF MUTTON.—After wiping the meat thoroughly with a damp cloth, remove the thin outer skin which gives cooked mutton a strong flavor. Cover with boiling water, quickly bring to the boiling point, boil from five to ten minutes and skim. Set on the back of stove and simmer until tender which will take at least 15 minutes to the pound. When the meat is two-thirds done, add one scant tablespoon of salt to each leg of mutton. Remove from liquor as soon as cooked. When cold the fat may be removed and vegetables and rice cooked in the liquor.

KOHL SLAW.—Select small hard cabbages, remove outer leaves, cut into quarters, and with a sharp long-bladed knife cut as thinly as possible. Cover with cold water and set in the coolest place available several hours before using. Make the cream dressing the day before as follows: Beat one egg just enough to break it up well, and then beat in one tablespoon of sugar, one-fourth teaspoon of salt and one scant half-teaspoon of mustard previously mixed together. To this add three tablespoons of melted butter and two-thirds cup of medium weight cream. Beat one minute with the egg beater and then add one-fourth cup of vinegar, a very little at a time, while beating. Cook in double boiler until the mixture thickens. Just before serving, drain the cabbage and pour over the dressing which should also be very cold.

BEEF STEW WITH DUMPLINGS.—The aitchbone lies between the back of rump and the round and is used for stews because the meat is juicy and the bone is rich in marrow. After wiping with a wet cloth, cut all the meat from the bone, and saw the bone into pieces. Trim off the fat, cut into small pieces and try out in frying-pan. Cut the lean meat into two-inch pieces, roll in flour and quickly sear in the hot fat. Do only a few pieces at a time so that the fat will not become cool nor the meat remain after it is seared which takes but a few seconds. As the meat is seared, dish it into the stew-kettle. Pour boiling water into the frying-pan and boil until the remaining fat and flour is in the water, then pour it over the meat. Add the bone, cover with boiling water and quickly bring to a boil, then set back where it will simmer about three and one-half hours. If it boils the meat will be stringy and tasteless. To six pounds of meat and bone use four cups of sliced potato, one cup of celery cut fine, one-half cup of sliced onion, one cup of carrot, and one cup of turnip, each cut into inch pieces. Add all but the potato after the meat has been simmering two hours, and the potatoes one-half hour before the stew is done. When the vegetables are added bring the kettle forward on the stove and add a handful at a time so not to lower the temperature, then set back as soon as simmering commences again. Add pepper and salt one hour before removing from fire. If dumplings are not to be added, use one-third cup of rice, adding it with the vegetables. It is well to start the rice cooking in a separate dish and add it, boiling hard, to the stew-kettle. The dumplings are added to the stew as late as possible before serving. Where the stew is made the day before, pour off as much of the broth as possible in which to cook the dumplings, as in this way the stew will not be injured by the rapid boiling required to cook dumplings.

CANNED CORN.

DUMPLINGS.—Two cups of sifted flour, four teaspoons of baking powder and one-half teaspoon of salt sifted together. Moisten with seven-eighths cup of rich milk, stirring as little as possible. Drop by small spoonfuls into the hard boiling liquor, cover tightly and cook twelve minutes without lifting the cover. Add to stew and serve.

VEAL LOAF.—Seven pounds of lean veal and one pound of salt fat pork ground through the meat chopper. To this add ten common crackers rolled fine, four tablespoons of lemon juice, two level tablespoons of salt, half a teaspoon of scraped onion, one level teaspoon of white pepper, and about one-half teaspoon of poultry dressing if desired. Stir and work one-half cup of cream into the mixture. Press into loaf bread tins and bake three and one-half hours in a slow oven. Brush pork fat over the tops occasionally.

STEWED TOMATOES.—Select those that are well ripened, cover one minute with boiling water, peel, cut into slices and rapidly stew until done, but not long enough to change color. Season with plenty of butter, salt and pepper and add a very little sugar if desired.

SALMON ESCALLOP.—Use three cups of cold flaked salmon and five cups of freshly boiled and mashed potato. The success of this dish depends very much on being well seasoned. Melt two tablespoons of butter in a sauce pan and add two tablespoons of dry flour. When smooth and bubbling add one cup of hot milk very gradually while stirring. Now add the prepared fish to the hot sauce, season to taste with salt and a few grains of pepper, and set on the back of stove to slowly heat while preparing the potatoes. After mashing set on a hot cover and gradually beat in hot thin cream until the potato is white and fluffy. Add salt to taste. In a hot baking dish put a layer of potato, then a layer of the creamed salmon, and repeat until all is used. Moisten one cup of rolled cracker crumbs with melted butter and spread over the top. Bake 20 minutes in a hot oven or until the crumbs are brown. Serve at once.

NEW ENGLAND BAKED BEANS.—Soak one quart of pea, yellow-eyed or kidney beans over night in a quantity of cold water. Change to fresh cold water in the morning and parboil until the skins will crack when exposed to the air out of the boiling water. In the bottom of a crock that will hold about two and a half quarts place one-half pound of fat salt pork and then add the drained beans. Sweeten with two tablespoons of molasses and three tablespoons of sugar. Add boiling water to just cover, and bake ten hours in an oven hot enough to simmer. When the beans have cooked six hours add one and one-half teaspoons of salt. Many like a whole onion placed in the bottom with the pork.

BROWN BREAD.—One cup of Graham flour, one cup of rye meal, one cup of granulated meal, one teaspoon of salt, and three-fourths tablespoon of soda thoroughly mixed together. An excellent way to do this is to sift and return the bran. Add three-fourths cup of molasses and two cups of well soured milk. Stir until smooth, and pour into a pail which should not be more than half full to give room for rising. Cover tightly and steam three hours, then bake half an hour. One cup of raisins can be added to the mixture.

ESCALLOPED POTATOES.—Pare, cut into fairly thin slices and soak in cold water the required number of potatoes. Butter a baking dish, put in a layer of potato, dredge with a light sifting of flour, dot with butter and lightly salt. Pepper may be added sparingly. Repeat until all the potato is used. The dish should not be more than three-fourths full. Pour over scalding hot milk until it just reaches the top. Bake in a moderate oven two hours. Do not allow the potato to boil.

STRING BEANS.—The sooner they are cooked after picking the better they will be. If kept over night, cover with cold water one hour then drain and put in a cool place. Snap off the ends and break into short lengths. Have the water boiling hard with a good fire and drop in a small handful of the beans. When the water again boils add a few more and continue until all are in the kettle. This method requires a little more care but the beans will cook in half the time.

BOILED CORN.—Pour boiling water over the corn and cook until when the kernels are pried with a fork they will appear to have slightly shrunken from the cob. Do not cook too long as after a certain point the corn begins to lose flavor.

CHOCOLATE PIE.—Cover the bottom of a deep pie tin with good pastry. Prick every inch or two that the steam may escape: otherwise the crust will bulge. Bake in a quick oven and remove the crust from plate.

FILLING.—Mix one-third cup of cocoa with one-fourth cup of cornstarch and one-fourth cup of sugar. To three well-beaten egg yolks add one-fourth cup of sugar, one-quarter teaspoon of salt and stir the two mixtures together. Now stir in two cups of whole milk and cook in double boiler until it thickens, stirring constantly, as it thickens first on the bottom of dish. Add three teaspoons of vanilla and set away to cool. Both the crust and filling can be made the day before, providing the crust is kept in a covered tin box or other dry place. Pour filling into crust the next forenoon, beat the egg whites very dry and stiff and gradually add three tablespoons of granulated or powdered sugar and spread over the pie. Place in a moderate oven until the meringue is well puffed and brown.

LEMON PIE.—Proceed the same as for chocolate pie.

FILLING.—Beat the yolks of two eggs and stir in one cup of sugar mixed with two slightly rounded tablespoons of cornstarch. Add the juice of one large lemon and the grated yellow from the rind. Add one cup of boiling water, place on a hot stove and stir until the filling thickens then cook one minute longer. Stir constantly while it cools.

MINT JULEP.—Boil one quart of water with one pint of sugar fifteen minutes. At the same time soak ten sprigs of mint, broken into short pieces, in one pint of boiling water for five minutes. Strain and add to syrup when it is taken from fire. Now add three cups of grape juice, two cups of orange juice, and lemon juice to taste. Dilute when serving.

CANNED CORN.—Select corn that is in full milk and young. Cut from cob lengthwise, only taking off about two-thirds of the kernel. With a strong knife scrape the cob lengthwise so as to get all the pulp and milk. What is left is the hard end of hull which is useless. Fill sterilized jars two-thirds full, add one teaspoon of sugar to a pint jar, fill with boiling water and cook three hours in hot water both partly sealed. Finish seal and gradually cool out of drafts.

CAKE WITH RASPBERRY FILLING.—Measure three cups of flour, add one-fourth teaspoon of salt and six even teaspoons of baking powder and sift twice again. Cream one-third cup of butter and gradually add one cup of sugar, then add two well-beaten eggs. Beat very light with the egg beater and then add the flour alternately with one cup of milk. Beat until smooth. Flavor with a teaspoon of vanilla or lemon juice, adding it just before final beating. Bake in layers.

FILLING.—Beat one cup of heavy cream. Beat the white of one egg until stiff, gradually add one-half cup of sugar and then add the whipped cream. Reserve enough to cover the top of cake, and to the remainder add one cup of lightly mashed raspberries. Spread between layers, use plain on top and garnish with whole berries.

GIVE THEM

Baker's Cocoa

TO DRINK

THE almost unceasing activity with which children work off their surplus energy makes good and nutritious food a continual necessity. Of all the food drinks Baker's Cocoa is the most perfect, supplying as it does much valuable material for the upbuilding of their growing bodies. Just as good for older people. It is delicious, too, of fine flavor and aroma.

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Made only by

WALTER BAKER & CO. LTD.

Established 1780

DORCHESTER, MASSACHUSETTS

Booklet of Choice Recipes sent Free

Brownie's Triumph

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 4.)

"She was ill-treated and insulted—in fact, was accused of taking that which did not belong to her."

"Enough, sir! No person with any such record can ever become allied to my family!" burst forth Lord Dunforth, rising from his chair in wrath.

"But, sir, let me explain——"

"No, sir!" he thundered; "not another word! I am astonished and disappointed in you, Adrian, that you could so demean yourself as to desire to marry any one so far beneath you!"

"She is not beneath me," began the indignant lover, hotly.

"Not another word, Adrian, if you please, on the subject, unless you wish to incur my stern displeasure. You, the future Earl of Dunforth, marry a person accused of theft! Never!" and he paced the floor, with angry strides.

Suddenly he wheeled upon his grandson, and demanded:

"May I ask, have you made proposals to this very estimable person?"

"I have, my lord." The manly eyes blazed dangerously at this almost insulting question, while his hands worked nervously at the biting sarcasm of his grandfather's words.

"Fool!"

"Sir!"

"You're a fool, I say!"

The two men glanced at each other furiously for a moment. Then Adrian, growing very pale, moved a step or two back, and said in a quiet, though concentrated, voice:

"Then I am to understand that you refuse your consent to my marrying?"

"I do, most emphatically refuse to allow you to marry any such doubtful person as Lady Ruxley's companion appears to be. Shame upon you for stooping so low!"

"Then, my Lord Dunforth, listen to me," Adrian said, flushing angrily, and drawing his proud form to its fullest height. "I love this gentle girl with my whole heart; I have told her so, and I have asked her to be my wife. I am of age, and, sir, I shall marry her!"

Lord Dunforth suddenly wheeled about, and came forward with rapid strides.

The two proud men stood looking steadfastly into each other's eyes for a moment, and each read there a determination never to yield.

"Then you are no longer a child of mine!" whispered the irate lord, hoarsely, his whole frame shaking from anger, disappointment, and mortification.

"Grandfather," returned Adrian, sadly, "you know I love you, and would gladly do anything in reason to please you; but the happiness of two lives is at stake, and in this matter I must choose for myself."

There was a note of quiet determination in his voice, albeit it was so sad, which told the other that he meant every word he uttered.

"Then choose for yourself," he cried, almost beside himself with grief and mortified pride, "and choose beggary with your wife, for not one shilling from the Dunforth coffers shall you ever touch!"

"But I am not a beggar quite yet, my lord; I have my own income," returned Adrian, proudly, yet smiling, in spite of himself for his income was no mean one.

"Then leave me—begone!"

"Sir——"

"Not another word, unless you will yield to me!" shouted the earl.

"I cannot!"

"Then go! Marry your plebeian beggar, and never darken Dunforth doors again!"

"Is that your ultimatum? Have you no sympathy nor mercy?" asked Adrian, growing very white about the mouth, though his eyes gleamed with a lurid light.

His lordship caught his breath hard at these questions. Who should have sympathy if not he? But he would not yield.

"It is my ultimatum. I have no sympathy with anything like that," he said, yet the face of his own lost love arose before him at that moment like a phantom.

With an inclination of his haughty head, Adrian turned and left the room without another word.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

"HOW CAME YOU HERE?"

Lady Ruxley had said truly that Vallingham Hall was full of company, and as Brownie, who sat reading to her ladyship the next morning after their arrival, caught the sound of fresh young voices and silvery laughter, as they floated up through those lofty halls, she felt her own heart grow warm and light, and she found herself longing to mingle with the gay company. Lady Ruxley had tried to prevail upon her to go down the evening previous and enjoy the music and dancing, but the thought of meeting the Coolidges was so repugnant to her that she preferred remaining quietly in her own room, although it was quite a trial, knowing that Viola and Alma were in the same house, and yet not be able to see them.

Just before noon Lady Randal came bustling in in great haste, bearing a great box in her hands.

"Auntie," she began, affably, "I want to borrow Miss Dundas for a little while."

"What for?" demanded the old lady, sharply, and eying the box suspiciously.

She had no idea of having the young girl imposed upon, or made to perform any disagreeable tasks for her exacting niece.

"I can't find an operetta which I had set my heart upon having performed at the soiree. I thought I could put my hand upon it at once, but I have mislaid it, and thought it might be among these papers. Charles wants me immediately to arrange the programme, so that I have not time to look for it myself, and I thought perhaps Miss Dundas might be willing to hunt it for me. Will you?" she demanded, turning to Brownie.

"Certainly, if Lady Ruxley has no objections," she answered, quietly.

"Well, well, child, you'd never refuse, no matter what anybody asked of you. Put down the box Helen and she shall look as soon as she has finished the article she is reading," Lady Ruxley replied.

Lady Randall obeyed.

"While you see about it, you may as well arrange the papers orderly; they have been turned over so many times that they are all in a muss," she said, and then left the room.

Half an hour after, her reading finished, she took the box to a large table standing in the bay window, and began her work.

It was no easy task to put that promiscuous assortment in order.

There were bills of all kinds, letters and notes, and memoranda, all mixed with loose papers and envelopes.

She at length succeeded in finding the operetta, and then proceeded to arrange and tie up the letters, bills and other documents so that they need not get mixed again.

She had nearly finished her task, and the bundles were all neatly arranged in the box, when, taking up a small package, the wrapper suddenly gave way, and several little notes and papers fell scattering into her lap.

They were directed to different persons, and all in different handwriting, and Brownie could not help wondering how they happened to be in Lady Randal's possession.

She began to gather them up, pondering upon the singular circumstance, yet too honorable to take advantage of her opportunity and gratify her curiosity, when her eye fell upon a note, the corner of which had been doubled back, revealing the writing within.

The writing, though irregular, as if a trembling hand had traced it, had a strangely familiar look as she glanced at it.

It had been written with a pencil, and was not very distinct. Bending closer, Brownie discovered the words "repentant Meta."

A thrill of intense pain ran through every nerve, and, without stopping to consider that she had no moral right to do so, she unfolded the paper; it was yellow and old, and only folded once—and began to read.

Scarce had her eye swept over the few words written within, when every vestige of color faded from her cheeks and lips, while her eyes burned with a fierce, vengeful light.

She had heard of that little note before.

How well she remembered the pain in that dear old face, the quivering of those sweet, pale lips,

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 27.)

Cubby Bear and the Traps

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

FEAR and suspicion were abroad in the Pleasant Forest. Who had been there, and what were the strange things which the forest people were finding here and there?

Cubby Bear had started out that morning for a pleasant walk, thinking he might go as far as the river. But before he had gone twenty paces along the forest path, something just ahead of him caught his attention.

"Now what can that be?" he asked himself wonderingly. "Right here in the path—that stuff sprinkled over it smells good, but I will not taste it. I cannot tell why, but I do not dare."

He sniffed, and walked around, looking at the thing from all sides.

He found a stout stake driven into the ground, and fastened to it was an iron chain, partly covered over with leaves and dirt. Poking cautiously with a little stick, he found the chain led to the queer thing in the path. What could it be for?

"I was just going to your house, Cubby Bear," said Minnie Mink, coming along the path toward him. "I wanted to ask you if you knew——"

"Why what is this?" she asked, amazed. "Another—but this is much larger! Cubby Bear," she went on solemnly, "I do not like this! Right in my way, as I climbed the bank of the Big Brook this morning, was some nice looking food, oh, very nice! But it did not smell right, and the dirt had been disturbed. I could not make out what kind of marks were in the damp earth, but they were footprints of something, I am sure. And through the food, I caught a glimpse of rusty black iron. What do you make of it?"

"I do not know," answered Cubby. "Would Wise Owl know, do you think?"

"We will try to find him," said Minnie. "Come."

Together they went to Wise Owl's hollow tree, but he did not answer when they called.

"There comes Wollie Woodchuck, running this way," said Cubby. "Something must have happened, to make Wollie hurry! He looks scared."

"Someone has been at the very door of my house, and filled up the doorway with an ill-smelling thing which I did not dare to touch!" complained Wollie. "It was lucky I had a back door, too, or I should not have been able to get out. I wish you would come with me, and move it away, Cubby Bear! You are so brave, you would not be afraid, I am sure."

Cubby was pleased with this compliment, but was in no hurry to do as Wollie asked.

"You are not the only one who has found something strange this morning," Minnie Mink said. "I do not know what to make of it. Listen—I hear wheels. Yes, there is Bunny Rabbit, out giving his Baby Bunnies a ride."

"Good morning," called Bunny Rabbit; and, "Good morning," echoed the Baby Bunnies.

"Why look you all so sober?" asked Bunny "One should be happy this fine morning."

"You had best be careful where you step," Minnie Mink warned him darkly, "and above all things do not feed your Bunny Babies anything you find lying on the ground."

While they were telling Bunny of what they had found, Robbie Reddie flew down to the ground close by. As he listened, he nodded his head, as if he too, knew something of the kind.

"I have just come from Busy Beaver's place," said Robbie. "He and Brother Binney Beaver are starting to build a platform of little logs over a strange thing they have found on their landing-place on the bank of the Big Brook. They did not want to touch it, and they have been planning to build a platform there, anyway. You see, the logs will cover it up."

"Let us go around to other places, and see if any more of the things are in the forest," proposed Cubby. "But be careful, all of you, and not run into one."

They had not gone far when they heard a voice crying, "Help, help!"

"Hush! What is that?" asked Bunny, ready to run away.

"It sounds to me like Woozie Weasel's voice," answered Robbie Reddie. "Yes, it is Woozie—I can see him now."

Woozie was scampering at full speed, head down, along a little side-path, and ran head first against the Bunny Babies' little cart before he saw that it was in his way.

Over it went, and out spilled the cartful of wriggling white fur, mixed up with long pink ears and little waving paws.

"Now see what you've done!" cried Bunny shrilly, in an agony of distress. "Who knows how many of them are killed?"

Cubby was gently picking up the spilled Baby Bunnies, while Wollie and Minnie righted up the cart.

"All safe," declared Cubby. "Woozie has hurt himself more than the Bunny Babies."

For Woozie stood rubbing his head, on which a lump was swelling.

"What were you crying 'Help' for?" asked Minnie Mink.

"Oh, yes," said Woozie slowly. "My head aches so I was quite forgetting poor Foxy Reynard. His paw is caught in something that holds it fast. I do not know what the thing is but Foxy stepped into it right in his own dooryard!"

As Woozie saw the looks which passed between the others, he added:

"If any of you have been playing bad tricks like that on Foxy, it will go hard with you!"

"Oh, no," denied Cubby, but Wollie was angry.

"All right!" he flared. "If you think we did it, you can just go back and get Foxy out of his troubles yourself! It would serve him right anyway, to pay him for all the bad tricks he has tried on the rest of us."

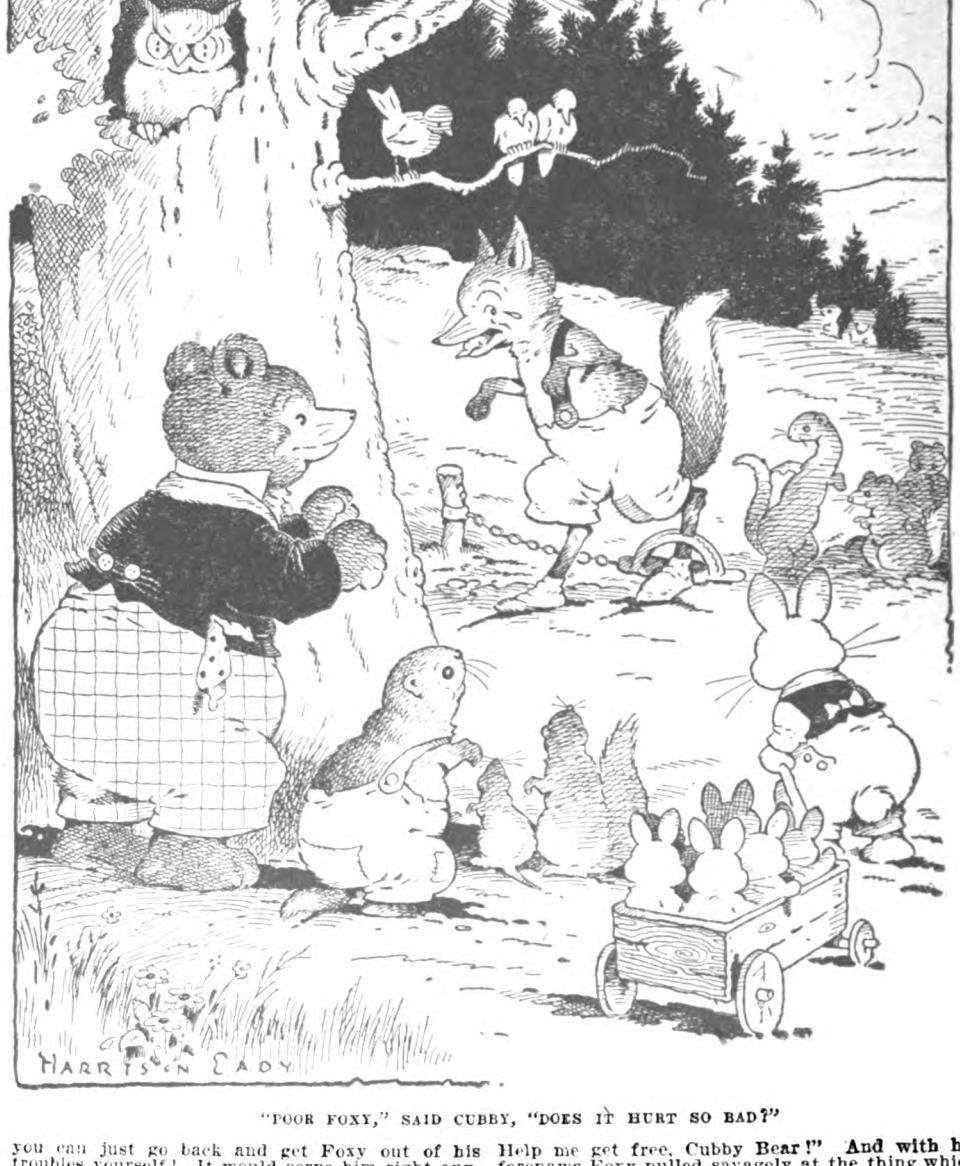
"If poor Foxy's paw is caught, we must do what we can to help him," said Cubby Bear. "We will go with you, Woozie."

Wollie Woodchuck went with the others, but he lagged behind, grumbling all the way.

They found Foxy Reynard moaning and wringing his paws.

"Poor Foxy," said Cubby, "does it hurt so bad?"

"No," answered Foxy, "it pinches a little, but by good luck I had my stout boots on this morning. But I am held fast, and that my proud spirit cannot bear! I want to be free—to be free——"



"Just pull your paw out of the boot," advised Bunny Rabbit. "That is easily done!"

"Stupid!" snapped Foxy. "Would I stay here, a prisoner, and send for help, if I could move my paw? I tell you it is held tight, and it pinches! Help me get free, Cubby Bear!" And with his forepaws Foxy pulled savagely at the thing which held him.

"This has a chain, fastened to a stake, driven into the ground, like the one I found," said Cubby. He was afraid to touch it, but he worked up his courage by thinking, "If I were caught like that, I would want someone to help me!"

By dint of much pulling and twisting, and howls from Foxy that they were pulling off his paw, they at last got him free. But the boot was left, caught fast.

"Dear, dear! I shall never have such another pair of boots," he sighed.

"POOR FOXY," SAID CUBBY, "DOES IT HURT SO BAD?"

CONTENTS

	Page
Editorial	2
Brownie's Triumph (continued)	4
Comfort Sisters' Corner and Recipes	5
A Forgotten Love (continued)	6
Dinners for the Threshers and Harvesters	7
Cubby Bear and the Traps	8
Crumbs of Comfort	8
Comfort's League of Cousins	9
Molly's Ghost Materializes	10
The Pretty Girls' Club	11
'Neath Mid-Summer Moonlight	12
Mother and Baby	14
When Silas Went Camping	15
At Crumpet's Corner	16
Comfort's Knitting and Crocheting Cozy Club for Nimble Fingered Folks	18 and 19
Haley's Iron Heart	20
Poultry Farming for Women	21
You Never Can Tell	22
The Modern Farmer	23
Alicia Mary Goes A'Hinting	24
Automobile and Gas Engine Helps	25
The Promise	26
Information Bureau	27
Manners and Looks	28
Talks with Girls	29
Missing Relatives and Friends	29
Veterinary Information	31
Family Doctor	33
Lucky Thirteen	33
Home Lawyer	34
Best Ways of Doing Things Around the Home	34
Requests	34
The Emporium of Bargains and Opportunities	35
Six Wheel Chairs in July	35

All Subscriptions Cut Off At Expiration

All subscriptions will be cut short off on date of expiration, unless the subscription is renewed and paid for. Not even one copy can be sent, after expiration, until the subscription is renewed. If the number over your name on the wrapper on this paper is 418, or any less number, it means that this is the last copy of COMFORT you will receive until you renew. Renew today.

SEPTEMBER COMFORT

Mother and Baby Number

Our Mother and Baby Number for September, as its name implies, will be devoted largely to the interests of the mothers and their little ones. The following are some of the Special Features for September

"Comfort's Baby Show" The 24 Comfort babies pictured on the front cover and others on double page spread will be described with mention of their mothers in write-up entitled "Happy Little Tots" from Comfort's Family.

"Better Babies and Happier Mothers" Written especially for COMFORT by Dr. F. C. Sweeney and tells many essentials that mothers should know.

"If You Wish It" A girl, desiring to make sure, puts her suitor to the test of a humiliating ordeal.

"Family Sewing" Fall and winter styles and fabrics, and instructions for fitting, making and making over clothes.

"Home Outfitting for Winter" New ideas for making old furnishings attractive.

"Four Ways of Serving Fowl" Also vegetable combinations and pickling recipes.

"Don, the Educated Dog" A touching romance in which Don wins favor for his master and effects a family reconciliation.

"Cubby Bear Rescues Ducky Dumpling" Foxy Reynard had caught Ducky Dumpling and was about to eat her when Cubby Bear made him let her go.

If the number over your name on the wrapper on this magazine is 418 it means that your subscription expires with this present issue and that you will not receive September COMFORT unless you renew your subscription at once—we can not send you a single copy, after expiration, until you have renewed. Don't miss September COMFORT.

Save money by renewing and extending your subscription two or three years. Use coupon below and do it today.

Please send bills or silver carefully wrapped in paper and securely sealed, or post-office money order. If obliged to send postage-stamps, send two-cent stamps.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: 50 cents a year, $1.00 for three years, 75 cents for a TWO-YEAR renewal, in U. S. or Cuba. (In Canada 65 cents a year.)

SUBSCRIPTION COUPON FOR RENEWAL OR EXTENSION

Publisher of COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

I enclose ..... cents for renewal and extension of my subscription _____ full years from date of expiration.

*Date*_____ *Name*_____

*Post Office*_____ *Street and No.*_____

*R. F. D. No.*_____ *Box No.*_____ *State*_____

August, 1923.

COMFORT'S League of Cousins

LEAGUE RULES

To be a comfort to one's parents. To protect the weak and aged. To be kind to dumb animals. To love our country and protect its flag.

CONDUCTED BY UNCLE LISHA

COMFORT for one year and admittance to the League of Cousins for only 55 cents. Join at once. Everybody welcome.

ADDRESS all letters to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. See Instructions at the close of this Department.

AUGUST is my vacation month, and soon I will be away from gasoline-choked streets to spend happy free-breathed weeks in the little mountain town where Billy and I become for a time trail-wanderers under spruce and pine, sprawling afers in high, sunny hill pastures, and now and then r frequenters of the village street whose noonte of quietude will be soaked in peace and the ade of maples. I view all this in anticipation; curt my mind about the prospect; I dream of it nights and remember it as I wake in the morning the honk of an auto or the rumble of a trolley. y vacation is coming! I shall soon be off to sorb barrels of rest and peace to be drawn upon memberfully when the happy weeks are over d I am again a part of the pushing throngs and e motored city life, machine-paced and machine-iven.

When I shall look upon that quiet village street, view broad and thinly-settled valleys from the p of some mountain that shelters them, I know will be hard for me to recall the huddled places have left behind me and in which men have ttled to lead cluttered lives. The New York which Bill and I contribute two inhabitants d six legs has now a population of 5,620,048 rsons! It is the largest city in the world—a rtain but doubtful glory—and its myriad bulk itcounts the 4,483,249 of London and the 3,803,770 Berlin. Our country, so the statistic sharks ll us, has now no less than sixty-eight large cities, velve of which have more than a half-million ch of inhabitants. There is room among thes- r many vacations—and there is need of them. eed of vacations for lungs poisoned with carbon onoxide, vacations for ears vibrated continuously varied clangor, vacations for eyes whose green elds and trees must be occasionally sought in rtificially-spaced parks worn by many feet.

The speeding-up of industry to answer the deands of the Great War, the lure of high wages nd short hours, has hastened, during the past ecade, the rather constant cityward tread. Rural ounties and small towns were drained increasingly, s the last census revealed. A "back to the land" ovement, which began during Roosevelt's term the White House and which had been worthily xploited, died when the war was born and has ad no rebirth since. Yet the great background f the land is always there; its call is as constant the opportunities it offers. It spreads too unheeded its chances of normal existence while our ities increase their crowded competitiveness and heir methods of hasty unnatural living and dying.

No country more than our own offers such ossibilities of a vacation, not of weeks, but of a ifetime. We are not like the swarming, bounded uropean nations who must send their surplus umanity to spread over colonial possessions rested from weaker races. Here in our many-limated, ocean-bordered sweep of continent we ave millions of acres ready for the touch of man's and, the magic of toil and the aid of science-purred tillage. Fifty years ago our Federal-wned land totalled 1,160,000,000 acres. Although his huge domain has been undergoing reduction t the rate of 10,000,000 acres a year, yet 182,000,000 emain today. And this does not take into account he 375,000,000 unsurveyed Alaskan acres! Dwell-rs in the West, through experience and otherwise, ave long been familiar with homesteading and our ountry's store of vacant public lands, but in the East, I think, few people realize the extent of Uncle Sam's empire of open spaces. At present, ur public domain stands reduced to lands in wenty-four States—the largest acreage being in Nevada (52,429,745), and the smallest in Kansas 2,944). Utah offers over 26,000,000 acres and California over 18,000,000. Wyoming and New Mexico have more than 16,000,000 acres each, and Arizona, Idaho, Colorado and Montana string along not far behind. Just think of what even one million acres of land means! Imagine stand ing alone in the center of such an expanse and look-ing toward the horizon. At trying times I have been tempted to think of Billy in such a lonely situation and myself safely separated on the next million acre tract. Here are indeed lands for vacationing—God's own summer resort. If ever the little mountain paradise that Bill and I know becomes too crowded, and the shy heifers are driven from the mountainside, it is sure that Bill and I will turn our eyes and suitcases westward, with tourist tickets tucked in our Panama hats. Yes; we will become happy homesteaders—and perhaps raise goats!

All our many cities are like fast-growing mush-rooms—or should I say toadstools?—springing up in the wide midst of the yet great fields and forests of our country. There is more than room for all the crowded inhabitants of big towns to stretch and vacationize, for one or many summers. Room for them to go where sunlight is not filtered through soft coal smoke, or the south wind blows flavored with soap, glue and gasolene. Here in New York, skyscraper after skyscraper rises, shouldering anew into the murky horizon, patiently girdered to new altitudes by antlike humans of the building trades. And as they are built, they are filled with other antlike humans chained to desk and telephone, making strange motions and noises which they translate into terms of existence. But Bill and I will soon be surrounded by more ancient, more imperishable, more mighty skyscrapers, and the mark of the tools upon their granite towers and cornerstones will be from the hand of God, the Master Builder, who offers homes and vacations to the prodigal sons of men.

And now for the letters:

REXBURY, 76 SOUTH 2nd WEST, IDAHO.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

This is a blast of hot air from a cousin from the Snake River valley. Naturally you all praise your state, but listen: Idaho could make most any state in the Union look like the cat's meow beside her.

I am sixteen years of age, five feet, four inches tall, weigh 116 pounds and have golden brown hair and blue eyes. There is almost a dimple in my left cheek.

In the summer I live on a 1,500 acre dry farm, eleven miles east of Rexbury. We have two cars, so I come to town quite often. I am chief cook. I like the farm 'cause I can ride horses, fish—yes, there's a creek called Moody—kill snakes, swim, and do most anything that appeals to one who loves the beauties of nature.

I ride horses every day and always wear a big brown sombrero, riding pants, boy's shirt, boots, and sometimes a pair of angora chaps. I haven't a horse and outfit of my own yet, but I use my brother's horse, saddle, bridle, spurs and martingale. I like cowboys—think they're grand. I try to look like one myself, but, you see, being a dry farm cook it's rather hard to be a cowpuncher, too.

Quite often we have a dust storm that would knock you on your ear. Rocks that would almost bang your eye out blow with them. Don't visit me while one of these is on, Uncle.

Uncle Lisha, besides coyotes and rattlesnakes, there s something here much more weird and mysterious. This is a headless woman. She lives in a cave up in a cliff in one of the canyons. She rides a white horse. I thought I saw her once, but that night I didn't stop for a second glance. I suppose most of you don't believe this. Well, I don't really believe it myself.

That Golden artist from New Mexico hasn't anything on me, 'cause I'm an artist, too—and a poet besides. I can play a ukelele, harmonica, and I can whistle and play cards. Hot dog!

That is only half of me, Uncle. The other half is that I like town and refinement. In the winter I live at our home in Rexbury and go to the Ricks Normal College. I am a junior, and secretary and treasurer of the student body. Also I'm reporter of my class. I greatly enjoy dancing and we have some wonderful dancing parties at our school.

Love to everybody, GLADYS WOOD.

Gosh all rattlesnakes, Gladys, but a letter like yours will make all the girl cousins in the East sit up and take notice once or twice! Careful statistical calculation has convinced me that out of every 1000 of my eastern nieces, exactly 997 want to be girl cowpunchers. Or anyhow be able to ride a horse and wear a big brown sombrero. And then to think of having a pair of angora chaps always hanging around! Many of the eastern girls have plenty of chaps, but these are always the plain, safety-razored type of fellows, and most of 'em couldn't raise a whisker if they tried. What a lovely long mustache an Idaho angora chap must have! It must be great for you to be able to ride out with one of these handsome fellows on each side of your saddle.

I should think it would be hard to be a dry farm cook, Gladys. It takes water even to boil potatoes. Yet you do not complain about your duties. I certainly am surprised your angora cowpunchers do not get tired of a constantly dehydrated (Billy supplied me with this last word!) diet. Of course there is some variety—you can have dried apples, dried codfish, beans, cornflakes and saratoga chips, for instance. But if you keep your boarders moist and happy on such fare, you are some little chefess, I'll say.

Gladys, all the things you can do with either half of your bi-personality marks you as an accomplished cousin. I am proud of you, of both halves, the refined and the raw. You must not let that headless woman catch you while you are out riding some night with those angora chaps, and you are listening to the martingale sing high up on the cliffs of the canyon.

PARKERSBURG, R. F. D. 5, WEST VA.

DEAR UNCE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Please let me in, now that there is plenty of grass for Billy to eat. My sister died a few days ago. She was nearly ten months old. I have three sisters and two brothers dead and one sister and a brother living.

Everybody listen, especially around Arkansas: Have any of you heard of Frank Ford Rhodes—or he may call himself Frank Ford? If you have, please write to me.

I am going to be a lawyer when I grow up. I am studying law now. I have learned one thing: When you are a lawyer you must not get mad and say something that you ought not to say. We must keep calm.

I am thirteen years old; five feet, four inches tall; have brown hair and eyes and a very freckled face. I wouldn't take any amount of money for my beautiful freckles. How about you, Uncle Lisha? In school I am in the eighth grade.

I would like the cousins to write to me, especially the boys that are to be lawyers. I am not going to be a criminal lawyer.

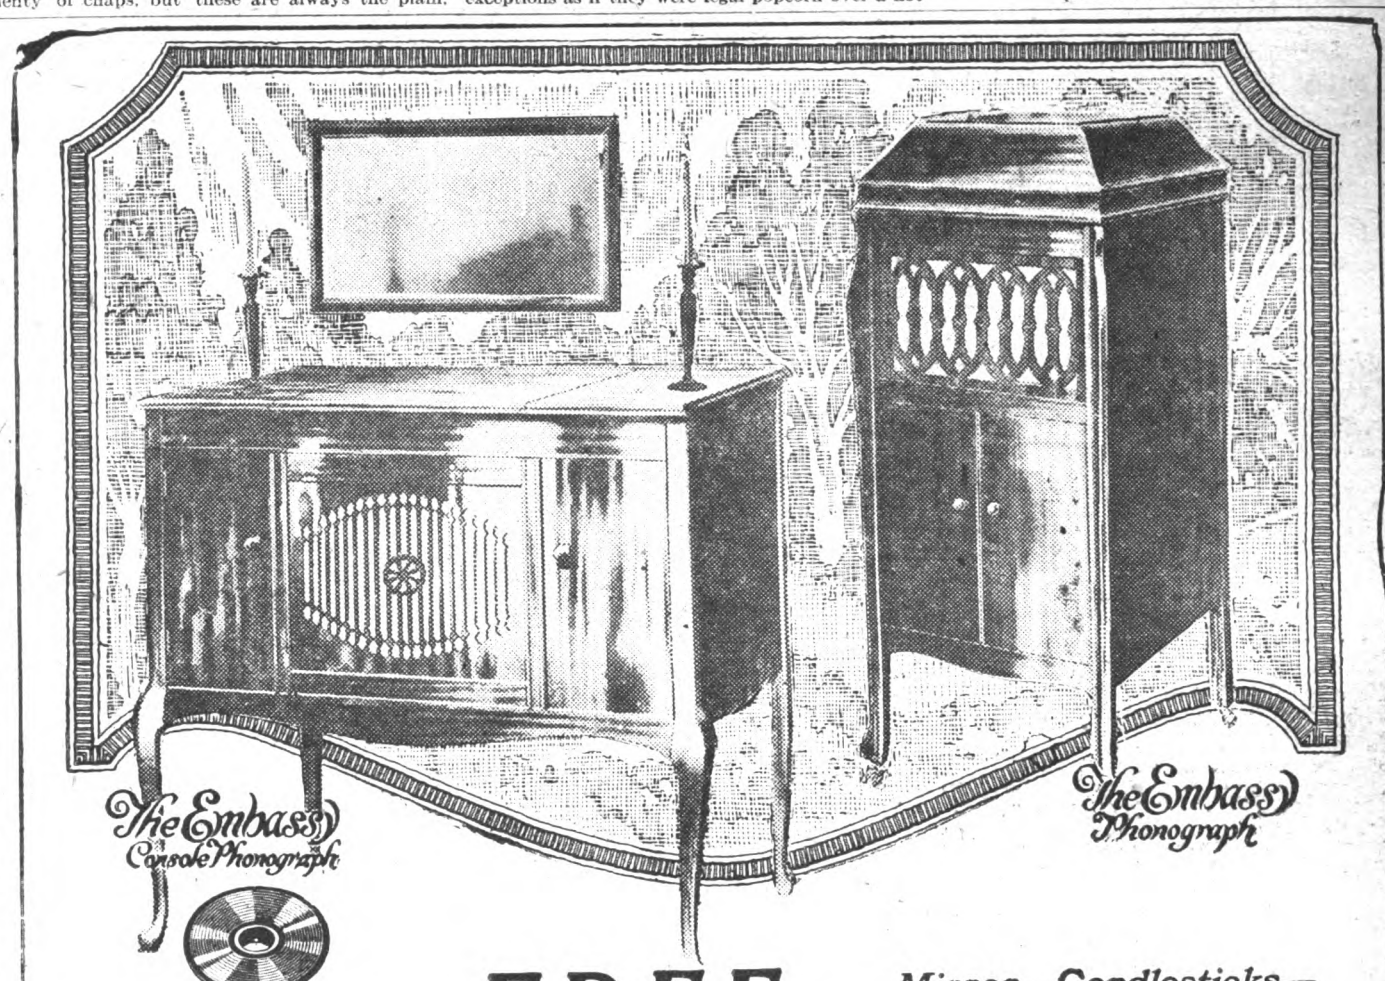
Is Dallas O. Goff listening in on my letter? If he is I hope he will write to me.

There are several Indian mounds on our farm. I am going to dig them open.

From your new cousin, HERMAN MATHENY.

Herman, you must miss your baby sister and you will have to love the sister you have left all the more. I'm glad you are studying law, if this has already taught you that you "must keep calm." However, Herman, I fear you have not much frequented law courts during your thirteen years of law study, otherwise you would have found out that lawyers, as a race, do not keep calm. Why they jump about as full of interruptions, objections and exceptions as if they were legal popcorn over a hot griddle! They shake their fingers at the jury, they scare the witnesses, they suggest that the entire country will go to ruin and the heavens fall if their client does not win, and altogether they do not in any way maintain that serenity and calm which you hold up as a legal ideal. Although you may be a little mistaken on this calm question, Herman, I surely think you are right in not becoming a criminal lawyer. I have heard of a good-sized Texas town where a stranger stopped a citizen on Main Street and asked: "Can you tell me if you have a good criminal lawyer in this town, sir?" The native paused reflectively, and then replied: "Well, stranger, some of us thinks we have, but we have never been able to prove anything against him yet." Lots of towns have lawyers like that.

No, don't you be a criminal lawyer, Herman. Better sell your freckles to a rug factory or dig open those Indian mounds for a living.



SPOFFORD, TEXAS.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

I have just finished reading the cousins' letters and I sure enjoyed them. I thought I would write you a few lines and let you know how I enjoy COMFORT from cover to cover—but I love the League of Cousins' department best of all. Some of the letters certainly amuse me—especially your answers to them. I love to read them for they are too funny for anything. I like to read letters that describe the writer's home town. I despise to hear people run down a place they live in, or to hear them always talking about someone—they wouldn't do this, or they wouldn't do that. It makes me sick to listen to such talk. It has always been a maxim of mine: If you can't say a good word of some one, don't say anything. Sometimes strangers come here and don't like it; they run the town down and say they are going back to "God's country." After all, I don't blame them so much if they came from a country which is green and pretty, for then this place must look awful bare to them. I have spent most of my life in Kinney county, but not always in the town of Spofford. Everybody that does not live in Spofford makes fun of it, but some of the best people on earth live here. I like Spofford and I don't like to hear things said against it. It is a small village where everybody knows everybody else's business. This makes it interesting. We have a nice Methodist church to which I belong, also a nice school. Our life is what we make it. Don't you think so, Uncle Lisha? We can be cheerful and happy and make those happy around us, or we can be unhappy and miserable, have an attack of the blues and wish we were somewhere else, etc. Don't ever think I have the blues, for I don't. Life is too short for that. What makes people have the blues anyway, Uncle? I think it is because we get to thinking too much of ourselves, or pitying ourselves. A good thing for the blues is to read the League of Cousins. I have thought of cutting out the letters and pasting them in a scrap book, but I have not done it yet.

Well, summer has rolled around to us, and I am glad of it. This country is very level and I have al-

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 31.)

Disc instruments which play all makes of disc records.

FREE — Mirror—Candlesticks—Records, 20 Selections

$1.00 After Free Trial!

This offer will remove all risk and doubt. It enables you to hear the wonderful tones of the Embassy and to inspect the beautiful design — your choice of upright or console models.

Either of these handsome instruments will be sent on FREE Trial. You are the sole judge. Get one of the beautiful outfits in your home and see the distinction it gives. The gracious lines of the cabinets will delight you. Both models are most attractively designed with graceful curved legs and carved grill work. They are dignified and aristocratic pieces of furniture as well as sweet toned musical instruments. Picture this beautiful outfit in your home, above the console, you hang the mahogany console mirror, and on either side, you stand the candlesticks. Twenty selections will be included absolutely FREE with either the console or upright model. Send the coupon. Let us tell you about our free trial offer on either of these instruments.

FREE with Console Model

Popular Console Mirror: Of plate glass with green gold frame harmonizing in design with the Embassy console model.

Elegant Polychrome Candlesticks: Together with the mirror these candlesticks complete the console outfit, making it exceptionally attractive for the living room or hall.

20 Selections of Your Own Choice: We send a list from which you may choose 10 double-face records.

FREE with Upright Model

10 Double-Face Records: 20 selections of your own choice are given you free with the Embassy upright. We send a list from which you may choose.

Mail this Coupon!

Write for full information about this remarkable phonograph offer. Let us tell you about the handsome mirror, and the pair of elegant polychrome candlesticks and the 20 selections which you get absolutely free. Just think! You can take your choice of these two beautiful models. Give the one you choose a free trial in YOUR OWN HOME. You keep the phonograph only if you like it. You don't send a penny until after the free trial and then only $1.00. You pay the remainder in easy monthly installments. Besides, you receive the handsome mirror and pair of elegant polychrome candlesticks if you choose the console model; and 20 selections of music FREE with either the upright or console model. Check the instrument you desire. Send the coupon today!

F. K. Babson, 19th St. and Marshall Blvd., Dept. C-370, Chicago
Canadian Office: 62 Albert St., Winnipeg, Man.

F. K. BABSON, Dept. C-370
19th Street and Marshall Blvd., Chicago, Ill.
Canadian Office: 62 Albert Street. Winnipeg, Man.

Gentlemen: Please send me full particulars of your free trial offer on the Embassy Phonograph

☐ Console Model ☐ Upright Model

Name.....

Address.....

.....

Be sure to check the model you are interested in.

Molly's Ghost Materializes

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

LOOKING at his case critically, Rodney Macavoy was satisfied that his decline and fall had begun on that May day, now four months past, when he and the little girl from Maine had defied the proprieties by going over together to Long Island.

They had had a capital little lunch, and after the lunch they had taken a walk on a little beach, and had sat down quite close behind a boulder, and Rodney had looked at Molly, and Molly had looked at Rodney, and the inevitable had happened, which Molly enjoyed immensely, but which Rodney enjoyed more. Rodney knew all the while, of course, that they had not any business whatever to be off alone on a cruise of this nature; and this knowledge, perhaps, made him regard the cruise in the light of a lark of quite exceptional jollity. Molly, not having the faintest suspicion that she was anything less than a model of decorum, simply was in raptures. With a delightful frankness she repeatedly told Rodney what a wonderfully lovely time she was having.

Altogether, it had been an original sort of an experience for Rodney; and for this easy-going young artist, original experiences had an exceedingly great charm. Looking back, therefore, in the light of subsequent events, upon that particular day, he decided that it was the Long Island expedition that had sapped the foundations of his previously well-fortified heart. Anyhow, without regard to when it began, he felt satisfied in his own mind that he was in love now—head over heels!

Lee, whose studio was just across the way, happened to drop in upon him at the very moment that he had arrived at this, to him, astonishing conclusion. Lee was not a very promising specimen of a confidant, but Rodney was so full of his discovery that before he could check himself he had blurted out: "Old man, I've been and gone and done it! I'm in love!"

"No? Are you though, really?" asked Lee, in his funny little mincing way. "Why, that's very interesting. And who are you in love with?"

By this time Rodney had perceived the absurdity, not to say the stupidity, of taking Lee into his confidence. So he laughed and answered:

"With my own laziness, of course. I've been thinking what a precious ass I have been making of myself in working over a confounded picture. Now that it's finished, I don't know what to do with it, and I've wasted a solid month that I might have devoted to scientific loafing. And it's because I see my folly and am determined to be wise again that I've fallen in love with my own laziness once more."

"Oh!" said Lee, in a tone of disappointment, "I thought that you were in earnest; and I was ever so glad, for I really am in love, Rodney, in love awfully! And—and I thought that if you were in love too, you'd like to hear about it. Wouldn't you like to hear about it, anyway?"

"Of course I would, old man. Just wait till I fill my pipe—I can be more sympathetic over a pipe, you know. Now fire away," Rodney continued, as he settled himself comfortably in an armchair and pulled hard at his pipe to give it a good start. "Now fire away, my stricken deer. Though the herd all forsake thee, thy home is still here, you know. Rest on this manly bosom and tell your tale of sorrow. Are you very hard hit, Lee?"

"Oh, I am—indeed I am," groaned Lee. "You see, it's—it's Molly James."

"The hell it is!" exclaimed Rodney, suddenly sitting bolt upright in his chair, and glaring at Lee through the smoke.

"Don't—please don't look at me like that, Rodney. Surely, there's no reason why you should be angry with me."

"N—no" conceded Rodney, slowly. "I don't think there is." And then, as he sank back in the chair, and his ferocious expression gave place to a quiet grin, he added briskly, "No, I'm sure there's not. I was surprised, that's all. I always look like that when I'm a good deal surprised."

"Well, I must say I'm glad I don't surprise you often. You have no idea how savage you looked, old fellow. I'm not easily frightened, you know—" and the little man put on a look of inoffensive defiance as he spoke, that gave him somewhat the air of a valorously disposed lamb—but I do assure you that the way you looked at me gave me the creeps. Just let me know, won't you, when you feel yourself beginning to be surprised the next time, so that I may be prepared for it?"

"I'll do better than that, Lee; I'll promise not to let you surprise me. And now go ahead with the love-story, old man; I'm sorry for having interrupted you so rudely."

"There isn't any more yet to tell," said Lee, dolefully. "I wish there was."

"Nonsense, man! Why, that isn't any love-story at all. There must be more of it. What have you said to her? What has she said to you?"

"Nothing," answered Lee, dismally; "that's just it, you see. That's what makes me so low in my mind over it. I haven't said anything, and she hasn't said anything. If either of us had said anything, I'd know better where I was. But neither of us has spoken, and so I don't know where I am at all—not the least bit in the world." Lee hid his face in his hands and groaned.

Presently he went on again: "I've made efforts to speak, Rodney; I've made repeated efforts—but, somehow, they've none of them come to anything. Indeed, I've never had but one fair chance; for, every time, just as I've got to the point when I was ready to say something—something that really would have a meaning to it, you know— something has happened to stop me."

"And what stopped you that one time when something didn't happen to stop you?"

"You—you mustn't think me weak, Rodney, but—but the truth is that I was so dr—dreadfully upset that what I wanted to say wouldn't come at all. We were sitting on the James' veranda—the moon was sh—shining—and—and all the rest were inside listening to Mrs James wh—who was singing. I couldn't have had a better ch—chance, you see."

"I should think not!" growled Rodney.

"B—but the more I tried, th—the more the right words wouldn't come at all—at all. And what do you sup—suppose I ended by asking her?"

"If she didn't think you were an intolerable idiot. And, of course, she said Yes!"

"Don't be too ha—hard on me, Rodney. You've no idea what a trying situation it was. No; what I ended by asking her was, 'What was the food most commonly eaten in Maine?' I didn't say it in just a commonplace way, you know. I threw a lot of feeling into my voice, and I looked at her beseechingly. And—and I think, old fellow, that sh—she knew that my words meant more than they expressed, for there was a strange tremor in her own voice as she answered: 'Corn-meal mush'; and, as soon as she had uttered those brief words she got up and rushed into the parlor as though something were after her. This was a very extraordinary thing for her to do, and it shows to my mind that she did not dare to trust herself with me for a moment longer. And—and I am the more confirmed in this opinion by the fact that when I followed her, in a minute or two—for at first I was too much surprised by her sudden departure to move—I found her leaning upon her father's shoulder in hysterics—laughing and crying all at once, I solemnly assure you. Don't you think there's hope for me in all this Rodney? Don't yo—you think that her saying 'Corn-meal mush' in that st—strange, tremulous tone, and then having hysterics after it, meant more th—than I cou—could understand at the time?"

"Yes," answered Rodney, decidedly, "I think it did. To be quite frank with you, Lee, I don't think that you fully understand just what she meant even yet."

"Oh, thank you, thank you, Rodney. You don't know how much good you are doing me by your kind, encouraging words."

Rodney's conscience did prick him a little when Lee said this—but only a little, for his resentment of what he styled in his own mind Lee's confounded impudence in venturing to make love to the little girl from Maine, was too keen for him to give the unlucky little man mercy in the least degree.

For a while there was silence. Rodney pulled away steadily at his pipe, and Lee stared gloomily into vacancy, and gently wrung his hands. At last he spoke:

"Rodney, do you believe that there is anything in—in spiritualism?"

"There's dollars in it if only you can make it go. Why? Are you thinking of taking it up as a profession?"

"Oh, you don't understand me at all, Rodney. I don't want to be a medium. What I mean is, do you believe in the reality of spirit manifestations?"

Rodney was about to say "Spirit hell," but checked himself, and answered diplomatically: "Well, you see I have had no experience in that line, and so my opinion isn't worth having. Have you ever tackled the spirits yourself, Lee?"

"Ye—es," answered Lee, hesitatingly, "I have."

"And what sort of a time did you have with them?"

"Well—but you won't laugh at me, will you Rodney? I'm really in earnest, you know; and if you only want to make a joke of it, I won't go on."

"Don't you see how serious I am?"

"Yes, I believe in the spirits thoroughly, Rodney. Every action of my life for years past has been guided by them. And I believe that it is because I have not their guidance in this great matter of my love that I am going all wrong."

"What's the reason they won't guide you now? Have you had a row with them?"

"Rodney, I do wish that you wouldn't speak in that irreverent way. No; the trouble is that the medium whom I have been in the habit of consulting for years has—has gone away. In point of fact," Lee blushed a little, "He has been arrested for swindling. It is a great outrage, of course, and I am desperately sorry for him. But I am more sorry for myself. You see, getting a new medium is a very difficult matter. It is not only that he must be a good medium intrinsically, but he must possess a nature that easily becomes sympathetic with mine. When I began this conversation it was in the faint hope that you also might be a believer and might be able to help me in my quest; but I see now that this hope has no foundation. I must search on, alone; and until I find what I require I shall toss aimlessly upon the sea of life like a rudderless ship in a storm. Don't think me ungrateful, old fellow, because I am so melancholy. Your sympathy has cheered me up ever so much. Indeed, I haven't been so light-hearted since I don't know when." And with tears in his eyes and sorrow stamped upon every line of his face, Lee gently minced his way out of the room.

"I say, Lee," Rodney called after him, "I've a notion that I know a medium who is just the very one you want. I'll look him up, and if he's what I think he is, I'll pass him along to you."

"Oh, thank you, thank you very much, Rodney," said Lee, putting his head in at the door again. "It's ever so good of you to think of taking this trouble on my account. But if you will find me a new medium—a good one, you know, that I can trust implicitly—you really will make a new man of me;" and uttering these hopeful words, Lee closed the door.

For an hour or more Rodney continued to sit and smoke in the armchair. During this period he grinned frequently, and once he laughed aloud. When at last he stood up and knocked the ashes from his third pipe, it was with the satisfied air of a man who has formulated an idea.

* * * * * * * *

And Molly threw herself with all the vim of her eighteen years into the part assigned to her by Rodney in the realization of his idea.

"It's delightful, Rodney. It's perfectly sc—scrumptious. Really, I didn't know that you had the wit to think of doing anything so funny. Of course, I'll keep as dark about it as possible. But I'll have to have some one along with me, you know. And I'll tell you who it will be—that nice Desiree Lamoine! She's just as bad as they all say I am—I don't think that I'm very bad, Rodney; do you?—only she's sly, and knows how to pretend that she isn't. May I tell her about it, and ask her to help us? You'd better say 'Yes', for unless she comes in, I'll stay out, you know."

Therefore, the aid of Madame Lemoine was sought, and was given with effusion, for marriage had not tended to make her take a view of life much more serious than that which she had entertained when her scandalous flirtation with the "Marquis" had driven poor Henri almost to extremities. So these three lively young persons laid their intriguing heads together—and if Lee's ears did not burn, it was no fault of theirs.

It was the morning after this conference that Rodney dropped in upon Lee in his studio.

"Oh, I'm so glad to see you, Rodney," said Lee. "I was just wishing for you to come in and tell me that you've found a medium."

"That's just what I came to tell you, Lee."

"Goodness gracious! Rodney, you don't mean to say that you have—that you have found a medium?" exclaimed Lee in great excitement, springing up from his chair, and hopping all over the room, for all the world like a cricket.

"That's just what I do mean to say, old man; but I wish that you wouldn't jump around so. It disturbs the atmosphere, you know."

"Oh! I beg your pardon. But do tell me about him. Is he really a good medium? Have you tested him?"

"He isn't a 'he' at all; he's a she."

"A 'she'?"

"Yes; a woman medium, you know."

"Oh," said Lee, doubtfully, and with less brightness in his face, "I've never tried a woman medium. Who is she?"

"She's a theosophist."

"A what?"

"A theosophist—a member of that wonderful and mysterious Oriental Cult that Blavatsky has expounded so ably. But of course you know all about theosophism."

"I—I know about it in a general way, you know, it's something like animal magnetism, isn't it?"

"Yes, it's something of that general nature"—Rodney found that he was getting into rather deep water himself, and he floundered a little in getting out of it. "Yes, it's like animal magnetism in a general sort of way. And having this magnetic basis, you see, of course, it affords a wonderfully perfect channel for communication with the spirit world."

"Of course," Lee assented.

"And this particular medium," Rodney continued, speaking with confidence again, now that the awkward turn in the conversation was safely past, "is without exception the most extraordinary medium that even theosophism has produced. She does everything that ordinary mediums do, and some most astonishing things that they don't. Of course you've seen materialization, Lee?"

"Oh, yes, repeatedly."

"It's a Nasty, Mean Trick!"

"But of people who were dead?"

"Of course."

"Well, this theosophist will show you—will actually show you, materializations of the living!"

"You don't say!" said Lee, greatly interested.

"It's a fact, I assure you. This has never been done before, and even she has been able to do it only recently—after twelve years of study among the oldest Pajamas of the Cult in India. It's wonderful!"

"Wonderful!—Wonderful!" exclaimed Lee.

"Right you are, my boy. She is the most wonderful medium that the world has ever known. She is—she is what you would call a regular daisy, and no mistake!"

"And when can I see her, and where? Oh, Rodney, my heart is beginning to brighten again. I'm sure that she will set me in the right way about—about Molly, you know."

It was with some difficulty that Rodney restrained his strong desire to kick Lee for this free use of Molly's name. But he did restrain himself, and answered: "You shall see her this very night, and in my studio. She is here in New York only for a day or two—she starts for India again at the end of this week—and has no regular place for her seances, so I have arranged with her to come to my studio this evening at eight o'clock. Will that suit you?"

"Yes, yes, and thank you a thousand times, Rodney. I shall be grateful to you all my life for what you have done for me."

"Will you, though? Don't be too sure about that," said Rodney, with a queer smile. "Good-by till eight o'clock."

* * * * * * * * *

Egyptian darkness reigned in Rodney's studio when Lee entered it at eight o'clock that evening. Lee did not more than half like this gloom and mystery. Rodney, leading him to a seat, felt that he was trembling. "Has the Indian lady come yet?" he asked in a shaky voice.

"The theosophist? Yes, here she is. Permit me to present to you, Madame, an earnest seeker after truth."

"It is well," was answered in a deep voice, that quavered as though with suppressed emotion. "What seeks this seeker?"

"Now fire away and ask about Molly," Rodney whispered.

"Mustn't I call up an advising spirit first? That's the usual way of beginning a seance, you know."

"No; with the theosophists the custom differs a little. Being more potent than ordinary mediums, they have no need of the advising spirit. Now just suppose you go right ahead and demand a materialization of Miss James and then have things out with her?"

"You don't mean to say that the medium can do that?"

"Indeed theosophists don't seem t power is he it for you."
solemn tone, visible prese
As Rodney room there passed slowl they beheld
Molly herse apparition s
Lee was s that he was awful power sway, so far countered in tions, that a tion started
"Well, yo you anythin
ask me abou tone and ma too much for "Rodney! to get away invoked!"
"That's a isn't it?" an amount of s be called ba time that yo know it!"
wraith faded ished into d
"Oh, take feebly. In heap of mise
"All right,
until I see t
Lee heard momentary when a cur raised and as the sound o him a little ney to guid denly the w audible.
"You sha
"I shall!
a lovely gho
Then ther in a crash, a the fallen s kissing Moll was disclose mained stan apparition h ing and goi accounted f arranged so outer side o
the curtains.
As he sat
these severa tions had be painfully rea a de lit ro hi sh ro
M an us gr it.
fo
I' yo aw
"Well, I away with y a little in spi
"Hadn't y a touch of d
"Don't you that you'd be Molly a mon hand over hi and would be
"All right.
just as lief d tainly will sa have a kiss; j
you know."
And Madar assumed an
"Ah, my chi
you the bless in the play!"
Rodney an plishing thei their running a mode of d turously, bec
she suspected pirate."
So thus it

The Geolo mining indus out products
Of this total to the deposi
Alaska have ladium, tin, coal, petrole barite, and deposits that sulphur.
During for of Alaska has $218,000,000
The first not Territory was placers in reached its gradual impr bly by the u amounting to
In the past
545,000,000 p

It is usele empty place

The Pretty Girls' Club

Conducted by Katherine Booth

An Ankle or Two

HIGH heels have done considerable damage to feet, producing bunions because the feet have been pressed forward in a shoe thus made too short until the large toe has been pushed out of position at the joint; producing corns by too much pressure: cutting into the top of the instep where the edge of the pump often binds too tightly: and last but not least, teaching the foot to run over at the heel.

This latter condition means that the ankle has formed the habit of turning either outward or inward. Either position makes an ugly foot and an enlarged ankle, so we should begin to look our feet over with a careful eye and see if they are in need of our attention.

They are? I thought so!

The first thing to do is to find out where our shoes are in error. A shoe should fit close under the instep, firmly across the instep whether buttoned or strapped, and should have space beyond the toe so that the latter does not touch the end of the shoe. A medium heel is better than either one very low or very high. A high heel distorts the foot, a very low heel sometimes does not give sufficient support to the arch of a foot that has been accustomed to higher heels in the past. See that the arch is closely supported by the shoe you buy, and that the heel, of whatever height, has an ample base. A heel which is very small at the bottom gives one nothing substantial to stand upon and inevitably becomes run over through the weight of the body teetering and tottering upon it.

SECOND POSITION IN ANKLE-STRENGTHENING EXERCISES.

If you run your heel over, you should begin to strengthen your ankles at once, at the same time that you correct the height and size of your heels.

If your ankle inclines to turn inward your shoe in that case will wear on the inside of the heel—you must practice pigeon-toe walking in your room. Walk back and forth in your room for five or ten minutes at a time, with your toes turned in. And be sure in ordinary walking thereafter, never to turn your toes out. The best way to walk is with the toes pointed directly ahead in a straight line

If your ankles incline to turn outward—in which case your heels will be worn on the outer edge—practice for five or ten minutes, standing with the feet apart about twelve or fifteen inches, turning the ankle inward until it almost touches the floor. Practice this with both feet at once and without altering otherwise the position of the feet as a whole.

A good exercise to strengthen the ankle and make it better able to keep upright and avoid turning in either direction is to stand with the heels together, toes at an angle, thus forming a triangle. Now raise the left heel and move it to the left until it forms an oblique angle with the toe; at the same time raise the right toe without raising the heel and move it to the left to meet the left toe. This will form another triangle, only the apex or point of the triangle will be formed by the toes, where to begin with it was formed by the heels.

Now raise the left toe without raising the heel, and move it to the left again, while at the same time raising the right heel without raising the right toe, and bringing the heel over to meet the left heel, thus forming a triangle such as you started with. In other words, when you raise the left toe and move it left, you at the same time raise the right heel and move it left; when you raise the left heel and move it left, you raise the right toe and move it left. Practice this slowly at first, then more and more rapidly, until you can do it with some speed and cross your room with this exercise in very quick time. This strengthens the muscles of the ankles.

And speaking of ankles, girls, don't forget to take a last look at the stockings which cover them, before you leave your bedroom. There should not be a wrinkle to mar their smoothness, and the seam in the back of the stocking should be exactly in the middle of the back of the leg.

Answers to Questions

DANVILLE—You should deny yourself all sweets for a time, and be very sparing in the use of starchy foods. You say you are not a large eater, but you probably choose foods which make fat instead of muscle. So confine yourself for a time to lean meats, vegetables with little if any butter with them, and fruits. Eat no cake, pie, cream on berries, preserves, candy, ice-cream, etc And remember that potato and white bread are two of the most fattening of foods, so cut out both for a time. You will have plenty to eat with all the other vegetables at your command, fruits, and lean meats. Chew your food thoroughly, do not drink with your meals, and do not eat anything at all between meals. Under this regime you should lose a few pounds rather soon Supplement the attention to diet by exercise. Here are two exercises which will do you good.

Good Reducing Exercise

Standing with the feet about eighteen inches apart, back straight, chin slightly raised, chest thrown out and shoulders dropped, raise the arms above the head, palm facing palm, elbows rigid. Inhale as you raise the arms above your head Now throw the arms, with palms together, out and down forcefully and back between the opened legs. Do not bend the knees, but bend only at the waist. As you throw the arms down, exhale. Raise the arms again, inhaling, throw them down and back, exhaling. Repeat ten to fifteen times, but never if you begin to feel dizzy.

Another Good Exercise

Standing with heels together, toes slightly pointed, back straight, head up, chest out, raise the arms above the head, palms facing out. Now throw the arms down and attempt to touch the floor in front of your toes. Keep the knees stiff. You will not be able to touch the floor at first probably, and even may not for some time, but practice this daily, throwing the arms down with force and straining the finger-tips toward the floor.

MICHIGAN.—I should not brush my hair or scalp for some time. It is possible you irritate it, or have irritated it in this way or by using too vigorous a comb. Try giving it an oil treatment. Use warm olive oil and medicine dropper. Part the hair from forehead to nape of neck and run the medicine dropper filled with oil along this part. Now part the hair again about an inch to the left, and use the medicine dropper, continuing this until you have gone over the whole scalp. Tie the hair up in a towel so that you will protect your pillow from grease, and go to bed. In the morning shampoo the hair, using warm water in which you have melted half a cake of shaved white household soap Rinse the hair thoroughly and dry in the sun, tossing the hair and sunning the scalp. Do not brush the hair for a few weeks, and do not let the comb touch the scalp. If you could use oil on your scalp in this way and let it stay without shampooing for a few days, renewing the oil each day, it would be a good thing for your scalp. Of course you will not look very attractive and you could only do this if you could stay in the house for that length of time. In the meantime, look after your general health. You say you are nervous, and that condition must have some cause Get plenty of sleep, take hot baths at night, take a nap in the daytime if possible, eat simple foods and masticate them thoroughly, drink plenty of water, take a glass of milk before breakfast and lunch and before bed. Be very careful to keep warm, especially your ankles. Why don't you read the book "Outwitting Your Nerves?" Handle your hair as little as possible, oil it as often as possible—though only if you do not have to shampoo it each time, for you must not shampoo oftener than once in two weeks—and probably three or four weeks would be better. Wipe the dust from your hair instead of brushing it.

DECATUR.—Blackheads and pimples come from incorrect habits of diet and perhaps not quite enough attention to the skin. Bathe the entire body daily and thoroughly. Read what I said last month to "Lassie of the Prairies," and follow directions. As to the rough elbows, use a nail brush or a camel's-hair complexion brush and scrub them each day with soapy water, then rinse in warm water You could rub a little cold cream into them Treat them this way each day. If your elbow looks larger than your arm it is up to you to exercise the rest of the arm and develop it or provide it with sufficient fat to make it the right size. You do not give your weight or height, but I think it possible you are somewhat below weight, how is that? If you are troubled with pimples, avoid sweets and greasy food, such as fat meats, gravy, pork, etc. Eat plenty of fruits. Be sure to include stewed prunes in your diet two or three times a week. Drink lots of water. Read my answers to Pretty Girls last month and this and follow the directions about general bodily health.

POINT THE TOE FORWARD IN WALKING.

GLADYS.—See my answer to "Lassie of the Prairies" in last month's COMFORT for a good formula for hand lotion. Use a few drops of benzoin in the water in which you wash your hands, and be careful to dry them thoroughly, using a good hand lotion afterward You probably use a little too much soap on both hands and face. About your face bathe it carefully, then when dry but still warm from the bathing, rub in a little cold cream. Never use powder without having first applied cold cream to the skin, wiping off all that the skin will not absorb with a bit of cotton. Perhaps your powder is not a very good brand. Note what I said to "Lassie" about blackheads. You seem to me to be over weight I should get rid of ten or fifteen pounds if I were you by cutting out sweets, potatoes and white bread and butter.

MRS. A. M.—No, removing adenoids earlier would not have caused a tendency to worry. Get rid of adenoids the moment you know they are there, and this holds true of children as well. Your big trouble is constipation. One's health is never good or body conditions satisfactory while this trouble exists You should see that your bowels move three times a day, not with cathartics but naturally. Drink eight to ten glasses of water, eat fruits and plenty of them, also green vegetables. Do not eat many concentrated foods, such as meats And for the time being cut out sweets. I approve of sweets, but only at meals and in moderate quantity, and when one has over-indulged oneself in sweets, there comes a time when one must cut them out altogether, to restore the proper balance. Later, it is possible to eat sweets again in moderate quantities and very occasionally. I do not think you are enough below weight for your height to bother about gaining from that standpoint, but I do believe you shoul concentrate on getting rid of constipation, for this piles up evils and ills from year to year. You could easily eat some bran cereal for breakfast, or sprinkle some table bran in with your oatmeal or other cereal. Eat prunes which have soaked all night and then been stewed for about an hour in the water in which they were soaked. Add no sugar, as prunes are sweet enough of themselves. Eat these every day. Raisins added to oatmeal are also good—the seedless kind. Eat spinach or other greens, lettuce with French dressing, in fact all green vegetables and fresh fruits. Melons, especially, will be good for the bowel condition. Better start out by taking a three quart enema, then the next morning drink two glasses of hot water, one when you rise, sipping it, and one about fifteen minutes later. Drink water in the middle of the morning, another glass half an hour before lunch, water in the afternoon and another glass half an hour before dinner. Do make up your mind that you will not be satisfied until your bowels are in perfect condition—then keep them so. Where one is constipated, potatoes and white bread are apt to keep up the condition, so you might cut them out for a time. Hot bread and griddle cakes, etc., are always inclined to be constipating. Your throat probably gets some of its trouble from your constipated condition which keeps your body full of impurities. However, rinse your mouth out night and morning, and once during the day, with some antiseptic solution or even with salt water, gargling as far down in the throat as possible.

PENNSYLVANIA.—For blackheads, see answer last month to "Lassie of the Prairies." For corns, the first thing is to alter the type of shoe you are wearing, and this is doubly true of bunions Bunions are caused by wearing a shoe too short so that the great toe is pressed upon and pinched out of shape You should wear a shoe one size and a half longer than your foot. This will bring the arch of the foot right over the arch of the shoe, where it will receive the proper support. And your toe will not be touched by the end of the shoe. Your toes should not feel any pressure from the shoe in length at all It will help somewhat to cure your bunions, after you have bought shoes which are much longer, if you will insert a pad of cotton between the great toe and the next toe, to push the great toe into a straighter position But nothing will do any good until you buy a much longer shoe and one that is not pointed For corns, try rubbing them off gently with pumice stone, then keeping them softened with vaseline put on every night and well rubbed in. This is a good way to treat toes which have not any corns to prevent corns from coming.

MILDRED.—Electrolysis is the best method of removing hair. But this requires a skilled operator, as the electric needle is inserted in the root of each hair and a current of electricity turned on the root to kill it. It costs five dollars an hour for treatment, but you can have quite a good many hairs removed in fifteen minutes even. The best home treatment of which I know is to dampen the hair one day with ammonia, and the next with peroxide, letting it dry on. The peroxide bleaches the hair and the ammonia in time kills the root. If the skin becomes irritated stop the treatment for a few days. This method requires considerable time, but is effective.

BROWN EYES.—Do not touch the "blood pimple" or the scar. Meddling with conditions like these sometimes brings about serious results. All you can do is to gently coat with cold cream, then dust over a little powder. In fact I should dislike using powder on either of them, for fear it might contain some ingredients which were injurious to them. I should let them alone unless on the advice of some very fine physician, for as I have said before, things of that kind can develop into most serious conditions if irritated. For the arm, one good way to develop the muscles where you do not want to develop the shoulder, is to clench the hand into a fist, then turn the fist outward as if trying to make a complete circle This exercises one set of muscles very thoroughly First turn the clenched hand outward and around as far as possible, then inward and under as far as possible, thus "wringing" the flesh of the arms.

Address all letters containing questions to KATHERINE BOOTH, care COMFORT,
AUGUSTA, MAINE.

A private in the United States army receives $1 a day, while soldiers in the British army receive 69 cents; in Japan, six cents; France, five cents, and Italy, four cents.

The Height of Ambition

"What is your ambition?"

"To be rich enough to own an automobile of my own."

"But you already own a car."

"I know that, but you don't know how tired I've grown of haying to argue with the wife and the daughter and the son every time I want to use it."

—Detroit Free Press.

To clear your skin

If your skin is red, rough, blotchy and clogged with dust and oil,—don't pinch it and press it. That increases the irritation and sometimes causes infection, should the sensitive skin become bruised by the finger nails.

What you need is a soap that will thoroughly but gently cleanse the skin,—to be followed by an ointment that will soften the dried particles imbedded in the pores, making it easy to remove them without injury to the skin.

Resinol Soap and Ointment meet these requirements and they do more. They build healthy skins and bring out the natural beauty. With every package is a booklet on the care of the skin, and the treatment of its disorders. Try Resinol and see why it's different.

Resinol

Your druggist sells the Resinol products (Ask for them)

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine from any druggist and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength Othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

GRAY OR FADED HAIR

Restored to its original color.

La Tulle's Herb Tea restores gray or faded hair to its natural color, beauty and softness. It will produce the most abundant tresses from dry, coarse and wiry hair. Prevents dandruff and falling hair. Promotes its growth and gives the hair a soft, glossy and healthy appearance. IT IS NOT A DYE. A package makes one pint. One package postpaid 30 cents, or five packages $1.

LA TULLE'S HERB CO., Dept. D,
1033 W. 39th Place,
LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

Clear Your Skin

Your skin can be quickly cleared of Pimples, Blackheads, Acne Eruptions on the face or body, Barbers Itch, Eczema, Enlarged Pores, Oily or Shiny Skin. FREE Write today for my FREE Booklet, "A CLEAR-TONE SKIN," telling how I cured myself after being afflicted for 15 years. $1000 Cash says I can clear your skin of the above blemishes.
E. S. GIVENS, 306 Chemical Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

FRECKLES

Risk a dime to get rid of them. Send your name and 10c, stamps or coin, to pay postage, and we'll mail you an extra large jar of Harwood's Freckle Cream; price, $1.25. If the freckles disappear within a month remit the price; otherwise return the unused portion of the jar.
Harwood Laboratories 408 Fox St., Aurora, Ill.

New Hair on Bald Heads

Try Kotalko free for falling hair, bald spots or dandruff. After being bald for years many persons report, they happily found Kotalko brought out a new, luxuriant growth. Kotalko is sold by all busy druggists, or a proof box will be mailed free to anyone who asks for it.
KOTALKO OFFICE, BG-124 Station L, NEW YORK

Kill The Hair Root

My method is the only way to prevent the hair from growing again. Easy, painless, harmless. No scars. Booklet free. Write today enclosing 3 stamps. We teach beauty culture.
D. J. MAHLER, 118-A, Manor Park, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Stillman's
Freckle Cream

Will remove your freckles or we agree to refund your money. It will whiten the skin and refine its texture. No bother—simply apply it before going to bed each night. Cannot grow hair. Two sizes 50c and $1 at all druggists. Be sure to ask for Stillman's—more girls use it than any other. Our free booklet "Beauty Parlor Secrets" describes treatment and gives many make-up hints. Get our special limited perfume offer. The Stillman Company, 59 Rosemary Lane, Aurora, Ill.

Write for booklet
"Beauty Parlor Secrets"
and free perfume offer

INECTO RAPID

GRAY HAIR BANISHED IN 15 MINUTES

ONLY three years ago, this statement was often questioned. Today it is accepted by countless thousands of women who have brought back their youthful looks through Inecto Rapid.

This preparation, the result of many years of research, actually banishes naturally gray, streaked or faded hair and gives to it the original color in 15 minutes. It also brings back all the natural brilliancy and texture.

Inecto Rapid has created a new art—the Art of Hair Tinting—and women of refinement and discrimination everywhere insist upon Inecto Rapid as against other hair colorings. Thousands of the highest class hairdressers throughout the country—the real authorities on hair treatment and hair coloring—use and endorse Inecto Rapid.

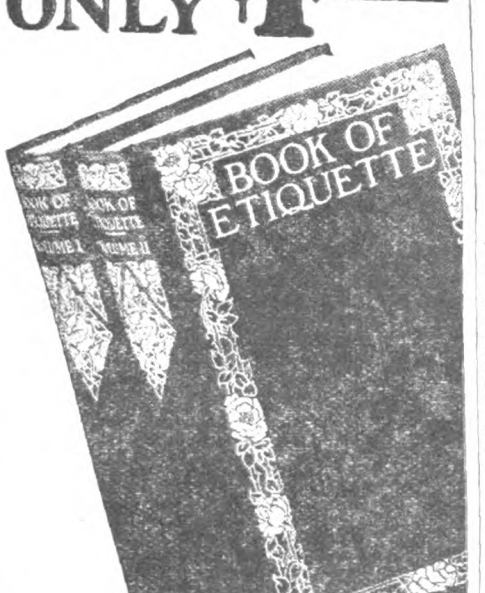
Inecto Rapid comes in 18 distinct shades and you can try it under our 10 specific, binding guarantees. If is is not all that we claim, your money will be returned without question.

SEND NO MONEY

Merely ask us to send you full particulars of Inecto Rapid, together with our Beauty Analysis Chart, Form DD-4.

INECTO, INC.
Laboratories and Salons
33-35 West 46th Street, New York

ARE YOU A LADY WITH HAIR ON YOUR FACE who wants to get rid of it??



If so don't write a letter, but just mail us your name and address and enclose two stamps and we will send you free confidential information how to remove it at home in a simple, safe, quick way that will surprise you. Address
L. L. ROOM 700, J. 1465 BROADWAY, N. Y.

Comfort Baby's Skin With Cuticura Soap And Fragrant Talcum

For sample Cuticura Talcum, a fascinating fragrance, Address Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. D, Malden, Mass.

FRECKLES fade and disappear when you use "MURILLO" SUPREME FRECKLE CREAM a sure remedy. Let us prove it. Send 10ct for trial package and three other beauty preparations. MURILLO CHEM. CO., Dept. 10, Aurora, Ill.

NOW ONLY $1.98

The Famous Book of Etiquette

An Amazing Bargain. Nearly Half-Million Sold at $3.50. Special Limited Offer at Only $1.98. Send Your Order Now.

THE Book of Etiquette needs no introduction. It is the recognized authority on the subject among people of culture, refinement and good breeding everywhere. It covers every phase of proper conduct and manners—at the wedding, dance, dinner, on the street, in the theatre—at all places and at all times. Nothing is omitted. It saves you from distressing embarrassments which arise at the most unexpected moments—gives you delightful ease, poise, confidence in yourself.

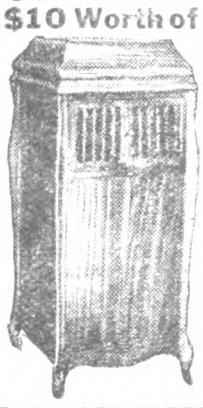
Nearly 500,000 people have paid the regular publisher's price of $3.50 for this wonderful 2-volume social guide. Only an unusual lull in the book business has prompted the publishers to make this extraordinary short-time reduction in price. When the orders reach a certain number this offer will be immediately withdrawn.

Send No Money

Drop us a line—a postcard will do—and the famous two-volume Book of Etiquette will be mailed at once. Pay the postman only $1.98 (plus a few cents postage) and the books are yours. But remember—this remarkable offer may be withdrawn at any moment. So don't delay. Send your order now. If you are not entirely satisfied, return the books within 5 days and your $1.98 will be promptly refunded.

Nelson Doubleday Inc., Dept. 578, Garden City, N.Y.

Only $12.50 Down



Brings Latest C Melody American Professional Saxophone Outfit, Complete

—then just $10 per month for 9 months! American Professional Sax, none finer made, same as used by Benson Victor Artist Orchestra, Paul Biese, other famous artists; in perfect tune; has all latest improvements, easy action, beautiful finish. Outfit includes fine, plush-lined, Artist Case, Lyre, Mouthpiece, Carrying Strap, Self-Instructor.

Sent on 6 days trial; money-back guarantee. For sale by your Music Merchant. Write for catalog; or ORDER NOW—and be playing in short time!

LYON & HEALY, 68-90 Jackson Blvd., CHICAGO

30 DAYS FREE TRIAL
$10 Worth of Records FREE

Simply wonderful! The limit of value giving! Just think! A GENUINE DAVIS PHONOGRAPH on 30 Days' Free Trial, and on terms as low as in case you decide to buy. Magnificent instruments in quartered oak or mahogany piano finished cases, equipped with the finest worm gear motors, rich toned machines—at less than half the standard prices—and $10 worth of records FREE.

$2 A MONTH

Send No Money

Just a postal with your name and address. Only a limited number of machines shipped on this extra-liberal offer. Better act quickly. This is a life-time opportunity.

DAVIS, 314 West 43rd St., Dept. E-62 CHICAGO

FREE

Handsome, clear toned, good sized Violin with pegs, finger board, tail piece, full set strings, bow, box rosin and self-instruction book, ALL FREE for selling 28 pckgs. BLUINE at 10c a pkg. Write for it.

BLUINE MFG. CO., 26 Mill St., CONCORD JCT. MASS.

GIVEN! GENUINE HAWKEYE CAMERA as pictured. Regular size, uses films; snap-shot and time exposure. It's a beauty. Yours for selling only $3.00 worth (12 boxes) famous Mentho-Nova which everybody should buy on sight. Send no money. We trust you till goods are sold. Many other valuable premiums. What do you want? Write today.

U. S. SUPPLY CO., Dept. H 1-7, Greenville, Pa.

30 DAY TRIAL

FINE STROP FREE

We will send a STERLING razor on 30 days trial. If satisfactory, costs $1.97. If not, costs nothing. Fine Horsehide Strop FREE. Write today.
STERLING COMPANY Suite 15, BALTIMORE, MD.

Gold Filled Monogram Ring FREE Guaranteed for 3 years. To introduce our Sweet Smelling Sachet Powder, we will send this ring any size, hand Engraved with your three initials for selling only six packets at 10c.
FAIRY QUEEN PERFUME CO. Dept. 554, Attleboro, Mass

'Neath Mid-Summer M

By Joseph F. Novak

See front cover illustration.

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

LANGDON, clad in white flannel trousers, white silk socks, white shoes and dark coat, lounged in a corner of the broad screened-in porch of the Van Oaks's beach cottage. He was just a silouette, somewhat ghostly, and except for the glow of his cigar, he was almost indiscernable.

The porch was illumined only with subdued lights, and these with the soft wash of the surf as it sobbed upon the beach made his little retreat the more lulling and restful.

Suddenly there came a merry burst of laughter from the house and a party of young people streamed out upon the porch. The lights were brightened, the phonograph set going in a merry, catchy little jazz air, and the crowd began to onestep over the smoothly polished floor.

"O, look at Langdon, dreaming like a love-lorn swain!" exclaimed Bennie Thompson. "I'll bet he's mooning over the thought of Sonia Gaylord's coming! When will it be, Hortense?"

"Very shortly, I hope," returned Mrs. Van Oaks who was still "Hortense" to her big circle of friends. She was the hostess of the party, though she looked scarcely older than any of the lively buds who were her guests, and the altogether lovely beach-cottage was her property.

"Gracious, Hortense! Where did Miss Gaylord get the outlandish name of 'Sonia'?"

"O, she had an aunt who married a Russian noble and she was named after his sister, the Princess Sonia."

"Does she look like a bolshevik lady?" continued the irrepressible Bennie, "and does she carry bombs hidden about her person?"

"No, she carries them in her eyes," laughed gay Mrs. Van Oaks, "and when she bombs you with them, there's no hope for you. So guard your hearts, boys, she's sure to catch one of you, though, no doubt, you'll all fall for her."

"Well, she won't get me," returned Bennie. "In the first place I'm a poor sort of fish anyhow, and secondly I'd be afraid of anybody who has Russian nobility in the family. So I'll relinquish all my claim to her favor to brother Hercules Langdon. He's the one for her, a Hercules in truth."

"O, bother!" exclaimed Langdon, tossing away the cigar he had ceased to smoke as soon as the girls had come upon the porch. He generally ejaculated an impatient exclamation whenever his name was mentioned as it now was, for it was in reality Hercules given him by an adoring father because he had been such a lusty baby. Manhood had fulfilled the baby prophecy and Langdon now possessed a Herculean figure.

"Bother what, Horsky?"

"Say, if you people don't quit chin-chinning about Miss Gaylord, I shall scramp. It will prove very embarrassing to her if she gets an inkling of this chit-chat."

"Don't be mad, Sonny," plagued Bennie, "come, let me teach you the gay game" and with his absurd manner, he caught hold of the stalwart, disgusted Langdon, and dragged him across the floor, giving the most ludicrous caricature imaginable.

Had it been anyone but Bennie, and the time mid-summer, Langdon might have tossed him through the screen and over the rail, as it was, he allowed his usual good humor to prevail and went to dancing as gracefully as the best of them—but not with Bennie.

For some time they danced, then, ever ready for some new adventure, they were spied by Feather-so quiet that the soft wash of the waves upon the beach came as a mournful accompaniment.

Langdon's sympathetic heart went out to the woman who was trying, the best she knew how, to fight life's battle. He felt he would like to do something for her. How often would humanity hold out a helping hand but for the fear that its motive would be misconstrued! How often a most innocent matter is grossly pictured!

Thus, what Langdon felt he would like to do for "Marcia Ware" (for thus was the lady billed) would have caused convention to hold up its hands in horror—and yet his actions would have been Christly.

During the whole performance, he was aware of this feeling of sympathy, yet it was a troublous feeling, and caused his breath to come short and seemed to have dissipated his usual equanimity.

At the conclusion of the performance, the coterie from the cottage waited about until all had gathered. In the meantime, Marcia had come from the stage, clad in street costume.

She greeted Hortense and the others with fine repression of manner and gentle dignity.

"I want to thank you all," she began, "because I know you were instrumental in our having a sold-out house tonight. It means so much to me, you know," and there was just a suspicion of tears in her voice.

Hortense then introduced Langdon to Marcia and from his very natural complimentary remarks upon her performance they got into quite a conversation, while the rest moved away leaving the couple alone. Apparently, though, when Marcia noted this, she terminated the conversation, and they parted.

Langdon walked through the star-lit night, wondering why and what it was that was thus affecting him. He had always believed himself fancy-free, and consequently was the more plagued by this coterie who wished upon him every and any maid they thought becoming to his position and fortune.

Thus the first night—after that it became quite the thing for the occupants of the cottage to patronize the theater and they went several times the first week, then twice the second week, at the end of which time, the superb Sonia Gaylord was expected.

Now, Langdon had never gone to the theater except when the crowd had gone, and he was blissfully ignorant of the fact that the bunch were quite aware of what he thought they were blissfully ignorant, i. e., his penchant for the lovely actress at the Waveland Beach Theater.

It happened that on the usual evening set aside for the guests of the Van Oaks's cottage to attend the theater that the motion to go was voted down for there was much to do to prepare for the party scheduled for the following evening—the evening on which Sonia was to arrive.

So Langdon quietly stole away to the theater and sat through the show almost in a trance.

Marcia this evening, was ravishing. Never before had her beauty seemed so perfect—but then he always thought that when he beheld her. Never before, either, did there seem to be such appeal in her eyes, and he felt a pang that was a real ache when he thought of the noble battle the girl was putting up.

Langdon had not, as yet, seen her child. The thought of the youngster was a jarring note in his regard for Marcia. Of course, he would love the child for the mother's sake, but ah, if Marcia had never been married!

But why should it make any difference to him? He was attending the performances to help Marcia keep her place at the theater, that was all. And then he knew that he was lying to himself that he had fallen in love with her just as a man falls in love with the woman he wants for a wife.

This point settled the next question was Marcia herself. She was very cordial even encouraging but it might be only an encouragement that was a bid for his favor as a patron of the theater.

At the end of the performance, he hastened to the stage entrance to meet Marcia as the company from the cottage had been in the habit of doing.

When she came forth, she was like an ethereal sprite clad in gauzy white with a big white hat and an encyclopedia scarf of soft lace. She was glorious to look at.

"It's ripping, not lovely," Langdon remarked, "as we say in the U. S."

All right," Marcia agreed and together they [illegible]. The moon was effulgent and lit [illegible] with ripples as far as the eye could reach. The [illegible] balcony slowly, dreamily, and though it was [illegible] till it seemed but a minute when [illegible] the Van Oaks's cottage.

"Let's stop in a bit," Langdon suggested.

"It's [illegible] late hour," demurred Marcia.

"Not [illegible] up to all hours," Langdon replied, "and [illegible] preparing for the reception of Sonia [illegible]."

"A [illegible] society, I presume," chided Marcia.

"Yes, as far as fortune and position are concerned."

"You suppose are looking forward to her coming," questioned Marcia.

Langdon was troubled. He would not speak disparagingly of one girl before another, and yet how convey to Marcia that he didn't care at all about Sonia, who, he knew, had been picked for leader of the coterie at the cottage. And again, to exhibit interest in the coming of the girl might impress that he looked forward to her coming.

"Naturally, I shall like to meet Miss Gaylord, Miss Ware," he answered, "just as we look forward to meeting people of whom we have heard a great [illegible]."

But Marcia was merciless.

"That is as far as your interest goes?" she teased.

"That is as far as it goes," he replied very gravely.

"But come, I see some of Hortense's guests are out on the porch, so surely you can presume to call."

"It would be presumption," Marcia said, a little wistfully. "Do you know Mrs. Van Oaks never really invited me to call on her? I suppose her interest in me was in the nature of a pet charity."

"O, don't say that, Miss Ware, please," Langdon begged, for he could not think of her being patronized or looked down upon as one not their equal. "It probably never occurred to Mrs. Van Oaks to tender a formal invitation—we are so delightfully de trop in all our actions out here on the beach."

"Very well, then, I shall," Marcia returned.

They passed through the formally kept gardens that fronted the cottage for about fifty feet and up to the gaily illumined porch.

"You seemed to be having a gay time so I prevailed upon Miss Ware to drop in with me," Langdon said.

"Come and join us by all means," said Featherstone, a little stiffly, "you are just in time for the last dance, "and with the words, he set the phonograph going. All selected partners, no one making any attempt to claim Marcia.

Langdon would have claimed her in any event, but the snub tendered the girl enraged him especially when he saw she felt the thrust.

As the dance ended, they all bade chilly goodnights and retired leaving the two alone.

"Shall I get the car to take you back, Miss Ware?" Langdon asked.

"No, I shall walk again," Marcia returned, her voice trembling.

He helped her adjust the scarf of gauze, and then followed her through the garden and out upon the sands.

For a time they walked in silence.

"O, Marcia!" Langdon at length burst out, "it was perfectly dreadful. I never thought that my friends could be so—so——"

She silenced him with a wave of her hand. "I might have expected it. Once or twice—in the old days—I did that because I thought it was the thing to do."

"But—but—" he exploded: "But Marcia, they cannot do it to you! They shall not! I love you Marcia, I love you better than anything in the world.

All tho[illegible]
love you love me
"An[illegible]
"No,
blazing,
my hear hands a the swe arm wen and kiss
"You
"Just
"And th tonight,
this," ar
his little worth s
"Wha
it as it it hardl which it
"That another,
As in and left turned h
It was went to corner f
Sudde and reco and Ver porch.
"What
Marcia voice.
"Just presump interest
"Do y that he
"Herc
my dear
At tha
Well, he
And if M roof, nei
And h first thin
He ov
he did co
Marcia.
"A lett ton, a bi
"You
coldly.
"O, H
"Yes,
pardon m tendered
"But
gaged—
"I mus
he tore o
His fac
it.
Dane" snatched
"D co ma
to Yo "Gulled
She has p
I suppose worth a Fenton in
"O, bo
She was the ring
he stopped hands
"No, it
Featherst
how?" A said and what her
Ware." H
Mrs. some ceased fu at the tim
As a knew abso occurred her Miss
But his
"It was
"it was t
"Boy, h with Soni pathetica
"Don't groaned.
At that alone.
Several "Don't won't you
You must
"All rig
But wi
he remain
it was ap arrived.
a last fin suit, he w self-contro
He kne
Hortense
the matte
But he manner by ed strang woman in mentation of Marcia Was it and Marci
Hortens and just t mon conse
He took ly across tense's fe roguishly
"May I plain this in the dar
His head lighted th
At the the garden the sand a up on the that Van from his p
Langdon l
Sonia s
Langdon
"Thank your ring
"Return
tioned, hi mean?"
of her in
"You kn
"Why n
Sonia la
"You c be held to "Didn't
"Not ex want to be be glad to sider it a
"Was o

Use As Your Own 30 Days FREE!

$1 With Order

Here is one of the finest offers I have ever been able to make. Here is your chance to try for a whole month, right in your own kitchen, a Handsome, Useful and High-Grade Panelled Aluminum Set at my invitation and at my risk. Send the coupon and first payment today. The complete set will be sent you immediately. Begin at once to use it as your own. Learn the big difference between percolator coffee and coffee-pot coffee. Know the many uses of the Big Combination Roaster and the 6 quart Combination Cooker (see picture above). See for yourself how they save fuel, time and labor. Experience by daily use, the pleasure in handling and the profit in using all the pieces. Enjoy the bright clean, spic-and-span appearance the 53 pieces give your kitchen. The 10 quart dish pan is also a large, very desirable piece.

This Colonial Panelled Aluminum Set must be its own salesman; you don't buy from pictures when you deal with Spear. You must be entirely satisfied with its High Quality, its Low Price, and its Easy Terms. You must be delighted with its Shining Beauty and its High Efficiency. If your satisfaction is not thorough from every viewpoint, no matter how much you have used the set during the 30 days, you can return it. Your first payment and all transportation costs will be refunded. The Trial will not cost you a penny. Important! Every piece in this set is genuine high-grade, pure aluminum, mirror-like in finish. All pieces are seamless, sanitary and easy to clean. Will not flake, crack, chip, or peel. EACH AND EVERY PIECE IS GUARANTEED TO GIVE ABSOLUTE SATISFACTION. Heats rapidly and evenly, and so saves fuel. Heavier and better than ordinary grades. These pieces are made of heavy, extra hard high-grade Aluminum and will give years of Hard, Honest, Faithful Service. All the articles are of a large serviceable size. Every article is of the kind that you will need and use often. This set must not be confused with ordinary sets that include many useless thin pieces. You must judge this set by its big value, rather than its little price. And this you can do during your 30 Days' Free Trial. Order No. RA2520. Price $16.95. Terms: $1.00 with order, balance $1.50 monthly. Will be shipped by express unless otherwise requested.

53 PIECES High Grade ALUMINUM

The 53 Fine Pieces

9-Piece Colonial panelled roaster of large capacity, 11 uses—diameter 10½ inches, 6 inches high. Inside milk pan 2⅝ inches high, 8¾ inches in diameter.
1 Colonial panelled percolator with inset, capacity 7 cups (2 pcs.)
1 Colonial panelled six qt. combination cooker. 12 uses. Pudding pan, strainer or colander, casserole or bake dish, convex kettle, preserving kettle, self-basting roaster, combination cooker, corn popper or corn flake toaster, cereal cooker or double boiler, steamer set, cake tube, and panelled kettle cover (5 pieces).
1 Colonial panelled six qt. tea kettle and cover; 2 pieces.
1 Colander, diam. 9¼ in.
1 Dish pan, capacity 10 qts; diam. 15½ in.
1 Colonial panelled double boiler; inside piece, capacity 1½ qts. Outside piece, capacity 2 qts. and cover; 3 pieces.
1 1-qt. lipped saucepan.
1 2-qt. lipped saucepan.
2 Bread pans, 9¾x5½ in.
2 Colonial panelled salt and pepper shakers.
1 Colonial panelled toothpick holder.
3 Measuring spoons.
1 Measuring cup.
1 Sugar shaker.
1 Combination funnel, 5 separate uses. 6 pieces.
1 Combination biscuit and doughnut cutter (2 pcs.)
1 Coffee or tea strainer.
2 Jelly or layer cake pans with loose bottoms, diam. 10 in., 4 pieces.
2 Pie plates, diam. 10 in.
1 Fry Pan. 1 Tea ball.
1 Lemon Juice extractor.

Big FREE 30th Anniversary Bargain Book

Thirty years ago in a little store here in Pittsburgh this business made its humble beginning. I staked my all on the downright honesty of the average man and woman. I was a pioneer in the "open account way" of home furnishing. My little business has since grown into a mammoth institution that performs a nation-wide service. To celebrate my thirtieth anniversary I am conducting a Big Sale that will last throughout the year. All my prices are Low! Much lower than spot cash prices in your home town stores. Everything I sell is sent on 30 Days' Free Trial and Use in Your Own Home, and I give the Longest Time to Pay. I repeat to you what I said to my first customer 30 Years ago: "I Will Trust You Gladly." Send for my Big Free Catalog today. It shows Thousands of Bargains in Furniture, Bedding, Springs, Mattresses, Bed Spreads, Rugs, Carpets, Linoleum, Lace Curtains, Portieres, Dishes, Stoves, Ranges, Refrigerators, Lamps, Glassware, Clocks, Aluminum Ware, Baby Carriages, Enamel Cooking Sets, Washing Machines, Sewing Machines, Table Linen, Silverware, Cameras, Phonographs, Children's Automobiles, Wagons, etc., Bicycles, Guns, etc.

Nathaniel Spear President

Spear & Co. Dept. E-1 Pittsburgh, Pa.

Home Furnishers for the People of America

12-PIECE KITCHEN SET FREE!

If you will be prompt; if you will send your order quickly I will send you Absolutely Free, a Very Useful and Attractive 12-piece Kitchen Set with sanitary white enameled handles.

THE SET CONSISTS OF

14½-inch meat fork
Measuring and mixing spoon
Ice pick
Pot and pan scraper and brush
Can end bottle opener
Egg and mayonnaise beater
Mixing and draining spoon
Apple corer, paring knife and fish scaler Pan cake turner
Potato and vegetable masher
Spatula and cake lifter
Rust proof nickel plated wall rack
All pieces hang on wall rack within easy reach

Copyright, 1923, Spear & Co.

SPEAR & CO., Dept. E-1, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Send me at once the 53-piece Panelled Aluminum Set and Free 12 Piece Kitchen Set as described above. Enclosed is $1.00 first payment. It is understood that if at the end of 30 days' trial I decide to keep it, I will send you $1.50 monthly. Order No. RA2520. Price, $16.95. Title remains with you until paid in full. Send me your Big Free Catalog also.

Name.....Occupation.....

R. F. D., Box No. or Street & No.....

Post Office.....State.....

If your shipping point is different from your post office fill in line below

Send shipment to.....

FREE CATALOG } If you want the Free Catalog Only, Send No Money, put an X here ☐ and write your name and address plainly on the above lines.

Through the columns of this department our Doctor's advice regarding maternity and child welfare will be given free in answer to questions by our subscribers.

Address Mother and Baby Department, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and be sure to give your full name and address. Names will not be published.

Summer Diseases of Babies

I TAKE this as the subject for this month's talk, as it is durimg the month of August that babies suffer the most from the heat and the many intestinal disturbances and indigestion that are caused directly and indirectly by the excessive heat. I hope that the suggestions I offer will prove helpful, during this trying period, in the care of babies.

I do not wish to have our readers get the impression that the advice here given can take the place of their family physician, but by advising some preventive measures I think I can help you to prevent some cases of illness and suffering.

There is no doubt but what the causes of at least one-half the cases of the sickness among babies in hot weather are due to carelessness, sins of omission or commission, which can be corrected. Among the many things we have to contend with are the unripe or overripe fruits and vegetables, the decayed vegetable matters that have not been properly cared for, the milk that had soured or become tainted and also, the depressing effect that heat has to both old and young.

SIMPLE DIARRHEA.—I shall at first discuss under this head a mild form of diarrhea to which babies are very subject, in which the condition appears to be mere functional disorder and very little if any congestion or irritation of the intestinal mucous membrane. The causes of simple diarrhea are unfavorable hygenic conditions, badly ventilated damp houses, contracted or crowded quarters, unhealthy state of mother's health if a nursing baby, mother getting overheated or overtired, use of artificial food at too early age, especially if improper food, teething, and very hot weather.

The most important of all these causes is improper food, with the exclusion of the proper amount of milk.

The reckless habit of allowing babies to eat food from the table prepared for older members of the family is a dangerous one, and a fruitful cause of intestinal and stomach disturbances. There is no doubt, but what most babies have too many sweets, especially candy. Diarrhea may follow as a consequence of an attack of indigestion and continue for weeks, in babies previously healthy and well.

The symptoms of diarrhea indicate discomfort, disturbance of temper of baby, restlessness, peevishness and disposition to cry; the baby sleeps less than usual, often starts and moans in sleep, more marked during the night, as is the case in any ailment of babies or adults.

The baby may seem to be perfectly well during the day with the exception of slight paleness, weakness and diminished appetite, baby will not eat as often or as much as usual. The stools are thinner and more copious, and the odor becomes acrid and offensive. In severe cases the stools are watery and may be of a green color, intermixed with portions of mucous, also you may notice undigested food, curds mixed with mucous on napkins. The number of stools may vary from two to ten during the twenty-four hours. The abdomen is seldom distended or painful to touch, the general appearance of baby is paler and thinner, eyes somewhat hollow.

The duration of the disorder is short, a few days, or a week, and terminates in complete recovery to health, without endangering the life of the baby; but if the cause is not removed, if baby has a delicate constitution, or treatment not proper, this simple diarrhea may run into entero-colitis and the dangers of this disease.

The treatment of simple diarrhea consists, first, in attention to diet, exercise and the state of the gums. I mention the state of the gums, as often you get disturbed digestion and diarrhea from a tooth or teeth trying to come through.

The relief, in such case, is the lancing of the swollen gums under antiseptic precautions.

This often seems brutal in young babies, and some mothers protest, but it is not, as nature forces the tooth through the gums, and you simply help out by cutting down and aiding this process, which in some cases, seems prolonged.

In severe cases, gums badly swollen, baby feverish, more or less twitching or jumping, digestion upset, it is good judgment to make a circular incision over tooth, uncovering it, and allowing it to bleed freely, as the results are very satisfactory.

In regard to diet, if baby is nursing, we must take into consideration the health, diet and temper of the mother, all of which circumstances more or less affect milk. If the mother's milk is good and is only disturbed in its healthy properties by some transient cause, baby should be allowed to nurse, but not quite as much as usual. If we decide that the mother's milk is not proper food, the baby should be weaned at once and given modified milk.

If baby is six or eight months old it is well to let it have a chicken bone, or a juicy piece of steak to suck, or carefully prepared chicken or mutton broth.

It is best to continue outdoor exercise, unless, weather is cold or damp, in fact in good weather, exposure to air is more important in simple diarrhea than in health. The only precaution is to not allow baby to weaken or tire itself, particularly in warm weather, as this seems to aggravate the complaint.

Baby should be given a teasponful of castor oil to remove any contents of the intestines that may be irritating, also to remove gas; this is important, expecially if the stools are green.

Bismuth subnitrate, in doses of one to five grains according to age, is the most valuable astringent we have to check bowel movements, and should be given from three to six times a day, depending on the frequency of the movements.

For baby six months old, if discharges are frequent and painful, you may give Bismuth subnitrate two grains every two or three hours, to which you may add two drop doses of paregoric.

The subject for out talk next month will be, Summer Diseases of Babies, Continued.

Questions and Answers

A FEW QUESTIONS.—Will you please answer the following questions? (1) Am pregnant and wish to know what to do for my breasts, as they are open and run most of the time? (2) Last day of last menstruation was October 28rd. When should my time be up? (3.) How is it best to prepare bed? (4.) Are sanitary napkins safe to use? (5.) How long should a woman lie in bed at childbirth? (6) How often should a baby be fed? (7.) Would you have the nearest physician or send farther away to a city for one? (8.) Is my blood out of order because some mornings I feel tired and nervous? (9.) Does it hurt me to do my washing on the wash-board? (10.) At what time should I begin to feel motion? (11.) How old should a baby be before taking it out in the air?

Mrs. G. G G., Nebraska.

A.—(1) Bathe the breasts with a four per cent. solution of borax and water, and bind breasts gently; this will contract the glands.

(2.) Should say on or about July 30th.

(3.) A firm mattress is best, arranging bed so it can be approached from both sides; cover over mattress with sheet, place upon this at a point where the patient's hips will come, a piece of rubber sheeting, or water-proof cloth, four feet square; upon this rubber sheeting place an old blanket doubled three or four times until it is a little less in size than the rubber sheeting. Cover over all these things a second sheet, the top border of which must be turned down a foot or two below pillow, the patient lying on the second sheet.

(4.) Yes, I think they are.

(5.) Ten days to two weeks or longer depending on the patient as regards to her strength, hard or easy labor.

(6.) 1st week feed baby every 2 hours, one night feeding; 2nd week the same, in fact you can continue the two-hour feedings for four weeks, then change to two and one-half hours; continue this until the fifth month and then begin the three-hour schedule. After the 2nd month there should be no night feedings.

(7.) Get the nearest good physician you can.

(8.) This condition has nothing to do with your blood, try to get interested in preparing baby's clothes, etc.

(9.) No, if you do not get too tired.

(10.) About the end of the 4th month.

(11.) Take the baby out at any time, properly clothed, protecting its eyes and face from the hot sun.

CHRONIC BRONCHITIS.—My two-and-one-half year old baby girl has an awful cough, every time she takes cold, and she takes cold easily. Have had her treated by several different ones without any relief. They have called it chronic bronchitis.

I have a lot of trouble myself with my back, am very thin and weak and wish you would suggest something to build me up. Mrs. C. E. S., Monroe, N. C.

A.—For your baby would suggest that you give her one-half teaspoonful doses of Syrup of Hydriodic Acid, (Gardner's), after food, three times a day.

Get a bottle of Malto-Yerbine, and give her teaspoonful doses every three hours when she is coughing.

For yourself, take ten grains of Salicylate of Sodium, after each meal, followed with glass of water. Get a bottle of Pepto-Mangan, (Gude's) and take dessertspoonful three times a day. Drink a quart of milk each day, and be careful what you eat. I mean by this, eat foods that will build you up rather than relishes or pastry.

FONTANELLES.—Please tell me how long the "mole" in baby's head should stay open and what is the result if it closes too soon?

What would you think of one that was never larger than a dime? Mrs. L. C., Ga.

A.—We take it that you mean fontanelles when you ask about the "mole." There are two, anterior and posterior; the anterior one which is not closed until one or two years after birth, the posterior, which closes during the first few months of life. There is no rule to go by about the size, these things take care of themselves, closing sooner or later in different babies.

The greatest danger lies in the handling, and examining which might cause some local irritation. They will take care of themselves, closing as the child develops, and grows, as this is one of the features of development and growth.

BROWN SPOTS—BAD TASTE IN MOUTH.—Would the lotion suggested remove brown spots if a patient was pregnant?

What can I do for bad taste in the mouth, bowels are regular? Mrs. L. C. M., Provo, Utah.

A.—Yes, the lotion will remove the brown spots if used every day for some time.

For the bad taste in the mouth, this of course is one of the symptoms of indigestion and an acid stomach, take teaspoonful doses of Phosphate of Soda, first thing in the morning, and after meals two teaspoonfuls of Elix Lactated Pepsin; avoid acids.

MALNUTRITION.—What can I do for my five-months old baby girl who does not gain in weight, is constipated, vomits her food? I am very nervous and do not have milk enough for her.

Mrs. C. F. H., Oliver Springs, Tenn.

A.—Wean her at once and put her on modified milk, giving her teaspoonful doses of milk of magnesia in her milk, often enough to keep bowels regular.

IRRITATED SKIN.—What can I do for my eight-months old baby girl who is annoyed by red patches on thighs; each patch seems to be a cluster of minute blisters.

Have been giving her orange juice, but stopped it, and now put a little soda bicarb, and lime water in her milk. Mrs. B. F. C., Prescott, Ariz.

A.—This irritation is caused by a highly acid urine, and stopping the orange juice and giving her the soda is good treatment. It might be well to add more lime water to her milk and get her to drink more water. Should change her diapers often enough to keep her dry as much as possible

Locally bathe the parts with Glyco Thymoline, and apply a little oxide of zinc ointment.

OVERWEIGHT.—Will you please tell me how I can reduce my weight, as I am too stout?

Mrs L E. D., Georgia.

A.—Avoid sugars and fats and take plenty of active exercise in the open air with clothing enough on to cause profuse perspiration, followed by sponge bath.

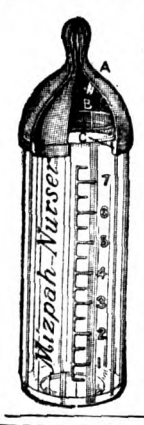
BOW-LEGS.—I am writing to you for help in regard to my little boy, who has just begun to walk and is so bow-legged that he can hardly walk?

Mrs. M. B. Ward, W. Va.

A.—As soon as a tendency to bow-legs is noticed, walking should be discouraged and a vigorous tonic and antirhachitic treatment begun.

Steel braces, plaster casts, put on in such a way as to overcome the deformity should be used.

RESTLESS SLEEP.—Can you tell me what is the cause, and what to do for my 20-months old boy, who awakens several times in the night talking as if frightened? Seems well in every way, but has always cried out in his sleep.



Would adenoids cause this condition? If the mother was very nervous during pregnancy would this cause this symptom in the baby?

Mrs. J. E. J., Yamkill, Oregon.

A.—If the mother was nervous the child might inherit it, but this line of symptoms suggests worms. Give baby a tablet containing one-half grain each of calomel and santonim every three hours, until bowels move freely, do this twice in a week. Avoid all exciting things, do not play with baby too much. Adenoids affect breathing but would not cause these night terrors.

Here it is, Mother
—just what Baby needs!

AT LAST, a safe and sensible nurser with a pure-gum nipple. Soft as a natural breast. A godsend to mothers and to nursing babies.

Mizpah Non-Colic Nurser Number 76

Cannot collapse when child bites it because of inside ribs. Safety-valve (A-B) acts as vent for easy suction and prevents vacuum with consequent colic. Shoulder (C) snugly fits ANY wide-mouthed nursing bottle.

Nurser, complete, 35c. Nipple or bottle, separately, 20c each. At druggists' or by mail, postage paid by us. Write also for FREE booklet containing valuable information on baby-feeding.

The Walter F. Ware Co.
Dept. A, 1034 Spring St., Phila.

Do you want Mary Ann?

She is just a big, fine, darling doll every girl's heart is hungry for. Mary Ann will come to you without costing one cent. She wants a play mother to walk with her, sing to her when she cries, rock her to sleep.

Mary Ann Can Walk—Cry Sleep—Wink

Her brown hair is soft and silky. Jointed arms and legs, bright blue eyes that sleep. Cries when you lay her down or take her up. Unbreakable head, eyes won't jar loose. Cute silk cap, pretty figured lawn dress, stockings, patent leather slippers.

She is YOURS for doing me a little favor I will send a Mary Ann doll just as described above in return for a small favor. Just write me today and I will tell you how to get her without cost. Send name and address and say "I want Mary Ann."

THE DOLL MAN, Dept. R, 1102 Ellsworth Bldg. Chicago, Ill

CASH'S WOVEN NAMES Save Laundry Losses

3 doz. $1.50 6 doz. $2. 9 doz. $2.50 12 doz. $3. Write for styles

Branch Factories Los Angeles, Cal. Brantford, Ont.

J. & J. CASH, Inc. 11th Street South Norwalk, Conn.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 5.)

is our own. Neither of us has any business straying on the property of the other after that.

When you think of the numbers of fine, potential men and women who have given up their whole lives and died single, cheated, thwarted and denied, in order to care for a father or mother who misspent their own young days, when you remember the number of spoiled old folks who are "martyred" if one of their children actually kick over the traces, and marry and 'cheat them out of a living, which they have no right to expect, then you realize how necessary it is to get another angle on the situation. No human being owes it to another human being to live and die unbloomed and thwarted, any more than they owe the broken hopes and homes that the divorce courts are full of—homes broken up because of old folks who had to "live with" young folks. Old folks who should have seen to it that such a contingency never arose but who, failing in this, have brought disaster to those they loved best because they have made it necessary to attempt the impossible, the reconciling of warring temperaments, two ages and two ways of living under one roof, causing jealousies and divisions of loyalty that should never be, and eventually a smash.

Sound sense in days gone forever should have averted unhappiness and given the children a chance to found a home that would have lasted in peace. I may be wrong, but to me, "Honor thy father and mother" means just what it says. Honor, love, look up to, respect and that's all. It doesn't mean a child owes a whole lifetime or the postponement or wrecking of his domestic happiness or even a living. It doesn't mean he owes them anything on earth but deep family love, devotion, allegiance and loyalty which should be counted on for security in case of disaster or misfortune, but then only It's simply this: When our children are grown it is time for them to provide for themselves and their children. They are out of our lives intimately. And when we've grown old we've had our day. We've had our chance If we've made ducks and drakes of our chance it means our children will have to pay for it, which isn't fair.

Again let me say to those dependent upon their children through no fault of their own, there should be only tenderness and sympathy for all concerned. They are doing no wrong and are standing by each other as families should. For those in such a situation through their own fault, and already old and imposing upon good nature, there is no help, no chance to retract or correct. The only thing for them is to be as easy to live with as possible, to make amends now, to realize their children owe them nothing and to face facts. But for those of us who are still young enough to watch our step, we need to keep an eye out for the future. Get over the habit of expecting so much of our children when grown and look to our own tomorrows for all we are worth, so in the grand summing up we won't need to stand convicted of having taken an unfair advantage of our children, of having given them a poor start in life which we, ourselves, have thrust upon them.

MARY ELDORA MIX.

I hear someone say, she isn't a mother herself and doesn't know what it is to have a family I am the mother of six sturdy boys, living, and one tiny bud that God plucked to bloom in Heaven. Our oldest boy will soon be fifteen years old. We have a little home (lovely to us) farm of 28 acres so I am a busy mother too.

Here is another subject that sets many mothers guessing. Should the question of sex be left for the teacher at school to explain? Can parents shift this responsibility without neglecting their obligations to their children and to society?

If any of our boys hear a remark puzzling to them they come to me and I explain in the simplest, cleanest way I can to put their young minds at ease.

I will tell you what I look like, have black hair and eyes and weigh about 165 pounds and am more than five feet tall. Like the rest of the sisters, I have the best John and we are a happy big little family out here on the hill. We have named our place Point Breeze.

Long live COMFORT and dear Mrs. Wilkinson.

MRS. ANNIE D. ADAMS.

BURTONSVILLE, N. Y.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

This is my first letter to COMFORT, which we have taken for many years. I remember getting a wonderful Surprise Box for subscriptions, when I was quite a small girl, and last Christmas I sent the paper to some friends, thus earning two nice premiums, one of which I gave as a present.

Mrs. Tillotson, here are some names which I think are rather odd and pretty. Girls; Adrienne, Audrey, Averil, Beverly, Brenda, Eulalie, Evadne, Fanchon, Fern, Galye, Hildred, Jocelyn, Joyce, Laurel, Lorraine, Maida, Madelon, Marilyn, Natalie, Rosalyn, Thelma, Thora, Sabra, Sheila, Valerie, Verna, Vivian, Wanda, Wilma, Zoe, Zaida, and Yvonne. For boys: Birdsley, Blythe, Cuthbert, Chadswick, Channing, Adrian, Gaylord, Josslyn, Keith, Kermit, Kenyon, LaVerne, Lynn, Lisle, Llewellyn, Rexford, Quentin, Willoughby and Durward. But, in our search for something novel, we must try not to burden the helpless child with a name which will be a handicap to him (or her) in later years. I have two boys, named Bernard and Reginald.

Lots of different opinions are being expressed as to whether the child should receive any instruction at home, before being sent to school. Being a school teacher, I have had quite a bit of experience with beginners, and, personally, I am always glad when they come to me knowing the letters, figures and a few simple words. Then I can at once give them a little piece of work to do, and they are happy and proud to think that they know what teacher means. I always teach by the phonic and letter method combined, so that it really helps them to understand their first lessons better, if they can read a bit, and the little people certainly feel more at ease. Then, too, a teacher having all the grades to teach, and a class scheduled for every minute of the day, except recesses, has but little time to spend with each. It makes it much easier then if the beginner can take an understanding interest in the simple tasks he is asked to perform between classes. Most of my classes are made up of one pupil, so that the teaching is necessarily individual. Of course in a graded school, where the pupils are taught in a group, it would be upsetting to the teacher's plans to have the youngsters' education started

I really th faults, or sh
but that is t
I think it is sure there is my favorite
We have never have phones chee winter; we ment, while but we hear
every night.
Mrs. Wel
it superior t
One can lye add five pou thoroughly warm, one-h and one cu into molds.
snow. We
tity of raw p
Lo

Mrs. Fre printed with
If the sist them, it is
own. The faults. I d each other, is an occasi and injured must be a t that sort through my quest (usua wonder if th
with the m
Really, it n letter of ap doesn't feel believe and wrote it. I her stove m and now th has been fix she wrote s stand each o

"Let
Let m
To th
Let m
Let n
Just a
Let m
Those

"Let
When
Let m
To be Let n
With Let n
And a

"Let
Make
Just b
Every
Let m
Not a
Let m
When

DEAR COMFO
I am sendi
Eldora, which

DEAR COMFO
— We have b and cannot d
I have see of the writers
last June. I
Calgary, Alta
Oregon and s
Any of the S rest room is a Station. I pu pocketbook, had in the wo
into the lavat book and all w
My first thou her in this str and went back baby. She c baby and too not to be so
The rest of pillow and bla seat and slept
Ethel Luella
April. We ha
A

Mrs Neely but the frigh served for be

DEAR MRS. W
I wish some work. I have round pillow o
I don't think
I should lik around Ashla
next summer.

Mrs. Frin yourself who for Batik wo will tell us al

DEAR MRS. W
Please make Corner.
I tried Mrs. yeast and ha mother used t drank her star
I have a goo old baby girl.
walk and trie
We are livi
This is a beau surrounded by logs is very at are in blossom
it. I have flo large rose-bus sweet peas, pi
Mrs. Marsh adventures. I wanted to visit am, what one
Mrs. Medley
but ours wasn
I should like ticularly those

COMFORT
Every wis
May sanct
For COMF
Only one Round the T'was the

DEAR SISTERS:
Because the COMFORT and to express my marrying forei aren't even ru am an America over when imm
Lillian picked way. However Wedding anniv pleasant.
I don't think when they thi foreigners bring should work.
Last fall was married and if (c

When Silas Went Camping

By J. Walter Briggs

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

MRS. Bennett and her daughter Mary were just finishing clearing away the dinner dishes, one hot afternoon, when there came a knock at the kitchen door.

"There mother," said Mary, "I told you, that the minute the men had gone to the field that tramp would be back again, if we had let him have something to eat when he was here before he would have gone on about his business. Well what are we going to do."

Mrs. Bennett was a little frightened, it must be confessed; tramps were numerous in that section of the country and nearly every day stories were brought in by the neighbors, of the raids on their chicken coops and corn fields by these knights of the tomato can.

"I'll tell you what we can do mother," said Mary. "I'll get father's gun, and you open the door and get behind it; then if he tries to come in I'll shoot one barrel over his head and I guess that'll scare him away."

"Don't you do anything of the kind, Mary Jane Bennett, I'd be more afraid of you and the gun than I would of half-a-dozen tramps; let's wait a spell and maybe he will go away."

Thump, thump, thump—came a series of blows on the door.

"Goodness mother," exclaimed the girl in a frightened whisper, "I guess he wants to come in all right. We might just as well open the door before he knocks it down. Don't be afraid. You get that tea-kettle of hot water off the stove and I will take this poker, and I guess we can handle him."

So with many misgivings, Mrs. Bennett armed with a kettle of boiling water, and closely followed by her daughter who concealed the stove poker behind her, tip-toed to the door, and opened it about an inch.

"Well of all things!" exclaimed the older woman, when she saw who her visitor was, "Martha Ann Pettibone, why under the sun, didn't you say it was you who wanted to come in? Here you've got me and Mary scared pretty nigh into fits, thinking all the time that you was a tramp, I've got a good mind to throw this kettle of water all over you."

"Oh, I wouldn't do that Sarah," said the woman at the door, "I just run over to visit a spell. Silas has gone fishing this afternoon, tho the Lord knows he ought to be out in the lot a working. His corn is way behind everybody else's and the bugs are a eatin up his taters, but as long as there is any place for him to go a fishin he will let every thing go. Why, we only got back from that campin trip the day before yesterday, and I thought he had got all the fishin he wanted for a spell, but it seems that the more he goes, the more he wants to, and I am going to give up tryin to stop him, for I find it ain't any use.I'm a going to come in just the same, even if you do stand there with a lot of hot water," and Mrs. Pettibone came into the kitchen and sat down by the window.

"My, ain't it hot!" she said after a moment's vigorous fanning with an old newspaper. "But it aint near so hot as it was over to West Pond where Si and me was. I'll bet it was a hundred and fifty above zero all the time, day and night. I don't never want to go campin agin in the summer time; the next time we go it will be in the winter. I'd rather freeze than melt any time."

"Did you have a good time Mrs. Pettibone?" asked Mary.

"Well, that's rather hard to say," replied the other, "Si said we did, but I ain't alowed to express my opinion. Yes, Si said we had a fine time, and he told me if I said any different that he would not buy me that dress he promised to. So you see I am going to keep pretty mum about it, but I wanted to tell somebody all about it and that's the reason I came over here.

"You see, Silas had been talkin about going campin out for ever so long, until at last I got so tired of it that I made up my mind we would go, and see if that wouldn't put a stop to it for a while.

"So a week a go the day before yesterday we went over to West Pond and made up our minds to have a good time.

"I guess you have both been over there and you know about that little island covered with pines out in the middle. We had made up our minds to camp out there, but when we got down by the water we saw that about a hundred fellers were there before us. They had a lot of tents and a flag tied on to the top of a tree; so we decided that we had better not go over. Well, he hunted around for an hour or two and at last found a place to put up our tent. It was a pretty good tent if I do say it myself, for I made it and I know.

"Si wanted to send out to Chicago for a tent, but I told him I could do just as good a job, so I took a lot of sheets and fastened 'em together with strings, and got some rag carpets to hang up for doors, and it was just as nice as any tent you ever saw.

"You know that the pond is all surrounded by swamps and cranberry marshes, but we found a little spot of dry land out in the middle of one swampy piece, covered with white birches.

"By the time we got our tent up and some wood gethered for a fire it was almost dark, and I managed to talk Silas out of the notion of going fishing that night, but he wanted to mighty bad. I guess it wouldn't have done any good to talk to him if he had been able to find a boat, but, as it happened, the fellers over on the island had taken all the boats. Si said that it didn't matter, as he would make a raft in the morning, which would do just as well.

"We were both pretty tired, for we had done quite a little work that day; so we decided to go to bed early.

"Silas had cut a lot of hemlock bushes that afternoon, and he said that they made the best kind of a bed, as the smell was sure to produce slumber.

"Well, we layed down on 'em pretty early, and I was just a getting in a doze when Si, he dug me in the ribs with his elbow and whispered. "Say, Martha, jest you listen and tell me what that noise is." I listened, and away off in the swamp I heard a low sort of humming like a swarm of bees.

"'What be it Martha,' said Si, but I didn't know, so we listened, and it kept a gettin louder and louder. I looked over at my man, and though it was pretty dark I could see that he was kinder white under his gills."

"'It sounds like music, old woman;' said he. 'You know that a man got mired out in that swamp once, and they never found him. You don't suppose it's a ghost or anything do you?' said he.

"I don't believe in no ghosts, and I jest told my man so right there, but he kept on a shakin and a trembelin, and all the time the humming kept a getting louder.

"I got up and lit our lantern. I thought if we were going to be taken that I had better get ready as I didn't want something to seize upon us in the dark. But I guess it would have been better if I hadn't lit the light, for about fifty million mosquitoes, more or less, found their way inside and in less time than it takes to tell it, out went the lantern.

"We knew then what the noise was. I guess about all the bugs and mosquitoes in the swamp came after us; the tent was full of them, and more kept comin in. All we could do was to fight 'em away. At last an idea struck Si so hard it almost knocked him over.

"'Gosh Martha,' he said, 'I have it.' 'What have you got, you tarned idiot?' says I. 'Have you managed to catch a 'skeeter? If you have execute him without trial, for I know he's guilty.'

"'No, you Old Cat,' says he, 'I haven't cotched a hair of one, and what's more I can't, but I have jest thought of a way to discourage their advances', and with that my man heaved himself out of his heap of hemlock bushes and began to paw around on the ground.

"'What on earth be you a goin to do?' says I to him.

"'Never you mind, Martha,' says he, 'you will soon see.'

"Then he lit a match and set something afire. An awfullsmoke began to bile up, and pretty soon the whole tent was full. I began to cough and sputter. I couldn't see my man but I could hear him a makin all kinds of noises on the other side of the tent. I stood it as long as I could, and then I made for the door. I managed to crawl through and had just got straightened up when I saw a little black and white animal in front of me. I knew what it was and tried my best to stop, but I had got such a send off coming out that, before I knew what I was a doin, I put my foot plum on top of it.

"Whew! Of all smells I ever smelt! The sulphur Si had sat fire to inside was nothing to compare to the smell I had set fire to outside. I didn't stop to make any farther acquaintance, but dove back head first into the tent. The smoke had pretty well thinned out by this time, but it smelled awful. Sulphur and skunk don't go very good together, but we had to make the best of it. Any way, the mosquitoes was gone and they didn't come back.

"We were jest a gettin ready to go to sleep again when a fight broke loose over on the island where the other camp was.

"That only lasted about two hours and we began to get used to it. But suddenly they stopped and somebody began to play on a banjo; then two or three began to sing, and pretty soon the whole lot of them joined in and it was worse than any darky camp-meeting you ever went to.

"It was about midnight before they quit singing, and at last I got asleep. I didn't feel as if I had slept more than ten minutes when Silas woke me up. He was a sharpenin his ax with a piece of a slate stone and said I had better get up and get breakfast, as he was a going out in the swamp and cut some logs to make a raft. It wasn't anywhere near sun-up yet, but I crawled out and made some coffee and fried some bacon and eggs over a little fire Si made out side.

"The coffee was full of ashes and so were the rest, but Si said that charcoal was good for the stomach, and he managed to put down quite a lot of it before he went out inter the swamp.

"I heard him a choppin and a slashin around for a good while, so I went back into the tent and thought I would go to sleep again, but no sooner had I layed down than I heard an awful yelling in the swamp. So I started off through the bushes after my man.

"He kept right on a yellin, and at last I found him, or rather I found his head; the rest of him was out of sight in the mud. I could see that he had got a tree fast in an other, and had climbed up to chop it out. Well, he had slipped and fell, and to make matters worse, he had come down in the soft ground of the swamp, and there he was up to his neck in the mud.

"Well, I got a long branch and stuck it out to him, and by my pulling all I could he managed to crawl out on a bog. But what a looking sight he was! all mud and slime from neck to heels. His boots were still in the mud, for they had pulled off when I yanked him out. That didn't seem to worry him any, for he said that he always used to go barefoot when a boy, and he guessed he could now as well as ever. His ax was gone too, but he said he had logs enough cut, he guessed; so he began to drag them to the camp.

"It was past noon before he got there, and it took until night to put the raft together. He forgot all about his dinner and as I wasn't hungry I didn't say anything about it. But when night came, and his work was all done, he began to think about eatin again.

"I got as good a supper as I could under the circumstances, but I saw that he didn't eat as much as a man oughter, who hadn't had anything since breakfast. I asked him the reason, and he said that he had an awfull hankerin for fish and was a goin that night and catch some.

"I had my own ideas about it, but I didn't say nothin. But we had hardly finished supper when it began to rain. It came gentle at first and Silas said it would soon stop as it never rained much when the moon was so near full, but I knew better, for I had noticed that the flies bit worse than usual, and sure enough I was right, for in an hour it had settled into a regular down-pour. Then, to make matters worse, it began to thunder and lighten and rain all the harder.

"It didn't take more than half an hour of such weather to soak our tent through, and after that we got it as bad as if our tent had been made of paper.

"Silas complained a good deal about the rain, but that was nothing new for him. He never did like water unless it had fish in it, but I did not mind it so much as it kept away the mosquitoes. It lasted all night anyway, but when the sun rose, the clouds dissapeared and it bid fair to be hotter than ever.

"I knew it wouldn't be any use to try to keep Si from going fishing that day, so I decided to go along with him and kinder keep a watch over him.

"About eight o'clock he got his raft ready and I gave him my big sun umbreller to fasten up at one end. He had a couple of paddles and we started off across the pond.

"Silas felt pretty happy in spite of his wet clothes, and pretty soon he began singing 'A life on the Ocean Wave,' and wanted me to join him, but I had caught such a cold in my throat from the rain that I couldn't talk much above a whisper.

"There was a couple of fellows out fishing not far from us, and one of them yells out:

"Say, Old man, who trained your voice?' The other he yells, 'Say Grand Pop, why don't you get a job a makin talking machine records?'

"'Yew go ter Grass,' yells Silas, a jumpin to his feet and stepping on my sore corn, 'I'll let yew know that I can sing as good as any of yew fellers who howled all night over there on the island.'

"'Oh, go away old man,' sings out one.'If I hadn't seen your mouth a goin I would have thought it was a bullfrog a croakin.'

"This was too much for my man. If there is one thing he prides himself on it's his singing, so up he jumps again.

"'Well by Gum,' he yells, 'if I can't sing I can fight and I'll lick both of you if yew will only give me the chance.'

"'Do be still Silas,' says I ter him, 'yew will upsot the raft; see how it's a shakin.'

"'Me be still!' he whoops, 'me, Silas Joshua Pettibone, be still when two little whip-snapper rats like that has insulted me! No, I guess not, I'll have their blood. Why the ghost of Abner Silas, my great granddad who died at Bunker Hill, would rize from his forgotten grave and haunt me. There isn't a coward in the family, and I am not going to be the first. Come here you measly little rats till I knock some sense inter you', and he pranced around and spat on his hands.

"I never knew just how it happened but all of a sudden the old raft flew all to pieces and in a minute we were struggling in the water. I suppose the way my man pranced around was the cause of it, but any way there we were. Well, I got hold of a log and Si another, and when we looked around we saw that the two fellers in the boat were a makin for us. They were good fellers all right, for they pulled us in and took us up on the island where we had a chance to dry our wet clothes. They told us that they were members of a secret society from the city and were campin out for a good time.

"I saw one of 'em get a bottle and hand it to Silas, who took a long pull and handed it back.

"Silas Pettibone,' said I,'what do yew suppose our parson would say if he saw you a doin that?'

"'O, that won't hurt him marm,' said one of the fellers, 'it's only some medicine we keep for snake bites and when we get wet. Here, old pal, have some more,' and again my man swallowed some of it.

"Of course I didn't care as long as it was medicine, but I never saw any body who could take medicine like he did, it must have been awful powerful, too, for pretty soon Si tried to do a jig he knew when a boy. One of the fellers saw him and pretty soon he came in with a banjo, and in less time than it takes to tell it he was a dancin like an Indian while the fellow what was a picking the banjo had all he could do to keep from bustin, he laughed so hard. Pretty soon a lot more came in and Silas seeing how pleased they were, grabbed me and began to yank me around. Well, I never could dance, and I wasn't a going to begin now; besides, I got a good smell of the medicine Si had been takin; it was whiskey. I tried to pull away but Silas hung on and pulled my dress apart at the waist. Then my temper riz right up, and I went at him hammer and tongs. I swatted his face and scratched his nose and pulled his hair.

"'Ten ter one on the old hen,' yells a feller.

"I'll give yer old hen, says I. It's your turn next, and I gave Silas a few finishing touches and grabbed for him; but he got out of my way, and it was lucky he did or I would have give him worse than Silas got.

"Well, you can just bet, Sarah, that we didn't stay there long. I made those men get a boat ready and take us right back to our camp.

"Silas didn't want to go home, but I was as firm as a rock. 'Yew jest pack up those things of yours,' says I ter him,' and be right smart about doin it tew.'

"Well we got home that night about dark, and Silas said we must say we had a good time, so I suppose we did. Now don't either one of yew tell that I told you this, or I won't get that new dress I am a countin on.

"Say, can't yew let me have a few 'taters? Ourn ain't fit to dig, not yet.

"Thank you; that will be enough. Good by, and remember now, don't tell."

In the good (or bad) old days the only successful saloonkeeper was the one who didn't drink. Yes, and if the present-day bootlegger drank his own wares he would be a dead failure too.—The Pathfinder.

The Turken, a New Fowl

A new fowl, called the Spencer Turken, a cross between the turkey and the chicken, has been developed by Z. T. Spencer, of Santa Cruz, California.

Mr. Spencer, now 75 years of age, started his experiment four years ago with two fowls whose parents were a small white Holland turkey and a Rhode Island Red Hen. Following a process of selection, under the advice of two university professors, he has produced a fowl that combines the best points of the turkey and the chicken. According to experts, it requires seven years to standardize the type and the color desired. At first, every third fowl was pure chicken, and the colors were many combinations of red, white and black. Now, in the fifth generation most of the fowls are red, and the sports occur about once among 10 or 12. In two years, they are expected to come true to type and color.

The male turken has pendulent caruncles, a long, bare neck, and a turkey-like gait. Pullets show even more resemblance to the turkey, especially about the head. Turken chicks are fond of green food, and do not require feeding if given sufficient range. Being remarkably hardy, they will thrive in any climate.

The eggs are large and brown, and hatch in 23 days. In a flock of any size, the turken hens average 200 eggs a year. The fowls are very heavy in the legs and extremely so in the breast. The meat is a fine combination of chicken and turkey, but is less dry than turkey. For production of both meat and eggs, they are highly profitable.

Fox farming in Alaska utilizes material from salmon canneries that would otherwise be wasted.

A Ten-Day Tube FREE Send the Coupon

Firm lips

Closed even when she smiles. All because a cloudy film dims the luster of her teeth.

An open smile

Pretty teeth often form a woman's chief attraction. Countless women get them now by removing film..

What Women Lose

By Dingy Teeth—Why Do It?

Dingy teeth rob women of a major charm. Not beauty only, but that added grace which lies in the open smile.

Millions of women have found a way to whiter teeth, also to better protection. You meet them everywhere today—with teeth you envy, maybe.

Will you not learn how they get them—by this delightful test?

Due to film

That viscous film you feel on teeth is what clouds them. And it often wrecks them. It clings to teeth, gets between the teeth and stays.

Food stains, etc., discolor it, then it forms dingy coats. Tartar is based on film.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and form acids. It holds the acids in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tarter, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Thus most tooth troubles are now traced to that unsightly film.

Ways to end it

Tooth troubles were increased until very few escaped. So dental science sought for ways to fight that film. In time two ways were found. One acts to curdle film; one to remove it, and without any harmful scouring.

Able authorities proved those methods. Then a new-type tooth paste was created, based on modern research. Those two great film combatants were embodied in it.

The name of that tooth paste is Pepsodent. Careful people of some 50 nations now employ it daily, largely by dental advice.

Avoid Harmful Grit

Pepsodent curdles the film and removes it without harmful scouring. Its polishing agent is far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

What must be done

Research also proved two other things essential. So Pepsodent multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids, the cause of tooth decay. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

Old-time tooth pastes, it was found, seriously diminished those great tooth-protecting agents in the mouth.

Watch it act

Use Pepsodent for ten days. See for yourself what it does. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

Then decide by what you see and feel. Judge what is best for you and yours. Cut out the coupon so you won't forget.

Pepsodent PAT. OFF. REG. U.S.

The New-Day Dentifrice

A scientific tooth paste based on modern research, free from harmful grit. Now advised by leading dentists the world over.

1239

10-Day Tube Free

THE PEPSODENT COMPANY,
Dept. 193, 1104 S. Wabash Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.

Mail 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent to

.....

.....

Only one tube to a family.

FREE Trial Until November

If you write NOW! The old house of Wing, wishes you to try one of its rare instruments in your home until Nov. 1st, free. Freight paid both ways. Return if you wish. Easy terms arranged.

Founded 1868 The Famous Wing 55th Year

Hear the rich inspiring tone, the secret of which for three generations has been held in one family. Save from $150 to $300 at reduced prices, 40 year guarantee. Factory price — Direct to you.

$295

Write For "The Book of Complete Information about Pianos." 140 pages. The New York World says "Every one should have this book." Mailed free and prepaid. Write today.

One of Our 81 Styles Also Player Pianos and Grands

WING & SON, 13th Street and 9th Avenue, Dept. C-370 New York, N. Y.

At Crumpet's Corner

By Rose Henderson

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

"NO, thank you, I don't care to ride." Joan Bradley stood straight and slim beside the dusty country road, her plaited serge skirt fluttering about her knees, her trim sailor hat shading a pair of blue eyes that had a shy, fugitive look, in spite of their frank boyishness.

"No?" said the brown-faced young man in the automobile.

Joan flushed at the hint of raillery that he managed to put into the monosyllable. She shifted her suit-case to the other hand and stepped back into the road as the car sped on. The country stillness settled down about her, broken only by the chirp of crickets in the deep grass beside the road. The sun was getting low and the shadows were long and purple.

Quite suddenly, at the end of a hedge of willows, she came upon a low, old-fashioned farmhouse. Joan never knew just why she turned in at that particular picket gate. Perhaps it was the lilacs in bloom above the fence, perhaps it was Grandmother Crumpet's wise old face which drew her. At any rate, she walked in quite as if she had planned to. As she closed the gate she stopped to smell a nodding spray of lilacs and then went on up the flower-bordered path to the porch where the white-haired woman peered at her curiously.

"How do you do?" said Joan, with her most engaging smile.

"Howdy," snapped Grandmother Crumpet, winking her sharp black eyes above her silver-bowed spectacles She was a bent wisp of a woman in faded calico. Her worn and shapeless shoes shuffled forward below a long full skirt.

"I—I'm looking for a place to work," began Joan wistfully. "Do you need anyone?"

"I don't hear you. I'm a little deef," said Grandmother crisply.

The girl repeated in a louder tone, and the old woman led her up the steps.

"Come in," piped Grandmother. She puckered her mouth around her words until they slid out thin and withered like the lips that uttered them. "Come in and bring yer satchel. I seen ye a comin' down the north road. What's yer name and where do ye come from?"

"My name is Joan Bradley. I came out from the station."

"Land sakes! Then ye come in on the train, did ye? Where's yer home?" There was childish eagerness in the bright old eyes as Grandmother cocked her head and peered up at the tall girl.

"I haven't any home, and—I don't care to tell where I came from," said Joan. She flushed uncomfortably but her eyes stared back into the sharp witch-like ones beside her. "I—I'm an honest, decent person. But—where I came from is—is my own affair, it seems to me. If you don't want me I'll go on until I do find a place."

"Hum," sniffed Grandmother. "I 'spose yer running away from yer folks.'"

"I'm eighteen years old and—I haven't any folks," announced Joan stoutly.

"Well, ye're mighty independent. I can see that. Ye wouldn't ride with that young feller that asked ye up the road a piece, would ye?" The old woman chuckled as she put the question. "I seen ye," she grinned. "Set down. I guess yer tired a trampin' that three mile."

"Oh, I rode most of the way with a farmer," said Joan.

She sat down on the old-fashioned lounge and glanced about the room that was cluttered with quaint odds and ends of furniture. It was rather a stuffy little room, but it held a comfortable sense of hominess, and it opened on the vine-covered porch and the path was bordered with larkspur and four-o'clocks. And beyond were the lilacs and the picket fence and the gray dusty road.

"Have ye been askin' along the way?"

Joan shook her head. "This is the first place I stopped."

"What wages are ye aimin' to get?" The withered lips closed tightly over the question, and the frail old body leaned forward in the cane-backed rocker.

"I'm not so awfully particular," said Joan with a smile. "Do you live all alone?"

"Yes," admitted Grandmother, eying her visitor suspiciously. "I wouldn't live with none of my relations. Ye couldn't hire me to."

"Well, I'd like to work for you for my room and board if I could have my afternoons off to study. You see, I want to teach next fall, if possible, and I want a quiet place where I can cram up for the certificate examinations."

"What's that ye say?"

The girl explained again, carefully.

"Oh, I understand ye now. I'm a little deef. Land sakes! I've known a heap of school teachers. Used to board them when I was younger. The schoolhouse is just down the road to yer left as ye come out. Mebby ye noticed it. I'm glad ye didn't ride with that smart-actin' young man. He's my grandson. Yes. But I don't have no truck with him. His name's Dan Crumpet. He runs the place with the big red barn beyent the Corners. Crumpet's Corners, folks calls it, on account of this here place of mine. It's the oldest house hereabouts."

The old woman looked proudly up at the low yellow ceiling. "I come here a bride and I intend to die here," she announced. "My children have tried mighty hard to git me out. They've sort of give it up now."

"Well, do you think I could stay?"

"We might try it fer a spell. See how we git on," said Grandmother Crumpet. "Did ye say yer name was Joan? Ye can call me Grandmother. About everybody does. I send out the washin', and there ain't much heavy work. I been doin' it all myself. I've had a heap o' girls wished onto me by my children, but I didn't keep them long. They wa'n't worth their keep, and they went gaddin' about so much they made more work than they done. I hope ye'll turn out to be some account."

Unpacking her suit-case in the narrow room beneath the eaves, Joan smiled over Grandmother's last speech. The old woman evidently liked the idea of making this arrangement herself. "I must keep good-natured but not let her bully me," thought Joan as she hung up her clothes in the tiny closet. The roof sloped down over the narrow bed with its gay patchwork cover. The only place she could stand erect was in the middle of the room where a strip of rain-stained ceiling stretched level above the breadth of rag carpet that lay between the window and the closet door.

Joan sat down on the floor by the window and looked out into the blossomy top of a huge apple-tree. Across the road was a wooded pasture lot and at the side of this a corn field lay, on toward the Corners. Bees droned in the apple blossoms, barely out of her reach. A cowbell tinkled remotely in the shady pasture. Joan laid her head on the window sill and drank in the fragrance happily. The wind fluttered her soft brown hair and brushed her thin young face and smiling mouth. In a little while Grandmother called her down for a cup of tea.

Then they sat on the narrow porch with the scent of lilacs and apple blooms about them. Occasionally a team or an automobile passed the picket gate, and the old woman usually knew who it was. Sometimes the passersby waved and called to her, and her white head bobbed a reply.

"They'll all be a wonderin' who I've got with me," chuckled Grandmother importantly.

When it got dark they went indoors, the old woman to her square bedroom that opened off of the kitchen and the girl to the narrow chamber beneath the eaves.

* * * * *

In a few days Joan learned the daily routine of feeding chickens, bringing milk and butter from the spring house, tidying the kitchen, and going to the tin box at the Corners for the mail. Grandmother said she would do her own cooking "as long as she could stand on her own feet."

Joan learned also that every bit of sour milk must be saved to make cottage cheese, that Grandmother sold enough eggs to pay her grocery bill, that sugar was used sparingly and that the only sort of meat they seemed destined to have was the home-cured ham in the funny little old smokehouse that looked as if Grandmother might have made herself. But there was plenty of good bread and butter and eggs. There were radishes and lettuce and juicy rhubarb in rank pink stalks against the garden fence. A little later there would be strawberries and other fruit. Joan liked gathering in the food from its various sources. She liked the woodland pasture with its pebbled creek, its birds and wild flowers, and she enjoyed the daily trip for the mail along the stretch of sandy road beside the willow hedge.

The son's family who lived across the field from the old homestead looked after Grandmother's wants. Jimmy, the youngest grandson, milked Grandmother's cow and left milk and butter in the spring house. Sarah Crumpet, the son's wife, sent fresh pies and rolls frequently. And for all her independence, the old woman accepted these things gratefully.

The second day after Joan's arrival Sarah Crumpet and her daughter, Annie, a fat, fretful girl about Joan's age, had called and talked so loud in the stuffy sitting-room that most of their gossip was plainly audible in the room up-stairs. Joan was amused at their evident curiosity about herself. Grandmother's replies were cryptic enough. She seemed to enjoy withholding the little she did know.

"Eh? What's that? Where does she come from? Oh, I guess that's her own affair. I ain't questioned her much," said Grandmother.

Joan heard the girl whine something about wanting to meet her.

"Oh, she studies afternoons," said Grandmother. "I wouldn't think of disturbin' her. It was in our bargain that she'd have her afternoons to herself. She ain't a real hired girl. She's goin' to be a teacher. Yes, I think I'll like her. She seems right sensible."

Joan smiled and her eyes softened gratefully. "Bless her old heart! She's a match for 'em."

"Oh, Grandmother, I think the country's beautiful," declared Joan one soft, blue-and-gold day a week after her arrival.

"Ye say that as if ye wa'n't used to it," said the old woman shrewdly.

"I'm not—so awfully," laughed the girl. She went up the steep bare stairs to her attic room, her "study" she called it since her trunk had come and the pine-box table was covered with books. Every day as soon as the noon meal was finished she went at her books. She pored over specimen examination questions and she reviewed history, geography and grammar. She was leaving arithmetic and algebra until the last because they were the hardest and she wanted them fresh in her mind when the examination came in September. She had outlined the work so that she would have twice as much time for mathematics.

She really liked to study, but often it was irksome on long afternoons with the birds calling in the appletree and the sun shimmering over the oaks and elms in the pasture. People passed on the dusty road. Grandmother Crumpet pottered about her flower beds or entertained callers or slept, with much noisy snoring, on the sitting-room lounge.

White petals dripped from the apple trees, and the grass beside the lilacs was sprinkled with withered bloom. Hard round peony buds grew pinker and whiter and loosened themselves softly like fluffy, magic balls. Columbines flaunted their red and yellow trumpets in the wildest nooks of the little pasture where Joan took brief rambles in the shady evenings or early in the morning before Grandmother was up.

One evening after Joan had been for a month at Crumpet's Corner she was snipping faded flowers from the blush roses beside the gate when Dan Crumpet passed in his long blue car. He bowed to Joan and she bowed back. This salutation, she had learned, was common among strangers in these quiet country ways. But when she glanced up at the porch she saw Grandmother sitting stiff and stolid with a fierce, pinched look on her white old face.

The next morning Annie Crumpet stopped and invited Joan to a party at her house.

"Tonight?" asked Joan in some surprise.

"Yes, it's awfully informal," said Annie, with a patronizing air. "I tried to get around to invite you yesterday, or day before, but I've been so busy. And I didn't suppose it would make any difference to you 'cause you never go anywheres."

Joan's dark blue eyes grew a shade darker, but she smiled a gay little smile.

"Why, yes, I'll come. Thank you."

"If you don't mind coming over alone I'll see't you get home all right." Annie giggled self-consciously. "But you better not go across the meadow, 'cause father's turned some young cattle in there and some of 'em might run at you."

"Then I shall surely go by the road," laughed Joan.

* * * * *

The cracked mirror in the attic bedroom reflected a flushed face as Joan dressed for the party that evening. She had pressed her pink organdie, with the rose sash, and she put on her pink silk stockings and pumps to match. She was spending a lot of time over her fluffy brown hair. "Say, anybody would think this was the first party you ever went to," she remarked mockingly to the beaming young person in the mirror.

"Land sakes, ye look like one o' them blush roses," observed Grandmother as Joan came down. "Better pick one to stick in your frock."

"Thank you, Grandmother!" Joan bent suddenly and touched her lips to the thin white hair. "Oh, don't fuss over me. I ain't one o' the soft kind," muttered Grandmother gruffly.

"I know you're not," laughed Joan. "Please excuse my slushiness. I haven't been—anywheres—for over a month, and this party is going to my head."

She skipped down the path. "All the same, you liked it!" she whispered over the blush rose bush.

Annie Crumpet stared open-mouthed as she answered the door for Joan. "Mercy, I didn't know you," she giggled. Sudden envy glinted in her pale eyes. She took Joan into the parlor where a few girls sat chattering, and an instant silence fell upon the group. "This is Grandmother's hired girl, Joan—Joan——" hesitated Annie.

"Miss Joan Bradley," prompted her guest.

The girls bowed stiffly and began urging each other to "go and play something." They tried awkwardly to ignore Joan.

Annie began talking violently to an over-dressed girl on the couch. "You can too play something," she urged. "You know a dozen dandy pieces by heart."

"No, I can't. Make Sally play first!" protested the girl.

"While you are thinking it over, do you mind if I do a little jazz?" asked Joan. Her chin was high, her blue eyes were black. She walked airily over to the piano bench, sat down and rippled her fingers across the keys. Her audience was deathly still as she swept into a dashing Spanish dance and played one swinging, lilting melody after another, without even a pause between. The room was filled, possessed by the music. It pulsed and flowed in jubilant rhythms, it laughed and leaped like gay fountains of sound. And then suddenly it stopped in a triumphant crescendo.

"It's all there, Grandmother"

"There! I feel a lot better," said Joan. She made a low, mocking courtesy and ran backward to the door in mincing, teasing steps. A little patter of applause swept the room and a louder patter came from the porch. Joan turned suddenly as she reached the hallway and bumped violently into a tall young man.

"I beg your pardon," she laughed.

"I beg yours. I was right in your way. Charmed motionless, you see. Please let me introduce myself, since we're neighbors. My name's Crumpet——"

"Yes, Mr. Dan Crumpet. I've heard about you."

Well, come on out, won't you? And let's talk." His hand was under her elbow, guiding her down the steps among other young men who were getting up from their seats around the porch to go inside. "I'm afraid you haven't heard anything very good about me, either."

"Oh, I haven't heard anything, really, except your name and where you live and that your grandmother doesn't seem——"

"Crazy about me? Say, it was good of you to come out here!"

"Oh, I couldn't do anything else. They don't like hired girls in there."

"Darn 'em! Did they——"

"They didnt do anything—much. I didn't give 'em a chance. Just plunked down at the piano while they were doing the you-first-my-dear stuff. You know. Nervy of me, wasn't it? But your cousin introduced me as the hired girl. I had to do something."

"Damn——" said Dan Crumpet fiercely.

"Please don't! Isn't it a wonderful night!"

They were walking across the big smooth lawn where white clover blossoms were sprinkled about. They followed a path around a clump of shrubbery and came to a side gate with a long blue car standing in front of it.

"Won't you please go for a ride?" he begged.

"Oh, I'd love to. But—ought we? Slipping away like this?"

"After—your introduction, I'd say we ought."

"Oh, I forgot about that. You were being so nice."

The car plunged into the dusky road, "as if it liked it," Joan declared.

"Annie's a fool sometimes," said Dan Crumpet. "She'll be ashamed of herself in a little while."

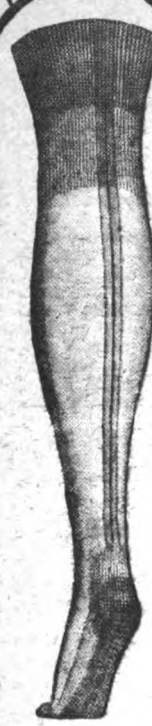
"Oh, that's all right. I am the hired girl. It was perky of me, caring and putting on airs. I suppose we're all snobs one way or another. But—oh, look! The fuzzy little owl! Did you see?"

"No, I was looking—somewhere else."

"The country's so lovely at night. I—I want to do more than look at it. I want to drink it in, somehow," said Joan as the car wound slowly through a strip of woodland with flowers gleaming white in the shadows.

"Why—why wouldn't you ride with me, that first time, on the road?"

"Dan, I-I do-care"



Over 1800 Bargains Like These In Sears, Roebuck and Co's Midsummer Sale Book!

YOU can buy, at greatly reduced prices, hundreds of articles useful the year around, like those shown here during our big Midsummer Sale, now in full swing.

We have picked the choicest of everything in our lines—dresses, silks, shoes, underwear and other wearing apparel for men, women and children, household needs, furniture, dinnerware, farm tools, auto accessories—and marked them at special low prices for this great Annual Event.

This "Book of Bargains" has gone to 9,000,000 of our customers. If you haven't it borrow your neighbor's copy, or write for one at once! This is the buying opportunity of the year to get tremendous bargains from the World's BIGGEST Mail Order House. Sale ends August 31st. Write and tell your friends to write, too.

Panel Back

Silk and Artificial Silk Mixed Hosiery.

Sale Price

85¢

86J2386A—Black.
86J2390A—Dark brown.

Knit of fine genuine silk and artificial silk; elastic knit mercerized cotton tops. Reinforced cotton heels and toes. Double soles and high spliced heels. Seamless feet. Sizes, 8½, 9, 9½ and 10. State size. Shipping weight, 3 oz.

Dainty Costume Princess Slip

For Women.

Standard quality nainsook. Beautifully trimmed with colored Lorraine embroidery work and hemstitching around bodice and shoulder straps. Gathered at hips. Deep 20-inch hem makes the garment shadowproof. Shipping weight, 8 ounces.

29J1339A—White.

Sizes to fit 34 to 44 inches bust measure. State size.

Sale Price

89¢

Order Direct From This Advertisement.

An Amazing Value!

Patent Leather With Gray Suede.

15J72676A—Sizes, 2½ to 8.

Beautifully shaped patent leather slipper with its distinctive, pleasing gray suede tongue effect. Something new and admired by all women. Be sure to state size. Shipping weight, 1 pound.

Wide widths only.

Sale Price

$3.39

All Silk Printed Crepe de Chine

Beautifully printed All Silk Crepe de Chine, now in such demand, with harmonizing plain color crepe de chine, makes this dress especially charming. Note also stunning sleeve drapery. The very latest thing!

Women's and misses' sizes, 32 to 44 inches bust measure; front length of skirt, women's, 31 to 37 inches; misses', 30 to 35 inches. Give bust measure and front length of skirt.

31J710A—Black and gray.
31J711A—Navy and gray.
31J712A—Brown and gray.

Sale Price $12.50 Shipping weight, 1¾ pounds.

Hair Nets

18J694A—Single Mesh.

Guaranteed finest quality to be had. Large full cap shape. Handmade of selected real human hair. Choice: Black, blonde, light brown, medium brown, dark brown, or auburn (red). State color. Shipping weight, 1¼ ounces.

Sale price, 6 for 39¢

Very Fine Leather

Woman's Purse

New Shape With Large Mirror

18J605A—High quality leather, together with the high class workmanship, makes this a great bargain. Two roomy pockets. Handy large size mirror framed under leather lined flap. Hand tooled effect design. Size, 6⅛x5⅛ inches. Colors: Brown (rich looking dark russet finish) or black. State color. Shipping weight, 14 ounces.

Sale Price

$1.65

Genuine Gillette Safety Razor

6J10958A—Special for this sale. Put up in neat box with one blade (two cutting edges). Shipping weight, 6 ounces.

48¢

Until August 31st you can buy this great bargain for only $3.75. 48-Piece Assortment, 12 Dinner Plates, 12 Sauce Dishes, 12 Tea Cups, 12 Saucers, fine quality, pure white semi-porcelain. Embossed edges. Safe delivery guaranteed—we replace breakage free. Shipping weight, 35 pounds.

35J9706A—Sale price.....$3.75

Scout Shoe

Full grain double tanned brown leather. Tough, yet pliable uppers. Medium heavy Cromax leather sole. A big value.

67J74822A—Men's and Big Boys'. Sizes, 6 to 12. Wide widths only. Shipping wt., 2⅞ lbs. See August Sale Book for other sizes.

$1.89

3 Pieces Best Grade Aluminum Ware

Price Cut in Half!

Usually retails at $4.00. Save half. You need these for fruit preserving. Shipping weight, per set, 4 lbs.

99J464A

Sale price, per set, $1.90

Mail Coupon for FREE BOOK!

SEARS, ROEBUCK AND CO.
Chicago Philadelphia Dallas Seattle

Send me "Midsummer Sale" Catalog No. 91C23.

Name .....

Postoffice .....

Rural Route.....Box No.....

State .....

Street and No.....

Sears, Roebuck and Co.

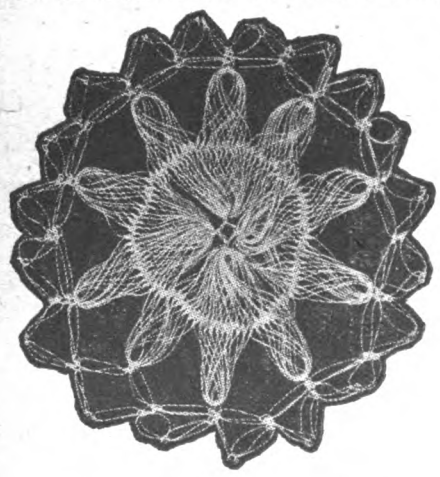
The World's Biggest Mail Order House

Comfort's Knitting and Crocheti

Terms Used in Knot Stitch

K st., knot stitch, draw out loop about one quarter inch, catch thread and pull through, then put the hook between the drawn loop and the thread just pulled through, catch the thread, draw through these two stitches to form the knot.

Terms Used in Crochet



Ch st., chain stitch, simply a series of loops or stitches each drawn with the hook through the preceding one; s c, single crochet, having a loop on hook, insert hook in work as indicated, draw loop through thread over, and draw through both loops; d c, double crochet, thread over hook, insert hook in work, draw loop through, thread over draw through two loops, thread over, draw through two loops; tr c, treble crochet, thread over hook twice, then work off as in double crochet, there being three groups of two loops to work off instead of two; block, blk, 4 d c preceded and followed by a space; sp, formed by ch between 2 doubles; skip, sk, to miss, omit or not work over a certain number of preceding stitches.

Hairpin Work or Maltese Crochet

THIS work is again becoming popular and many pretty trimmings and articles can be made by combining it with crochet.

Although the method of making the hairpin braid is generally known, a description of how to proceed may be of advantage to some.

A stout wire hairpin may be used, or a set of various sized staples made especially for the work can be purchased. To make the hairpin braid, tie the thread around one prong of a pin or staple. With the prongs down and holding it in the left hand, draw the thread under the loop on the staple and make 1 s c in the center.

SINGLE WHEEL USED IN COLLAR.

Turn the pin or staple towards you from right to left, keeping the thread back of the left prong, and slipping the hook over the end of the staple with the loop on it.

Draw stitch through loop on left prong and make 1 s c, turn, repeat and continue until the staple is full. Slip work off putting a few loops back in place if the length required has not been made and continue.

Maltese Braid and Knot Stitch Collar

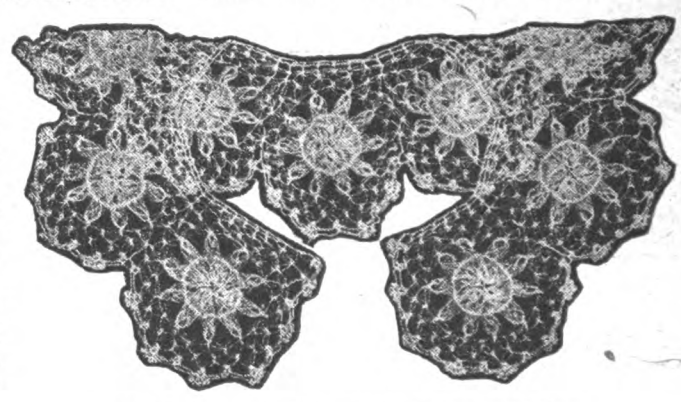
This lacy design is a very good example of the dainty effect which can be secured by this work.

To copy this collar one will require a ball of No. 60 or 70 white mercerized crochet cotton, a strong wire hairpin or staple and a No. 12 steel crochet hook.

For the work as shown an inch wide staple was used for the braid. About five inches of this will be needed for each of the nine wheels, one of the wheels is here shown almost full size.

After completing a five-inch length knot the braid together securely, then to finish the center make 1 s c through about one-fourth of the loop, ch 2, repeat 3 times and join to the first stitch, drawing all up as closely as possible.

To complete the edge of each wheel make 1 s c through 9 or 10 loops, (which even number divides the whole into equal parts) draw out quarter inch loop and make one knot st. (see terms).



One loop st, 1 s c in another group of the same number of threads, 2 knot sts, 1 s c. Repeat around, then add a second rowof 2 knot sts between each knot st.

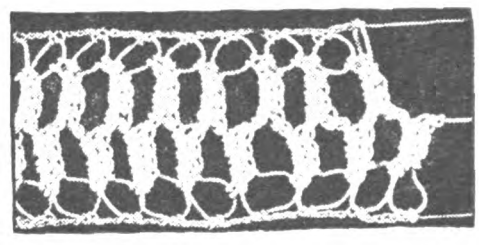
Before working this round it is well to cut a paper pattern of the shaped collar desired. Sew the wheels equally distant apart, then in working the second row of knot sts, join two or three sts between the wheels as worked.

Finish the inside edge of the collar with two rows of doubles with ch two between each, and the outside each as follows; 2 d c with ch 2 between in a knot st, ch 5, repeat from *.

2nd round—Shell of 1 d c, ch 3, sl st in top of double to form picot, ch 1, repeat four times, working under chain between first two doubles in the last round.

Many and pretty variations can be made in this work and used for edging handkerchiefs, towels and even curtains, according to the quality of cotton used in making. An especially simple and durable insertion for curtains is shown below.

MALTESE BRAID AND KNOT STITCH COLLAR.



Insertion for Curtains

Using an inch staple, tie a loop and slip on one prong, wind thread around opposite prong, with crochet hook draw up loop, work 3 s c, * slip loop on hook over prong, wind again 3 s c, repeat from *. When complete ch 5, 1 s c in each loop on edge. Repeat on opposite edge.

Stocking Bag

From two 36-inch circles of material a darning bag can be made which will be of ample size to hold the family stockings.

For the outside use any strong figured cotton material, and for the inside a plain colored goods. Turn in the edges, baste and sew together. Fold four times and mark the edge with pins, then sew to these places good-sized brass or ivory rings. For closing the bag use a cotton cord or ribbon. Fit to the inside two or three bags for holding darning cotton, and on the opposite side a good-sized needle-book.

INSERTION FOR CURTAIN.

Towel Insertion

Fig 1. shows a combination of three strips of hairpin braid—two made on three-quarters staple and one on an inch staple—each being worked however with 2 s c over each loop before turning.

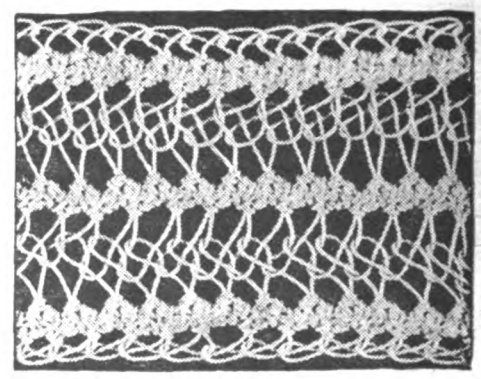
Join the center strip to the side strips by drawing a loop first from one strip and then the other. Finish the outside edges, by drawing the loops through each other.

Fig. 2. is a variation which is more open work and lacy in effect. This also has 2 s c through the center and may be made any width. The two strips are joined by making 1 s c through 5 loops, ch 3, 1 s c through 3 loops on second strip, repeat. Along the edges work 1 s c through 3 loops, ch 3, repeat.

Mile-a-minute lace, crocheted with chains between two strips of hairpin braid makes an attractive combination.

A simple edging may be made as follows:

Use an inch strip of hairpin braid. Crochet 1 d c through 3 loops, ch 3, 1 d c under same loops, 1 d c under next 3 loops, ch 3, 1 d c under same 3, repeat. At end turn with ch 5, 2 d c under ch 3 between last 2 d c, ch 2, 2 d c between next 2 d c repeat. 2 more rows of 2 d c between each 2 d c.



Then to one edge add any simple scallop.

American Legion Filet Design

By request

This pillow top if made of coarse crochet cotton which works about four spaces to an inch will measure nearly 18 inches square.

If one desires it of finer thread a border can easily be worked around the completed design to make it the right size.

MALTESE INSERTION. FIG. 1.

Begin with ch 230 sts, turn. 1 d c in 9th st from hook, ch 2, sk 2, 1 d c, repeat making 75 spaces in all.

If one does not want to begin with a long ch in making the first row for any piece of filet work, the required number of spaces may be made in this way. Ch 8, 1 d c in first st, ch 5, 1 d c in 3rd ch before first double, ch 5, turn, 1 d c in 3rd st before last double.

Repeat until one has the required number of stitches.

2nd and 3rd rows—17 sps, 41 blks (124 d c), 17 sps, ch 5, turn.

4th and 5th rows—15 sps, 3 blks, 39 sps, 3 blks, 15 sps, ch 5, turn.

6th row—13 sps, 3 blks, 4 sps, 3 blks, 4 sps, 2 blks, 4 sps, 2 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 4 sps, 2 blks, 4 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 3 blks, 13 sps, ch 5, turn.

7th row—13 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, 2 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, 4 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, 5 sps, 1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 3 blks, 13 sps, ch 5, turn.

8th row—11 sps, 3 blks, 5 sps, 1 blk, 6 sps, 2 blks, 4 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, 4 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 5 sps, 3 blks, 11 sps, ch 5, turn.

9th row—11 sps, 3 blks, 5 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 2 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, 4 sps (1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk, 5 sps), twice, 3 blks, 11 sps, ch 5, turn.

10th row—9 sps, 3 blks, 7 sps, 1 blk, 7 sps, 2 blks, 4 sps, 2 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 4 sps, 2 blks, 4 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 7 sps, 3 blks, 9 sps, ch 5, turn.

11th row—9 sps, 3 blks, 51 sps, 3 blks, 9 sps, ch 5, turn.

12th and 13th rows—7 sps, 3 blks, 15 sps, 11 blks, 15 sps, 3 blks, 7 sps, ch 5, turn.

14th and 15th rows—5 sps, 3 blks, 15 sps, 3 blks *23 sps, work back from * to beginning of row same as in last row.

16th row—3 sps, 3 blks, 15 sps, 3 blks, * 27 sps, work back from *.

17th row—3 sps, 3 blks, 15 sps, 3 blks, 12 sps,* 3 blks, work back.

18th row—1 sp, 3 blks, 15 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 9 blks, 3 sps, * 3 blks, work back.

19th row—1 sp, 3 blks, 15 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 8 sps, 1 blk,* 7 sps, work back.

20th row—1 sp, 3 blks, 13 sps, 3 blks, 4 sps, 1 blk, 9 sps, 1 blk, * 5 sps, work back.

21st row—1 sp, 3 blks, 13 sps, 3 blks, 4 sps, 1 blk, 10 sps, 1 blk. * 3 sps, work back.

22nd row—1 sp, 3 blks, 11 sps, 3 blks, 6 sps, 1 blk, 11 sps, 1 blk, * 1 sp, work back.

23rd row—1 sp, 3 blks, 11 sps, 3 blks, 6 sps, 1 blk, 12 sps * 1 blk, work back.

24th and 25th rows—1 sp, 3 blks, 9 sps, 3 blks, 8 sps, 1 blk, 12 sps * 1 blk, work back.

26th row—1 sp, 3 blks, 7 sps, 3 blks, 9 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 11 sps * 1 blk, work back.

27th row—1 sp, 3 blks, 7 sps, 3 blks, 5 sps, 4 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, 10 sps * 1 blk, work back.

28th row—1 sp, 3 blks, 7 sps, 3 blks, 7 sps, 2 blks, 4 sps, 1 blk, 4 sps, * 9 blks, work back.

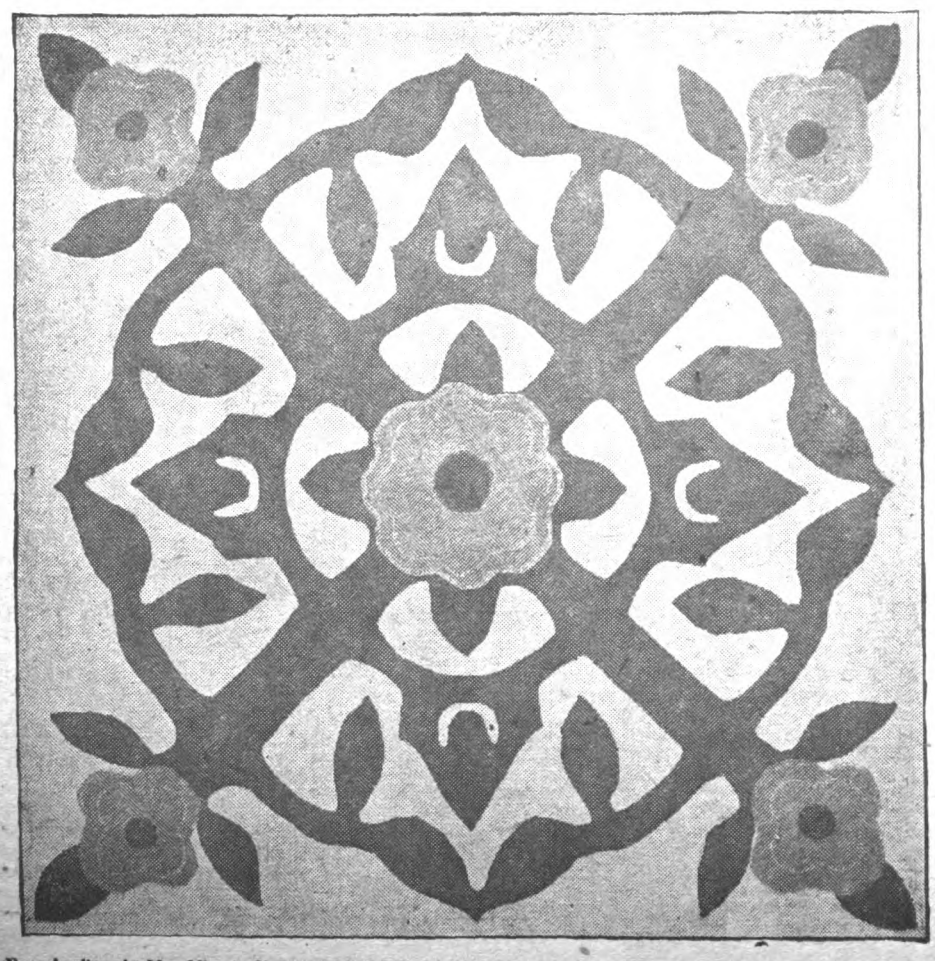
29th row—1 sp, 3 blks, 7 sps, 3 blks, 4 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 5 sps, 1 blk, 4 sps *, 9 blks, work back.

30th row—1 sp, 3 blks, 7 sps, 3 blks, 5 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 6 sps, 3 blks, * 9 sps, work back.

31st row—1 sp, 3 blks, 7 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 9 sps, 3 blks, * 9 sps, work back.

32nd row—1 sp, 3 blks, 7 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, 3 blks, 9 sps, 3 blks, * 11 sps, work back.

33rd row—1 sp, 3 blks, 7 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 2 sps, 10 blks * 13 sps, work back.



34th row—1 sp, 3 blks, 7 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 5 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, 3 blks * 5 sps, work back.

35th row—1 sp, 3 blks, 7 sps, 3 blks, 4 sps, 2 blks, 6 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, * 1 blk (3 sps, 1 blk) 3 times, work back from *.

36th ro
1 blk, 8 sp
3 times, w
37th ro
1 blk, 9 sp
3 sps, 1 bl
38th ro
1 blk, 10 s
4 sps, 3 b
39th ro
3 blks, 7 sp
(3 sps, 1 b
40th ro
1 blk (3 s
from *.
41st ro
1 blk, 9 sp
1 sp), 4
42nd ro
1 blk, 8 sp
43rd ro
2 blks, 8 s
44th ro
1 blk, 7 sp
45th ro
12 blks, 9
46th ro
1 blk, 4 sp
47th ro
3 blks, 11
48th ro
2 blks, 12
49th ro
1 blk, 1 sp
back.
50th ro
2 blks, 10
51st ro
1 blk, 1 sp
back.
52nd ro
1 blk, 1 sp
back.
53rd ro
 3 sps, 3
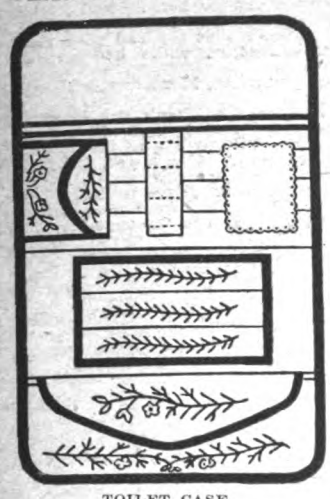
1 blk * 11
54th ro
blks, 1 sp,
1 blk, 7 sp
5 sps, wor
55th ro
5 sps, 3 bl
1 blk * 9
56th ro
1 blk, 8 sp
sps, 1 blk,
1 sp, 3 bl
3 blks, 1 s
57th ro
7 sps, 3 bl
1 blk, 7 sp
3 sps, 3 bl
58th ro
3 blks, 1 s
work back
59th ro
1 blk, 4 sp
3 sps, 1 b
1 blk, 3 sp
60th ro
1 blk, 4 sp
twice, 1 s
4 sps, 3 bl
61st ro
blks, 11 sp
(1 sp, 1 b
62nd ro
2 blks, 6 s
3 sps, 2 bl
63rd ro
blks, 6 sps

Rose Applique by Mrs. Minerva Hohn. The dark part of this design is of green, cut in one piece. The applique is invisible on unbleached background. Roses, two shades, pink with yellow centers, edges are buttonholed.

Club for Nimble Fingered Folks



By Mrs. Wheeler Wilkinson, Ed.

Toilet Case

CASES for various articles are always very convenient when packing for a trip for the week end or longer. A place for everything and everything in its place is never more necessary than when planning to get everything required into a compact whole.

The home-made case illustrated is designed for one's toilet articles, and cares for them most completely.

Eider-down lined with sateen and bound with ribbon were the materials used in this instance but other suitable material may be substituted if preferred.

TOILET CASE.

The measurements are nine by 16 inches. Across each end run two, four and one-half inch pockets, one open and one with a buttoned-down flap.

Above the open pocket runs a four-inch strip of rubber having a pocket for soap and a folding toothbrush on it.

The bound band of material between this and the other pocket, which is designed for one's comb and brush, is stitched to form three partitions for holding tubes of cream, tooth paste, etc. To the center of the outside is attached ribbons, which are tied when the case is packed and folded.

Flower Doily in Colors

By Jessie Gent

A flower edge of six pink blossoms and six groups of dark green leaves is arranged around a crocheted center of cream color.

For materials use silkateen or any crochet thread which is soft twist and has a mercerized finish and a medium-sized steel crochet hook.

For the Center

With cream silkateen ch 9, join in ring by sl st to first st.

1st round—20 d c in ring, join, ch 5.

2nd round—1 d c in 2nd double, ch 2, skip 1 d c, 1 d c in next double, repeat around, ending with ch 2, 1 sl st in 3rd st of ch 5, ch 2.

3rd round—2 d c under ch, * ch 1, 3 d c under next ch, repeat from *, join.

4th round—Ch 7, 1 s c under ch 1, repeat around. Slip st to center of first chain.

5th round—Ch 8, 1 s c under ch 7, repeat around.

6th round—Ch 5, 1 d c in 3 rd st of ch, ch 2, 1 d c in next 3rd st, repeat around making 40 spaces in all.

7th round—Same as 6th round, making a ch 2, 1 d c between each d c.

8th round—Chain 4, with 1 s c on each d c, repeat around.

9th round—Slip st to center ch 4, ch 4, 1 d c under next ch, repeat around.

10th round—Ch 5, 1 d c in 2nd ch of 4, ch 2, 1 d c in top d c, ch 2. Repeat making d c on d c and 1 d c under each chain.

11th round—Ch 4, 1 s c in top of 2 d c, repeat.

12th round—Slip st to center of ch 4 * ch 5, 1 s c under next ch repeat from * .

Make 12 more rounds same as the last, simply adding 1 st to each of each round thus:

13th round—Ch 6,

14th round—Ch 7, etc.

For the daisy like flower using the pink silkateen and beginning in the center with ch 12, join in ring, ch 2, 36 d c in ring, ch 2, turn.

1st row of petal—6 d c on first 6 d c, ch 2, turn.

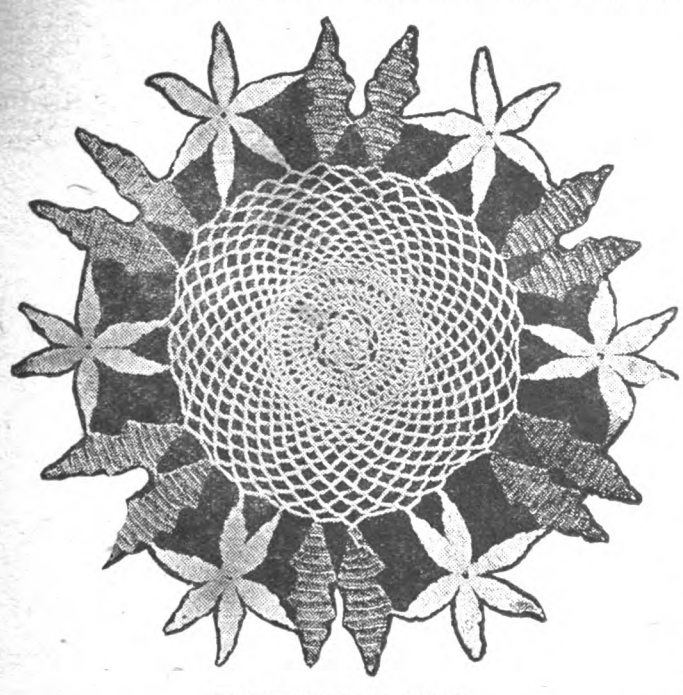
2nd row—7 d c on 6 d c, ch 2, turn.

3rd row—9 d c on 7 d c, ch 2, turn.

4th row—10 d c on 9 d c, ch 2, turn.

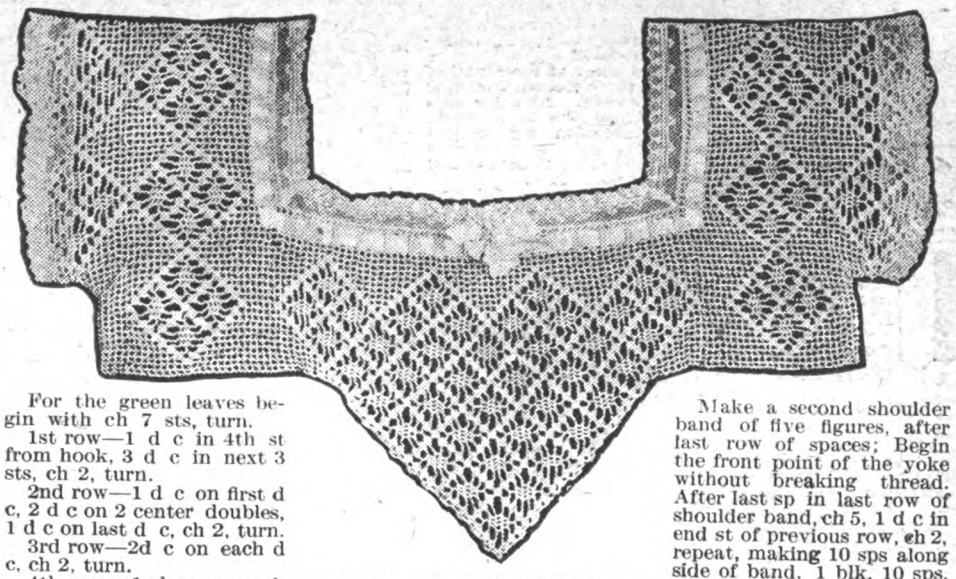
5th row—12 d c on 10 d c, ch 2, turn.

6th row—Skip first and last doubles, 10 d c on 10 center d c, ch 2, turn.



7th row—Same as last working only 8 d c, ch 2, turn.

8th row—Same as 6th row, working only 6 d c, ch 2, turn.



9th row—same as 6th row, working only 4 d c, ch 2.

10th row—3 d c, ch 2, turn.

11th row—2 d c in center d c. Draw thread through loop and leave end, draw over and over through edge stitches and cut. Starting from the center make five more petals.

FLOWER DOILY IN COLORS.

CROCHETED SPIDER-WEB NIGHTGOWN YOKE.

For the green leaves begin with ch 7 sts, turn.

1st row—1 d c in 4th st from hook, 3 d c in next 3 sts, ch 2, turn.

2nd row—1 d c on first d c, 2 d c on 2 center doubles, 1 d c on last d c, ch 2, turn.

3rd row—2d c on each d c, ch 2, turn.

4th row—1 d c on each d c, 2 d c on 7th double or 14 d c in all, ch 2, turn.

5th row—18 d c, ch 2, turn.

6th row—Skip first and third doubles from each end making 14 d c in all, ch 2, turn.

7th row—Skip first and last doubles, making 12 d c, ch 2, turn.

8th row—14 d c, ch 2, turn.

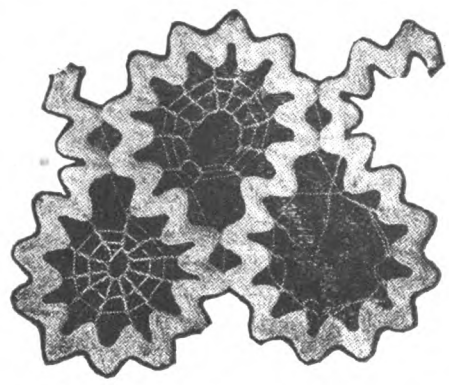
9th row—16 d c, ch 2, turn.

10th row—12 d c, ch 2, turn.

11th row—9 d c, ch 2, turn.

12th row—7 d c, ch 2, turn.

13th row—5 d c, ch 2, turn.



14th row—3 d c, ch 2, turn.

15th row—2 d c. Draw thread through loop and fasten. Sew flowers and leaves to the edge of the crocheted center, arranging them as shown in our illustration.

Crocheted Spider-Web Nightgown Yoke

By Claudia Alexander

Materials: Three balls No. 40 mercerized crochet cotton, steel crochet hook No. 12, two yards inch-wide white lace, one and one-half yards narrow ribbon.

DETAIL OF RICKRACK SPIDER-WEB LACE.

This yoke has a point in both the front and the back, straight bands over the shoulders to which edges are added lengthwise to form the sleeves, and small gores made separately and sewed in to give under-arm space.

The back may be a straight band the same width as the shoulder bands if preferred.

Make the shoulder bands first as follows: Ch 66 sts, turn. First two rows 18 sps each, ch 5, turn.

1st row—1 d c in 9th st from hook, ch 2, sk 2, 1 d c, repeat making 8 sps in all, 4 d c in next sts, 9 sps, ch 6, 1 d c, ch 3, turn.

2nd row—7 d c under ch 6, 8 sps, 1 blk, ch 2, skip blk, 1 blk in next sp, 7 sps, ch 5, turn.

3rd row—6 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, 1 d c under ch 2 between blks, 1 blk in sp beyond blk in last row, 7 sps, ch 6, 1 d c, ch 3, turn.

4th row—7 d c, 6 sps, 1 blk, ch 5, 1 d c under ch, 1 d c on d c, 1 d c under ch, ch 5, 1 blk, 5 sps, ch 5, turn.

5th row—4 sps, 1 blk, ch 5, 1 d c under ch, 2 d c, between doubles, 1 d c under ch, ch 5, 1 blk, 5 sps, ch 6, 1 d c, ch 3, turn.

6th row—7 d c, 4 sps, 1 blk, ch 2, 1 blk under ch 5, ch 5, 3 d c between doubles, ch 5, 1 blk under ch, ch 2, 1 blk, 3 sps, ch 5, turn.

7th row—2 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, 1 d c, between blks, ch 3, 1 blk, ch 3, 1 d c on center d c, ch 3, 1 blk, ch 3, 1 d c, ch 3, 1 blk, 3 sps, ch 6, 1 d c, ch 3, turn.

8th row—7 d c, 2 sps, 1 blk, ch 5, 3 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, ch 2, 1 blk, ch 5, 3 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 3, turn.

9th row—1 blk, ch 5, 4 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, ch 5, 4 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 6, 1 d c, ch 3, turn.

This is the center of the diamond shaped design of four webs. If the work draws or does not lie flat, increase the chains between the blocks in working the webs.

10th row—Same as 8th row.

11th row—Same as 7th row.

12th row—Same as 6th row.

13th row—Same as 5th row.

14th row—Same as 4th row.

15th row—Same as 3rd row.

16th row—Same as 2nd row.

Repeat from 1st row 5 times after completing the last figure, work two rows of all spaces.

Make a second shoulder band of five figures, after last row of spaces; Begin the front point of the yoke without breaking thread. After last sp in last row of shoulder band, ch 5, 1 d c in end st of previous row, ch 2, repeat, making 10 sps along side of band, 1 blk, 10 sps, ch 6, 1 d c, ch 2, turn.

One is now working from the bottom of right-hand shoulder band of the front, back and forth, from the neck to the point, towards the left-hand side of the yoke.

Work next 8 rows, copying the webs in the band.

10th row—Working from the neck turn with ch 2, 7 d c, 3 sps, 1 blk, ch 5, 3 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, ch 2, 1 blk, ch 5, 3 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, ch 2, 1 blk, ch 2, 1 d c. At this point one begins to increase to form the point, ch 6, turn.

11th row—1 blk in end sp of last row. Ch 3, 1 d c, ch 3, 1 blk, ch 5, 1 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, ch 5, 1 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, ch 5, 1 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, 4 sps, ch 6, 1 d c, ch 2, turn.

12th row—1 d c, 5 sps, 1 blk, ch 2, 1 blk, ch 5, 3 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, ch 2, 1 blk, ch 5, 3 d c, ch 5, 1 blk under end ch in last row. Ch 12, turn.

13th row—1 d c in 9th st from hook, ch 2, 3 d c, work under end ch, 1 d c on last d c of blk in last row. Ch 7, 4 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, 1 web as usual, 6 sps, edge as usual.

14th row—Edge, 7 sps, work across 2 webs as usual. Finish with 1 blk under ch 2 beyond blk in last row. Ch 2, 1 d c in end sp, ch 12, turn.

15th row—1 d c in 9th st from hook, ch 2, 1 blk in sp in last row, work across as in 11th row, ending with 8 sps, edge.

16th row—Edge. 9 sps, 1 blk, ch 2, 1 blk, work across 2 webs, ending with 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 12, turn.

17th row—2 sps worked as in 15th row. work across 2 webs, 10 sps, edge.

18th row—Edge. Same as 16th row ending with 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 12, turn.

19th row—2 sps worked as in 17th row. Work across as in 11th row, 8 sps, edge.

20th row—Edge, 7 sps, work across 3 webs ending with 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 12, turn.

21st row—2 sps worked as in 19th row. Work across 3 webs, 6 sps, edge.

22nd row—Edge, 5 sps, 1 blk, ch 2, work across 3 webs ending with 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 12, turn.

23rd row—2 sps, work across as in 11th row, ending with 4 sps, edge.

24th row—Edge, 3 sps, work across webs as usual, ending with 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 12, turn.

25th row—2 sps, 1 blk, work across webs, 2 sps, edge.

26th row—Edge, 3 sps, same as 24th row, ending with 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 12, turn.

27th row—2 sps, 1 blk, work across as in 11th row, 4 sps, edge.

28th row—Edge, 5 sps, 1 blk, ch 2, 1 blk, work across 4 webs, ending with 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 12, turn.

29th row—2 sps, 1 blk, work across 4 webs, 6 sps, edge.

30th row—Edge, 7 sps, 4 webs, ch 2, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 12, turn.

31st row—2 sps, 1 blk, same as 11th row, 8 sps, edge.

32nd row—Edge, 9 sps, 1 blk, ch 2, 4 webs, ending with 1 sp, ch 9. This is the center point of the yoke.

33rd row—1 blk in end sp of last row, ch 7, 4 d c, work across 4 webs, as usual 10 sps, edge.

34th row—Edge, 9 sps. Same as 32nd row, ending with 1 blk, 1 sp over blk in last row, ch 5, turn. Point is now decreased in this manner, duplicating each row from the 32nd to the 1st.

Work a duplicate point for the back of the yoke, or a straight band of 4 figures. Join to shoulder bands with needle and thread or crochet together on wrong side by slip stitching.

To Edge Sleeves

Counting along the side edge of the shoulder band from the bottom of the front, make 1 d c in the end of the 16th row. Work 9 sps, 1 blk (this should come in sp before the blk in the 9th row of the second figure, see illustration) ch 2, 1 blk, 13 sps, repeat.

If this row is started correctly, although the rows are worked in the opposite direction the groups of 4 webs will come opposite the 4 webs in the shoulder bands.

Work 5 webs in this row ending with 9 sps, ch 5, turn.

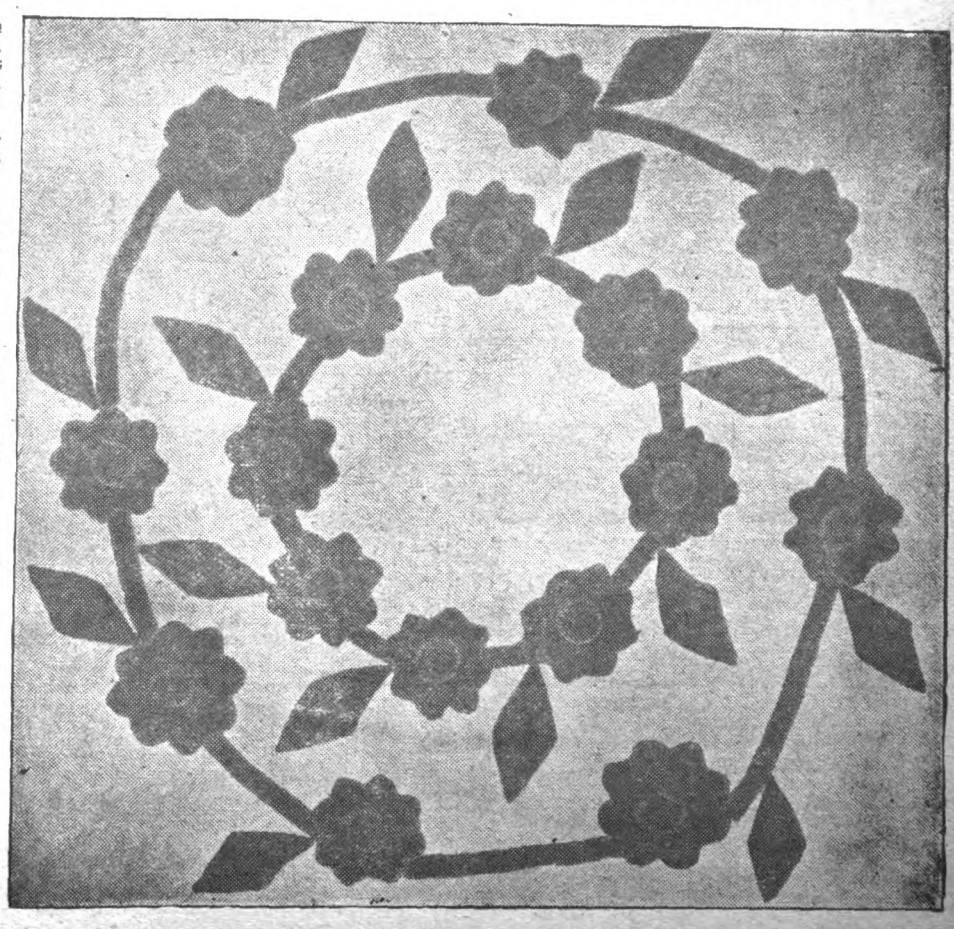
2nd row—8 sps, * 1 blk, ch 5, 1 d c, ch 5, 1 d c, 11 sps, repeat from * ending with 8 sps, ch 5, turn.

3rd row—7 sps, * 1 blk, ch 5, 3 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, 9 sps, repeat from * ending with 7 sps, ch 5, turn.

4th row—6 sps, * 1 blk, ch 5, 4 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, 7 sps, repeat from * ending with 6 sps, ch 5, turn.

5th row—5 sps, 1 blk, ch 2 * 1 blk, ch 5, 3 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, ch 2, 1 blk, 5 sps, repeat from * ending with 5 sps, ch 5, turn.

INFANT'S ROBE DRESS.



6th row—4 sps, * 1 blk, ch 5, 1 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, ch 5, 1 d c, 1 blk, ch 5, 1 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, 3 sps, repeat from * ending with 5 sps, ch 5, turn.

7th row—3 sps, * 1 blk, ch 5, 3 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, ch 2, 1 blk, ch 5, 3 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, repeat from * ending with 3 sps, ch 5, turn.

8th row—2 sps, 1 blk, * ch 7, 4 d c, ch 7, 1 blk, repeat from * ending with 2 sps, ch 3, turn.

9th row—2 sps, (one is now decreasing to form points) 1 blk, ch 5, 3 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, ch 2, 1 blk, ch 5, 3 d c, ch 5, 1 blk, 1 tr c be-

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 26.)

Rose Wreaths by Mrs. Haddock. Unbleached 16-inch squares. Green leaves and stems buttonholed on edges with lighter green. Pink scallop edged roses with yellow centers, also buttonholed.

FREE Book Anyone Can Learn to Play

The origin and history of that wonderful instrument—the

SAXOPHONE

The Buescher Saxophone is the easiest of all wind instruments to play. With the aid of the first three lessons, which are sent without charge, the scale can be mastered in an hour; in a few weeks you can be playing popular music. The Saxophone is the most popular instrument for Home Entertainment, Church, Lodge of School, or for Orchestra Dance Music.

Easy to pay You may try any Buescher Saxophone, Cornet, Trumphet, Trom-bone or other instrument 6 days in your own home, if satisfied, pay for it by easy payments. Mention instrument interested in when sending for Free Book.

BUESCHER BAND INSTRUMENT CO.
8090 Buescher Block Elkhart, Ind.

Salesmen
$10 or more per day

N. F. BORN, VIRGINIA Made $204.00 last week selling direct to wearer our guaranteed, all-wool, tailored-to-measure suits and over-coats at

$24.50 and $28.50

Latest styles; finest fabrics; linings and trimmings High Grade serge or alpaca. Our 25 years experience, perfect equipment, organization, and financial strength enable us to turn out such Superior Garments that sales are easy and repeat orders sure. No experience necessary, we teach you how. Exceptionally Liberal Profits paid you daily at the time each sale is made. We deliver and collect. Complete, attractive outfit absolutely free to salesmen with acceptable references. Territory rapidly being taken up. Make application today for our Fall line—ready early in July.

INTERSTATE TAILORS
404 Pike St. Cincinnati, Ohio

FREE FORD AUTO TO AGENTS

Here's an opportunity to earn big money—$6 to $12 a day, with easy work, all your time or spare time and obtain a Ford Automobile free besides. A straightout from the shoulder business proposition. No voting or guessing contest. We want wide-awake men and women to introduce into every home our famous ZANOL Pure Food Products, Non-Alcoholic Food Flavors in tubes, Toilet Preparations, Perfumes and Soaps; 250 other light weight household necessities.

MAKE $50 A WEEK EASY.

No experience necessary—we teach you how, give you the right start and help you make a success. Absolutely no limit to your earning power. We can use only a certain number of General Agents so get in touch with us at once. We furnish our representatives with a free automobile. Just send postal for particulars and money making offer.

AMERICAN PRODUCTS CO.
8912, Amer. Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

TWO BEAUTIES
$6.75 $11.75
Watches you're proud to own

Prettiest watches that ever snugly hugged a fair feminine wrist. You'd think they were the highest priced watches, but by selling in enormous quantities, we cut prices. Ladies Watch of 14K White Gold filled, 25 years guarantee on tonneau shape case—richly carved—6 jewel adjusted imported movement; charming hand-made dial; sapphire crown; grosgrain ribbon and clasp. One year guarantee. A SENSATIONAL OFFER AT $6.75. Also available in rectangular case at $11.75. SEND NO MONEY. WE PREPAY POSTAGE. Pay postman. You take no risk—money back promptly if not satisfied. These are good time keepers. Write today for yours.

Precious Wares Co.
ART JEWELRY
389 FIFTH AVE., DEPT. 418,
NEW YORK CITY

MAKE MONEY AT HOME

YOU can earn from $1 to $2 an hour in your spare time writing show cards. Quickly and easily learned by our new, simple "Instructograph" method. No canvassing or soliciting; we teach you how, guarantee you steady work at home no matter where you live, and pay you cash each week.

Full particulars and Booklet Free.
AMERICAN SHOW CARD SCHOOL
238 Ryrie Building Toronto, Can

MUSIC LESSONS FREE

You can read music like this quickly

IN YOUR HOME. Write today for our FREE booklet. It tells how to learn to play Piano, Organ, Violin, Mandolin, Guitar, Banjo, etc. Beginners or advanced players. Your only expense about 2c per day for music and postage used.

AMERICAN SCHOOL of MUSIC, 15 Lakeside Bldg., CHICAGO

Art Corner Your Pictures—In an Album

where you can keep them safe and enjoy them always.

Engel
5 Styles "Art Corners" 3 Colors

are on sale at Photo Supply and Album counters everywhere. They are the only Quick, Easy, Artistic, No Paste, No Fold way to mount Kodak Prints. A dime brings 100 and samples to try. Write

ENGEL MFG. CO.
Dept. 34V 4711 N. Clark St., Chicago

10 of Buys 100

Sell Shirts

Sell Madison "Better-Made" Shirts, Pajamas, and Nightshirts direct from our factory to wearer. Nationally advertised. Easy to sell. Exclusive patterns. Exceptional values. No experience or capital required. Large steady income assured. Entirely new proposition.

WRITE FOR FREE SAMPLES.
MADISON SHIRT CO., 505 B'way, N.Y. City

Haley's Iron Heart

By Hapsburg Liebe

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

"COME here, Peaches—come here, honey! You mustn't put clothespins on the cat's tail thataway; it's funny to you, I know, but it hurts the pore cat. Come back, Thomas—kitty, kitty, kit-tee!"

Linderman Haley stopped short at the sound of Julie Anson's voice, which came from a rambling log house a little above the road. He knew that voice; he remembered it across the silent years. He took his hand from the butt of the big blue gun he carried under his corduroy coat, took his eyes from the road that led to—the violent death of Big Scrub McNabb, doubtless, for one thing.

"I'm afear the devil'll git ye, Peaches, fo' tawmentin' that pore cate," creaked Grandpap Anson.

Came then the voice of a child: "I won't do it any more, Julie. I didn't want to hurt the kitty. Grandpap says I ain't jest natchelly bad; and I isn't, is I?"

"You sartainly isn't!" laughed Julie. "Set down here, Peaches, and pet the kitty. Mebbe it'll fo'give ye, honey."

Linderman Haley left the road that led to the death of Big Scrub McNabb—doubtless, pressed up a narrow path, passed the screen of laurels that had hidden the cabin from him, reached the gate of split paling, and there drew up short. "Peaches" was alone now; she sat on the honeysuckle-covered porch, the cat purring in her arms. "Peaches" was a slim-legged and pigtailed, poorly-dressed little girl of about eight; she was as brown as a berry, as alert as a squirrel. Something—a resemblance—in her childish face caught at the strings of Haley's iron heart. He walked into the yard, halted before the porch, and began to stare at Peaches, who had become suddenly very sober.

"Grandpap said the devil might would git me," she said to Linderman Haley. "Did you ever see the devil, Mister?"

He shook his head and answered: "No."

"Will he," the child pursued, "put me on a great big fork and stick me in a great big fire ef I'm mean to the kitty?"

Haley scratched his stubbly chin. "The devil ain't a—a animal," he muttered to the wide-eyed Peaches. "The devil is a sperit. All the bad the' is in the world; that's the devil. And all the good is God. Are you Julie's little gyurl, Peaches?"

Peaches looked satisfied back to the cat she was mothering.

"Old mean tosepin," she cooed—"it bite him tail, didn't it? Old mean tosepin! I'm Julie's little gyrul now, Mister. My mammy's gone to glory, grandpap said, and my pap——"

"What about him?" Linderman Haley interrupted, his breath coming short and quick.

"He's in the penitenchy," said Peaches, "but he'd soon ort to be out, Julie said. His name's Linderman Haley. Do you know him?"

* * * * * * *

"I couldn't read and write, and none o' the rest of us couldn't," said the clear-eyed and pretty, half buxom Julie over the dinner table an hour later; "and then—well, Linderman, we thought you'd never live through it to come home, as big and strong as ye was. So we got Sheriff Bailey to send ye word that Effie had died and that the baby would be took keer of. We thought it wouldn't do any good to send ye any more bad news. Yore people, Linderman, is all either dead or moved off. You and Peaches is all the' is left of 'em now."

Haley was silent for a moment. Then his eyes sought the woman's face searchingly.

"And Bill McNabb, Julie; what about him?"

Julie's countenance fell. She knew exactly what was in the mind of the stalwart man who sat across the table from her.

"He's still here," she said; and that was all she said.

"All o' his folks is either dead or moved off too," mumbled old Grandpap Anson. "And Bill himself will soon be dead, is my guess."

Linderman Haley smiled queerly. "Yes; I'm plumb shore o' that. It was the lie he swore that sent me up, grandpap..... And so, Julie, you ain't never married, and I wonder why! It don't seem natchel. I'm thirty, and you must be twenty-eight. Goodness knows ye allus was purty enough."

Julie rose and went toward the stove to hide a furious blush. She and Linderman Haley had grown up together; she had loved him all her life; he, manlike, hadn't seen it—and she, womanlike, had always been careful that he didn't find it out, of course! Haley had gone to Ledford's Laurel, had left his home country and its acres of diamonds, to find a wife—a frail, vinelike little thing who had hardly lived long enough to get acquainted with him..... Peaches had been born after he had gone to the penitentiary—after the cataclysm.

The child's eyes followed him wistfully as he started away. At the gate he turned, his eyes dim, to tell her good by. But she spoke first.

"So you're my pap. Where are ye a-goin' to now, my pap?"

Linderman Haley was talking solely to himself when he said:

"The next time they send me up, it won't be fo' nothin'."

Blindly he caught Peaches from the ground and pressed her to his iron heart. Then he put her gently down and walked blindly away. The child held to the gate with both hands, stood on her bare tiptoes and peered over after him.

"Where are ye a-goin' to now, my pap?" she called disappointedly.

Linderman Haley didn't answer. He stepped into the laurels, and closed his right hand about the butt of the big, blue revolver under his corduroy coat.....But it was wholly like him not to answer. All during the long years in the State prison he had talked so little that his associates had called him "Speechless"—unless they were too close to him. He had talked so little, in fact, that his old hill dialect had changed not one whit.

Bill McNabb was a giant of a man, with curling black beard and keen black eyes. He had been the champion timberjack fighter on Big Scrub River, and they knew him always as "Big Scrub." He was ten years older than Haley, and he had wanted Effie Garland. His false swearing had been done in the hope that he would get Effie when Haley was sent up. But he hadn't. Death had got her.

Big Scrubb McNabb sat on the steps at the front of the old McNabb cabin and smoked a cob pipe. On the ground before him a hound lay asleep in the warm summer sunshine. In a thicket of laurel a few rods out of his right, Linderman Haley crept up and leveled his revolver—and Haley hadn't forgotten how to shoot.

Then an odd light appeared in his eyes, and he let the weapon down. What satisfaction would it be to him to kill McNabb unless McNabb knew who it was that had done it?

Haley put the gun back under his coat, walked around the thicket, and entered by the gateless front gateway. McNabb looked up, took the pipe from his mouth, and went a trifle ashen—and waited.

"Hi, Bill," said Haley. His smile was small and terrible.

"Hi, Linderman," grunted McNabb.

"I've come to collect, Bill. I wanted ye to know who done it."

"He'p yeself, Linderman," almost disinterestedly.

"You know why——"

Peaches caught the sleeve of his gun arm. Her innocent eyes looked up to his sober face in reproof.

"That man there," she said very primly, pointing toward McNabb, "is lowdown and wicked, my pap. We don't never come here. Le's go back to Julie, my pap; will ye?"

"Back to Julie——" Haley repeated. He didn't know what he was saying. Then: "Did Julie send ye, Peaches?"

"No." She indicated Big Scrub McNabb again. "He's lowdown and wicked. The devil will put him on a great big fork and stick him in a great big fire. Le's go back to Julie, my pap."

Haley stared, his face white. Peaches went on: "Don't ye hear it a-thunderin', my pap? It's a-goin' to come a big storm. Please put me up on ye shoulders and ride me home to Julie, won't ye?"

A bare glance told Linderman Haley that a bank of pit-black clouds, shot through with forked tongues of lightning, was stealing fast over the western mountain; already he felt the wind freshening on his cheek. He took his daughter up into his arms and carried her away, and Big Scrub McNabb watched him go with something akin to disappointment in his eyes.

The storm broke just as Haley and the delighted Peaches reached the shelter of Grandpap Anson's roof. Old Anson held the door open for them, and barred it against the maddened elements after they had entered. Haley put the child down, walked to a small window and stood there looking solemnly, with unseeing eyes, into the furious sheets of wind-driven rain.

Julie touched him lightly on the arm.

"Did ye do it, Linderman?"—anxiously in spite of herself.

He saw that her cheeks bore the stains of tears, and he wondered why she had wept.

"No," said he, "I didn't do it. Not yit. But when the storm is over, then I'll do it."

He faced her. She averted her gaze. She was as careful as ever to see that he didn't find it out.

"Who," he asked bitterly, "is the' left to keer about me?"

"There's Peaches," she murmured—still careful to see that he didn't find it out.

"She's got a good home wi' you, Julie."

A moment of silence save for the wild howling of the wind, the threshing of the rain; then:

"After this, Linderman, the creek'll be full. You couldn't cross it ontel tomorrow."

"I'll cross it today," replied Haley. "You keep Peaches here wi' you, Julie."

"I didn't know she follered ye this time," Julie told him. "It's pow'ful hard to keep a eye on her, sometimes. She's a good deal like a squirrel."

The rain passed. Without a word, Linderman Haley left the Anson cabin and set out again to kill Bib Scrub McNabb.

Julie had been correct: the creek was full—roaring, raging full of dashing, foaming, muddy water. Haley crossed it by means of the old foot-bridge, which was not more than two feet wide, and his weight bore it down in the center until the water came over it and wet his feet through his cowhide boots. But he didn't even know that his feet were wet.

Big Scrub was not sitting on the steps this time. The door was standing open, and Linderman Haley, his revolver ready in his hand at his hip, walked in. From somewhere in the semi-darkness of the mil-dewed room stepped Bill McNabb, white-faced, his eyes gleaming queerly; he held up a big hand as though to stay the other's trigger-finger.

"Well?" snapped Linderman Haley.

"I've found out a good many things, Linderman," drawled Big Scrub, his voice low, almost soft. "And one of 'em is 'at a man cain't play hoss with the Almighty and git away with it."

Haley sneered. "No?"

"No. It took me a long time, Linderman, to figger it out. I owe the Almighty a human life, Linderman, and I got to pay. I reckoned I'd fooled everybody—and I had fooled everybody, 'cept Him. I killed the man—as well as swore the lie—that sent you up, Linderman, and I got to pay. You mustn't shoot me, Linderman, fo' because then you'd haf to pay like me."

"Do ye think," growled Haley, "'at ye can beg and sneak out of it thataway? Do ye think ye can talk me out of it, Scrub?"

McNabb smiled a very little, very odd smile.

"But ye don't onderstand, Linderman. Ye don't onderstand. Le' me have yore gun, and I'll save ye the sin and the debt. You've done suffered enough at my hands now. I don't want ye to suffer no more. And I don't want you to try to put anything over on the Almighty, like I done! Le' me have yore gun, Linderman, and I'll pay you and Him both wi' one crook o' my trigger-finger."

Haley stopped breathing until it sank in—he had come to kill McNabb, and here was McNabb offering to do it himself! It was not a trick to get possession of the revolver; he saw in Big Scrub's eyes that it wasn't. Big Scrub was a little more in deadly earnest than he had ever been before in his life.

Then he noted something wholly different in McNabb's gaze, which had strayed over his shoulder and was riveted toward the swollen, mad stream below——

"The little gyurl——" shrieked Big Scrub—"yore baby!"

Linderman Haley wheeled and looked. He was just in time to see Peaches, who had followed him again, lose her balance and topple from the narrow bridge to the seething torrent. He threw down his revolver and ran like a buck deer, with Big Scrub hard on his heels—he saw Julie Anson, horror written deeply on her face, rushing toward the creek from the other side; and he saw her plunge into the creek in a brave but hopeless attempt to save the child whose little fingers had grown around her heart like tender vines!

In the smallest part of a second, Haley had to decide which of the two he would save. He sprang toward Peaches, whose head he could barely see on the water's surface.

But he sprang against a bowlder that was but thinly submerged, and his head struck first; bells rang in his ears; then world and sky became all black to him.

Haley wasn't unconscious for long. When he opened his eyes, he saw Julie's face close to his, and he heard Julie sob, and then he knew that he lay with his head on her breast, with her arms around him; Julie thought he was dead! He moved, and her arms slackened, quivered, and her face went whiter, then turned pink—for her life's secret was a secret no longer. Little hands laid hold of his wrist, and he saw Peaches, all wet and dripping, as were both Julie and himself.

"My pap," Peaches whispered, half afraid, "is you ain't dead?"

"Not by a damned sight," Linderman Haley said uncertainly—"Julie, I beg yore pardon for a-talkin' thataway. Yores too, Peaches. Julie, how d-did we all git out, anyhow?"

He sat up and faced her. Julie answered: "I managed to climb out myself after I seed Peaches was safe. Bill McNabb got you and Peaches out, Linderman."

"Bill McNabb!"

"Yes."

"The devil won't put him on a great big fork and stick him in a great big fire now, will he, Julie?" said Peaches.

"No, honey. There he is, Linderman," murmured Julie, pointing.

Haley got to his knees, faced about, and saw the giant hillman, who also was on his knees. Big Scrub was smiling happily.

"I paid Him back two fo' one, Linderman," he said.

Then he rose and went toward the old McNabb cabin. Julie was about to go to her feet. Then Haley's two dripping hands came down on her half-buxom shoulders.

"Julie," he began, his voice breaking—for the iron heart was melting—"Julie, I'm a-seein' the light at last. Will ye marry me, Julie?"

Now that he knew, there was no barrier.

"Of course, Linderman," she said. "Of course."

'Neath Mid-Summer Moonlight

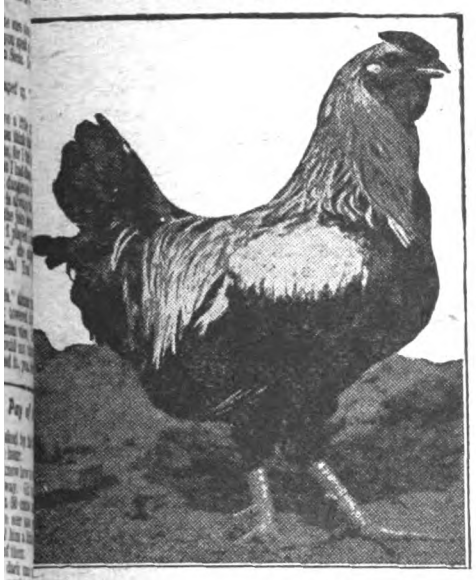
(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 12.)

he asked, his voice calm. Ah, but how heart-sick was he!

She did not answer directly.

"I suppose it is my duty to explain the whole masquerade to you, Mr. Langdon, and so I shall. You see, I was expected at the Van Oaks's a few weeks back. It seems that the coterie has been teasing you about me and you had stated that if you were to be caught, it would have to be by strategy.

"This chance remark of yours gave Bennie Thompson an inspiration. He proposed to Hortense's guests that you be made to fall in love with me, incognito. It happens that I have a little talent for singing and acting, so they invented a



BY KATE V. SAINT MAUR.

he Influence of Males on a Flock

AS August and September are the months when poultry keepers commence to think about selecting birds they are going to keep over for breeding stock the following year, it seems a proper time to call attention to a few important facts.

Grain and labor are so expensive these days that one can afford to keep scrub stock any longer, d this is the best time of the year to start improv- as most large poultry farms will sell young ckerels in the fall than later in the season. A ll-bred hen costs less to feed than a mongrel be- se she is properly proportioned and constituted, d so utilizes the food given her that she is always good condition. The mongrel, being a mixture several breeds, the food she consumes goes first to ke form, then fat; but rarely, if ever, is she in fect condition either as a fryer or roaster, and as egg producer she is never profitable.

SILVER PENCILED WYANDOTTE COCK.

Many of my correspondents seem to think that e only advantage of keeping pure-bred stock is aving pretty things to look at, and the extra price hich their eggs may bring for setting All this is a istake. Pure-bred birds are the best for market nd eggs, because, as I have said before, they have o counteracting characteristics to overcome; so re always plump and dress well at all ages, and fter they stop growing, every scrap of food over nd above what they need to keep up to their nor- al condition is converted into eggs. A pure-bred hicken, when nine weeks of age, will have a com- act and well-proportioned form, plump breast and highs, and weigh from a pound and a half to two ounds, where the mongrel of the same age will be ong of limb, large boned, with protruding breast one, and not half the amount of flesh.

The careful study and observation which big oultrymen and agricultural colleges have given to he subject of egg production during the last fifteen ears, have proved conclusively that the male bird as more influence in building up a strain of heavy ayers than the females, which is a point not general- y known.

The average person selects the best layers in the lock for the breeding pen, and then spoils every- hing by selecting a cheap male bird whose appear- nce pleases, without knowing about the charac- eristics of the stock he came from. Many letters receive tell me that the writers began two or three ears ago with good birds, and had splendid luck or the first and second years, but that the egg yield ad dwindled down to almost nothing, though they eed just the same as before, and change roosters very year. This last sentence is just where the rouble lies. They started with good birds which ad been bred specially for egg production, then nated them to new rooster each year without any nowledge of the egg-laying qualities of his maternal ancestors. Naturally, the pul- ets from such a mating are in- erior layers. To get good pul- ets which will mature early and lay well, the father bird must come from a family of heavy layers. This is of much greater importance than the number of eggs laid by the mother of the pullet.

Farmers have grasped this point pretty generally about cows, but they haven't awakened to the fact that the same princi- ple applies to poultry, yet the rooster had as much influence with the number of eggs the pul- let laid as the bull had had with the milk yield of the coming heifers.

Many of you have been read- ing this department and asking my advice, and hundreds have acknowledged that I have been able to help you, so why not take my advice on the subject of get- ting good male birds? Sell off some of your old hens or poor young stock and buy a good cockerel from a poultryman who knows his business and mates his birds for practical results. Of course, such a man can't sell his birds for one or two dollars apiece. It has taken him time to establish a flock of birds with records be- hind them, and it can only be accomplished through experience and years of constant culling, and the use of trap nests, which means lots of extra work watching the nests and releasing the hens after they have laid, but it is the only way, and the breeder can surely know each hen's value as an egg producer.

I visited a poultry plant not long ago, where trap nests had been in use for ten years. In each of the laying houses a chart was kept, and when the pul- lets were put in the house in September, bands were put on their legs and the number of the band was entered on the chart. All through the season a man goes through the houses every two hours from 8 A. M. to 4 P. M., taking the hen from the trap nests and entering their numbers on the records so that the owner can look back ten years and see the record of every hen for several generations.

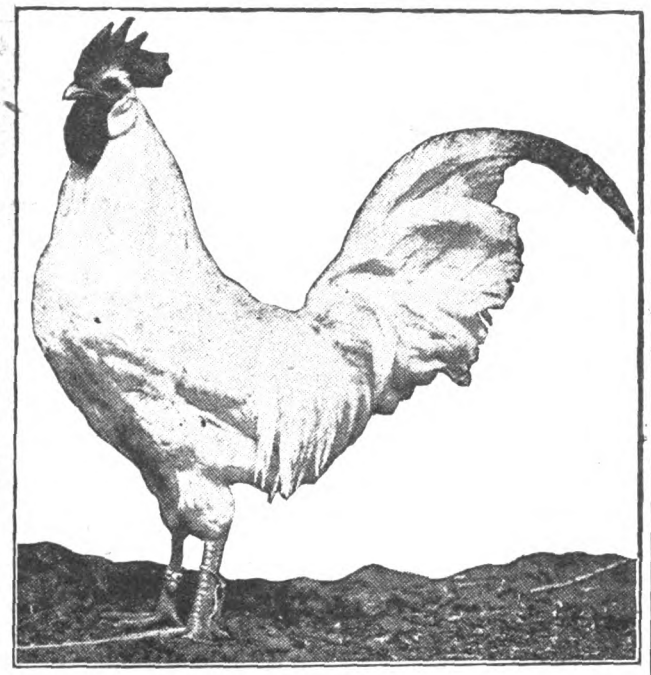
At the end of the first year the best layers are separated and mated to roosters hatched from eggs laid by equally good layers, and after ten years of such work it was found that the hen of heavy egg yield never produced a daughter which was as good an egg producer as herself, but that the cockerels produced from her eggs always gave her great egg-producing power to their daughters. So you see it is the productiveness of your male birds' mothers and grandmothers that really count, and as it costs heavily to put in trap nests and pay the extra help to watch them and keep records, you can't expect to get cockerels from such stock for less than ten dollars apiece, and remember that if you mate one such bird to seven hens you are pretty sure to get a hundred pullets from the mating, and if their egg producing power is only improved one per cent., the sale of the extra eggs the first season will more than pay the purchase price of the sire, besides improving your stock for several generations.

The second season use the same bird to head a pen of five of his own pullets, and mate the seven original hens to the brightest and strongest looking of his sons and you will have a flock of heavy layers. Disabuse your mind of the idea that pure-bred birds are only for looks, and to win prizes at shows, and realize that they are the only practical money-making birds, because they lay more eggs and bring more per pound when dressed for market. And, remember also, that you only want male birds for breeding pens.

Pullets and hens being kept only for market eggs should have no male birds with them, as infertile eggs are preferred for eating. There is no danger of infertile eggs ever developing a blood spot, due to embryo development. Due to the absence of a fertile germ they withstand heat much better than a fertile egg. During shipments, especially during the winter, it is often that the crates are exposed to considerable heat when they are placed near the steam pipes in the express car or office, and again they are allowed to remain on the platform for a considerable time on cold days and exposed to a low temperature. In the case of fertile eggs the intense heat would cause the embryo to develop beyond its normal resting stage, while the following exposure to cold would cause the death of the developing embryo, which would tesult in a blood spot. An infertile egg will stand shipment remarkably well under peculiarly adverse conditions which must be expected in a greater or less degree where large quantities of eggs are handled at all seasons of the year and over great distances. Again, infertile eggs are much easier to preserve. It is a common practice to put thousands of dozens of eggs in cold storage when the price is low and the supply abundant, for use in the winter months when the supply is limited and the price high. Infertile eggs stand this storage and come out much better than fertile eggs. It is often the case that private families desire to preserve a limited number of eggs for their own use in winter, and they are usually put down in water glass or salicylate of soda. The infertile eggs are found to be far superior for home preservation to fertile eggs. The infertile are much slower to decay. There is an old saying that "where there is no life there can be no death," and with the infertile egg there has been no union of male and female germ cells, because there is no possibility of such eggs becoming decayed or rotten except as they are handled under very adverse conditions. Infertile eggs are much easier to produce and cost less than fertile eggs, due to the fact that no male birds are required in the pen, and it is a fact that just as many infertile eggs are produced from a given pen as there would have been if a male bird had been present.

This being the case, it seems foolish to keep a lot of useless male birds running with the whole flock. Sell them off, and buy one or two good cockerels to mate with your best stock next spring, and so establish a profitable flock of thoroughbred birds.

The really big money in the poultry business comes from selling eggs and stock for breeding, and it should be the aim of every poultry dealer who has gleaned experience from practical work to establish a flock of really fine birds. I started with common stock, because when I commenced I hadn't the capital to commence with anything better, but from the first I studied the principles of mating, and at the end of about three years, when my poultry was paying well, I determined to start out with a higher class stock, which would enable me to get big prices for eggs and birds. I bought a trio which had won first prize at the New York Poultry Show. They cost seventy dollars, which seemed an awful price for just three birds, and I felt guilty until results justified the extravagance.



Rearing prize birds is one of the most profitable and interesting branches of husbandry, but to succeed you must have knowledge to work on. The beginner is usually convinced that two perfect looking creatures of any sort or kind will produce their like, but unfortunately such is not the case. A bird's ancestors have more influence on its progeny than the individuality of the bird itself. For that reason it is necessary to know the characteristics of the ancestral progenitors of the bird that you desire to cultivate, so that the signs of reverted heredity can be recognized at once and intelligently combated by the next season's mating.

Subscribers are entitled to advice of our Poultry Editor free, through the columns of this department. Address Poultry Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. BE SURE to give your full name and address. Otherwise your letter will receive no attention.

Correspondence

E. L.—The heavy breeds are not so active as the lighter ones, and so need to be allowed to exercise, or they will get too fat, and liver trouble with diarrhea is almost sure to develop. Read answer to T. H. M.

J. N. S.—The temperature in the incubator running down to 90 degrees, and opening the machine during the period of hatching, were both serious errors which may have caused the trouble. Yes, by all means have the hot air pipe resoldered. I have never operated the make of incubator you mention, so cannot have any opinion on it, but I can assure you that the condition of the hen that lays the eggs that are put into the machine, and the person who operates the machine, have more to do with good hatches than the machine itself.

CHAMPION WHITE LEGHORN COCK.

S. R.—Blackhead, a name which is very misleading, as the head turning black is only one of the symptoms which develop occasionally when turkeys are in an advanced stage of the disease, which is especially characterized by sores in the cecum or liver, which are caused by a protozoan which has been named Amœba meleagridis, a minute protoplasmic animal, found to vary between six and ten-millionths of an inch in diameter. While they are microscopic in size, they are at least three to four times larger than the red blood corpuscles, but they are, nevertheless, small enough to float in the blood capillaries of the portal system, from the cecum to the liver, where they seem to be stopped from going further. This short description of the parasite contains all that is of general interest. It may be summed up as follows: the amœba is a microscopic animal or parasite capable of living within the tissues of the turkey, its host. It can therefore, eat, grow, and reproduce itself in large numbers, thereby causing irritations, destruction to the tissues, and nearly always death of the invalid turkeys. The majority of young poults die after a day or two of droopiness. Adults may droop longer and pass into chronic stages of the disease. Refusing to eat and standing apart constitute late symptons. Starvation in chronic cases produces thinness. When the disease in the cecum is slight, it is doubtful if the affected animals have diarrhea, which is more or less present in other cases. In many of the older poults the droppings will be liquid, and stained orange yellow; this is the most characteristic symptom of all. Sometimes there are blackened blood clots in the droppings, indicating slight hemorrhages. Experiments show that more than four-fifths of the young poults exposed to infected yards die before they are six weeks old. The disease has been popularly supposed to be one confined to older birds. It is notably a disease affecting young turkeys, but one from which the older turkeys do not escape. Of the one-fifth which do escape or survive its ravages, at least ten to twenty per cent. may die, throughout the year, at almost any age. Examination of the organs is the only sure means of telling the cause of death. The amœbæ are transmitted from diseased turkeys to the others through the droppings, which

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 22.)

FREE! A 42-Pc. FULL SIZE DINNER SET.

WE TRUST YOU. NO MONEY NEEDED. WE PAY FREIGHT.

SELL ONLY 10 BOXES OF SOAP,

each box containing 7 cakes fine Toilet Soap, and with every box, give as premiums to each purchaser all of the following articles: a Pound of Baking Powder, Bottle Perfume, Box Talcum Powder, 6 Teaspoons, Pair of Shears and a Package of Needles (as per Plan 2351) and this artistic Blue Bird Dinner Set is Yours. Many other equally attractive offers and hundreds of useful Premiums such as Wearing Apparel, Linen Sets, Furniture, etc. We also pay large Cash Commission.

Special Free Present

We give a 7-Pc. Granite Set—Dish Pan, Preserve Kettle, Sauce Pan, Pudding Pan, Pie Pan, Jelly Cake Pan and Basting Spoon, FREE of cost in addition to the Dinner Set, if you order promptly. We also give fine presents for appointing agents.

We Pay The Freight

Allowing plenty of time for you to examine, deliver and collect. BIG PRICE REDUCTIONS ON ALL GOODS. You advance no money. We trust you. You have nothing to risk. Write today for our Big FREE Agents Outfit. Don't delay.

THE PERRY G. MASON CO., 891 Culvert & 5th St., Cincinnati, O. Founded 1897

Rough on Rats gets every rat

ORDINARY rat poisons fail because rats won't eat what has killed other rats. Rough on Rats fools them—you mix it with a different food each time. Booklet "Ending Rats and Mice" mailed free.

E. S. WELLS
Chemist
Jersey City
N. J.

CHICKS 6c up. All kinds. Big illustrated Chick Book and full information Free. Our prices and quick delivery will save you money. COMFORT HATCHERY, BOX X, WINDSOR, MO.

Complete Brass Bed Outfit

ONLY $1.00 DOWN

Note! The spring is re-inforced in the center and has a 4-in. elevation above the bed rails — which gives it the appearance and comfort of a box spring.

FREE!

Send at once for a free copy of our latest catalog. Just off the press. See our thousands of bargains in household furnishings. Everything to make your home complete; everything at bargain prices and a wonderful variety to choose from. Remember! 30 days free trial — a whole year in which to pay—and your money back at once—together with freight charges both ways if not satisfied.

Send Coupon!

30 Days Free Trial—Money Back Guarantee!

This complete brass bed outfit shipped to your home on 30 days free trial. Send for this brass bed and complete outfit, see it in your own home, keep it for 30 days! All you pay is $1.00—not an another cent—until you have tried this bed outfit in your own home for 30 days. If not satisfied, return it to us and we will refund your $1.00 and freight charges both ways. Pay the balance in easy monthly payments if you are satisfied. Take advantage of this offer now. You will never be able to get a value like this again at this rock-bottom price.

THE BED is one of the handsomest designs we have ever seen. It has 2 in. posts, 4 inch caps, 1 inch top rail and 1 inch fillers. Bed stands 55 inches high at head end and 36 inches high at foot end. Beautifully ribbon banded and satin finished. Guaranteed acid-proof lacquer, will not tarnish or wear off. The bed alone is a wonderful value at the price we are asking for the entire outfit. Full size 4 ft. 6 in.

THE MATTRESS is wonderfully comfortable, sanitary and hygienic. It is a mattress that will insure healthful, restful and refreshing sleep and will always retain its shape and comfort giving qualities. Filled with selected felted cotton covered in a superior grade of floral art ticking, securely stitched and deeply tufted. Has round corners and an imperial Roll Edge. 45 lbs. in weight.

"WONDER" LINK FABRIC BED SPRING is constructed of heavy gauge Garvey Wishbone patented steel link fabric, with a 5-8 inch strap edge. Each link is securely locked and interjoined. The fabric is supported at each end by 29 oil-tempered helical springs which produces a very resilient effect. The angle iron side rails are bowed so as to give spring a 4-inch elevation. Angle rail adds greatly to its strength and durability. Entire surface of spring and link fabric top is enameled in French gray.

STERLING BRAND PILLOWS containing selected double dusted hen feathers, steam dressed and cured. Thoroughly clean and guaranteed odorless. Encased in good ticking in an attractive floral design.

BED SHEET bleached, hemmed, woven of fine dependable yarns.

PILLOW CASES to match sheet. 3 inch hem. splendid quality.

No. A463, $1 down, $3.75 a month, total $44.95

L. Fish Furniture Co., Dept. C-370
State, Archer and 19th Sts., Chicago, Ill.

L. Fish Furniture Co., Dept. C-370
State, Archer and 19th Sts., Chicago, Ill.

Enclosed find $1.00. Ship advertised Complete Brass Bed Outfit No. A463. I am to have 30 days' free trial. If I keep the outfit I will pay you $3.75 a month. If not satisfied I am to return the complete bed outfit within 30 days and you are to refund my money and any freight charges I paid.

☐ No. A463—$1.00 down, $3.75 a month. Total $44.95.

Name _____

Address _____

Post Office _____ State _____

If you only want latest bargain catalog just issued put X here ☐

FORCED SALE!

We need the cash. Lowest prices in history. Rush your order today.

$5.90 — 25 Cal. 7 Shot

32 Cal. 20 Shot $9.50

BRAND NEW BLUE STEEL AUTOMATICS SHOOTING STANDARD AMMUNITION

THE WILD CAT

Regular Swing Out Hand Ejecting Left-Hand wheeler Revolver 32.20 or 38 Cal. 6 Shot $14.50

A powerful six shot gun; made specially for Rangers, mountaineers and men working in unprotected places, requiring a safe and efficint weapon. Quick as a flash, with great penetrating power and true marksmanship. Carry this gun with you, and you will feel fully protected. Made of best blue steel, rifled barrel. Hammer with safety. Fires regular, short and long 32.20 or 38 caliber ammunition. $14.50.

Swing-Out Hand Ejector Left-Hand Wheeler REVOLVER

6 SHOT

32 cal. $17.50

32.20 or 38 cal. $19.50

Made of best tool steel, nickel or blue, and highest workmanship, by Beistegui Bros., Spain. Short, medium, or long barrel. A real MAN'S gun. Preferred by Detectives, Police, Secret Service, and Westerners.

SEND NO MONEY

PAY POSTMAN ON ARRIVAL, PLUS POSTAGE

Guaranteed as represented or money back.

THE PRICE CUTTING CO.

55 Broadway, New York

IT'S SO EASY!

$15 A DAY To Agents

You can easily earn $15.00 a day or more taking orders from your friends and neighbors for our fine tailoring. Orders come easy when you show our swell samples, smart styles and EXTREMELY LOW PRICES. We show you how—you can do it easy—You don't need any experience.

OUR SWELL TAILORING is worn by snappy dressers everywhere and big money is earned yearly by men who send us these orders. WHY NOT GET YOUR SHARE OF THESE FINE CASH PROFITS?

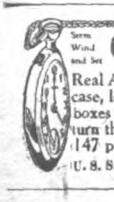
Save $5.00 to $10.00

We sell our tailoring at lowest wholesale prices to men who recommend and boost us to their friends. Get our FREE SAMPLES and pick your fine clothes at a saving of $5.00 to $10.00 on every suit.

FREE! Write today for big sample outfit. It will be sent FREE.

WashingtonTailoringCo.,Dept. V315 ,Chicago,Ill.

for 76¢



you can make this sweater

This fashionable sweater-blouse takes only 4 skeins of Peace Dale Sicilian Floss at a total cost of only 76 cents! Lovely silky yarn—wide variety of beautiful colors. Send for free directions for knitting and free sample card showing colors in Sicilian Floss and other Peace Dale quality Yarns. Satisfaction guaranteed. Peace Dale Mills, Dept. 1288, 25 Madison Ave., New York.

PEACE DALE YARNS

Clothing Agents Sell Golden Rule Clothes. We pay you in advance. Work spare or full time. Make $25.00 to $75.00 weekly. All wool line. New low prices. Satisfaction guaranteed. Express prepaid. Big outfit sent free to experienced salesmen. Write and tell us what you have sold. Act quick.

THE OLD WOOLEN TAILORING CO., Dept. 130, Chicago, Ill.

GIVEN WATCH KNIFE AND CHAIN

Real American Watch, 5 year guarantee, fine case, looks and wears like gold. Just sell 12 boxes Mentho-Nova (Wonder Menthol.) Return the $3.00 and receive watch or choice of 147 premiums free. Address

U. S. Supply Company, Dept. SI-7, Greenville, Pa.

YOUR NAME ON HANDLE — KNIFE FREE

For SELLING 6 BOXES

ROSEBUD at 25c each and remitting $2.00. Knife has best steel blades. A SPECIAL OFFER. Order at once.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO., Box 232, Woodsboro, Md.

SCHOOL BOX FREE

with Fountain Pen, Pencils, Knife, Pen Holder, Eraser, for selling 30 packages Chewing Gum at 5c a pckg. Write

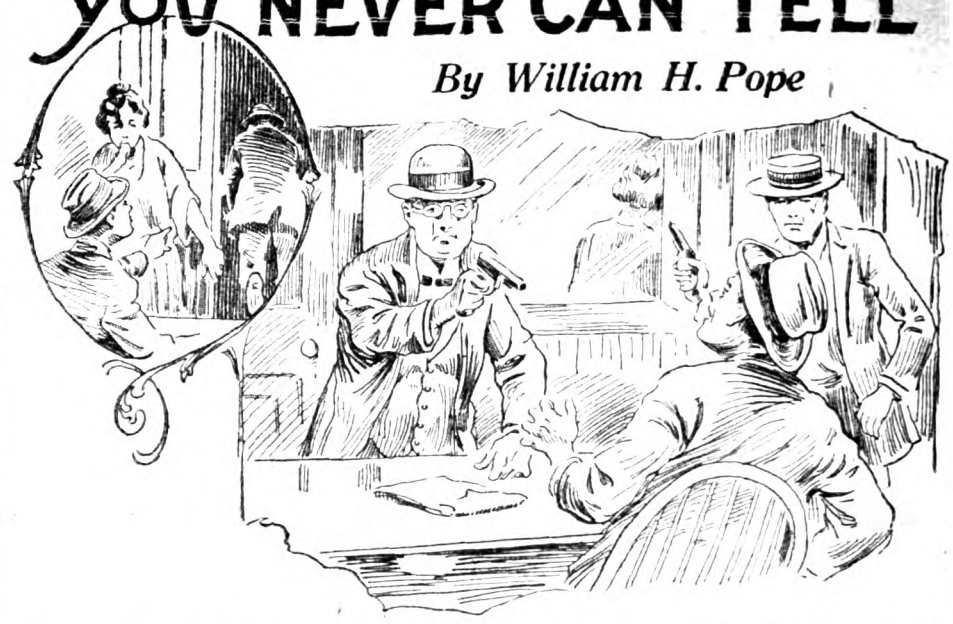
BLUINE MFG. CO., 202 Mill St., Concord Junction, Mass.

Only $18.55

Down For New 3 H-P. WITTE

(Throttling Governor)

Easy Terms on best engine built. Burns kerosene, distillate, gasoline or gas. Change power at will. Other sizes, 2 to 25 H-P.—all styles.



FREE—Write today for my Big Engine Book. Sent free—No obligation on your part.

WITTE ENGINE WORKS

3648 Oakland Avenue, - KANSAS CITY, MO.
3648 Empire Building, - PITTSBURGH, PA.
3648 Fremont Street, SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

YOU NEVER CAN TELL

By William H. Pope

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

CEDARVILLE Bank is a quiet, unassuming little edifice of brick through which the lifeblood of the nation flows in a stream altogether disproportionate to the size of the bank. Situated between the foothills and the lowlands close to a placidly flowing river, one would reckon the village a dreamy country town content with a business of a few thousand a year, but the hills produce sleek cattle and luscious fruits and berries, the lowlands offer their quota of grain and cotton; the town itself has two or three thriving manufactories exclusive of the lumber industry—and the bank has a capitalization of fifty thousand dollars.

It follows that such a prosperous business requires a larger force than ordinarily found in a country bank.

The bank was in a seethe of suppressed excitement. A package containing five thousand dollars had mysteriously disappeared from the cashier's desk. The president was closeted with the bank detective. He rang for the cashier.

That individual entered the office and closed the door behind him a thirty seconds later. He had been expecting the summons.

"Have you discovered anything yet, Mr. Hawkins?" asked the president a trifle coldly.

"I have not, sir," answered Hawkins quietly. His face was drawn and pale. He looked older than his strong figure and firm young face should have permitted. The president himself, Mr. Mosby mentally noted the fact that Hawkins had aged perceptibly in the last hour.

"Could any one have entered your cage, Mr. Hawkins, while you were out?"

"They might while I was out, Mr. Mosby. But I have not left the office this morning."

"The devil!" exclaimed Mosby. "Currency does not sprout wings and fly. It was there; we all know that. Presto! it is gone. And by the lord Harry it must be found!"

Hawkins flushed.

"Where is your brother?" continued Mosby.

The detective watching Hawkins closely noticed the color recede quickly.

"This is Saturday, Mr. Mosby. He has gone fishing with a party. You requested that this matter be kept quiet and I said nothing to him."

"Damnation!" barked the president. "I didn't mean employees! We will wash our dirty linen privately. But he must be connected with. His cage is next yours."

"He could not have taken it, Mr. Mosby," Hawkins exclaimed heatedly. "He is above such a thing, to say nothing of steel grating between us."

"He was out once, wasn't he?" asked Mosby in a calmer tone.

"Yes, sir. I sent him to the post-office. Mr. Blunt there took his place. Business was slack."

The detective nodded in confirmation. Tommy Hawkins was David's brother and was paying teller. Blunt caught the president's eye.

"That will do, Mr. Hawkins." The cashier retired.

"Now what?" asked Mosby turning to the detective.

"I have an idea, Mr. Mosby," began the man slowly. "But I hate to advance such a theory. It would explain the matter but would also fasten the guilt on a certain person, and it goes against the grain——"

"Out with it," snapped the president. "That's what I hired you for. Naturally, somebody's guilty. Who is it?"

"Don't be too hasty to jump to conclusions," admonished Blunt. What I have in mind is not conclusive at all—merely gives a possible explanation of the money's disappearance. So far, you know, we've even been unable to show how it could have left the cashier's desk. Now, you've read, of course, of clever thieves abstracting money from places difficult of access by means of lumps of wax on cords, etc., haven't you."

"Too far fetched," snorted the president testily. "You've gone into trashy fiction now."

"Just wait. You'll understand my drift presently. While I was taking Tommy's place for a few minutes I noticed a steel fly rod about four or five feet long that he had brought along to take with him this afternoon. The package of currency, as I understand, was not over four feet away——"

The president began to evince interest. "But the grill work, one inch mesh. The package would not——"

"Would," corrected Blunt, "slip under the grill which lacks three inches of reaching the floor. A fish-hook sharp as they are would easily catch in the cord surrounding the package."

"Gad," breathed the president. "I believe you have got it!"

"But Tommy is square," objected the detective. "A little wild, maybe, but honest, I think."

"Now let me furnish the motive," said Mosby. "The boy is speculating. Not much, but a little. He had a little money, you know. I learned about it a short while ago and intended to caution him. When a man gets that fever he forgets honesty. But how could the package have been taken, admitting that your theory is correct, without the cashier's knowledge. Or do you suppose the thing was cut and dried between them. I'd hate to believe that. I had a good opinion of both of them but of David in particular because he was steadier."

"They may have been in collusion," stated the detective. "David was in the vault a time or two, though to my knowledge."

"That explains the thing," said Mosby decisively. "I'll settle it by Monday morning." He rang for Hawkins again.

So far Miss Adele Woodwith has not entered the story. Perhaps she really should have opened it. Miss Adele's beauty speaks for itself and needs no effort of mine to enhance it. Suffice it to say that she was the One Girl to both the Hawkins brothers and to Detective Blunt. President Mosby's possession of a wife handicapped him. But as to who was the One Man to Miss Woodwith was a different question. To date she had shown no partiality. Each of the three entrys had some quality that the other two lacked. Perhaps she had a favorite—to be quite frank, she had already made a choice but Lor' lumme, as the British say, nobody knew it! Miss Woodwith was private secretary to President Mosby, and practically run the bank. That fact also she kept to herself.

Detective Blunt sat in the parlor that night waiting for her. Let it be known that his love for her was consuming the man, body and soul. Never had he desired anything with the fervor with which he wanted this bewitching girl for himself. But seventy-five bucks divided by two shrinks perceptibly even in a country town.

"I got in late," she apologized for keeping him waiting. "I had some work to do for Mr. Mosby. Isn't it dreadful, the theft, I mean?"

Blunt admitted that it was. The girl breezed on: "Mr Mosby detailed me to help you," she confided, leaning so close to him that he had to grip the arms of the chair to stay in it. Her breath burned him like fire. "I believe the cashier is to blame. Tommy is too young to do anything like that. I asked him to come over tonight"—Blunt's jaw dropped—"and you must hide behind the curtains there"—it raised again—"and see if I can make him confess!"

They had their campaign mapped out when the doorbell rang.

The girl's heart warmed with pity as she noted the cashier's haggard countenance. Hawkins sank dejectedly into a chair. Conversation lagged, despite the girl's desperate efforts to be lively. Finally she drew a chair close to his and took one of his cold hands in hers.

"Tell me, George," she commanded.

"Oh, I took it," he blurted. "I don't know what made me such a fool! I just seemed to lose control of myself as I looked at that package of money—visualized the things it would buy—the pleasures it would bring—and slipped the package into my pocket. What makes men fools sometimes?" he asked bitterly.

"What are you going to do?" the girl asked lifelessly.

"Do? I'm going to return the cash to Mosby and ask him to keep it quiet. Let me go away somewhere and never return. I'd like to keep it quiet for Tommy's sake. If Mosby refuses—he shrugged his shoulder.

"Are you going to him in person?" she asked.

He laughed harshly. "Not much. I'll send him a note first. I can't afford to take chances. It would ruin Tommy."

"Why did you do it, George?" She was leaning very close now, so near that her breath burned his face. He flushed.

"You know why," he muttered.

"Tell me," she insisted, pressing his hand.

"For you!" he exclaimed fiercely. "What wouldn't I do for you?"

She threw off his eager hands and sprang to her feet as the curtains to the doorway quivered.

"Run," she cried, pointing to the open window. "Run!"

Blunt disentangled himself from the draperies just as Hawkins flashed through the window into the velvety night. Realizing the futility of pursuit, the detective turned at the window and eyed the girl with baffled rage.

"Why did you warn him?" he demanded harshly. "His get-away won't help him any."

The girl's cheeks flamed higher and her eyes sparkled with a strange light

"Why!" she echoed. "Didn't you hear his words? After he had sacrificed position, future, honor, everything because of his love for me, do you think I would be so base as to turn him over to a punishment he didn't deserve? Truly, you know nothing of women!"

"I didn't know that," admitted Blunt slowly. "Do you love him that much?"

"I din't say that I loved him at all," she responded quickly. "A woman would be flattered at such a sacrifice and whether she loved or not she would be partial. Such a sacrifice!" she breathed more to herself than to Blunt. "Was there ever such love?"

A peculiar light came into the detective's eyes. He came close to her "Sacrifice!" he snorted. "The poor fish instead of stealing the money is trying to steal somebody's place with you by letting on that he was willing to go that far."

"What do you mean?" asked the girl in surprise, coming over closer.

Blunt flushed and his breath came fast.

"He didn't steal the money," he stated with conviction. "Someone else did, who loves you more than he ever could."

"You mean——"

"Look," he said thickly. He threw the missing package of currency in her lap.

"Oh!" she breathed. "For me!" Blunt nodded unable to speak.

"How did you know I wouldn't tell?" she asked teasingly.

"I knew," he answered triumphantly. "I've read lots about what a woman would do under such circumstances. Besides, I saw how you did Hawkins."

He slipped an arm about her in huge content. "The bright lights for us, kiddo, and no one will be the wiser. Hawkins'll get the blame, but he deserves it for imposing on you. It was easy," he chuckled, "with the fishing rod."

He leaned over to kiss her, his breath coming fast.

She slipped adroitly out of his embrace. "All right, Mr. Mosby. That's about all."

Blunt started—and stopped as both Mosby and Hawkins stepped through the door and covered him.

Safety Driving Rules

A sticker has been sent out to dealers by a Middle Western automobile dealers' association that should be read by every driver in the United States. The dealer is given a large quantity of these stickers, with instructions to paste one on the windshield of every machine sold or repaired. Drivers or others approaching the "stickered" car read the words, "Please be careful." The inside of the sticker contains instructions for the benefit of the driver of the "stickered" machine. First is shown a diagram indicating the proper use of hand signals. Then follows:

"Imagine the driver of the other car your father.
"Pedestrians have rights on the streets.
"Over five miles per hour at school houses is unsafe.
"Railway trains don't stop at crossings.
"Never pass a street car unloading passengers.
"Twenty-five miles is the top limit; 15 is safer.
"Turn long to the left; short to the right.
"Don't pass another car on its right.
"Sound horn and slow down at all crossings.
"Have your brakes adjusted often.
"Get a windshield wiper and use it.
"Skid chains may prevent collisions.
"Don't drive in the middle of the street or road.
"Stop at all boulevard crossings."

August: "Dog Days" Month

HOT, dry August can hardly be said to have won a "warm spot" in the farmer's heart. Sultry days when the sun blazes down from out brassy skies; hot and breezeless nights when sleep is fond hope that is difficult of realization, no, August is hardly a popular month. But it is the prize growing month. In fact, August tells the tale, we might say, for it is then that we are given the first proof of the season's reward in crops to be harvested. Backward crops make up for lost time then. Why, one can actually hear the corn crackling as it grows during a hot night in "Dog Days."

Showers are scarce in August in normal years, and the scant supply of moisture is soon shown in baked, bare-bitten pastures, dusty roadsides and parched fields. And the worst of it is that little can be done now to prevent the rapid evaporation of the little moisture left in the land, for crops have grown too large to permit cultivation. But if the dust mulch has been carefully maintained in fields and garden until crops fill the rows, half of the battle is won. Watering the garden is sometimes possible—and now with pressure systems in so many farmhouses, a hose and sprinkler in the garden is quite a commonplace sight that pays real dividends. Remember that in watering the garden, evening is the time for the job. Don't sprinkle! Soak the soil thoroughly at night; the plants will drink all night long, and the sun of tomorrow cannot do much robbing if these instructions are followed.

While speaking of "a drink for thirsty plants" we must add a word about the shade trees in the front yard that are so seldom cared for in the way they richly deserve. Many a fine old tree that has cast its welcome shade for half a century is now dying for lack of water. Why? Well, as a rule such trees were set out along the driveway or beside the main road in front of the house. Is that not true? In the days gone by that road was of dirt; the rain that fell upon it soaked into the ground to reach the thirsty rootlets. But now conditions are often different. Perhaps a great state trunk highway passes your way. Maybe it is made of concrete; or is it tar macadam? Anyhow, little or no water finds its way through such a surface. And the old tree, with a large portion of its roots dead from "road-drought," slowly but surely is dying.

Such trees should be saved. They are surely worth it, for the shade they produce, and for the beauty they lend to the farm home—as well as the dollar-value they add in case the old homestead is offered for sale. Here is how to water trees in summer time.

About two feet away from the trunk of the tree, dig a hole 18 inches deep. Cover the bottom with pieces of flat stone, broken pottery, etc., then over this scatter gravel. Make the layer about six inches deep. Set a four-inch tile vertically in the hole, and tamp the dirt and sod securely around it. With the top of the tile projecting only an inch or so above ground, it will not interfere in any way with lawn mowing. All that is then necessary to do to water the tree is to place the nozzle of the garden hose in the tile, turn on a slow flow of water regulated so that the ground will absorb it as it flows, and leave it running. The tree will reward your work by long life and welcome shade. If no running water is available, a few pails of water poured into the tile from time to time will do almost as well; the tile acting as a funnel prevents spilling and wasted water, thus lessening the amount of carrying. Some of the deep rooting trees do not require watering to keep them alive, but all of the shallow rooted ones do, especially beside hard roads.

Making Apple Cider

Apple time on the farm naturally turns one's thoughts to tasty, fresh, home-made, apple cider. But there is cider and cider, good cider and poor cider. In many cases cider making is a hit-or-miss proposition, no set rule being followed, and the result is always problematical. To avoid mistakes and assure a high grade product, care and careful attention to detail is necessary. Here is how the cider making experts, who make the product for general sale, make the best grade of cider.

First select sound, well matured and properly ripened fruit. Avoid wind-falls and wormy apples; these are fit only for vinegar. If different varieties are available at the same time, blend them in proper quantity, according to their sugar, acid and tannin contents so as to give a well-balanced cider of excellent flavor. A blended cider is always preferable to cider made from one or two varieties. Wash and sort the fruit, trimming or discarding all specked or even slightly decayed apples. Grind and press, keeping the mill indoors or in a shady place; this decreases discoloration of cut apples. Add a little water and press again, keeping this second pressing of juice separate from the first pressing. Place the juice in deep containers in a cool room over night, to permit the pomace or sediment to settle. Siphon off the juice from the settlings. Transfer the juice to a clean barrel or other suitable vessel or tank.

And now for the secret of the beautifully clear commercial cider. Slowly add diatomaceous earth (kieselguhr or infusorial earth) at the rate of six to eight pounds per 100 gallons of cider. Stir very thoroughly. If the juice is very cold, heat to 130 degrees F. This aids in filtering. Prepare the filter by passing a suspension of diatomaceous earth, previously purified by heating to redness, in water through a filter press or bag filter so as to form a thin layer on the filter cloths. Pour the juice through the filter, stirring the supply tank occasionally in order to prevent the sliming or clogging of the filter. Place the juice as filtered in previously sterilized containers, seal and submerge the containers in cold water in the pasteurizing tank. Pasteurize at 170 degrees F. Remove from the pasteurizer and store in a cool room for 10 days or more before drinking or offering for sale.

These instructions sound rather complicated at first reading, but in reality they are not, and the highly improved nature of the product is ample reward for the extra work and care, not to mention the better keeping qualities and safer selling qualities of the cider that results.

How to Make Vinegar

Cider vinegar is considered by most farmers as a sort of by-product of cider making, but the best grade of vinegar is not made by dumping the pressed apple pomace into an open barrel, allowing it to ferment there for months, turn sour, then press out at some time when it is convenient to "take the time for the job." Such vinegar is listed on the market as farm vinegar, where it never receives the price paid for pure cider vinegar.

To make the best cider vinegar, take the sweet cider as it comes from the press, strain it and place in a clean cask. If the cask is open, cover with a heavy cloth or wooden lid. Do not use a cask that has had vinegar in it, unless the cask has been carefully cleaned and scalded with boiling water. Add one cake of fresh compressed yeast for each five gallons of cider; mix each cake well in a quart of cider before pouring into the cask. Keep the cask in a room where the temperature is moderate—about 70 degrees F. Keep here for about three weeks, or until gas bubbles stop rising in the liquid. Drain off without disturbing the sediment that has settled to the bottom of the cask. Now place in a cask that has previously held good vinegar, or pour back into the same cask after careful washing. Fill not more than three-quarters full. Leave the stopper out, or leave the top open, to admit plenty of air. Cover such openings with cheese-cloth or wire screen to keep out flies and other insects. Add one pint of good old vinegar for each five gallons of liquid; or add some "mother" of vinegar from the bottom of an old cask. Keep in storage for six months at about 70 degrees F. The finest flavored and most popular vinegar is made in this way from pure apple juice. The product is entitled to the label of cider vinegar, pure cider vinegar, or apple-cider vinegar. Since apples vary greatly in degree of sweetness and juiciness, the vinegar made from them is apt to vary in strength (acidity) from about 4 per cent. up to 6 or 7 per cent. of acetic acid. Most states set the minimum of acidity at 4 per cent.; some permit dilution of vinegar that exceeds the minimum, but so far as we can ascertain no state permits the legal sale of pure cider vinegar containing less than 4 per cent. of acetic acid. If vinegar is diluted, this fact must furthermore be plainly stamped upon the label—a point that farmers may have difficulty in observing when vinegar is sold in bulk.

Give the Chickens Green Feed

When the farm flock is permitted to range at will, little thought need be given to the supply of green feed that is essential to good health and profitable growth. But when the flock is kept confined in a fenced run, usually devoid of any vestige of green growth, some steps must be taken to provide green feed.

On a farm where a large lawn is kept close cropped with a lawn mower, the clippings should never be wasted. Use a lawn mower equipped with a canvas bag to catch the clippings, or rake them up after mowing, then feed them to the hens. The little extra work required to provide the welcome green feed will be amply rewarded by increased egg production, and stimulated growth and health of market fowls.

Another source of green feed that is seldom used as it should and could be on the farm is sod—grass or clover sod that is plowed under in summer breaking. Here is how to use sod in the chicken runs: If grass or clover is to be plowed under, before plowing is begun in earnest, plow three or four furrows about three inches deep along an edge of the field. Only eight rods or so need be plowed in this way, at the most. Then load the turf, while it is still fresh, on a wagon and haul it to the chicken runs. Scatter it in shallow piles here and there in the runs, sprinkle or wet down thoroughly with water if time permits, then leave the feast to the hens. When it is possible to do so, keep the hens away for a couple of days, or until growth is renewed. It is surprising how much dormant growth, and what a large amount of green growth, will result from the loose sods. For dry runs that are devoid of grass or green crops such as oats or rape, no better method of supplying succulent green feed has yet been found than this simple one of scattering in the runs sods that would otherwise be plowed under.

Hints on Soy Bean Harvesting and Haymaking

Though soy beans are now grown quite generally for hay or for seed, many farmers are growing them for the first time. From these come such questions as "When is the best time to cut soy bean hay?" or "How shall I cut my soys that I intend to thresh for seed?" Here are the answers to some of the most commonly asked questions:

When soy beans are to be cut for hay, choose the best weather conditions possible regardless of the condition of ripeness of the pods, for haymaking in good weather is all-important. The plants contain the greatest amount of nutriment when the pods are well developed, but to await complete development may be to encounter bad weather that is a serious handicap to correct curing. The best quality of hay is made by putting the newly cut beans up in small cocks as soon as they are wilted. While in this condition the plants pack together most firmly, therefore shedding water better than if dry and brittle. On land where the soil under the cocks has a tendency to remain wet, the cocks will require turning two or three hours before handling; otherwise the cocks should not need to be touched until they are loaded for hauling.

The best way to stack soy beans is in layers about a foot thick, with four to six inches of straw or coarse hay between the layers. Sprinkle a little coarse salt on each layer as it is stacked, then place the layer of straw, more soy beans, etc. When stacked in this way, livestock will eat the coarse hay or straw with just as much relish as the beans themselves, thus adding considerably to the extent of the crop and providing a useful outlet for straw.

On large areas soy beans may be handled in the same manner as clover hay, using mower, side delivery rake, and hay loader. But where small patches are grown, and when time permits, a better grade of hay can be put up by cutting the beans when the lower pods are almost mature, then putting the wilted plants in small cocks to cure.

When soy beans are to be harvested for threshing for the seed, an ordinary grain binder properly adjusted may be used successfully. Lifter guards are used to prevent heavy loss. Since the soy beans plant branches close to the ground, about one-fourth of the guards of the binder may be equipped with lifter guards, similar to those that are used for small grain that is badly lodged. Only a very small percentage of the beans will be left on the ground where these guards are employed.

The beans should be cut when they are nearly ripe, but before they are dead ripe, for dead ripe beans shatter badly and the loss is great. If the beans are too ripe, cut them in the early morning when the dew is still on the plants, and the moisture will greatly reduce shattering. Sheep or hogs may then be turned upon the land to gather up and make good use of the beans that remain after harvesting is completed. Shocking with a pitchfork has been found an easy way of handling beans, for carefully constructed shocks are unnecessary. Ordinary rains do not injure the beans to any extent; therefore capped shocks are only a waste of labor.

Growing Alfalfa in the South

By far the best time to plant alfalfa in the region of the Mississippi Delta, and in other places in the south where soil and climatic conditions are similar, is in late August and from then on until the last of September. Spring planting, unless the land is free from grass and weed seeds, and has been thoroughly inoculated with the alfalfa nodule-forming bacillus, has generally given unsatisfactory results.

Alfalfa is a crop that requires careful preparation of soil. For best results, choose land from which a crop of peas has just been cut for hay. Disc and harrow the land very thoroughly, but not too deeply, then firm the soil by rolling. Though lighter seeding is sufficient under ideal conditions, such conditions are seldom to be found; therefore a heavier seeding of about 20 pounds to the acre is best, for this produces a thick stand of young plants, and greatly retards the growth of grass and weeds that will quickly take possession of the land after a thin or uneven seeding. Use a drill if the acreage justifies; otherwise use a wheelbarrow seeder. In no case should the "whirlwind" type of seeder be employed. Best results are secured by going over the entire acreage with the seeder in one direction, then going over it again at right angles or "across the drills," as this method insures a more uniform distribution of seed and a better stand.

Choosing the best variety of alfalfa is highly important. A good general rule to follow is to select a variety that has been known to do well in your locality. Extensive tests conducted with thirteen alfalfa varieties at the Delta Branch of the Mississippi Experiment Station upon well-drained buckshot land showed that pedigreed strains of the non-hardy varieties outyielded the recognized hardy varieties, and that the hardy quality of such varieties as Grimm and Cossack were not required in the mild climate of the region. In yields of field-cured hay, Disco, No. 28 made an average annual yield over a period of three seasons of 10,192 pounds per acre. Common South Dakota No. 12 was second with an average yield of 9,807 pounds of field-cured hay. Prospective growers will be interested to learn that the seed of these varieties cost less than the seed of the hardy varieties, though the latter failed to equal these two in yields. These two varieties also stood the winters perfectly, once they became well established. The tests also proved conclusively that it is poor economy to seed anything but pedigreed strains of seed, for the poorest yields were grown from nondescript seed of the common strains. Therefore it is highly advisable to look carefully to the source of seed, pay a little more for it, and guarantee success from the start.

Trim Hoofs of Hogs

Many hog raisers fail to realize the need of trimming the hoofs of heavy boars and brood sows; others who know that it should be done do not put their knowledge into practice, and bad feet and brokendown pasterns are the result. Hog raisers who breed valuable animals for show and sale are very careful to attend to this important detail, however, and here is the way they proceed with the work.

Where only a few hogs are kept, take the animals one at a time, throw them on their side and hold in this position while the trimming is being done. Trim the bearing surface of the wall with nippers and rasp from the toe to a point one-half way back from the heel, but on the outside only. Never trim the inside, for if the outside touches the ground first the toes will spread apart and prevent proper shaping of foot. It is important to trim the toes well, even to the point of making them bleed slightly in order to permit the pasterns to straighten up to the normal angle. If excessive bleeding follows trimming, saturate the hoofs with a five per cent. solution of any good commercial coal tar disinfectant, or paint with iodine after bleeding stops.

When a large number of hogs are to be treated it is less work if a breeding crate is employed, instead of throwing each animal, and better time is made in this way. Take the bottom out of the breeding crate, nail a two-by-four-inch joice longitudinally in the middle from sill to sill so that the hog's legs will straddle it. Rig up a strong rope and block-and-tackle. Drive hog into the crate, then raise the crate with the block and rope to a height that will permit the operator to work comfortably sitting down under the crate. The hog will not mind being "up in the air" after the first minute or two, and will soon stop struggling; then the operator may proceed with his work in comfort, completing the job well and quickly.

How Long Do Fence Posts Last?

It is not possible to state definitely the length of life of any kind of fence post under all conditions, because the soil and moisture conditions and the amount of heartwood and sapwood in the post affect its durability. Heartwood is more durable than sapwood. When moisture conditions are changeable, posts are more liable to decay, but in regions where the soil is either very wet or very dry all the year around, posts will last much longer.

White cedar is the wood perhaps most commonly used for fence posts, since it meets the requirements of durability, straightness, ability to hold staples well, and lightness of weight without loss of strength. Of these requirements, durability is by far the most important. Cedar possesses all of these requirements to a greater extent than most other woods that are easily available at a reasonable price; it is not, however, the most durable of woods suitable for making fence posts, provided these woods can be obtained, according to tests conducted by the Forestry Section of Michigan Agricultural Experiment Station. These tests showed that osage orange and black locust lead in durability. Comparative durability of the eighteen kinds of wood tested was found to be as follows:

Osage orange	about 30 years
Black locust	about 25 years
White cedar	about 18 years
Catalpa	about 17 years
Red mulberry	about 16 years
Tamarack heartwood	about 9 years
White oak	about 8 years
Black walnut heartwood	about 8 years
Elm	about 6 years
Red oak, ash, beech and maple	about 4 years
Red pine and jack pine	about 4 years
Willow and cottonwood	about 3 years

The durable woods, such as osage orange and cedar, have such a length of life that preservative treatment is not advisable.

The life of the non-durable woods, however, can be greatly lengthened by treatment with a good preservative. Woods falling in this class are red oak, ash, beech, maple, willow, cottonwood and the pines.

Decay of wood is caused by fungi which require food and moisture for their growth. A good preservative should be an anticeptic and should also act as a waterproofing so as to keep out moisture. Coal-tar creosote answers both of these purposes. Crude oil acts as a waterproofing, and is good to that extent, but coal-tar creosote also poisons the food supply of the fungi and gives better results.

The simplest method of treating posts is to paint them with a preservative after they have been peeled and thoroughly air-seasoned. Coal-tar creosote should be kept heated to about 200 degrees F. and applied to posts hot. It is not necessary to paint the entire post; only a band a foot wide that will extend six inches above the ground level and six inches under the ground level is required. Every farmer who has removed decayed fence posts—and few farmers have escaped that "chore"—knows that decay is almost entirely confined to a point just at and under the ground surface. It is well, however, to put a coat of creosote on the top of the post, where moisture may gain entrance through the cut end. Two coats of creosote should be used, and care should be taken to work the protective coating well into any cracks and crevices of the wood. Brushed on hot in this way, creosote should increase the life of fence posts from three to six years. Better results are obtained by dipping posts into a bath of hot creosote, but this calls for more equipment than farms usually possess.

For a fence post plantation in Michigan or other northern states having similar climatic conditions, the best trees to plant are the less durable woods, such as black walnut, European larch, red oak, ash, red pine, and jack pine. These species grow much more rapidly than the white cedar. Black locust and catalpa are difficult to raise in Michigan, due to the susceptibility of the former to insect attack from borers, and of the latter to damage by frost. European larch will produce posts when about 15 years old; the red oak, ash, and jack pine in about 20 years or less on good soils. Osage orange, though the most durable, is objectionable due to the thorns it bears in great profusion, and to its bushy habit of growth which makes it difficult to work among. When these less durable woods already mentioned are grown in plantations to provide fence posts, treating with a good preservative coating is of course essential.

An Average Day's Plowing

Opinions differ widely as to how much land one man and a team should be able to plow in one day. Condition of the soil itself and the level or hilly topography of the country have a direct bearing upon the amount of plowing that can be done.

To arrive at some fair basis upon which to estimate a fair day's plowing, careful records were kept on 324 farms scattered in all parts of Ohio. Considerable difference in the time required for plowing, harrowing, discing, and completely preparing land for planting was noted in different parts of the state, due to the great diversity of soil types and to the hilly, stony or level and stone-free nature of the land. Nevertheless it was found possible to strike a fair average in terms of acres covered in a ten-hour working day.

The average for one man with a 12-inch walking plow drawn by two horses plowed an average of 1.3 acres a day. One man with a 14-inch sulky plow and three horses plowed an average of 1.9 acres a day. One man using a tractor-drawn double-gang plow averaged 5.8 acres a day.

With twelve-inch disc harrows and two horses, 9.2 acres per day was found to be the average. When three horses were used, the average was increased to 10.2 acres. Harrowing with a two-section spike-tooth harrow and three horses accounted for an average of 12.9 acres a day; with a two-section spring-tooth harrow and three horses, only 9.7 acres a day were covered. Rolling land, using two horses, resulted in an average of 11.7 acres per day.

Since these figures are the result of careful investigation and the averages struck take into consideration soil and topography of every kind found in the state, the figures may be safely used in other regions as a basis upon which to estimate or plan farm work and the time required for land preparation.

EASY NOW TO RID YOUR PLACE OF FLIES

Widely Known Scientist Discovers Wonderful Chemical that is Fatal to Flies. Not a Poison—Harmless to Stock.

Flies are one of the most dangerous and annoying things with which the farmer has to contend. Now, through the discovery of E. R. Alexander, widely known scientist, you can rid your house and barns and livestock of these pests almost instantly, and with no trouble at all. This discovery is in the form of an organic chemical that is fatal to flies, and similar pests, such as chiggers, mosquitoes and moths.

This new discovery, which is called Alexander's Rid-O-Fly, is not a poison. Though it kills flies like magic, farm animals and human beings are not affected by it at all. Rid-O-Fly is also a strong repellant. Flies will not come near stock or buildings where Rid-O-Fly has been used. Rid-O-Fly is particularly valuable for cows and horses, as it is a known fact that flies do untold harm to these animals.

So confident is Dr. Alexander that his discovery will rid your house, barns and livestock of these pests that he offers a $3.00 supply for only $1.25 and a few cents extra postage collected on delivery, on the guarantee that if Rid-O-Fly does not work it will cost you nothing. Two big Kansas City banks guarantee the reliability of this offer.

SEND NO MONEY—just your name and address to the Alexander Laboratories, 1505 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo., and this introductory offer will be mailed at once.

SAW 15 Cords a day, EASY!

—with the wonderful OTTAWA Log Saw. Saw more than 10 men—Save your back! Write for special offer, easy terms and new Free Book. Send postcard today.

OTTAWA MFG. CO., 911-R Wood St. Ottawa, Kans. Room 911-R Magee Bldg. Pittsburgh, Pa.

Through the columns of this department subscribers may have free advice from the eminent specialists and experts of our Agricultural Staff on questions relating to farming, live stock and dairying.

Address Modern Farmer, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published.

Questions and Answers

SUNFLOWER BLIGHT.—The sunflowers that we are growing here for the silo are not doing well this year. The leaves seem to be turning brown and dying, then falling off. Is it some kind of blight? What can I do about it? C. M. E., Idaho.

A.—When withering of lower leaves starts during the blossoming period of sunflowers, gradually ascending the stalks until even the upper leaves are damaged or lost, blight is the cause. This is particularly likely to be the case if the season has been exceptionally hot and dry; also it is more common upon high dry land than upon low and moist land. So far as we know, there is no preventive remedy for sunflower blight. The safest way to proceed is to cut the crop early for silage, thus saving many of the leaves that would otherwise be lost. Sunflowers planted at about corn-planting time may be cut during the first two weeks of August; sunflowers planted as late as the middle of June will hardly be ready for cutting before the first part of September. Early cutting is not a hardship, however, as the quality of the silage is much better when the plants are cut in the early blooming stage. In many regions there prevails a mistaken notion that sunflowers should be allowed to stand until quite mature, but such plants make coarse, woody silage that is not relished by livestock.

WHAT IS KUDZU VINE?—Please give me a little information about this new Kudzu vine that I hear spoken of and read about in the seed catalogs. Some places it is mentioned as a hardy vine that will stand our winters; others say that it will only grow in the south, where freezing is very light. I am interested in the new vine, as I have been told that it will make a growth of a rod or more in a single year without much care or cultivation. R. R. V., Tenn.

A.—Kudzu vine (Pueraria thunbergiana) is a leguminous vine that has been introduced into the United States from Japan; though it has been known in this country since about 1876, it is only recently that it has attracted attention as a plant of economic importance. In Japan this plant is grown on hillsides to be used for pastures. The stems are manufactured into grass cloth; the roots are rich in starch and are used for human food; hay made from the long vines is too coarse to meet with American approval. Kudzu is relatively hardy, and will thrive in our southern, southeastern and western states, provided the climate is moist as well as warm. Plants have been known to winter over successfully as far north as Nova Scotia, and it is quite possible that the hardy qualities may be improved by careful selection. Kudzu produces long prostrate branches, from which grow leaves that closely resemble those of the common bean, except that they are from 6 to 12 inches in size. Where stem joints touch the ground, roots start and new plants are propagated. All kinds of livestock relish the leaves. Chemical analysis shows Kudzu to be about equal to alfalfa and clover in nutriment, but the stems which grow to a length of 20 to 30 feet in a single season are likely to be too woody and coarse for stock to eat. Under Tennessee conditions it might be advisable to give Kudzu a trial, or write to your State Agricultural Experiment Station at Knoxville for information and complete cultural instructions.

Dissolve Away Your Superfluous Hair

It's just as easy. Every hair is removed entirely no matter how thick the growth. Hair on the most delicate skin can be removed completely without the least discomfort or irritation and entirely without danger of burning or blisters. Simply moisten the hairs with

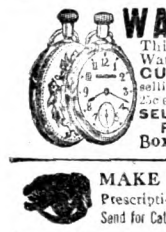
Sulfo Solution

Leaves the skin smooth and soft. Leaves no trace spot or mark whatever. Does not burn off hairs, injure the skin, or cause red, irritated spots. All hairs will be dissolved away easily, comfortably, quickly and thoroughly with Sulfo Solution. There's nothing like it. Fashions demand hair-free arms, under arms, shoulders and ankles. Sold at $1.00 a bottle at drug and department stores, or sent on receipt of price by

COOPER PHARMICAL CO., 655 Thompson Bldg. Chicago

Gloves Motoring, or dress to order. Catalog will convince you to buy from factory. J. Rogalley, Gloversville, N. Y.

You can play a CONN



Easiest of all instruments to play, the Conn saxophone is also hailed best by famous stars.
Play popular tunes in short time.
Big money, lots of fun for you.
Free Trial—Easy Payments.
C. G. Conn Ltd., Elkhart, Ind.
810 Conn Building
CONN
CULTIVATE YOUR MUSICAL BUMP

LAW Course in 2 Years

Be a lawyer. Law trained men earn big money and occupy top positions in social, business and public life.
$5,000 to $10,000 a year is what you can earn. Our improved system guides you step by step until you have passed the bar examination in any state. Low cost, easy terms. We furnish everything including complete Law Library. Send for free catalog.
AMERICAN SCHOOL
Dept. LC-17, Drexel Ave. and 58th, Chicago

MILLINERY LESSONS—FREE

Why pay $15 for a $3 hat?

You can easily learn Millinery during spare minutes, in your own home in 10 weeks.
Start a Millinery "SHOPPE" $1200 to $5000 a year
Write immediately for free Millinery book, containing sample lessons from this wonderful course.
FRANKLIN INSTITUTE
Dept. A824, Rochester, N. Y.

WATCH FREE

This fine American made Watch, new style, stem wind and set, GUARANTEED to keep time. Given for selling only 8 boxes of ROSEBUD at 25c each and returning the $2.00. EASY TO SELL. We TRUST YOU. Order today.
ROSEBUD PERFUME CO.
Box 142, Woodsboro, Md.

MAKE MONEY SELLING GLASSES

Prescriptions filled — Broken lenses duplicated.
Send for Catalog. COULTER OPTICAL CO., Dept. B, Chicago

Be Your Own MUSIC Teacher

Learn at Home by wonderful print-and-picture method that teaches in half usual time. Far superior to private teachers. Simple as A, B, C—a child can master it. Your lessons consist of real selections instead of tiresome exercises. When you finish one of these delightfully easy lessons you've added a new "piece" to your list. You read real notes too—no "numbers" or trick music. Method is so thorough that many of our 300,000 students are band and orchestra LEADERS.

Play by NOTE
Piano, Organ, Violin, Cornet, Mandolin, Harp, 'Cello, Trombone, Flute, Clarinet, Piccolo, Saxophone, Ukulele, Guitar. Harmony and Composition, Banjo, Tenor Banjo, Voice and Speech Culture. Drums and Traps Automatic Finger Control, etc.

Automatic Finger Control

Our own invention—the music marvel of all ages. Trains and guides your fingers so that they fall into proper place almost automatically.

Free Book And Trial Lesson

show you how you may quickly become a fine player or singer through the U. S. School home study method. Write now, however, before free books and sample lessons are gone. Mention your favorite instrument or whether you prefer vocal music. Please write your name and address plainly. Address

U. S. SCHOOL OF MUSIC, 48 BRUNSWICK BLDG., N. Y. C.

Alicia Mary Goes A'Hinting

By

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

ALICIA Mary sat on the front steps, nursing her doll. Gwendoline was the doll's name. Though minus a right eye and a left leg, she was loved none the less for the deficiencies. Indeed her crippled condition only endeared her the more to the heart of her young parent. And if her cheeks no longer retained their pristine bloom, her golden hair still curled as it had done on that December morn when she first tumbled out of a Christmas stocking.

Alicia Mary's hair was not golden, neither did it grow in clustering curls; instead it was a straight dark brown, worn in what is popularly known as a Dutch cut, and surmounted by a bow of faded pink which made up in size what it lacked in hue. Her eyes were of a nondescript shade, and her nose turned up, with two little freckles on the extreme end.

Her very pretty aunt, who was twenty-five and engaged, used to massage her face each day, so Alicia Mary, having heard that cucumber juice was good for the complexion, surreptitiously squeezed some into an old paint box and annointed her nose and fastened a clothespin on it every night to change the shape. But at the end of a week the small devotee of beauty became discouraged in her quest and decided to heed her mother's advice that if she only behaved as well as she looked, she would do very well.

Alicia Mary gently jo ted Gwendoline up and down on one knee the same as she had seen the old lady across the street do to her litt e granddaughter when her daughter wasn't looking. But it was an absent-minded jolt, for it was evident that the young mother's thoughts were not upon her child. On the contrary, she was peering anxiously up and down the street, her forehead in a deep frown, while every now and then she sighed so heavily that she almost burst the buttons from her gingham dress. The clock had just struck eleven-thirty and Colonel Armstead was not in sight.

Colonel Armstead was Alicia Mary's best friend. The fact that he was eighty and she was eight did not seem to lessen their affinity in any way. Every morning he walked downtown for his paper, always returning by way of Alicia Mary's house so that she could walk part way home with him. On the corner where the electric cars passed, she had to turn back.

Once in a great while she was permitted to go all the way and have lunch with the Colonel and his sister in the big stone house with the sleeping lions each side of the front walk. These were red letter days in Alicia Mary's life. She liked that big dining-room with the round, shiny table without any cloth and she liked eating off china that was so thin it looked as though it would break if you didn't lay your spoon down gently. And it was pleasant to have a knife and fork the same size as grown people's and to be waited on by a black man with shiny buttons. At home just after you got comfortably seated, your mother always said, "Oh, Alicia Mary, won't you hop down and bring me another dessert spoon?" Or your father would cry, "Quick, Sheeziks, you're the youngest, run get me the carving knife."

But when she dined at the Colonel's, she sat up very straight in her high-backed leather chair and tried to act perfectly composed when she felt her legs slipping over the shiny surface. However, just at the moment when she was about to disappear for good and all, the black man always pulled her back and though she gazed at the Colonel from the tail of her eye, neither he nor his sister ever seemed to notice that anything out of the ordinary had occurred.

Suddenly Alicia Mary gave a start. Her quick ear had caught the tap, tap of the Colonel's wooden leg. Yes, he was coming up the street. She tumbled down the steps and flew to meet him, Gwendoline dangling by the arm in most unmotherly abandon.

The Colonel's gaze seemed riveted on a sparrow twittering above his head. An avalanche of pink gingham was hurled against his free side, and he looked down in mock astonishment.

"Why, bless my soul," he cried, "if it isn't Alicia Mary!"

She poked a fat finger at him delightedly. "You knew all the time it was me. You did it on purpose."

The Colonel laughed, but at once assumed a grave expression as he asked in most solicitous tones, "And how is your daughter this morning, Madam?"

Gwendoline was instantly righted and her curls smoothed down.

"She was very naughty at breakfast," was the solemn reply. "She wouldn't eat her oatmeal."

"Ah," said the Colonel gravely. "That is a very serious matter. Of course you didn't allow her to go unpunished?"

An uncomfortable recollection stirred Alicia Mary's brow and she stared hard at her scuffed-out shoes.

"She had to sit in the straight-backed chair beside her father's desk and not get down for a whole half hour."

The Colonel's eyes twinkled. "That was dreadful. Let us hope there won't be any repetition of the offense."

Alicia Mary dimpled. "There won't be tomorrow," she giggled as she tucked her hand confidingly in his, "for I made a hole in the oatmeal bag and it's all trickling down behind the flour barrel."

"My! my!," said the Colonel. "I wonder if you're the little girl I'm looking for."

Pink bow stopped with a jerk.

"What is it?" she demanded suspiciously.

By this time they had almost reached Alicia Mary's gate, and the Colonel was fingering the red string of a bulky package tied to his crutch.

"This morning when I was downtown," he began slowly, "an old white-haired gentleman came up to me and said, 'I wonder if you know a plump, little rosy-cheeked girl with brown hair, who lives on Avon Street and who always carries a big doll when she goes out to walk?'"

"Why that's me," cried Alicia Mary in astonishment.

"That's exactly what I told the old gentleman," continued the Colonel, "and he at once asked me to give you this box on my way home," whereupon he gravely placed the package in her hands.

"Why-ee!" exclaimed Alicia Mary, I wonder who he could be!"

"I wonder," said the Colonel.

"Oh, Alicia Mary," he called as she scampered up the steps, "I forgot. Here's something for your mother. Don't forget to give it to her," and he presented a delicately tinted envelope addressed in an old-fashioned hand and hobbled down the street, chuckling.

Alicia Mary, clutched to her heart the letter and the box, and dashed into the house.

"Dinner's all ready," called her mother from the dining-room. "Run wash your hands quick."

"Yes, and bring down my glasses, baby," added her father. (How she did wish they would treat her like a big girl.)

She struck two smudgy fingers under the faucet, gave them a passing flirt with the towel, and tore for the table.

"Look, mother," she cried, pulling off the paper and twine in feverish haste, "just look what I've got. Oh, a beautiful set of dishes! Oh! Oh!"

"Hello," said her father, "where did those come from?"

"Why an old man on the street gave 'em to Colonel Armstead and asked him to give 'em to me. Oh, mother, who could it have been?"

Her brother Joe gave her hair a yank as he slid into the seat beside her.

"Gee! but you're easy, Alicia Mary," he snorted. "The old duffer was kiddin' you. He gave 'em to you himself."

"He didn't!" she retorted indignantly.

"Sure he did. Say but you're some four flusher. Work him for a new racket for me, won't you? You can hand him the dope, all right."

"That will do, Joseph," said his father sharply. "Your English is anything but elegant. Besides, you have no right to tease your sister so."

"In my day," spoke up Grandmother Hollis, "children were seen and not heard."

Joe grunted as loudly as he dared and buried his face in his soup spoon. As usual, it was the mother who threw herself into the breach.

"Here are some toasted crackers for you, Joey," she said, putting a plate beside him, and as she rescued the pink bow from Alicia Mary's tear-wet lashes she added gently, "What's the letter, little daughter?"

Alicia Mary shoved it toward her.

"It's for you," she sniffed. "The Colonel said to give it to you."

Her mother opened the envelope and read aloud:

"My dear Mrs. Westcott;

My niece, Mrs. Willis, whom you may remember meeting at my home last winter, is to entertain the members of the Woman's Club at her country home on the Hudson next Wednesday afternoon. It would give me great pleasure to have you as my guest.

"Yours very cordially,
"Lucretia Armstead."

A flush of pink crept into the mother's thin cheek as she looked tremulously around the table.

"How perfectly lovely of Miss Armstead to think of me!" she murmured, "but of course I can't go."

"Why 'of course'?" said her husband. "Why in the world shouldn't you?"

"Oh, mother," cried Edith, Alicia Mary's oldest sister, who was sixteen and always wrote her name Edythe, "you wouldn't refuse such a chance as that. Why, Mrs. Willis has loads of money and is terribly swell."

"But I haven't anything to wear," protested her mother. "My black lace is too shabby and I haven't another thing."

Mr. Westcott's face grew sober.

"That's a shame, mother. Can't you fix it up some way?" he asked helplessly.

"No, Edward, it's been made over three times already, and the last time I wore it at the Peabody's dinner, it broke in two or three places so I said I could never do it again. But don't feel badly," she added quickly, "next year I'll have a new one and then I'll be ready for a dozen Woman's Clubs."

"Humph!" sniffed Grandmother Hollis. "You've said 'next year' ever since Joey was in his cradle and I haven't seen you buy anything new yet."

Mr. Westcott stirred uneasily. He was not unconscious that his mother-in-law secretly scorned him for being a financial failure, and any reference to their straightened circumstances made him uncomfortable.

"Oh, dear," sighed Edith, "there's Mrs. Wardwell laid up with a broken ankle so she can't go out, and she has reams of pretty dresses and she's just your size. I don't see why you can't borrow one of her."

"My dear!" gasped her mother.

"Well, she's always sending you flowers and fruit, and when you were getting over the fever she sent the carriage ever so many times. I don't see why she couldn't send you a dress too. You don't need to ask point blank, just hint around."

"Sure thing," added Joey, busily tucking away roast beef and potatoes. "There's Miss Lyman, too. She's a good old scout. She had on a hat yesterday that had Aunt Nell's stopped forty ways. Get a dress of Mrs. Wardwell and a hat of Anne Lyman and there'll be some class to you."

He rose from his chair and gave his mother a good-by peck. "Ta, ta! I've got to beat it. Old Bones said if I didn't know my algebra today I'd get canned, sure," and he grabbed his cap and was gone.

After dinner Alicia Mary took Gwendoline to the bench under the apple tree and sat down to cogitate. This was a somewhat serious operation, accompanied by a wrinkling of the nose much like that of a small puppy, and an incessant boring of one well-worn heel into the soft earth.

For Alicia Mary had seen what the others had failed to notice—that though her mother had pretended not to care, her eyes had looked misty when she laid down the invitation. And later, when they were alone and Alicia Mary had whispered softly, "I wish you had a pretty dress," her mother had caught her in her arms and, squeezing her hard, answered, "I had rather have you, baby, than all the pretty dresses in the world."

But Alicia Mary thought it was rather hard that her mother couldn't have her and the pretty dresses, too. What had she meant when she laughed and said her new dresses had gone into the coal bin? Alicia Mary had braved the darkness of the coal cellar and looked but she hadn't seen any dress there.

However, it was evident that her mother must have a new dress, and the little girl wondered how she could get one. She thought of her bank, but that marvelous contrivance for holding pennies had never contained but twenty, and sixteen of these had already been poked out with a hatpin. She was rather hazy as to how many that left but she was afraid it wasn't enough to buy a dress with. Suddenly she remembered that her sister had said borrow one of Mrs. Wardwell's—not ask outright—just hint around.

Now hinting was one of Alicia Mary's long suits. She had been reproved for doing it too many times not to know she was past-mistress of that gentle art. She rose to her feet, a look of determination on her mouth, an unholy joy in her eye. If the end ever justified the means, it surely must in this case, and Alicia Mary was not one to shrink from her duty especially when that duty called for the indulgence of one's favorite sin.

With the fortitude of her Puritan ancestors, she decided to tackle the most difficult task first. Clasping Gwendoline close to her breast, she sallied out of the gate and down the street to the corner where stood the brick house of the late Hon. John Wardwell. It had a cold, forbidding air, and Alicia Mary's heart sank a little as she advanced up the front walk. But it was not for nothing that she had laboriously copied in her writing book "He who hesitates is lost," so she advanced boldly and gave a vigorous pull at the bell. A white-capped maid answered the summons.

"Is Mrs. Wardwell at home?" inquired Alicia Mary politely.

The maid repressed a smile. "I think so. If you will come in this way and sit down I will speak to her. What name, please?"

But the small guest wasn't going to fall into any trap like that. She knew a thing or two and was prepared for just such an emergency.

"Miss Westcott," she said in her best society manner, "Miss Alicia Mary Westcott."

The maid bowed and withdrew. Alicia Mary breathed more easily. It wasn't going to be so bad after all. She scuttled across the room and seated herself in a chair low enough to admit of her toes touching the floor.

A slight sound in the hall, and there was pushed across the threshold a wheeled chair in which sat Mrs. Wardwell.

Alicia Mary rose and bobbed a curtesy.

"I thought it was time we were being neighborly so I'd come over and call," she began.

"Mercy on us!" ejaculated Mrs. Wardwell, peering at her over t did your mothe
"She didn't s noting the disco hostess, she add before I am sent
Mrs. Wardw
she had never b time she came work that lay
Alicia Mary impressed by t
the moment the mind. Mrs. W
Her hair was gr up on crimping p fed, and her ch
She talked a gr teeth had a str
just at the m jerked her mou
Alicia Mary lo and looked at h
she screamed.
Mrs. Wardwell
"What do yo
A painful flus
"Nothing," sa
She felt that t
change. Mrs. W stood, and all t shouldn't unders
"Have you a
"Mercy, no children."
"Didn't you e
"Never."
The answer w rather uncomfort ought to apolog
no little boys or g
Mrs. Wardwell s lentingly.
"Is your husb
"My husband years."
Alicia Mary l
"Is he there
Mrs. Wardwe was hemming fo
her coldly.
"Child, you're you ever go to S
"Oh, yes," sa can't talk abo teacher. She's beautifulest clo
"That's a very p
softly.
Mrs. Wardwe
Alicia Mary's clothes were M
She smoothed d latest creation a you like it, my d
Alicia Mary's
hem.
"Is it a dress t
"Oh, no," was house gown."
Alicia Mary w
but it was evid gown. She did spoke:
"You're very f
Mrs. Wardwell
"Yes," she a great deal of yo woman."
Alicia Mary w
spoke again her v her expression wa
baby pictures.
"I suppose you
This time Mrs.
"Why, I have a
"And you aren ties, are you?"
"No, I shan't b more."
Alicia Mary sig
"It must be d not be able to we able to wear 'em
sagely.
"Why, you're
Mrs. Wardwell.
Whatever that Alicia Mary cont
"You aren't a got something to and hasn't got a
Mrs. Wardwell
"What are you
"'bout the bravely, "the on Miss Armstead as
"And isn't yo Alicia Mary je stupid grown pe
"She can't,
ts all worn out an dreadfully 'cause
And at that heaved and two b
A long pause.
Alicia Mary fe
she sobbed conv
Wardwell spoke;
Union Aid Socie
have been aston president. She chubby little han
"You're a goo
see you are so fo more. She shall new gown but yo Alicia Mary f chair, regardless crepe de chine, a tonished lady's c
"It's just swe
never, never tell.
She picked up door.
"Why you're
Mrs. Wardwell.
Alicia Mary be
"I'll come ag got to call on Mi
Miss Anne Ly cunning little front. She was and with her wa sometimes came up quickly when groaned audibly.
"Hello, infant
from?"
Alicia Mary h
but she knew n looked at him co
"I'm not an Westcott and came up the fro
"A thousand offer you a chair
this honor?"
"I came to ca
"I knew it," turned to Miss A
"I told you i you'd be sorry."
"But I'm not ing out her hand her side. "This and I won't ha
Jim," she said s
Alicia Mary man's shoulder down the arm loved Miss Lym
she had been o
young man wou rand and run h was growing hu

(c

$1.98 And Nice Pair of Hose FREE If You Order at Once

Amazing Bargain Price on the Latest "KING-TUT" TWO TONE SANDAL

"TUT" Sandals—the craze of the season—the last word in correct footwear for ladies. And Gordon Bates offers the very newest—"KING TUT" sandals in Two-Tone—a combination of Patent Leather and brown kid-finished leather, with Egyptian cutouts on vamp, sides, etc., just as pictured. Fine leather soles, live rubber heels. The very latest—only $1.98 and that's less than half style center prices. And to make it the most amazing bargain ever advertised, a pair of ladies' hose to match, included free with all orders.

Send No Money

Understand—HOSE FREE, and send no money. Pay postman on arrival, plus a few pennies postage. Money back, every penny quick, if you're not delighted. Sizes 2½ to 8. Order No. 1253.

ORDER NO. 1253

GORDON BATES CO., Dept. 818, Minneapolis, Minn.

NEW-TREAD TIRES AT 40¢ ON THE DOLLAR

Send No Money!

Here is a real opportunity to cut your season's tire bill notwithstanding advances in prices. For a limited period only we offer our famous Diamond-Treaded Tires—as illustrated—at less than ½. Made of NEW LIVE RUBBER and built on the best carcases money can buy.

Special Sale Prices

Size	Tire	Tube	Size	Tire	Tube
28x3	$4.95	$1.25	36x4	$8.65	$2.35
30x3	4.95	1.35	32x4½	8.85	2.40
30x3½	5.85	1.40	33x4½	9.00	2.45
32x3½	6.50	1.50	34x4½	9.15	2.50
31x4	7.00	1.60	35x4½	9.25	2.60
32x4	7.50	1.85	36x4½	9.45	2.70
33x4	7.85	2.15	35x5	9.75	2.80
34x4	8.10	2.25	37x5	9.85	2.90

ALL OUR TUBES ARE NEW FRESH STOCK and Guaranteed for One Year. Shipment made same day order is received. Pay on arrival and if not satisfied, return AT OUR EXPENSE. Specify whether straight side or clincher wanted. FIVE PER CENT DISCOUNT when cash accompanies order. DEALER AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY LOCALITY.

DIAMOND-TREAD TIRE WORKS
3253 S. Morgan St., Chicago, Illinois

STANDARD TIRES

ANY SIZE $1.00 for Only

Lowest prices ever made on long service Goodyear, Fisk, Goodrich, U. S. and other Standard Tires—slightly used but readily giving many thousands of miles wear. Not double tread or reconstructed.

GUARANTEED 8 MONTHS

Any tire not giving 8 months service replaced at one-third original price. Add $1 to price quoted and get 2 Tires same size.

Record Breaking Low Price

Size	1 Tire	2 Tires	Tubes
30x3	$4.95	$ 6.95	$ .95
30x3 1-2	5.95	6.95	1.15
32x3 1-2	6.75	7.75	1.40
31x4	7.75	8.75	1.50
32x4	8.25	9.25	1.75
33x4	8.75	9.75	1.85
34x4	9.00	10.00	2.00
32x4 1-2	9.50	10.50	2.25
33x4 1-2	9.75	10.75	2.35
34x4 1-2	10.00	11.00	2.50
35x4 1-2	11.00	12.00	2.50
36x4 1-2	12.25	13.25	2.75
35x5	12.25	13.25	3.00
37x5	13.50	14.50	3.00

$1.00 Brings Tire—Send $1 for each tire ordered. Balance on delivery. Examine—if not satisfied return. Rush orders while these prices hold.

IDEAL TIRE COMPANY
2613 S. Wabash Ave., Dept. K-108 Chicago

30X3½ CORD $2.00 NEW TIRE PRICE

GUARANTEED 8 MONTHS AT HALF PRICE

These are Goodrich, Goodyear, Firestone, Fisk and other best known standard make tires. All slightly used, but readily give our customers thousands of miles of splendid service.

LOWEST TIRE PRICES IN AMERICA

	Tires	New Tubes		Tires	New Tubes
30x3	$1.90	$ .90	32x4½	$3.75	$1.65
30x3½	2.00	.90	33x4½	3.75	1.65
32x3½	2.50	.90	34x4½	4.00	1.65
31x4	2.75	.90	35x4½	4.25	1.65
32x4	3.00	1.40	36x4½	4.25	1.65
33x4	3.25	1.40	35x5	4.25	1.95
34x4	3.50	1.40	37x5	4.25	1.95

SEND ONLY $1.00 for each tire shipped. Balance C.O.D. Express shipments sent section unwrapped for inspection. Tires guaranteed eight months. Another tire given at half price for any not perfectly satisfactory. Dealers and Agents wanted everywhere. WRITE—RUSH ORDERS.

ROSE TIRE CORPORATION
Dept. H123, 1526 S. WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

2 TIRES FOR $9.30

2 Tubes FREE

Standard Tire Prices SMASHED!

First time you can buy 12,000 miles of service for only $9.30. During this sale 2 tires for much less than usual cost of one! Tires fabricated by the STEWART PROCESS give remarkable service on good and bad roads. You, too, can get

12,000 Miles

During this cut-price sale, we give you absolutely Free a Standard, brand new tube with every tire! 2 tubes free with 2 Tires! Be sure to state if straight side or clincher is wanted.

FREE Examination

Size	1 Tire & 1 Tube	2 Tires & 2 Tubes
28x3	$ 6.50	$ 9.30
30x3	6.70	10.65
30x3½	7.40	12.55
32x3½	8.95	14.50
31x4	10.15	16.40
32x4	10.30	17.35
33x4	11.90	18.30
34x4	12.30	19.35
32x4½	12.55	20.10
33x4½	13.10	21.10
34x4½	13.40	21.90
35x4½	13.90	22.95
35x5	14.90	24.85
37x5	15.10	25.65

Send deposit of $1 for each tire ordered. Send only $2 if you order 2 tires. We ship C. O. D. for balance and allow examination. If not absolutely satisfied, return unused and we'll refund every cent of your deposit! You take no risk whatever! If you prefer to remit with order, deduct 5 per cent.

Money-Back Guarantee

Stewart Tire Co., Dept. 503, 21st & Racine Ave., Chicago

Auto Owners WANTED!

To use and introduce the

DIMPLED TUBE

Outlasts four ordinary tubes. Overcomes friction heat, increases tire life 25% to 50%, is leak proof, prevents flat tires. Big Money Maker for agents, salesmen and garage men.

30 DAYS FREE TRIAL. TWO YEAR GUARANTEE. Write today for special introductory offer and big money making plan. Dept. 104,

WOLVERINE CLIMAX CO., Detroit, Mich.

Tire Agents Wanted

Use and Introduce MELLINGER CORD TIRES

12,000 Miles Guaranteed!

Lowest Wholesale Prices in America. Shipped prepaid on approval. Make big money all or part time. No capital or experience. Sample sections furnished.

FREE TIRES FOR YOUR CAR to one user in each locality. Simply send name today for valuable book, tells how thousands have gone into big business. SPECIAL AGENTS' OFFER. Wholesale Prices and FREE SAMPLE KIT.

MELLINGER TIRE & RUBBER CO.
$500,000 Capital. DEPT. 506, KANSAS CITY, MO.

MONEY For You In TIRES — FREE BOOK

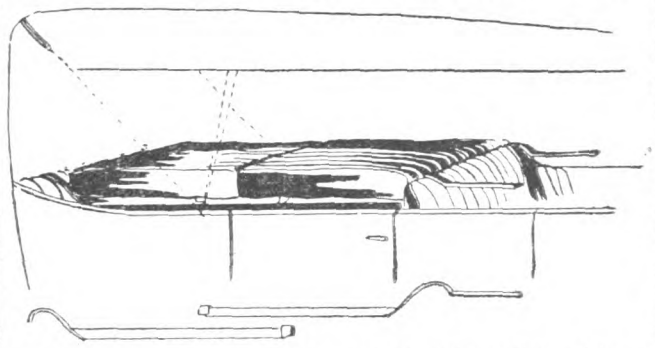
Automobile and Gas Engine Helps

Questions relating to gasolene engines and automobiles, by our subscribers, addressed to COMFORT Auto Dept., Augusta, Maine, will be answered by our expert, free, in the columns of this department. Full name and address is required, but initials only will be printed. That we may intelligently diagnose your trouble please state the year in which your car was made.

Touring

NOT very many years ago it was out of the question for a person of average means who owned a motor car to consider taking a tour which would necessitate his being away from home a few days. The price for housing his family at hotels, meals, car storage, etc. combined to make the proposition prohibitive. Today conditions are such that even the poor man who owns a car has the right to answer the call of the open road. Recreation and health building have been made possible to all at a minimum expense by a movement which, although only in its infancy, has swept to all points of this continent. This great boon to the public is the establishing of camp sites where motorists may park their cars at night, pitch camp, cook meals and make themselves comfortable. Many of these sites are privately owned, the owner usually conducting a stand where food and drinks may be purchased. No charge is usually made for pitching camp and the motorist is under no obligation to make purchases. Good drinking water is usually available. More elaborately furnished camp sites are to be found in the larger cities. There camps are maintained by the cities and often have gas connections for the cooking of meals, shelter in case of storm, etc. For the past two years, the writer has taken advantage of the camp sites and has found this mode of travel to be inexpensive as well as recreational. Another boon to this happy way of traveling is the erection of stands along the main highways where food, drink, candy, souvenirs, etc. may be purchased. These little business places are usually referred to as "hot dog" stands as the frankfurter sandwich is the most popular of the food proffered for sale. Fresh milk is also to be found at most of these stands. In case the motorist should not care to wait to cook a meal, a satisfying lunch may be purchased at these stands for a trifling expenditure. The right to answer the open road is now open to all and anyone contemplating such a trip should give the matter serious consideration.

Advice to Tourists



You can't cheat the car on rubber. The tires must travel every inch of the journey and if they are not in good shape then the pleasure of the trip is seriously threatened. Especially should the back tires be in first-class condition. These tires do the driving and stopping of the car and therefore are subjected to considerable more abuse than are the front tires. If you are at all in doubt about the tires buy and mount two new tires on the rear wheels and use the ones which you have replaced for spares. One or two blowout patches and a tire repair kit are essential for a long trip. Assuming that the car is in fairly good shape mechanically for the trip, the matter of lubrication is worthy of the chief consideration. Drain the old oil out of the motor and refill with fresh lubricant. Fill the transmission and rear axle cases to the proper level with the correct lubricant. Special attention should be given the springs and their shackles. The familiar canary whistle will be with you all the way unless this matter is properly attented to. With the oil drained out of the crank case lubricate the spring leaves. This is best done with an old paint brush, applying the oil to the sides of the spring. Be sure the shackle belts receive the lubricant. Screwing down the grease cup and allowing the grease to squeeze out around the threads does not constitute a job. Be certain the lubricant gets to the bolt. Universal joints are apt to be forgotten. A metal universal joint needs lubricant and unless it gets the same, will wear quickly as well as produce a high pitched canary note. Do not overlook giving the storage battery distilled water before starting out. Test the lights and carry extra bulbs and fuses.

Cutting Charging Rate

While touring you will probably meet during the daytime a number of cars on which the lights are burning. This condition is not an oversight on the part of the driver. When the battery is fully charged continued charging only causes the battery to heat. For this reason, the lights are turned on so that they might consume some of the current instead of sending all of it into the battery. This practice has become quite common among tourists and is an effective one for cutting down the charging rate. Another method often used is the rendering of the generator inoperative. When means are provided for short circuiting the generator, it is one way of helping the battery. If the driver intends to make a run of eight hours' duration he will render the generator inoperative for four hours and then allow it to charge for the remaining four hours. Still another way in which the battery is kept in good condition is the running of the starting motor for about a half minute at the end of the day's run. The starting motor consumes a large amount of current and running it in this manner with the ignition switch turned off places a drain on the battery. For the motorist who is making his first tour, the thought to keep in mind is that the condition he is apt to experience is the overcharging of the battery rather than undercharging it as may be the case when at home where the runs are short and there are frequent starts and stops.

The Bed

Last year the writer took his family, including wife and three-year-old son, on a three thousand mile tour through several states. A bed was made in the car (a touring model) and a sound refreshing sleep was enjoyed by all. The foundation for the bed was made of four irons bent so that they could be suspended from the top of the back seat to the top of the front seat. The accompanying sketches show the construction and application of these irons much better than words can describe them. The car cushions were laid on the irons affording a perfect spring and mattress. A light piece of board was laid across the front extension of the irons and the car robes thrown over the board. If the people in the car are of the six-foot build, the board and robe are needed for a resting place for the feet. The writer placed the side curtains in position on one side of the car and also fitted the front curtain in place on the other side. A piece of canvas was thrown over the windshield and back curtain glass. A fine netting was purchased from an army store. This netting covered the entire body of the car and rendered the sleeping compartment mosquito-proof. The bed was very comfortable and a good night's rest was always to be enjoyed after a long drive. The irons and netting are conveniently carried on the running board of the car. With this equipment camp can be established in from two to five minutes. The car makes a perfect shelter in case of storm.

Above—Irons are shown in place with seat cushions resting on them. Below—2 irons for one side are shown. These two screw together to form a continuous support reaching from front to rear seat backs.

Mosquitoes

Mosquitoes of a size which compel you to believe them capable of biting off a portion of your anatomy and flying away to a tree to eat it prove very troublesome to campers unless means are taken to guard against them. Mosquito netting should be used at all openings. If the bed is made in the car, a netting which can be thrown over the car is convenient and effectful. For a few cents a small bottle of Oil of Citrenella can be purchased at any drug store. Unless the pests are just about starved they will not buzz in the vicinity of this oil. Smear a little of the oil on the hands, arms, legs, feet or at any other spots which you do not wish to have bitten. After taking this precaution, say a little prayer, place the perfume bottle under your nose and go to sleep.

Vacuum Bottle

The vacuum bottle is almost indispensable to the tourist. Hot coffee, milk or water oftentimes must be carried in the car and since the vacuum bottle maintains the temperature for a number of hours, the value of this article will be realized. Hot coffee, milk or water may be replenished at any of the stands. If hot coffee is to be poured into the bottle be sure and place a silver knife in the bottle before the coffee is poured in. The knife will take the heat and prevent breaking of the bottle by the rapid rise in temperature. The writer has filled a vacuum bottle many times with steaming hot coffee and by using the knife as above related has not as yet broken a bottle.

Camp Fires

Usually the tourist plans in advance the kind of fire to be used for cooking meals. Last year the writer used canned heat with good success. One night when he was prepared to cook supper he was surprised to find that there was not sufficient canned heat on hand to complete the meal. Three or four handfuls of sand were placed in a mound under the stove. About a cupful of gasolene was drawn from the car tank and sprinkled on the mound of sand. A lighted match applied to the saturated sand brought forth a nice blaze which burned for about a half hour.

Answers to Inquiries

ONE CYLINDER NOT WORKING.—I have a big six 1922 model Studebaker car that fires only in five cylinders. No. 4 cylinder does not fire, although valves and cylinder-head jacket are perfect, and carburetor and intake and exhaust manifolds are new. Expert mechanics who have examined it and tested in every possible way have failed to discover the cause. Can you suggest a remedy for this trouble?

A. B., Hunt, N. Y.

A.—There are several probable causes for a misfiring cylinder, but in view of the fact that you have had several experts work on the car you must appreciate the handicap under which one must work when he does not have the car at hand. It would first be well to test for a spark. This can be done by unscrewing No. 4 spark plug and grounding it on the cylinder. Start the engine and note whether or not a spark jumps the points of the grounded plug. If no spark appears then the ignition circuit must be checked. Remove the distributor cover and determine the condition of the pin which distributes the current to the No. 4 cylinder. The pin may be bent so that it does not pick up the current from the rotating segment. The recommended clearance between pin and segment is one sixty-fourth of an inch. Next note the connection of the high tension wire leading to the No. 4 plug. The connection in the top of the cover may be broken or loose. The spark plug may need replacing or there may be a break in the high tension cable. Take the necessary steps in order to assure a spark in the No. 4 cylinder. If the cylinder still refuses to fire, test this particular cylinder for compression. One of the valves may be sticking or so badly off seat that compression is entirely gone. The cylinder must have compression. If this particular cylinder has a tendency to overoil, this condition will defeat ignition.

TROUBLE WITH VACUUM TANK.—My Oakland six runs for a short distance, then stops until the vacuum tank fills, and then will go for a short distance again. I have had it examined and worked on at several garages without benefit.

A.—It seems somewhat peculiar that the tank fills with gasolene after the car is stopped. If the tank was affected or the connections loose or broken, the tank would refuse to take gasolene at all times. From this distance I am of the belief that dirt is the cause of the trouble. Dirt in the pipe line between the tank and carburetor will set up a stoppage causing the fuel to run very slowly to the carburetor. The carburetor is apt to consume the fuel faster than it is supplied which would cause the engine to stall for want of gasolene. I would suggest cleaning out the pipe lines and tightening the connections. Be sure the connections at the main tank are tight and that the vent hole in the tank cover is open. It is necessary that the main tank be kept at atmospheric pressure and for this reason it is imperative that it be determined every now and then that the vent hole in the cover is not clogged.

Ford Runs 57 Miles on Gallon of Gasoline

A new automatic and self-regulating device has been invented by John A. Stransky, 144 Fourth St., Pukwana, South Dakota, with which automobiles have made from 40 to 57 miles on a gallon of gasoline. It removes all carbon and prevents spark plug trouble and overheating. It can be installed by anyone in five minutes. Mr. Stransky wants agents and is willing to send a sample at his own risk. Write him today.—Adv.

Your Own Tires Free

We want an auto owner in each locality with lots of friends—the sort of person to whom we could refer prospective customers—to use and recommend Armour Cords. We will pay you generously for all business we get through your recommendation.

Armour Tires have a marvellous tread design that does away with chains; Safe in any weather; snow, ice or slippery pavement. Wears like iron. Has the most Liberal Tire Guarantee ever written. Every tire guaranteed against Wear and Tear, Blow-Outs, Rim Cutting and Tread Separation for 10,000 miles. Direct from factory to user, you and your friends get the Middlemen's profit.

By securing a sample tire from us you will not be obligating yourself in the least. Just drop us a line and say, "Send me your offer", and we will send our Great, New SPECIAL OFFER. Be the first in your district to write.

ARMOUR TIRE CO., Factory 95A. DAYTON, OHIO

2 NEW TREAD TIRES for $8.60 TUBE FREE WITH EACH TIRE

SPECIAL SALE

TIRE PRICES SMASHED

Greatest tire offer we ever made. This Special Sale on Owl New Tread is your opportunity to buy two tires for less than the usual cost of one. Standard New Inner Tube FREE with every tire. Customer gets more mileage on Owls'—you, too, should get 12,000 Miles

SPECIAL SALE PRICES

Save Money By Ordering Two Tires

Size	1 tube 1 tire	2 tubes 2 tires	Size	1 tube 1 tire	2 tubes 2 tires
28x3	$ 5.80	$ 8.60	32x4½	$13.10	$21.35
30x3	6.85	11.45	33x4½	13.45	21.85
30x3½	7.65	13.65	34x4½	14.20	22.35
32x3½	8.75	15.35	35x4½	14.60	23.15
31x4	10.45	16.95	36x4½	14.85	23.65
32x4	10.85	18.25	35x5	15.25	24.35
33x4	11.95	18.95	37x5	15.65	25.35
34x4	12.70	19.80

SEND NO MONEY. Just write us the number of tires and sizes wanted—state whether straight side or clincher desired. We will ship C. O. D. subject to examination.

For a short time only, to quickly secure agents in every community, on every order for two or more Owl New Tread tires, we will make an Extra Special Discount of 10 per cent to Agents for cash with order. Territory going fast. Rush your order—you take no risk. If not entirely satisfied, return the tires unused and your money promptly refunded.

OWL TIRE CO.
1738 W. Lake St. Dept. 104 Chicago, Ill.

NEW TIRE GUARANTEE!

ACT NOW 30X3½ CORD $2.00

WRITTEN GOLD BOND GUARANTEE WITH EACH TIRE

Greatest tire sale in America now on! Goodyear, Goodrich, Firestone, Fisk and other fine makes of tires going at record-breaking prices. These almost new tires will easily give thousands of miles of satisfactory service.

OUR PRICES DEFY COMPETITION

	TIRES	NEW TUBES		TIRES	NEW TUBES
30x3	$1.90	$ .90	32x4½	$3.75	$1.65
30x3½	2.00	.90	33x4½	3.75	1.65
32x3½	2.50	.90	34x4½	4.00	1.65
31x4	2.75	.90	35x4½	4.25	1.65
32x4	3.00	1.40	36x4½	4.25	1.65
33x4	3.25	1.40	35x5	4.25	1.95
34x4	3.50	1.40	37x5	4.25	1.95

Just send $1.00 deposit for each tire ordered. Balance C. O. D. subject to inspection. Our written gold bond guarantee with each tire positively assures you eight months satisfactory service or another tire will be given at half price. Shipment made same day order is received. Order today—NOW.

INTERNATIONAL TIRE CORP.
86 EAST 14th STREET CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

AGENTS! FREE $8.00 OUTFIT

$100 to $200 a Week!

Take orders for the only auto lubrication which forces Heavy Oil at 2,000 pounds hydraulic pressure into chassis bearings. Makes grease, grease cups and grease "systems" out of date. Driver Agents: Write for free sample offer.

SAAL Heavy Oil System Biggest money-making opportunity for 1923.

100% Lubrication Makes autos and trucks ride better and last longer. Chassis lubrication now a white-collar job with service-station results. Big inducement to first agent in each locality. Write today.

H. G. SAAL CO., 1800 Montrose Ave., Dept. 341, CHICAGO

NEW CORD Price-Lowest Ever

GREAT PRICE CUT ON GEM CORDS

the tire that gives 10,000 miles of satisfactory service. Cut your tire costs by these excellent GEM CORD TIRES at low prices. Best tire ever seen. Another Gem Cord half price for any tire not satisfactory.

30 x 3½ $6.75

10,000 Mile Guarantee Policy

SEND NO MONEY

All GEM CORDS shipped C. O. D. EXAMINE TIRE. If not the best buy you ever made, return the tire and get your money back.

Size	Cords	Tubes
30x3	$6.15	$1.05
30x3½	6.75	1.25
32x3½	8.45	1.55
31x4	9.75	1.65
32x4	10.25	1.75
33x4	10.75	1.90
34x4	11.25	1.95
32x4½	13.45	2.00
33x4½	13.95	2.10
34x4½	14.50	2.25
35x4½	14.95	2.50
36x4½	15.25	2.50
33x5	16.00	2.75
35x5	17.00	3.00

ORDER NOW—5% discount for cash with order.

GEM RUBBER COMPANY
Dept. 298 1315 S. Oakley Blvd., CHICAGO, ILL.

Gigantic Clearance Sale! 100,000 Tires

TWO TIRES FOR LESS THAN THE USUAL PRICE OF ONE

Our tremendous stock of Tires must be sold at once! Here is your opportunity, if you act quickly, to get two tires for much less than the usual cost of one—and a free inner tube with each tire. Take advantage of this record-breaking sale! Thousands of motorists everywhere are getting exceptional mileage out of these tires—and you, too, can get

12,000 Miles

SEND NO MONEY! We require no deposit. We make shipment C.O.D. subject to your approval. If not fully satisfied on examination, your money promptly refunded, including shipping charges. You take no risk at all. ACT NOW—MAIL YOUR ORDER TODAY!

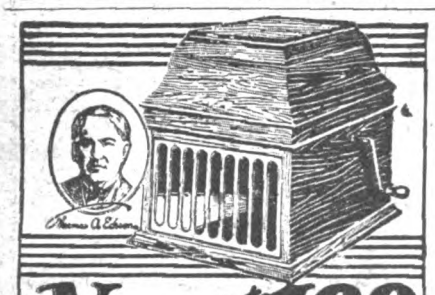
Size	1 Tire	2 Tires
30x3	$7.25	$11.95
30x3½	8.25	13.95
32x3½	9.45	15.95
31x4	10.65	17.45
32x4	11.85	19.75
33x4	12.45	20.90
34x4	13.25	21.95
32x4½	13.45	22.45
33x4½	13.95	22.95
34x4½	14.45	23.45
35x4½	14.95	24.90
35x5	15.90	26.45

Specify S. S. or Clincher

ALBANY TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY
1506 S. Michigan Ave., Dept. 30-H, Chicago

FREE TUBE WITH EACH TIRE

WHY PAY FOR COAL?



HEAT—AT TWIST OF WRIST!

Burn free air in your present heater, range or furnace. Remarkable new device—NU-HEAT—causes one part coal oil (kerosene) to turn TWENTY TIMES its bulk of free air into intense gas for heating, cooking and baking. Installed in a jiffy. Heat at twist of wrist. Heats largest rooms in few minutes. No dirt, ashes, or coal and wood drudgery. Better, cheaper, quicker. Absolutely safe. Ironclad guarantee. 30 days free trial. Send post card for Free information. Mention if you have heater, range or furnace.

AGENTS Make $60 to $200 a week. Full or spare time Personal co-operation. Write quick for exclusive territory and free sample case offer.

WADE HILL MFG. COMPANY Dept. 88, St. Louis, Mo.

Now $1.00 Down

KEEP the New Edison Amberola—Edison's great phonograph with the diamond stylus reproducer—and your choice of records, for only $1.00. Pay balance at rate of only a few cents a day. Hear it in your own home before you decide. Only $1.00 down. Seize this opportunity.

Write for Book

Get our New Edison catalog. Your name and address on a post card or letter is enough. Find out about this offer—while this offer lasts.

F. K. BABSON, Edison Phonograph Dists. 19th St. and Marshall Blvd., Dept C-970, Chicago, Ill.

10 DAYS TRIAL

1000 of these Home Barber Outfits for COMFORT subscribers at HALF PRICE

This introductory half price sale won't last long. The 1,000 will soon be sold. You'll have to hurry. Each set consists of 1 close cutting barber clippers of tempered steel, one 7-inch barber comb, 1 diamond point barber hair shears. Good shears for all purposes, always sharp because they are made of tempered "razor steel." Regular price $1.00. Special offer complete outfit only $1.98 if you decide to keep the set, —less than price of shears alone.

MOTHERS save time, strength and money. This outfit cuts children's hair perfectly in 5 minutes. Always have the children's heads looking nice. Quicker and easier to do it with this outfit than to go to the barber shop.

GIRLS WITH BOBS

For good looking bobbed hair this splendid set is as necessary as your brush and comb. Clip it close in the back and with these shears you can always get a perfectly even bob.

THE WHOLE FAMILY will use this set and save barber bills. Four hair cuts pays for it if you get in on this special offer.

SEND NO MONEY Just write today and ask for the home barber outfit. It will be sent by return mail. When it arrives pay the postman $1.98 and postage. Use the outfit for 10 days. Then if you are not perfectly satisfied return it and your money will be promptly refunded.

HOME SUPPLY CO., Dept. K, Topeka, Kan.

Guaranteed 25-Year Watch

Greatest watch value ever offered. Fully adjusted 21 jewel movement. A high-grade reliable timekeeper. Genuine Gold Filled Elgin Napoleon case—guaranteed 25 years. Beautifully engraved edge and back. Popular 16-size, open face thin model. Offered at the remarkable sacrifice of $7.25. Cannot be duplicated elsewhere for more than twice the cost. Send no money. Simply pay postman on arrival. We will refund your money at once, if watch does not measure up to your expectations. Write today. We pay postage. Supply limited.

WALTERS YOUNG & CO., Dept. 898, 3818 S. Kedzie Avenue, Chicago

FREE!

Big, Handsome, Dressed, Sleeping Doll sent prepaid for selling ONLY SIX PACKETS new Highly Perfumed Sachet Powder AT 10c.

This is a Special Offer to introduce our sachet.

We also give Mama Dolls, Walking Dolls, and premiums for boys.

Lane Mfg. Co. Dept. 145 Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

You Can Save $35.00

Recover it yourself. $4.45 and up Parcels Postpaid

Custom tailor made to fit all makes and models. Roof and quarters sewed together, with rear fasteners, welts and tacks, complete. Anybody can put it on. Give name, year, model number of your car. Catalog FREE. Agents wanted.

LIBERTY TOP & TIRE CO. Dept. F1 Cincinnati, O.

RANGER $5 a Month

Finest bicycle built—44 styles, colors and sizes. Factory to Rider prices. FREE delivery, express prepaid on 30 Days Free Trial. Cash or easy pay'ts.

TIRES lamps, wheels and equipment at half usual prices. Send no money. Write today for big catalog, special Factory Prices, free trial plan and marvelous offers.

MEAD CYCLE CO. Dept. T-3. CHICAGO

INSYDE TYRES

Inner Armor for auto tires. Prevent punctures and blowouts. Double mileage. Easily applied. Cost little. Details free. Agents wanted. Big profits. American Accessories Co., Tire 125 Cincinnati, O.

THE PROMISE

By Charlotte E. Lewis

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

"IF ever the time comes when you need me, Grace, write me—wire me. Wherever, I am, whatever I'm doing, I'll come. Promise me."

The girl laughed. A note of contempt jarred the chiming sweetness of the sound. "Don't talk like a silly story-book, John."

"I mean it." The man had shrunk back a little at the laugh, the hurt springing to his eyes. Swiftly the look passed. He straightened his shoulders, caught her not too gently by the arm and forced her to meet his gaze.

"I mean it, Grace. Not that you're worth it. God knows you're not. You are as selfish as you are lovely. No, don't squirm—you are going to be told the truth for once in your life. Selfish—that's it. By every art in your power you have led me on to build the dreams of my life about you, and have calmly torn those dreams to bits before my eyes. I knew, six months ago, that it would come to this. Yet I have kept on coming, stupid fool that I was—hoping somehow, by some miracle, I could awaken in you the soul God must have meant to be there when He gave you that beautiful body."

"If the lecture is over, Mr. Bennett, I beg to be excused, please. I have an engagement at eight." The girl's blue eyes flashed angrily, but the voice was modulated to a bored coldness.

"The lecture is over." The fire had gone out of the man's voice, and it was hopeless and weary.

There was a silence. Bennett waited a moment, then picked up his hat.

"Good by, Grace. You haven't given me the promise I asked."

"Oh, I promise." There was something in her tone he could not fathom. And as the door closed he heard her low laugh again—a laugh from which all the chime was suddenly gone.

* * * * * * *

It is instinct with men, as it is with dogs, to hide away with their hurts. The next morning, following an unaccountable impulse, John Bennett asked for the vacation he had not had in three years, and went back to the little country town out in the midstate where he had grown up. A week spent tramping among the old familiar hills that skirted the town worked a marvel of healing. He began to call himself a fool; and that means the beginning of a cure. In another week he began even to forget to call himself a fool.

And then came the other girl. Bennett didn't know she was the other girl; he believed there never would be another girl—in fact he had determined that there should be no other. But the mischievous little god who works in collusion with the Great Mother has an assortment of tricks of his own to catch on the rebound a heart that is swinging back from the heights. The trick this time was to bring Bennett within hearing distance of the gentlest, most musical voice he ever had heard. It came from the door of a shabby little gift shop, and it was replying to the querulous complaints of an older voice—peevish, quavering.

Curiously, Bennett entered. The owner of the musical voice was small, dark, vivid. He remembered now, he had heard of her—the name came to him, Norine Edwards. He tried to remember what the village gossips had said—something more or less kindly, and wholly pitying, with details of how she had sunk her small savings into the little shop that was not paying. She turned at his entrance from the patient explanation she was making to a fretful elderly woman in an invalid chair to inquire the needs of her customer. Bennett bought a gingham apron for one of his maiden aunts, and because he liked to listen to the low-pitched voice, prolonged the discussion of size and color and style as long as he could before making a decision.

The next day he bought another apron, and the third day another. After all the needs of his real and fictitious aunts had been supplied he began on clothespin dolls for his sister's children in the West. There were a lot of the children, and a lot of dolls. But the supply of both finally was exhausted.

The girl smiled one day, wrapping a hand-embroidered dolly for an improvised landlady. Bennett had confided, rather elaborately and unnecessarily, that she liked "that sort of er—junk cluttering up the house."

"You don't really have to buy these things, you know," said the little storekeeper, timidly. "You may come in, if you are lonely, without an excuse. I—I like having you come. I—I get lonely too."

Eagerly Bennett pushed his advantage.

"Then would you like, too, to take a walk with me, Sunday afternoon? The hills are wonderful since the frost."

"I'd love it," simply. "But there's mother—I don't know——"

"We'll send a woman to take care of your mother. You owe it to yourself."

It was an afternoon of delight to them both. The girl was touchingly frank in her joy at getting away for a few hours from the exactions of her work-a-day tasks. Bennett succeeded in getting her to talk about herself. Between the sentences of her simple little account he read a story of self-sacrifice, a youth cheated out of its playtime, an unconscious loneliness that touched his very soul in pity for her.

"Poor little kid! You haven't had a square deal."

"Oh, but I have! I've had lots of good times. This today, for instance. I'll remember it for weeks."

Bennett thought of Grace Denton, surfeited with the pleasures that money buys, and how her lip would have curled in scorn at the suggestion of "good times" in an afternoon's tramp in the hills.

"And you don't get discontented?"

"I've never had time," the girl answered matter-of-factly.

"Not even in this desolate little hill town?"

"It has helped mother to be here." The simple finality of the tone left no other angle to the question.

"She is getting better, then?"

"No, not really better. Only—it has made her stay with me a little longer. It can be only a few months at most, now."

"And then?"

"Don't make me think about it. It makes me afraid. And I mustn't be afraid."

"You have no one else but your mother?"

No one."

He patted her hand in awkward sympathy.

"Oh, I'll get along. I always have, you see." She blinked back her tears and smiled. "You must not be distressed. I was selfish to tell you. And you have given me such a lovely afternoon, too."

"Selfish—you selfish? Little girl, you don't know the meaning of the word. Norine, will you come out here again with me next Sunday?"

"Yes, if I can," she said simply.

"We'll arrange it somehow, so that you can." Bennett assured her positively.

But it was Bennett, Saturday morning, who could not go. He sent her a note breaking the engagement. "A telegram calls me back to the city," he wrote her. "I am more sorry than I can tell you. I may not see you again. But I shall remember you always."

The message was from Grace Denton. It contained fifteen words; "I promised to send for you when I needed you. I need you now, desperately. Grace."

It was a heavy heart that John Bennett carried with him back to the city—a heart heavy with mixed emotions. Of one thing he was sure—he no longer loved Grace. What the desperate need could be that had prompted her to summon him he could not guess. He was curiously indifferent about that. But that she should have turned to him in trouble was enough. She had found out, of course, when he had dropped so completely out of her life, that she did want him. The thought brought him no satisfaction. Well, he was in for it now, he told himself. He could not repudiate the fervent protestations of love he had made to her during the turbulent period in which she had romped over his most sacred feelings with the careless abandon of a child. A child—that is what she really was, after all—a spoiled and willful child. A child he himself had helped to spoil. He tried to picture her as that. But the picture would not stay fixed. No picture of her would stay fixed long in his mind. His thoughts kept turning back to a piquant, dark little face with glowing eyes through which the soul, shining through, was not a child's soul, but the soul of a woman who had learned the meaning of life through sacrifice.

* * * * * * * *

A telephone call from Grace awaited him at his apartment. He called her home.

"Shall I come out, Grace?"

"Oh, it's you, John? I thought you'd come."

The self-satisfied assurance of her voice irritated him.

"Shall I come out, now?" he repeated, impatiently.

"No, not now."

"But you said you needed me."

"I do. Meet me at 7:30 this evening in front of that little church on Fifteenth and Walnut Street—you know, across from the park."

"Yes."

"Be there promptly, please." The receiver clicked into place.

A church, of all places! Churches, hitherto, had not figured prominently in Grace Denton's scheme of existence. Why had she chosen that as a rendezvous? And why didn't she let him come out to the house? And why, in the name if all that was sane, had he ever asked her to make that fool promise?

Bennett was in the little park opposite the church at the appointed hour. It was dark when a car drew up to the curbing in front of the church. Rather abstractedly, he observed two other persons leave the car and enter the church as Grace came across the street to meet him.

She held out both hands. There was no trace of trouble in her clear eyes.

"Don't stand there like a post, John." How well he remembered the old imperiousness of the voice.

"I'm waiting for you to explain the desperate need that called me half across the state today."

"Now, don't spoil everything by pretending you were not glad to come."

Bennett maintained a gloomy silence.

"John, don't you love me any more?" She slipped one hand into his, and dropped her voice to a coaxing huskiness.

John lied. "Yes."

"John, you have asked me many times to marry you." Still that low huskiness, as though she were finding it hard to say what was in her heart to say.

"Yes." Bennett's heart sank.

"I—I want to be married tomorrow, John and I wish you to rehearse the ceremony with me at the church this evening."

"Yes?" Bennett's heart reached the depths. A vision of a Sunday stillness on a shaded hill, a dark vivid face and the kindest voice he had ever heard passed with kaleidoscopic swiftness through his memory. Resolutely he put it away.

"Yes, Grace. And you want me——"

"I want you to be best man!" The low huskiness had vanished, and she lifted her head and laughed. In the laugh he heard a triumphant note of petty revenge.

"With all my heart," said John.

And Grace wondered, afterward, why he had joined in the laugh.

To Edge Sleeves

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 19.

yond blk in last row, ch 5, turn and work back over this group of 2 webs.

10th row—2 sps, 1 blk, ch 2, 1 blk, work over 1 web as usual, ch 2, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 tr c in next sp, ch 5, turn.

11th row—2 sps, work over web ending with 1 sp, 1 tr c in end sp of last row, ch 5, turn.

12th row—2 sps, work over web, 1 sp, 1 tr c in sp in last row, ch 5, turn.

13th row—2 sps, work over web, 1 sp, 1 tr c, turn.

14th row—2 sps, work over web, 1 sp, 1 tr c, turn.

15th row—2 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, 2 d c, under ch between blks, ch 2, 1 d c, forming 1 sp, 1 tr c in last sp in last row.

Slip st down side of point and work over next 2 webs in the same way, or cut thread and fasten securely as preferred, before proceeding under arm gores. Ch 38, 11 sps on ch, work 13 rows.

14th row—5 sps, 1 d c on next d c, simply omit ch over 6th sp; 5 sps, always turn with ch 5.

15th row—4 sps, ch 1, 1 d c under ch of 5th sp in last row. 1 d c under ch beyond 2 d c, ch 1, 4 sps.

16th row—3 sps, ch 1, 1 d c under ch 1, 1 d c under next ch 1, 3 sps.

17th row—2 sps, ch 1, 1 d c under ch 1, 1 d c under next ch 1, 3 sps.

18th row—1 sp, 1 d c under ch 1, 1 d c under next ch 1, 1 sp. Draw thread through loop leaving long enough to sew gore in place.

The 13 spaces on the width of the gore is sewed to bottom edges of the yoke. The narrow part coming under the arm of the sleeve.

The joining will be practically invisible if spaces are sewed opposite spaces.

Complete neck edge with one row of spaces. Sew lace around neck and under points of the sleeves. Run one-inch ribbon through beading.

Infant's Robe Front Dress

See illustration on page 19.

Mrs. H. F. Lower

This little garment has a lace front made completely of narrow rickrack braid and spider webs of cotton.

Such trimming can be made very easily and well repays one for the time spent as is as durable as it is lacy and attractive.

To make a spider web use one of the narrower rickrack braids for infants or children's clothes, and work with No. 40 thread.

Fifteen points will be needed for one web. After counting this number off one side of the braid, fold together and sew the first 4 points together, thus forming a ring of 11 points (see detail in second column page 19), open the braid ring and holding it over the first finger, with needle and thread work one buttonhole stitch in the first point, repeat around.

Care should be taken not to draw the threads between the points too tightly or the work will not be flat.

From the 11th point proceed to the first point picking up the thread on each side of the point, throw thread over the needle from the eye towards one. Work around twice in this way, drawing in row somewhat.

In the 4th row around pick up the thread between each point and without throwing it over the needle, draw up, flatten out the work and fasten off thread carry it on back of braid to point opposite the 2nd ring and join this and the next point beyond to the next 14th and 15th points, thus making an 11th ring turning in the opposite direction.

Brownie's Triumph

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 7.)

d the note of mortal anguish in the loved voice hich had told her of this little message which had ver accomplished its mission.

In her mind she went back nearly fifty years, d saw a beautiful young girl, lying pale and sick a lofty room, a deep scar upon her fair temple. t a deeper pain looking forth from the sad eyes, she watched eagerly for the sound of a footstep hich never came.

Yes it was the very note—that anguished, re-ntant cry, which Miss Mehetabel had sent from e depths of her soul to the man she had loved!

"Yes, come at once, if you can forgive your re-entant META."

How well she remembered the words, and now e had found them, as her aunt had told her, in e possession of Helen Capel, now Lady Randal. They had been kept back from the honest, faith-l lover, who was only waiting for this permission fly to the side of his betrothed and comfort her, y the hand of this treacherous woman, who had us ruthlessly wrecked a human life, yea, two ves!

How strange, Brownie thought, that the note ould thus have fallen into her hands.

"Surely, there is Providence in it," she mur-ured, as, with one swift glance to see that Lady uxley was not observing her, she hid it in her som, and then hurriedly completed her task.

The operetta was sent to Lady Randall, and the ox of papers returned to their accustomed place; ut all day long Brownie felt as if a mountain was ushing her heart, with that little paper lying in r bosom.

She felt she could not breathe in the same house nd under the same roof which sheltered the woman ho had deliberately planned to entrap a young nd guileless girl into disgracing both herself and r lover, that she might separate them forever, oping to win him for herself.

She wondered if Lady Ruxley knew of her share the event, or if Lord Dunforth had ever found out.

Probably not, since they were still good friends, nd had he known of it he could not have forgiven bitter a wrong.

The more she thought of these things, the more er heart rebelled against them, until she grew so stless and nervous that she nearly cried out with ain whenever any one spoke to her.

About four o'clock finding that Lady Ruxley was leeping, she stole out, thinking to get away into he sunshine and calm herself, and perhaps Adrian ould come ere long, and she could share her bur-en with him; at all events, he would comfort her.

She opened the door and passed noiselessly out nto the hall.

She had nearly traversed the long corridor lead-ng to the grand staircase, when she almost ran gainst some one who suddenly came out of a room he was passing.

"I beg your pardon," Brownie murmured, and hen looked up to see who it was.

It was none other than Isabel Coolidge!

Instantly the two girls braced themselves for he encounter, and looked the surprise which either of them for the moment could speak.

"You here?" Isabel exclaimed, at length, growing white, while her eyes emitted a lurid light.

"Yes, Miss Coolidge," gently replied Brownie, et with lifted eyebrows and a calm, scornful look nto her enemy's face.

"How came you here?"

"Pardon me, but I have neither the time nor he inclination to relate the train of circumstances which brought me here," she said coldly.

"Insolence! Then it was you whom I heard inging down to Lady Ruxley's villa the other day!"

"Doubtless, since I sing to her ladyship every lay."

"What an appreciative listener you must have n that old, crooked back," sneered Isabel.

Brownie's eyes blazed, dangerously.

"I presume Sir Charles Randal would be much edified with Miss Coolidge's remark regarding his aged aunt," she said.

Isabel looked frightened for a minute, then replied, with a short laugh:

"He might be, if he should hear it, that's a fact. Then you're her companion. I remember now hearing that she took a sudden shine to a young woman who met with an accident, and would have her stay with her. You're mighty lucky about getting into fine places, it seems to me."

A curl of those beautiful red lips was all the satisfaction she received for this insulting speech, and then Brownie made as if she would have passed on.

"Wait," commanded Isabel, peremptorily, and laying her hand upon the young girl's shoulder.

She was inwardly boiling with rage that she could not move or browbeat the haughty governess.

"Wait," she repeated; "I have not done with you yet."

"Please remove your hand from my shoulder, Miss Coolidge," Brownie commanded, in tones that she dare not disobey.

"Mr Dredmond called upon you at our house the day you left; he said he had something belonging to you which he came to return," she went on, as her hand fell by her side and drooping her eyes before the other's indignant gaze.

She was very curious about the object of that visit.

"I know it," replied Brownie, much amused, as she saw that Isabel was almost afraid of her in her haughty pride.

"You know it? How?"

"Yes, and I have my property back again," and she deftly shifted her cuff, bringing the glittering button upon the upper side of her sleeve.

Miss Coolidge started slightly on beholding the elegant trifle.

"Ah, that was it, then? It is very elegant, isn't it? I presume it belongs with the collection we have in our possession," she said, spitefully.

"It does, Miss Coolidge, and I will thank you to return my property."

"When you prove it is yours, I will."

"These buttons are marked with my name on the back."

"That may be; you have had plenty of time, doubtless, to get them marked," sneered Isabel.

"I shall compel you to return that casket to me," retorted Brownie, with flashing eyes.

"Ha, ha! Perhaps you will, and then again perhaps you won't. But we have discussed that subject sufficiently in the past. When did you see Mr. Dredmond?" Isabel asked, insolently, and noting how exquisitely lovely Brownie had grown since she saw her last.

"Really, Miss Coolidge, if I remain here longer I shall lose my walk, and that I cannot afford to do."

With which tantalizing remark, Brownie, her figure proudly erect, moved down the corridor, leaving her interlocutor beautifully in the dark as to how or when she had seen Mr. Dredmond.

"I suppose you thought by coming down here you'd have a better chance to practice your wiles upon that young gentleman; but mark my words, you won't succeed, for I shall feel it my duty to inform Lady Randal of the very suspicious character which she is harboring," hissed the irate girl after her.

She might just as well have talked to the winds, for Miss Douglas never gave a sign that she heard.

As Brownie passed Isabel's room again, a few hours later, she saw that the door was open.

Her maid had gone out a few moments before, had carelessly left it standing open, and was now in the servants' hall flirting with the butler's assistant.

Involuntarily Brownie paused and glanced within, and her heart stood still as her eyes almost instantly caught sight of her own little ebony casket standing upon the elegant dressing-case, its tiny key in the lock, with the delicate chain attached.

Swift as light, the impulse came upon her to enter and seize it, and bear it away to her own room.

She glided quickly as noiselessly forward.

There was no one in the corridor, there was no one in the room.

She crossed the threshold, and, with a few fleet steps, cleared the space between herself and her treasures.

She lifted the lid.

All were there, in their glittering beauty.

She closed the box again, turned the key in the lock, removed it, and fastened the chain about her neck, concealing it beneath the folds of her dress.

The next moment she had the precious casket in her hands, and turned, to find herself face to face with Mrs. Coolidge.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Comfort's Information Bureau

Under this heading all questions by COMFORT subscribers on subjects not relating to the special departments elsewhere in the paper, will be answered, as far as may be. COMFORT readers are advised to read carefully the advertisements in this paper, as they will often find in them what they seek through their questions addressed to this Bureau. They will thus save time, labor and postage.

No attention will be given any inquiry which lacks the sender's full name and address but we will print only initials if so requested.

R. S. R., Louisiana.—Senators and Representatives are each entitled to the appointment of two cadets at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point. The same number is granted to each of our Territories, and the District of Columbia is favored to the extent of four cadets. There are also eighty-two appointments at large, specially to be conferred by the President, and two of these appointments are left open to the recommendation of the Vice-President. By a law of 1916, the President may make appointments to the Academy from the enlisted men in the Regular Army and National Guard, these appointments not to exceed one hundred and eighty at any one time. The usual course for such an appointment as you desire, is to have it made one year ahead of date of admission, the Secretary of War granting same upon the nomination of candidate by the Senator or Representative. Nominations may be made after a competitive examination, or may be direct. Two alternate candidates may be also appointed if desired, and these may be examined also and admitted should the principal appointees fail to pass the Academy's regular entrance examinations. Appointees must be between seventeen and twenty-two years and of such physical standing as would not render them unfit for service. The entrance examinations to the Academy are not simple ones. The standard of admittance is high, and the examinations cover English grammar, composition and literature; algebra through quadratic equations, plane geometry, United States history, and the outlines of history in general. You will see from this that while a high school education is not made a requirement for admission, something of its equivalent would surely be needed in order to pass the entrance examinations. The West Point course of four years may be regarded as one of the finest and most thorough in the educational world. Write to the Superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., for further particulars, and take up the matter of your appointment through your local political channels which might grant you interviews with your Louisiana Senators and the Congressman from your district.

Mrs. L. G., Johnson City, Ill.—A manuscript submitted for publication should be typed, double-spaced, the pages numbered and well-margined, and the author's name and address appearing in the upper left-hand corner of the first page. Such manuscript should be sent mailed flat or folded, not rolled, and with sufficient postage enclosed for return if not available. Address the editor or editors of the periodical to which you write.

Mrs. C. G., Cherokee, Iowa.—Regarding a song you wish to copyright, write to the Register of Copyrights, Library of Congress, Washington, D. C. Application forms and full particulars will be sent you.

Mrs. D. D., Grapeland, Texas—Address the Scott Stamp and Coin Co., 33 West 44th Street, New York City.

Mrs. P. C. J., Nebraska.—Most counties have humane society agents who watch and remedy, by warning or legal action, such cases of cruelty to animals as your letter describes. Ask the sheriff of your county regarding such an agent and advise with him concerning what action you should take in the matter.

Mrs. F. L., Wisconsin.—You might attend a law school, yet make a poor lawyer; you could become a physician, yet perhaps kill more than you might cure. By these statements we mean that the learning of any profession, the working at any trade, does not necessarily mean its skillful attainment and practice,—even though the teaching be of the best. A school can tell you that they can teach you show card making, but they cannot truthfully tell you that you can earn certain large sums. This will depend entirely upon yourself, your ability, energy and push. This is the best answer that can be made to a question like yours.

C. C., Oakland, Ore.—Henry Ford married Clara J. Bryant of Greenfield, Michigan in April, 1888. She is still living and may be addressed at Dearborn, Mich. The Fords have one son, Edsall by name.

Mrs. B. L., Oklahoma.—Your senator's name is J. W. Harreld—not "Herald" as you mistakenly spell it. You may address him either at his home, Oklahoma City, or at the Capitol, Washington, D. C. We think that, generally speaking, when senators take action in post-office appointments they do this through recommendations and other information furnished them by their political friends in the vicinity from which the appointment is to be made. This does not mean that it may not aid you to write directly to your senator, but it also means that you will be more aided if you have other letters written in your favor by those of the senator's own party and whose words may influence him more than an appeal from you who were not even certain how his name was spelt!

M. M., Minnesota.—A wife, we think, could always take legal measures against a husband for non-support, and you should not be compelled to use your own funds for food and clothing unless you so choose. However, whether conditions are serious enough for you to seek court aid is something which you will have to decide for yourself. Our judges do their best to have domestic difficulties settled domestically, and so, if you can arrange your troubles of the family pocketbook without appearing in a court room, we earnestly advise you to take thought and do so.

L. J., Mayfield, Ky.—This department receives many inquiries like yours, and apparently there are many COMFORT readers who would like to enter the movies—even as the most minor luminaries. But it is not such an easy matter. Even to act a small part in a screen drama requires a certain amount of dramatic talent or training. Then, too, it is a requisite that the applicant have a face which will photograph or "register" well. We say of some people "they do not take good pictures." Well, it is just people like this who are forever barred by nature from figuring on the silver screen. One must photograph well, and beauty or form or face is not so much needed as are a face that will register clearly and a type of temperament which, either through training or natural causes, can depict emotions of various sorts in the silent drama. To enter the movies means that if you have the qualities above described, you may be able to get a start as an "extra" in some large production where a crowd, a mob, or some busy street scene is to be screened. These jobs as extras are secured either through direct application to motion picture studios in the big movie centers, or by being hired through agents who in these same centers have the work of supplying extras for any sort of screen demand. The main requisite is to be on the spot and gain some slight footing and experience in a studio where, if you have the features and talent, you may be watched by a clever and appreciative director and pushed forward to larger parts. This has been the beginning and past career of practically all the screen stars except those who entered motion picture work from the legitimate stage. Hollywood, California; Chicago, Illinois, and New York City and its outlying districts of New Jersey and Long Island, are now the chief centers of motion picture studio activities. You can gain addresses of the leading companies, as well as much other information helpful to your ambition, by studying the advertising columns and news pages of the motion picture magazines. But you can make no beginning in the movies while in Kentucky—unless a director might luckily be filming a rural reel in your locality. Your first step must be to get on the trail of your nearest studio where you might seek for a chance to appear before the camera.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 14.)

try poverty. Try having every last thing you've got mortgaged for double its value and face a winter with empty cellar and barn. We did it and came through loving each other and could do it again.

My husband does not regard me as either a servant or a slave, and as my health is none too good, I have never had to do more work than I felt like doing. I do all I can for him and he does all he can for me. He is a good husband and father. I think there is good and bad in all nationalities. This includes Americans. My husband is ten years older than I am and left Bohemia fifteen years ago, and is, of course, naturalized.

We have scraps now and then but they are always soon over and we are both sorry. If you think a man is all you want your husband to be, marry him; don't hold his nationality against him.

MINERVA.

HIGHGROVE, CALIFORNIA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

I love COMFORT and enjoy reading the sisters' letters.

I do not agree with Lillian, from Minnesota, in regard to American girls marrying foreigners. As we all know, there is good, bad and indifferent in all people.

I am married to an Italian and would not part with him for anything. My advice is marry the man you love, whether he is an American or a foreigner. My husband treats me like a duchess and gives me what he can afford and I do everything I can for him.

MRS. JULIUS D'ORIO.

ASHWOOD, TEXAS.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I have been a reader of COMFORT for eighteen years and this is my first attempt to write to the Sisters' Corner.

Sister Lillian, from Minnesota, you certainly have the men of other nations wrong. Some of the American husbands are all right but I married a foreigner and he is a perfect husband. We have five children, and I have never had to wash, or scrub floors for months before or after my babies came. When we could not get a woman to do this work my husband did it himself and when we are the least bit sick he always consults a doctor.

My husband is Danish born and reared. He is a good provider, a good Christian and a good father, though strict. When he promises the children they can have anything it is a settled fact. If their request is reasonable it is always "Yes." Every child has his work to do. We make them respect youth and old age.

MRS. ANTON HANSON.

WASHINGTON.

DEAR COMFORT.

Like most of the sisters, I think COMFORT the best paper agoin'. I like the Sisters' Corner and stories best and my husband enjoys the COUSINS' letters and Uncle Lisha's answers.

When I read Lillian's letter in the April issue, I decided I would write. Please don't condemn all foreigners, Lillian, for I have been married to one nearly four years and we are as much sweethearts today as we were the day we were married. I think your great trouble is the difference between your and your husband's age, isn't it? My husband is only one year older than I am. Of course there are things on which we do not agree and he has his faults but then, I have every bit as many, if not more, so I think if he can feel "with all her faults I love her still," then I'll think the same about him.

While there are many good American boys and men and I had more than one chance to marry, I am glad I made the choice, I did.

We have two babies, a boy two and one-half years and a girl one year old.

A COMFORT Sister and the loving wife of a Foreigner.

TENNESSEE.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

I get lots of help from the Sisters' Corner. I am twenty-four years old and married. Have two little girls.

I am a poultry raiser. After the lawn is mowed I rake up the fine grass and feed it to the little chicks.

Betty Lou, my husband was just like yours so I will tell you what I did to make him settle down and have a home. My John would buy a run-down farm, make improvements on it and sell it and then do the same thing over again. He bought a little farm and fixed it up nicely, set out trees and planted flowers. One summer's day I walked out in the front yard and looked up at the house and talking to myself said, "I will not sell this nice house after I've worked so hard to fix it up." A few days later hubby said, "Let's sell out and go to Iowa." I said, "O, no, John, this is the one time that I'm not going to sell. I want a home and I have it and am going to keep it. If you want to travel you can do so and when you get ready to settle down the Little Farm and I will be waiting for you." I let him know how I felt about it and we still live on the Little Farm and have a beautiful home and flowers and lawn with ten shade trees and John won't talk about selling now. Sister, don't let your husband have his way all the time and you have nothing to say. Why not have the same right as well as the same work. My advice, Betty Lou, is not to separate but have a heart-to-heart talk with your husband and tell him in time to settle down in a good home for old age.

As for the children, I am raising mine like my great-grandmother was raised. They mind when I shake my finger. I don't have any trouble with them.

HAPPY WIFE.

INDUSTRY, ILL.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

I saw Betty Lou's letter and thought I would write of our experience a few years ago. We were renters and wanting a home of our own as much that when we got a chance to buy a cheap farm we did so. No one had lived there for years; weeds had grown up to the door and nearly all the plastering was off the walls and ceilings. We were in a strange neighborhood, twenty miles from my husband's people and forty-three from mine, and no car, but after the first year we got a car. We fixed up the place and sold it for quite a bit more than we paid for it. That was the easiest money we ever made and I was glad of it for my husband works hard and his health isn't good either.

I have five children, Harold, 14; Cheula, 11; Temple, 8; Waneta, 4; Dwight, 5 months.

Best wishes to all. MRS. WALTER TEEL.

CLYMAN, BOX 102, WISCONSIN.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

It is not generally known that many kinds of flowers may be preserved in lifelike condition with wax. Ordinary wax candles may be used, and, to prepare the wax, cut the candles into chunks, taking away the wick. The wax is then melted over a flame and cooled until it is liquid but not hot. Each flower should be quite dry on the surface, that is, there should be no rain or dewdrops on the petals. Take the blossoms and dip each separately in the liquid wax for a moment or so, constantly moving them about. Immerse the blossom completely and also an inch or two of the

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 28.)

If I Send You a Suit

made to your measure, in the latest style, would you keep and wear it, show it to your friends, let them see our beautiful samples and splendid new styles? Could you use $3.00 an hour for a little spare time? Every tailoring agent, send for our wonderful new proposition. Just write a letter or postal or fill out and mail coupon below. I will send you our big new book of samples and styles to pick from and my new, special offer, all free. Even if you don't care to be agent, send anyway, and learn how to get all your own clothes FREE.

Send Name and Address on This Coupon To
L. E. ASHER, President
BANNER TAILORING CO.
Dept. 860, Chicago, Ill.
Dear Sir—Send me your special offer all FREE.

Name.....
R.F.D.....Box.....St. & No. .....
P. O.....State.....

Bulldog Pipeless Furnace
Comes Completely Erected
You install it yourself in two hours. Goes through any door, fits any basement, burns practically any fuel. Gives marvelous heat — saves you money. $10 down; $10 a month.
Write!
Old fashioned stoves and worn out furnaces waste money! The Bulldog cuts down your fuel bills. Write for free book now.
$10 Puts it in your home
Babson Bros., Dept. C-370 19th St. & California Ave. Chicago

Military finish air rifle. Sell 8 Boxes Mentho-Nova at 25c. U.S. Supply Co. Dept. C-7, Greenville, Pa.
FREE

MONEY $ For Wise Men. Key for stamp. E. Kerste, Box 289, Ottawa, Ill.

Let Cubby Bear and Bunny Play With Your Children

BOTH FOR TWO SUBSCRIPTIONS.

What are Cubby and Bunny Up To?

What interesting story do you suppose Cubby Bear is here telling Bunny Rabbit? Is he planning up some game to play with the rest of the friends of the forest or are these two friends just talking over old times?

So real and so dear are Cubby Bear and Bunny Rabbit to COMFORT'S little folks that we have scoured around and found two lifelike playthings which resemble in every way these two characters which Lena Ellingwood has made famous in her Cubby Bear stories.

Cubby is a big handsome fellow dressed up in bright blue overalls and as he sits on his haunches is eight inches tall. His skin is brown and his lips as red as any cinnamon bear's. His eyes sparkle like bright shiny beads. Bunny's tall, inquisitive ears make him just a half inch taller than friend Cubby. Bunny is all in white with pinkish eyes and wears a dainty blue ribbon around his neck.

We hunted a long time to find some light but indestructible material from which to make these two playmates because we know every little COMFORT boy and girl will want to love them and hug them and take them to bed. At last we found a substance right in the forests—the very home of Cubby—so we had a big mill mould them of fibre. They are as tough as wood but light as feathers. Bright enamel paint makes them water proof and protects their natural lifelike colors.

With these two little playmates in the home the stories of Cubby Bear will be more real than ever before. You can have them both Free.

Given To You! For only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each we will send you both Cubby Bear and Bunny Rabbit free and postpaid. Reward No. 1782.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Jake was a worthless and improvident fellow. One day he said to the local grocer: "I gotta have a sack o' flour; I'm all out, an' my family is starvin'."

"All right, Jake," said the grocer. "If you need a sack of flour, and have no money to buy it with, we'll give you a sack. But, see here, Jake, there's a circus coming to town in a few days, and if I give you a sack of flour, are you sure you won't sell it and take your family to the circus?"

"Oh, no," said Jake, "I got the circus money saved up already."

—Progressive Grocer.

Get The Book FREE! If you would like to read the whole of this wonderful story at once and learn its thrilling conclusion, rather than wait for the monthly installments as they appear in COMFORT, we will be glad to make you a present of the complete story in book form. Send us only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, and we will send you a copy of the book free and postpaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

WANTED
Railway Postal Clerks
$1600 to $2300 Year
MEN—BOYS 18 OR OVER
SHOULD WRITE IMMEDIATELY
Steady work. No layoffs. Paid Vacations
Travel—See the country on Government time
Common education sufficient:
Send coupon today—SURE

COUPON
FRANKLIN INSTITUTE, Dept. A217, Rochester, N. Y.
Sirs:—Send me without charge (1) Sample Railway Postal Clerk Examination questions; (2) List of Government jobs obtainable; (3) Tell me how I can get a position.
Name .....
Address .....

"Virtue itself offends when coupled with forbidding manners."—Bishop Middleton.

Through the columns of this department free information pertaining to Etiquette, Personal Appearance and kindred subjects will be given in answer to questions by our subscribers, but not more than two questions the same month by any one subscriber. Address Etiquette Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and give your own full name and address. Name will not be published.

M. A. W., Athens, Tex.—In speaking of the use of a fork, the expression "tines upward" would mean, we think, that the fork was being used in a spoon-like manner, as in the eating of beans, peas, etc. In the case where meat, steak, for instance, is being cut with the aid of knife and fork, it is more natural that the cut morsel of meat be impaled on the tines of the fork and so conveyed to the mouth. In such an instance the tines would be in a position reversed from that stated above. But this convenient and at times correct position of the fork must be used with discretion and almost entirely be reserved for foods which must be cut with a knife. When pie or any food is being eaten which is cut with the side of the fork, it is usually best to have the fork assume the spoon-like characteristic above described. It is difficult to convey in print the correct and most graceful use of table silver. You will gain much by watching the methods used by some person whose table manners you know to be beyond reproach. At the close of their use, a knife and fork are laid side by side on the plate, the handles resting on the edge of the plate.

G. C., Orange, Texas.—When such a person says: "I am glad to have met you," you might properly answer: "It has been a pleasure to meet you, too, and I hope we may see each other again."

J. W. W., Grant City, Mo.—A slender band of gold or platinum constitutes the present-day wedding ring. The ring may be plain, or chased and engraved. Its time of use in a wedding ceremony is indicated by the words of the service. If there is a best man as the bridegroom's attendant, it is one of his duties to have the ring ready at the right moment and hand it to the bridegroom. Usually he, on his part, passes it to the clergyman, who hands it on to the bride, and she passes it on to her husband-to-be. He then places it on the third finger of the bride's left hand. The bride may have removed the engagement ring to her right hand for the occasion of the ceremony, or the engagement circlet may have been left in place and the wedding ring slipped on with it. It is usual for the bride to have removed her left glove before entering the church. If there is a bridesmaid or other attendant, she may hold this glove for the bride.

L. W., Suwanee, Ga.—It is best not to mention in particular the refreshments at this entertainment. When you say you have had an enjoyable time, this sentiment covers the enjoyment which the deliciousness of the refreshments may have added. (2.) If your music teacher offers refreshments at this recital, and the whole affair is in the nature of an entertainment for all concerned, it is certainly correct that you should thank her for the good time you have had when you say farewell after the recital.

H. H., Warsaw, Ill.—It is an old-fashioned but sensible and pleasant practice for a girl to start a "hope chest" the contents of which may form part of her trousseau when she marries. In some parts of Europe such chests of wedding finery and household linens are begun when a girl is but five years old. But in the early teens is the age when such a chest is usually begun among our country's girls. The quantity and quality of linen prepared by a future bride depends, of course, upon her means and the sort of home she hopes to maintain. There must be sheets, pillow cases, bath towels, guest towels, kitchen linen of all sorts, large and small napkins and table covers, lunch cloths and luncheon sets, bedspreads, linen scarfs and centerpieces, and any other large and small linen articles of household use that thought and experience may suggest. It is best to initial the linen with the initials of the girl's maiden name. On towels and in other cases, one initial may suffice. On white linens the initialling should be in white, although exception may be made in the case of towels, if preferred. Our own opinion is that the contents of a hope chest should be left to that of household linen and a girl may start accumulating her own personal clothing of lingerie and gowns after the engagement and when a wedding day has been set. This because practically all of the latter is purchased nowadays, while linens and their initialling can be made by hand and require time and some labor.

C. W., Buffalo, W. Va.—Biting your finger nails is a nervous and unpleasant habit, both for yourself and for those who see you doing it. Beyond the age of childhood, one should have will and pride enough to break such a practice. Try having your druggist give you a bitter solution, such as one made of aloes, that you can put on your fingers—thus making yourself unpleasantly reminded of the habit each time you put your nails to your mouth.

M. S., South Carolina.—Why do you ask what is suitable for train travel "except a coat suit?" It is just this which is suitable and no light gowns or clothes of a dressy or fragile nature should be worn. You may wear a pongee or a linen or lawn waist under your coat of your suit, removing the coat and carrying it on your arm if the weather is hot. In your southern climate, a coat suit of linen or other light and loosely woven material would be most suitable for traveling, but this should not be too light in color, we think, if the train trip is a long one.

Brown Eyes, Ky.—Is it right to have a boy "who doesn't seem to have any interest in you?" We answer it may be right, but it is very wrong judgment. We would be on the lookout for a more appreciative Kentuckian at once. That is much better than attempting to waste time and training on any Jack who is too dull a boy, or who is stupid enough to leave you so much alone in a crowd. Drop him and his lack of interest—and perhaps this may wake him up!

Mrs. E. A., Utah.—There is need but of little conversation during a dance. One may speak of other couples that are passed in the gay whirl on the dancing floor; the music may be discussed; past and future dances may be alluded to, etc. At the end of a dance, your partner may thank you, for which a smile will be sufficient reply on your part, or, if you wish to be particularly cordial, you can say: "I enjoyed it very much, too." (2.) When their use is finished, a knife and fork are laid side by side on the plate, with their handles resting on the edge of the plate and the blade of the knife and the tines of the fork occupying a position near the center of the piece of china. A spoon is never left in a cup, but should be kept on the saucer when not in use. A spoon may be properly left in a saucer or on a plate where it has been used to eat ice cream or other refreshment.

Annie, Downing, Wis.—Even though it is custom in your neighborhood to see guests to their car, it would be discourteous to leave your second pair of callers while you left the room and house to see your first couple off. Say good-by to your friends in the presence of your other callers, and you may, if you think necessary, say: "Pardon my not going out to the car with you." (2.) We are a little in doubt just what you mean by the "sauce dish" concerning the place of which on the table you ask in your letter. Generally speaking, all small dishes individual containing a sauce or a vegetable, should be served or placed at the left of a guest.

R. G., Victoria, Tex.—For the luncheon you wish to give for your cousin, you should write out simple notes of invitation. Send these well enough in advance that you may be sure of receiving your replies in time to know for how many you must prepare. A correct form of note would be:

Dear Mrs. Dash:

I am giving a little luncheon for my cousin Mary Jones on Friday, August fifteenth, at one-thirty o'clock. It will give me much pleasure if you can come, and will you let me know if I may expect you?

Sincerely,

Although a buffet or side table luncheon is occasionally served in the way you mention, we think you will do much better to serve your guests seated about a bare table where you make use of lace or linen doilies and centerpiece. Have flowers or a potted plant to make the table attractive. A simple and correct menu for a summer luncheon would be: Iced pineapple or a fruit cocktail, a clear soup, served in cups; chops, chicken, other meats as a main dish, a light salad of some sort, and a frozen dessert and small cups of coffee. You may serve bread and butter or small tea biscuit.

D. E., Parker, Kans.—You should present this boy or man to your father as simply and informally as possible, thus helping them both to prompt and friendly relationship. You might say: "Father, this is my friend, Mr. Dash. I know you have heard me talk about him a lot. He has been wanting to meet you for a long time."

A Bride-to-be, Lafayette, Ind.—Without much expense you can make your home town church attractive for this September wedding by the use of gay foliage, goldenrod, asters, and other flowers of the season. Palms and cut flowers of harmonious coloring may be used about the altar banking. A bride may have as many attendants as the formality of the wedding seems to decree. There may be a page or flower girl, a maid of honor, and from one to four bridesmaids—or even as many as ten! The bridegroom is sufficiently attended by a best man. The wedding procession is necessarily varied according to number of attendants. The ushers pass down the aisle first, followed by the bridesmaids, then a maid of honor, if one is present, and last the bride on the arm of her father or whoever is to "give her away." The flower girl you mention might go in advance of the bride, only; or the child could be first in the procession. Either arrangement would be correct. You are mistaken in thinking the bride and bridegroom pass down the aisle together to the altar. The best man and the bridegroom advance from the rear of the church where they have been waiting, and meet the wedding party at the altar. The bride leaves the arm of her father or whoever has escorted her, and takes the arm of the bridegroom who advances with her before the clergyman. The bridesmaids separate to stand at the right and left, and the maid of honor takes her place at the left of the bride. The best man stands at the bridegroom's right, and slightly in the rear—which should be the position of all the attendants who should be drawn slightly back from the happy couple.

No elaborate refreshments need be served at your wedding reception after the ceremony. Have your home flower-decorated, and serve a fruit punch, cake and ice cream. Of course you may serve a so-called wedding breakfast if you wish. The bride may spend an hour or more at this reception, and may then leave to change to traveling costume. Her attendants should also leave to assist her. Necessarily the bridegroom must also change his apparel and should be ready to meet the bride when she descends ready for departure. Comfort wishes you all happiness and the best of future joy.

A Forgotten Love

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 6.)

lit a match. What had brought him back so soon? Had he come to kill her? She was sure of it when she saw his face, the shaking of his hand as he lit the lamp.

"Did you think I had no matches, and you could slip past me in the dark?" he cried viciously. "If you did, your chance if you had one, is gone. Do you know what has happened? Gillian is arrested."

"Gillian had nothing to do with it! It wasn't her handprint—they can't hurt her"—she was mumbling, incoherent—"it was I who—washed my hands."

"What difference is there in your hands?" venomously. "None! And they'll hang her."

"She hates you! Thank God, she hates you!" wildly. "And she was there—she saw you. I only heard."

"And you think she'll tell? Not she—first, for her own sake, for she's proud. And if she tells a hundred times"—oh, but the man was a callous fiend—"whom do you think they'll arrest? Not me, for I shall be gone, but your Lesard, your righteous, money-lending Lesard! Do you think I married her in my own name, when his was so handy? Do you think she or the world knows there are two? He may swear it till he is black in the face and no one will believe him. The world will think it is all a blind to prove an alibi. A man who lends money is capable of anything; he has enemies by the hundred who will rise up and swear to his identity. Why, even Marchmont," turning on her in triumph, "thought I was he! No one who knows me but believes I am he. You say you knew him; you let out by your eyes that you loved him! Do you think that if Gillian does not tell all she knows, and they prove that handprint to be yours, that then she will not tell to save you? Or—that he will not hang—to save you, too? For, if you think that you do not know him, nor the law that will not believe he has a brother who is his double with only his own word for it!"

"There's more than his word," she broke in fiercely; "I knew you were not he! Do you think Gillian will not know he is not you? Do you think any woman can mistake her husband!" with scorn.

"Gillian won't see him close enough to know," grimly. "She will not be allowed to speak to him, or see him, and she will hold her tongue to save me!"

"And what," said Jacky, and something in her voice like the ring of metal made him look sharply at her, "what about me? Do you think that I have held my tongue? Oh, you're not wasting time—it's worth your while to hear me!" Gillian and I were both in the cave that night, but it was I alone who saw those black diamonds—I alone who knew you took them when you killed Marchmont for the belt I had on. God knows that, in a way, I am guilty of his death, for I lay hid and let you kill him. I hated you, for I thought you were Lesard who loved me—deceived me! And when I found out that we were suspected, and not you; when I saw the diamonds you stole on that woman—do you think I did nothing?

"I went home and wrote two letters—one to the Red Mouse, one to the police, both the same. I wrote that you had stolen from Marchmont the diamonds you sold to the Red Mouse. She will know there are two Lesards! Do you think a woman who lives by her wits will not know the difference between you? And"—somehow, he did not raise a finger to stop the fearless voice—"you may go and leave me to die here, but I'll die in joy, in peace, since I know you are not the Lesard I knew—that is not he who is a thief, a murderer, and a deceiver of miserable woman. I'm glad"—fiercely—"glad Gillian is in prison—for, at least, it will save her from you!"

"You hell-cat!" said the man between his teeth. "And you fool, with your 'joy and peace!'" To her amazement he laughed in her astounded face. "Do you know what you've done for your pains? You handed your pious lover over to be hanged! The Red Mouse is the last person to know there are two Lesards—and she wouldn't care if she did. And I think at the time you wrote you did not know either, in spite of your opportunities! You've done me a good turn, with your crazy letters; but you've done Louis a damned bad one! You can reflect on that while you're slowly departing this life in this room. You can't get out—and you're the only person in this world who can save him or ruin me!"

He turned and was gone. She heard the key turned that locked her in to die—to die, when Lesard's life, perhaps, and Gillian's hung on hers!

She rushed to the door in a frenzy, but even under desperate hands it was hard as iron.

Oh, those letters—those mad letters! She had taken her vengeance into her own hands, and it had turned and wounded her.

"Let me out!" she begged, and battered at the door till she was hoarse and her hands bleeding.

There was no answer.

Must she die here? And must Gillian, must Lesard, die for murder—for want of the word she could not speak"

TO BE CONTINUED

Get The Book FREE! If you would like to read the whole of this wonderful story at once and learn its thrilling conclusion, rather than wait for the monthly installments as they appear in Comfort, we shall be glad to make you a present of the complete story in book form. Send us only one one-year subscription (not your own) to Comfort at 50 cents, and we will send you a copy of the book free and postpaid. Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

At Crumpet's Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 16.)

Joan hesitated, and was lost. "Just this once," she whispered. "I'll be down in two minutes."

The air was cool on her face as the big car shot along the shadowy bottomlands, and the acrid odor of wayside weeds filled her nostrils. A clover field stretched acres of fragrant bloom, and rank green corn rows whirled past.

"I haven't found any problems in my mail box, and I've looked every single day," observed Dan.

"Joan sat up with a little start. "I didn't find any that I couldn't do myself, yet."

"You got my note?"

"Yes, and I was going to answer——"

"Going to! When?"

"Oh, when I got time. Isn't this air lovely!"

They slowed down to meet a lumbering farm team. They sped on past a sleeping meadow. Lights gleamed from farmhouse windows. Birds cheeped drowsily in an old apple orchard. A flock of sheep lay like a soft white mantle against a hillside. Stars grew into the night.

Joan sat back with a little gasp of pleasure. The scents and sounds swept through her with opulent earthiness. Fields and roadside flowed by like seas of leaf and bloom. Dan Crumpet sat silent, his hands dusky white against the wheel, his black hair and profile softened by the shadows—letting her dream.

The night seemed full of a gentle, pulsing motion. And Joan felt herself strangely a part of it all. She loved the rich smell of the cornfields, the crispness of crushed mint, and the delicate fragrance of wild roses.

"You don't mind if I moon away like this, and don't talk?" There was a catch in her voice as she tried to laugh, and her eyes were wide-pupiled and solemn.

Dan Crumpet smiled and shook his head. "Moon all you like," he rumbled, his shoulder brushing hers as he leaned toward her.

They were winding through a forest road that Joan remembered from her other ride when suddenly she found herself talking as eagerly as she had been dreaming a while before. Something in the gentle dignity of Dan Crumpet's silence had called forth her confidence. He had not asked about her, and so she was telling him. He had accepted her as a matter of course, and so she was explaining herself. It was like Joan. Yet she felt a tug of surprise under her composure as she told of the recent death of her father, of her quarrel with her guardian and her escape from the office where he had set her to work.

"It was horrible," she declared. "So stuffy and close, I felt like a prisoner. And I loathed the work and did it very badly, but they kept me on because it was my guardian's office and he was determined that I should learn business methods. Once, when I was ten years old, I went to school for a year in the country. I loved it, and my teacher. And I made up my mind that I would teach school. So I just packed up and left one day, without leaving any address. I really didn't know where I was coming to, except to the country. I found Fairfield on the map. Had money enough to get here and a little besides. So I just came."

"I'm mighty glad you did." Dan patted her hand as it lay on her knee, but she drew it away.

"We must go back," she said.

"Not yet."

"Yes, please."

"We'll go back a different way. It's only a few miles further. It's a pretty road with elms hanging over and lots of wild roses that ought to be in bloom now."

"I love wild roses," said Joan.

Again she found herself talking confidences. "May I tell you something that's sort of worrying me about Grandmother?" she asked. "Maybe you know already."

"Please tell me."

"Did you know she keeps money hidden in the yarn?"

"Well, I know she used to. I wasn't sure she did now since Uncle John got her to keep a bank account and put some out at interest."

"I came on it very unexpectedly, though I'd seen her pottering around there a lot. I was watering the marigold bed one afternoon when she was asleep. It's shady there and the flowers looked so wilty I couldn't bear to wait till night, the way she'd told me to. The water ran down as if it were going into a hole under one of the bricks, and when I looked, there was an old stocking bag full of gold pieces. I didn't count them. I just chucked it back in its little nest. But it made me feel queer. What if somebody'd find out about it?"

"That's what I've been afraid of. Remember I said I didn't like your staying there?"

"But what about Grandmother?"

"Haven't you discovered that you can't do anything with her?"

"That's so. You can't. Much."

"There's plenty of low-down rascals over in Poverty Hollow that would like the job of digging around that old place if they got the notion there was money there."

"I think she keeps changing the hiding place," said Joan. "It's still by the marigolds now, but I remember I used to see her digging around the larkspurs and peonies in the front yard and looking terribly mysterious. I think she had it there when I first came."

"Changing around won't help matters any. I'll speak to Uncle John's folks about it. Maybe they can do something with her. I won't let them know you said anything. I'll just put it as my own suspicion."

A cool wind had sprung up when Dan stopped the car at Grandmother Crumpet's gate. It had been a long ride home, winding slowly through hills and valleys. Joan stumbled a little as she got out.

"When may I come again?" Dan was asking as he opened the picket gate.

"Never again," said Joan. "I won't be sneaky. It was just this once, you remember."

"Nonsense," said Dan, shutting the gate abruptly and sweeping Joan into his arms. She thrilled wildly to the touch of his face against hers, his lips crushing her own. And then she tore herself away angrily.

"I hate you. Don't you ever speak to me again," she cried.

"Please, Joan. You do care——" She heard him pleading as she ran up the steps, slammed the door and stood panting in the stuffy sitting-room. She heard the car turning away. She heard her own heart beating. Then a match snapped in Grandmother's room.

"Joan Bradley! Come in here!" called the old woman fiercely.

Joan went slowly to the bedroom door. The lamp glimmered in a chair beside the bed and the light fell on the bent, night-gowned figure sitting up before the pillows. A yellowish cap fell about the sharp old face, rakishly emphasizing the witch-like features. A faded calico dress hung limply over the footboard. Two shapeless old shoes and baggy cotton stockings lay sprawled about the floor.

"I heard that Dan Crumpet's car," hissed Grandmother, her black eyes snapping, her hard forefinger pointed accusingly at the girl in the doorway.

"Yes," said Joan, growing suddenly calm. "He asked me to go for a ride, and I went."

"Well, tomorrow you can just go for good," raged the old woman. "I won't have ye here no longer. Deceivin' me and slippin' off like this. I won't have such trash in my house!"

"I'll be glad to go in the morning. Good night," said Joan. She went out while the old woman still shrilled her tirade. She crept up the creaking stairs to her attic room, threw herself on the cot before the window and sobbed into the flat hen's-feather pillow.

After a while she got up aimlessly and stared out at the rustling apple tree. With the rising wind, clouds had crept up, and heat lightning flashed low down in the distance. Except for the steady chirping of crickets the yard was shadowy and still. Joan groped back into the room and piled her books together on the table. She felt sick and tired and yet too restless to sleep. She drew her cot close to the window and felt the cool breeze ruffling her hair soothingly. Her eyelids onducted by Cousin Marion writing this department always sign your name and give your address; if not, your letter will receive no attention. Name will not be lished.

HE very fact that every question answered this month has been given serious thought, proves conclusively that the moral, mental and physical welfare of every girl who writes to me is of more importance than my own comfort. I knew that I took an rest in you, but I didn't realize just how great nterest until this month when, with the thermomclimbing to 96, I read and thought about tepid-to-torrid letters, instead of thinking ly, cooling, thoughts. Had I followed the es of my own personal temperature I'd have ght about cold shower baths and iced tea—my rite summer amusements. Now even the most d need never feel afraid of me. I don't like se so many "I's" but there is no other way to you that I'm a kindly soul even if I do scold so h at times that it is a wonder you don't hate shadow.

EGLECTED.—My advice is that you should regard as a friend and not a very intimate friend at that. sounds conceited and ill-mannered to me. To ig- your invitation to call for no other reason than he didn't want to bend to your will and because he ght you wanted your own way, was the height of conceit and stubbornness. A fine husband he'd e! If he doesn't want a steady girl because he ld be "tied down," he would be a rank failure as a band. Husbands are the most tied down mortals ow of, but the right kind of man doesn't mind being that way.

RUE.—Your letter has been referred to the Etite Department.

UCY, Arkansas.—Unless you have a maid, you or e member of the family should go to the door and te your "caller" to come in. If you answer the bell or his knock, be sure you look presentable. need not be "dressed up," but have your hair bed and be dressed neatly. The best way is to be that all the time, make neatness a habit; then if alls unexpectedly he won't be disillusioned. Young gets an awful wallop in the eye when it sees the of its dreams (light of its life and all that sort of g) in curlers (wreckers of homes!) and a soiled dress runover shoes. (2.) If the girls in your commugo to church with their men friends then it should sion no unfavorable comments if you go with your ller." Remember that a church is a place of wor-, the worship of God—not man, not even a "cal-

UST A BLUE BIRD, Kentucky.—Bluebirds mean piness, and it would have made the elderly man py to have had you show respect for him by rising n introduced. As I've said before, I'm not strong tiquette—I try to be kind—and it may be proper a woman to remain seated when introduced to a of her own age, but you, at fifteen, are not a woman should show respect for your elders, as a true woman uld. I don't blame your uncle for giving you a n kick. If I'd been there I'd have given you a kick he shins.

. C. W., Kentucky.—It is proper to tell your escort t you have had a pleasant evening, or anything te, but he should ask you if he could come again or e could take you to a place of amusement. (2.) It aken for granted that a man will write to the girl he ngaged to when he goes out of town. He should te and give her his address. Some men are so much ove (before marriage) that they ask the girl to write nce, and most girls like to do it. (3.) If you could to the funeral alone you could come home alone. erals are usually respectable affairs and the people ending them are not in the least wild, so you should e been safe from the attentions of anyone there, and ou came there safely you could go home alone in ty.

ARBARA, Texas.—It is dangerous to ride too close a boy when he is driving a car. Automobiles, even ive cylindered affairs with Gabriel horns and shiny at and a monogram, aren't as intelligent as the old te horse used to be, and don't know when to stop discreetly browse under a shady tree. A driver uld have his hands, and arms, free to act in an rgency. To be sure, there are some proficient leftided drivers—so I've been told— but let them that at to take foolish chances. (2.) If you are en- ed to your "best" lover then kiss him good night. w many grades of lovers have you?

IVIAN, Texas.—The boy should write first. (2.) ere is no actual harm in winking; in fact, winking is d for the eyes, but to aim a wink at a boy is coarse vulgar, as well as crude. I can forgive coarseness vulgarity but crudeness—O my Goodness, it is ible!

HIRLEY, Texas.—If you return at an early hour it is per to ask the boy into the house. I am taking it granted that your parents won't mind, because if y are willing you should go out with him they should willing you should entertain him in your home. (2.) hat does your mother think about you going to shows h boys? Her opinion is worth much more than ne.

ELSIE, Idaho.—The fact that he doesn't give you esents does not signify that he is stingy or that he esn't care for you. He may not have thought of it he may be saving his money to buy for you when you his wife. The fellow who was the soul of generty to other girls is often stingy with his wife. He y have to be because he has spent so much money on er girls. (2.) Circumstances alter cases. As a le I don't approve of a girl marrying at your age, but ur letter indicates that you possess brains. (3.) I ree with you in your third question because I think u would use discretion

BILL AND JACK. Idaho.—If girls whose parents are vorced are more popular with the boys, it must be cause the boys sense that usually a mother alone or a ther alone has less control over a girl and that she will ve more freedom than the girl whose mother and ther are working and watching together for her best terests. Or it may be that the girl herself regards ve and marriage in a lighter manner. She may think to rself, "Oh, well, mother got a divorce. If I don't like m I'll get one too," and she is less careful than the rl who has had a happy and a united home life. This only conjecture on my part and I may be wrong. I'll mit that I don't know the psychology of it. (2.) on't marry your cousin or be engaged to him, or stay your cousin's home if he is the one you think you are love with.

TWIN SIX, Maryland.—No, he owes you an apology. ext time a fellow says he won't take you anywhere gain unless you let him kiss you tell him that if he is utting matters on a business basis and wants pay for aking you there, that you will pay him the regular ublic carriage or taxi charge, plus the costs of tickets, od, etc. Give or send the money to him. That ught to make him feel like a German mark, only he is uch cheaper. I hope you will be hitting on all cylinders next time you meet another cheap John.

SUSAN JANE.—Instead of giving advice to the girls often wish I could talk to the mothers. They need dvice more than the girls This girl's mother does ot stay at home and the girl wants to know if it would e proper for her to take an automobile trip with a boy he has met recently; the trip being of such a nature hat they would be obliged to stop at a hotel one night. My dear, don't do it, with an old acquaintance or a new ne. If your mother or father or some older relative ent with you such a trip might be arranged. I aven't the slightest doubt in my mind but that he is a espectable boy and a gentleman and that he would onduct himself as a gentleman should, but it is the appearance of evil that must be avoided, as well as evil itself. People are always ready to believe the worst of veryone Because he is a respectable boy he can propose such a trip. Were he older and less respectable nd knew more of the world, he would know what it your world) would say about you. The unfavorable comments would be about you. The Bible says something about choosing a good name rather than great iches. If it were not sacreligious I would amend that o read, "rather than great riches or automobile rides."

GRACE, Ohio.—He may have been sincere in saying he loved you better than any girl he had ever seen, but t nineteen he hadn't seen so many girls. There is no assurance that he would have loved you better than a girl he might have met later. You may not have done the right thing in marrying a man older than yourself and whom, I judge, you do not care for, but the chances are you are better off than if you had married the one who was younger than yourself, was jealous, and whose parents said he was "no account." When parents will admit that, it is usually the truth. Now that you are married why don't you make the best of it, and if your husband gets mad at things you say,—stop saying them and say something that will please him. It is astonishing how little it takes to please a man. It is just as easy to be happy as it is to be unhappy and it keeps you looking young if you are happy.

GIRL FROM VIRGINIA.—Thank you for telling me that my advice helped you. I often wonder just how much good my talks do. You have made the day much happier for me.

I don't want you to be an old maid (I advised against marriage the other time) but I do want you to be happy and I can't feel that you will be if you marry the man you have told me about. In his fifteen years seniority he has lived a life. I can't tell you to demand absolute virtue in a man for if I did your chances of marrying would be as remote as the chances of the proverbial snowball, but you should demand a higher standard of morals than he seems to possess. His excuse is a favorite alibi with men but not one that he would accept from you, and Mother Nature didn't have two separate plans in mind when she constructed men and women. You never could feel sure of him if you married him, and if you were obliged to meet and associate with the married woman you mention it would be likely to cause you unhappiness and make you distrust him all the time. Of course, if you really love him you can overlook a lot and there is no assurance that some other man would be true to you. Men are so uncertain, but there is a better chance that a man of a different temperament would be more worthy of your trust. I think I can understand how you feel, you want to be the woman and not any woman. You are young yet. Why not wait a while longer, even five or six years. I shall be interested in you if you care to write to me again.

BEULAH, New Mexico.—The only "good advice" I can give you is to obey your parents and give up your cowboy lover. Cowboys, in moving pictures, are charming things and it was a shock to my Bill-Hart-Tom-Mix sensibilities to learn that they could be 'ruff.'

TRIXIE, Texas.—Whether you throw him aside or not depends upon the reason the boys have for making fun of him and disliking him. You'll have to decide that yourself. What does he do—crochet or wear pink silk B. V. D.'s? There is a certain class of fellows who are jealous and make fun of a boy who is more of a gentleman than they are.

LOTTIE, Texas.—If you were older I'd say write again and ask if he received your first letter, but I can't approve of girls of fifteen writing to boys, not even if they do regard their friendship as "priceless." It isn't how you regard his friendship but how he regards yours that counts, and he is likely to regard it as being worth more if it isn't thrust upon him.

Now I'm going to have a glass of iced tea. Goodby girls.

COUSIN MARION.

In Berlin the dance mania is so intensive that the government has closed all cabarets where dancing and drinking of cheap wines went on from 5 p. m. until after midnight.—The Dearborn Independent.

WHAT'S WRONG With This Dress?

She didn't know that her new dress would attract such attention. Any dressmaker should have known how to design a dress that would give her height. Do you know what is wrong?

Are Your Dresses Criticised?

Are you sure that your own dresses or hats are not as poorly designed as this one? Wherever you go, your dresses and hats are watched by both men and women. Are you sure they are not being criticized? Are you or is your daughter being retarded, socially, because of poorly designed dresses?

You Can Design

Do you know that in 10 fascinating weeks, you can learn Dress Designing and Making without leaving your own home? Do you know that over 16,000 girls and women, 14 or over, have learned, through this system to make dresses, gowns, coats, and hats? Previous sewing knowledge is not necessary Mail coupon today sure. You might forget if you put it off and every time you buy a new dress or hat you would then regret.

Cut Here

Franklin Institute, Dept. A642, Rochester, N. Y.
Send me, without charge, your illustrated book (copyrighted) and free sample lessons in the Home Study System here checked. .....Dress Designing and Making. .....Millinery

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

World's Champion Hen

Fifteen times her own weight in eggs in a year—that is the record of Lady Jewel, world's champion hen, the property of W. M. Leathers, of Woodland, Washington. In 365 days, she laid 335 eggs, the average weight of each egg being the standard two ounces. Her own weight is two pounds and 12 ounces. Another hen of the Northwest, Lady Dryden, of Oregon, had held the world's championship for the past year, her record being 324 eggs in a year. Lady Jewel also set a new record for continuity—132 eggs in 132 days—an egg a day, without a break. The previous continuity record was 90 eggs in 90 days.

The champion was hatched in an incubator, and, because of her high-bred ancestry, something extraordinary was expected of her. On November 1, 1921, at the age of five months, her owner took her to the Western Washington Experiment station of the State College of Washington, near Pullman.

This station, during the past two years, has been given the highest rating. The system that has resulted in breaking the world's record, is largely the work of Mr. and Mrs. Shoup, who are called "the poultry wizards of the Pacific Northwest." The superintendent of the station, W. A. Linklater, also gives much credit to Charles R. Hansbury, contest attendant.

Here are a few statistics concerning Lady Jewel: Her meat value, at wholesale, would be 41 cents. Her value to her owner is $2000. Each egg, at retail, would bring 10 cents.

Recently 20 eggs sold for $500.

Each egg laid by her in the three months hatching season is valued at $100.

Lady Jewel would not take first prize at a "beauty" show. As Supt. Linklater says, she was "bred for egg yield, not for feathers."

Postal Saving Bank

The Postal Savings Division of the Post-Office Department has 420,000 depositors and approximately $134,000,000 on deposit.

Missing Relatives and Friends

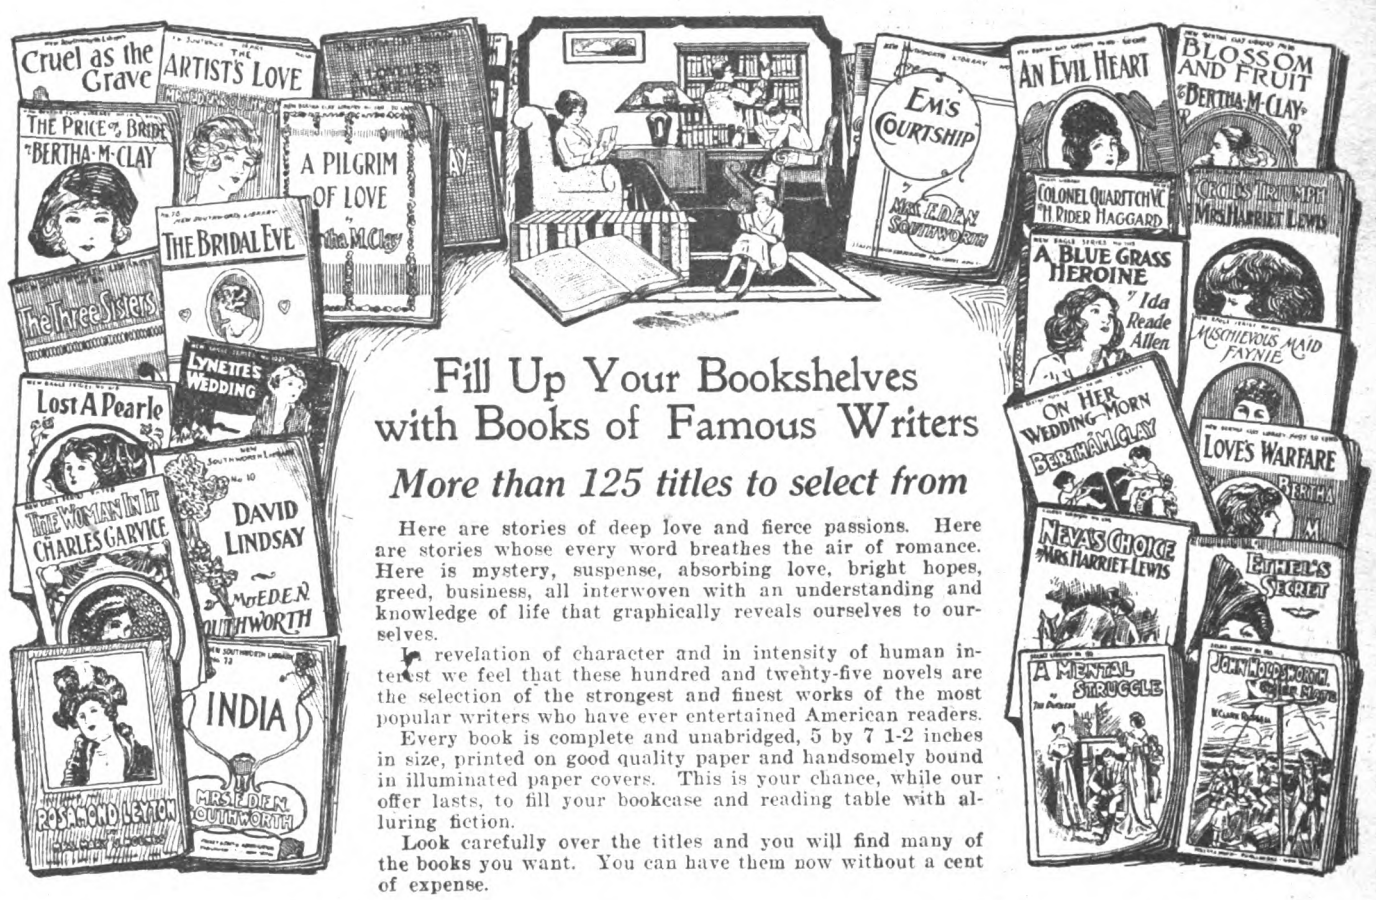
For the convenience of its subscribers, COMFORT reopens the "Missing Relatives and Friends" column.

To the readers of COMFORT is extended the privilege of inserting three-line notices in this column if they will secure only one new yearly subscriber to COMFORT at 50c. If you wish to find a missing relative or friend you can insert a three-line notice containing not over 22 words in this column by securing only one new subscription at 50c. If a longer notice is required send one 50c subscription for each additional seven words.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Adam Mieden, who left Wisconsin 20 years ago, please notify his niece Mrs. Mary Wolfgram, Kendall, Wis.

Wanted address of Mr. Holt, citizen of Charleston, S. C. May 1907, whose home was on Rutledge Avenue, near intersection of Lime Street and Rutledge Avenue. Mr. Holt's daughter, Clio Holt, married in June 1907, in that city, and continued to live there until 1910. Kindly notify Mrs. Pearl Hoyle, Gaffney, 122 Millwood Street, S. C.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Mary Clark, her adopted name was Mary Carr, last heard of in Birmingham, Ala. Please notify her sister Mrs. Minnie Posey, Houston, 611 Hamilton St., Texas.



Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Jodie and Willie Wright last heard from in California, sons of Calvin Wright, notify Mrs. Maud Patts, Slayden, Tenn.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of W. T. Gulledge last heard of in Sedalia, Mo. Dec. 4, 1921, please notify Miss Lucy Vineyard, Desoto, Mo.

Will some kind readers send me the list of "Wilcox" names in their town. I desire the address of all "Wilcoxs" to help me trace the "Wilcox" family tree and to write "late" history of the Wilcox genealogy. All kindness appreciated. Address, John Jay Vincent Wilcox, Falmouth, Box 221, Mass.

It will cost less for a farmer to help a neighbor rid his fields of chinch bugs than to combat them himself when they cross his property line, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Wheat fields developing infestation should be sprayed in May or early June, and cooperation helps.

The Pick of the Country's Favorite Fiction

Fill Up Your Bookshelves with Books of Famous Writers

More than 125 titles to select from

Here are stories of deep love and fierce passions. Here are stories whose every word breathes the air of romance. Here is mystery, suspense, absorbing love, bright hopes, greed, business, all interwoven with an understanding and knowledge of life that graphically reveals ourselves to ourselves.

In revelation of character and in intensity of human interest we feel that these hundred and twenty-five novels are the selection of the strongest and finest works of the most popular writers who have ever entertained American readers.

Every book is complete and unabridged, 5 by 7 1-2 inches in size, printed on good quality paper and handsomely bound in illuminated paper covers. This is your chance, while our offer lasts, to fill your bookcase and reading table with alluring fiction.

Look carefully over the titles and you will find many of the books you want. You can have them now without a cent of expense.

Ida Reade Allen

E 1124 The Breath of Slander
E 1115 A Blue Grass Heroine
E 1066 No Man's Wife

Bertha M. Clay

C 95 Love's Warfare
C 102 The Price of a Bride
C 107 A Woman's Temptation
C 109 A Struggle for the Right
C 116 Blossom and Fruit
C 117 Lady Muriel's Secret
C 123 The Hidden Sin
C 128 Lady Latimer's Escape
C 129 A Woman's Error
C 130 A Loveless Engagement
C 133 The Chains of Jealousy
C 138 When Love and Hate Conflict
C 140 A Pilgrim of Love
C 142 Lost for Love
C 147 A Fateful Passion
C 150 An Evil Heart
C 158 Lady Ona's Sin
C 165 A Poisoned Heart

Marie Corelli

S 16 A Romance of Two Worlds
S 42 Vendetta

"The Duchess"

S 150 A Mental Struggle
S 141 Lady Valworth's Diamonds
S 134 A Modern Circe

Geraldine Fleming

E 1120 Sold for Gold
E 1062 The Curse of Beauty
E 1043 Love That Was Cursed

May Agnes Fleming

E 481 Wedded, Yet No Wife
E 136 The Unseen Bridegroom
E 9 The Virginia Heiress

Wenona Gilman

E 1087 The Tide of Fate
E 1070 Evelyn the Actress

Charles Garvice

E 17 Leslie's Loyalty
E 50 Her Ransom
E 84 Imogene
E 95 A Wilful Maid
E 250 A Woman's Soul
E 272 So Fair, So False
E 304 Stanch as a Woman
E 305 Led by Love. Sequel to "Stanch as a Woman"
E 635 A Coronet of Shame
E 655 Linked by Fate
E 758 The Woman in It

H. Rider Haggard

S 152 Colonel Quaritch, V. C.
S 108 Allan Quartermain
S 80 King Solomon Mines
S 75 She

Mary J. Holmes

S 2 Rosamond Leyton
S 216 Georgie's Secret
S 230 The Unloved Husband

Rudyard Kipling

S 166 The Phantom Rickshaw
S 31 The Light That Failed
S 72 Plain Tales From the Hills

Laura J. Libbey

E 1112 Mischievous Maid Faynie
E 138 A Fatal Wooing

Mrs. Harriet Lewis

E 213 The Heiress of Egremont
S 232 Neva's Choice
S 221 Sundered Hearts
S 213 Cecil's Triumph

Mrs. Alex McVeigh Miller

E 1085 Lynette's Wedding
E 1078 The Shadow Between Them
E 1050 Married in Error

W. Clark Russell

S 143 John Holdsworth, Chief Mate
S 129 Love and Shipwreck

Mrs. Georgie Sheldon

E 7 Two Keys
E 1 Queen Bess
E 44 That Dowdy
E 66 Witch Hazel
E 111 Faithful Shirley
E 122 Grazia's Mistake
E 133 Max
E 166 The Masked Bridal
E 177 A True Aristocrat
E 188 Dorothy Arnold's Escape
E 210 Wild Oats
E 219 Lost: A Pearle
E 244 A Hoiden's Conquest
E 266 The Wellfleet Mystery
E 415 Trixy
E 511 The Golden Key
E 512 A Heritage of Love. Sequel to "The Golden Key"
E 519 The Magic Cameo
E 520 The Heatherford Fortune. Sequel to "The Magic Cameo"
E 676 My Lady Beth

Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth

4 Em's Courtship. Sequel to "Em"
10 David Lindsay. "Sequel to "Gloria"
22 A Leap in the Dark
23 The Mysterious Marriage. Sequel to "A Leap in the Dark"
24 Her Mother's Secret
29 The Unloved Wife
30 When the Shadow Darkens
31 Lilith. Sequel to "When the Shadow Darkens"
44 The Changed Brides, or "Winning Her Way"
45 The Bride's Fate. Sequel to "The Changed Brides"
48 Cruel as the Grave, or "The Hallowe'en Mystery"
49 Tried for Her Life. Sequel to "Cruel as the Grave"
73 India, or "The Pearl of Pearle River"
78 The Bridal Eve
86 The Three Sisters
91 The Artist' Love

Robert Louis Stevenson

S 149 The Suicide Club
S 125 The Master of Ballantrae
S 83 Kidnapped
S 58 Treasure Island

Miscellaneous

E 1100 An Angel of Evil, Effie Adelaide Rowlands
E 1096 A Bachelor Girl, Lucy May Russell
S 78 Beyond the City, A. Conan Doyle
S 51 Camille Alexandre Dumas
S 67 The Cruise of the Cachalot," Frank T. Bullen
E 1127 Daredevil Betty, Evelyn Malcolm
S 147 The Dead Secret, Wilkie Collins
S 60 Dead Man's Rock, "Q" (A. T. Quiller-Couch)
S 14 East Lynne, Mrs. Henry Wood
S 138 Elsie Venner Oliver Wendell Holmes
E 1084 Ethel's Secret, Charlotte M. Stanley
E 1088 Her Husband's Other Wife, Emma Garrison Jones
E 1128 Her Life's Dark Cloud, Lillian R. Drayton
S 35 Inez, Augusta J. Evans
S 61 The Iron Pirate, Max Pemberton
S 117 John Halifax, Gentleman, Miss Mulock
E 1083 Lola Dunbar's Crime, Barbara Howard
S 63 Lorna Doone, R. D. Blackmore
S 69 The Last Days of Pompeii, Sir Bulwer Lytton
S 100 Led Astray, Octave Feuillet
S 131 Lady Audley's Secret, Miss M. E. Braddon
S 89 A Perilous Secret, Charles Reade
S 148 Ships That Pass in the Night, Beatrice Harraden
S 81 She's All the World to Me, Hall Caine
S 126 The Toilers of the Sea, Victor Hugo
S 118 The Tragedy in the Rue de la Paix, Adolphe Belot
S 53 Uncle Tom's Cabin, Harriet Beecher Stowe
S 27 Under Two Flags, "Ouida"

Given To You Without Expense

For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50c we will send you any one book free. For a club of two one-year subscriptions at 50c we will send you any 3 books. Be sure to order the books by number and also give the author's name so that you will be sure to get the book you want. Suggest one extra title which we can substitute if necessary.

ADDRESS COMFORT BOOK DEPARTMENT,
AUGUSTA, MAINE.

BOYS! Have Fun And Make Money With This Complete PRINTING OUTFIT

For A Club Of Only Two!

TOMMY Jones in the above picture is all smiles because he has printed some name cards for a neighbor for which he is to receive 50 cents. You can do the same. With this practical Printing Outfit you can print cards, tags, envelopes, small circulars, letter heads, bill heads, etc., and do the work well. There is always a demand for this kind of printing and if you are a "live wire" you can doubtless get a lot of jobs to do for your friends and neighbors and thereby earn considerable pocket money. And you will be learning something, too—typesetting, composition, correct use of capitals, punctuation, abbreviations, business terms and phrases—to say nothing of the fun you get out of it.

Everything in this Outfit is of the best quality. It contains one complete font of rubber type, or in other words, from eight to fourteen of each of the letters in the alphabet—both capitals and small letters; all the numerals from 1 to 10—two to three of each numeral—dollar signs, a full assortment of commas, periods, colons, semi-colons, hyphens, quotation, percentage and parenthesis marks, exclamation and question points, slugs, pointing hands and words and phrases most commonly used in business, such as "For Sale By," "Return To," "No.", "Co.," etc. Then there is a four-line type holder, a pair of metal pinchers (to pick up the type with), and an everlasting ink pad in a metal case.

Parents should encourage their children in the use of this practical Printing Outfit, because it will furnish them with no end of fun, valuable instruction, and a chance to earn money of their own. Girls like this Outfit as well as the boys, and father and mother will also find it useful in the home in a hundred different ways.

We will give you this complete Printing Outfit free if you will accept the following special offer:

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this complete Printing Outfit, exactly as described, free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 1222.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

54 Inch Rope Of Pearls

Reward No. 9882

Full Opera Length

THE dream of every woman and girl is to possess her own necklace of gleaming, iridescent pearls. There's a wonderful fascination about them—a beauty that appeals to every feminine heart.

Now your dream can come true—for we are giving away this handsome, full opera length rope of Parisian pearls. It is 54 inches long, all the pearls are of uniform size—¼ inch in diameter—of perfect finish and luster, far handsomer than the ordinary imitation pearl necklace sold at a high price. It can easily be wound twice around the neck, making the double rope as shown in our illustration.

By rare good luck we secured first choice of these necklaces from a large importer and at a price that enables us to give them for an unusually small club. Please read the following offer and learn how you can get a beautiful, 54-inch rope of pearls free of all cost.

Given To You! For only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each, we will send you this handsome, opera length Pearl Necklace free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 9882.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

You Will Laugh, You Will Yell, You Will Scream at "The Blunders of A Bashful Man"

Reward No. 8221

You need this great book! You cannot do without it! For chasing away melancholia, dissipating gloom and banishing trouble you will find it better than all the doctors' "dope" in the world and it has the circus and vaudeville beaten a mile. This great story is the world's champion funny book and you must read it because it eradicates wrinkles, improves the complexion and by its laughter-compelling mirth and irresistible humor rejuvenates your whole body. In this screamingly funny story you follow with rapt attention and hilarious delight the mishaps, mortifications, confusions and agonizing mental and physical distresses of a self-conscious, hypersensitive, appallingly bashful young man who stumbles on through a succession of astounding accidents and ludicrous predicaments that will convulse you with cyclonic laughter causing you to hold both sides for fear of exploding from an excess of uproarious merriment. As a fun maker, rib tickler and laugh-provoker this great story "The Blunders of a Bashful Man" beats all records and you will miss the treat of your life if you don't get it and read it at once.

Given To You! For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, we will send you a copy of "The Blunders of a Bashful Man" free and prepaid. Reward No. 8221.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

You Can Make The Most Beautiful Purses, Bags, Chains, Necklaces, Belts, Etc. With The Kanibas Bead Loom

Thousands of Beads and Complete Outfit

Full Instructions Show You How—You Cannot Possibly Fail

Given For A Club Of Four!

BEADWORK is all the rage again. And here is a wonderful yet simple Bead Loom with which any woman or girl can take up this fascinating work at home and easily make the handsomest bags, chains, necklaces, purses, bracelets, belts, collars and cuffs, dress trimmings, shirtwaist sets, slippers, watch cases, fob chains, card cases, pocketbooks—in fact there is no limit to the number and variety of exquisitely colored bead work articles that can be woven on this Loom.

Anybody can use the "Kanibas" Bead Loom—it is very easy to understand as everything is fully explained in the instruction book sent with the outfit.

Everything you need to work with is included free with the Loom, so you can begin making the articles at once.

In the outfit you will receive one "Kanibas" Bead Loom, five packages of beads in assorted colors of black, white, blue, green, pink, etc., one dozen special bead needles (very long and slender with an unusually long eye), one spool of specially prepared waxed bead thread, and a 44-page instruction book containing more than seventy-five photographs and designs of popular bead work, together with easy detailed instructions on just what color of beads to use and how to work them.

This book shows how to make different styles of bags, chains, necklaces, purses, belts, collars and cuffs, shirtwaist sets, slippers, watch cases, fob chains, card cases, pocketbooks, dress trimmings, any letter in the alphabet, any numeral, etc., etc.,—giving full directions for all designs. The popular secret order emblems can be worked with great effect in beads for fob chains, bracelets, card cases, etc., and this book illustrates designs for Masons, Odd Fellows, Knights of Pythias, Knights of Columbus, Elks, Royal Arcanum, also Christian Endeavor, Epworth League and others.

Any woman or girl will be delighted with this practical Loom Outfit because she can make so many pretty things not only for her own use but to give away as presents and to sell. While the beads themselves cost but little, the finished work brings a high price, so that there are big profits in the business, if one desires to sell the articles after they are made.

We will give you this Bead Loom and Complete Outfit free upon the terms of the following Special Club Offer! For four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you the "Kanibas" Bead Loom and Outfit free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 8234.

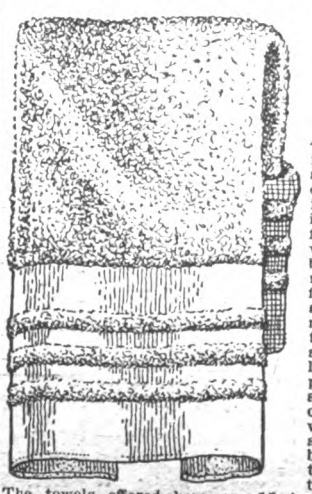
Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Full concert-toned HARMONICA

Gift No. 1662

GIVEN FOR TWO SUBSCRIPTIONS.



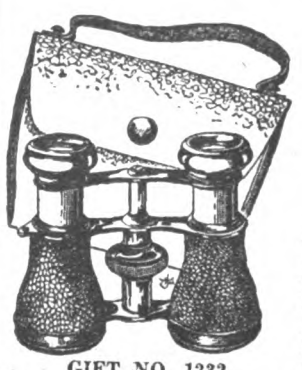
Every boy, and many of the men folks, too, will get pecks of fun and entertainment from this extra full-toned mouth organ. Each side has 24 double holes—48 bronze reeds. Really it is two harmonicas in one with a different key on each side. At parties, dances and in your own family circle you can have no end of enjoyment with it. Length 6 1-2 inches. Heavy nickel sides. Packed in fancy box.

Given To You! For only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each, we will send you this full concert-toned Harmonica free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 1662.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Two Turkish Towels

Good Size Soft And Fleecy

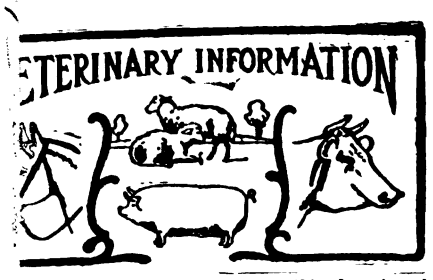


AFTER bathing there is nothing quite as fine as a good rub down with a Turkish towel, in fact it is the best towel for all purposes, whether for the bathroom, guest-room or everyday family use. They absorb the water much more readily than other towels and the soft fleece-like surface imparts to the body a delightful feeling of warmth and well-being. They are also fine for baby's toilet as they will not hurt the tender skin. The towels offered here are 15 inches wide and 32 inches long which is a good convenient size for all-round family use, and are of good weight, well made and finished. We will make you a present of two of these towels upon the terms of the following offer.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you one pair (2) of these fine Turkish Towels free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 9912.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Opera or Field Glasses



GIFT NO. 1232
Given for Two Subscriptions.

THESE glasses are not, of course, as powerful as those sold at a high price, yet they will be found very satisfactory and extremely useful on many occasions. Although commonly known as opera glasses, they can also be used out of doors for identifying people, animals and objects within a reasonable distance. Farmers, motorists, Boy Scouts, hunters, fishermen, etc., will find these glasses to be just what they need to take with them on their trips through fields and woods. They are durably made and can be conveniently carried in the neat leatherette case which is included free.

These Glasses are made in Europe which accounts for the low price that makes this offer possible. They are yours free on the terms of the followig special offer:

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you these Opera or Field Glasses in a leatherette case, free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 1232.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

ıbers are invited to write to this department for any information desired relative to the t of animal troubles. Questions will be answ in these columns free by an eminent veterinar scribe the trouble fully, sign full name and ur address; direct all correspondence to the ry Department, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

ntion will be given any inquiry which lacks der's full name and address, but we will print tials if so requested.

Beware of Sunstroke

extra hot weather keep the work horse in the table when it is seen that the feces (manure) slushy, hot, foul-smelling, or scant, slimy nd pale-colored. Indigestion is thus indiated and often precedes heat exhaustion nd sunstroke or heat apoplexy. Stop grain nd reduce roughage. Rest the horse until weels again are normal. When a working suddenly stops sweating, stop work, remove , get him into a shady place under a tree, there is a breeze and sprinkle body with cold by means of a garden sprinkling can. Let ater constantly trickle over poll of head, or persistently with cold water. In the worst inject cold water into the rectum. Give ants by way of the mouth. Half to one ounce of aromatic spirits of ammonia and sweet of niter may be given in strong tea or coffee n hour until relief occurs or the veterinarian . He should be called in all severe cases, pecial drugs indicated and taps to relieve when that is necessary.

K BACK.—I have a mule ten years old. She got her and I put on coal oil. When down she can't Mrs. A. E. T.

An application of coal oil might blister the skin arcely would cause the weakness you mention. more likely has been caused by a sprain of the s of the loins for which there is no special remedy than rest. Support the mule with veterinary in a box-stall at night, but allow exercise at other . Kill the lice by applying as often as seems to be ary a tea made by boiling four ounces of staves- or larkspur seeds for 30 minutes in a gallon of . Cleanse and disinfect the stable.

GET.—My cow gives clabber milk. I feed her -seed meal and cotton-seed mixed. Is there any y? R. L.

-Bacteria or germs in the milk utensils commonly ropiness in milk. They usually are derived from ater used to wash milk utensils or cool milk or or from dust in places where the milk is handled More scrupulously cleanse, scald and sun-dry ilk vessels and see that all water used is pure eep the cow from standing in water. If you find he udder is affected with garget, and the possible of abnormal milk better let a calf nurse or dry off retion in the affected quarter or quarters.

E MULE.—My mule, 10 years old seems to be in her right fore leg. When I work her hard she t her leg out in front and it seems to hurt her. Is anything to do for her? W. J. C.

-The thrusting forward or "pointing" mentioned ted that the foot is the seat of the lameness. Have acksmith search the foot for a corn, stone bruise il prick. Pus may have to be liberated. If no ause is found keep cold wet swabs constantly the hoof head. If that does no good clip the hair the hoof head and once a week rub in a little of a re of one part of powdered cantharides and 24 of lard, as a mild blister. Tie the mule short while blister is acting.

SEASE OF DOGS.—Can you tell me what ails our First he began to cough and get stiff and sore; es swell and pus forms. He got so he wouldn't nd just laid around. Nearly all the dogs in the borhood has, or have had, the disease. Two have killed and it was said they had hydrophobia alch they didn't bite at anything. J. B. H.

—As you suspect rabies you should have a qualified marian examine an affected dog, or report the matthe local health officer and state veterinarian and vestigation may be ordered. We cannot decide xact nature of the disease without making a perexamination and as rabies is so terribly dangerous n and farm animals we should strongly advise you ve an expert examine an affected dog. Meanaffected dogs should be kept chained. The dismay turn out to be distemper. We may add that s may now be prevented with a good degree of ss by vaccinating the dogs.

LARGED JOINT.—Please tell me what to do for my She ran over a buggy and bruised her knee, h caused an enlarged joint. B. D.

—If the enlargement has been there for months does not become less with exercise we fear it may e permanent. Poultice the knee with antiphlone, applied hot, covered with absorbent cotton and in place by bandaging the mare to be kept tied up e under treatment. Renew the poultice material time it tends to become dry. Discontinue poulg when the inflammation subsides and then rub in 10 per cent. iodine ointment daily or treat with a rietary reducing preparation which you can buy at ug store with directions for use.

OPY MILK.—My Jersey heifer, two years old, calf weeks, gives a large quantity of milk, but it is ropy. you give me the cause and cure? Mrs. A. K.

—We suspect that the abnormal milk comes from quarter that has been infected by the germs which e mammitis, commonly called garget. If so it ld be best to let a calf nurse or to dry off the secrein the affected quarter or quarters. Chronic garis incurable and the affected milk is unfit for use. ple garget, not due to germs may be caused by exive feeding of a protein—rich feed like cottonseed l. Better stop feeding cottonseed in any form and he cow live on grass. Strip the quarter clean every or three hours, during the day, and in the evening in a mixture of equal quantities of carbolized oil, aphorated oil and compound soap liniment. Isolate cow, milk her last and destroy the abnormal milk.

BLOOD IN MILK.—I have a heifer which freshened before she was two years old. She seems healthy, gives bloody milk; you cannot tell it only by separa- and then it gathers around the bowl of the separa- She has never, to my knowledge, been hurt. The was two months old when she began to give bloody k and at that time I was feeding cane hay. Mrs. M. F.

A.—Set a sample of milk from each quarter of the ler in separate bottles that have been sterilized by ling. Label the bottles so that the source of the k in each may be known. In that way you can ermine which quarter is yielding bloody milk. Then may find by rolling the teat of that quarter been the thumb and fingers that growths are present. h growths often bleed a little from irritation at time milking. If at or very close to the opening of the a veterinarian could remove them by operation. hey are high up or if chronic garget is found to be the se better let a calf nurse or dry off the milk secretion the affected quarter.

EYE DISEASE.—My horse got inflammation in one of eyes last fall. One of my neighbors suggested putg powdered camphor in the eyes. Would it be a od thing? L. L.

A.—It would not be well to put camphor in the eye, t bathing it with boiled water containing one teaonful of powdered boric acid to the pint and used id may help. We fear, however, that the horse is fected with periodic or recurrent opthalmia, comonly called "moon blindness" which causes cataract d blindness of one or both eyes after repeated attacks. rtially darken the stable. If an attack comes on ssolve a dram of iodide of potash in the drinking water ice daily, frequently bathe the eyes with the boric id solution and in the evening put a little bit of one r cent. yellow oxide of mercury ointment in the corner the eye and apply it freely to the upper eyelid and pression above the eye

TUBERCULIN TEST.—Please tell me if it is possible one to give the tuberculin treatment, and if so how d what to give, as we do not live near a veterinarian. What will cure catarrhal fever? Mrs. J. E. Y

A.—To test cattle with tuberculin by either one the three standard methods requires professional ining and skill, especially as regards interpretation the results. It should therefore be done by an expert. rticulars may be had in a bulletin which you can obin by writing to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. (2.) If you care to write again describing the symptoms of what you think may be catarrhal fever and tell us what kind of animal is affected we shall be glad to give you advice.

MOON BLINDNESS.—I have a horse that went blind with what we call "blue eye." She had attacks for one year then her eye would water and finally went blind. I have another young horse that is having her first attack. It seems to be spreading in our part of the country. Is it contagious and can anything be done for it? F. B.

A.—There is enough evidence to show that it is advisable to isolate a horse afflicted with periodic or recurrent ophthalmia, commonly called "moon blindness." There is a difference of opinion regarding the origin and cause of the disease, but many now consider it infectious or germ-caused and a biologic used hypodermically is being tried as a preventive. The disease is practically incurable and after repeated attacks causes cataract and blindness of one or both eyes. This may be retarded somewhat by injecting a 10 per cent. solution of Lugol's solution and distilled or boiled water into the fatty cushion behind the eye and dissolving a dram of iodide of potash in the drinking water twice daily at time of attack. Also partially darken the stable.

SCRATCHES.—Will you tell me what to do for a horse with the "scratches," and is there any cure for them? My horse bites himself until his legs bleed and the next morning the legs are swollen and the hair comes off in little patches. Is the disease catching to other horses or animals? W. M.

A.—The term "scratches" is applied to a chapped or sore condition of the skin at the back of a horse's legs just above the heels and below the fetlocks. When the skin disease exists above the fetlocks it may be grease mange, mud fever or possibly farcy the skin form of glanders. The latter disease is malignant and incurable. Better have a veterinarian determine what is wrong. For ordinary scratches and leg mange a mixture of four ounces of sulphur, four ounces of oil of tar and one pound of melted unsalted lard well rubbed in every three days will be likely to prove curative.

BLOODY MILK.—Please tell me the cause and what to do for a cow with bloody milk. One of the teats gives bloody milk. She does not appear to be sick. She has no calf. Mrs. E. G.

A.—By rolling the teat between the thumb and fingers you may be able to feel a growth which bleeds from irritation at milking time. If the growth is just inside the opening of the teat a veterinarian could remove it by operating. If it is high up it would be better to let a calf nurse or to dry off the milk secretion in that quarter. When sudden bleeding is due to a blow or other injury it may quickly subside, especially if the quarter is bathed two or three times daily with cold water and vinegar and a teaspoonful of powdered copperas and three of salt is mixed in the evening feed. When due to an attack of garget and chronic, there is no cure, the milk is unfit for use and that quarter should be "dried off."

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 9.)

ways wanted to live in a mountainous country. I just love mountains and I would love to climb them. I have none to climb here.

So you don't like bobbed hair, Uncle? It quite amuses me to hear you men give your opinion. If you men had to wear long hair a few days, you would soon advise all women to bob it. Men don't know anything at all about it, but they think they do. I think I will bob mine some day. My hair is awfully thick. My younger sister and I are just crazy to bob our hair, but our older sisters do not like it, neither does our mother. Yet after they got used to it I believe they would think it all right.

Well, I think I had better ring off. This long letter would make a good meal for Billy, but I hope he doesn't get it.

A COMFORT cousin, ALICE INEZ VINCENT.

Alice, I'm not going to say a word against Spofford if you don't want me to, and if so many nasty people have already said unkind things about the town you like so much. I am sure I can agree with you that "some of the best people on earth" live in Spofford. But, Alice, it fortunately happens that this is true of every place on the round globe. There are best and worst folks in all towns, and all we can do is to try and make the best more, and the worst more few.

You say it is "interesting" to have everybody know everybody else's business the way they can do in a small village like Spofford, Alice Inez. Well I'll say it is, sometimes. But it often depends in its enjoyable interest upon who does the knowing and who gets known! I've seen many towns where folks didn't feel happy at having their doings so well known up and down Main Street and around the Spofford Garage, so to speak. However these fo'ks were usually not among the "best people on earth."

Yes, Alice, mainly our life is what we make it and we really don't have to have it as blue as it seems to become for some indigo dwellers in Spofford and elsewhere. Good hard work and doing something for somebody else are both cures for the blues, as perhaps you know. And looking up at God's blue sky is another remedy—on the principle that like cures like!

Alice, in spite of what you say about men bobbing their hair, I am not going to bob mine—although I could do it easily and neatly with a pair of manicure scissors and a two-inch mirror.

BLACK MOUNTAIN, BOX 17, NO. CAROLINA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Have you just a small corner in your department to spare for this letter? I am just another one of the lonely ones knocking at your door and seeking to join your happy circle. I have been in this part of the country only a short time (about eight months), and haven't as yet made the acquaintance of more than a half-dozen people. My home town and my friends are several hundred miles away from here. I was born and raised in Chicago, the Windy City, but I got tired of its noise and soot, so I came down here for a rest and a change of air.

This is a wonderful scenic country. I have never seen such beautiful scenery anywhere. I will try to describe its beauty, but I know beforehand that I cannot do it justice. Even a poet would find it a hard task. We are in a valley two miles east of the town and are completely surrounded by mountains. To the west looms the Garden of Eden, the Beach Tree and Old Saddleback. The Garden of Eden is the prettiest mountain of the three and is almost entirely covered with pine and spruce. The other two peaks are just what their names imply. To the north is Black Mountain, from which the town takes its name. To the south is the best of them all: The Craggies, with their big ragged peaks jutting into the sky. I think the mountains look most beautiful on the evening when they seem to be shrouded in blue haze through which they loom mysteriously. As I sit in the evening looking at the mountains, I begin to think how small and tawdry the man-made skyscrapers of the city are compared to nature's own.

Now I think I'll describe myself so you'll all know what I look like: I am a young man, twenty-two years old; five feet, nine and a half inches tall, in my stocking feet, and with gray-blue eyes and wavy blonde hair.

I hope that Billy will let this pass and that some of the cousins will write to me.

Your lonely nephew-cousin, ERNEST A. FOX.

Why, of course, Ernest, we've got a corner for you and I am delighted to start you in on our course for the Cure of Lonelies. If you know only six people in North Carolina, you will soon know over six hundred throughout the other forty-seven states where our League spreads its Family fold and broad smile.

I like mountains just as much as you do, Ernest, and in this month of August I will be able to look at them and love them just as you are doing. But I will not have so many or so high ones about me as your fortunate and highland state can boast. Once, in New York, my nearest peak was the U. S. Rubber building—one of those man-made skyscrapers you mention. It was not very satisfactory as a mountain, its only advantage being that it could be climbed by elevator. New York has quite a fair-sized range of Commercial Alps—the Woolworth building—sort o' built of dimes and nickels!—is 792 feet high, the Metropolitan is 700, and the Equitable towers up 487. These seem the higher to me now that a friend, just back from Europe, tells me that in Paris there is no building higher than 65 feet! Perhaps it is a good idea for European countries to keep their buildings low when aircraft and heavy bombing places are developing so rapidly in ambitious army circles. Buildings 65 feet high will not make nearly as big ruins as 650 ones! It is a satisfaction to know that aircraft of the future will have a hard time reducing your Craggies or Saddleback, Ernest. Man can destroy what man has made, and he has been doing this quite consistently and skillfully down the centuries, but when he tackles the work and the plan of God, it becomes quite a different matter. Yet there's a time coming, Ernest, when man will come to know it is better to work with God than against him. Then our world can grow to new and permanent beauty—as promising as a sunrise, as beautiful as the pines and redwoods, as firmly founded as your Craggies.

"HARRISON, R.3, HEDGEGROW FARM," ARK.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

I have been reading the cousins' letters and thought I would like to chat a while. My home is in the beautiful Ozarks. We live on a farm of 140 acres, four and a half miles from Harrison, the county seat of Boone county. Papa is a railroad man and works at Harrison. Brother manages the farm. Mother and I care for our Jersey cows, chickens, turkies, etc. We have a thirty-acre apple orchard which was lovely this spring when it was in bloom. The pears, cherries and peaches here budded early and were killed by the late cold weather of the spring:

"With a whistling wind that shrieked and shrilled,
It swept the county and the fruit was killed.
Yes, the fruit was froze and as stiff as starch,
On that day of the blizzard, the eighteenth of March!"

Maybe you are wondering what I look like, so here I am: Fair complexion, brown hair, violet blue eyes, fourteen years old.

We love COMFORT very much. Our family have been continous subscribers for thirty-one years. Uncle Lisha, I hope you will print this.

Love to all, FRANKIE D. JONES.

Frankie, I like the name of your farm. All farms should be named. Every single one has individuality of climate, location or product which can make it more than just "the farm." To christen the home acres appropriately is to make them more real and loveable and symbolize them as a little dearer place to live. But the right sort of a name must be chosen. I once knew a Nebraska farmer who chose to call his place "Suspender Flats." He said it was sure flat and always more or less covered with suspenders.

Because I have such a mouth for fruit Frankie, I was the more sorry to hear of your trees being blighted by the frosty fingers of the late and chilly spring. Perhaps you can make a deal and all some of that fruit frozen "as stiff as starch" some soda fountain man who specializes in fruit sundæs. Frozen peaches go good with ice cream! Frank, I hope the Hedgegrow Farm will never be hit by such a freeze again during the next 31 years that your folks are COMFORT subscribers and that you sit out under the apple trees, reading the Cousins' letters while thirty acres of blossoms drip in soft fragrance on your brown hair. Can't you sell all those falling and wasting petals to some mattress factory, Frankie? Think of sleeping on an apple blossom mattress! Oh, boy! That would be the cat's snores, all right, all right!

KINGSPORT, 920 DALE ST., TENNESSEE.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Here is a letter from among the hills of sunny east Tennessee. I am a boy of sixteen years of age, expecting to be seventeen in August. I am five feet, six inches tall; have blue eyes, brown hair, and weigh about 130 pounds. I am a sophomore in high school. My home is in Kyles Ford, Tennessee. I am here going to school. I have been here about three months and will stay two months longer. I would like to hear from all the cousins who care to write to me.

I study every night until about twelve o'clock. I burn a whole lot of what is called the midnight oil, but I make good grades all the time. I am just through taking monthly exams.

Well, I will ring off this time as it is late. If any of the cousins write, will they please address me at my home, Kyles Ford, Tennessee?

Sincerely, RAY W ROGERS.

Ray, midnight oil, like elbow grease, is a commodity well worth buying and using. Unfortunately few places keep these things in stock, and they are certain never to be found for sale at local stores, barber shops or pool rooms. Often one can make his own midnight oil by boiling down a few pounds of perseverance and mixing with a little perspiration and push. Midnight oil, Ray, has given forth the brightest light this old world has ever seen. Wise men have always known this and insisted on burning it in preference to any easier and more artificial light obtained by pressing a button. Keep on using your precious product, Ray, and use the gleam you gain to keep your path clear on the up grade. You'll never be sorry you used this way of gaining light on the Road of Life—which always stretches ahead a little dim and unknown when one "is sixteen and expecting to be seventeen." Ray, my birthday is in August, too, and I am expecting to be.....

WEST WRIGHTSTOWN, WISCONSIN.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Hello, folks! Here comes a letter from one of the best states in the Union—the Badger State. I have never traveled beyond the boundaries of Wisconsin. My motto has always been: "See Wisconsin First." So I'm going to tell you what I have learned about my state. The surface of Wisconsin is generally a great rolling plain. A low height of land extends through the state, north and south, a little east of the center and at a point about thirty miles south of Lake Superior. At this point it meets another elevation extending east and west. The Wisconsin River, which flows through the central part of the state, is the largest river wholly within the state boundaries. Through a part of its course this river has cut its way through the sand stone bluffs forming The Dalles, noted for their scenic beauty. In the southeastern, north central and northern parts of the state are numerous lakes which are favorite resorts for summer residents, and also for hunters and fishermen. The largest of these lakes is Lake Winnebago which is twenty miles south of Wrightstown.

Large numbers of cattle, horses and swine are raised every year in Wisconsin, and as a dairy state it is one of the foremost in the United States. In recent years the manufacturing industries have developed with remarkable rapidity. The most important of these is the manufacture of lumber, and in lumber and timber products Wisconsin is a leading state.

Milwaukee is the chief center of trade on Lake Michigan and for the state at large, while Superior is the chief commercial city for the northwestern part of the state. Wisconsin also leads in the production of iron ore, the mines being located along the Menominee River valley and in the Gogebic range in the north. In the southwestern part of the state are important deposits of lead and zinc, and granite is found in the central portion. Not least of all, Wisconsin maintains one of the best school systems in the Union.

Just a few more paragraphs and I will skiddoo! I graduated from my home town high school in 1921. The following year I entered a training school for nurses at Racine. I was there but one year when I became ill. I am still convalescing from that illness and will continue to be a convalescent for a number of years. When I get well I am going to finish my training and specialize in surgery. I like my work so well that I get lonesome for it. I am not allowed to have many visitors, so all I do to pass the time is to read and build air castles. I enjoy reading good books very much. I would like to hear from all the cousins that care to write. I will answer as many as I can, for I have oodles of time all my own to make pen replies.

I am five feet, seven inches tall; have brown hair, blue eyes, and suntanned cheeks plus a few freckles. My age is "over eighteen." I am not twenty-one yet, so guess!

With heaps of love to all the cousins—but keep most of it for yourself, Uncle Lisha, I am

Your lonesome Wisconsin niece and cousin, NELLIE VAN HOOF.

Nellie, the Badger State is all right! You have lakes, woods and Holsteins—all good things. Your lakes can remain the same in number, your Jersey and Holstein milk fountains may increase, but your forests, alas, are dwindling and have dwindled. This is an old and sad story, Nellie, that of the destruction and waste of our country's great woodlands. A century ago it was Maine and the other states of New England that turned out the most of our lumber. Today thirty per cent. of the lumber used in New England must be shipped in. When New England and the states of New York and Pennsylvania began to fail as bases of supply, the lake states—your Wisconsin and Michigan and Minnesota—began to echo to the sound of the axe, and the trees fell! By 1870, Wisconsin and Michigan had captured the lumber supremacy of the U. S. The forests melted away. In particular the vast quantities of white pine were soon drained. You can know how clean was the sweep of pine lumber, when I tell you that today your Badger State produces less white pine than is cut annually in the old and much-lumbered states of Maine and New Hampshire. The last stand of our forests—a last stand in more senses than one—is on the Pacific coast. At the edge of the ocean axe and saw must cease. No tall green tops tower above the waves. Yet by the end of ten or twelve years the big forests of the Pacific coast states will have been stripped of their most and best. Then we will all write long articles, draw long faces, adopt expensive policies framed by expensive commissions—and begin re-forestation on a scale little imagined now. But at present we keep a heavy duty on Canadian lumber—and cut our own trees four times as fast as they grow!

I'm sorry you are ill, Nellie, but glad you are a cheerful convalescent with work you like awaiting your recovery. When we like our work, our work likes us, and things move smoothly and well along the grooves of the duties of the days.

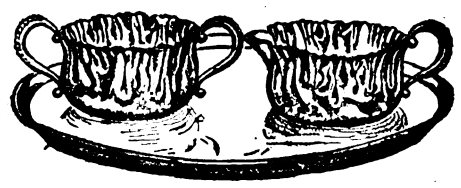
MARSHALLVILLE, GEORGIA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Oh, how I would have liked it if you could have been with us March 22nd! We enjoyed a large fete called the big Peach Festival. Of course you might know I live in the largest peach belt of the country. The festival was staged at Fort Valley, Georgia. We had a barbecue and a big pageant. There were 25,000 visitors.

I live on a large peach farm of several thousand acres of nothing but peach trees. They are beautiful when in bloom—just a solid mass of pink and very pleasing to the eye.

We have been working for a new county in Georgia. We are going to name it Peach County. As it was opposed in the state, we voted, and we lost our county, but in two years we expect to try again. I would thank every cousin in Georgia if they would all cast votes in favor of Peach County.



Next time I write I will describe myself. I would appreciate and answer every letter sent to me. With lots of love,

Your cousin, NELLIE HOLLEY.

Thanks for wanting us at your Peach Festival, Nellie. Well, I know that Bill and I would have been glad to have been there, particularly Bill. Think of the Peach Barbecue! Baked peaches are WONDERFUL! With ladies of CREAM! I suppose you barbecued some nice plump 900 pound peach and sliced him up afterwards. Nellie, to live in a peach belt is nice, but I like my peaches under my belt. Anyway I think you must be having a peach of a life, dwelling amid thousands of acres of peach trees and having peach pie three meals a day. If you don't send me an advance invitation to your next year's Festival I shall never forgive you. What good does it do me to hear about it now in August? All I can do is chew on a

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 34.)

Sugar, Creamer And Tray

MADE of "crushed" silver—the very latest idea. Sugar, Creamer and Tray are full standard size. The Tray is quadruple silver plated and both Sugar and Creamer are quadruple silver plated outside and gold lined inside. A very useful set and a beautiful ornament for the dining table or sideboard.

CLUB OFFER. We will send you this Crushed Silver Set free and prepaid for four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each. Reward No. 7904.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Comfort's Bedtime Stories
For Little Folks

20 WONDERFUL TALES In Story And Verse 20

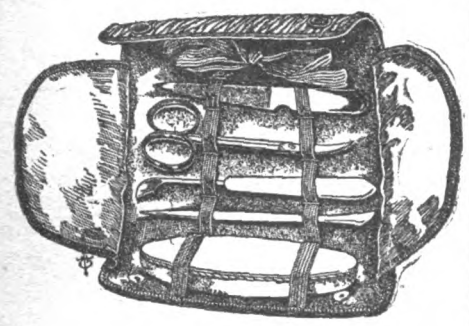
TWO complete libraries of cute little books for the children, including many of the old-time favorites as well as newer and later stories. Library No. 7951 consists of Robinson Crusoe, Little Red Riding Hood, Cinderella, Mother Goose, Animal Pets, Playmates, The Three Bears, The Sleeping Beauty, Playful Pets, Tickle Mouse, Vol. 1. Library No. 7991 consists of Land of Tulips, Our Farm Yard, Our Country, Happy Days, Story of Santa Claus, Chums, Tickle Mouse, Vol. 2; In the Jungle, Tickle Mouse, Vol. 3; The Big League. Each book is 4x5¼ inches in size, printed in large clear type and contains five beautiful full-page illustrations in colors.

Given To You! We will send you either Library of 10 Books free and prepaid for one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, or both Libraries (20 Books) for two one-year subscriptions at 50 cents each. Please mention number of Libraries wanted.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Only One Subscription Brings This Big Pencil Set



For everyday school use this compact, brightly colored leatherette case contains an especially useful writing and drawing assortment. Each box contains the following pencils: 1 Flashlight, 1 National, 1 Mongol, each 7 inches or more in length; 1 Double pencil, really two pencils in one; 1 pen and 1 penholder, and 1 soft rubber eraser. The entire assortment fits into neat compartments and is held securely in place by the patent snap clasps on the flaps. For one subscription this set represents a big, big value.

Given To You! For only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, we will send you this Pencil Set free and postpaid. Reward No. 8881.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

French Ivory Manicure Set

In A Roll-Up Leather Case

Given For A Club Of Four!

A PRACTICAL and beautiful Set, containing everything necessary for the proper care of the nails. It consists of a 5-inch flexible polished steel nail file, a pair of 3½-inch polished steel curved nail scissors, a 4-inch cuticle knife with French Ivory handle, a 4-inch French Ivory nail stick, and a 4½-inch nail polisher or buffer with French Ivory Top. All these articles are neatly contained in a moire-lined, genuine leather case, measuring 5½ inches wide and 6 inches from end to end when opened. The case rolls up as shown in illustration, and fastens with two snap clasps. In this form it resembles a miniature pocketbook, and is just as convenient to carry, as it measures only 5½x2 inches and only 1 inch in thickness.

Although we offer this Manicure Set for an unusually small club, please understand that each and every piece is strictly high grade and regulation size. We know that every woman and girl who accepts this offer and earns one of these splendid Sets will be more than delighted with it. It is free on the terms of the following offer.

Given To You! For four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you this splendid French Ivory Manicure Set in a roll-up leather case free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No.8124.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

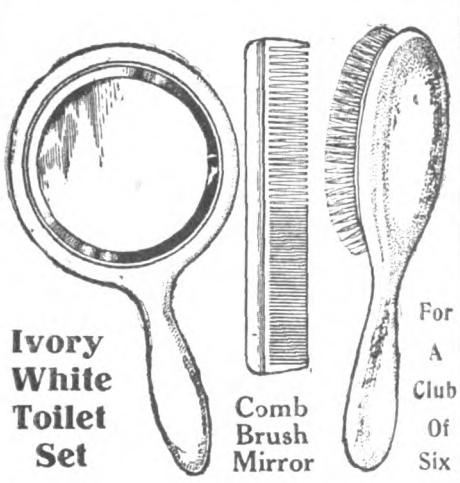
Shaggy Teddy Bear

Gift No. 9992—For 2 Subscriptions.

When the man who buys COMFORT's gifts went to market this spring to get his annual stock of Teddy Bears the manufacturers told him that all the Teddy Bears had been sold and that if he wanted any he would have to pay twice as much as he ever did before.

This wasn't very good news to COMFORT's buyer because he realized how many hundreds and hundreds of COMFORT's boys and girls would be disappointed by the failure to supply dear, happy, old Teddy.

But COMFORT's buyer said "We will get the Teddy Bears somehow." We are not going to disappoint a single boy or girl in the big COMFORT family if we can positively help it.



So after a good deal of hustling and hunting the buyer found a manufacturer in New York who knew how to make real, shaggy, lovable Teddy Bears. But the price was terribly high. The manufacturer said, "My Teddy Bears are not to be compared with bears from other factories. Look at this shaggy fur, see how well sewed they are and notice how natural and lifelike the arms, legs and face are. And just look at those sparkling, shiny eyes. Did you ever see a better made bear?" The man from COMFORT had to agree that it was the finest Teddy Bear he had ever seen.

Finally after a great deal of persuasion the manufacturer said; "Well, if you will buy the Teddies now"—that was last April—"I'll let you have them so that you can still offer them to COMFORT's subscribers for only two subscriptions."

So we are ready to supply the finest, cutest, most lovable 10-inch Teddy that ever came to play with a little boy or girl. You will be delighted with this handsome fellow.

Given To You! For two one-year subscription to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you one of the fine, shaggy Teddy Bears free and postpaid. Reward No. 9992.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Ivory White Toilet Set

Comb Brush Mirror

For A Club Of Six

PURE white, with a fine smooth finish, this handsome Comb, Brush and Mirror Set equals in appearance the finest French Ivory. The Comb is 7 1-2 inches long, very light and dainty, with both coarse and fine teeth. The Brush is 10 inches long and 2½ inches wide, with medium-length, finest, stiff bristles. The Mirror, which measures 10x5½ inches, is made of heavy, flawless, beveled French glass, 4½ inches in diameter.

No lady could wish for a finer Toilet Set than this one. It has the air of refinement found in the highest grade Ivory Sets, it is just as durable and can be cleaned as often as desired without injury to its smooth ivory white finish.

We will give you, free, this fine Ivory White Comb, Brush and Mirror Set in a fitted box upon the terms of the following special offer.

Given To You! For six one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each, we will send you this Comb, Brush and Mirror Set in a fitted box, free, by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 7796.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Queen Bess

Handsome 13-inch dressed doll

For only Two Subscriptions

Gift No. 1822.

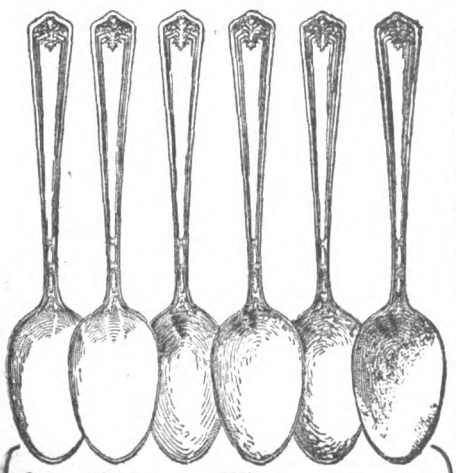
Oh what a big beautiful doll! That was our exclamation when first we saw her queenly loveliness peeking from the big box in which she came.

And that will be what you'll exclaim, too, when you see her and place her in the loving embrace of your child. What child could resist the endearing charms of such a beautiful queen of toyland!

Thirteen inches she stands and no bridesmaid dressed for the wedding day ever looked more entrancing. We wish our artist could illustrate more accurately the handsome dress of crepe-de-chene with its cute lace yoke and soft, blue sash.

But you can perhaps picture in your mind's eye the dress and can imagine a face as sweet and refreshing as a morning in June and with a rosy flush on the round, full cheeks as dainty as the first gentle hint of dawn. And such handsome teeth! Like glistening pearls between Cupid lips of rosy red.

Eyes that open and close with as dreamy blue as the azure depths of the heavens.



Hair—light brown—almost golden—and soft and fluffy as fine silk. It falls back from her forehead in long flowing curls that reach half way down her back.

Crowning her golden tresses is a dainty bonnet of straw in which is a bright feather entwined at a coquettish angle.

Send for this doll today and let your child have the pleasure of her company enthroned among the most treasured possessions of her playroom.

Given To You! If you will send us only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each we will send you this beautiful Queen Bess Doll free and postpaid. Reward No. 1822.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Six Silver Teaspoons

The Ever Popular "Avon" Design

BY buying in large quantities we are enabled to offer our readers this handsome set of six teaspoons for the ridiculously small club mentioned below. They are six inches long, made of pure nickel-silver, so there is no brass to show through, and they will never have that dingy or tarnished appearance even after years of constant use. The design is the beautiful "Avon" deeply embossed on the handles.

The rich design and splendid wearing qualities of these teaspoons combine to make this the most attractive premium offered in years. Our illustration does not do them justice. They must be seen to be appreciated. We know they will exceed your highest expectations.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you six of these fine Nickel-Silver Teaspoons free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 9682.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Superb Shaving Set

Safety Razor, 3 Blades, Mennen's Shaving Cream and Powder—All for Two Subscriptions. Gift No. 1712.

Men who shave and who have to repeat that more or less torturous operation 365 times a year will smile with glowing satisfaction when they read how easy it is to obtain this superb shaving set. (Women, you owe it to your husbands to show them this ad.) See that razor, men. It's the he-man's safety razor, the same style of razor that has hoed the stubble off millions of rough and jagged chins and left them clean, smooth and velvety. Every man in the world, most, knows this razor. And there are the blades—3 of them—all ready for business. To load up, simply slip a blade over the prongs on the bottom plate, drop on the safety slide and tighten up the handle. A slight twist of the handle gives you any desired adjustment. When you need new blades ask for Gillettes. They will fit and shave equally well.

Mennen's Cream adds comfort to your shave. Just to make the razor's job more pleasant for you men folks we are including a tube of Mennen's famous shaving cream.

Every razor needs a little beard softening. Mennen's is the choice of millions of men. It's the kind that does not need any mussy rubbing in with the fingers. This wonderful cream works equally well with hot or cold water—soft or hard. The lather does not dry on the face but whips up instantly with a firm, creamy, moist mass of beard softening foam. There's cream enough for a month of the smoothest, quickest, most refreshing shaves a man ever enjoyed.

Finally in our offer there are two close filled cans of Mennen powder, one with talcum for men, another of Kora-Konia, a cool, soothing antiseptic powder for tender skins.

Given To You! For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send you free and prepaid this shaving set with extra razor blades and two boxes of powder. Reward No. 1712.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

The Family Doctor

The remedies and advice here given are intended only for simple cases; serious should be taken to your local doctor. ress, The Family Doctor, COMFORT, sta, Maine. Sign your true name and give address. Name will not be published.

s. E. N., Maynardville, Tenn.—Maybe your en- rouble is due to your floating kidney. Better have an abdominal support, or be operated on, is condition.

s. T. H L., Pleasant Hill, Ill.—You must have catarrhal condition. Spray the nose three times with Dobell's solution (2) Also bathe the with a saturated solution of boric acid—use lution cold.

s. H. A. K., Burns, Col.—You probably have a ic rheumatic condition. Bathe the swollen parts aturated solution of Epsom salts and keep them ith this solution during the day and night as well. five drops of a saturated solution of iodide of po- m well diluted and avoid sweets and pastries of ds. Drink plenty of water.

s. L M DeWitt, Ark.—For gall-stones one of the remedies is a preparation known as Holadin. one capsule after meals and with your meals eat f salad-oil. Of course avoid sweets and pastries kinds.

. A. B G., Cameron, N. C.—The condition is un- edly a traumatic cataract. An operation will e it The spots in the other eye may be due to too much meat, eggs etc Glasses are not indi- until you have an operation.

s. J. L. M., Wattensaw, Ark.—Fats of all kinds t are indicated in tubercular conditions.

s. R. E. S., Montrose, Neb.—You may have a e fibroid tumor Be examined and if this is the ave the uterus removed with growth.

ss J J., Goodwin Ark.—Have the mole removed e of the actual cautery. This is the only sure way s C V., Pine City, Minn.—If the gall-stones are and obstructive, operation is the only cure If are small, sometimes avoidance of sweets of all including pastries and taking a preparation n as Holadin will effect a cure. Take two cap- after meals.

s. C. W. M., Temple, Texas —Your laceration ther conditions due to the laceration are the cause ur sterility at this time. Be operated on and have arts restored to normal and you will no doubt be- pregnant again.

s. F. P. C., Chamita, New Mexico.—For the e take after meals for some time five drops of a ated solution of the iodide of potassium well, d. Avoid meats and eggs.

s D. E. O. Bald Knob, Ark.—Take for the sour ach, one bicarbonate of soda compound tablet meals.

s. J. B., Huron, South Dak.—The backache is ably due to some unrepaired laceration of the is. Be examined, and if this is the case, have the restored by operation at once.

rs. F. L., Dallas, Texas.—Have the last rupture operated on at once and after the child is cured, a properly fitted belt worn for some time to aid the minal muscles and prevent reoccurrence of the ire, or ruptures, again.

rs. H R. B., Bolton Center, Conn.—Try, for your ic constipation, two teaspoonfuls of cascara da, fluid extract, morning and night. Also with meals take a tablespoonful of American Oil.

rs. C. W R., LeRoy, Minn.—You are somewhat weight and should avoid sweets of all kinds as well astries. (2) Take after meals, for the cough, a oonful of Pertussin.

rs. H. E. H., Gassville, Ark.—You are nervous. after meals a five-grain pill of asafetida. Avoid ts of all kinds. For the nasal condition, use Do- solution as a spray.

rs. R. P. W., Enid, Okla.—You are in a measure otic and introspective. Try taking a five-grain of asafetida after meals. Also massage the limbs arms before retiring to awaken the circulation and the nerves as well.

r. G. E. S., Necessity, Texas.—A two percent ion of resorcin in equal parts of alcohol and rose- r will cure your dandruff if applied every other to the scalp.

iss H. V. S., Walnut, Neb.—Hodgkins disease is readily cured. You might have your father take meals five drops of a saturated solution of the le of potassium, well diluted. Also have him d meats of all kinds, as well as eggs.

rs F. W., Valier, Ill.—Simply a poor physical dition due to multiple pregnancies. You need a . Take after meals a tablespoonful of Basham's ure well diluted rs. R. E. L., Grafton, Va.—You may have a high d pressure. Take after meals five drops of a sat- ed solution of iodide of potassium well diluted id sweets and pastries of all kinds and keep your els free by use of some good constitutional cathar- such as cascara sagrada in some form.

Irs C. A. H., Clemull, Texas.—You should be ex- ned by your local doctor and find out whether or you have (hernia) rupture. In the meantime can take two teaspoonfuls of Warburg's tincture diluted after meals; as a tonic.

Irs. C. P. K., West Union, Ohio.—Avoid the ex- ive use of the ginger tea and substitute for it a pound bicarbonate of sodium tablet. Take the et after meals

Irs. H. H. M., Creighton, South Dak.—Poor re- a circulation is the cause of the trouble with your her's legs. Have her wear an elastic bandage ing the day, and apply, to the eczematous areas, sar's paste at night.

Irs B. K., Ella Gap, Ga.—You may have a chronic arial condition. Take after meals one teaspoonful Warburg's tincture, well diluted For the womb dition there is no cure outside of operation.

Mrs. G. W. C., Ripley, West Va.—Any druggist get the Lassar's paste for you from some whole- drug house. Have your local druggist send for it.

Mrs. B. F., Grand Locks, North Dak.—Rickets is sed by improper feeding. Give the baby with his als a teaspoonful of lime water.

Miss D. L., Peacock, Texas.—Massage the cheek efully and in time the small scar will disappear.

Mrs A. F. D , Houston, Texas.—Soak the hair in linseed oil over night and, in the morning, wash the oil with some good tar soap; then apply to the ts of the hair a two per cent. solution of resorcin solved in equal parts of alcohol and rose water.

Mrs C. W. A. Goshen, Oregon.—There is no remedy loss of smell. Better consult some good nose spe- list and be treated for the condition of nasal mucous mbrane.

Mrs M. R. S., North Emporia, Va —The enlarge- nt of thyriod gland may be the cause of your many nptoms Take after meals five drop doses well uted of iodide of potassium. Use a saturated solu- n of the iodine. Also avoid meats and eggs.

Miss A. J. S., Yukon, Okla.—You are chronically nstipated. Take morning and night two teaspoon- s of fluid extract of cascara sagrada, well diluted

Miss V. P., Wood, Pa.—You have, may be, a chronic eurisy Take after meals a teaspoonful of pertussin l diluted and live mostly on milk and cereals. You ght also have your chest strapped with adhesive sters to limit motion of chest.

Mrs. G. R., Oak Harbor, Ohio.—Think you and ildren have a chronic malaria. Take after meals a aspoonful of Warburg's tincture well diluted.

Mrs. L. S. T., Gades, S. C.—For your nervousness five-grain pills of asafœtida after meals. Of course t only such foods as are easily digested and agree th you.

Miss N. D., Cairo, Ohio.—If your breasts have ac- al hard lumps and they—the lumps—adhere to the ternal skin, you better have them examined at once. they only swell and enlarge at times you can neglect e condition as functional. For the kidney condition ke after meals, a two-grain tablet of urotropin. You ould drink plenty of good spring water.

Mrs. A. M. G., Muscatine, Iowa.—For your painful ination, take after meals five-grain tablets of uro- opin, and drink plenty of water.

Lucky Thirteen

By Richard G. Swaringen

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

PENELOPE Dare and Jack Stafford had gone to the movies, where they had seen Love conquer a multitude of difficulties and attain unto its own. Now, having returned to Penelope's home, they sat upon a sofa which they had drawn up before a companionable wood fire in the parlor. (Folks still have parlors in our town). Sat there and talked until at length the hour waxed late, and Jack awakened to the realization that a golden opportunity was slipping by. So in an intense voice he said:

"Penelope, as I've told you before, I love you! I ask nothing better than the privilege of devoting the rest of my life to the task of making you happy—which is saying as much as a man can say! For the twelfth time, I ask you, will you be my wife?"

"For the twelfth time," replied Penelope, "my answer is no!"

She said it kindly, for Penelope did not like to see anyone, or anything, suffer. But she also said it firmly. In her tone and manner was no hint of yielding. Penelope was that kind of person. She had the courage of her convictions. She possessed a round determined chin, cleft in the middle; a firm mouth; a slightly turned-up nose; and steady brown eyes. She was nearly as tall as Jack, and somewhat luxuriously upholstered. Jack had often mused on what a joy it would be to hug her warm, beautiful body; but he was careful to keep such musings to himself. For Penelope was not a girl whom one might hug lightly. She weighed a hundred and forty pounds.

Jack's intelligent face grew a shade paler and at least an inch longer, and he heaved an audible sigh. But, after two unsuccessful attempts, he presently succeeded in grinning.

"Now that's to do over again!" he complained humorously. "It's growing monotonous! Well, proposal number thirteen comes next."

"Why don't you quit it, Jack?" Penelope's eyes softened. "You know I'm not worth it. I wish for your sake, that I might return your love."

But even as she said it, Penelope knew that only half of her wished this. The other half was wishing it might have been another man—a certain other man—who was proposing to her.

"I can't quit," Jack said simply. "I have to keep trying as long as there's hope. And there's hope as long as we both live and you're not married or engaged to somebody else."

"I'm sorry!" Penelope's hand rested for a moment on his arm and her face was turned away. Penelope was not one to show emotion easily. When she turned her face toward him again there were tears in her eyes. "I think that is the finest compliment a man could pay a girl. So I suppose I ought to tell you that what you ask for already belongs to another man."

Jack was silent for several minutes; then he said steadily:

"I congratulate him. Do you mind telling me who he is?"

"I'd rather not." Penelope shook her head.

"But if you are going to marry him——"

"I fear I'm not, Jack!" Penelope's eyes looked for an instant like those of some wounded creature. "You see, my love seems to be wasted—like yours. He—he cares for someone else!" The brown eyes wavered; then the long dark lashes descended on cheeks that had grown whiter. Jack saw two tears steal out from under them.

"You poor girl!" he exclaimed compassionately. Apparently he forgot his own disappointment in concern for hers. With an air of brotherly tenderness, he slipped his arm around her waist; drew her head down upon his shoulder. "Poor girl! You know I'm sorry, dear. Just consider me your big brother, and cry all you want to. Tell me as much about your trouble as you like—and as little. I'll help you if I can."

And, availing herself of this permission, Penelope wept upon his shoulder without restraint. She forgot that he, too, was a disappointed lover, and that she was the author of his disappointment; forgot that he was anything but a strong, tender friend. It was very comforting, she realized, to have a broad shoulder upon which to pour out her grief.

She wept quietly, with long quivering sighs. And Jack held her close, feeling for the first time the soft warmth of her in his arms, her hair against his cheek. How different this from the embrace of his dreams! But Jack was not thinking of that. He was grieving for the sorrow of his friend; wondering what he could do to help her.

"Penelope," he said suddenly and rather breathlessly, "I'm going to kiss you!"

Penelope stiffened and raised her head, surprised indignation bringing a momentary forgetfulness of her sorrow. "You are not!" she denied, trying to draw out of his encircling arms.

"I am, too!" declared Jack. And he did, first on one cheek, then on the other, then on the lips.

"You—you beast!" Penelope struggled free and stood before him, magnificent in her wrath. Her cheeks burned poppy-red; her eyes flamed with scorn; her bosom rose and fell like a stormy sea.

"Leave this house at once! And I hope I'll never see you again!"

Jack rose also. His face was pale and sad, but he managed to smile wistfully.

"There's no remedy for grief so sure and quick as anger!" he remarked. "I was only trying to help you. Think it over——Good-by, Penelope!"

He turned and walked to the door, his head up, his steps brisk and even. Without looking back, he opened the door and went out.

But once out in the cold, clear night, he looked up at stars that were brilliantly inscrutable, his mind trying to peer into a future that stretched before him in bleak desolation. Imagination revolted at the task of comtemplating existence without Penelope. Jack found and lit his pipe; then set off to walk until he should feel like going to bed.

Standing where he had left her, Penelope stared fixedly at the door until long after he was gone. She was furiously angry, but already her indignation was beginning to give place to curiosity. What had he meant by those last words, she wondered, her face showing an odd mixture of rage and bewilderment. "There's no remedy for grief so sure and quick as anger," he had said; and now the words clung to her memory with irritating persistence.

At length, frowning more from thought than from anger, she resumed her seat on the sofa. For a long time she sat motionless, staring into the fire. Strangely, she was not thinking of the man she loved. She was thinking of Jack Stafford, his kindness through all the years she had known him, his unvarying honesty, his delicacy of feeling. Surely a girl never had a better friend. . . . But he had kissed her against her will; had insulted her! Her face flamed again at the memory She told herself fiercely that she hated him.

"There's no remedy for grief so sure and quick as anger!" Again his words were in her ears . . . . And at last Penelope knew.

So that was it! He loved her—and yet he had been willing to let her misjudge him, hate him, if by that he could make her forget for a few moments! He loved her so much as that!

"Oh, Jack!" murmured Penelope; and tenderly pressed her hands against the burning cheeks he had kissed. "Dear Jack! Your love is bigger and better than mine!"

Then she fell to wondering if Arnold Gates, the man she loved, would have done such a thing—even for the girl he loved, Ellen Anderson, her own closest friend. And at last, trembling with so many emotions she could not analyze them, she threw herself face downward on the sofa, weeping softly. Though she could not have told whether her tears came more from pity for Jack Stafford or from pity for herself.

After what might have been hours for all Penelope knew to the contrary, there came a faint, insistent knocking on the outer door—repeated many times before the girl heard it and sat up, wondering who could be knocking at that unearthly hour. Never one to be frightened by trifles, she rose and went into the hall, where she switched on the light.

"Penelope!" called a rather plaintive voice from without—a voice which Penelope instantly recognized as that of Mrs. Freda Anderson, who lived in the next house. She opened the door at once. Mrs. Anderson stood shivering on the porch, clad in a long coat, which opened at the throat and revealed a pink kimono underneath.

"Penelope, has your company gone?" she asked hurriedly. "I thought I heard him leaving a while ago; and as your light was still burning, I came over. I want you to go to Ellen. Something has happened——"

"What is it?" Without waiting for an answer, Penelope hurriedly got her coat and switched off the lights in the parlor and hall.

"I don't know what's the matter with her!" Mrs. Anderson almost wept, as they descended the steps and hurried across the two unfenced yards. "She won't tell me all; but it's something about Arnold Gates—I don't know what. Maybe she'll tell you."

At the mention of Arnold Gates' name Penelope's heart seemed to freeze for an instant; then started pounding madly. Her lips trembled so, she was obliged to remain silent for fear of betraying her own emotion.

They reached the Anderson home, and Mrs. Anderson led the way into her daughter's bedroom, a small and plainly furnished room, warmed by a little wood-burning stove in which the fire was almost out.

Ellen, fully dressed, lay face downward across the bed. Her slight, delicately-rounded form was so still that Penelope feared for a moment she was unconscious. After a glance at the worried face of the mother, she went and sat down on the side of the bed; laid her hand softly upon the other girl's blonde head. Ellen seemed to shrink away from her touch.

"Ellen!" she said gently. "What is it, dear?"

The girl moved her head slightly, but made no answer.

"Don't tell me if you'd rather not," Penelope went on softly. "I just wanted you to know I'm here, in case you need me."

"You'll think me a fool, if I tell you!" said a muffled young voice, hot and bitter. "You'll despise me!"

"No, dear." Penelope glanced, in puzzled inquiry, at the mother. But Mrs. Anderson only shook her head helplessly, with tears in her eyes. "I can't despise you, though I may be sorry for you——"

"That's it!" Restlessly the girl turned a bitter face half toward her friend. "I don't want your pity!" Hiding her face again, she began to sob.

"You're so—so strong, Penelope—and good! You could never—You couldn't understand!" she choked out, between sobs that racked her slender form.

"No, dear, I'm not strong—and certainly not good!" Penelope was thinking of how she had driven Jack Stafford away in anger when he was trying to help her. "And you mustn't think you're any weaker or sillier than other people——"

"It's Arnold!" The words burst forth tempestuously. "He's gone!"

"You poor dear!" For a moment a wild hope burned in Penelope's heart, only to be crushed pitilessly. "But he'll come back."

"No! He can't come back!" said Ellen drearily. "He doesn't dare come back! Don't you see? But of course you don't! The law is after him! He's a criminal! And we were going to slip away and get married next week, and come back and surprise everybody. And I love him—I love him so!"

"Darling!" said Penelope. "But it's best—don't you see it is?—for you not to marry him, if what you say is true."

"Oh, I know," moaned the girl. "But that does not seem to make it any easier! It doesn't keep me from loving him!"

Though her own heart was heavy as lead, Penelope gathered the younger girl into her arms and wept with her. Such grief could not be assuaged with words; only tears would suffice.

"He wanted to carry me with him," said Ellen, after a while. "Even after I had read the letter he dropped and discovered he was a fugitive from justice, and accused him to his face—even then he begged me to marry him! He promised on his word of honor that he would carry me away where he wouldn't be known, and would never leave me—his word of honor! But I was afraid to trust him then. And I couldn't bear to leave my home and never come back. So I sent him away . . . . But I love him!"

Such utter selfishness in the man her heart had followed was evil and repulsive to Penelope; and by way of contrast—light against shadow—her thoughts flashed back to Jack Stafford's willingness to sacrifice himself for her. She found herself slipping once more into an uncharted sea of turbulent contending emotions.

"No, dear, you couldn't go with a man like that," she said at last, speaking as one in a dream.

* * * * * * * * * *

It was a brilliant winter morning. The sun had not yet risen, but his beams were gilding the eastern sky, illuminating a frost-whitened earth that would presently flash into jeweled splendor at their touch. People who had slept were arising from their beds, as was evidenced by the plumes of blue smoke pointing from chimneys and flues into the sky; the savory odors of frying bacon and boiling coffee stealing out upon the crisp morning air.

Jack Stafford trudged along the street toward his home, his tired feet stumbling occasionally, his aching muscles registering a protest at every step; for as yet Jack had neither slept nor rested. But, though his over-driven body clamored for repose, his mind was still a caldron of thoughts that would not rest and seared like fire.

Moving softly, Penelope Dare opened the door and let herself out of the house where a young heart was grieving. She, too, had been awake all through the weary night. The tired mother, at Penelope's insistence, had long since retired. Then, after a time, Penelope had persuaded Ellen to allow herself to be undressed and put properly to bed. But every time she spoke of leaving, the girl had burst into fresh paroxysms of sobbing. So Penelope had sat on the bedside all the rest of the night, holding her hand, and only leaving her occasionally to rise and replenish the fire in the little stove. And it was not until the first gray gleams of dawn came fingering at the shutteres that the poor girl at last found slumber and Penelope was free.

So Jack and Penelope met face to face on the sidewalk, and stopped still, and stood regarding each other curiously. In the presence of each there at that hour there was much that was strange to the mind of the other; but neither thought of asking for an explanation. Both their weary brains were too absorbed with thoughts of deeper import. Penelope was the first to break the silence.

"Jack," she said calmly, "It's time for that thirteenth proposal! Will you be my husband?" She looked into his eyes calmly and steadfastly. For it seemed all emotions and other dross had been burned away in the crucible of the night, leaving her mind and heart cool and clear, and filled with a great understanding.

Jack stood trembling for some seconds, until slow comprehension at last penetrated his jaded soul and jerked him back to taut attention.

"You know you have only to say the word, my dear!" he answered simply. "But may I ask why this change of heart? What about the other man—the man you love?" He looked into her eyes searchingly.

"I don't love him, Jack, and never did—really," she replied gravely and humbly. "I thought I did, and was too stubborn to be convinced. It has taken a tragedy to show me my mistake. You believe me, don't you, dear?"

"Yes," said Jack softly, "I believe you."

"Then kiss me again!" said Penelope. "I love you!"

Jack kissed her.

Arm in arm, they slowly and silently walked the few remaining steps to her home, where Penelope mounted to the low porch; then turned to put her hands upon his shoulders and look her love down into his eyes. Taking her cheeks between his palms, Jack drew her lips down to his and kissed her once more.

"The luckiest number in the whole arithmetic is undoubtedly the number thirteen!" said he, with a return of his old gay spirit. And his tired feet were light again as he turned and left her.

Deformities of the Back

Thousands of Remarkable Cases

An old lady, 72 years of age, who suffered for many years and was absolutely helpless, found relief. A man who was helpless, unable to rise from his chair, was riding horseback and playing tennis within a year. A little child, paralyzed, was playing about the house after wearing a Philo Burt Appliance three weeks. We have successfully treated more than 45,000 cases the past 20 years.

30 Days' Trial Free

We will prove its value in your own case. There is no reason why you should not accept our offer. The photographs show how light, cool, elastic and easily adjusted the Philo Burt Appliance is — how different from the old torturous plaster, leather or steel jackets.

Every sufferer with a weakened or deformed spine owes it to himself to investigate thoroughly. Price within reach of all.

Send For Our Free Book.

If you will describe the case it will aid us in giving you definite information at once.

PHILO BURT MFG. CO.
834-S Odd Fellows Temple
JAMESTOWN, N. Y.

"DON'T SHOUT"

"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. 'How?' With the MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but they are invisible. I would not know I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right.

"The Morley Phone for the

DEAF

is to the ears what glasses are to the eyes. Invisible, comfortable, weightless and harmless. Anyone can adjust it." Over one hundred thousand sold. Write for booklet and testimonials

THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 766, 26 S. 15th St., Phila.

Don't Wear a Truss

BE COMFORTABLE—Wear the Brooks Appliance, the modern scientific invention which gives rupture sufferers immediate relief. It has no obnoxious springs or pads. Automatic Air Cushions bind and draw together the broken parts. No salves or plasters. Durable, Cheap. Sent on trial to prove its worth. Beware of imitations. MR. C. E. BROOKS

Look for trade-mark bearing portrait and signature of C. E. Brooks which appears on every Appliance. None other genuine. Full information and booklet sent free in plain, sealed envelope.

BROOKS APPLIANCE CO., 157T State St., Marshall, Mich.

The Bee Cell Supporter

A BOON TO WOMANKIND

Made from the purest, softest rubber. Six cups or faces render misplacement absolutely impossible. Endorsed by the medical profession. Send us $2.50 and we will mail you one postpaid in plain package. Money back if not entirely satisfactory. Write for descriptive circular. It's FREE.

The Bee Cell Co., Dept. 168 White Bldg., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Film-O-Scope

With 125 Moving Picture Views

Almost As Good As A Movie Show

HERE is something as good as a movie show for the children the year round — the wonderful new Film-O-Scope with a powerful magnifying lens — and with it we give you free a big collection of 125 Views from real moving picture films. These views, when looked at through the Scope, are magnified many times and stand out as real and life-like as they appear on the screen in regular moving picture theaters. Leading movie "stars" and scenes from their best pictures are included in the collection and there are no two alike. As one view after another is placed in the Scope and seen through the magnifying lens, one experiences about the same pleasure as that derived from a regular movie show and as the pictures may be repeated as often as desired, they furnish a never-ending, joyful entertainment for the young folks, keeping them amused, instructed, and out of mischief indoors.

Given To You! For only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, we will send you the Film-O-Scope with 125 Moving Picture Views free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 8741.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Through the columns of this department subscribers may have free advice from our eminent legal adviser on all questions of law except divorce matters.

Address Home Lawyer, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published.

C. H., Iowa.—Under the laws of your state, we think the real estate of your husband's first wife upon her death, if she left no will, descended to her children subject to her husband's life estate is one-third of same.

Mrs. P. D., Minnesota.—If the company from which you purchased the device you mention refuses or neglects to return your money upon your return of the goods as provided in your agreement with them, we think it will be necessary for you to sue them for the recovery of your money.

B. P., Kansas.—We can form no opinion as to your sister's rights under the will you mention without an examination of such will, but if she received only a remainder interest in the property we do not think her creditor can get possession of any greater interest, and that a sale of such interest would only entitle the purchaser thereunder to come into possession of the property at the time the life estate therein is terminated; the interest charges on his claim or judgment will, of course, increase the amount of his claim during the time it remains unpaid.

Mrs. J. W., Oklahoma.—If the notes you mention are valid notes, we think the payment of them can be enforced against any property the maker, or his estate may own except such as is exempt by law from levy under execution, we think the rights of creditors except as above stated come before the inheritance rights of the heirs of a descendant's estate

J D H., Tennessee.—We think that if your nephew resold to his father the property previously given him by his father, the property would, upon the father's death, belong to his estate, and your nephew would be entitled to collect as a claim against the estate any unpaid balance of the purchase price; we think, however, you should be careful to see that the records properly reflect the transaction.

Mrs. M. S., Oklahoma.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will, and having a surviving widow and more than one child, his widow, in addition to certain small allowances and homestead rights, if any, would receive one-third of the estate, after payment of debts and expenses, the balance of the estate going to the children in equal shares, the descendant of any deceased child taking their parent's share.

Mrs. G. S. T., Texas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that the signature of the wife is not necessary for the conveyance of the separate property of the husband when such property is the homestead property; we think he can also, during the marriage, convey all community property of the husband and wife, except such as is used as a homestead, without the wife's signature to the deed.

Mrs. E. H., Colorada.—If the boy you mention has always used his stepfather's name, we do not think his marriage under such name would invalidate his marriage.

Mrs. G. W. P., South Carolina.—We think the enforcement of the collection of the money loaned for the man you mention over twenty-one years ago would now be barred by the statute of limitations.

Mrs. A. E. C., Wisconsin.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will, his surviving widow in addition to certain small allowances from the personal property and her homestead rights, if decedent leaves a homestead, would receive dower of a one-third interest for life in the real estate and one-third of the personal estate absolutely except that if there is only one child left and no descendants of a deceased child, in which event she would receive one-half of the personalty. We think it is necessary for the wife to survive her husband to receive inheritance rights in his estate.

Mrs. W. W. M., Michigan.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that the consent of the parents or guardians is necessary for the marriage of females under 18 years of age

Mrs P. A. I., Minnesota.—Under the laws of Montana, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will, and leaving no child nor descendant, his surviving widow would be entitled to receive one-half of his estate after payment of debts and expenses the balance going to his parents, or brothers and sisters, depending upon who is left.

Mrs. Z. K., Missouri.—We think the laws of your state require the consent of parents or guardians for the marriage of females under 18 years of age.

Mrs. E. B., New Jersey.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that real property owned by the husband and wife as tenants by the entirety upon the death of one becomes the sole property of the survivor and can be sold or disposed of by such survivor without the consent of the children of the decedent.

Mrs G. B. S., Florida.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will, and leaving a surviving widow and one child as his only heirs at law and next of kin, his estate would go to such widow and child in equal shares provided the widow within twelve months after the granting of letters of administration by the properly executed document elects to take a child's part in the real estate in place or in lieu o' her dower rights in such real estate.

Mrs. V. N., Tennessee.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that you have no interest in the property formerly owned by your mother, but sold by her during her lifetime.

Mrs G. E. C., Idaho.—We do not think you have any interest in your stepfather's estate unless some provision was made for you by will.

C. P. W., Illinois.—We think your claim for services performed for your parents 27 years ago would now be outlawed. We think that upon the death of your mother without a will, the court would appoint an administrator to administer her estate giving preference to the nearest of kin and a preference to a resident over a non-resident, where the next of kin are of equal degree of relationship; we think if the administrator improperly administers the estate any party in interest can object to his account when the same is filed, or if his conduct warrants such action can petition for his removal and for an accounting and that the questions in dispute will then be tried by the court in such proceeding.

Mrs. H. H. H., Kentucky.—If the will you mention gives you an absolute vested interest in fee in the property you mention, we think you can sell or dispose of same without your children's consent, but if you have only some limited estate in the property you can only dispose of such interest therein; we think an examination of the will would be necessary in order to determine your rights thereunder; we think the use of the words "to her heirs and assigns forever" in such will would indicate that the device was absolute.

Mrs. A. F. C., Oklahoma.—We do not think the father of the illegimate child you mention has any right to the custody or control of such child; we think the mother of the child would be entitled to collect from the father such sums of money as she has loaned him together with interest thereon.

Mrs. J. T W., Pennsylvania.—Under the laws of your state, we do not think a married woman can convey good title to her real estate without her husband's signature to such conveyance, nor do we think she can, by will, bar him from an interest in her estate in case he survives her. (2). We think it would not be wise for you to commence any litigation against your relatives who do not consider your ailments as serious as they seem to you; we think the best methods to reduce flesh is through dieting and exercise.

Mrs. W. A. D., Pennsylvania.—If you have been in default in the payments called for in your contract since 1887, it seems to us that you must have lost all your rights thereunder.

Handsome Stamped Pillow-Top

A DESIGN that will appeal to all lovers of home. A comfortable, old-fashioned farmhouse, the well with the "old oaken bucket," and a cluster of handsome American Beauty roses. The stamping is done in natural colors on tan art crash, 17x21 inches, these colors acting as a guide to the embroiderer. Or, if desired, the whole design may be simply outlined in black. If embroidered, the roses should be worked in red and pink, using the outline stitch for all but the light part, which should be worked solid. The leaves are to be outlined in green, the stems in brown. Work the house, well and surroundings in outline in colors corresponding to those stamped. The words "Home Sweet Home" are to be done in black in solid embroidery and outline stitch. We will send you this handsome stamped pillow-top with back and fringe upon the terms of the following offer:

Given To You For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this Pillow Top with back and fringe free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 9242.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Comfort's Home Lawyer

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 31.)

leathery chunk of California dried peach and dream of your acres and acres of orchard.

I hope you get your Peach County, Nell. Why not call it Peach Shortcake County? I think that would draw more votes—among the cousins, anyway. Some day we may have a president from Peach Shortcake County, Georgia. Why this would be better, even, than getting a Chief Executive from Dade County, Missouri! I'm for Peach Shortcake County, Nellie, and the bigger the county is, the better I'll be pleased.

WELLSTON, OKLAHOMA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Hello, everybody! How would you like to hear from a girl from the wild and woolly state of Oklahoma? Now, Uncle, this is my first letter, so please, old dear, tell that Billy fellow to pick up his walking stick and move off. If he gets this, the first chance I get I'll just naturally "push his face in!"

I've been a reader of COMFORT for a long time and like it fine. What I call a long time is about ten years, although mother was a subscriber long before then. However, at that time I hardly knew the difference between the League of Cousins and a jellyfish. Now remember I said fish and not bean. I live on a ranch about eight miles from a small town that will soon be an oil town. It's a small burg all right, but they surely have the jelly beans there. I don't see where all these girl-hating cousins have reason to talk. I know there are some poor ignorant girls in the world, those silly painted dolls they call flappers, but all the girls are not flappers, so I'm not saying all the boys are jelly beans But, ugh, oh, those jelly beans, with their painted cheeks and lips, pencilled eyebrows, slick hair, velvet breeches and an—an—oh, sweet mamma, pass the mush! Now, come on, girls, let's have your opinion of the jelly beans.

I have bobbed hair, but it's been bobbed ever since I was knee high to a good-sized duck But the hair does not make me a flapper, does it? Anyhow, I'm letting it grow out now.

By the way, cousins, what do you think of the girls who smoke cigarettes? I'd like to see what you think of them. I tell you I think they are bad customers. What's your opinion, Uncle Lisha?

Say, Uncle, you like to ride horses, don't you? I know you do; 'most everyone does You take a few days off and come here and I'll let you ride bronchos to your heart's content. You can go on wolf hunts n'everything. Some cowboys here caught a large gray wolf the other night—the first gray wolf I ever saw in Oklahoma. It sure was pretty.

Well, I guess you think my letter is long enough, so I will close. I would like to hear from some of the cousins or all that care to write. I will answer all that I possibly can. I will not sign my real name, but please just address to Wellston, Oklahoma, R. 1, Box 28, and I will get the letters—that is if they come. I am five feet, one inch tall; have brown curly hair, and was seventeen the eighth of May.

Your loving niece and cousin, PERCY.

Percy, you five foot, bobbed hair scout, I'm glad you brought up this question of jelly beans, and I shall hope to hear full and copious remarks from southern cousins regarding the whyness, whereness and whatness of these candy kids. I call 'em candy kids, because in my kindergarten days jelly beans were a soft, chewy, many-colored, many-flavored bean-shaped confection, marvelously to be purchased at a cent a cup. With a good appetite and if one did not give too many away, all of five cents' worth might be deliciously consumed during a recess period But why a slick-haired young southern youth should be christened after these tiny candies of my school days I cannot imagine. Is it because this variety of southern boy is so soft and sweet, Percy? Surely you ought to know! Question: Why is a jelly bean? and what? Don't all answer at once.

Percy, every girl who smokes a cigarette is not "a bad customer," but she's not as good a customer as if she did not consume these smoke sticks. I'm agin cigarette smoking for my nieces, Pere, and just to show I'm without predjustice in the matter, I'll say I'm agin 'em for nephews, aunts, uncles, mothers, fathers and grandparents

League Shut-in and Mercy Work for August

"Inasmuch as you have done it unto the least of these you have done it unto Me."

Written references from doctor and postmaster must positively accompany all appeals from shut-ins. Every month brings to me many letters which disregard this simple and necessary rule. Appeals unaccompanied by the references required will be destroyed.

Sarah R. Deal, Stuart, Va. A crippled shut-in badly in need of money or clothes. Grateful for past aid, she again asks help. Charles R. Estes, 225 S. Jackson St., Brunswick, Mo. This crippled boy of seventeen, confined to a wheel chair, does not ask financial aid, but does ask for letters from our League members. He's a cherry chap who deserves cheer! Mrs. Mary Denton, Alluwe, Okla. Unable to leave her crippled son, yet this worthy mother is striving to obtain sufficient COMFORT subscriptions to entitle the boy to a wheel chair. She asks our Cousins to aid her in getting COMFORT subscriptions Send the subs direct to COMFORT and in your letter mention that they are to be credited to his wheel-chair account. Mrs. Alice Stacy, Varnell's Station, Ga. An elderly widow with a feeble-minded son, this poor woman struggles with ill health and the battle of a living for both. Send her some real aid and comfort. Mrs. Addie Martin, R. 4, Stuart, Va. Left a widow with a girl of three years and a boy of twenty months, this young mother faces a hard path. She needs a boost of cash and clothes. Lafayette Swanson, R. 2, Box 62, Boomer, N. C. Helpless as a baby for the past twenty years, this shut-in has worn out one wheel chair and hopes to obtain a new one through COMFORT's Wheel-Chair Club. He asks that COMFORT friends help by sending subscriptions for his credit in the Wheel-Chair Club. Mary Dillon, Leaksville, N. C. This helpless woman of 73 years asks for clothes or quilt pieces, also letters of cheer. Mrs. Sallie Fittan, Whitehouse, Ky. A struggling widow with four children; a crippled girl of 18, another girl of 13, a boy of 10, and a little girl of 5. Help of any or all sorts is needed.

None of us could turn away if some needy one spoke in our ear such appeals as are voiced each month is the letters of the shut-in and poverty-burdened members of our League. Remember and imagine as best you can all the background of suffering, only an echo of which is shown by the simple listing of names here. A dime, a dollar, serviceable clothes, a word of cheer,—all these are answers to urgent need. Give and be happy in the giving.

Lovingly,

Uncle Lisha

Comfort's League of Cousins

The League of Cousins was founded as a means of bringing the scattered members of COMFORT'S immense circle of readers into one big, happy family. Its aim is to promote a feeling of kinship and relationship among all readers.

Membership is restricted to COMFORT subscribers and costs fifty-five cents, only five cents more than the regular subscription to COMFORT which is included. The fifty-five cents makes you a member of the League and gives you an attractive League button with the letters "C. L. O. C.," a handsome certificate of membership with your name engrossed thereon, and the privilege of having your name in the letter list, also a paid-in-advance subscription to COMFORT. You continue a League member as long as you keep up your subscription to COMFORT. There are no annual dues, so after you have once joined all you have to do to keep in good standing is to keep your subscription to COMFORT paid up.

How to become a Member

Send fifty-five cents to COMFORT'S Subscription Department, Augusta, Maine, with your request to be admitted into COMFORT'S LEAGUE OF COUSINS, and you will at once receive the League button and your membership certificate and number; you will also receive COMFORT for one year if you are a new subscriber; but if you are already a subscriber your subscription will be renewed or extended one full year beyond date of expiration.

The League numbering over forty thousand members, undoubtedly is the greatest society of young people on earth.

Address all letters to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and they will promptly reach the head of the department for which they are intended.

Alicia Mary Goes A'Hinting

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 24.)

seem disposed to go away; on the contrary, he remained right where he was, and he and Miss Anne Lyman talked and laughed so fast that Alicia Mary felt they had forgotten all about her. She stirred uneasily. She must do something desperate and do it right away.

She pinched Miss Lyman gently to attract her attention.

"What is it, dear?"

"You've got three pretty hats and Miss George has two pretty hats and my mother hasn't got any," said Alicia Mary.

"Great suffering cats!" exclaimed the young man, and then he leaned his head against the post and laughed so hard that he choked.

But Miss Anne Lyman didn't laugh at all. She slipped her hand under Alicia Mary's chin and smiled at her.

"Tell me about it," she said.

"Are you invited to the Woman's Club Reception?" asked Alicia Mary.

"No," said Miss Lyman. "I'm not invited."

Alicia Mary drew a breath of relief.

"My mother is," she said, "but she isn't going. Mrs. Wardwell's got lots of pretty dresses but she's got a sprained ankle so she can't go; and you've got lots of pretty hats, but you're not invited so you can't go; and my mother is invited but she hasn't any hat so she can't go."

At this the young man choked harder than ever.

But Miss Anne Lyman didn't seem at all concerned. She never even looked at him. She was silent a moment, then she said, "Alicia Mary, do you know that right up in my room there is just the sweetest hat that a cousin of mine sent to me and I can't wear it because it's too small for me! But I think it would be just right for your mother. And if I wrote her a little note and explained about it, I don't believe she would mind wearing it. Would you like to take a note and the box home with you?"

Would she like to? Alicia Mary drew a long, long breath. It was all over now and the dress and the hat were hers. As she started down the steps the young man spoke to her.

"Alicia Mary," he said, "I should like to shake hands with you."

She was rather surprised, but she dutifully shifted Gwendoline and the bandbox to the other arm and gravely placed her hand in his. He looked at her, his eyes twinkling.

"When I get to be president," he said, "I shall appoint you, Alicia Mary ambassador to the court of St. James."

And then he and Miss Anne Lyman both laughed, and Alicia Mary laughed, too, though she didn't know why.

On her way down the street she saw the Colonel riding by in his carriage. At once she dropped her bundles and waved her arms frantically.

"I remembered the note," she screamed, "and she's going."

It was past supper time when she turned in at her gate, and the family were out on the porch.

"Why, Alicia Mary," cried Grandmother Hollis, "where in the world have you been? Joey's been hunting everywhere for you. Run right in and have your supper."

But Alicia Mary stood stock still, her gaze fixed upon her mother, who sat tearfully smiling, holding in her lap a most ravishing cream-colored gown with little embroidered butterflies that seemed to be dancing for very joy.

A peculiar expression flitted across the face of Alicia Mary. She handed her mother the letter and the box.

"Miss Anne Lyman sent it to you," she explained briefly.

Very deliberately she walked into the dining-room, climbed into her chair, and tucked her napkin down her neck. It had been a hard day and she felt that she had earned her reward. She propped up Gwendoline against the teapot and attacked her bowl of bread and milk vigorously. Suddenly she paused, spoon in mid-air and listened intently. Through the open window came the sounds of crumpling tissue paper and cries of delight as the hat was lifted from the box. She looked solemnly at Gwendoline's blue china eye and nodded her head sagely.

"It pays to hint," whispered Alicia Mary.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 28.)

that is a help to me, but have never seen what I am looking for now.

I am troubled with diabetes and would like to do something to cure myself of it.

Do any of the sisters know of a sanitarium where this disease is cured by diet and rest? I have tried lots of different things but nothing helps. It is impossible for me to diet at home and work too. I am a busy farmer's wife but expect to leave the farm this fall and try to regain my health. I'd be willing to go anywhere if I could find a sure cure. We are the same as a great many other farmers, hard up for money so I can't go to any expensive place where you pay more for style than anything else.

I hope someone who has been cured of diabetes will write to me. I get very blue at times. I never feel well and can hardly do my work. It goes undone much more than I would like to have it.

I have no children living. Have had three but they all died at birth. I like to see the baby pictures in COMFORT even if I have none of my own.

I am 27 years old, short and fat with dark hair and blue gray eyes. Jolly if things are halfway right, otherwise I am just human.

A constant reader and friend of COMFORT

Mrs. Harvey Starr.

Springdale, Ark.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

Mrs. C. W. Ridgeway of Logan, Okla., asks this question concerning dancing, "If one girl falls below the moral standard through dancing, is it not possible that many others will?" There are three reasons for the downfall of girls. First, lack of will power; second, a too trusting disposition; third, lack of teaching in sexual matters. There is no more reason why a girl should fall through dancing than through attending any other entertainment or church. According to the number that attend church there are just as many fall that attend church as there are that attend dances. If all

COMFORT'S Emporium of Bargains and Opportunities

AGENTS WANTED

s. We give free suit and pay $5 to $35 ntroduce our fine tailored to order ofits $3 to $12 each sale. No experi- ed. Details free. R. A. Allen, Mgr., een St., Dept. 1825, Chicago.

Patented Article. Nothing like it. etition. Sells on sight. Can use men ien Agents, part or full time. No ce required. Write at once. Dept. 32, roducts, 52 W. Van Buren, Chicago.

oney and Fast Sales. Every Owner ld Initials for his auto. You charge ake $1.35. Ten orders daily easy. Write culars and free samples. American m Co., Dept. 64, East Orange, N. J.

ts—Steady Income. Large manu- of soaps perfumes, toilet articles & d products, etc., wishes representa- each locality. Manufacturer direct to r. Big profits. Honest goods. Whole time. Cash or credit. Send at once culars. American Products Co., 9640 n Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio

Profit:— Easy seller. Kleanrite. clothes without rubbing. Samples free. r Prod. Co., 1947-A Irving Park, Chicago

s Shirts. Easy to sell. Big demand ere. Make $15.00 daily. Undersell Complete line. Exclusive patterns. mples. Chicago Shirt Manufacturers, n & Van Buren, Factory 122, Chicago.

ts—Make a Dollar an Hour. Sell s, a patent patch for instantly mending all utensils. Sample package free. Mfg. Co., Dept. 462-B, Amsterdam, N.Y.

tart You without a Dollar, Soaps, Ex- Perfumes—Toilet Goods. Experience un- ry. Carnation Co., Dept. 131, St. Louis.

ybody uses Extracts. Sell Duo Double h Extracts. Complete line necessities. oday. Duo Co., Dept. E 41, Attica, N.Y.

test Sensation! Eleven Piece Toilet Set selling like blazes at $1.75 with ressmakers shears free to each cus- Spring rush on. Foster Reid Co., slow Bldg., Station C, Chicago.

nts: $100.00 weekly selling established raincoats at $3.95. Season now on. Pay ed. We deliver. Free coats. Hydro at Co., 3510 Polk, Dept 101 Chicago.

e Money silvering mirrors, all kinds knives, spoons, auto headlights. Out- rnished. Free booklet. International atories, Dept. D6, 311 Fifth Ave., New York nts. Men or women. Year round po- No layoffs. Take orders for Jennings uaranteed Hosiery. Must wear and tisfaction or replaced free. Write for Jennings Mfg. Co., Dept. 123, Day- hio.

nts—New Discovery Makes Jelly "Jell." rofits, constant repeater. Sample free. el Company, 807 Grand, St. Joseph, Mo.

loring Agents: Get our proposition. t made-to-measure suits. Lowest prices. st profits for agent. Handsomest swatch utfit in America. Hustlers make $75 to week. Write at once. State experience. erbocker Tailoring Co., Dept. 206, Chicago neral Agents, Something new. Whirl- seller. "Repeat" washing powder. Washes s without rubbing. Women throw away oards. Big Profits. Exclusive territory. today free package. Kittredge Co., 2 m St., Tunkhannock, Pa.

ents: Make 100%, Toilet Articles, mes, Extracts, Home Necessities. Sample Free. LaDerma Co., Dept. H, St. Louis.

) to $50 down starts you on 20, 40, or es near hustling city in Mich: bal. long Write today for big free booklet giving nformation. Swigart Land Co., C1246 Nat'l Bank Bldg., Chicago.

ls Like Hot Cakes; Big Profits; New ng Wax Pad and Asbestos Rest; Clamps l; Perfumes Clothes; Outfit 10c. Yankee , 380 Atlantic Ave., B'klyn, N. Y.

ents! A sale in every home for our beau- Dress Goods, Silks and General Yard s. Quick sales! Big profits! Large book arly 1000 handsome fabric samples fur- d to agents. National Importing & Mfg. Dept. 24X, 573 Broadway, New York.

AGENTS WANTED

$5 to $15 Daily Easy—Introducing New Style Guaranteed Hosiery. Must wear or replaced free. No capital or experience required. Just show samples, write orders. We deliver and collect. Your pay in advance. Outfit furnished all colors grades including silks. Mac-O-Chee Mills Co., Desk 2068, Cincinnati, O.

Sell Madison "Better-Made" Shirts direct from our factory to wearer. No capital or experience required. Easily sold. Big profits. Write for free samples. Madison Mills, 503 Broadway, New York City.

Agents—$15 a day—Easy, quick Sales—Free Auto—Big weekly Bonus—$1.50 premium Free to every customer. Simply show our Beautiful, 7 piece, Solid Aluminum Handle Cutlery Set. Appeals instantly. We deliver and collect. Pay daily. New Era Mfg. Co., 803 Madison St., Dept. 32-Q, Chicago.

Agents Make $10 Daily—Big line guaranteed Extracts, Food Products, Perfumes, Toilet Goods, Household Necessities. No capital or experience needed. Free Sample Case and Instructions. Write for amazing offer. Perkins Products Co., Desk 10, Hastings, Nebr.

Agents—$50 a week taking orders for guaranteed hosiery for men, women and children. Must wear 12 months or replaced free. All styles and finest line of silk hose. Write for sample outfit. Thomas Mfg. Co., Class 219, Dayton, Ohio.

FEMALE HELP WANTED

Big money introducing new style patented sanitary bloomerette. Most comfortable on market. Vulcan, 554-Y 7th Ave., New York.

Earn money at home during spare time painting lamp shades, pillow tops for us. No canvassing. Easy and interesting work. Experience unnecessary. Nileart Company, 2233, Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

Wanted, Women—Girls. Learn Gown Making at home. $35.00 week. Many openings. Learn while earning. Sample lessons free. Write immediately. Franklin Institute, Dept. A501, Rochester, N. Y.

Ladies—$10 to $15 daily possible selling a line of factory priced rubber goods specialties for women direct from manufacturer. Free catalogue. American Rubber Products Co., Dept. 805, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Earn $20 weekly, spare time, at home, addressing, mailing, music, circulars. Send 10c for music, information. American Music Co., 1658 Broadway, Dept. 2-T, N. Y.

Ladies wanted everywhere; opportunity earn money home spare time; particulars for stamp. Eller Company, D-3, 27 Warren St., New York.

Women—Girls, 18 up. Wanted for U. S Government positions. $95—$150 month. Short hours. Steady work. Paid vacation. List positions free. Write today sure. Franklin Institute, Dept, A9, Rochester, N. Y.

Ladies—Earn Money Crocheting, Tatting, making aprons and caps. Material furnished. Patterns and plans 35c. Send remittance now. Returned if desired. Kenwood Pattern Co., 6238 So. Park Ave., Chicago, Ill.

BUSINESS BY MAIL

$25,000. I made it small Mail Order Business. Booklet Free. Tells How Plan 25c Free 12 Articles worth $3. A. C. Scott, Cohoes, N.Y.

Make Big Money, spare time, securing and copying names and mailing music, etc. Send dime for Sample music and information. Keith's Publishing House, Long Branch, N. J.

POST CARD CLUBS

Exchange Letters and Postcards. Either sex. Write Correspondence Club, 1013-89th St., Woodhaven, N. Y. (Stamp).

FEMALE HELP WANTED

Any woman can sell Skat products part or full time to dealers around home. Good commissions paid. Write for particulars. The Skat Company, Hartford, Conn.

AUTOMOBILES

Insyde Tyres inner armor for automobile tires. Prevent punctures and blowouts. Double tire mileage any tires. Tremendous demand. Big profits. Sample and details free. American Accessories Co., B-120, Cincinnati, Ohio.

MALE HELP WANTED

Government needs Railway Mail Clerks, $133 to $192 month. Write for free specimen questions. Columbus Institute, A-82 Columbus, O.

Government Wants Railway Mail Clerks. $132 month. Steady. List positions free. Franklin Institute, Dept. A-12, Rochester, N.Y.

$35 week. Men 15 up. Become Automobile Experts. Earn while learning. Write Franklin Institute, Dept. A410, Rochester, N.Y.

$100 to $300 a Week. Men with slight knowledge of motors who can reach car owners can earn $300 weekly without making a single sale. If they can also make sales their profits may reach $25,000 yearly. Only proposition of its kind ever offered. T. L. Phillips, 1908 Broadway, New York.

Earn up to $400 monthly, living expenses paid. We place men and women; trained in spare time at home for hotel executive positions. Easy Terms. Free Booklet. Stand. Business Training Inst., 299 Carlton Court, Buffalo, N. Y.

HELP WANTED

We Start You In Business, furnishing everything; men and women, $30 to $100 weekly operating our "New System Candy Factories" home anywhere. Booklet free. W. Hillyer Ragsdale, Drawer 5, East Orange, N. J.

$10 daily easily earned, your spare time. Be your own boss, interesting booklet 4c. SW. Laboratories, CasaGrande, Arizona.

Gov't Positions, $1400-$2300 yearly. Many openings. 36-page information booklet free. Chicago Civil Service College, Dept. K, Chicago.

All men, women, boys, girls, 17 to 60, willing to accept Government Positions, $117-$200, traveling or stationary, write, Mr. Osment, 104, St. Louis, immediately.

$6-$18 a dozen decorating pillow tops at home; pleasant work; experience unnecessary; particulars for stamp. Tapestry Paint Co., 104, LaGrange, Ind.

Sell us your spare time. You can earn Fifteen to Fifty dollars weekly writing showcards at home; no canvassing; pleasant profitable profession; easily quickly learned by our simple graphic block system; artistic ability unnecessary. We instruct you and supply work. Wilson Methods, Limited, Dept. 68, Toronto, Canada.

STAMPING NAMES

Stamp Names on key checks. Make $19 per 100. Send 25c for sample and inst. Either Sex. C. Keytag Co., Cohoes, N. Y.

FILM FACTS

Interesting New Movie Paper for stamp. Satiric Pictures, 324 Laughlin Bld'g., Los Angeles.

MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

$35.00 Profit Nightly. Small capital starts you. No experience needed. Our machines are used, endorsed by Govt. institutions. Cat. free. Atlas Moving Picture, 471 Morton Bldg., Chicago.

FARM WANTED

Wanted—To hear from owner of good Farm for sale. State cash price, full particulars. D. F. Bush, Minneapolis, Minn.

ENTERTAINMENTS

338 Screaming Acts, Sketches, Monologs, Parodies, Recitation $2. Complete Minstrel Show $5. Gamble Pub. Co., East Liverpool, O.

PATENT ATTORNEYS

Patents—Write for free Guide Book, and Evidence of Conception Blank. Send model or sketch and description for free opinion of its patentable nature. Highest References. Prompt Service. Reasonable Terms. Victor J. Evans & Co., 641 Ninth, Washington, D. C.

Patents promptly procured. Moderate Fees. Best References. Send Sketch or Model. George P. Kimmel, Master of Patent Law, 27-L, Loan & Trust Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Patents Procured; Trade Marks Registered—A comprehensive, experienced, prompt service for the protection and development of your ideas. Preliminary advice gladly furnished without charge. Booklet of information and form for disclosing idea free on request. Richard B. Owen, 18 Owen Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Inventors—Desiring to secure patent should write for our book, "How To Get Your Patent." Send model or sketch and description for opinion of its patentable nature. Randolph & Co., Dept. 112, Washington, D. C.

Patents—Send for free book. Contains valuable information for inventors. Send sketch of your invention for Free Opinion of its patentable nature. Prompt service. (Twenty years' experience). Talbert & Talbert, 402 McGill Bldg., Washington, D. C.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Become Expert Milliners. Women over 15. $35 week. Big demand. Earn while learning. Illustrated book free. Write today sure. Franklin Institute, Dept. A800, Rochester, N.Y.

Increase Your Family Income knitting socks at home. The way to independence. The Home Profit Knitter is the world's most productive and reliable home knitting machine. Be first in your town. We pay you $1.75 for every dozen pairs, furnish free yarn with each machine and replace yarn used in socks you send us. Enormous demand. Free instruction anywhere. Immediate application necessary. Home Profit Hosiery Co., 838-S. Hudson Avenue, Rochester, New York.

HEMSTITCHING AND PICOTING

Guaranteed Hemstitching and Picoting Attachment. Fits any sewing machine. Makes beautiful work. Literature and testimonials free. $2.00 prepaid or sent C. O. D. LaFlesh Hemstitching Co., Dept D, Sedalia, Mo.

Hemstitching and Picoting Attachment, works perfectly on all sewing machines. Easily adjusted. Price $2.00 prepaid with instructions. Improved, superior in every way. The only attachment that creates good, beautiful, artistic work. Fully guaranteed. Ladies' Art Sales Co., Box 71-G, Hamtramck, Mich.

Our Attachment Fits All Machines $2. with instructions and Special Emb. Needle. C. Rebus Co., Cohoes, N. Y.

STORY WRITERS WANTED

Writers—Attention! Stories, poems, plays, etc., are wanted for publication. Submit Mss. or write Literary Bureau, C8, Hannibal, Mo.

Earn $25 Weekly, writing for newspapers, magazines. Experience unnecessary; details Free. Press Syndicate, 451 St. Louis, Mo.

BABY CHICKS

Baby Chicks: 12 best varieties 8c up. Postpaid and guaranteed. Catalog free. Missouri Chickeries, Bx XC, Clinton, Mo.

WANTED: TO BUY

Cash for old gold, silver, platinum points, diamonds, false teeth, Liberty Bonds, unused stamps, and precious articles. Goods returned immediately if not satisfactory. Busch Products, 144 Fifth Ave., New York.

REMNANTS

Remnant Store, 1510 Vine St., Cincinnati, O. Greatest Dry Goods Bargains on Earth. Agents and Storekeepers supplied.

PHOTOPLAYS, STORIES

Wanted—Men and women ambitious to make money writing Stories and Movie Plays. Send for wonderful Free Book that tells how. Address Authors' Press, Dept. 31, Auburn, N.Y.

$$$ For Ideas. Photoplay Plots accepted any form; revised, criticised, copyrighted, marketed. Advice free. Universal Scenario Corporation, 941 Western Mutual Life Bldg., Los Angeles, California.

FARMS FOR SALE

California has more independent men and women than any other state. Investigate at first hand; go now. Round trip summer excursion fares, on the Santa Fe, until Sept. 30th, limited to Oct. 31st, liberal stopovers. Opportunities in California for the man of moderate means, who desires to establish a home in a delightful country, are better now than ever. Lands reasonable in price; long time payments granted. California State Land Board offers choice twenty acre farms at Ballico, Merced County, on unusual terms. Write us if interested. California folders free. C. L. Seagraves, General Colonization Agent, Santa Fe Ry., 913 Ry. Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

PHOTO FINISHING

Kodak Prints 3c, Developing 5c per roll. This is our regular price. Altine Photo Co., Dept. A, 1982 Kinney Ave., Cincinnati, O.

Better Pictures, We make them. A trial will prove it. Roll developed and six snappy prints 20 cts. The Better Photos Co., Box A, Wallingford, Ky.

First trial offer—Any size kodak film developed and six glossy prints 20c. Cameron Photo Co., C-3418, Burch Ave., Cincinnati, O.

Films developed 5c; Prints 3c each. The new Davo finish. Davis Photo Shop, Dept. C, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Special Trial Offer. Your next Kodak film developed 5c. Prints 2c each. Moser & Son, 2122 St. James Ave., Cincinnati, O.

Special Trial Offer: Any size Kodak film developed for 5c; prints 3c each. Over-night service. Get a Free Auto. Ask for details. Roanoke Photo Finishing Co., 228 Bell Ave., Roanoke, Va.

MISCELLANEOUS

Use Tailor's Mending Tissue to mend your garments. Needed in every home. Three yards 25c. The A. Bauer Co., 3 Arcade, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Portraits, photo pillow tops, frames, sheet pictures, medallions, merchants' signs, waterproof and tea aprons, silk and wool hose. Catalog 50 specialties free. 30 days credit. Jas. C. Bailey Co., Desk K8, Chicago.

Free—Handy Nickel Plated bottle opener and big illustrated catalogue on home bottling supplies—accessories. Commercial Sales Co., Dept. A, 219 W. Huron, Chicago.

A $500 Cash Prize is offered to the writer of the best second verse for our future song release "Where Is Your Smile". Those wishing to compete may receive a free copy of song and rules of contest by addressing, Handy Bros. Music Co., 2573 Eighth Ave., New York.

Make money with your camera. We show you how. Write today. Send stamp. AG. Lancaster, Box 967, Los Angeles, Calif.

New Quilts, Spreads, Lunch Sets, etc., designed by Marie Webster. Stamped to make. Circular Free. Practical Patchwork Co., Marion, Ind.

Switches made from combings. The new way. Write for Style Booklet. Mrs. E. Vandervoort, Davenport, Ia.

Rummage Sales make $50.00 daily. We start you. Representatives wanted everywhere. "Wholesale Distributors", Dept. 72 609 Division Street, Chicago.

Broccoli Seed Expensive

vo localities in Oregon, Eugene and enberg, specialize in raising broccoli, winter cauliflower," which belongs he cabbage family. These growers m that the recent rise in price of coli seed from $25 to $32 a pound es it worth three times as much as same weight in silver. The rate of a pound means $2 an ounce. Silver recently quoted at 64 3-8 cents an ce. So tiny are the seeds, and so ily are they injured by moisture, t they are kept in vaults, in safety de- it boxes. It takes two years to pro- e broccoli seed. Although very high rice it is figured that the plants pro- ed from one pound of seed are suffi- nt for eight acres of ground.

ix Wheel Chairs in July

9 Is COMFORT'S Total to Date

he recipients of the six July wheel irs are: Ermalinda Moriconi, Fron- ac, Kansas, 156; Mrs. Augusta Boger, ensboro, N. C., 150; Mrs. Emma M. atherwood, North 3rd St., Ironton, io, 150; Arline Klingaman, Mills, Wyo., Eugene Pinney, Barnsdall, Okla., Mr. E. W. Belfield, Freat Falls, Mont.,

The figures following their respect- names indicate the number of sub- iptions sent in by them or by their ends for them.

Ermalinda Moriconi, age 11, is a help- s cripple, unable to walk or stand and ving little, if any, use of her hands, e to spastic (spasmodic) paralysis.

Mrs Augustus Boger, age 31, has been ippled in her lower limbs the past six ars by spinal rheumatism. This wheel air will be a blessing to her and a help her family in caring for her.

Mrs. Emma M. Leatherwood, age 69, is ippled by broken hip caused by a fall arly a year ago. Because of her age e fractured bone has not knit, and her octor says never will knit. Needless to y that this wheel chair will be a great oon to her.

Arline Klingaman, age 6, suffers from eeping paralysis which came upon her ree years ago and has gradually pro ressed until now she is practically elpless. Her mother writes: "We hope he wheel chair will be a great comfort o her as well as a great help to us."

As yet I have received no information regarding the age or condition of Eugene Pinney or Mrs. E. W. Belfield, nor as to the nature or cause of disability with which they are afflicted.

This award and distribution of six wheel chairs in July is a creditable month's showing for our Wheel-Chair Department, and I appeal to you all to help me to equal or better it in August.

Nearly seven hundred shut-ins have obtained their much-needed wheel chairs through COMFORT which offers the means whereby any needy cripple can obtain a wheel chair free through his own efforts or those of his friends in procuring COMFORT subscriptions.

Sincerely yours,

W. H. GANNETT,

Publisher of COMFORT.

P. S. for the information of our many new subscribers let me explain that for each and every 150 one year subscriptions to COMFORT, at 50 cents each, sent in either singly or in clubs by persons who direct that they are to be credited to COMFORT'S WHEEL CHAIR CLUB instead of claiming the premiums to which they would be entitled, I give a FIRST-CLASS INVALID WHEEL-CHAIR to some needy crippled Shut in and pay the freight, too. It is a large and expensive premium for me to give for that number of subscriptions, but I am always glad to do my part a little faster each month than you do yours.

His Wheel Chair a Comfort and Blessing

Pelham, Ala.

Mr. W. H. Gannett,
Our Kind Friend:

The Comfort wheel chair for my uncle, Oscar Payne, arrived Wednesday, and words cannot express our thanks. We can say it is sure to be a comfort and blessing, for which we thank you again and again. Wishing you success in all your undertakings—may God bless you. Will send picture of Mr. Payne enjoying his wheel chair sometime.

Sincerely,

Mrs. Frank Sillery for Oscar Payne.

Comfort's Roll of Honor

The Roll of Honor comprises the names of those who have sent five or more subscriptions, or a dollar or more in money, to credit of the Wheel-Chair Club during the month previous. Following each name is the number of subscriptions or amount of cash sent.

Mrs. Walter Griswold, Ohio, for Mrs. Emma Leatherwood, 150 subs; Mrs. Emilie Carrier, Kans, for Ermalinda Moriconi, 156; Arline Klingaman, Wyo., for own chair, 130; Mrs. Nauada Riley, N. C., for Mrs. Augusta Borger, 42; Mrs. Emma Branch, N. C., for Mrs. Augusta Borger, 42; Mrs. G. D. Oakes, N. C., for Mrs. Augusta Borger, 42; Mrs. Mary Massey, N. C., for Mrs. Augusta Borger, 21; Mrs. John Tidwell, for Sherman Tidwell, 24; J. A. Sanderson, Mont., for E. W. Belfield, 21; Mrs. L. J. Camp, Ark., for Oneda Gartman, 20; Miss Ruby Greer, Texas, for W. A. Greer, 19; Mrs. M. L. Horton, Idaho, for E. W. Belfield, 14; Mrs. Mattie Gilstrap, S. C., for Mattie Haynes, 12; Mrs. Blondell Shepherd, Ga., for G. R. Wheeless, 12; Mrs. Essie Tidwell, Ala., for Mrs. Frances McKroy, 10; Mrs. J. G. Smathers, N. C., for Andrew Smathers, 10; Mrs. August Linn, Kans, for general, 10; Mrs. A. L. McAbee, S. C., for Sam McAbee, 8; Mrs. James M. Thomas, Ala., for L. A. Strickland, 6; Mrs. Frankie Owens, Tenn., for R. E. Hill, 6 subs and $5.00; Lafayette Swanson, N. C., for own chair, 6 subs; Orland Jenkins, Ohio, for Mary Arleen Miller, 6; Mrs. Geo. Adams, Texas, for Geo. Adams, 6; Etta Bangs, Mont., for Ed. Belfield, 5; Mrs. Sarah Weekly, Mont., for Geo. Ash, 3 subs and 50c.; Sarah Compton, Wash., for general, $2.00; Sarah Smith, Okla., for general, $1.00.

Traveling Bees

From North Dakota recently came the story of "Achievement Girl," a queen bee, worth $300, that spends her winters working for her half owners in Montgomery, Alabama, J. M. Cutter & Son, and who works for her other half owner in North Dakota during the summer. Her only periods of rest are the few days spent in traveling by mail between the two states.

Now comes a bigger story from Walla Walla, Wash. For the recent apple-blossom time, a whole carload of bees has been shipped by E. E. Cotant and Don Pruitt, apiarists of Stanfield, Oregon, to the Wilton-Freewater fruit district near Walla Walla. These bees are rented to the Washington fruit growers for the purpose of aiding in the pollenization of the trees, the Washington bees having previously been injured by spraying methods. If the experiment proves successful with apple trees, the cherry growers of Walla Walla valley will give it a trial.

Hard to Get In Little Boy.—"Mother, are there any men angels in heaven?"

Mother.—"Why, certainly, dear."

"But, mother, I never saw any pictures of angels with whiskers."

"No, dear. Men only get in with a close shave."—Stray Stories.

Taking No Chances

"What made you admit the accident was all your fault? You know very well the other man was to blame." "I know he was, but when he got out of his car I saw he was twice as big as I."—The Automobilist.

Listen to This!

"Where is the car?" demanded Mrs. Diggs.

"Dear me!" ejaculated Professor Diggs. "Did I take the car out?"

"You certainly did. You drove it to town."

"How odd! I remember now that after I got out I turned around to thank the gentleman who gave me the lift and wondered where he had gone."—American Legion Weekly.

It's the Truth

"This fellow Skinner tried to tell me that he has had the same automobile five years and has never paid a cent for repairs on it," said the Fat Man. "Do you believe that?"

"I do," replied the Thin Man, sadly. "I'm the man who did his repair work for him."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Easily Remedied

Lady of House.—"Yes, I have an old pair of my husband's trousers, but I'm afraid they're too large around the waist for you."

Hungry Higgins.—"Well, couldn't yer gimme (a dinner dat would make 'em fit?"—Boston Transcript.

Wisdom's Whisper

If a fool knows a secret, he tells it because he is a fool; if a knave knows one, he tells it whenever it is his interest to tell it. But women and the young men are very apt to tell what secrets they know, for the vanity of having been trusted. Trust none of these when you can help it.—Chesterfield.

Airplanes for Farmers

The owner of many acres near Pilot Rock, Oregon, considering the automobile out of date, recently bought an airplane, saying in explanation: "When I wish to go shopping henceforth, I shall no longer resort to the buckboard, or even that comparative plodder, the auto. A farmer has got to be up to date these days, by Heck."

Might Keep Some

"I want to buy a make-up box," said a young married man.

"A make-up box?" the confectioner echoed. "We don't keep theatrical supplies."

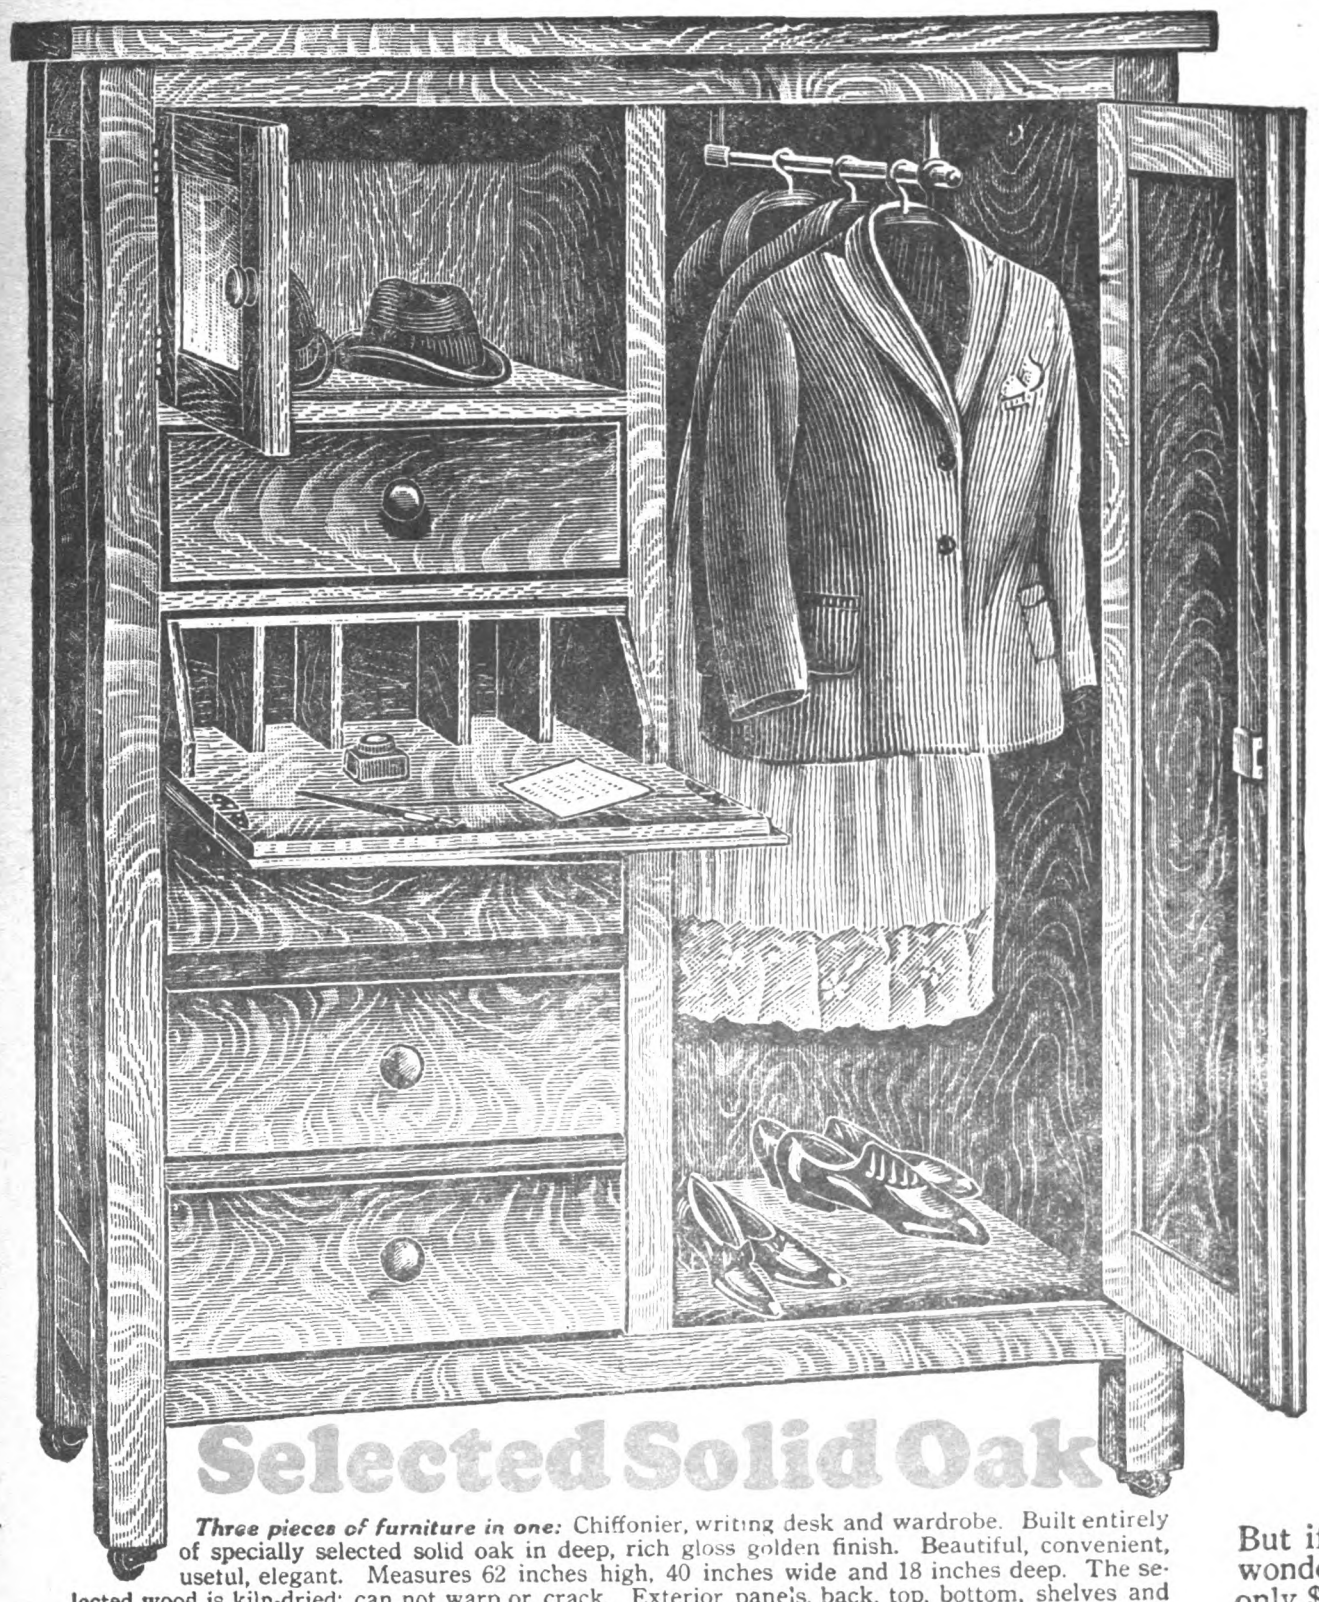
"I mean a box of chocolates to take home to my wife," said the young man; "I promised to be home three hours ago."—Stray Stories.

Proof Positive

Paying Teller.—"But, madame, you will have to be identified before I can cash this check."

Fair Caller (blushing furiously).—"Oh, I just hate to do it, and George would be dreadfully angry, but I have a love letter here which describes me fully, if you would care to see it."—American Legion Weekly.

Evens Up in Nickel on the Slot Phone



Old Mr. Gunnysacks, whose standing grievance has been the service he obtained from slot machine telephone booths, is at last mollified. It has been his bitter complaint that frequently delay in getting a number has forced him to sacrifice his nickel, the said nickel being a total loss because he lacked time to wait for central to return his coin.

The other day he approached a booth in one of the railroad terminals as a harassed and hurried-looking young man emerged and made a wild dash for an about-to-depart suburban train. Mr. G. entered the booth, deposited his nickel and gave his number.

"The line is busy," said Central in a moment or two. "I'll return your money." And with that Mr. G's nickel fell into the little compartment provided. But it was not alone. With it came 35 cents which the hurried young man, his out-of-town number being also busy, had not waited to collect.—New York Sun.

Wardrobe, Desk and Chiffonier—All in One!

$1

Selected Solid Oak

Three pieces of furniture in one: Chiffonier, writing desk and wardrobe. Built entirely of specially selected solid oak in deep, rich gloss golden finish. Beautiful, convenient, useful, elegant. Measures 62 inches high, 40 inches wide and 18 inches deep. The selected wood is kiln-dried; can not warp or crack. Exterior panels, back, top, bottom, shelves and drawer bottoms are three-ply. Panel ends; heavy corner posts.

Wardrobe section measures 53 inches high, 21 inches wide and 17 inches deep inside. Heavy rod and hangers for coats and trousers. Large, roomy; closes tight; absolutely dust proof.

Desk section has 5 compartments with full width drawer above. Lid drops, giving ample writing space. When closed looks exactly like chiffonier drawer. Very convenient for papers, writing materials, etc. Just above the drawer is a roomy hat cupboard, 14 inches high, 17 inches deep and 16 inches wide. The door is fitted with a plain French mirror, 8¾ x 6¾ inches.

Chiffonier section has three large roomy drawers for folded clothing, 14 inches wide, 7 inches high and 17 inches deep. Entire combination Chifforobe is shipped carefully packed with best quality castors, from Indiana factory. Shipping weight 150 pounds.

Order by No. B7332JA. Send $1.00 with coupon, $2.70 monthly—total price, $27.60

Sensation

Send coupon belo sational, price-sma gain. A spacious desk and wardrob useful, as well as bed room furnitur rock bottom redu need not go anot convenience of th niture. Only $1 your home on 30
only if satisfied.
monthly terms.
offer below.

30 T

Only $1.00 dow brings this soli wardrobe, desk a home for 30 days
the roomy space wonderful conve
Note, too, the so will last a lifetim
golden oak finish.
wish to return t
back at our expe fund your $1.0
charges you paid you nothing.

$2.70 a

But if, after 30 days, you wonderfully convenient ch only $2.70 a month until —payments so low and so will scarcely feel them. A the rate of only a few cent fritters away every day only a limited number of send now. We trust hon in the United States. One

No discount for cash for credit — N

Price Slashed!!

Don't delay. Just send $1 00 along with the coupon as a deposit. Use in every way for 30 full days before you decide. Then, you alone are the judge. If you wish to return the chifforobe after the trial, your dollar will be refunded, plus all freight charges that you have paid. Remember, this is a special, limited, reduced price offer. First come, first served; get your combination chifforobe while this offer lasts. 30 days trial. We take all the risk, no obligation Send coupon.

Send NOW

Free Bargain Catalog

Shows thousands of bargains in home furnishings, furniture, jewelry, carpets, rugs, curtains, silverware, phonographs, stoves, dishes, aluminum ware, porch and lawn furniture, etc. All sold on easy terms. Sent with or without order. See coupon.

Straus & Schram, Dept. C304 Chicago, Ill.

Straus & Schram, Dep

Enclosed find $1.00. Ship special adv
I am to have 30 days free trial. If I ke monthly. If not satisfied, I am to r and you are to refund my money and ☐ Solid Oak Chifforo

Name .....

Street, R. F. D. or Box No. .....

Shipping Point .....

Post Office .....

If you want ONLY o
of Home Furnishing

VOLUME XXXV
NO. 11

SEPTEMBER
1923

MOTHE D BABY NUMBER

COMFORT

The Key to Happiness and a Million and a Quarter Homes

No. 34

No. 16

No. 40

No. 38

36 A

36 B

No. 32

No. 30

No. 11

No. 20

No. 24

No. 31 A

No. 22

No. 37

No. 45

No. 17

No. 9

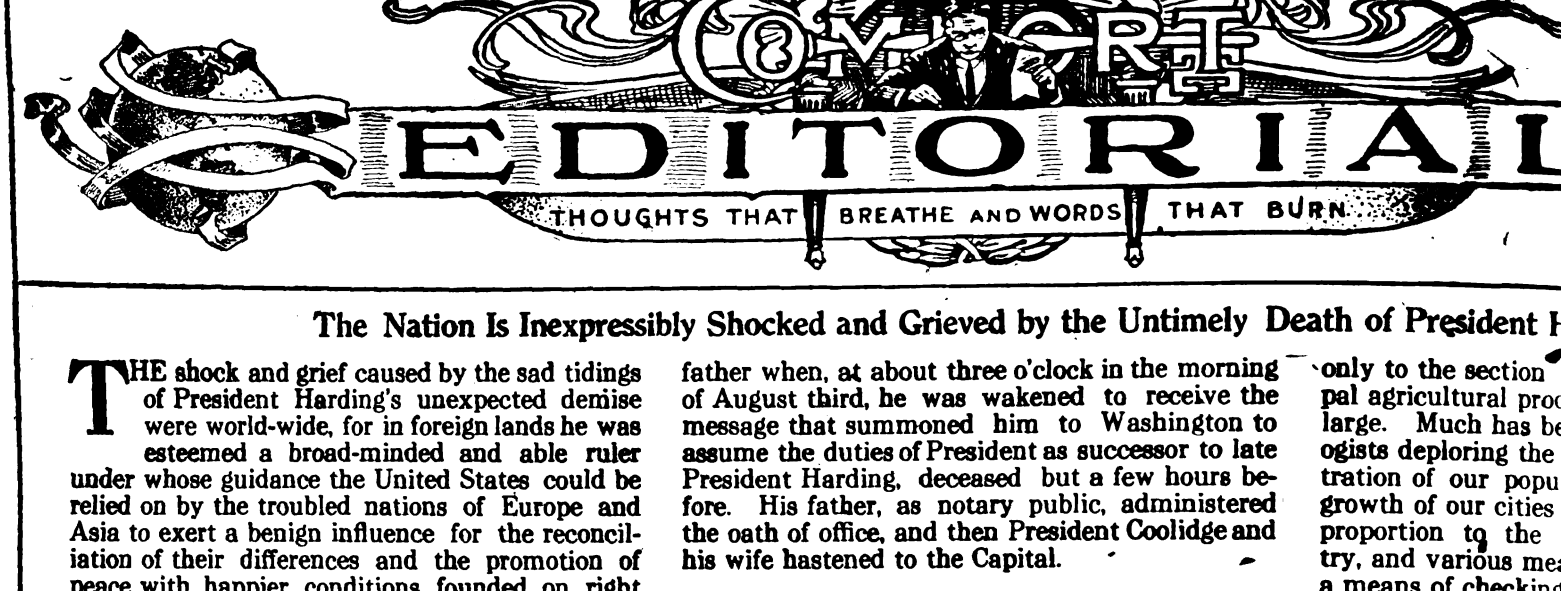
No. 6

No. 15

No. 1

No. 31 B

No. 27



No. 2

No. 29

See page 6 for "Who's Who on the Front Cover"

Copyright 1923 (Trade-Mark Registered), by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Incorporated.

Table of Contents on Page 8.

The Nation Is Inexpressibly Shocked and Grieved by the Untimely Death of President H

THE shock and grief caused by the sad tidings of President Harding's unexpected demise were world-wide, for in foreign lands he was esteemed a broad-minded and able ruler under whose guidance the United States could be relied on by the troubled nations of Europe and Asia to exert a benign influence for the reconciliation of their differences and the promotion of peace with happier conditions founded on right and contentment in place of strife, envy and mutual distrust. Abroad, where judgment of his character and achievements is not warped by prejudices engendered by American political considerations, his passing is mourned as a world bereavement.

Mr. Harding's death is sincerely mourned by his countrymen regardless of party affiliations because he was universally beloved as a kindly and genial gentleman and respected as an honorable man of sterling integrity, sincere in his beliefs and true to his principles, even by those who differed with and opposed him politically. He was a fair and square fighter, accepting defeat without resentment and winning his victories without arousing animosity; therefore he had no personal enemies.

President Harding died a sacrifice to duty. He has been worn out and his vitality exhausted by the excessive labor that he has performed during the past two and a half years in executing the exalted trust that devolved upon him as head of the nation. Without the slightest warning or premonitory symptom a stroke of apoplexy brought instantaneous death upon him. His attending physicians report that his brain lesion, from which he died, was not caused by the acute attack of indigestion complicated with congestion of one lung, for he was recovering from this illness and apparently beyond the danger point. He was run down by overwork and needed a complete rest before he started on his arduous tour of inspection of government works in Alaska, and due consideration for his health should have prevented him from undertaking it at that time; but he regarded it an immediate duty which he was unwilling to neglect or postpone. It overstrained his depleted strength to the breaking point.

His political followers feel that by the untimely death of Warren G. Harding their party and the nation at large have suffered the loss of a great leader at a critical period when his services are most needed

The widow of our late President, who accompanied him to Alaska, nursed him in his last sickness and sat at his bedside reading to him when the fatal stroke extinguished his life and her dearest earthly hope, has the heartfelt sympathy of the entire country in her bereavement by the loss of her devoted husband. Herself an invalid, she is bearing her sorrow with Christian faith and fortitude.

What to Expect of the New President

OWING to the commanding position of the great American republic, and because its chief magistrate is vested by the Constitution with greater power than is possessed by any other ruler, Calvin Coolidge has suddenly become the cynosure of world-wide interest and attention; everywhere his record is being scrutinized and his character studied in an effort to learn what manner of man he is, and to form an estimate of what to expect of the new President. So inconspicuous are the functions of the Vice-President that this official is generally regarded as the spare wheel to the Government machine, and little attention is given to the personality or qualifications of the man who holds the office unless he happens to be called to higher service by the death of the President.

Calvin Coolidge was born and reared on the farm, in the hills of Vermont, which his father still owns and tills. It was there that the then Vice-President and his wife were visiting his father when, at about three o'clock in the morning of August third, he was wakened to receive the message that summoned him to Washington to assume the duties of President as successor to late President Harding, deceased but a few hours before. His father, as notary public, administered the oath of office, and then President Coolidge and his wife hastened to the Capital.

President Coolidge was 51 years old last 4th of July. He graduated from Amherst College in 1895. His home is in Northampton, Mass., where he has practiced law since 1897 until official duties claimed his entire attention. Besides minor offices that he has held, he has been Mayor of Northampton, served in both branches of the Massachusetts legislature, has been President of the State Senate, Lieutenant-Governor and then Governor of Massachusetts. By making good in every position that he held he rose rapidly in public favor and confidence in his home State, but it was the ability and uncompromising firmness displayed by him as Governor in his masterful handling of the Boston police strike that attracted nation-wide attention and resulted in making him Vice-President. Although a convincing speaker when need be, he is noted for being a man of action rather than words and is called the "silent statesman." He has made no political promises and has not announced his policy, preferring to let his deeds speak for him. Judging from his record he will do his duty faithfully, as he sees it, without fear or favor. The North-Eastern States look to President Coolidge for action in September to prevent a repetition of their last winter's sufferings from lack of fuel in case the strike threatened by union miners in the anthracite coal region should not be called off.

Grave Consequences of Negro Exodus from the Cotton Belt

THE northward and westward migration of Southern negroes in the United States began long before the Civil War but, until the abolition of slavery, consisted chiefly of the movement of runaway slaves under the auspices of that secret anti-slavery organization in the North known as the "Underground Railroad," which unlawfully aided their escape either to Canada or to some distant places of refuge in the free States. The slave emigration from Dixie land during that period, though comparatively small, was, as may well be understood, exceedingly exasperating to the South, and the activities of the "Underground Railroad", in flagrant violation and defiance of the act of Congress known as the "Fugitive Slave Law", was a potent factor in bringing about the secession of the Confederate States. After the Civil War negro migration from the South increased considerably but not to a troublesome degree until the abnormal shortage of labor and the high wages consequent to our entering the World War began to attract large numbers of Southern negroes to the industrial centers in the North and West. Until then the ever increasing labor needs of our expanding industries in the Northern States had been supplied by the million or more European immigrants that each year landed on our shores; but the amendment of our immigration law, which during the past two years cut the annual influx of foreigners to one-third the normal number, has largely augmented the demand for negro laborers in the North and West and has correspondingly stimulated negro migration to those sections.

No disparagement of the negroes is intended or implied in the assertion that this shift of colored population presents some grave problems and already has been productive of some troublesome results. Although it has been helpful to the employers of industrial labor it has caused a shortage of farm laborers in the cotton belt, which, if the movement should continue at the present rate, would soon greatly impair, if it did not bring to an end the growing of cotton in this country. This in itself would be a calamity, not only to the section pal agricultural proc large. Much has be ogists deploring the tration of our popu growth of our cities proportion to the try, and various mea
a means of checking the farms to the bi complaint has appli ward trend of our appears that the col great majority of rural and employed being attracted in the cities.

Conditions of lif favorable as they ar whites, are much mo
ple who for generati outdoor life and labo evidenced by the vit
Eliminating the resu in the United States births over deaths n ade 1910 to 1920 w
same period increase cent. E. V. Wilcox, w tleman, asserts that, research, he found th
number of negro dea
Northern and South to 127, but that the 100 births on the co
the negroes in the extinct but for the Southern farms. He else [than on the co negroes exceed births
York the Urban Leag pneumonia and tub negroes is three time
And with the high cities negroes find th dozen children as on which the deduction who emigrates to a N
siderable risk of healt orable climatic and conditions best adapt of his race are on the is where he is most n ing the past century foreign-born populati
South because that amply supplied with the natural increase o

Some magazine number of newspaper ern, in commenting e tribute this suddenly negroes largely to lyn treatment and oppres
the South. But to us and without foundati
ing to discuss the int race problem that the since the Civil War, reason to believe that any better by the No
In support of our viev
black and white rac
since the World War
Chicago and in other West. The facts do section of the country another. It seems negro migration from to the industrial cent attracting the whites cities. The movemen and is caused by wro remedied, however di

CO

COMFORT, PUBLISHED MONTHLY BY W. H. GANNETT, PUB., INC., AT AUGUSTA, MAINE.

Subscription price in United States and United States Possessions 50c a year; Canadian subscriptions 65c a year, foreign countries $1.00 a year. No premiums or prizes will be g tions. Please send your renewal just as soon as your subscription expires. We can not send you even one copy of COMFORT, after expiration, until your you do not get your magazine by the 25th of the month write us and we will send you another copy free. Please notify us immediately in case you move, so that we can change miss a single copy. Remember that we must have your former address, as well as your new address to make the change. Be sure to send both. We do not supply back Entered at the post office at Augusta, Maine as second-class mail matter. Copyright, 1923 (Trade-Mark Registered), by W.

FREE!

7 Pieces—Genuine Cut Glass

As an extra special offer to those who hurry their order for the handsome 6 Piece Fumed Oak Set which we are offering below on such an amazing, slashed price offer, we shall include, absolutely free, this entire 7-piece set of GENUINE CUT GLASS: Pitcher of 2 qt. capacity and 6 tumblers of 9 oz. capacity. Each piece is pure, sparkingly clear, thin and dainty; hand cut decorations consisting of large floral design with appropriate foliage. A useful set for water, lemonade or other home beverage: a handsome display among your other glassware. Given FREE on this offer. But remember, this offer is entirely special. Our prices are figured at rock bottom. A limited number of these Genuine Cut Glass Sets given free just to get new customers. Get yours while this offer lasts. Read our offer below now—and act today.

New 6 Piece Set

Only

$1.00

Down

Only $1.00 with the coupon below brings this sensational furniture bargain to your home on 30 days trial. A complete 6 piece set of fumed solid oak living room furniture including a wonderfully comfortable and roomy divan—and at a positively sensational price reduction. Only $33.85 for the complete set on this offer—on easy payments of only $3.00 a month; $45 was the former price for set like this. A special factory sacrifice makes this slash in price possible now. And Special Now—7 piece set of Genuine Cut Glass with hand cut decorations, FREE, if you send at once.

7 Pieces Genuine Cut Glass FREE!

New 6-Piece Set Fumed Solid Oak

This superb 6 piece set is made of selected solid oak throughout, finished in rich, dull waxed, brown fumed oak. Four pieces are padded, seats upholstered with brown Delavan Spanish leather, the best imitation of genuine Spanish leather known. Upholstering is of a rich brown color, and will give you best possible service.

Large Divan will give extra seating capacity to your library, living room or parlor. It is an unusually massive, comfortable piece with beautifully designed back. Arms are broad and comfortable. Measures 46 inches wide outside and 36 inches long inside. Thickly padded seat is 19 inches deep. Height of back 22 inches. Posts are extra massive.

Arm Chair is a roomy, dignified piece of furniture, comfortable and big enough for a very large person while not seeming too large for the ordinary occupant. Seat, 19x17½ in., height 36 in.

Arm Rocker is a massive, stately, comfortable piece, with beautifully designed back, wide and shapely arms, and smooth operating runners. Seat, 19 x 17½ in., height 36 in.

Sewing Rocker is unusually attractive and useful. Seat 17 x 17 inches. Height 35 inches.

Library Table—A beautiful piece of library furniture. Has beautifully designed ends to match the chairs with roomy magazine shelf below. Legs cut of 2 in. stock. Massive, dignified. Top measures 23¼ x 34 in.

Jardiniere Stand matches other pieces. A decoration to your living room or library. Carefully built throughout. Measures 17½ in. high; the top is 12x12 in.

Entire set is shipped knocked down construction. Very easy to set up. Saves in freight charges. Weight about 175 pounds.

7 Pieces, Genuine Cut Glass FREE

Order by No. B7593VA. $1.00 with coupon, $3.00 a month, price $33.85

30 Days Trial—$3.00 a Month

When you get this magnificent 6-Piece Set, put it in your living room or library and use it freely for 30 days. Note the massive, solid construction, the beautiful fumed oak finish—the fine upholstery and graceful lines. Compare it with anything you can buy locally at anywhere near the same price—even for spot cash. Then if not satisfied for any reason, return the set at our expense and we will refund your $1.00 at once, plus any freight charges you have paid. If you decide to keep the set, start paying only $3.00 a month until you have paid $33.85—payments so low and so convenient that you will scarcely feel them. A full year to pay—at the rate of only a few cents a day. This wonderful value is not listed in our regular catalog. We trust honest people anywhere in the United States. We have only a limited number of sets—so send your order today. No discount for cash, nothing extra for credit. No C. O. D.

Free Bargain Catalog

Shows thousands of bargains in home furnishings: furniture, jewelry, carpets, rugs, curtains, silverware, phonographs, stoves, dishes, aluminum ware, porch and lawn furniture, etc. All sold on easy terms. Catalog sent free, with or without order. See the coupon.

Cut Price—Send Now!

Don't delay. Just send $1.00 along with the coupon. If you wish to return the set after 30 days, your dollar will be refunded, plus all freight charges which you paid. Remember, this is a special, limited, reduced price offer. (7 Piece Set of Genuine Cut Glass FREE to those who order at once) Get your set while this offer lasts. 30 days trial—we take all the risk—costs you nothing if not satisfied. No obligation. Send coupon today—NOW!

Straus & Schram, Dept. 3046, Chicago, Ill.

Straus & Schram, Dept. 3046 Chicago, Ill.

Enclosed find $1. Ship special advertised 6-piece Fumed Oak Library Set, with 7-piece Genuine Cut Glass Set, FREE. I am to have 30 days free trial. If I keep the set, I will pay you $3.00 monthly. If not satisfied, I am to return the set with the 7-piece cut glass set within 30 days and you are to refund my money and any freight charges I paid.

☐ 6-Piece Library Set No. B7593VA, $33.85.

Name .....

Street, R.F.D. or Box No. .....

Shipping Point .....

Post Office ..... State .....

If you want ONLY our free catalog of home furnishings, mark X here ☐

Brownie's Triu

by M
Sh

"Thief!" hissed the woman, under her breath. "How dare you?" Where did you come from?"

She was forthwith angrily commanded to go and find Miss Dundas and not return until she did.

"I am dee
Madam
my betr

Copyright, 1879-1880, by Street & Smith.
Renewal granted to Mrs. Georgie Sheldon Downs, 1907.
Serial rights by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Brownie Douglas, waiting at Memorial Hall, Centennial Exposition, Philadelphia, attracts the attention of two gentlemen, Adrian Dredmond, an Englishman, and Mr. Gordon who recognizes Brownie, she being an intimate friend of his sisters. Her father, dying before she is born, and her mother at her birth, she is adopted by her great aunt who gives her her name Mehetabel and brings her up to remember she is a direct descendant from the Scottish nobility. Her nurse calls her Brownie from the first. Adrian Dredmond picks up a costly cuff button with a large D, studded with brilliants and the word "Brownie" upon the back. That night Miss Mehetabel Douglas tells Brownie the story of her betrothal to Lord Dunforth, the ball given by Helen Capel's aunt, Lady Ruxley, her introduction to Count de Lusan, a man of questionable reputation, her refusal to cancel a dance at Lord Dunforth's command, Helen Capel's treachery in suppressing a note, her serious illness, her coming to America, where her father and mother soon died. She gives Brownie her jewels, including her engagement ring, coral cross and all other gifts from Lord Dunforth. That night she dies and upon the reading of the will Mr. Conrad, who has the care of her aunt's property admits using and losing money entrusted to him, leaving Brownie, after all debts and legacies to the servants are paid, two hundred dollars. Refusing help, she secures a situation in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge to be governess to their two younger daughters and a companion and interpreter on a proposed trip to Europe. Mrs. Coolidge and the eldest daughter Isabel admit her personal charms but are jealous of her beauty and many accomplishments. Boarding the steamer, Brownie is saved from an accident by Adrian Dredmond. Wilbur takes her to his mother and sister who realize Wilbur's infatuation for Brownie. Adrian Dredmond overhears their determination to prevent Wilbur's further attention. Going to London they take a house near where Miss Mehetabel lived. Wilbur buys tickets for the opera and insists that Miss Douglas shall go too. Selecting her jewels, among which is a coral cross, Mrs. Coolidge finds her so radiant decides it shall not occur again. Adrian Dredmond entering the Coolidge box, is introduced to Brownie and, when leaving, escorts her to the carriage, where she receives insults from Mrs. Coolidge. Isabel, envious of Brownie's elegant dress and jewels, queries to her mother Brownie's honesty. Seeing her go for a walk, Isabel enters Brownie's room and securing her jewels takes them to her mother, who requests that Brownie, upon her return, be sent to her. She asks Brownie if she has anything in her possession not legally hers and accuses her of stealing jewels and clothing. Brownie demands the return of the casket, Mrs. Coolidge refusing, Brownie threatens legal measures for their return. Wilbur intercedes and promises upon his father's return justice shall be done. Knowing she is to leave, Wilbur orders a cab and directs that Brownie be driven to "The Washington." Adrian Dredmond calls, requesting to see Miss Douglas. Asking for her address, Isabel does not know and he leaves distressed and indignant. Wilbur sends it and Adrian going to "The Washington" fails to find her. Mr. Coolidge hires a detective without success. Going to Lady Peasewell's pary, Isabel wears Brownie's jewels. She meets Sir Charles Randal, who conducts her to the conservatory. Passing Lord Dunforth, he detects the ring and demands where she got it, also the other jewels. Claiming they are heirlooms, did Mehetabel Douglas give them to her. They were my last gift to her. Sir Charles appears and Lord Dunforth begs her to forget what has occurred. Two years after Sir Charles's birth there was a prospect of an addition to the family. Lady Randal was traveling and coming home a year later said it was hard to lose one's children. Mr. Coolidge returning to New York, Lady Randal, who was Helen Capel and a cousin of Lord Dunforth, invites the Coolidges to Vallingham Hall, Isabel being engaged to Sir Charles. Isabel walking with him sees Lady Ruxley leaning upon the arm of a young woman. The next day a dinner is given by the Earl of Dunforth and Isabel is presented to his grandson, Adrian Dredmond, who meets her with scorn and recognizes the jewels she wears. Introduced to Lady Ruxley, she predicts dire things through Isabel Coolidge. Adrian saves Brownie from death and determines to make her his wife. Lady Ruxley, reaching home, finds a summons to Vallingham Hall. Adrian asks his grandfather's permission for his marriage, which is granted until he learns his future wife was born in America and is in reduced circumstances, and leaving her position as governess under false accusations, withdraws his consent and threatens disinheritance. Lady Ruxley brings a box of papers to Brownie requesting her to find an operetta, among which is the note written by Mehetabel Douglas and suppressed by Helen Capel, now Lady Randal. Going for a walk Brownie meets Isabel in the hall and demands her jewels. Isabel refuses to return them. Later, passing Isabel's room, the door being open, Brownie sees the casket, secures it and faces Mrs. Coolidge as she leaves the room.

CHAPTER XXIX.

ENTRAPPED.

"THIEF," hissed the woman, under her breath. "How dare you? Where did you come from?"

She had not seen Isabel since her encounter with Brownie, therefore did not know until that moment of her proximity.

She had come out of her own room just as Miss Douglas entered Isabel's, and, seeing the door open, glanced in as Brownie had done.

She recognized Miss Douglas in an instant, and comprehended at once her object there.

She glided in noiselessly, hoping to come upon her unawares, and wrest the casket from her without much trouble, but the girl turned just in season to confront her.

Brownie herself grew pale at this unexpected encounter, but, clutching her recovered property firmly in her hands, she held herself proudly at bay.

"You are the thief, madam—you and your daughter," she said, haughtily.

"Liar! Put down that box!"

"I shall not, madam!"

"Then I will ring and have you arrested. I know not how you happen to be here; I devoutly hoped you would never cross our path again; but fate seems to decree that you turn up as a marplot wherever we go. Will you put that box down, or shall I ring?" and the angry woman grasped the bell-pull vigorously.

Brownie never relaxed a muscle, except that the proud lips curled into a scornful smile.

"You can ring the bell if you choose, Mrs. Coolidge."

"Have you no fear of the consequences?" her enemy asked, eying her wonderingly, and her lips twitching with wrath.

"None!"

"But you will have to face this whole household."

"Gather the whole household here, if you will, and have the facts regarding this property brought to light; also the way in which you became possessed of it. Methinks Sir Charles Randal would not be pleased to know that his betrothed wife entered the room of another and purloined such things as these."

Mrs. Coolidge winced at her words, and she could have trampled her under foot for her scorn and fearlessness.

"You are insolent, Miss Douglas," she breathed, in suppressed, wrathful tones.

"Insolent or not, I only speak plain truth; and I shall not yield up this casket unless personal violence is used to wrest it from me," Brownie answered, with calm dignity.

"You are cool, truly," sneered the woman, exasperated by her manner more than by her words, and as desirous of creating no disturbance as Brownie herself could be.

"Yes, I am cool. This box is mine, I tell you and this much I will say, if you persist in disputing my right to it and its contents, I have only to appeal to a certain nobleman of the realm to substantiate my claim and protect me from your abuse." Brownie said, suddenly resolving to appeal to Lord Dunforth, if Mrs. Coolidge persisted in her abuse.

"A nobleman of the realm! You!"

Intense scorn was breathed in these few words.

"Yes, madam, I! I have but to tell my story of these jewels to prove that they belong to me, and reveal your wickedness to those whom you do not care to have know it!"

"Pray, why did you not make this appeal in the first place?" queried Mrs. Coolidge, skeptically.

"Because I did not know then if he were living. I have since discovered that he is. Now, as I have no desire to prolong this interview further, I will wish you good-day."

Brownie took a step toward the door, but her enemy, rendered desperate by her undaunted bearing, and the fearful consequences which would result if Isabel should thus suddenly be deprived of wearing the jewels, darted before her, shut the door, locking it, and put the key in her pocket.

"There! We wil see who will win in this little game Miss Douglas," she said, between her teeth, while there was a dangerous gleam in her eye. "You do not leave this room," she added, "until you give up that casket. How do you suppose Isabel will account for the disappearance of all her elegant jewels, which have been so much admired?"

"Madam, truth is a virtue which is safe always to cultivate," Brownie answered, with quiet sarcasm.

She utterly baffled her; while she was so cool, so haughty, so beautiful, standing so fearless there, with her jewels closely clasped in her arms, that she became enraged beyond endurance.

"Will you give me that, once for all, I ask you?" Mrs. Coolidge whispered, hoarsely, with livid face and a deadly light in her light blue eyes.

"I will not!" and the beautiful brown eyes met hers fearlessly, defiantly.

Mrs. Coolidge took a few steps forward, as if impelled by some hidden force, hesitated, bent her head a moment in thought, while an evil smile flitted over her hard features.

Then, assuming a more conciliatory tone, she said:

"Really, Miss Douglas, you are so persistent, and so positive, that you almost persuade me into the belief that the jewels are yours, after all."

Brownie made no reply to this concession, but stood quietly regarding her enemy.

"Come into my room and let us talk the matter over quietly," the wily woman added, flashing a cunning look at the young girl from her half-closed eyes. "I think we can come to a better understanding, and I have a proposition to make to you."

Brownie felt somewhat suspicious of this smooth talk, and feared that the sudden change in Mrs. Coolidge's manner was only assumed for some hidden purpose; yet she thought it might be better to temporize with her, and it would, perhaps, save publicity.

She could not leave the room, as things were, without making a disturbance, for the door was locked, the key in the woman's pocket, and she knew of no other means of egress, although there were several arches in the spacious apartment, hung with draperies, which she thought must conceal entrances to some other portion of the house.

"I do not know what better understanding you may wish for," she replied, coldly. "Your daughter took this box from my room, and I have told you repeatedly that it and its contents belong to me, and you know, as well as I, Mrs. Coolidge, that any judge would decide in my favor should the case be brought into court. But we can talk it over here as well as anywhere."

"Then why did you come sneaking into this room, like a thief, to get them? Why didn't you take the matter into court, and let the judge decide in your favor?" sneered the exasperated woman almost losing her self-control again under Brownie's coolness and her refusal to go with her.

"I did not sneak into the room like a thief madam. I was passing along the corridor, the door was open, and, glancing in, I saw my casket upon the table, I entered and took it, intending to inform Miss Coolidge of the fact as soon as I had it beyond her reach."

"You say you can prove your claim. Who is this nobleman who knows so much about these jewels?" asked Mrs. Coolidge, with sudden interest. Brownie thought a moment before answering.

She disliked to implicate his lordship in the matter if she could possibly help it; but she saw that Mrs. Coolidge was desperate about the jewels, and perhaps the power of his name might frighten her into letting them go, and the matter would drop there, so she said:

"It is Lord Dunforth!"

"Lord Dunforth!" she exclaimed, with a violent start of surprise.

Then she suddenly remembered, with a thrill that made her feel faint, Isabel's account of her strange interview with his lordship at Lady Peasewell's, and she began to fear that she was getting beyond her depth in this matter; and yet this very revelation made her more determined than ever to keep the jewels, at least until after Isabel's marriage; for their absence would occasion a great hue and cry, and necessitate such awkward explanations that Sir Charles would mistrust something wrong, and then all their plans would be ruined, for he had only that day named the wedding day. Yet, if she resorted to force to keep them Brownie, on the other hand, would instantly take active measures to recover them, and if she could, she said, prove through Lord Dunforth that they were hers, they would immediately be brought into open disgrace. Whichever way she turned, it looked dark.

There was only one way of escape from this threatening danger, and that was very hazardous but she had resolved from the first, if worse came to worst, that she would try it, and that was why she appeared so anxious to get her into her rooms.

She stood measuring her strength against Brownie's, while these thoughts passed through her mind, and that same cunning gleam lurked in her eyes as before.

"Lord Dunforth!" she repeated. "Do you know him?"

"No, madam; at least, not well enough to claim his acquaintance and protection, except in case of stern necessity; but he knows all about these jewels, and when I told my story he would know that I spoke the truth."

"How would he know it? When did he ever see those jewels before he saw Isabel wear them?" the woman asked, inquisitively, and burning with a desire to know more about them herself.

"Madam," Brownie answered, haughtily, "I decline answering any more questions. I insist that you let me go quietly; you can then make whatever explanation regarding the absence of these gems you may see fit. But, if you persist in giving me further trouble, I shall immediately make the whole matter public, and doubtless you know what the consequences will be."

Mrs. Coolidge's eyes flashed, and the young girl, catching their gleam at that instant, involuntarily shivered, they looked so evil.

"My dear Miss Douglas," she began, politely, after a moment, "can we not temporize in this matter? You know if Isabel ceases suddenly to wear those jewels it is going to make matters very awkward for her. Could you not be persuaded, for a handsome consideration, to loan them to her until after her marriage, which will be in a little more than a month?"

Brownie's lips curled with scorn at this proposition. The woman who could make it under the existing circumstances seemed so little and small of soul to her.

"No, madam; I think I have loaned them long enough already," was her quiet but scathing reply.

The angry woman's lips twitched nervously, and her hands were clinched with passion that this poor, friendless girl should dare to thwart her so—that she should dare to stand so proudly, defiantly before her, and fling out so coolly her scathing sarcasms. She grew white as the delicate lace at her throat, and her eyes burned with a lurid light which boded mischief.

"Hark," she said, suddenly. "Somebody is coming. It may be Isabel, and we shall have a scene. Come into my room, and I will let you out through there."

She walked swiftly across the room, seemingly much disturbed, although Brownie had caught no sound of any one approaching.

She pushed aside some hangings and revealed a narrow door.

Brownie wondered that such a narrow, peculiar door should connect two elegant rooms, but she reasoned that this must be part of the original castle, and that all these elegant hangings had been put up to conceal the awkward doors.

Before opening it, Mrs. Coolidge shoved a heavy bolt (another circumstance which struck Brownie as singular), and, opening the door, revealed a small, square room or passage, dimly lighted by a dormer window set high in the stone wall.

The place was perfectly bare, and there was a damp, uncanny feeling in the atmosphere, as if it had not been opened before in a long while.

Brownie involuntarily drew back, as she reached the door, and again glanced suspiciously at her companion.

Mrs. Coolidge, who was watching her prey with the intentness of a cat watching a mouse, noticed her hesitation, and, with a light laugh, said:

"It isn't a very nice way to take you, Miss Douglas, but it saves going through the corridor, and I would not have Isabel meet you now, with that casket in your hands, for the world. My room is at the end of this passage, and we use it when we want to run back and forth. I do not think it can have been used much of late years, for it is so damp and full of cobwebs; but I discovered it while gratifying my Yanke neath all t convenient and open t and then y

She hal
Brownie f fluent expl it strange the passage
Suddenly look.
"Did yo whispered.
"No; I bending he
"There i Coolidge.
the key is i
I go and un
She glide breath and eyes, passe after her, a and dismay
All too la and entrap ing trusted
After the her to mea
It could six, and wa set so high out. Ther of egress t damp walls
There wa
and Brown against it f bling at fir shut up fro
"I suppo
mission by she said, wi
she will fin for only a s cious jewel
she added, a troublesor not sacred worth all t shall not ha
She walke
"Mrs. Co
"if you thin
you are ver warn you t yourself."
There wa
cluded that ent was to e
She had wicked wom her whole s rose up in r
she resolved jailer a reck
When Mr of diabolical on her prison fainting.

Not long a voice in the Hastily ris
though her h
culty that sh
With her daughter to "Good gr
You are as w entered.
"Hush!
then I will te Isabel obe
all that had t
"Confoun myself just a angrily.
"Don't, d yourself to Charles or La
"I can't h
so to have he going so love
"How do
asked Mrs.
a mystery.
"Oh, she i
to Lady Rux ago, I have and it seems ton Hotel aft intended to d
Randal's tow such an impr sisted upon t
would do but You know I t
when we first las, and I got dal told me h deceived me.
"It is very when we are smooth," con

This Department is conducted solely for the use of COMFORT sisters, whereby they may give expression to their ideas relative to the home and home surroundings, and to all matters pertaining to themselves and families; as well as opening a way for personal correspondence between each other.

Our object is to extend a helping hand to COMFORT subscribers; to become coworkers with all who seek friendship, encouragement, sympathy or assistance through the interchange of ideas.

Any abuse of this privilege, such as inviting correspondence for the purpose of offering an article for sale, or undertaking to charge a sum of money for ideas, recipes or information mentioned in any letter appearing in this department, if reported, will result in the offender being denied the use of these columns.

Do not ask us to publish letters requesting money contributions or donations of any sort. Much as we sympathize with the suffering and unfortunate, it is impossible to do this as we would be flooded with similar requests.

Please write only on one side of the paper, and recipes on a separate sheet.

Always give your correct and full name and address, very plainly written; otherwise your letter will receive no attention.

Address MRS. WHEELER WILKINSON, CARE COMFORT, AUGUSTA, MAINE.

THE readers of COMFORT are indebted to a member of the Sisters' Corner, Mrs. Wash Jones of Vilonia, Ark., for quite the best front cover design we have ever had. She furnished the idea, the mothers had already furnished the photographs and the combined result is a cover page of real COMFORT babies, with as many more on inside pages. They were obliged to be designated by numbers,—and they have such pretty names—but their names, with other information are given elsewhere.—Ed.

VILONIA, ARK.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

A bundle of COMFORTS, as large as a house, comes to Vilonia every month, but I have never seen a letter from here in the Sisters' Corner.

I should like to sit with Mrs. Allie Crowley long enough to get her to change her views in regard to the baby faces on COMFORT's pages.

Let me suggest that we have a whole cover page of them, with a halo of sunshine for a background. How many will agree with me? Mrs. Crowley says she is a "saint of the Lord" and I suppose she expects to go to Heaven when she quits this world of trouble. How many baby faces do you suppose she will see there? I think the majority will be babies, so let's get used to looking at them here on earth, then the change will not be so great.

I am much interested in the poultry page too, for I am a poultry woman.

I love children, flowers and my work.

Now for a pen picture: I have two eyes that try to see all the good in others and judge accordingly; two ears that try to hear the best and sift out the chaff, and my nose is to inhale the fragrance of beautiful flowers.

Love to all, MRS. WASH JONES.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND ALL THE SISTERS:

I have been a silent reader of COMFORT for several years—silent because I always found so many more interesting letters than any I could write. Because it is a subject in which I am vitally interested, and because it is a subject I have never seen discussed in these columns, I wish to ask the opinion of Mrs. Wilkinson and the Sisters, in regard to a man giving to his relatives everything he works for. I have been married one year but during that time, have been very unhappy on this account. My husband works hard; I continued to hold my position after we were married, therefore, I make my own money and am absolutely no expense to my husband, yet he never has any money. I beg him to save for our future, and he promises me he will, but when I look at his bank-book, he never has more than a few dollars. He has several brothers, all of whom are better off than he is, still they come to him for anything they want, and he never refuses. What do you think I should do? I cannot help thinking he is being unjust to me. In several other ways he is just as good as can be, but this one thing worries me a great deal.

Won't some of the sisters kindly offer me advice through these columns? I do not want letters direct. I have thought of separating from him, but I love him and feel that I would not be happy away from him. At the same time, I am not happy as long as he does this way.

With love to each and every one of you.

UNHAPPY WIFE.

Unhappy Wife.—Because many wives have had to face the same problem you are facing, they may be able to tell you how to overcome it. Don't leave your husband. There must be a better way than that.—Ed.

LONE STAR STATE.

HI, FOLKS:

Freckles wants admittance with others. Isn't this a jolly crowd! That is, most of them. Of course some tell sob stories but who is going to blame them? I am not, because we all have our "sobs" and who doesn't like sympathy, and advice, even if we don't take it? If we can't get it at home it is sweet from strangers—if the COMFORT Sisters are such. Anyway, all the worried sisters have my heartfelt sympathy. I'm not capable of giving them advice.

I suppose I'm as happy as most married women. I've a good, hard-working John, two boys and a daughter. We haven't our home yet but expect to have it some day.

Descriptions seem to be in order. I'm twenty-three years young, five feet, five inches tall and weigh about 135 pounds. Have brown hair, a lot of freckles and a very choice collection of mixed colored hair. Taken all together it is a reddish-brown. On the whole, I am a homely little, country-raised, uneducated person.

Mrs. Marsh's travel letters are interesting. So are Nelle Fischer's.

I wonder if many of our Northern sisters imagine we've a sort of ideal climate in the South? I'll tell you of our seasons. October and May are usually our most pleasant months. Nov., Dec., Jan. and Feb., except for a few days at a time, are usually very cold. March and April are our sand-storm months, and sometimes February too. This year we had a few even in May, June and July. August and September are "hot enough to roast lizards."

We raise mostly cotton here. It is also a good country for such feed as milo-maize, kaffir corn and sorghum. Corn does very well but not extra well. Wheat and oats are raised but not as extensively as a little farther north and west.

Something else about our immediate location is that poultry of all kinds does well.

My parents are living for which I am thankful, although I am away from them most of the time.

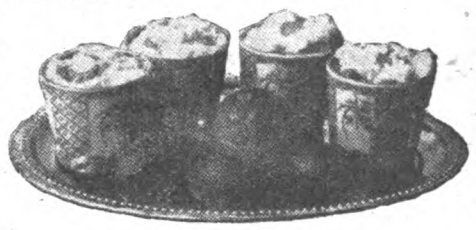
We live within twelve or fifteen miles of the "Cap Rock." Perhaps some do not know what that is. It is almost a bluff and is the dividing line between the plains and "our country." The roads up the Cap are very rough and far between. Sometimes they run within three feet of a direct drop of 1,000 to 1,500 feet. From here the Cap looks like a long range of mountains but when you get on top it is just a level stretch of plains. You can see for miles in any direction and not a tree in sight. It is a wonderful farming country.

I know Mrs. Wilkinson has a job sorting and choosing the most interesting letters and I realize how unworthy my efforts are.

I am trying to be a Christian and to raise my little ones, to love God. I want them to be good, honest, upright Christian men and women. I read Bible stories to them and talk to them of God and how they should live. I tell them the story of the Cross and the lowly Nazarene and His resurrection and ascension. They like to hear me talk about these things. If I could choose for them a life of the exalted statesman, great hero, or an excellent education and no christianity, or one of toil, ignorance of everything save God, I should choose the last. The unbelievers and unchristian people do not realize the joy they miss.

Long live COMFORT, the best paper printed. God bless you all, FRECKLES.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 15.)



Comfort Sisters' Recipes

THE Pepper Mangoes, recipe for which was sent by Delphia Smith, of Taft, California, may not be any better than the chow chow or beet relish recipes sent by some other sister, but she gave the exact quantities to be used and explained clearly how to go about putting them together. This constitutes a "best" recipe, so the COMFORT Sisters' Pin will be sent to her, but COMFORT's thanks go to every contributor.—Ed.

PEPPER MANGOES.—Two and one-half dozen peppers, eight cups finely chopped cabbage, eight cups finely chopped celery, four cups finely chopped onions, two red peppers, finely chopped, discard seeds, one tablespoon ground allspice, one tablespoon ground cloves, one tablespoon mustard seed, and one tablespoon ground cinnamon. Cut peppers in half, coop out and discard seeds. Cover with cold water, add one cup salt and allow to stand over night. Mix cabbage, celery, onions, red peppers and spices and allow this also to stand over night. Drain the peppers, fill the cavities with the mixture and fasten the halves together. Place in a sterilized crock, cover with cold vinegar and allow to stand twenty-four hours. Drain off vinegar, add one-half cup of sugar to each quart, bring to the boiling point and pour over the mangoes. After letting them stand twenty-four hours, again drain and bring same vinegar to boiling point and pour over mangoes once again. Cover crock and store.

DELPHIA SMITH, Taft, Gen. Del. California.

APPLE FLUFF WITH TEA CAKES.—Wipe and quarter five tart apples without paring or coring. Steam until very soft, then press through a fine sieve and sweeten to taste. Beat four egg whites until stiff and dry, and gradually beat in the cold prepared apple. Serve in fancy cups at once. Top with whipped cream if desired.

LPPLE FLUFF WITH TEA CAKES.

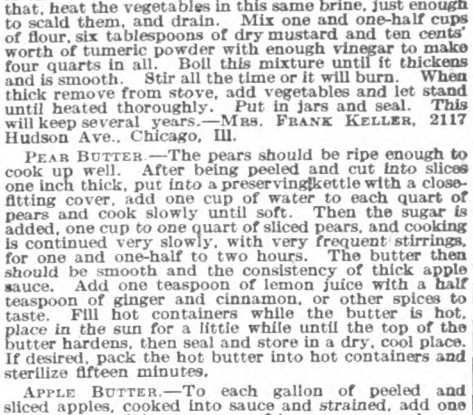
TEA CAKES.—Cream one-fourth cup of butter and gradually add one-half cup of sugar and one well-beaten egg. Sift two and one-half teaspoons of baking powder with one and one-half cups of sifted flour and add it alternately with one-half cup of milk to the butter mixture. Beat hard and bake in small gem tins.

MUSTARD CHOW CHOW.—One quart of green beans, one quart of yellow beans, two quarts of silver onions, two heads of cauliflower, divided into small pieces, six red peppers, six green peppers, one large cucumber, six sour pickles, and one-quarter peck of green tomatoes. Clean and cut all the vegetables. Make a brine of four quarts of water, two cups of salt and put vegetables in this and let them remain twenty-four hours. After that, heat the vegetables in this same brine, just enough to scald them, and drain. Mix one and one-half cups of flour, six tablespoons of dry mustard and ten cents' worth of tumeric powder with enough vinegar to make four quarts in all. Boil this mixture until it thickens and is smooth. Stir all the time or it will burn. When thick remove from stove, add vegetables and let stand until heated thoroughly. Put in jars and seal. This will keep several years.—MRS. FRANK KELLER, 2117 Hudson Ave., Chicago, Ill.

PEAR BUTTER.—The pears should be ripe enough to cook up well. After being peeled and cut into slices one inch thick, put into a preserving kettle with a close-fitting cover, add one cup of water to each quart of pears and cook slowly until soft. Then the sugar is added, one cup to one quart of sliced pears, and cooking is continued very slowly, with very frequent stirrings, for one and one-half to two hours. The butter then should be smooth and the consistency of thick apple sauce. Add one teaspoon of lemon juice with a half teaspoon of ginger and cinnamon, or other spices to taste. Fill hot containers while the butter is hot, place in the sun for a little while until the top of the butter hardens, then seal and store in a dry, cool place. If desired, pack the hot butter into hot containers and sterilize fifteen minutes.



APPLE BUTTER.—To each gallon of peeled and sliced apples, cooked into sauce and strained, add one pint of grape juice, one cup of brown sugar and one-quarter teaspoon of salt. Cook slowly and stir often for two hours, or until of the desired thickness; then stir in one teaspoon of cinnamon and pack while hot into hot containers and sterilize thirty minutes. Seal and store in a dry, cool place.—MISS ARGENT MCALISTER, Morristown, R. R. 2, Tenn.

CANNED TOMATOES.—Select only good, firm tomatoes. Wash them and scald and remove skins if you wish. Cut out all hard places and put to boil in a good-sized pan. Boil at least ten minutes after they come to the boiling point. Have ready scalded jars. To each quart of tomato, add one teaspoon of salt, on top of tomatoes after jar is filled, seal, turn bottom up a while. Wrap each jar in paper and put in a cool, dark place. I never lose a jar this way.

To can cucumbers, gather small ones and wash in several waters. Put in a pan, sprinkle with salt and pour enough boiling water over them to cover. Let stand fifteen minutes. Have jars scalded. Remove cucumbers from water and place in jars. Pour pure vinegar into jars and add one-half teaspoon salt to each quart jar. A little mixed spice may be added if desired. Don't stand jars upside down. Be sure and seal tightly. A large jar can be filled this way by adding some every day, then salt and sealing. When opening a large jar, take out some and put in a small jar and pour a little vinegar over them. Be sure the cucumbers left in large jar are covered with vinegar. Seal tightly and they will keep. Cut fruit from vines with sharp knife, leaving a short stem.

MRS. EFFIE GENTRY, Slaton, R. R. 1, Box 96, Texas.

BIRTHDAY CAKE.—One cup of sifted pastry flour sifted six times with one teaspoon of cream of tartar. Sift one and one-half cups of sugar six times. Beat the whites of 12 eggs very stiff and dry, add one teaspoon of vanilla, and then fold in the sugar, and lastly the flour. Do not beat, but use the folding motion until smooth. Bake in a slow oven 45 minutes.

BIRTHDAY CAKE.

CORN SALAD.—One dozen ears sweet corn, boil and cut from cob, one large head cabbage, cut fine, one-half dozen green peppers and one red pepper, cut fine, and one cup of sugar. Mix well together and cook twenty minutes in five pints of vinegar. Add salt to taste. Dissolve one-quarter pound mustard and one teaspoon tumeric in cold vinegar and stir in while hot.

MRS. ETHEL TILLOTSON.

GREEN TOMATO PICKLES.—Slice one-half bushel of green tomatoes and one-half peck of onions. Add two cups of salt and let stand over night. In morning drain and place in a large saucepan. Then add nine green peppers from which the seeds have been removed, one teaspoon ground cloves, one stick of cinnamon, one teaspoon ground mace, one-half cup whole peppercorns, two tablespoons mustard, five pounds brown sugar, three quarts of vinegar and cook one hour. Seal

MRS. J. W. MCCASKILL, West Tampa, Fla.

Made by "Uneeda Bakers"

THE STORES that prominently display "Uneeda Bakers" Products are dependable.

"Uneeda Bakers" glass display covers show many inviting and delectable biscuit, cookies, crackers, wafers and cakes. You will find them crisp, fresh, and most appetizing.

All the fine arts of biscuit baking, that have made Uneeda Biscuit the most famous soda cracker of all times, are utilized in making all "Uneeda Bakers" products attractively wholesome and nutritious.

Made by "Uneeda Bakers" means for you, convenience and a pledge of purity.

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

"Uneeda Bakers"

A Forgotten Lo

by Adelaid

A cup more bitter than death was at her lips

And through that narrow gap Jacky Hamilton jumped for her life.

"She's d with an

Copyright, 1899, by Street and Smith.
Serial rights by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A SCAPEGOAT.

IT was well for Jacky Hamilton that she could not know for many a day just what those letters of hers had done.

All London was ringing with the news that Lesard—Lesard, the clever financier, whose hard honesty had been a byword—had been arrested for selling stolen jewels to a woman known as the Red Mouse. And, more, had been accused in a letter written by the missing girl, who was thought to have killed Marchmont, of having been in his house on the night of the murder and having stolen the diamonds in her presence.

It was incredible—but half the town flocked to Bow Street to hear the inquiry. To have the impeccable Lesard turn out a scoundrel would be sweet indeed to the man who owed him money. People he had injured and people he had served went alike to stare at him in the dock.

They marveled at his hard, quiet face, as at the brazenness of guilt. If he were innocent, why did he not look perturbed, furious?

Not one of them imagined that to the man himself the whole thing was a bitter farce that could be explained by four words when he chose to speak them.

The thing was clear as daylight to him—which was more than it was to any one else but Mrs. Gibbs, choking with joy in the safe retreat of a retired lodging house! He remembered those diamonds the instant he was confronted with them. They had belonged to a sham Austrian countess, who, five years since, had startled all London with her audacity and her lovers. She had been in a certain kind of society till one unlucky day, when she met Paul Marchmont. He was at the end of his tether with debt, and moved heaven and earth to make his new acquaintance love him. And love him she did; giving the go-by to princes for his sake; paying his debts starting him afresh. And the reward she got was that he stole her diamonds—"her luck," as she always called the gorgeous necklace, being superstitious about it.

She had been rich then, had had the whole detective force searching for her jewels, while the man who had stolen them sympathized and condoled with her. But her luck had gone with the diamonds. She lost her money, aged as some women do, with one leap, and vanished into the country, when one day Marchmont left her for good and all. Her superstition about the necklace seemed, curiously enough, to hold water. Her luck went with it; Marchmont's grew and waxed till he lost it, and his life, too; Victor Lesard's good fortune had struck his first rock when he sold them. But his ill-luck had fallen on his brother.

For Jacky's vengeance had miscarried utterly. As the morning went on the Lesard she loved began to see that unless something turned up—which was unlikely—it was not four, nor twenty, words of his own that would clear him.

A tall woman in black, whom he knew to be the Countess Altenstein, the original owner of the jewels sat close to the dock. He saw her start when the first piece of evidence was produced.

It was Jacky's letters to the police and the Red Mouse, the same and both to the effect that Lesard had stolen the jewels from Marchmont on the night he was killed.

To the Countess Altenstein the news that Marchmont was the thief took away all the joy of the discovery of her diamonds. When she was called to the witness stand she only turned dully toward Lesard.

"If Mr. Marchmont took the diamonds," she said, in a strained voice that pierced the crowded room, "that man may easily have known he had them! For I used to see them together at theaters often," and she pointed to Lesard.

There was nothing more to be got out of her, but she had thrown the first stone.

The Red Mouse threw the second.

Mad with fury and greed, she scarcely looked at the man in the dock, and, indeed, between a thick veil and the belladonna in her eyes, all she could see was the general outline of his face, and that was line for line like the Lesard she knew. That the soul of the man shone through—with a difference—she neither saw nor cared, if his conviction would get her money out of him. She dwelt at large in the sinfulness of taking away her diamonds and giving her nothing till the magistrate cut her short without ceremony.

"You swear the prisoner sold you those jewels?" he asked curtly.

"Of course he did!" furiously. "He said he got them from a connection of his wife's. He told me that the girl who recognized the necklace and wrote that letter afterward was his wife." Her rage would have been funny if it had not been dangerous. The prisoner smiled. Victor had overshot the mark. But he smiled no more when the next witness was called.

He had never laid eyes on her, but to see her brought back Jacky, who had trusted him not at all for his brother's sake, who was in the most sanguine view of things, hiding somewhere in London, having sent him to the dock of a police court when a little loyalty would have saved her and him.

Gillian, white-faced, bronze-haired, never raised her eyes when she had kissed the dirty Bible.

A cup more bitter than death was at her lips, a cup she had vowed never to drain. But she would drain it now, and not she alone. Charles Vivian, who sat in court, must share it.

The man in the dock had been her husband; she had loved him, and now loathed him. Yet for that very reason she could not deliberately swear his life away. If she proved him guilty and cleared herself, it would be that she might walk over his dead body to the new love that was sweeter than the old. She knew what the pain was that she must deal to an honest heart that loved her, to Vivian, who had come to her in jail when there was no one to help her, and nearly broken her heart with his kindness and his belief in her; who had engaged lawyers for her that she might fight to the end what she could not fight without staining her soul with her husband's blood.

Almost inaudibly she answered to her name; but at the next question she spoke out.

"No! I never wrote any letters!" for they had been signed with a short J that might have been a G, and it was merely a supposition that the missing sister had written them. "I could not write any. I never saw or heard of any black diamonds."

The letters were handed to her.

"Did your sister write these, to your knowledge?"

"Not to my knowledge," truthfully enough.

"Are they in her handwriting?"

"Yes!" pale as death.

"Do you know where she is?" sharply.

"No!" Her lips quivered, and she lifted her hand to hide it.

"Were you also in the cave the letters speak of, on the night mentioned?"

"Yes."

"If you saw nothing of any diamonds, could your sister have done so?"

"I don't know. We were not together."

Each answer seemed dragged out of her. She was afraid to tell the truth, and equally to lie.

"Did you see the prisoner there on the night in question?"

For the first time Gillian Hamilton looked up, but at the magistrate, not at Lesard. She had learned in the past three days what a man's self-forgetful love could be, and she must kill that love that had grown dear to her, whose height and depth had wrapped her round when she was deserted and desolate. Whatever course she chose would kill it, for to deliberately go to it by swearing away the life of another man who it must come out had been dear to her, would do it equally with the only other way—the hard way she had chosen.

"You cannot compel me to answer," she said very sharply.

The magistrate gasped.

"Perhaps you will be good enough to state why not?" he said, his judicial calm a little shattered.

"Because a wife may give evidence against her husband if she likes, but no court in England can compel her to. And that man is my husband. I was married to him at the registrar's office in Lambeth a year ago."

The flutter that went through the court covered Sir Charles Vivian's convulsive start.

He sat whiter than Gillian, sick to death. Gillian—the wife of a thief, for all he knew, of a murderer. For her answer told him this man had been in the cave, and might—for all he knew again—have made her help him in his ghastly work.

"Perhaps you do not realize," said the magistrate icily, "that what you now admit is as damaging to the prisoner as any outspoken testimony could be!"

He saw the undisguised surprise on Lesard's face, and questioned him suddenly.

"Have you anything to say to this?"

The clear gray eyes of the prisoner met his.

"Only that it is an utter mistake, your honor," he answered slowly. "I never saw the witness until today, in this room. My only knowledge of her came from the fact that I was engaged to her sister, who is now missing."

Charles Vivian stared at him as he had never stared in his life; and quivered as his eyes found Gillian again.

She had covered her face and stood shaken with sobs. No wonder that Jacky had "known him," no wonder she hated him! Gillian knew now how Jacky must have suffered that night when she knelt with her face hidden on her sister's knee—knelt to hide the agony that is more cruel than the grave.

But Vivian could only think Gillian had broken down because the prisoner had repudiated her, unless—surely she had not been foolhardy enough to perjure herself to try and save Jacky's lover!

By this time the spectators were all agog. They had come to see a well-known man tried for the meanest of crimes; they were staying now because it seemed that this inquiry into the history of the famous diamonds was proving to be the first act in the drama of the Marchmont mystery. It hung now on a thread whether or not Lesard would be arrested on a fresh charge, on suspicion of complicity in Marchmont's murder.

But to the annoyance of every one the magistrate adjourned the inquiry till the afternoon. Yet the spectators could not regret the entr'acte when they saw the next scene in the play.

The first witness was the Lambeth registrar himself, who produced the record of Gillian's marriage, which was hard and fast. Gillian Hamilton and Louis Lesard, and gave his own businesslike testimony that, to the best of his recollection, the Louis Lesard in the dock was the man whose marriage he had performed. Vivian, sick, miserable, incredulous, could not tell what to think. The man had seemed so straightforward all through, had told the same story of his engagement to Jacky in Vivian's own house; and yet—Gillian's sworn testimony had been confirmed. And then to his amaze a fresh witness appeared.

Brookes, strangely thin and poor-looking, came on the stand, and Vivian's old distrust of him revived. The man was shattered with drinking, his face and manner more cringing and furtive than ever, but his evidence ruined Lesard.

He told his story like a man who walks to the cannon's mouth, or lies about his friend to save his own life.

"He had often seen the prisoner, who visited his late master, usually after nightfall. He had certainly been there the day of the murder, and had returned after dark, when Brookes had seen him entering secretly and had told Marchmont he was in the house. He had most probably taken the diamonds, which Brookes had seen on several occasions, and knew had not been found after his master's death. But—stumblingly—in the opinion of the butler, he had not meant to kill Marchmont."

"We are not here to discuss that!" said the magistrate sharply. "You can step down."

No one but Vivian noted that the man obeyed with frenzied haste, and left the courtroom as if he had borne witness at the peril of his life. And truly nothing but the strong arm of the law had brought him there, where he must face Lesard. Once out, the cidevant butler ran like a hare, till the sweat poured down his emaciated face. He had met Lesard's eyes once and come to no harm but he dared not confront them again. All death and hell would not get him to witness at the murder trial of Gillian Hamilton while there was a chink in London that would hide him.

"Yes," the defendant answered the first question quietly, "my name is Louis Victor Lesard.

But I was "Were jewels wer
"No."
"Where
The ha
"I was could not wandering out to W till ten in
"Alone?
"Yes."
"You n
you?"
"No on was bleedi was a dee a curious to trial fo
of which
But there leaving th of compli
There wa clear up husband s sitting alo leaned his
He had would he ing for hi
even accu
Red Mou ton that could not going to was he wh
"They
he though of escapin nothing."
For his Jacky. T him, for h
have been guilty, wh
He real of but on hate. She him. If s idence tha
by experi would alw made to s
"I'll giv to extradi
And then
If Jacky o
be only hi weaken t give, he c his oath.
He was None of brother, o hundred e but one, f his face v made a s

Jacky's stood in h
Lesard
who had s need to b memory—hurry the come to.
come back
by this tin empty ho with whic bare walls and by th
the dark.
a woman h
be gone!
Motionle
torpid. T
she must thought s like a thre had stretc
With a there noth shaking li round the What w
Did someth
Somethi sprang to i impulse th
Lesard, noticed hi
the shining in her bra tnere.
"Matche
not to hav
Down o of all the keep; on th
from the c not be ma
the lamp horsehair,
The crac like an exp hair began

Who's Who on the Front Cover

No.	Baby's Name.	Age.	Parent's Name.	Residence.
1	Edith Mabel	5 mos.,	Mrs. Lew Swope, Jr.,	Egypt, Pa.
2	Hubert Harold	3 yrs.,	Mrs. Othel Chapman,	McHenry, Ky.
6	Dale Eugene	17 wks.,	Mrs. E. W. Gibson,	Spencer, Ind.
9	Charles Allen	6 mos.,	Mrs. Ben Bowling,	Greenbrier, Texas.
11	Lula Lorene Brown	6 mos.,	Granddaughter of Amanda Floyd,	Stockton, Mo.
15	Phyllis May	2 yrs.,	Mrs. Jesse Transue,	Parma, Idaho.
17	Vivian Ileen	18 mos.,	Mrs. Ray Jackson,	Trivola, Ill.
20	Elmer, Jr.	3 mos.,	Mrs. John Fett,	Beaverdam, Ohio.
16	Alvin Julius	9 mos.,	Mrs. Dena Backting,	Forest Green, Mo.
22	Melvin John	5 mos.,	Mrs. John F. Bohl,	Portland, Ore.
24	Alfred Donald	16 mos.,	Mrs. Sallie Mae Atkins,	Iuka, Miss.
27	Velma Ruth	2 yrs.,	Mrs. Luella Cordle,	London, Ohio.
29	Virginia Moyra	3 yrs.,	Mrs. Thomas West,	Kansas City, Mo.
30	Margaret Desda	5 mos.,	Mrs. H. T. Davis,	Pungo, N. C.
31A	Ellen Maxine Eads	1 yr.,	Granddaughters of Mrs. Chas. Lee,	Bloomington, Ind.
31B	Margaret LaVerne Lee	7 mos.,
32	Billie	2 yrs.,	Mrs. Warren E. Welch,	Broadway, Va.
34	Walter James	16 mos.,	Mrs. Bessie Lowe,	Jumping Branch, W. Va.
36A	James	4 yrs.,	Mrs L. H. Clark,	Live Oak, Calif.
36B	Jack	2 yrs.,	Mrs L. H. Clark,	Live Oak, Calif.
37	Dona	7 mos.,	Mrs. Katie Morrell,	Iredell, Texas.
38	Larue	7 mos.,	Mrs. Fred Bennett,	Bernice, La.
40	Avis Wilson	7½ mos.,	Mrs. A. W. Metcalf,	Central Village, Ct.
45	DeForest	2 yrs.,	Mrs. F. C. Sweeney,	East Jaffrey, N. H.

SERVING A FOWL FOUR DIFFERENT WAYS

NO. 1.—WITH PEAS, SEASONED RICE, TOMATO JELLY AND TINY BISCUITS.

By Violet Marsh

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

A SIX-POUND fowl, if prepared and cooked without waste, will provide four dinners for four people. On this page are shown four plates, each with a portion of fowl and different vegetable combinations. Select a fowl that is meaty and compact, d not over-fat. Cut off the head so as not to ste any of the neck. Draw and clean, taking e not to tear the liver. Wash inside and out d rinse well. Cut off and reject any of the liver at may have a greenish tinge; then return the er to the cavity with the cleaned heart and giz- rd. Sew the edges of opening together, also aw the skin over the end of neck and fasten. rap and tie in cheese-cloth and place on a trivet other article that will keep the fowl from the ttom of the kettle, pour over boiling water until covers about one-third of the fowl; cover closely prevent escape of steam and slowly cook until nder, turning every half-hour. Add salt three- arters hour before done. Cooking entirely by eam is another cellent way to ok the fowl. stead of hav- g it partly in ter, lay it in steamer and ep a good vol- ne of steam neath it until oked.

After cooking, ie fowl is rved so as to low of the fol- wing combina- ons:

No. 1.—ings cut off ith small por- on of breast, rumsticks, ver and the oysters" which lie each side of the lower part of ackbone.

No.2.—Breast cut into four portions.

No.3.—Gizzard, heart, meat from neck and all ie remaining bits from the frame are chopped and ade into chicken balls.

No. 4.—Thighs sliced cold.

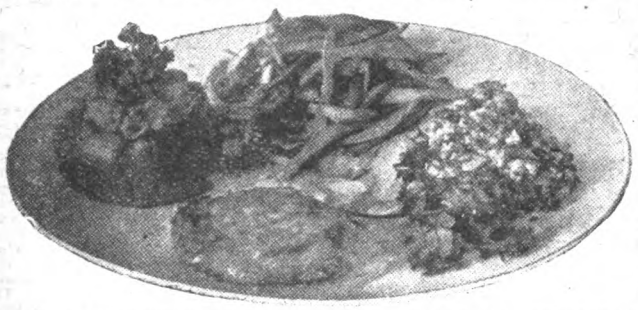
If the fowl is cooked in water, the liquor may be oiled down and made into a gravy to serve with ombinations one and two.

Plate No. 1 has peas, seasoned rice, tomato, elly and tiny baking powder biscuits, with the owl which is warmed in chicken gravy, or in white auce made rich with butter and seasoned with a craping of onion, paprika and a little lemon juice.

SEASONED RICE.—Use steamed or boiled rice, ut a layer of rice in a buttered pudding dish, dot ith butter and thinly cover with shavings of heese, paprika and a little salt unless the rice was ufficiently salted when cooked. Repeat until ce is used, then add milk to within about three nches of the top, cover with fine cracker crumbs noistened in melted butter and bake in a quick ven until cheese is melted.

PEAS.—Drain canned peas; put into double oiler, add one-third teaspoon of sugar, two level ablespoons of butter and one tablespoon of cream o each can and heat one-half hour.

TOMATO JELLY.—Stew fresh tomatoes and strain. oak two tablespoons of ranulated gelatin in one- alf cup of cold water wenty minutes and add o three cups of boiling ot tomato. Season with ne-half teaspoon of salt nd one teaspoon of sugar. our into small cups to ool.



BISCUITS.—Two cups f sifted flour, five even easpoons of baking pow- er and one even tea- poon of salt sifted wice. Work in three cant tablespoons of old shortening. Mix with about one cup of weet skim-milk, adding it gradually to differ- nt places through the flour. Never make one part very wet and then thicken it with flour, but ry to moisten evenly as this makes tender read. Do not knead, but toss onto lightly floured bread-board, shape, roll less than one-half inch hick and cut into small rounds. Bake ten minutes in a hot oven.

Plate No.2 holds a combination of fried breast of chicken, shredded potatoes, stuffed tomato and new turnip.

CHICKEN.—Cut each side of breast into two pieces. Roll in fine cracker-crumbs, then in egg slightly beaten with one teaspoon of cold water, then in cracker-crumbs. Brown in deep fat, or fry in shallow bacon fat.

SHREDDED POTATO.—Pare, cut into quarter inch slices both ways, soak until crisp in cold water and dry between cloths. Fry in deep fat until a light brown. Do not over-cook.

STUFFED TOMATO.—Cut thin slice from stem end of well-ripened but firm tomatoes. Scoop out the pulp containing seeds. Make a stuffing of soft fine bread-crumbs moistened with warm butter, and season with a little scraped onion, shredded green pepper, a little salt and pepper. Fill the tomatoes and bake twenty minutes. If a richer stuffing is desired, use equal parts of chopped chicken or ham and a beaten egg.

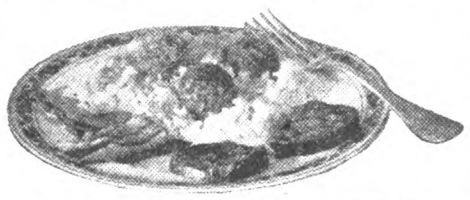
NO. 2.—WITH SHREDDED POTATOES, STUFFED TOMATO AND NEW TURNIP.

MASHED TURNIP.—Pare and slice and steam cook, or place in boiling water and boil rapidly until tender. Drain, press through the potato ricer so as to eliminate any fibrous parts and return to kettle. Reheat with butter, pepper and salt and serve at once.

Plate No. 3 shows chicken balls on a bed of mashed potato, two slices of crisp bacon and sliced tomato.

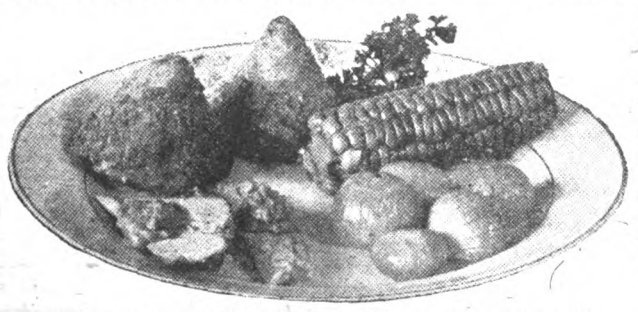
CHICKEN BALLS.—Chop the chicken, add two boiled onions, one cup of fine fresh bread-crumbs moistened with one-third cup of warm butter, one-half teaspoon of poultry dressing, salt, one slightly beaten egg and a little gravy or cream if necessary to shape the balls. Roll in cracker-crumbs, egg, then cracker-crumbs again. Drop into hot deep fat and fry brown.

MASHED POTATO.—Peel and soak potatoes in salted water one hour. Boil in as little water as possible to which salt has been added. Drain and set in oven to dry. Mash into same kettle, set on hot cover, make a hole in center of potato and pour in enough thin cream or milk to moisten. Beat until light and fluffy. Add butter if milk is used.



BACON.—Many prefer oven-cooked bacon, as it cooks evenly, but the oven must be very hot. Lay evenly in biscuit tin and watch carefully.

PLATE NO. 4 has potato croquettes, boiled onions and corn, with the cold sliced thighs.



POTATO CROQUETTES.—Prepare and rice potatoes as for mashed potatoes. To three cups add three tablespoons of butter, one-third teaspoon of celery salt, a little scraped onion, and a dash of cayenne pepper. Add two beaten egg yolks and then thoroughly beat the whole mixture. To shape, wet a tiny tunnel in cold water and press it full of the potato. Roll in fine cracker-crumbs, then in egg slightly beaten with a tablespoon of cold water, and then in egg again. Fry in deep fat. Care must be taken not to cool the fat as it is liable to cause the egg and crumb coating to separate from the potato.

BOILED ONIONS.—While peeling onions they should be held in a pan of cold water to prevent the fumes from reaching the eyes. Drop one at a time in boiling water, keeping the water continuously boiling. Cook until very soft. Drain. If a sauce is desired, place the onions in hot cream and season with salt and pepper. Onions are very wholesome and should be freely eaten throughout the year.

BOILED GREEN CORN.—To be thoroughly delicious green corn should be young enough to show milk when the raw kernel is broken. Husk, remove silk and cut the husk end close so as not to take up space in kettle. Cover with boiling water. Have a hot fire so as to bring corn quickly to a boil. Cook until the kernels will readily lift from cob when pressed with a fork. Do not cook too long as it hardens the corn. Never add salt to corn water as this also hardens.

NO. 3.—WITH MASHED POTATO, BACON AND SLICED TOMATO.

NO. 4.—WITH POTATO CROQUETTES, BOILED ONIONS AND CORN.

Some Recipes for Early Fall

BAKED YOUNG CHICKEN.—Cut into pieces, dredge well with flour and sprinkle with salt and a very little pepper. Pack in a baking dish, cover with fresh rich scalding milk; cover and bake in a moderate oven until tender. Do not allow the milk to more than simmer.

CALF'S LIVER.—Tie in shape and place in a deep dish that can be closely covered. Cover the top with very thin slices of salt pork. Cut two stalks of celery, four small onion, one carrot and half of a green pepper into slices and place around the liver. Stir three even tablespoons of flour into two scant tablespoons of bubbling butter and gradually add two and one-half cups of hot water. When it thickens, pour it over the vegetables, cover and bake very slowly two and one-half hours. During the last hour of cooking taste the gravy to determine whether more salt is necessary than that contained in the butter and pork.

LIVER AND BACON.—Slice calf's liver one-half inch thick and cover with boiling water for five minutes. Drain and wipe. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, dredge with flour and cook in bacon fat. The bacon is fried, or baked as previously described.

GREEN PEA PUREE.—Peas too old to serve as a vegetable will make a delicious puree. Shell and put through the food chopper. Cover with cold water, add a small sliced onion, a few slices of carrot and cook until the peas are tender, taking care they do not burn. Put through a sieve, return to fire and if too thick add boiling water. Season with salt, a few grains of pepper and just before serving add one cup of thin cream to a quart of puree. If cream is not available, season with one-fourth cup of butter.

CREAMED CABBAGE.—Have water boiling hard; gradually add cabbage that has been sliced crosswise and quite fine. Do not allow water to stop boiling. Cook forty minutes to one hour. Drain. Make a white sauce, put cabbage and sauce in layers in a baking dish, cover the top with fresh crumbs well buttered and bake in a quick oven until brown.

SMALL POTATOES.—Do not throw away the tiny new potatoes that have ripened. Wash and boil in salted water with jackets on. Pare, slice into a hot serving dish and pour over them a generous amount of melted butter mixed with a little salt, pepper, minced parsley and lemon juice.

BEET AND CARROT SALAD.—Boil both vegetables separately, pare and coarsely chop. Mix well. Serve with a dressing made by mixing one-half teaspoon of salt, one-fourth teaspoon of paprika, three dessertspoons of lemon juice, five tablespoons of olive oil, two tablespoons of heavy sweet or sour cream, and beating the whole with an egg beater until light. Use at once as it is liable to separate. This dressing is excellent with ripe tomatoes, crisp shredded cabbage and apple mixed, or with asparagus.

JERUSALEM ARTICHOKES.—Wash and pare and cut into slices. Boil in slightly salted water until tender which will take from forty to fifty minutes. Drain and season with butter and a little cream. Another way to cook artichokes is to peel and cut into cubes, add a small sliced onion, put into a double boiler, cover with boiling milk and cook until tender. Mix one tablespoon of butter with one of dry flour and stir into the milk one-half hour before taking from the fire. Season with paprika and salt.

KOHL-RABI.—This vegetable, known as the turnip-cabbage in some sections, belongs to the cabbage family, but instead of the reserve nutritive matter of the plant being stored largely in the leaves or flowers, it is collected in the stem, which forms a turniplike enlargement just above the ground. It is fine flavored and delicate if cooked very young. The diameter should not be over three inches. It is pared and sliced, cooked in boiling water and prepared the same as turnip.

KALE.—The dwarf, green-curled variety is the best for the table. The leaves are sweeter and more tender after having been touched by the frost. In the north the roots may be banked with earth at the beginning of winter and when extreme cold weather sets in the plants are covered with hay. In the spring the old stalks will produce young shoots that make delicious greens. Kale is cooked the same as cabbage.

PINEAPPLE PIE.—When using canned pineapple buy the sliced and shred it. Mix one-half cup of sugar with two tablespoons of cornstarch, add two beaten egg yolks and one cup of pineapple juice, or whatever amount the can contains and cook it three minutes after it begins to boil, stirring constantly. Mix the pineapple with this mixture and bake between crusts.

PEACH PUDDING.—Place one quart of ripe pared and halved peaches in the bottom of a baking dish, and cover with two cups of sugar and two teaspoons of lemon juice. Make a biscuit dough (see biscuit recipe), using about two-thirds for the duff and making the remainder into biscuits. Shape and spread the dough over the peaches which should fill the dish not over half full, and bake in a quick oven until the crust is a rich brown. It is well to set the dish of peaches into the oven until they have reached the cooking point before putting on the dough.

APPLE-MINT JELLY.—Cut crabapples into quarters, barely cover with cold water and quickly bring to a boil. Cook until soft with as little stirring as possible. Drain through a cheese-cloth bag, bring juice to a boil, add a bunch of broken mint tied in a cheese-cloth, boil five minutes, or longer if a stronger mint flavor is desired, remove bag and finish boiling, which in all should be about twenty minutes. Measure juice and allow three cups of sugar to four cups of juice. Bring juice to a boil, gradually add sugar while stirring, and as soon as the juice boils, skim and at once pour into hot glasses.

GRAPE AND APPLE JELLY.—Cut apples into small pieces, barely cover with cold water and rapidly cook until soft. When about two-thirds done, add an equal amount of stewed grapes and finish cooking. Drain. Use equal parts of juice and sugar and proceed as in Apple-mint Jelly.

RIPE CUCUMBER PICKLE.—Pare the cucumbers, cut in halves lengthwise and remove seeds. There should be syrup sufficient to cover while cooking. To every two pounds of sugar use one pint of vinegar and one tablespoon of whole clove and two tablespoons of stick cinnamon loosely tied in a bag. Cook the sugar, vinegar and spices five minutes, pour over the cucumbers, slowly bring to a boil, then set back where the pickle will scarcely simmer and cook until the cucumber has a transparent appearance.

DILL PICKLES.—Use slender green cucumbers measuring four or five inches long, wash and wipe. In the bottom of a crock place a layer of grape leaves, and then a layer of cucumbers, three tart apples cut in eighths without paring or coring, a few bunches of ripe grapes of a green variety, two sliced onions, about a third of a cup of mixed whole spices and a sprinkling of dill tops with seeds. Repeat until all the cucumbers are used and cover with grape leaves. To four gallons of hot water use a scant pound of coarse salt. Dissolve and when cold pour it over the pickles until they are well covered. Weight with a round piece of clean wood, or a flat jar cover of a smaller size and hold it under the brine with a clean stone. Cover. Do not disturd for sixteen days.

PICKLED NASTURTIUMS.—Pick the seeds when they are green and tender and with one-inch stems. Make a light brine and soak the seeds 48 hours. Soak in fresh water 24 hours and then put the seeds into bottles and cover with good vinegar. These make an excellent substitute for capers.

Brownie's Triumph

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 4.)

"That is so," returned Isabel, with scowling brow.

"You say she still has the casket in there with her?"

"Yes."

"Why under the sun didn't you take it away from her by main force?"

"Because she was so haughty and defiant I did not dare touch her," Mrs. Coolidge admitted, with rather a crest-fallen air. Besides, she told me she should appeal to Lord Dunforth if I did not let her go quietly; and I knew, after what you had told me, that that would never do."

"No, indeed; it is very evident that he knows too much about the jewels, while we know too little. But how are we going to get out of this abominable muss, anyhow?" and Isabel looked miserably anxious.

"Keep her in there until she gives up the box and promises secrecy," returned her mother, with a significant nod at the veiled door.

"Well, suppose she will not yield at all?"

"She must sleep, at all events: and, if we cannot catch her in a natural sleep, there are things that will make her unconscious, and then we can take the jewels away from her," was the whispered reply.

But she will be missed, meanwhile."

"Well, we must wonder with the rest what has become of her. I am confident no one saw her come in here, and so no one will suspect us in the matter. I tell you, Isabel, we have a desperate game to play, now, or you will lose Sir Charles. Those jewels we must have, for their absence will occasion endless inquiry and remark. If she won't yield, we must keep her shut up until after the wedding. When that is over, and you are sure of your position, I do not care what becomes of them or her," the proud woman whispered, in concentrated tones, and with a desperate and reckless air that almost frightened her daughter.

"Mamma, would you dare keep her in there so long?"

"Yes, I will dare anything, rather than that all your bright prospects should be sacrificed. Just so sure as we let her out, she will reveal everything, and we shall be ruined."

"But you know we are all to go to Paris next week to be gone a fortnight, and attend to my trousseau."

"I know it was so arranged, but you and Lady Randal will have to go—I shall be ill, and not able to go; then I can easily look after our prisoner, and no one will be the wiser for it."

"But is there no danger that she will be heard if she should scream, or cry, or make a fuss?"

"Not the least in the world. The place seems to be made of solid masonry; it has no other door but this, which is very thick, and, with those heavy curtains dropped over it, no one could ever hear her. Besides, I have no fear that she will make any disturbance—she is too proud."

"What if she should die in there, mamma?"

The two plotting women looked at each other with whitening faces for a moment.

Mrs. Coolidge was the first to recover herself, however.

"Pshaw! what a foolish notion, Isabel. She is strong and well, and there is no danger. I will take her plenty of good food every day, and we can make her up a comfortable bed from our own, and she will do well enough."

"But, mamma, the bare possibility of the thing gives me a dreadful feeling. I am as weak as if I had just recovered from a swoon," said Isabel, shuddering.

"Don't be a fool, child; only let us tide the next four or five weeks over, and we shall be all right. However, if you say so, and are willing to run the risk, we will let her out now," returned Mrs. Coolidge, impatiently.

"No, no; there is no other way as I see but to keep her shut up. Sir Charles is so particular and conscientious that he would never forgive the wrong we have done her; and, mamma, I am really very fond of him. I believe it would upset me entirely if anything should happen to separate us now, and I mean to try and be a better woman after I am married," Isabel returned, nervously, and with very crimson cheeks, as if ashamed of the confession.

An hour later Lady Ruxley's bell rang a furious peal. It had been nearly three hours since Brownie left her. Such a thing had never happened before, and she did not know what to make of it. She was getting so attached to her gentle and lovable companion that she missed her sadly if she were absent an hour.

Presently Minnett came in.

"Minnett, find Miss Dundas, and ask her to please come to me," she said, shortly.

Minnett retired, was gone another half hour, while the old lady grew furious at the delay, then returned and said Miss Dundas could not be found.

She was forthwith angrily commanded to go and find Miss Dundas, and not return until she did.

Minnett meekly withdrew again, and her ladyship sat another hour, fuming and raging, first against her maid, then at Lady Randal, whom she believed to be at the bottom of it all, to serve some purpose of her own, and lastly her ire turned upon Brownie herself for allowing herself to be detained so long.

Finally, her patience completely wearied out, she marched down into the drawing-room, ready to berate the first person she met.

Here she found everybody in a great state of excitement over the non-appearance of Miss Dundas.

One, two, three hours more passed, and still no light was thrown upon the mystery. Lady Ruxley became nearly distracted, Lady Randal was very much disturbed, while the guests, who had remarked Brownie's beauty and refinement, began to whisper of an elopement, or something equally romantic:

In the midst of the excitement, Viola and Alma appeared upon the scene, and, upon being told that Miss Dundas was missing, the former asked what sort of a looking person she was.

Sir Charles immediately gave a very accurate description of Brownie, whereupon both girls exclaimed.

"Why, that is our Miss Douglas, and we met her only a few hours ago, as she was going out!"

Mrs. Coolidge and Isabel were confounded at this speech.

They had not thought of such a thing as the girls meeting her, and had fondly hoped they should not be drawn into the matter any more than to wonder, with the other guests, what could have become of her.

Everybody gathered around the young girls at once, eager to hear more.

"She was with us an hour or more," Viola further explained, "then she said she must return to the Hall, and the last we saw of her she came this way."

"And who is 'our Miss Douglas,' and what connection has she with Lady Ruxley's companion?" asked Sir Charles, coming forward and looking very grave.

"She was our governess until about two months ago, when—when——"

Viola stammered, and got very red in the face.

Her heart prompted her to stand up loyally for the teacher whom she so dearly loved, but she stood somewhat in awe of her mother, who was regarding her with sternest displeasure, and whose eye she had just caught.

Mrs. Coolidge hastened to the rescue.

"What is this you are saying about Miss Douglas, Viola?" she asked, in well-assumed surprise, at the same time giving her daughter a warning glance.

Viola repeated what she had already said, adding some further account of what had transpired in the park.

When she had concluded, her mother turned to Sir Charles, with a grave and sorrowful face.

"I really fear, Sir Charles, that your aunt has been grossly imposed upon. This Miss Douglas, of whom Viola speaks, came over with us from America as governess to the girls. I began to suspect at the very first that she was not just the person I could desire, but I put up with her until about two months ago, when her very unbecoming conduct made it necessary that I should dismiss her immediately."

"What did she do?" demanded Lady Ruxley, sharply, "that was so very dreadful?"

"Really, I am very sorry to be drawn into this very disagreeable matter thus. I dislike to say anything derogatory to any one, but, since you ask, I will say that she took things which did not belong to

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 29.)

GIVE THEM

Baker's Cocoa

TO DRINK

THE almost unceasing activity with which children work off their surplus energy makes good and nutritious food a continual necessity. Of all the food drinks Baker's Cocoa is the most perfect, supplying as it does much valuable material for the upbuilding of their growing bodies. Just as good for older people. It is delicious, too, of fine flavor and aroma.

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Made only by

WALTER BAKER & CO. LTD.

Established 1780

DORCHESTER, MASSACHUSETTS

Booklet of Choice Recipes sent free

Cubby Bear Rescues Ducky Dumpling

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

ONE sunny September morning Cubby Bear took his bowl of porridge out on the doorstep. Some of the September mornings were frosty, autumn was drawing near, and he could not bear to miss any of the loveliness of this mild day by staying indoors. Suddenly a hazelnut struck him on the nose, then fell into his porridge bowl. Cubby fished it out with his spoon, then looked up, wondering how a hazelnut could come from the white birches which stood close by.

Then he had another surprise.

"Ha, ha!" chuckled little Chirpy Chipmunk gleefully. "Why do you stare at me like that, Cubby Bear? Keep your mouth open, just as it is now, and I'll see if I can throw a nut into it!"

It was no wonder Cubby stared, for never before had Chirpy Chipmunk been seen with a stiff row of outstanding feathers around his face.

"What have you been doing to yourself?" asked Cubby, quite forgetting his porridge, which trickled in a thick stream from the overturned bowl.

"Just feathering out!" answered Chirpy jauntily. "I've surprised all the folks this morning. Everyone laughed but the Bunny Babies, and they were afraid. I got these feathers over near Foxy Reynard's den, and there were a lot more. Let's go and get some. Don't you want to dress up in them too?"

"But what bird has lost so many feathers?" Cubby was already starting.

"I do not know," answered Chirpy. "But there I found them, and I have had great fun. Oh, look! there comes Wollie Woodchuck! See me surprise him."

Chirpy ran nimbly up a little three-foot pine tree, and as Wollie approached, suddenly sprang down in front of him, crying, "Woo!"

Wollie backed quickly away from the strange-looking object wearing both fur and feathers.

"What's that thing, Cubby Bear?" he cried, blinking his small eyes. "I never saw a creature with a ruff like that aroung its face! Pooh, pooh!" he added disgustedly, after a closer look. "It's not April Fool's Day, Chirpy Chipmunk, that you should be doing such a foolish trick!"

Wollie went along with Cubby and Chirpy to see the feathers, and when they reached Foxy's den they found a little crowd had gathered there.

Wise Owl, his glasses askew, was looking at the feathers closely.

"It may be," he said, "that Edric Eagle has had an accident, and left these feathers here as he passed over Pleasant Forest on his flight to his mountain home."

"I think you're wrong!" argued Racky Coon. "Even if these are Edric Eagle's feathers, which I very much doubt, would he have dropped so many, all in a bunch? No, no. They would be scattered along as he flew."

"Here is a long, shiny, green feather!" exclaimed Shinyblack Crow, "see, right by Foxy's door. I don't remember to have seen a feather like that, only——"

"Only where?" asked several voices.

"Only among a rooster's tail-feathers, in the farmer's poultry-yard!" Shinyblack Crow told them solemnly.

"O-o-oh!" breathed his hearers, quite awed by what this might mean. And Billy Bluejay said rather sharply:

"If I were in your place, Chirpy Chipmunk, I'd take off that ruff, and not go around grinning like a foolish monkey in stolen feathers."

Chirpy meekly did as he was told.

"Foxy is coming!" said Redtop Woodpecker.

"Stand back, out of sight," ordered Wise Owl, "until he gets here, and then we will inquire into this thing."

Foxy Reynard and Woozie Weasel came trotting along together briskly. Woozie was talking as they came, but Foxy uttered no word, for his mouth was full. His head was held high to keep the object he was carrying from dragging on the ground.

In front of Foxy's den they sat down to rest. Foxy dropped his burden from his jaws, holding it to the ground with one paw, panting a little as he rested.

"That was quite a run, but we made it all right!" laughed sleek little Woozie.

The creature under Foxy's paw moved a little and gave a smothered quack.

At this, the little forest folks came out of their hiding places, and rushed toward Foxy.

"It's alive!" cried Cubby Bear. "Oh, Foxy! let it go!"

Taken thus by surprise, Foxy jumped guiltily. Only for an instant did he lose his guard, but in that instant the poor little feathered thing under his paw made its escape, and rushed into the crowd of newcomers, seeming to know they would befriend it.

"Just as I thought!" said Shinyblack Crow. "These feathers have come from the farmer's poultry-yard, and this is a young duck he has brought home with him."

An indignant chorus arose.

"Hush! Let me deal with him!" commanded Wise Owl, and bristled up to Foxy, demanding savagely, "Tell me, what do you mean by it?"

"I don't have to explain to you," replied Foxy.

"You forget that I am judge of the Pleasant Forest court for offenders!" Wise Owl reminded him darkly.

"But you'd have to get Policeman Bob Catt here to arrest him before you could do anything about it," said Woozie Weasel, coming to Foxy's defence.

Meantime, Cubby Bear and Racky Coon had been soothing the frightened young duck and smoothing his rumpled feathers.

"I—I thought my neck was broken!" gasped the poor creature, touching it tenderly with one webbed foot, "but I seem to be able to hold up my head, if I keep it a little to one side. That fox had a terrible grip on me!"

"YOU FORGET THAT I AM JUDGE OF THE PLEASANT FOREST COURT FOR OFFENDERS!" WISE OWL REMARKED DARKLY.

"Don't be frightened. We'll see that you get back home all safe," Cubby told him.

"If I once get back to the poultry-house, I'll stay there, sure as my name is Ducky Dumpling, and never again go out for a swim!"

Foxy caught this remark, and chuckled. By this time, he was his own "foxy" self again.

"That's how I caught him!" he said, with his sly smile. "He was on his way to the duck-pond,

CONTENTS

	Page
Editorial	2
Brownie's Triumph (continued)	4
Comfort Sisters' Corner and Recipes	5
A Forgotten Love (continued)	6
Who's Who on the Front Cover	6
Serving a Fowl Four Different Ways	7
Cubby Bear Rescues Ducky Dumpling	8
Crumbs of Comfort	8
Comfort's League of Cousins	9
Don, the Educated Dog	10
If You Wish It	12
The Pretty Girls' Club	14
Happy Little Tots from Comfort's Family	16 & 17
Mother and Baby	16
Babies on This and Opposite Page	17
"What's in a Name?"	18
Brainograms	18
From Attic to Cellar	20
Designs in Patchwork and Filet Crochet	22
Applique and Crochet for Busy Workers	24
The Embroidery Basket	24
The Feast of the Dead	25
Better Babies and Happier Mothers	26
Clothes for the Woman Who Makes Her Own	27
Poultry Farming for Women	28
Talks with Girls	30
Missing Relatives and Friends	30
The Modern Farmer	31
Where Traplines Cross	32
Home Lawyer	33
Automobile and Gas Engine Helps	34
Veterinary Information	36
Manners and Looks	37
Information Bureau	38
Family Doctor	39
The Blue Hat	39
After Five Years	41
The Emporium of Bargains and Opportunities	43
Three Wheel Chairs in August	43

All Subscriptions Cut Off At Expiration

All subscriptions will be cut short off on date of expiration, unless the subscriptions are renewed and paid for. Not even one copy will be sent, after expiration, until the subscription is renewed. If the number over your name on the wrapper on this magazine is 419, it means that this is the last copy of COMFORT you will receive until you renew your subscription. DO IT TODAY.

OCTOBER COMFORT

Our fine Harvest Number will yield our readers a big crop of interesting and instructive reading matter on timely topics, as well as fascinating fiction for fall reading. The following are some of the

Special Features for October

"Little Miss Brown's Harvest" A delightful heart-interest story by Joseph F. Novak.

"Touch of Romany" A strange romance in high society in which the mysteries of Gypsy life and fortune-telling are revealed.

"King Tut-Ank-Hamen's Revenge" Weird superstitions of ancient Egypt and the East that still dominate the oriental mind.

"Good Bread in the Home" How to make various kinds of bread—their food values explained.

"The Woman with the Hoe" Tells how women are succeeding in many lines of agriculture.

"Little Dog Angels" Pictures and describes a beautiful dog cemetery in which pets are buried.

"Cubby Bear and the Fox Hunt" Foxy Reynard gets Cubby Bear into trouble.

If the number over your name on the wrapper on this magazine is 419 it means that your subscription expires with this present issue and that you will not receive October COMFORT unless you renew your subscription at once—we can not send you a single copy, after expiration, until you have renewed. Don't miss October COMFORT.

Save money by renewing and extending your subscription two or three years. Use coupon below and do it today.

Please send bills or silver carefully wrapped in paper and securely sealed, or post-office money order. If obliged to send postage-stamps, send two-cent stamps.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: 50 cents a year, $1.00 for three years, 75 cents for a TWO-YEAR renewal, in U. S. or Cuba. (In Canada 65 cents a year.)

SUBSCRIPTION COUPON FOR RENEWAL OR EXTENSION

Publisher of COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

I enclose ..... cents for renewal and extension of my subscription ..... full years from date of expiration.

Date..... Name.....

Post Office..... Street and No......

R. F. D. No...... Box No...... State.....

September, 1923.

LEAGUE RULES: To be a comfort to one's parents. To protect the weak and aged. To be kind to dumb animals. To love our country and protect its flag.

CONDUCTED BY UNCLE LISHA

COMFORT for one year and admittance to the League of Cousins for only 55 cents. Join at once. Everybody welcome. ADDRESS all letters to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. See instructions at the close of this Department.

SUMMER'S green is nearing now the glorious bonfire which autumn annually makes of it all. The woods will be tapestried for a while with smoky haze and the colors of flame. There will be stilly days of harvest and fruition, evenings of calling katydids chirping crickets. Then for a night or two come a first prophetic chilliness at the going of sun. Red will become gray; flame turn to es, and we will know that summer has left us. es: vacationing and summering will be over—l tasks begin!

From my mountain weeks I brought back to ooklyn with me a little tan—some on my shoul-s!—and a few disappearing bumps, the remains the playful caresses of affectionate n osquitoes. o, I brought back, I hope, a rested eye and a le clearer viewpoint with which to regard the of the city—that life so far removed from that ave been living where mountains are almost as ny as men. Contrastingly I have been thinking, ce my return, of the quiet strength of the peaks eft behind, compared with the noisy greed for ce and power which the city means to those who ople it. Spiritual insight and that compassion ich is born of the spirit are indeed needed to k upon the distorted face of our material world lay. If we are not to be blinded by its glare, couraged by its fury and futility, tortured to h phrases and hasty, bitter conclusions, we must rn "to think with the soul", as one has finely lled it. So I try to do this: try to see all the lderness of buying and selling, this making of e to a thing of clangor and clutter, for what it ally is—a passing phase of wrong thinking which nnot endure because of its very falsity, a sepa-tion of man the prodigal which cannot last. Men ay for a time waste their spiritual substance, ey may feed on the husks of material greed and in; but always there must be an awakening, coming to oneself. The soul begins to think. And e prodigal turns toward his Father's house.

By a million ways today we strive to feed the dy, the brain, the material life of man and the ce. We are taught that all depends upon this, at this is our salvation from the evils we rear e day and attempt to remedy the next. All e world's resources are turned toward this ma-rial salvaging. This becomes our education, r science, our worship and our faith. Yet by e thing and by that only does man exist—his iritual vitality—and this cannot be left to dwindle d starve. It is not that we have asked for bread d been given stones, but that we are taught to eep on asking for stones!

To think with the soul is the only true thinking ecause it is only the eternal soul of man and its ernal relationship which are changeless. The uits of the brain, what we variously call training, ience, reason, change with the years like fashions. len attain new-taught ideas for their minds as ey buy hats and shoes of later modes. And the st is always to be discarded for something which to be different and better—yet is somehow found be always the same and to be discarded in its rn! But there is only one eternal fashion, one ernal mode of thought, one garment for the soul man.

Particularly now, when classrooms are calling d school beginning for so many of you, I do not ant the boys and girls and their parents who read onthly what I write here to think that I despise e mind's training or believe truth to rest only unlearnedness and simplicity. It is true that do distrust, as to his real value, what is often alled the "trained man." He is often one who as been trained to do certain tricks, too many mes of doubtful worth and bearing either for his wn life or that of others. Yet a desire for knowl-dge is the beginning of wisdom. Without this esire to know, without endeavor to see full circle round the teachings of the world and its history s a result of these teachings, we cannnot advance eyond. The soul will never think to its best if he mind has not thought first. The soul will ever realize if the mind has not first analyzed, ought, weighed and discarded. The mind must e made an instrument and a discoverer, but not rained to be but a weapon and a tool that cuts nd destroys. The soul may dream great dreams nd true ones, but it is the mind that must express hem to those who have not dreamed.

What I do contend against, however, is the aising of the wall of sheer and barren intellect bout the heart of a child, exterminating with a alsity of psychology (now rising to its summit of ntruth) youth's natural capacity for the under-tanding that love gives. I contend against the illing off, the pinching back at the bud, of the oul's intuition which flows from the great reservoir of Love and Truth from where all Life is stored. Not so is the earth of men to be watered.

For beyond all thinking that the schools can give us, the soul can be taught to think. College and classroom can make us echo textbooks and the roted phrases of tired teachers, but unless the soul also has been taught to echo, the sound will be a hollow one and of no value to the hearing world. We need to be made fine answerers to the eternal and perfect of sounds, to echo that creative Love and Energy which is God.

I believe that all education might become religion in its best and truest sense—both as education and as religion. More than this, I believe that it must become so if it is to be the education worth having. I do not mean, of course, that any cult, any creed, any denominational beliefs or observances need enter into a child's early training, but I do mean that religion should be vitally there in the sense of the child's realization of a relationship to God, and being taught to turn simply and naturally to a spiritual source for all knowledge and all inspiration which the soul asks. And it is an easy thing for a child to grasp the truth of such a spiritual attitude, such a teaching. It is the most natural thing in the world for youth to realize that "every good and perfect gift" can come from One Giver with whom is All Good. There can be the Father's Business, as well as that taught by "business colleges" and commercial courses, and there can be an understanding of this which can become the only thing that can lighten the present darkness of our greedy buying and selling. We do not need a Sunday school so much as we need a Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday—an all-week school wherein a child begins to feel his or her relationship to God, not as a seventh day, set-aside thing of belief and practice, but as a part of daily living, learning, love and service.

The poet has told us that knowledge is of the earth, but that wisdom is heavenly, of the soul. It is this wisdom which is the child's. It is this wisdom which we, whose childhood eyes are dulled, need to be made clearsighted enough to see again. We need teaching which is more than that of earth. We need to be taught to make our souls think. To know that the truth is we are not of the many but of the One, and to make from this finer thinking a world which shall be a finer place—a City of God and a Country of Heaven.

And now for the letters:

SOMEWHERE IN THE WEST.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Well, I have just blown in from the bleak prairies, which are now green, and I would like to enter into the sheltering circle of your campfire. Sh! Listen! Yes, it is the coyotes. Their voice suddenly shudders out of the darkness in a long wail, broken by long sobs, despairing and sad, calling for someone who is not there. Uncle, can't you see him, standing alone, facing the storm which seems to cut his skin beneath his long silky greyish-brown fur; or standing in the moonlight on a hill, gazing over the snow-covered world, now and then raising his head to call long and sadly for his unknown mate? I, like the coyote, am shy and afraid of the world, but not of my prairie world. One night, not so very long ago, I was awakened to some unaccustomed sound. I listened, thinking perhaps I would hear it again. Yes, there it was! It was the shrill whistle of a train calling for the block. Its call was answered by the broken sobs of the coyote. One was the city, gay and noisy; the other was the wilderness, fascinating and silent.

Uncle, have you ever visited the prairie? If you haven't, I will tell you a little about it. There are no trees, only those that have been planted by the settlers. There is good grass. The land is a gentle rolling plain. It is very beautiful to me, for I have seen no other for ten years.

Folks, I warrant I can take you to a place in our pasture where you, as well as myself, can feel the presence of phantom spirits. For I have been very happy and gay, but the moment I enter this valley a longing feeling comes into my heart. I sense the existence of the Indians and herds of buffalo of long ago. This valley is dark. You can see our cattle and horses scattered along the side of hills, with now and then an antelope grazing among them.

Oh, how I wish that some of you could come and visit us. Our home is just a little two-roomed house, but we are happy and contented, so what is the difference? If you came, we could ride horseback and have great sport.

Well, now, I reckon I'll tell you what kind of a wild-looking creature I am. I'm five feet, three and one-half inches tall; weigh 111 pounds; have long silky, dark-brown hair, black eyes, and a fair complexion that is tanned—no, not by a razor strop or the like, but by Nature, the sun and wind. I've even white teeth and well-shaped red lips. Some say that I'm pretty, but I don't believe it. And say, I am very stubborn, especially when it comes to boys. I never do anything they want me to. I do this to make them mad, mostly; and also to show them that they are not the boss of me.

Cousins, I would like to hear from you all, although I cannot promise to answer all. To the one that writes the most interesting letter I will send my picture. I am leaving my name and address with Uncle Lisha. I know he will forward to me the letters you send him.

Jeff, will you please write to me?

Your prairie niece and cousin, ARRAH WANNA.

Arrah Wanna, when I finished reading your letter I was shuddering and sobbing and making a despairing noise like a sick coyote. You must not write such letters, Arrah, darling; I'm too sensitive and tender-hearted. You may call your wilderness fascinating, but I'm not going to be fascinated by any place full of flitting spirits playing tag in the moonlight, while the coyotes call despairingly from the hills. It doesn't sound fascinating to me and I wouldn't want to hang around there long, even if I had a rabbit's foot and three hairs of a yellow dog in my vest pocket.

What about this prairie train that goes along calling for the "block," Arrah? I wanna know. You say the train represents the city, so I suppose you must mean a city block and that the train wants this to make up passengers which must be scarce in your wilderness—unless one filled the train up with phantom spirits. Well, we've got plenty of spare blocks here in Brooklyn, and if some of your empty prairie trains want a block or two, I'm willing to supply them, so that they can stop their howling competition with the coyotes.

But, seriously speaking, Arrah, I do believe in strange influences which can be felt about certain places—influences left by the thoughts and experiences of those who have lived in such places before us. Continued thought forces whose strength is not extinguished these are, perhaps. We will feel, I think—at least I believe I always do—a peace and happiness in places where people have dwelt in love and happiness for many years before. And contrariwise in spots where hatred and evil have held place for a time. Your dark valley, Arrah, may hold some thought-echoes still of the loneliness and terror that filled the hearts of those who once settled there and battled with the Indians.

SEATTLE, 1029 EAST 70th STREET, WASH.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

Enclosed I send you my membership in the League of Cousins. First I will describe myself: I am a boy, or young man, of veinte years. Don't know what veinte means? Well, it is the Spanish word for twenty. I have dark brown hair a la Valentino; also side burns, brown eyes, Washington complexion, and weigh 145 pounds. I'm five feet, six inches long, and in the pink of condition always.

Although not a native of Seattle, I've lived here all except three years of my life. My greatest hobbies are hiking, horseback riding, canoeing, flivvering in the moonlight and dancing. I'm perfectly content when doing any one of these. My favorite indoor sport is dancing, and I can shake a nifty ankle when with a good partner.

Western Washington is a wonderful country, especially in summer. Seattle can't be beat. A Puget Sound sunset is never forgotten. Rainier National Park is a gift from God.

I am lonesome for acquaintances in other parts o the U. S., and also in foreign lands. Won't somebody write me? Boys and girls both—I like 'em all. Now please don't shut the door on me!

Your nephew in waiting, L. HOLLIS BOWEN.

P. S. I'm a junior in high school.

Hollis, I sorrowfully note that this disastrous side-burning business is raging through the south and west like a forest fire in a north wind. I see you have fallen a victim also, and I certainly hope you will recover and not be left with any bad scars beneath your ears.

I was interested in your hobbies, Hollis, particularly that of "flivvering and dancing in the moonlight." It must take quite a little practice to dance with a flivver, but I suppose it can be done when one makes a hobby of it. Most flivvers are able to do the one step and hesitation nicely, I'm sure. Well, I'm glad, Hollis, that your hobbies keep you in the pink of condition and with two shaking nifty ankles. I'll bet veinte pesos that you get lots of dancing partners by mail, even if not by moonlight. For a Washington complexion and Valentino hair should be like a Puget Sound sunset—never to be forgotten when once seen—or described.

IMBIE, MARY VALLEY LINE, QUEENSLAND, AUSTRALIA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Here I am again, not quite smothered under the pile of letters and cards I have received from you. I had nearly forgotten that I had written to you, when one hot day in December the first bundle of 140 letters arrived. Well, I could hardly believe that they were all for me! More and more began to come, and, up to date, I have received over 550 letters and 60 cards. I cannot thank you enough, my dear, kind friends and cousins, who wrote and cheered a (no longer) lonely little girl in Australia. I would love to write a separate letter to each of you, but as this is impossible, I ask all of you who do not get a personal reply to take this as an answer to your letters and cards. Many of you sent me unused stamps to answer with. I am sorry for this, as we cannot use American stamps here and I cannot write to all of you to return them. Another thing for which I am sorry—so many of you didn't put sufficient postage on so that I could not pay it all. It came to nearly eight dollars all of it. I paid some, but as we are not at all rich I could not pay the rest.

Now, Uncle Lisha, if you will give me space, I will try to answer some of the questions that were asked me and tell a little about Australia. I say some, for if I tried to reply to all it would take a whole copy of COMFORT. Australia is called the "Island Continent," and its area is 3,000,000 square miles. It is divided into seven States, each having its capital. I live in Queensland which I think is the best state as to climate and things which can be grown. Brisbane is our capital. In the southern part it snows in the winter, but never for more than a fortnight. The snow never lies on the ground, but melts as soon as it falls. It is almost an exceptional thing for it to snow—even in the southern part of Queensland, and I have never seen snow since I came here.

Our principal industry is sheep raising and we are the greatest sheep raising country in the world. Dairy farming and cattle raising are also big industries, and butter and frozen meat are exported to all parts of the world. Other crops are sugar-cane, corn, potatoes, both white and sweet, tobacco, coffee, wheat and all sorts of vegetables. All kinds of temperate zone fruits are grown, but only some of them in our State. But we have all the tropical fruits—mangoes, oranges, lemons, custard apples, pineapples, bananas, loquats, kumquats, and many others. There are very few eatables, indeed, which Australians need to look for outside their own country.

Our manufacturing is yet in its infancy although the war stimulated this by forcing the making of many things we could not procure from abroad during that time. Australia is a country of enormous possibilities if developed right, but at present things are almost in chaos. Not one quarter of the country is populated, there are thousands out of work, and those who have jobs never know but tomorrow they may be sacked. The government is endeavoring to get more and more emigrants, but I do not know what they are going to do with them—unless it is a plan to get labor for next to nothing. So I would advise all that are thinking of coming out here to stay where they are—at least till they find out more of conditions than I can tell them here.

We have a great timber industry. At present I am living with my married brother and his wife on the Brooloo State Forest, which is a reserve of 40,000 acres. The lumber is preserved until it is large enough to cut and it is then hauled away to the state sawmills. We have such lovely woods as cedar, silky oak, satinwood, sandalwood, and many others. Seeds of American trees are being planted as an experiment. Much cotton is being planted experimentally, also. I am not so lonely at Imbie as I was at Crohanhurst where my first letter was sent from. There I was fifteen miles from a railway station. The forestry workers are mostly returned soldiers and my brother is one of these. He was wounded in France.

Well, I guess I had better tell you what I look like: I am sixteen years old, five feet, two inches tall, 105 pounds in weight. I have auburn hair, not curly and not exactly straight—and not bobbed. I have brown eyes, lots of freckles and a pretty big mouth. At least it's big—I guess it's not very pretty! Well, that's me. How do you like me? I think you would think me rather "bushy" if you could see me sometimes, bareheaded and barefooted. I was six years old when I came to Australia and I expect to be coming back the middle of this year. Probably I will be there by the time this letter is in print. Perhaps I may see some of my cousins and friends—especially those living in my home state, Minnesota, as that is where I will be going. I am carefully keeping the names and addresses of all of you. I want to finish my education and be a school teacher. I have had only three years schooling, but my father taught me at home and I read all the books I could get hold of. I have two sisters and one brother. My brother is married. My sister Lucille is older than I and my other sister, Sheila, is younger, being ten. She is the real Australian of the bunch.

We shall have a long trip back to the U. S. It will be nearly a day in the train to Brisbane, then three days by train or coastal boat to Sydney, and there we will take steamer for the dear old U. S. A. We shall land at Vancouver, and then there will be about three days more to St. Paul, Minnesota. On the steamer we shall be three weeks or more! I will write to you again when I arrive and tell you all about it. It takes a letter from three to six weeks to get here from the U. S. The letters of cousins dated about the first of November reached me the fifteenth of December!

Well, Uncle, I guess I had better close this letter, and I'm sure you thought so long ago. I hope it is

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 28.)

A Ten-Day Tube is FREE Send the Coupon

Film May Attack

Your teeth tonight—while you sleep

There's a film on your teeth—a viscous film. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays.

While you sleep, acids may be formed in it. Most tooth troubles, most cloudy teeth, are due to film.

This is to tell you how to combat it, and offer a convincing test.

Film troubles

Film absorbs stains, making the teeth look dingy. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. That's why so few have escaped tooth troubles, despite all care.

New ways found

Dental science, after long research, has found two ways to fight film. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it, and without any harmful scouring. Able authorities proved those methods effective. Then a new-type tooth paste was created, based on modern research. Those two new film destroyers were embodied in it. That tooth paste is called Pepsodent.

Fights acids, too

Pepsodent also multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids, the cause of tooth decay.

It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

Thus every use gives manifold power to these great natural tooth-protecting agents.

World-wide use

Careful people of some 50 nations now use Pepsodent largely by dental advice. Wherever you look you see the results. Teeth glisten as they should.

Watch the results on your own teeth. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

The results will surprise and delight you. You will never again go without them. Cut out this coupon now.

Avoid Harmful Grit

Pepsodent curdles the film and removes it without harmful scouring. Its polishing agent is far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

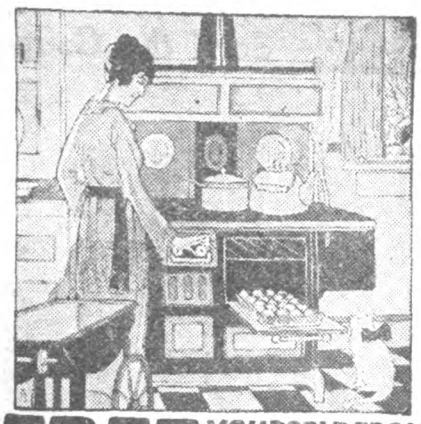
Pepsodent REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

The New-Day Dentifrice

A scientific tooth paste based on modern research, free from harmful grit. Now advised by leading dentists the world over.

1241

10-Day Tube Free



THE PEPSODENT COMPANY,
Dept. 194, 1104 S. Wabash Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.

Mail 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent to

.....

.....

Only one tube to a family.

FREE YOURSELF FROM DIRTY COAL AND WOOD!

A Blazing Hot Fire at Turn of Valve—New Kind of Fuel

Don't burn expensive, dirty, coal and wood! A new cheap fuel gives three times the heat—and gives you the convenience of city gas, without a single change to your range, heating stove or furnace. No more ashes, no more smoke, soot and coal dust—no getting up on cold mornings to build fires—no heavy scuttles to carry—no worrying about coal strikes and shortages.

16 Models, fit any range, heater or furnace.

Amazing Invention—3 Times Heat of Coal

An amazing invention—called the Oliver Oil-Gas Burner—actually burns 95% air—using only 5% oil, the cheapest fuel there is—turning them into actual gas that burns with an intense hot flame. No wicks, no odor, no smoke, no carbon. Absolutely safe — will last a lifetime—guaranteed to give perfect heating satisfaction. No wonder over 150,000 housewives have installed this wonderful invention. No wonder we receive thousands of letters of praise for this amazing heat that can be regulated to any degree, by simply turning a little valve.

AGENTS AND DISTRIBUTORS

Oliver representatives make big money—$500 and more a month. Thousands of spare time workers, agents and salesmen are needed—$75 a week easy. Exclusive territory—real co-operation. Write at once for Free Sample Case Offer, interesting literature and full details. No obligation. Write B. M. Oliver, President, at address below.

Special Low Price Introductory Offer

If you mail the coupon at once you will be in time to get the Special Low Price Introductory Offer Mr. Oliver is making to the readers of this magazine. But you must act quickly; by sending us your name at once you will be entitled to this special price whether you buy now or later. Fill in and mail the coupon immediately.

OLIVER OIL-GAS BURNER

OLIVER OIL-GAS BURNER CO.
2674-I Oliver Bldg. St. Louis, Mo.

OLIVER OIL-GAS BURNER CO.
2074-I Oliver Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

Send me your FREE Book "New Kind of Heat," and Special Low Price Introductory Offer. I am interested in a burner for a

☐ Coal Range ☐ Heating Stove ☐ Furnace (Specify Steam, Hot Air or Hot Water)

Name .....
Address .....
City ..... State.....

BIG FREE BOOK BEAUTIFUL FURNISHINGS

The very things you need. Latest styles. Factory-to-Family prices. Save big money. Furnish a room or whole home. As little as $3 down; a year or more to pay. Also Pianos, Players, Phonographs. Cut out this adv.—Write TODAY, for new "Larkin Book of Better Homes".

Larkin Co Inc. Dept. 911
BUFFALO, N. Y. Peoria, Ill. Chicago, Ill.

MUSIC LESSONS-FREE

You can read music like this quickly

IN YOUR HOME. Write today for our FREE booklet. It tells how to learn to play Piano, Organ, Violin, Mandolin, Guitar, Banjo, etc. Beginners or advanced players. Your only expense about 2c per day for music and postage used.
AMERICAN SCHOOL of MUSIC, 15 Lakeside Bldg., CHICAGO

High School Course in 2 Years

You can complete this simplified High School Course at home inside two years. Meets all requirements for entrance to college and the leading professions. This and thirty-six other practical courses are described in our Free Bulletin. Send for it TODAY.

AMERICAN SCHOOL
Dept. H617. Drexel Av. & 58th St. © A.S.1923 CHICAGO

Art Corner Your Pictures—Album Plan

where you can keep them safe and enjoy them always.

Engel 5 Styles "Art Corners" 9 Colors

are on sale at Photo Supply and Album counters everywhere. They are the only Quick, Easy, Artistic, No Paste, No Fold way to mount Kodak Prints. A dime brings 100 and samples to try. Write

10¢ Buys 100

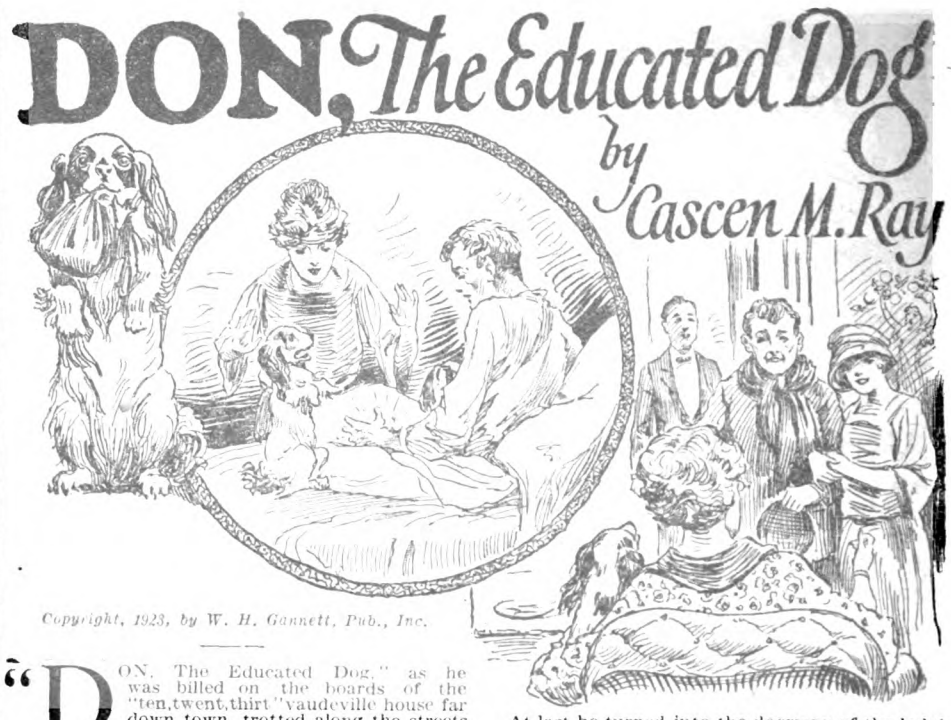
ENGEL MFG. CO.
Dept. 34W, 4711 N. Clark St., Chicago

$1.75 EARNED IN 30 MINUTES selling Mary Rose Frocks.

Commissions daily.

MARY ROSE FROCKS

Easy and dignified.



District managers wanted.

Rodasl Company, 1202 4th St., Cincinnati

Gloves Motoring or dress to order. Catalog will convince you to buy from factory.
J. Rogalley, Cloversville, N.Y.

DON, The Educated Dog

by Cascen M. Ray

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

"DON, The Educated Dog," as he was billed on the boards of the "ten,twent,thirt"vaudeville house far down town, trotted along the streets of Creston in that dusky hour between shows, his doggy heart rejoicing in temporary freedom from the leash and from work. He had slipped out without being noticed and now was pursuing his way along the familiar streets without master or mistress. Ever since they three had come to this old home town, Don had wanted to get out and run about as he used to do. His canine mind was vaguely troubled. He could not understand why he and his master did not go home, nor why there were no more rides in the cut-down Locar which Dicky used to drive at breakneck speed over the smooth roads about Creston with Don sitting stiff and important beside him.

All that had been when they lived in the big house on Linden Drive with Aunt Cornelia. Many things had happened since then.

Not that Don was really dissatisfied with his present life. He loved his new mistress, whom Master Dicky called Vida, almost as much as he loved Dicky. He learned innumerable tricks at her behest and performed them willingly—even joyously, when his turn came four times each day. And when the spectators—all those rows of white faces out there beyond the lights—laughed and clapped their hands at his clever stunts, he sat up gaily on his haunches and signaled his delight with his little bushy brown paws.

The advertising had it that Don could read and tell colors and even pick you out by your photograph. You were invited to bring your picture and let Don return it to you as you sat in the audience. Every night there were photos for Don to carry down among the people and he never made a mistake. Perhaps if Don could have spoken, he might have told you that there was always an identifying odor about the pasteboard cards by which he could find the owner. However, that might be, he now was deeply interested in the familiar sights and sounds of the city as he trotted along dog fashion, a gait in which his h nd feet seemed always trying to get ahead of his front feet. As soon as he had satisfied his curiosity, he would trot back to the dreary top floor furnished room where Master Dicky lay all day on a broken couch while Don and Vida did their "turns."

For months now, the three, Dicky, Vida and Don had traveled the country over, billed as the "Talking Dog Co." on the programs of the Valkyrie circuit. Day after day and night after night, Don had gone through his funny stunts, his reward a word of praise or a caress from the gods of his world. And now they had come back to the place Don had known as home before Master Dicky had met Vida, before this strange life of dingy stage entrances and second rate hotels, interspersed with railroad journeys, had commenced. As he trotted, tongue lolling, long silky brown ears flapping, ridiculous short tail wigwagging his pleasure at seeing the dear remembered streets of Creston, the spaniel was wondering—wondering why Dicky and he did not go home.

Of course Aunt Cornelia had never liked dogs very well but she liked Master Dicky exceedingly well and no doubt she would like Mistress Vida if she only knew how nice that female god was, how soft her hands and how gently she could comb and brush a little dog's curly coat until it shone like silk. He liked to have Vida examine his brushy pads to see that there were no slivers nor burrs nor tiny sharp stones to make his feet sore. Perhaps if Aunt Cornelia—but he had not seen Aunt Cornelia since that night when Master Dicky had told her that he wanted to marry a girl in the Rammage troupe. Something had seemed to annoy Aunt Cornelia very much She had spoken words which made Master Dicky go white under his tan, bow stiffly and march out of the room without reply. Don had followed Dicky upstairs where the master had flung some clothes into a suit case and had gone out of the house and straight to Vida. There Dicky had been quite masterful, insisting on something that Don did not quite understand and which Vida had protested against until Dicky had over ruled her objections and carried her off to a man who said some words to them and then joined their hands. After that there was no more home going.

Don quite approved of Master Dicky's fondness for this charming goddess and nothing made him happier than to curl up between them, sharing impartially the caresses and endearments of the lovers. But of late things had not been going well. Don knew there was something very much amiss when Dicky did not rise from his bed. They had to stay a long time in one dismal hole of a town and Vida had cried over the bills that came in and over letters and telegrams. Don could not know how little money his mistress had to meet those bills nor how managers protested cancelled dates.

As soon as Dicky was able to move, they had gone on again, but now Dicky could not go to the theater with them but lay all day on the couch while Don and Vida carried on the "act," and to make up for the loss of their partner, Don had to learn more tricks.

If Don had been a human being and given to worry, his brain might have reeled with the stress laid upon it. As it was, he just learned as fast as Mistress Vida could think up new things to teach him and so kept the theater-going public marveling at his cleverness.

Don, like most dogs, never forgot places, and of all the places to be remembered, the place where one was born is most firmly fixed in the animal mind, moreover, this modest business street of Creston was one that Don had traversed a thousand times. He sniffed here and there, renewing acquaintance with familiar odors until, on the sidewalk, he saw something black. Stopping to nose it, he sensed an elusive emanation which awoke new memories of the past.

One of Don's most cherished tricks was to bring to Dicky anything which Vida had dropped or to Vida anything which Dicky had dropped. The odor of the velvet bag carried its message to his brain; he picked it up and, wheeling in his track, hastened his cornerwise trot until it was nearly a run.

There were few people on the street at that hour and if any noticed the little brown and white dog carrying a black bag, Don did not heed it as he scurried homeward.

He would have liked to be able to open his mouth for a few cooling breaths but he denied himself the luxury. He could pant all he wished when he had given the bag into the keeping of his divinities.

At last he turned into the doorway of the lodging house and scrambled quickly up the stairs,—one, two, three flights—pausing in the dusky hall to scratch at a time-stained door.

The door was opened hastily and Vida cried out as she saw him:

"Donnie! Where have you been? You were gone so long!"

Don knew that she had been worried for there was a sharp note in her voice. Gravely he looked up into her anxious face. He could not grasp just why she was so troubled but he sensed the fact. What he now wanted to know was, to which should he give the bag? Vida decided this by saying:

"Why, Don, what have you there?"

Stooping she took the black velvet bag from his willing mouth, while Don, glad to be released, sat back on his haunches and laughed with tongue out and eyes crinkled up by the drawing back of his lips. Vida stood a moment, speculatively weighing the bag in her hands, then she went toward the couch on which Dicky lay as usual.

"Look, Dicky, what Don brought home! What do you suppose it is and where did he get it?"

Richard Abercrombie put out a thin hand and took the bag from his wife as she held it over him. There was a hectic flush on his cheeks and his eyes were too bright but he smiled the brave smile that Don knew and loved—the gay smile that had won Vida Lee, had long since given way to something which made the quick tears spring to his wife's pretty eyes as she looked tenderly at him.

"You're like a woman with a telegram, Vida," he said half playfully, his voice scarcely above a whisper. Don could have remembered when Dick Abercrombie needed no megaphone on the athletic field,—but Don was industriously cooling himself after his long run.

"Open it, Dicky, "urged Vida, "Let's see what's in it. You're as bad as I am," she pouted as he paused with evident desire to tease her,—"open it, old slow-poke!"

"Let's guess what's in it," whispered Dicky, "A million dollars maybe?"

"I can't guess—oh, fifteen cents and a theater coupon and some rings for fancy work and—I don't know what else. Hurry up, Dicky! " She sank down by his couch and Don came and curled himself beside her.

Dicky opened the clasps of the bag—clasps that were unusually strong— and poured the contents out on the old steamer rug that covered him. For a moment both were silent in amazement, then Vida gasped,—"Why, Dicky! What!"——

Slowly, painfully, silently, Dicky drew himself erect on his couch, his fascinated eyes on the glittering mass which caught the last rays of fading day and sent them back in flashes of red and blue and green fire.

"Diamonds!" he said at last in a dazed tone. Then to Don, "Where did you get them, old fellow?"

Don stood up, stretched, wagged his ridiculous stump of a tail and capered a little at this notice vouchsafed by his particular divinity then he clambered up on the end of the couch and pretended to hunt for rats.

"Don, where did you get it?" Dicky demanded sternly and Don, knowing that something was being asked about his find, ran toward the door uttering sharp yelps.

"It's no use, Dicky. He can't tell you. Oh, Dicky, do you suppose we could keep them?"

"We'll have to advertise them, girlie, if we can't find the owner any other way. We can't keep what isn't ours, you know."

As he spoke, there was a tap at the door and before Vida could rise Trixie Tevis, a fellow trouper, came breezily in.

"Hello, folks! Thought I'd run in a minute to see how you children are getting along." Catching sight of the jewels on Dicky's lap, she stopped her chatter abruptly, her eyes opening wide in amazement.

"My lands! What you got there? This looks like a jewelry store or pawn shop robbery. Where did you get 'em?"

In reply, Vida related the story while Don sat between them, looking from one to another, alert to catch the meaning of the excitement.

"If nobody seen Don pick 'em up, you'd be chumps to advertise. Better wait and see what's in the paper," she advised.

"We go on tomorrow and won't have time to watch the ads," replied Vida.

"That's so. I tell you what. I got a friend that knows all about such things. If he'll take 'em off your hands, you needn't to worry."

"We can't do that, Trixie," came Dicky's whisper, "They don't belong to us. We've got to send them back to the owner."

"Yes, an' maybe be arrested for stealing 'em," sniffed Trixie, "I know the sort of dames that wear ice like this," she held up the dog collar its five strands set thick with flashing jewels.

"Wonder how I'd look all dolled up in these!" She clasped the collar about her heavily powdered neck. "Where's the glass? I want to see myself. Gee!" turning from side to side before the spotted mirror, "I never had a chance to try anything like that efore. An' that ain't all," she rustled back to Dicky who had lain down again, exhausted with the effort and the excitement, "Let me see the rest of the stuff. Gee!" she cried turning over the glittering trinkets, "A necklace, too. You try that on, girlie," holding it out to Vida who took the bauble and clasped it around her slender throat, looking wistfully into the dim mirror as she did so.

"I'll say you're some looker when you're dolled up. Diamonds suit you better'n me. Here, put these on," commanded Trixie holding out the bracelet and rings which she took from Dicky's reluctant hand. Vida slipped the jewels on her slim wrists and fingers and a deeper tint crept up in her delicate cheek as she turned the stones on her hands, making them flash in the rays of the street lamp just lighted outside their window.

"You ain't goin' to give them back if you don't have to," urged Trixie, "If nobody seen Don, they won't know where the sparks have gone to. You're plum foolish, Vide. Just think what a lot of eggs an' milk you could buy for Dicky with one of these. Besides," she hurried on as Vida did not answer, "you might take a lay-off an' you an' Dicky go to the country where there's real cows an' chickens, like the doctor ordered." She waited expectant.

"Oh, Dicky!" was Vida's cry as she flung herself down beside him. "Let's keep them. Let Trix sell them to her friend and we'll go some place where

A New Era in Mail Order Service!

PHILIPSBORN'S new and improved mail order service is a great surprise which will be welcomed with delight by millions of mail order shoppers. It means more speed — more accuracy — greater satisfaction, a wonderful advance over present-day methods employed elsewhere.

Our Buildings Enlarged Again!

We have erected the second unit of a 3-Million Dollar plant, almost doubling the space and greatly enlarging our facilities — added new departments — increased our working force — installed new systems — all with a view to making our service more efficient and complete.

Our aim is to please you — to give you the Finest Mail Order Service in America.

Pleasing Over 3½ Million Customers!

The most particular and discriminating mail order shoppers in America send us millions of orders season after season. We have supplied many of them with everything they wear for over 33 years. Critical? Yes! They are the most critical people in the world and that is why they buy from us by mail. They know from experience that each and every article we send them will be exactly as described and illustrated in our catalog.

Money Back Guarantee Our Pledge of Satisfaction!

Lowest prices and the squarest deal in America — that is PHILIPSBORN'S 33-year policy and it is lived up to in every sense. We want your good will more than we want your money. 100% satisfaction or no sale. The most liberal guarantee in America.

Thousands of Letters from Delighted Customers!!

Every mail brings a flood of letters expressing appreciation of our styles, our values, and our service. And now to show our appreciation to these customers of ours, who have helped to make this business so remarkably successful, we have prepared the greatest catalog in our history — enlarged to 322 pages — splendidly illustrated in colors and rotogravure — and filled with the most wonderful collection of up-to-the-minute styles and sensational values ever shown in a single book. Don't fail to sign and mail the coupon for your Free Copy TODAY!

America's Best Values in PHILIPSBORN'S 322 Page Style Book!

Thousands of Surprises- All Styles Endorsed by IRENE CASTLE

Best Dressed Woman in the World!

FREE to You!

CLIPPING your coupon for PHILIPSBORN'S Style Book is like clipping coupons from your Liberty Bonds — it means money in your pocket. Clip the coupon below for the biggest book of bargains in America — the book that saves millions for millions of thrifty mail order shoppers! Our Fall and Winter Style and Shopping Guide has been enlarged to 322 pages in order to make room for more than 3,000 money-saving bargains in quality merchandise for the entire family.

For 33 Years Style and Price Leaders of America!

This bigger, finer catalog is a shoppers' paradise, bringing the season's greatest style hits and most sensational values to you at unbelievably low prices!

Irene Castle, known as the best-dressed woman in the world, has warmly congratulated PHILIPSBORN'S upon the beauty of the styles and very exceptional values. She says:—"It is the most wonderful book of fashions I have ever seen. Every woman who loves good clothes and wants the most for her money should have a copy."

Take her advice and send for this handsome catalog, with its wealth of money-saving offerings, this very minute!

Choose Your Fall Clothes From This Great Book!

We have brought together in PHILIPSBORN'S 1923 Fall and Winter Style Book the greatest variety of high grade wearing apparel in our history. It is the grand climax of months of preparation. You can now outfit the entire family at surprisingly small cost. PHILIPSBORN'S guarantee to give you more for your money — in quality, style and value — than any other mail order house.

See This FREE Book Before You Buy!!

Don't spend a cent on Fall and Winter Clothes until you get PHILIPSBORN'S big Free Style and Shopping Guide and see how much money it saves you.

Remember—we guarantee a worth-while saving on everything you need. You simply can't realize what a relief it is to the family purse to buy at PHILIPSBORN'S low prices until you actually have this wonderful book in your hands. Send the coupon now—TODAY!

Send the Coupon or a Postal TODAY!

You surely want this delightful Free Fashion Book, so send your name and address on the coupon at right or drop us a postal. Write NOW — the edition is limited — and receive the largest and handsomest Fashion Book in all America.

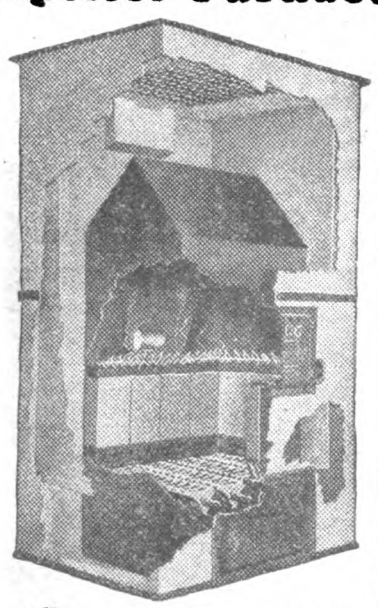
PHILIPSBORN'S

Founded 1890

Department - 313 - Chicago, Ill.

PHILIPSBORN'S, Dept. 313, Chicago

Please send FREE copy of PHILIPSBORN'S Style and Shopping Guide for Fall and Winter.



Name .....

City ..... State .....

Local Address .....

(PLEASE WRITE PLAINLY)

BULLDOG
Pipeless Furnace

$10.00

Puts the Bulldog Pipeless Heater in Your Home

Then Only $10.00 a Month!

The Bulldog is one furnace you must investigate. The true pipeless furnace. Comes completely erected. A distinct forward step. Factory connections in both East and West. We ship from nearest point.

Two Hours to Install

Any man knowing how to use a hammer and saw can make the installation in this time. Rectangular shape (one of the common sense principles) allows passage through any door.

Fits Any Floor Height

No matter what the depth of your basement or cellar may be—the Bulldog fits it. The adjustable casing (another common sense feature) takes care of this. So write today for our offer and our free catalog.

Babson Bros., 19th and California Sts. Dept. 37-06 Chicago, Ill.

for 76¢

you can make this smart sweater

Fashionable New York shops are featuring sweaters like this. You can knit one yourself with only 4 skeins Peace Dale Shetlan Floss in any of the new colors. Easy to knit—plain stitches. Directions sent free with sample card showing 120 samples Peace Dale quality yarns. Satisfaction guaranteed. Peace Dale Mills, Dept. 1289, 25 Madison Avenue, New York.

PEACE DALE YARNS

Gold Filled Monogram Ring FREE
Guaranteed for 3 years. To introduce our Sweet Smelling Sachet Powder, we will send this ring, any size, hand Engraved with your three initials for selling only six packets at 10c FAIRY QUEEN PERFUME CO.
Dept. 720, Attleboro, Mass.

New 300 Candle Power Lamp

BURNS 96% AIR

Greatest lamp improvement of age—patented. Twenty times brighter than wick lamps at one half the cost. Brilliant, soft, white light. Restful to eyes. No smoke—no soot—no odor—easy to operate. Absolutely safe. Lights with match. Most economical made. Burns 96% air—4% gasoline or kerosene (coal-oil).

30 Days Trial Prove for yourself. Use it 30 Days at our risk. No obligation. Get Free Trial plan and special introductory offer. Send for attractive catalog describing table lamps, wall lamps, hanging lamps and lanterns. Write now—today.

Agents Make Big Money. Write Quick for Free Outfit Offer.

The Akron Lamp Company
128 Lamp Bldg., Akron, Ohio

Delivered to you Free for 30 days trial on approval. Your choice of 44 Styles, colors and sizes of the famous Ranger Bicycles. Express prepaid. Low Factory-to-Rider Prices.

12 Months to Pay if desired. Many boys and girls easily save the small monthly payments.

Tires wheels, lamps, and equipment at half usual prices. Write for remarkable factory prices and marvelous offers.

Mead Cycle Company Dept. F-3, Chicago. Write us today for free catalog

LOOMS $9.90
AND UP. BIG MONEY IN WEAVING AT HOME.

No experience necessary to weave beautiful rugs, carpets, etc. on UNION LOOMS from rags and waste material. Home weaving is fascinating and highly profitable. Weavers are rushed with orders. Be sure to send for free loom book. It tells all about weaving and our wonderfully low-priced, easily-operated looms.

UNION LOOM WORKS, 272 Factory St., Boonville, N. Y.

LAW Course in 2 Years

Be a lawyer. Law trained men earn big money and occupy top positions in social, business and public life.

$5,000 to $10,000

a year is what you can earn. Our improved system guides you step by step until you have passed the bar examination in any state. Low cost, easiest terms. We furnish everything including complete Law Library. Send for free catalog.

AMERICAN SCHOOL
Dept. L-617, Drexel Ave. and 58th, Chicago

REMNANTS 66c A Yd.

Beautiful assortment of serges, Tricotines and Suitings at less than wholesale prices. All newest colors. Each Remnant Sufficient To Make Complete Suit or Dress.

MONEY BACK IF NOT SATISFIED.

Save money. Make your own clothes. These mill remnants save you up to $1.60 a yard. WRITE FOR FREE LIST.

TEXTILE MILLS CO., DEPT. 122, KANSAS CITY, MO.

IF YOU WISH IT

By Dorothy Calef Steyaert

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

"BUT, Lydia, things are going to change. It's only because money is tight that I'm not making many sales now."

A log fell apart and the fitful firelight caressed the two who sat before the grate. The short-lived brightness of the flames revealed a brooding, tender longing in the girl's face. Her companion sat forward, tensely eager to convince her.

"I know, Jack," she answered, and gazed into the fire whose red and yellow lights flashed in the solitaire held in her fingers.

"But, that doesn't change the fact that you aren't getting ahead. And where would we be on a measley little commission that you could make now and then?"

She glanced significantly about the luxuriously furnished room.

"Of course, Lydia, you deserve the very best and I'm going to give it to you. But, we don't need to be married until things change."

She stopped him with a gesture.

"I don't believe in long engagements, Jack. I will not wear any man's ring until I know definitely that I am going to marry him."

"You don't believe that I can make money."

"I do. That's just the trouble. If I didn't I'd probably marry you anyway and make the best of it. But—oh, Jack, can't you see that I'm trying to bring out the abilities you never have used?" In her earnestness she had drawn her hand from under his and made his the under one.

"Lydia, do you love me?" He leaned toward her and made his hand the upper one.

The blue eyes were suddenly wet. "Yes," she said.

And that ended the hand business. She sobbed it out on his shoulder while he gently caressed the bright hair he had so longed to touch. She was quiet in his arms when he spoke.

"Perhaps you're right dear. I feel so wealthy with your love that it's hard to realize how poor I am in dollars and cents."

"Oh, Jack, I didn't call you poor!"

"No, but I am poor when we try to fit my income to the sort of life you are entitled to. But, oh, Lydia—won't you let me put the ring on your finger? Money isn't always going to be so tight. I'm a good salesman, truly. It's just conditions that are——"

"Please don't cheapen yourself with excuses, Jack."

He answered the pleading in her voice. "All right, Lydia girl, just you go on loving me and I'll attend to the rest."

But, in spite of his confident words, Jack slept little that night. The joy of having Lydia love him kept him awake; the fear of losing her to a moneyed rival kept him more awake; and through it all, vague plans and schemes whereby to capture the elusive dollars flitted transitorily through his groping mind.

Morning called him forth to mingle with the more or less fortunate crowd, according to whether he measured them in terms of wealth or love. Fair visitors were flooding the city. He found his habitual restaurant filled with strangers and stood patiently in line. He didn't really care whether he was waiting or eating. He was thinking of the unobtainable Lydia. The proprietor hurried past him bearing a loaded tray and puffing under the unaccustomed load.

"Sorry Jack, couldn't reserve your seat this morning, too busy."

"All right, George."

Jack answered mechanically. Abstractedly he watched George place a sign in the window: "Waiters Wanted." Abstractedly he ate his breakfast and departed, still poring over the problem of how to get more customers for his bonds.

They were good bonds. He was proud of his line, proud of the friends he had made through them. But, now they were not selling. Nothing was selling. People who had money were keeping tight hold of it and even the people who had no money had ceased their prodigal spending. He wished that Lydia had let him explain, yet, even as he thought so, he was glad that she had not. She was right, excuses are the sign of weakness. But, she had admitted her love and with that to go on, he would make good. He thrust out his chest and took quick steps, head high. He was thinking now of the Lydia who loved him.

He was vaguely aware of another sign being placed in a window as he passed. It was similar to the one that George had displayed and now that he looked about him, he saw that without exception every restaurant showed the motto: "Waiters Wanted." Strange, how labor was kicking and yet wouldn't work when they got the chance. And because they would not work, wages were high, which made commodities high, which kept the people poor, and prevented them from investing in even so safe and easy investment as the bonds which he was selling. The whole world poor because some men would not work, would not take a chance that offered itself and work their way up from there. And there he stopped. Was he any better, as he continued his wild-goose chase, hunting for purchasers that he knew he would not find.

It was a restaurant that he seldom frequented before which he had paused. He started to enter and then retra ed his steps. Lydia had not liked excuses. Neither would she like subterfuge. He would go back to Martinell's where people knew him.

He found George busier than ever with barely time to manage the cash register where it was his wont to sit in dignified silence and watch his trade and service. With the familiarity of an old friend and customer, Jack walked behind the counter and demanded an apron.

"Bless you, Jack," cried the perspiring George. "Keep an eye on the new ones, will you?"

Throughout the busy week Jack labored at his new work.

And it was hard work too. From six in the morning when they opened to accommodate the waiting crowd, until midnight he carried trays to an endless array of hungry and impatient customers. When he finally sought rest, he had not even the life to think of Lydia. Occasionally, he wondered what she thought of his silent absence, but his head scarcely touched his pillow before we was wandering through happy dreams with her. Not since the old army days had he been so weary as now. But, through it all, he found a new satisfaction. A definite amount of work to be accomplished each day spurred him in the morning and kept him at it until night.

When the week was over and the bustling mob had gone with only the regulars left, George approached him.

"You've saved my life, Jack. I don't know how to thank you."

"Don't thank me, George, just go on doing me the favor you've been doing, will you?"

"Meaning which?"

"Meaning I want a job."

"Huh?"

The prosaic expletive betrayed surprise and unbelief.

"Sure. I'm in earnest. You see, George, I want to get married." And Jack outlined his scheme.

So Jack stayed on at Martinell's, helping during the busy part of each day. Between meals, he continued his own work. It would be unfair to say that he did not dread the remarks his friends would make. He did. He looked each time the door opened for someone that he knew.

Dick Wellington was the first to spy him.

"Well, look who's still here? Where did you get it, George, and how long are you going to keep it?"

"As long as he'll stay."

Jack blessed George. He flickered an imaginary crumb from Dick's shoulder and elaborately placed the menu before him.

When the boys had seen him long enough to take his place for granted, Jack found it comparatively easy to wait upon those with whom he had always associated. There was only one man now that he dreaded meeting in this minor role. And that was Carl Rawley, friend to Lydia, and rival suitor for her hand.

He came in due time, and silently gazed at Jack through narrowed eyes as he drew off his gloves.

"Ah! So this is where you spend your evenings. We have missed you."

"Yes, I knew you would." Jack's irony was no less concealed than Rawley's sarcasm.

It was in the evening that gay dinner parties gave tribute to George Martinell's excellent table. And it was in the evening that Carl brought Lydia to dine, as Jack had known he would. Carl was careful to treat Jack entirely as a head waiter. But, Lydia could not make her eyes be good. They followed the straight figure of the head waiter as he efficiently conveyed his guests to their places. There was an inscrutable twinkle in them too. Was she merely amused, or was she pleased? Jack could not make out, but, he quietly played his role, surprised that he could so well conceal the boiling fury that was seething within him.

He diligently ignored them and attended to his duties. Yet, words of their conversation drifted to him as he passed their table. Their enjoyment in one another, their light gayety filled him with fury, fury at them and fury at himself that he should allow Rawley to triumph. But, while Carl was getting her cloak and Lydia was alone for a moment, Jack stepped near her in spite of himself.

"So this is why I have missed you," she said.

He carried her words in a song for days to come.

The salary of a head waiter is no fortune, yet, diligently saved, it will count up as fast as any. Moreover, Jack made some sales. He seemed to have a new forcefulness in his sale-talk since seeing a new side of human nature. At the end of two months he sent a bouquet to Lydia, and in place of a card, he inserted his bank statement among the flowers.

But, Lydia did not answer. Had he been too bold?

As the days went by with still no word from her, he fell into utter despair. And then, one noon, she brought a party of girls to Martinell's. He wondered why she had chosen friends that were all new to him.

"A table for five, please." Her voice was cool, impersonal.

He led them to the table which he knew was her favorite and deferentially drew out their chairs.

"Give us a good waiter, Jack."

Though she called him by his first name, it was as though she were addressing a well-known servant, instead of a friend.

"Yes ma'am," he replied and he kept a careful watch to see that they received the best of service.

Lydia had brought a gay troup. They lingered over their luncheon. Jack's friends came and went. Many of them knew Lydia and stopped at her table for a few words. Jack scowled at them.

Not even a friendly smile was awarded him as the merry ones left. But, the following day Jack found a note awaiting him at his club. He carried it to his room, afraid to open it. When he had locked the door, he read.

"Dear Jack:—Do you always work till midnight? I shall be at home Friday evening from eight until eleven and should enjoy a chat with you."

"Enjoy a chat with you." It didn't sound formidable. Suppose she had said, "I have something to tell you." Then he would have been frightened. And yet—it would have revealed full meaning one way or another; it might have bid for hope, as well as despair. But, "enjoy a chat!" There was an ominous inconsequence to the phrase. Still, she had sent for him.

Thus Jack argued with himself through the tense three days that it took Friday evening to roll around.

She greeted him eagerly and Jack felt the happiness of old days. But, when they were seated, an unwelcome restraint settled over them. They attempted commonplace topics and gave it up.

"Jack," Lydia ventured, "I wanted to ask you—could you—you make such a splendid waiter, would you serve at a party that I'm giving Tuesday evening?"

Jack was stunned. Cruelty was the one thing he had not expected from her.

"Why, yes, if you wish it," he replied, regretting that his voice betrayed his hurt.

"Thank you, Jack."

She dropped her eyes to her nervously twining fingers. "And will you, please, wear a dress suit. Because—you see—I've told them all that—that we're engaged."

With one hand he drew her to him. And with the other he placed the ring on her finger.

DON, The Educated Dog

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 10.)

she held her head in her proudest fashion, Madame Abercrombie spoke without rising for her lap was full of the jewels.

"Where did you find these?"

"Don found them," Vida replied briefly.

"Are you—" Madame Abercrombie paused, evidently at a loss for the right words. Don pushed between the two women and sat down where he could watch both faces. He was not going to miss anything.

"I am Vida Abercrombie," replied the girl a trifle defiantly. "Don found the bag and brought it to us and Dicky told him to find the owner. I did not know it was yours till he brought it here."

"Dicky is here" asked the elder woman, half fearfully, "Here in town and—where is he? I must see him. Sit down here, girl. Tell me about him," she reached over the lapful of gems and drew Vida to a seat.

Half an hour later, the three, Madame Abercrombie, Vida and Don were mounting the stairs of the lodging house, the dark, dingy three flights which made Don pant heavily as he scrambled upward. He waited on the landing for Vida and, as she opened the door, he bounded into the room and up on the couch where Dicky lay, his face turned expectantly toward the hall.

"Oh, Dicky!" cried Vida, flinging herself down beside him. "I'm glad I did what you said and let Don take them back. It's all right and you'll have eggs and milk and everything!"

Then someone else came forward—a stately old lady whose eyes were misty as she bent over Dicky.

"Dear boy, forgive your old aunt! You're coming home tonight, you and Vida and Don. Your room is waiting for you."

"Aunt Connie," whispered Dicky, "I knew you'd come if you once saw Vida."

"And Don," added Aunt Connie, stroking the brown head of the little dog and accepting a moist kiss from a pink tongue.

WANTED! RA

Free list of Governn tainable Men and Wom
Salary $1600 to $2600.
booklet and list

UNITED BUSINESS
245 Dinan Bldg.,

Turn Your S Into C

I have an amazing new pl buy your spare time! Will to $35 a week for one ho

I must have at once a limite fined, cultured women in ev who will take cash for thei amazing new scientific dis made which assures radian in five days. I will pay women where they can get thi making from $15 to $35 a week immediately and I'll explain my finance you. No obligation. Yo if you write me now. MARIE Cottage Grove Avenue, Chicag

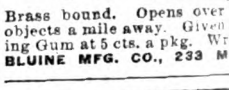
$2.98 C.O.D.

1 CARA in a hand PER acid cut Hard solitai gold S., guar

DON'T SEND A PENNY! Send n address and paper strip when fi to end around finger. When ri comes deposit only $2.98 with postman. We pay postage! Money back if not delighted. GARFIELD IMPORTING C

Be Indep

You can have a dignified, b appliance business, soon make substantial profits fro trical industry offers rich f dred Million Dollars worth appliances sold last year. lished manufacturers, rate Product approved by Goo High grade men and wome sidered. "Own An Ind sent FREE. Write The P No. 2, 546 East 105th Stree



GIVI

Real American Wat case, looks and wear boxes Mentho Nova urn the $3.00 and 147 premiums free.

U. S. Supply Company

TELESCOP

Brass bound. Opens over objects a mile away. Given ing Gum at 5 cts. a pkg. Wr BLUINE MFG. CO., 233 M

Help W

We require the services o do some special advert own locality. The work Pay is exceptionally large is required, as all that ness on your part to ca If you are at present em spare time in a way tha your present employmen your time.

If you are making less offer I am going to make spare time will pay you bring you in a handsome It costs nothing to inv and I will send you fu mail and place before y can decide for yourself.

ALBERT MILLS, Gen. 8813, American Bldg.,

MONEY $ For E. F

The Famous WING

Founded 1868 Richest in Tone 55th Year

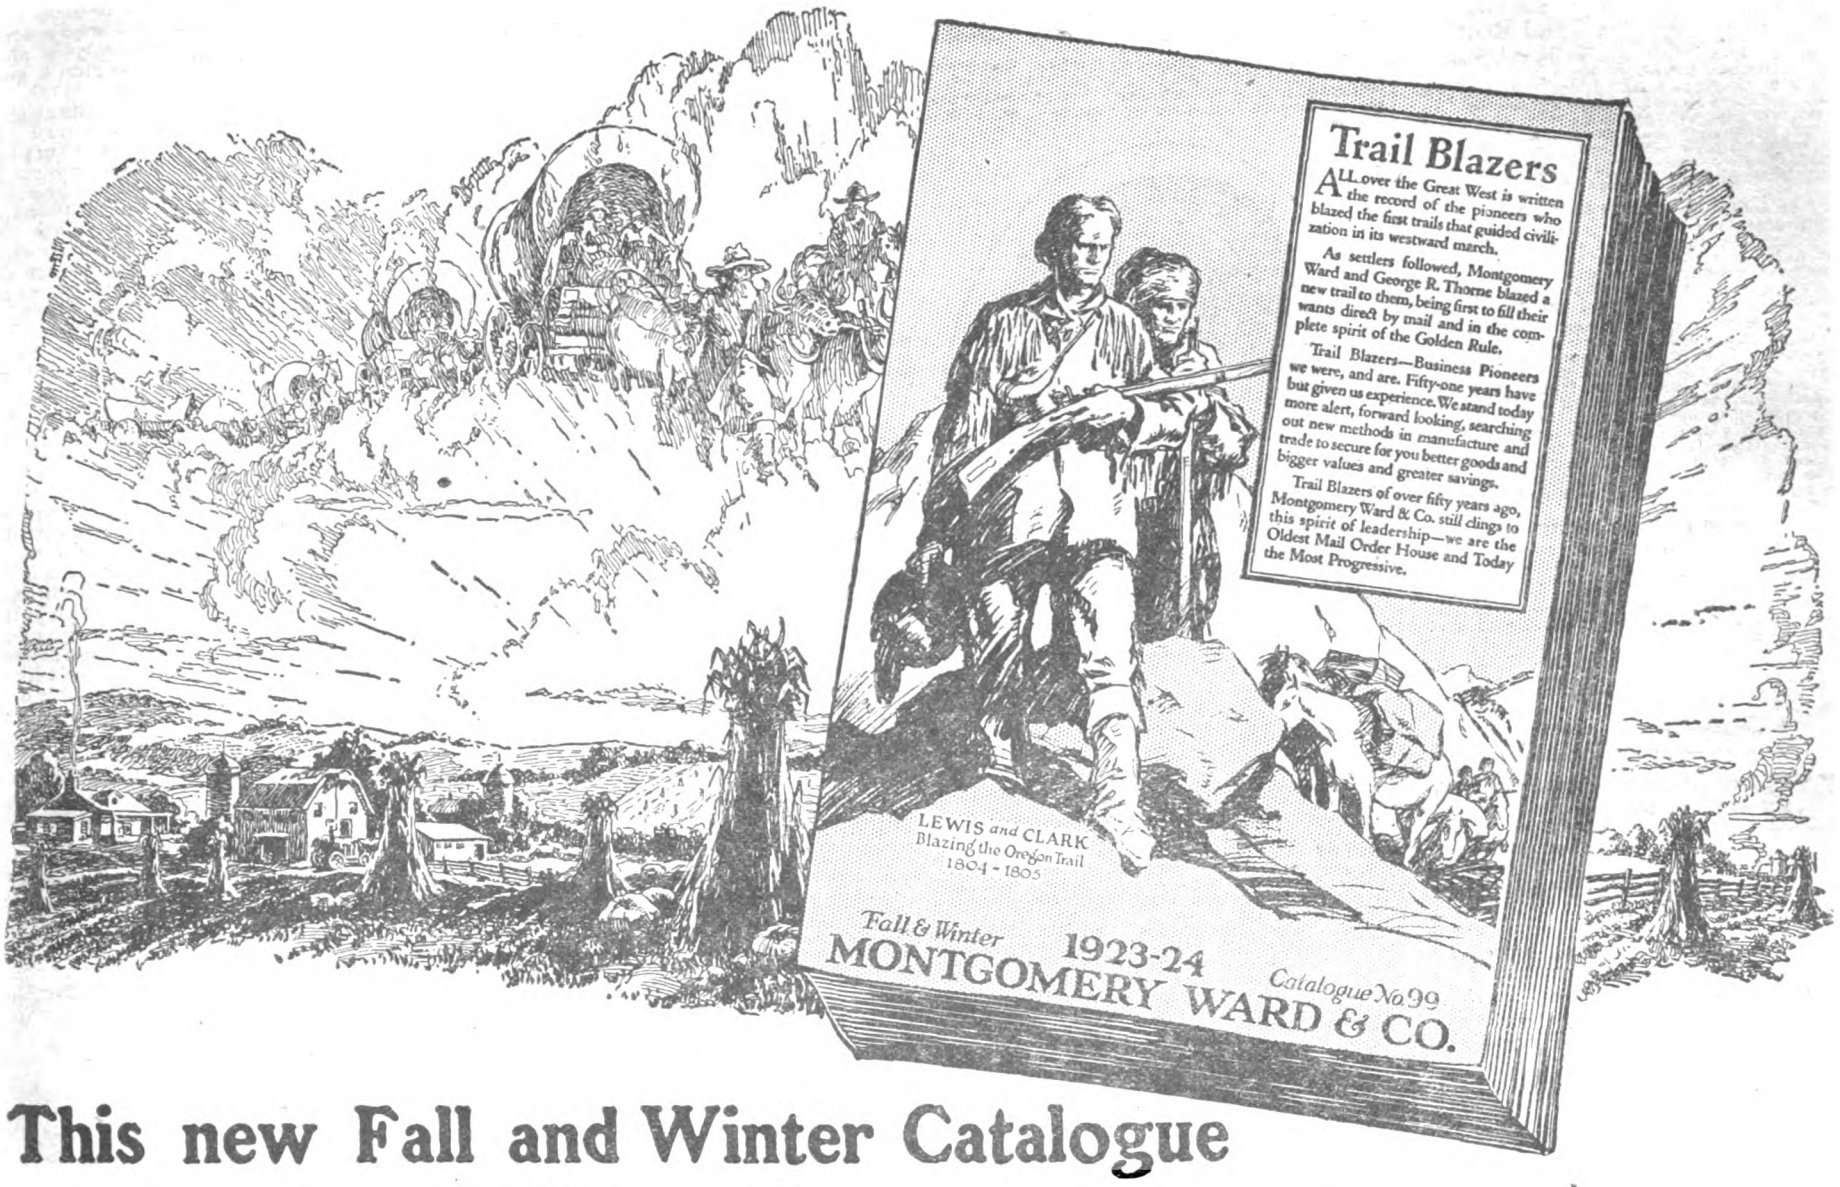
At Factory Price — Direct To You!

$295

Wing Pianos and Player Pianos sent direct on free trial till Dec 1st in your home. Enjoy and test it to prove you save $150 to $300. 40 year guarantee. 38 styles of Wing Pianos and Players to choose from. Thousands in use throughout U.S. We will refer to owners near you. Easy terms, or—unusual savings for cash besides the savings of dealer's profits and his expense. Write at once for our offer of free trial in your home till Dec. 1 1923, and The Book of Complete Information about Pianos sent you FREE. 140 pages (16 in full colors). Write now and get it free; with our reduced, bedrock, factory prices and free trial offer.

LARGE SAVINGS for CASH After Trial

FREE TRIAL TILL DEC. 1



WING & SON, Dept. 37-06

One of our 38
Also Player Pianos
9th Avenu and 13th St

Montgomery Ward & Co.

The Oldest Mail Order House is Today the Most Progressive

This new Fall and Winter Catalogue —Is Yours Free

The new, complete Fall and Winter Catalogue is now ready and will be sent you free. You need merely fill in the coupon below.

You may just as well profit by the saving this big book offers you.

In your home, this book will be a price guide and a shopping pleasure. You, too, may as well know the right price to pay, and you may as well save money on nearly everything you buy.

This Book Offers You a Saving of $50 this Season

Over forty million dollars' worth of goods have been bought at the lowest prices especially for this book—a part of our work to hold prices down and to make possible this saving for you.

So if you write for this book, if you use this book, and if your family uses this book, there will be a saving of over $50 in cash for you this season.

But this book offers you more than a saving—more than low prices. It offers you the satisfaction and the economy of always getting dependable and serviceable goods.

Ward Quality and Right Prices

For over fifty years Montgomery Ward & Co. has tried, first of all, to sell only serviceable goods that stand inspection and use.

We take great pride in Ward Quality. We always quote the lowest possible price. But we try always to have our quality a little higher.

So to write for this book, to use this book every week, not only means a saving in cash, but satisfaction with everything you buy and the saving that long service always brings.

Everything for the Home, the Farm and the Family

FOR WOMEN: This book shows the best New York Fashions, selected in New York by our own New York Fashion Experts. And everything is sold without the usual "fashion profits." This book will be a delight, a matter of style news, and a saving to every American woman.

FOR THE HOME: Carpets, furniture, bedding, electrical devices, everything new for home use, everything used in decoration and to make the home modern and complete. And the prices always mean a saving.

FOR THE MEN AND THE FARM: Everything a man uses or wears, from tools and hardware and famous Riverside Tires, to virgin wool suits—often one-third less than prices you are paying.

The coupon below brings this new, complete Fall and Winter Catalogue to you and your family—entirely free.

You, too, may as well profit by its saving. You need simply fill in this coupon and all the saving and satisfaction and pleasure this book brings will come into your home for you and your family.

Your Order will be Shipped in Less than 48 Hours

Our new perfected system of filling orders is now over a year old.

And our records prove that during the past year nearly all orders were shipped in less than 48 hours.

48 hour service is our promise to you. But we do better than our promise—because a large percentage of our orders are actually shipped within 24 hours.

So you can order from Montgomery Ward & Co. and feel sure that nearly every time your order will be shipped in less than 48 hours, and frequently within 24 hours.

This Coupon brings this new Catalogue Free

To MONTGOMERY WARD & CO.
Dept. 19-H,
Chicago, Kansas City, St. Paul,
Portland, Ore., Fort Worth.

(Mail this coupon to the house nearest you.)

Please mail me my free copy of Montgomery Ward's complete Fall and Winter Catalogue.

Name.....

Address.....

.....

MONTGOMERY WARD & CO.

CHICAGO KANSAS CITY ST. PAUL PORTLAND, ORE. FORT WORTH

Gray Hair Unnecessary

As I Have Proved

I proved it many years ago by restoring the original color to my own prematurely gray hair with the same Restorer I now offer you. This time-tested preparation never fails, as hundreds of thousands of gray haired people since have learned.

There is not space in this advertisement to tell my story. Send for Free Trial bottle and learn all.

FREE Trial Bottle Tells the Story

Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer is a clear, colorless liquid, clean as water. No greasy sediment to make your hair sticky and stringy, nothing to wash or rub off. Application easy, restored color perfect, in any light. Faded or discolored hair just as surely and safely restored as hair naturally gray.

Experience my teacher

I invented my scientific hair color restorer to bring back the original color to my own hair which was prematurely gray. Since, millions have used it and so will millions more. It is the most popular and biggest selling preparation of its kind in the world.

Now I have something new to offer and almost as important, in the shape of a new preparatory powder which puts your hair in perfect condition for restoration. This powder is a recent discovery of my laboratories and its action is that of tonic and antiseptic. A package now comes with each full sized bottle and a trial sized package is included in my special patented free trial outfit. I urge you to send for this patented outfit today and prove how easily, surely and beneficially you can restore your own gray hair to its natural color.

Mail coupon today

Send today for the special patented Free Trial outfit which contains a trial bottle of my Restorer, and full instructions for making the convincing test on a single lock of hair. Indicate color of hair with X. Print name and address plainly. If possible, enclose a lock of your hair in your letter.

Mary T Goldman's
Hair Color Restorer
Over 10,000,000 Bottles Sold

FREE TRIAL COUPON — Please print your name and address

MARY T. GOLDMAN,
28-J Goldman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.

Please send your patented Free Trial Outfit. X shows color of hair. Black.... dark brown.... medium brown.... auburn (dark red).... light brown.... light auburn (light red).... blonde....

Name.....

Street..... City.....

Stillman's
Freckle Cream

Will remove your freckles or we agree to refund your money. It will whiten the skin and refine its texture. No bother—simply apply it before going to bed each night. Cannot grow hair. Two sizes 50c and $1 at all druggists. Be sure to ask for Stillman's—more girls use it than any other. Our free booklet "Beauty Parlor Secrets" describes treatment and gives many make-up hints. Get our special limited perfume offer. The Stillman Company, 59 Rosemary Lane, Aurora, Ill.

Write for booklet
"Beauty Parlor Secrets"
and free perfume offer

Skin Troubles
— Soothed —
With Cuticura

Soap, Ointment, Talcum, 25c. everywhere. Samples free of Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. D, Malden, Mass.

GRAY OR FADED HAIR

Restored to its original color

La Tulle's Herb Tea restores gray or faded hair to its natural color, beauty and softness. It will produce the most abundant tresses from dry, coarse and wiry hair. Prevents dandruff and falling hair. Promotes its growth and gives the hair a soft, glossy and healthy appearance. IT IS NOT A DYE. A package makes one pint. One package postpaid 30 cents, or five packages $1.

LA TULLE'S HERB CO., Dept. D,
1033 W. 39th Place,
LOS ANGELES, CALIF.

Clear Your Skin

Your skin can be quickly cleared of Pimples, Blackheads, Acne Eruptions on the face or body, Barbers Itch, Eczema, Enlarged Pores, Oily or Shiny Skin. FREE Write today for my FREE Booklet, "A CLEAR-TONE SKIN," telling how I cured myself after being afflicted for 15 years. $1000 Cash says I can clear your skin of the above blemishes.

E. S. GIVENS, 306 Chemical Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

The Pretty Girls' Club

Conducted by Katherine Booth

When Our Eyes Need Help

BOTH young girls and older women find, sometimes, that no matter how young their eyes are, they need to be supplemented by glasses. It is a good deal of a shock to most of us when that time arrives, for we do not like to don glasses.

Then comes the question: "What kind of glasses shall I wear?"

Well, of course, the first person entitled to answer that question is your oculist, for he it is who knows what your eyes need. But if he does not seem to care what style of glasses you wear, then that is where I shall take the opportunity of whispering a word of advice in your ears.

If you are to wear glasses all the time, that is one problem, and if you are only to put them on when you read, that is still another. For the latter use, the tortoise shell-rimmed spectacles—yes, I said spectacles.—are the best, for they do not shift or change, while glasses that are fitted to the nose and taken on and off are not as true of vision. So if you are only going to wear glasses for reading or studying, the spectacle is the thing. But, just between ourselves, you and I know that they are not becoming, don't we?

GOOD FOR VISION BUT NOT FOR VANITY.

If you are to wear glasses all the time, we must both remember that spectacles again are probably the most sensible glass for the eyes, but here we must let our vanity have something to say. And I do believe we are justified in saying we do not want to wear spectacles all day and every day. There are various kinds of glasses, gold rimmed, no rim at all, rimmed in colorless material; some with a curve of gold over the bridge of the nose, others with a close-fitting band that pinches to the bridge of the nose. This latter style is perhaps the most becoming, but some cannot wear it so for them the style which has a curve above the bridge of the nose is the choice.

I only wear glasses for reading, but I voted against spectacles because I did not wish to compete with Harold Lloyd! I do not like the gold loop above the bridge of the nose but I cannot wear the nose-pinch kind. If you can, that is the type to choose, because it does not interfere with the line of the nose or the brows. Choose the colorless rims, for your glassess are least conspicuous in this way, while gold or tortoise-shell rims call attention to themselves.

There are various ways of attaching glasses to yourself so that you do not have to remember where they are when you want them. You can have a tiny gold chain with a small gold hairpin attached, and pin it in your hair behind the ear; you can have a button-shaped pin attached to your bodice, from which hang your glasses, and out of which a gold chain unrolls when it is pulled and you want to don your glasses, or you can wear a small black eyeglass cord attached to your glasses and hung about your neck. I have tried most of these methods and have now arrived at the point where they are all discarded, and I hunt for my glasses whenever I want them, trying to remember whether I left them in the telephone closet, or on the piano, or at my writing desk, or inside of the book I was reading. It is a great nuisance not to know where one's glasses are, but I have decided that black cords and gold chains are not pretty to look at.

If your eyes are far-sighted and all that you need is a little help to look at nearby objects, a lorgnette is useful for this, and can be carried in your purse. Be sure, however, if you ever intend to use a lorgnette—which is not an affectation but merely a convenience for semi-occasional help to the eyes—that your hands are well-cared for and your nails perfection, for nothing calls attention to the hands more than the use of a lorgnette.

In choosing glasses, try on all styles, and look at yourself critically, then choose the style that best fits your nose and least detracts from your personal appearance.

Questions and Answers

TEXAS.—I should not think it would be necessary to use the ammonia and peroxide over the entire face. Most faces have a little down on the skin, but this is nothing to worry about. Poets have even written sonnets about the "down on milady's cheek!" At eighteen I imagine you cannot have much superfluous hair anywhere. If you have any noticeable hairs on lip or chin, dampen one day with ammonia, the next with peroxide, but I should not use it over entire face—and of course you will be wise and never use a depilatory on the face. If you are five feet in height, you should weigh between one hundred and ten and one hundred and fifteen pounds, and your bust and hips should each be thirty-six inches. For blue eyes, light brown hair and fair complexion, you can probably wear olive green, russet, dark blue, golden brown, fawn color, corn yellow, bronze brown, blue-violet. Being blue-eyed and fair comp exion, but with hair that is light brown, you are rather between blonde and brunette. Try the various colors and see which ones are becoming. Some colors are more becoming when touched up with some contrasting color, as, for instance, yellow or peacock blue in small touches with an olive green dress or silver or purple accents with the blue-violet, etc.

DONNA.—Your friend who has a space between her two front teeth, and then an over-lapping tooth, needs to go to the dentist. He will have her wear clamps on her teeth for many months, until the gap is closed and the other tooth straightened. For your own pimples, you must first be careful what you eat. You must not eat much candy or other sweet stuff, but plenty of fruit, and drink lots of water. Also eat green vegetables. Then see that your bowels move once or twice a day freely, not with cathartics but by eating proper foods and exercising. Eat prunes that have been soaked over night before cooking, eat apples, chew all food thoroughly before swallowing. Then be careful about taking a body bath daily. If you have no built-in bathtub, you can take a perfectly good bath standing on a folded bath towel and scrubbing clean a small portion of the body at one time, then drying before you bathe another portion. By keeping the pores clean and open, body impurities have a chance to escape instead of filling up the pores and causing pimples. Dandruff may be gotten rid of, quite often, by frequent shampooing. Try washing your hair thoroughly once in two weeks, being sure that you rinse it many, many times so that there isn't the slightest soap left in it. Do not use a fine comb on the scalp, and be careful in combing the hair not to touch the scalp with the comb, nor to brush the scalp itself. Brush and comb the hair without touching the scalp. You can wipe the scalp off by rubbing the part with a soft bit of cloth, then parting again and doing the same, until you have gone over the entire scalp. Before shampooing, run a medicine dropper filled with olive oil down the various parts in this way, tying up the head in a towel thereafter over night. In the morning, shampoo. The oil will loosen the dandruff and it will probably come away in the shampooing.

BLUE EYES.—Tanned skin is very fashionable, but if you do not like yours to be tanned, you can try an almond meal bleach, and thereafter be most careful, when going out in the sun, to rub the skin well with cold cream, and dust on a little powder after you have wiped off all surplus cream with a pad of soft cotton. Buy some almond meal and a jar of theatrical skin food—the latter is quite reasonable in price. Into one teaspoonful of the cream mix as much meal as it will hold, then add enough hot water to make the paste thin enough to spread. Cut a square of cheese-cloth, and spread the paste thereon, cover with another square and apply to the face. In both squares you should have cut a hole for the nose. Pat the mash down close to the skin and keep covered with hot wet Turkish towels, changing them constantly, for fifteen minutes. After removing the pack, bathe the face in warm water, then in cold. Take six of these treatments, three days apart.

A CURIOUS BRUNETTE.—To reduce the arms and shoulders, practice the following exercise:

To Reduce Arms and Shoulders

Standing erect, close the hands in fists and place on the shoulders. Now raise them quickly and vigorously to their full length, then quickly bring them back to first position. Repeat ten or fifteen times.

Another Good Exercise

Standing erect, extend the arms in front of you full length with palms pressed together. Elbows must not bend in this exercise, and arms must be kept on the same level as the shoulders. Now throw the arms back as if trying to make them meet in the middle of the back, shoulder level. Press with them vigorously. Return them to first position, and repeat, making the backward movement one of great vigor. Practice ten or fifteen times, twice a day.

To bleach the neck, one of the best preparations is made of an ounce of strained honey to which has been added a teaspoonful of lemon juice and six drops of oil of bitter almonds. Stir this into the whites of two unbeaten eggs, and add enough fine oatmeal to make a smooth thin paste. Spread on one side of a strip of cotton cloth and bind about the neck firmly at night. Repeat five or six times, two nights apart. Oil of bitter almonds is a poison if taken internally, and should not be used on the face, or left within the reach of children.

BROWN EYES.—No, indeed, one hundred and ten pounds is not too much to weigh at your age and your height. You can keep on gaining. To make fat legs slimmer, practice the following exercise:

To Reduce the Size of the Legs

Stand beside the foot of your bed, and place your hands upon it. Now rise slowly on your toes until you are on the very tips. Then sink to a squatting position, without letting the heels touch the floor. Rise again, sink, and continue for ten or fifteen times. Inhale when rising, exhale when squatting.

IGNORAMUS.—Your circulation is not good, I should imagine, and that is probably the cause of your being so red and hot in summer, and so purple and cold in winter. You should exercise daily. Also be careful of your food, for you are quite right in thinking that food might have something to do with this feeling of intense heat. In summer do not eat heavy foods. Eat vegetables and fruits, little if any meat—for it heats the blood. Don't eat many sweets, for they, too, are heating. If you will eat cool salads, fruits, string beans, asparagus, tomatoes, corn, squash, etc., I think you will find your condition improved. Then be careful about bathing. See what I say to "Donna." Keeping the pores open, and the skin frictioned and clean, will aid in equalizing the circulation. Powder the body after bathing from a talcum can, and gently go over the body with a pad of cotton. Do not wear tight or warm clothes. Do not wear a corset—very few young women wear them now. Exercise night and morning, to get the circulation working properly. Here are some exercises for you.

To Equalize the Circulation

Standing erect, stretch the hands out in front of you, with fingers somewhat curved, but elbows rigid. Now without bending the elbows, raise the arms quickly above head, palms facing forward. Bring them down, without bending elbows, by throwing them forward and down. Inhale as you raise the arms, exhale as you throw them down, doing your breathing slowly. Repeat ten or fifteen times.

Another Exercise for the Circulation

In same standing position, stretch the arms out at the sides, on a level with the shoulders. Then practice the exercise given "A Curious Brunette"—the second one.

Deep breathing is one of the best things for the circulation, so try always to take good breaths, without effort, breathing deeply. I shouldn't use cocoa butter on my neck, but rather some good pure cold cream, not so greasy as cocoa butter. The massage is what will develop the neck. I am glad you have such lovely eyes and mouth. You are lucky! I do not think if I were you, that I would meddle with my eyebrows and eyelashes. Mascarra is what is used to darken them, and it can be bought at your druz-store—in pencil shape. But I should let mine alone, if I were you. They sound attractive as they are, and darkened eyebrows and lashes are apt to look artificial. For the ankles which you think are too large, try the following exercise:

To Reduce Ankles

Standing with heels together, toes at an angle, so that there is a V-shaped space between them, raise the left heel and extend it toward the left, without moving the left toe. At the same time, lift the right toe and move to the left without lifting the right heel. This will bring the toes of the two feet together, and leave the heels wide apart, with a V-shaped space between them. Now lift the left toe and move to the left, at the same time lifting the right heel and moving to the left, thus bringing the heels together again and the toes apart. Do this slowly at first, moving the toes of one foot and the heel of the other at the same time. Then, as soon

FOR A MOMENT'S USE ONLY THE LORGNETTE IS CONVENIENT.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 29.)

I Have Found Out How to Get Rid of Superfluous Hair At Once

Here's the Secret

I had become utterly discouraged with a heavy growth of hair on my face and lip. I had tried every sort of depilatory and electrolysis and even a razor. But I couldn't get rid of it.

Then I made a wonderful discovery. I found a simple method by which I removed the hair at once and most wonderful to relate, it keeps the hair removed. My face is now as smooth as a baby's, not only free from superfluous hair but from pimples and blemishes. I have explained this discovery to thousands of women who have had the same experience with it that I had and I will explain it to you if you also have superfluous hair. It isn't like anything you have ever used. It is not a powder, paste, wax or liquid, not a razor, not electricity. It causes no itching or burning and leaves no scars. As easy to use as your comb or brush.

Send for Free Book

A book that tells just how this wonderful method gets rid of superfluous hair is free upon request. Don't send a penny—just a letter or post card. Address Annette Lanzette, Dept. 617, Care Hygienic Laboratories, 204 S. Peoria Street, Chicago, Ill.

Gray Hair Banished in fifteen minutes

Inecto Rapid is specifically guaranteed to color naturally gray, faded or streaked hair to any desired shade in 15 minutes and to preserve all its original beauty and texture. The results are permanent and cannot be detected from natural even under a microscope. Inecto Rapid comes in 18 distinct shades from radiant blonde to raven black. Inecto Rapid is harmless to the hair or its growth and is unaffected by shampooing, sunshine, salt water, Turkish or Russian baths. It never rubs off and does not prevent permanent waving or any other hair treatment. Many thousands of the leading hairdressing shops from Coast to Coast use and unreservedly endorse Inecto Rapid. In New York it is used by such ultra-fashionable shops as Hotel Pennsylvania, Hotel Commodore, Biltmore and Waldorf-Astoria.

SEND NO MONEY

Just send us your name and we will mail you full interesting details and our Beauty Analysis Chart DD-5, enabling you to find the most becoming color for your hair.

INECTO, Inc.
Laboratories and Salons
33-35 West 46th St., New York

YOU CAN NOW HAVE Natural Curly Hair

FASHION today demands curls. To be in style, no matter what your age, you must have wavy, curly hair. A marvelous curling liquid transforms the straightest, dull, unruly hair into beautiful, soft, wavy natural curls in a few moments time.

Just comb a few drops into your hair. In just a short time, straight, lifeless, unmanageable locks are lustrous, soft, wavy—naturally curling. Magical! Yes, because the soft, silken sheen—the mass of natural curls—the permanent wave effect you've always yearned for and style demands has come to stay. Stays in curl in hot or rainy weather. Prepared and GUARANTEED by a physician.

SPECIAL OFFER! $5 Bottle Only $1.43 POSTPAID

Special Offer: To quickly introduce this marvelous curling liquid it is now being offered at a special low price. SEND NO MONEY—Just your name and address and a full $5.00 bottle will be sent you—postpaid. On arrival pay postman only $1.43 (no postage). If not satisfied, your money refunded.

JEFFREY LABORATORIES,
Station D-30, St. Joseph, Mo.

Six Special Sears, Roebuck Values for FALL

THESE exceptional values point the way to big money savings for you this season.

Each is a genuine bargain. Each represents the famous Sears-Roebuck quality and typifies our motto that "The World's Biggest Mail Order House Gives the World's Biggest Bargains."

Compare them with any merchandise you can buy anywhere. But compare QUALITY and PRICE together. Then you will more clearly realize that Sears, Roebuck and Co. offer you goods better than the ordinary at less than regular market prices and in selection and variety not to be found anywhere else.

You can't buy RIGHT unless you use the Sears-Roebuck Catalog. Over eight million people know this. That is why our customers send us the largest volume of business given to any store in the world.

Our new General Catalog for fall is ready. It is full of fresh fall merchandise—the latest styles — the greatest values in everything to wear, to use in the home, on the farm or in town. You can have the benefit of these savings wherever you live. Over 28,000 big money saving, GUARANTEED values to choose from.

You will want this latest, greatest Sears-Roebuck Catalog. If there is not a copy in your home, send us your name and address and we will mail one FREE.

Sears, Roebuck and Co.
The World's Biggest Mail Order House.

Value No 1
$7.95

All Silk Taffeta

Essentially youthful in its newly created design, you will find a world of becomingness in this chic frock of the ever popular all silk taffeta. Its dainty skirt shows all around rows of cording, beneath which it is literally covered both front and back with most effectively colorful allover embroidery, which finds its match in embroidery applied to the tiny turnback cuffs. Adding its note of harmony is the pretty satin ribbon girdle which ends in streamers down the front, held by a bewitching ribbon rosette. Refreshing in its contrast is the sheer narrow collar of embroidered organdie. Dress fastens invisibly at left side.

WOMEN'S REGULAR SIZES—32 to 44 inches bust measure. Give measurements. Shipping weight, 1¼ pounds. $7.95
31N6845C—Black.
31N6846C—Navy blue.
Shipped from CHICAGO or PHILADELPHIA store.

Value No 2
$9.98

All Wool Velour

Could greater value be desired than an all wool winter weight velour Coat for $9.98? You will find in this coat a pleasing wealth of style, too, brilliant decorative fiber silk stitching applied to the warm, handsome, button-up collar and matched by stitching upon the button trimmed wide, strap cuffs. Coat has good looking patch pockets of novel design and closes in front with large ornamental disc button so fashionable this year, completed by a wide tailored piped buttonhole. All around cross over belt. Length, 48 inches, unlined.

WOMEN'S AND MISSES' SIZES—34 to 46 inches bust measure. State size. Shipping weight, 6 pounds. $9.98
17N1045C—Navy blue.
17N1046C—Brown.
Shipped from CHICAGO or PHILADELPHIA store.

Stylish Panel-Back Fine Mercerized Cotton Stockings

86N2360C—Black.
86N2361C—Dark brown.
86N2362C—White. 49c

Style that is individual and smart. They're sturdy and dependable—you'll get loads of wear from them. Made of a good quality mercerized cotton. Fashioned with the panel back. Reinforced soles, toes and high spliced heels. Seamless feet. Double garter tops. Sizes, 8½, 9, 9½ and 10. State size. Shipping weight, 3 oz.

Shipped from CHICAGO or PHILADELPHIA store.

Value No 3
49¢

Value No 4
$3.79

Order Direct From This Advertisement.

Just as Great Bargains for All the Family.

Genuine Goodyear Welt

$2.98

15N2834C—Brown.
15N2835C—Black.

For smart style, coupled with the quality that gives extremely long wear, this shoe is a sensational value. Genuine Vici Kid Lace Oxford. Military heel with rubber top lift.

Sizes, 2½ to 8. State size.
Wide widths only.
Shipping wt., 1½ lbs.
Shipped from CHICAGO or PHILADELPHIA store.

Value No 6
$2.98

If you haven't this book, send coupon for it TODAY.

Value No 5
$7.95

28,000 Other Great VALUES IN THIS 1100 PAGE BOOK

All Wool Serge.

This girls' dress is exceptionally low in price and made of extra good quality all wool serge, pleasingly suited for school or everyday wear. The side plaited skirt is attached to waist beneath narrow tie sash, while front shows fiber silk hand embroidery and red piping on sleeves and around neck.

AGES—7 to 14 years. State age size. Shipping weight, 1½ pounds. $3.79
31N2400C—Navy blue.
31N2401C—Brown.
Shipped from CHICAGO or PHILADELPHIA store.

All Wool Dark Brown Cassimere.

40N3249C With One Pair Pants. $5.98
40N3247C With Two Pairs Pants. 7.95
Sizes, 7 to 17 years.

You cannot duplicate these values and prices anywhere. Made from a strongly woven ALL WOOL dark brown mixed cassimere. Good strong lining in coat. Full lined knickerbockers; two pairs of pants mean almost double wear. State age size. Shipping weight, suit with one pair pants, 3½ pounds; with two pairs pants, 4¾ pounds.

Shipped from CHICAGO or PHILADELPHIA store.

Sears, Roebuck and Co.
Chicago Philadelphia Dallas Seattle

Send me Latest Catalog No. 91C57.

Name .....

Postoffice .....

Rural Route..... Box No. .....

State .....

Street and No.....

Happy Little Tots

No. 4

No. 10

No. 42

Through the columns of this department our Doctor's advice regarding maternity and child welfare will be given free in answer to questions by our subscribers.

Address Mother and Baby Department, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and be sure to give your full name and address. Names will not be published.

Summer Diseases of Babies—Continued

LAST month we discussed simple diarrhea, and this month we take up another form of diarrhea, called inflammatory diarrhea or enterocolitis. This is a catarrhal inflammation of the lower portion of the small intestine, the ilium, and the upper portion of the large intestine, the colon, with a great tendency to ulceration of the intestinal glands if the condition becomes chronic. The presence of mucous or blood in the stools, are proofs of an inflamed condition of the intestinal mucous membrane, and this disease has caused more deaths in babies than any other one disease, as many of the deaths charged to cholera infantum, are caused by enterocolitis.

Baby goes through the cholera infantum safely, but is not able to stand the long, obstinate, exhausting diarrhea of enterocolitis if it follows before he regains his strength. A large number of the cases of summer diarrhea may begin as a mere functional disturbance of the intestines, but sooner or later if not corrected becomes the disease we are now considering.

It is one of the most important diseases of babies, especially in this country where we have our long hot summers, and in some of the large cities, its prevalence and fatality raises it to the rank of almost a pestilence.

Every year we are lessening the mortality of enterocolitis by more careful hygiene and greater care in the food of our infants.

The two most common causes are improper food, and the heat of summer.

The improper food may be the mother's milk if the mother is not healthy, or is not careful about what she eats.

No. 23.

If a nursing mother has indigestion, the baby is certain to have it also, and in a worse form, as its digestive organs are weaker.

Enterocolitis occurs more often in babies kept on other foods, than those that are given an exclusive diet of milk until they are six months old.

If the mother's milk is healthy it is rare for a nursing baby to have enterocolitis until weaned, or some disturbance from teething.

A common cause is feeding baby too hearty food, too rich for its weak digestion, but even if the quality of the food is good, you must be careful of the amount given.

Overfeeding has always been recognized as a fruitful source of bowel complaints of early life.

Another cause is the preparation of the food in too thick and rich a manner, and thereby overtasking the stomach intended during the early months to receive the thin milk supplied by nature. The extreme heat in summer is a common cause, and the months of July and August furnish by far the largest number of cases.

The effect of heat is so striking, that it can not be doubted, but whether heat alone may act in this way upon the system of the baby is not proven, but it certainly acts by the noxious gases, products of decomposition of animal and vegetable substances; therefore clean homes, homes where the garbage is properly cared for lessen the danger of this disease, and in fact all diseases.

The next most common cause after improper food is teething, and while the evolution of the teeth through the gums is a normal physiological process it is a powerful predisposing cause of diarrhea and enterocolitis.

There are two things we can safely assume to be true; first, an unhealthy food, one incompetent to furnish to the body what it needs for the purpose of nutrition, is sure to cause the disorder we are considering, no matter how favorable may be the circumstances in other respects in which the child is placed; second, the baby may be fed the best breast milk, or the most correct artificial food in the world, yet neither will save baby from disease if it lives in a badly ventilated house, or on a filthy street in a large city during the hot weather.

Symptoms of enterocolitis are at first restlessness and fretfulness, sighing, moaning in the sleep; does not eat as usual and, after a few days, the diarrhea and other abdominal symptoms appear. The frequency of the stools vary from six or eight to thirty in a day in severe cases, and are usually green, acid and may contain mucous. The abdomen is distended and the baby may draw up its legs and cry out if you touch it. The baby is feverish, has very rapid pulse, 120 to 140, vomits several times a day, the features look drawn and emaciated and in severe cases the baby soon looks as if it had been sick for months.

The duration of the disease is uncertain, but usually it lasts about ten days.

Enterocolitis is a serious disease, but in babies who have passed the first teething their chances of recovery are, as a rule, good if appropriate treatment is begun at once. The unfavorable symptoms are great frequency of the stools, violent vomiting, rigidity of the limbs, paralysis or convulsions.

The prophylactic treatment is important and includes attention to surroundings, diet and dress. Get baby in as cool and clean a place as possible, dress it so it will feel the heat as little as possible, and feed it on proper food.

Of course our babies have to live where we do, but if we could choose an ideal place for them to spend the summer, we would prefer a high interior rather than the seaside, but the most perfect locality will not protect baby if nursing deficient, unhealthy breast, or fed improper food.

If baby is eating solid food the mother or nurse must not allow it to have a variety of vegetables, or berries, especially uncooked blueberries.

As soon as baby shows any signs of intestinal disturbance, lessen its food; this should be done, whether nursing, or taking artificial food, or milk if bottle fed.

Give teaspoonful doses of castor oil to clear out bowels of any offending contents and if baby seems to be in a great deal of pain, give with the castor oil, two or three drops of Tincture of Opium.

Poultices or camphorated oil, covered with flannel may be applied to abdomen.

A spice poultice is good and is made with one-half ounce each of cloves, allspice, anise seeds and cinnamon, pounded together in a mortar and placed between two pieces of coarse flannel six inches square, then soak in solution of equal parts of whiskey and water, then applied to abdomen.

Warm baths are helpfu if baby is not too weak, and after putting baby in bath you can wrap it up in muslin sheet and over this a flannel blanket and allow it to sit in your lap a while as this rests baby.

Bismuth Subnitrate in two to five grain doses every two or three hours, depending on age, and frequency of bowel movements. This may be given alone or you may add one grain of salol to each dose, given in sugar.

Dover's powder in doses of one-eighth of a grain may be given every three hours, if there is great pain or frequency of movements, or if baby is restless or nervous, but must be used with caution and discontinued if baby shows any degree of drowsiness.

If you are treating a bottle fed baby, stop the milk, and give baby egg albumen, beef or mutton broths, or squeeze the juice out of a piece of cooked steak, or give barley water.

If baby seems weak you should not hestitate to give it 10 to 30 drops of diluted whiskey or brandy.

Subject for next month, Summer Diseases of Babies.

Questions and Answers

BABY VOMITS.—Tell me what to do for my four-months-old baby as he vomited when I nursed him, so I put him on malted milk, two tablespoonfuls to three ounces of water. He still vomits, is pale, thin, and cries very much, and his mouth is covered with white spots.

Mrs. C. V.,
Simpsonville, Md.

A.—Your milk did not agree with baby, neither does the malted milk, or he would not have these symptoms of indigestion.

Put him on modified milk, and if you can not get good fresh cow's milk, get Klim and put him on this. The spots in the mouth will disappear as soon as you remove the cause, which is indigestion.

INDIGESTION.—I have a girl six years old and she always complains of her stomach aching, and her tongue is coated.

No. 39.

Mrs. E. H. M. Gilford,, Mont.

A.—Your girl has indigestion and you should be careful and give her simple foods, not allow her to eat too fast or too often

See that she chews her food properly, and does not drink too much while eating. The food should be chewed and properly mixed with the saliva and this is one of the important steps of digestion, and it can not be done if every mouthful of food is washed down by water, or any liquid.

Give her teaspoonful doses of Elix Lactated Pepsin after each meal.

SORE MOUTH.—My two-year-old boy has a sore mouth and tongue, tongue coated and red spots on it, which seem to eat into it.

Mrs. E. E. G., Powderly, Ky.

A.—The causes of sore mouth and tongue are many, but decayed teeth, indigestion, and not properly caring for the teeth are the most common.

See that your boy's digestion and bowels are normal, wash out mouth with a saturated solution of boric acid, or Glyco-Thymoline, teaspoonful to tablespoonful of warm water, and i there are any ulcers touch them up with Nitrate of Silver stick.

WEAK BABY.—I began to menstruate when baby was six weeks old, but I kept on nursing baby until she was one year old, and now she is very puny and small.

Did my nursing have th s effect on baby, and what can I do to get her to gain and grow to normal size?

Mrs. F. D. H., Howells, Nebr.

A.—If you were not weak and run down do not see how conditions mentioned would in any way affect baby's growth or size.

Should put her on nourishing diet, one quart of milk a day, coddled eggs, baked potato, cooked cereals and cream, meat broths.

Keep her out in the open air all you can, also give Maltine and Cod Liver oil, CORSETS, ETC.—I have not worn a corset for a year, should I now, that I am pregnant? Should I be much enlarged at three months?

Last day of last menstruation was March 20th. When should I be sick? What can I do to enlarge nipples?

Mrs. R. M., Protection, Kans.

A.—(a) No. (b) No. (c) Dec. 25th. (d) As a rule the nipples should not be disturbed until late in pregnancy, then they should be hardened by rubbing them with tannin and alcohol.

NURSING BABY.—How soon after baby is born should a mother have her monthly periods.?

My baby is one year old and cutting teeth. Should I wean her?

Mrs. J. H., Philipsburg, Mont.

A.—No rule to go by, some in three months, others a year or longer, both normal.

I think you should wean the baby.

BRONCHIAL ASTHMA.—My fourteen-months-old baby boy has bronchial asthma, has had it for months, and at times it is hard for him to breathe.

Mrs. C. P., Columbus, Ind.

Mrs L. E. R., Halls, Tenn.

Mrs. C. G. T., Kendallsville, Ind. Please read.

A.—Give baby ten drops of Syrup of Hydriodic acid, (Gardners) in syrup three times a day; give one-half teaspoonful doses of Malto-Yerbine every three hours, if baby is coughing or wheezing.

Locally should apply camphorated oil, under flannel.

MENSTRUATING DURING PREGNANCY.—I am four months pregnant, but menstruate as usual. What can I do, and if it continues, will baby be affected in any way?

Mrs. G. P., Commache, Okla.

A.—This condition often happens, but it is not harmful and baby will not be affected in any way.

INDIGESTION IN NURSING BABY.—What can I do for my six-months-old nursing baby as he is constipated, and has bloating spells and gas in stomach? How often should I feed him, and is he too young to feed?

Mrs. W. B., [illegible] Creek, Neb.

A.—Keep your own bowels regular and nursing baby's will be the same.

Nurse him every three hours in the daytime, and do not allow baby to nurse too fast. Teaspoonful doses of castor oil will relieve the gas, but if you are careful what you eat yourself it will not form.

DISCHARGE FROM BREAST.—I am six months pregnant, and have slight discharge from the breasts. What is the cause and remedy?

Pa.

A.—The cause is over-distended secreting glands and it is not harmful. Put on a binder with slight pressure for a few days and this will be relieved.

NERVOUS BABY.—My baby cries a great deal, especially in the afternoon, but sleeps well at night. She seems very nervous, jumps at sudden noises, or if you raise your hand she seems to think you are going to strike her. She is fat and plump, weighed seven pounds at birth, eleven pounds at three months.

Mrs. A. H. G., Sulphur Springs, Texas.

A.—I understand from your letter that you are nursing baby, therefore you must treat the baby through your milk.

Do not think I should give baby of this age any medicine, but take laxatives myself so as to regulate your bowels; also you can take teaspoonful dose of Tincture of Valerian every three or four hours for its effect on baby.

If baby does not improve have some suppositories made up containing small doses of asafetida and insert one in the rectum when needed.

Keep baby absolutely quiet, and alone as much as possible, and do not allow people to play with it, or have baby in room where many people are talking.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 5.)

No. 41. KNOXVILLE, TENN.

GOOD MORNING TO ALL THE DEAR SISTERS:

I have been one for some time; in fact, since I was seven years old I have loved dear COMFORT. I have never been without it and now that I am happily married, to an ex-soldier, and God has blessed us with a dear daughter, I intend to teach her to feel as I do toward my old standby COMFORT.

Mrs. Ogle, I also have a child about the age of your little son who was very much like yours except that she has walked and talked since ten months of age. She was obedient at times but stubborn at other times and I believe if I had beaten her to death she wouldn't have obeyed. I worried and tried most every plan until at last I made her go and stand behind a tree where I couldn't see her face. In a few minutes she came running to me with her little fat arms outstretched wanting to kiss me. She said, "I love you mother." Now when she begins to cry I send her out to the tree or if it is night I send her behind the door. It works like magic with her but, of course, all children are not to be dealt with alike.

My baby has always been intelligent and industrious. I have taught her to love to work and in selecting her every-day toys, I get dolls, teddybear, rake, hoe, shovel, broom, dishes, pottery, wagon, wheelbarrow a tub and washboard. I teach her to use each of them. She is 22 months old now and is sweeping up every crumb she accidentally drops; takes her wagon (that her Daddy made from a box) and hauls in wood and chips, helps me carry water from the spring, in her little bucket, takes her hoe to the garden and tries to help me hoe up grass, takes her shovel, rake and wheelbarrow out in the grove and helps me rake trash and leaves, and when I begin to get supper she hands me the wood. When I make bread she wants a little dough in her pan to cook for Daddy. Every time I wash I give her water and her washboard and she washes out some little pieces of cloth

There are many ways to teach our children if we will have patience.

I am sending a picture of my baby, taken when she was five months old. Her name is Margaret Irene Dupes.

With best wishes to all, MRS. D. B. DUPES.

No. 42. SAUK CITY, WISCONSIN.

DEAR MRS WILKINSON AND ALL THE SISTERS

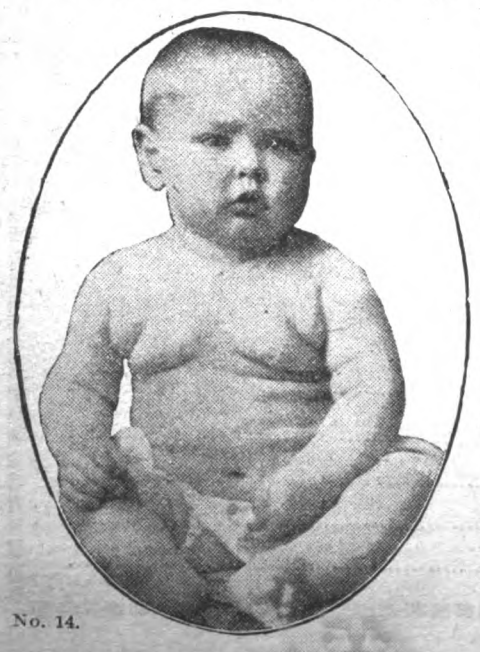
You are such a friendly, happy bunch that I just had to run in for a little chat. I'm a farmer's wife but you'll try to like me a little, won't you, for I have loved you all for six years. I could not get along without COMFORT. When it arrives I curl up in a rocker and read every page of it. It is real solid comfort.

I must say a word to Texas Blue Bonnet, as I can sympathize with her losing her little fern. Like you, my house plants consist of one little fern. Its two years in the world have been hard as every time it gets a new shoot, it is knocked down and broken off. Last winter it froze, and in a few weeks it sent out new shoots.

I am married to a good man and we have three boys. I am sending their picture and hope to see their faces smiling at me from the Sisters' page. Their names are Lavern, Evon and Orlyn and their ages are five, three and one years. Daddy and I think they are real cute. How many of the sisters have a mischievous child? Our second child was very mischievous and this is the way I cured him. It had been my custom when I went out to tell the oldest boy to watch Evon so he wouldn't get into things. Well, Evon would just get into everything, from one thing to another. Lavern would try his best to stop him but it was too much of a task. So I tried changing it around and told Evon to watch Lavern. So now when I go out I tell him, "Mamma is going after a pai of water, you watch Lavern and see that he doesn't get into things." "Yes, me watch Vern." Instead of getting into all kinds of mischief he stands around watching big brother. Sometimes Lavern does some little thing and when I come in Evon tells me about it. Then he says, "Me wouldn't get into sings. Me good boy." Of course I explained to the older boy why I was doing this.

I am five feet, two inches tall, weigh 90 pounds, have brown hair and eyes and am 26 years old. I should like to get letters from the sisters.

With love to each one of you, MRS. CLINTON KELLER.



Mrs. Keller.—We might as well make up our minds to like you, because if we didn't you'd find some diplomatic way of making us in spite of ourselves.—Ed.

No. 4. SENTINEL, OKLA.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS AND READERS:

I have just finished reading the letter from Mrs Floyd and she expressed my ideas about girls marrying young. I married before I was sixteen and have been married three years and Hubby and I have never had a cross word. He is so good to me that I couldn't get cross with him.

I am sending our baby's picture, [illegible]

No. 14.

eighteen months old. He has always been a large baby. At eight months he weighed 30 pounds. His name is Ralph Lindon.

With love to all, MRS. M. A. COWAN.

No. 43. STOCKTON, KANS.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

I am going to try my luck at entering your Corner. I have read the Sisters' letters for many years and profited by them and feel that I could not be a successful housekeeper without the help of COMFORT.

I am a busy mother as I have five little tots, the oldest six years and the youngest six months, four girls and one boy and I make all their clothes from stockings to coats, caps and mittens. I like to sew and crochet and make pretty things for them. I also have an eight-room house to care for that gives me plenty of exercise, but I have things very convenient and my work is not so hard as it might be. I have water in the house and for wash days an engine to run the washing-machine and wringer and an endless clothes-line so that I can stand in my washroom and hang my clothes and then run them out into the sunshine to dry. I wish every housewife could have one of these clothes-lines. It saves many steps, cold fingers and toes. I think if every man would stop and think it over he would see that his wife needed one for it might save a doctor's bill sometime, maybe funeral expenses, to say nothing of the hard work for his wife. She wouldn't have to wade out through snow and rain after standing over the washtub all the morning. Mine cost only a dollar as my husband made it himself.

No. 35.

I am enclosing a picture of our little girl, Cora Mildred Avery, two years of age, and we would like to see it in COMFORT.

I should like to know where to buy kindergarten supplies. Some time ago I read an advertisement to the effect that if mothers would send their names and addresses to a certain address, they would receive kindergarten helps and ideas that would pacify the little tots for hours. I was not a mother at that time so did not pay much attention to the advertisement. Now I'd like to know more about it

With best wishes to all, MRS C. C. AVERY.

WENTWORTH, S. DAK.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

I have written before but failed to see my letter in print so decided not to try again, but after reading Mrs. Crowley's letter I couldn't keep still

I wonder who she thinks she is to be able to call herself a "saint of the Lord." If she is as much of a Christian as she pretends to be, she'd know that babies are a gift of the Lord. She says just because baby "wants the chandelier" to play with is no reason why he should get it. The babies know very little about their pictures being in the paper. She said, "I know what I want." Well, isn't that like the baby and if the pictures are not printed wouldn't she be getting her chandelier?

God has so often brought worldly children to Him through His greatest gift, a baby, that I cannot see how anyone can regard a baby or its equivalent, a baby picture, less than a word from God.

I am a church member myself and proud of it but because religions differ so I do not think the Sisters' Corner the proper place to bring our religious ideas. There is always plenty of missionary work right at home. As for the Bible quotations, that is a good idea and I'll give Mrs. Crowley credit for it. One of my favorite verses, is John, 3rd chap and 16th verse.

Hoping to see this in print and to have baby does greet me as long as I take COMFORT, I am,

MRS. W. SCHOENEFELD.

Mrs. Schoenefield.—Mrs. Crowley did not mean her letter to be taken as the majority of the sisters understood it, and has explained matters to me in a personal letter. It wasn't necessary, for my feelings were not in the least hurt. Nevertheless, the ready defense of the sisters in my behalf is most gratifying to me and I thank all who have written me such lovely letters.—Ed.

No. 19

MT AUBURN, ILL.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND ALL:

Your last September COMFORT was indeed a bittersweet number to me,—sweet in its merry frontispiece of school opening, and the letters from teachers,—bitter in the thought that I had no such "first day" this year and probably never will have, for I am about to prepare my papers for a teacher's pension which means no more teaching, or else forfeit my pension while teaching which, I cannot well afford

No more school kiddies! No more manly little boys to confide to me their longings and interests, no little girls to nestle up and steal upon my lap and kiss me. And after nearly forty years of their almost daily fellowman association, I shall miss them for I am the life of an anchoret in my backwoods, riverside bungalow, dealing with and seeing little of humanity in general save only these "of the kingdom of Heaven" while teaching, and yet I may reach and teach many more than I could in person through my pen, aiding and advising the legions of ambitious and conscientious young teachers

Miss Hudson, don't attempt to prohibit whispering—It can't be done, and you should not exact it though you could. How foolish and cruel, to require of little restless children a deportment that even adults could not and would not observe Say to them, "Just as little whispering as possible and that only about lessons," and don't be too observant. And never adopt the practice of self-reporting "perfects" at close of school. It only tempts to falsehood and evasion and puts those really honest at a disadvantage with the dishonest, Never appoint "Monitors" to spy upon and report the conduct of their mates. It not only creates jealousies and bickerings, causing those appointed to be disliked, and to unduly exalt their self importance.

Above all, don't tempt a child to falsehood if caught or accused of misdemeanor, by asking them, "Did you?"

No. 25.

From Comfort's Family

The deepest-dyed murderer is not required by law to answer that question. Better say, "How did you come to?" or, still better, after the accusers have been heard, "Do you wish to say anyth ng about it?" Encourage them to "own up" and if they admit their wrong, praise their truthfulness before the school. I've cured many inveterate liars in this way.

Always reprimand in private at first, mildly to begin with and if that doesn't cure, then the "word with the bark on."

Don't "outline."—really "dish out and get" your pupil's lessons for them. I know this is the practice too much among our grade teachers and many of our rural teachers taught with them but it is not only nerve exhausting but needless. Require your pupils to have necessary text books and after due assignment and explanation insist that they master the lesson, including any side line studies.

No. 18.

Determine to be progressive and fully up to date but don't run wildly after every "fad" no matter how highly "feathered." Make sure of the essential studies and then as many of the ornamental for which you have time.

Among these latter, don't "go wild" over the hot lunch innovation. All very good but more trouble than benefit and always abandoned, especially in rural schools, wherever once tried. I know several city high schools that having tried have given up the practice. Most children's stomachs are not so sensitive as to need pampering, or what they eat for lunch to very much affect their studies. Besides this, if the pupils have to furnish the ingredients the poor child is put at a disadvantage with those better off, causing jealousies and heartaches.

See to it that your room is well lighted regardless whether the light is "cross light," "front light" or falls over the left shoulder. Forty years ago before these regulations were even heard of, a bespectacled child was rare to see. Now look over one of our optometrically lighted rooms and you will see a large per cent. of the pupils wearing glasses and many more needing them. That our children's sight is now better conserved than then does not account for the great difference.

Always adapt your course of study to your pupil's need, not your pupil's to your course of study.

E. F. COLWELL.

Mrs. Colwell.—The fact that you have imparted to so many children "the art of living well" should console you for the absence of "first days" or "last days." Both were important days in my childish life but I am inclined to think that first days were the most thrilling. Greeting a former teacher was a pleasure but a new teacher possessed the charm of the unknown. It was a day of discoveries, from the way she combed her hair and the blue dress she wore to the way she smiled. It must require self possession on the part of a new teacher to face the battery of eyes that are aimed at her on that first day. The "last day" was not without its thrills either, from the headache and soreness that came from having straight hair "done up on rags," to produce marvelous curls, or braided in innumerable pigtails to produce "crimps", to speaking a piece and waiting for prizes to be awarded. Dear, dear, how far away such things seem now. It isn't kind of you to bring up memories that remind us of how the years have flown—or, in other words, how old we are.—Ed.

No. 41.

BRIDGEVILLE, CALIF.
DEAR MRS WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

A young lad once said to me, "Mrs. Wells, it's just awful hard to keep a promise." Of course it all depends upon the circumstances but if a promise is worth making it is worth keeping and we should keep our promises to our children.

I want to give the benefit of years of experience and study in training children to the young mothers.

Begin training baby when it first shows understanding, or to notice things in general. Don't let it boss you by making you take it up after you have put it to bed. Make sure there is no cause for crying and then let it cry.

Never condemn yourself after correcting a child. If it sees you are sorry you punished it the game is lost. If you are sorry, tell them of it when no thought of correction is necessary. The best time for this is when you are playing with them. Explain then how happy you are when they obey. Always impress upon a child's mind that it must obey you and father. If you allow it a treat of any sort be sure you don't let it feel that it has begged or coaxed you into submission. You can do a thousand deeds of kindness for its pleasure without its knowing your intention and it will love you more in years to come (say, when in its 'teens) than it would if it could say that it cried or coaxed until you let it have its own way.

Don't allow the child to talk loudly when explaining or reciting an incident.

Don't allow a child to stand around and listen to the grownups' talk or gossip.

And above all, if father is chastising or correcting the child, the mother must be very careful not to show disapproval by allowing the child to come to her arms. Instead, tell it to sit down or if it is near bedtime send it to bed. This same holds true for the father. Both parents must understand the plan and they will receive the same loving respect in after years.

Don't allow your child to visit the home of other children, unless you accompany them, I refer to children under ten years of age. Here is food for thought.

Don't allow a child to be meddlesome at home or abroad.

Don't allow the child to complain of being hungry when visiting, even though it is just a tot. The habit is a growing one. Nip it early. There may be motherly souls who enjoy spreading bread between meals but they are few and far between, and they take the privilege of allowing our children to strew its own cookie crumbs over a neighbor's floor which is another trait of ill manners on the part of the parent. Some young mothers are so strong, happy and carefree that they never have a thought as to how a weaker sister might feel about the ways of their children. If it did enter their minds at all they might call her a crank.

No. 3.

I know a mother who has devoted very much of her time to her baby and at the age of three it is so cute that when she undertakes to correct it, it will stretch its arm imploringly to her and say, "Mamma, don't whip your own baby." The mother has unconsciously given her baby a weapon of defense for the child gains its point every time. When the father corrects the child and tells it to sit down in a chair it always says, "I want to go go Mamma. I am sleepy." But it never goes to sleep even after it is in its mother's lap. The excuse is teaching the child to lie. I'd see to it that she went to sleep or a little palm tea would be used to cure the fibs. If the child sees that one fib is good for defense, others will be used for the same purpose.

Don't allow the maturing child to be idle when there is work it can do and see that it does its work neatly and don't hesitate to let the child know you appreciate its willingness and neatness. Don't pay a child in coin for its work, especially after the age of six years. Never allow it to think you are giving it money for its labor for you.

To have a child fear you sounds cruel in a way but I say that the majority of children must be made to fear before you can control them. Plenty of time to gain their love when they are patterns of obedience. I do not mean in all cases but in some it is necessary, no matter how tenderhearted or love bound a mother is. Be sure your child will obey you before you show the love side. No one likes a disobedient child, yet the child is never to blame. Who then is to blame? The parents, the mother usually gets the most blame because the father is away all day and what little correction is done is not kept up while he is away. You've often heard a mother say, "You'll catch it when Dad gets home," Why does mother wait for Dad to do all the correcting?

There are instances when soft or kind words are all that is needed but they do not meet every requirement.

In many homes today the Bible has much influence. Read a chapter of its beautiful teachings to the children, or part of a chapter, and persuade them to listen. It will have its effect in due season.

I believe there is much room for improvement in child training, for the betterment of the next generation.

Again let me say, the mother who loves her child best is the mother who will curb her feelings toward her child long enough to train it to be obedient and beautiful in mind and body.

Let us have more letters on the subject of child training. Yours with love,

MRS. R. P. WELLS.

EUREKA, BOX 55, CALIF.
DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

Lonely Woman of W. Va., I received your letter today—and had a cry and said a prayer for you. But the dear Lord doesn't always answer in the way we want Him to, although He always answers in the way He should for our best good. I fear this man had become your idol and was purposely removed that you might learn to lean on the Lord, so take up your cross bravely and follow, follow on, in His dear footsteps, withersoever they lead. Learn to pray, "Thy will, not mine, be done." Remember "He keeps in safety those whose minds are stayed on Him," and "Fear not, neither be ye dismayed, for I am the Lord your God," and "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end."

I wish you had signed your name and given address so I might have written you personally.

Yours in the Master's service,

MRS. ALLIE CROWLEY.

Mrs. Crowley.—The request which you made in your letter should have been sent to League of Cousins.—Ed.

No. 21.

LANGDON, KANS.

DEAR COMFORT FRIENDS:

COMFORT has been in our family for a long time and I think it the finest paper ever published.

Someone asked about handkerchiefs for children. This is the way mother made our school handkerchiefs. She bought a yard of checked gingham, checks large enough for cross-stitching. This she cut into handkerchief size, hemmed them and put some simple cross-stitch design in one corner. Let the children help make these. It will teach them to sew.

I am sixteen years old. I am five feet, one inch tall and have blue eyes, black bobbed hair and a light complexion.

Lovingly, DORA TRENT.

SOUTH BEND, 1507 S. TAYLOR ST., IND.
DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND READERS:

I have taken COMFORT since 1909 and enjoy every word from cover to cover.

I wonder how many of the readers belong to a Parent and Teacher Association. I do and am President, although I am not a mother, but am interested in children. Such an organization is a great help to the teacher, parent and child. The Association is called on many times to help in some way about the school, the basket ball team, the girls' club, beautifying the grounds around the schoolhouse or for something that is needed inside. It requires grit, good will and money, most of all.

Our schoolhouse is a new one, rebuilt last summer There were very few pictures in the rooms so our club took it on their shoulders to buy a good picture or two, for each room. One good picture is worth a dozen poor ones. We did not have much money on hand to start with so gave an entertainment. Maybe it will help other associations, clubs or churches to make a little money.

It was called "Ye Olde Time Carnival," and was held at the schoolhouse. Admission was ten cents which included the short program held in the auditorium after which the fun began. In one room was a fishing pond, two cents a fish. The children enjoyed this. The parents and teachers donated articles for the pond. Above each door was a sign telling what was to be found inside. One room read, "It can't be beat," Inside on a table was a large turnip. Another read, "For men only." This was a pair of suspenders hanging on the wall. Another room read, "The missing link," and on the table were four or five little pork sausages, the middle one being gone. Still another room read, "An Old Maid's Bliss." A wedding ring on the table. Of course no carnival would be complete without a fat lady. We made one on a dress form and it was some lady, too. In another room was "High Opera" and there were four or five women or young girls singing at once and each a different song. It wasn't singing but just a lot of noise. The admission to each room was one cent but more could be charged. In one room a one reel comedy picture was being shown and here it was five cents' admission. In the halls were stands or booths for candy, pop-corn and ice cream. We made $265 .06 and could have doubled the amount had we run it two nights. Everybody had lots of fun. Best wishes to one and all,

MRS. EDWARD TIMM.

BOLTON CENTER, CONN.
DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

May I join you? I haven't any good advice to give or hints about housework or cooking. I wonder if Uneducated Mother can't help herself? It will take time and patience. She could ask her husband to help her in the subjects she did not understand or if he is too tired or does not have the time, she could go to her little girl's teacher, explaining her position honestly and I think she would be glad to help her over some of the hard places and a true teacher will never talk to anyone about a confidence given her. The mother could repay the teacher by inviting her to supper sometimes or by invitations to visit her over the week end. A teacher is human and enjoys visiting the parents.

I teach in a rural school and have thirty pupils mostly Italians, and seven grades. I like the parents and go to see them very often. They always appear glad to see me. I plan to visit the children or grown-ups who are ill. Often I help by doing some kind of work, such as mending or sewing.

I always suggest to my children that they each give a few cents toward flowers or fruit for sick ones in the community or send them cards. We remembered all the old people in our community with valentines this year. This costs but very little and it made the children happy and pleased the old people. Best of all it taught them a lesson in civics. True citizenship is helping others, and making them happy.

We are trying to be true Crusaders. Here is a list of our rules.

1. Eat slowly.
2. Breathe deeply.
3. Get lots of fresh air.
4. Play hard and work hard.
5. Wash hands before eating and after going to toilet.
6. Drink lots of water.
7. Be fair in all things.
8. Think only good, pure thoughts.
9. Be happy and make someone happy every day.
10. Help our mothers cheerfully.

I should like to hear from any of the sisters who care to write. I am especially anxious to hear from teachers and will try to answer all letters and surely those that have stamps.

This community is very old with picturesque old farmhouses. We have a little store, post-office and church. There is also a hall and unusually good library for so small a town.

I have a little daughter. She goes to school to me. Outside of school hours we go for walks, play ball and read stories together. She helps me care for my room and takes care of her own playthings. She tries to be nice so she can be a true ladylike woman when she grows up. Her grandmother makes most of her clothes and takes care of her when she is sick. Now she boards with me and we are happy.

I am five feet, nine inches tall and weigh about 136 pounds. I have straight, fine brown hair, rather sunken in cheeks, brown eyes and a rather pretty mouth. It is the only good feature I possess. I am literally covered with freckles and am nearly thirty years old.

SCHOOL MA'AM.

ALPHA, N. J.
GOOD MORNING, EVERYONE:

My business is teaching school. This is my first year, and I like it. It is my delight to have children near me. I have a country school with eight grades.

When I started to teach last September, I thought I should give up in despair, trying to keep the little tots busy all the time. Then someone told me to have grains of corn for them to play with. They play a long time with the corn, forming pictures of things. They also like to put puzzles together. I had several post-cards of pretty scenes, which I cut into pieces and gave to the children to put together again. They like to do it. Now I can have peace and quiet in the schoolroom without any trouble at all.

No. 43.

The children like to have the teacher play with them to settle all disputes, arguments, etc. I think every teacher should go out at recess time and noon and make herself one of the children.

Someone asked what the sisters thought of dancing. I dance and am very fond of it. I think there is just as much harm in dancing as the individuals make. There is a right and a wrong way to do everything. If one dances properly I cannot see what harm there is in it. Girls, whatever you do, think of your self-respect first. You cannot value it too highly

I am nineteen years old, five feet, three inches tall, have jet black hair, a rather broad nose on which is perched a pair of tortoise-shell spectacles, through which look two dark brown eyes. My complexion is fair and my mouth is always open, either talking or laughing, thus showing rather small teeth.

I should be very pleased to hear from anyone who cares to write.

HELEN F. FRACE.

DEEPWATER MISSOURI.
DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

It has been about a year since my first and last letter appeared in the Sisters' Corner. At that time I told you how I carried out a system of hot lunches in my rural school.

How many of the teachers have trouble with their pupils telling gossiping tales in school? Last winter the boys and girls were very much predisposed to gossiping, so one day I just stopped work for a time and let each one tell his tale, and each had one to tell. As each child finished talking I had him take his place along the wall. Finally I had nearly fifteen boys and girls in a line. I then wrote the word, "Gossipers' Row" in red letters on a large piece of cardboard and tacked it up by one row of seats. I then had my little gossipers take their books and sit in that row. Such screaming and taking on one never heard. It affected a permanent cure.

For excessive whispering I tied a clean white handkerchief over the offender's mouth and sent him back to his seat. This method worked better than any other I ever tried.

No. 28.

If you have any musical talent in your school, use it. If not, manufacture some. There is nothing I know of that arouses so much enthusiasm in the pupils as musical contests between the different grades There was one boy who couldn't carry a tune at the first of school, but who won in the contest for boys' solos at the last of school.

We found construction work very interesting and easily correlated with other subjects. I mean paper cutting. I had my pupils buy a package of paper, assorted colors, and the necessary articles that were needed, such as scissors, paste, etc., when they bought their books at the first of the term.

I have found that I have the greatest success teaching the subject I like best and that two-thirds of the pupils will like that subject best also. My fourth grade did exceptionally good work in geography last year and I attributed it to the fact that geography is my favorite subject. The pupils enjoyed making outlines of the lessons.

Now I should like to have some help. Will someone tell me how to make writing and spelling interesting subjects? My pupils declare they are very dry and I'm sure it is my fault. Also will some teacher tell me what to do with very dull pupils? How much time should be given to them?

I suppose the majority of teachers attend college during the summer. I go every summer. I enjoy doing light housekeeping much better than boarding, besides, it is much cheaper. Most of the girls do very little cooking but I am one of those old-fashioned mortals and Saturday morning usually found me in the kitchen baking pies, cake, or perhaps a fruit cobbler. You see, mother has spoiled me in the twenty-four years I've been her "baby."

If several people go to college from the same town they can economize greatly by renting a house and living there together. One should be able to rent a house for $25.00 per mouth and if there were ten girls the rent would be only $5.00 for each, for eight weeks. Of course this plan would be unwise unless there were an older person along who could act the part of the mother.

How many of the teachers have their pupils memorize Bible verses on Monday morning for opening exercises? We had them regularly and my pupils learned to say a great many verses from memory. I offered a

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 32.)

Babies on This and Opposite Page

No.	Baby's Name.	Age.	Parent's Name.	Residence.
3	La Vetta Mary	5 yrs.,	Children of Mrs. Myrtle Greosser,	Dallas, Texas.
	Lois	3 yrs.,
	Maxine Ellen	1 yr.,
4	Ralph Lindon	18 mos.,	Mrs. M. A. Cowles,	Sentinel, Okla.
5	Clarence Ray	7 mos.,	Mrs. Geo. Frisbee,	Ringstead, Iowa.
10	June Alberta	5 mos.,	Mrs. Earl Campbell,	Savanna, Ill.
14	Lloyd George	14 mos.,	Mrs. Hendrickson,	Alberta, Can.
18	Christie Edwin	5 yrs.,	Children of Mrs. G. O. Williams,	Fernandina, Fla.
	Vivian Estelle	2 yrs.,
19	Jesse Oron	6 mos.,	Mrs. J. O. Morgan,	Crowley, La.
21	Eston	5 yrs.,	Children of Mrs. Bryan Overhulser,	Ashton, Mo.
	Madorma	3 yrs.,
	Armilda	20 mos.,
23	Walter Harold		Mrs. W. R. Turner,	Akron, Ohio.
25	William J.		Children of Mrs. J. J. Oester,	Scappasse, Ore.
	Margaret M.
	Rhoda E.
	Hazel C.
	Raleigh R.
28	Omar Edward	19 mos.,	Mrs. Homer Hyde,	Walters, Okla.
35	Mabel	2 yrs.,	Children of Mrs. Roxy Pitts,	Milledgeville, Tenn.
	Lucille	6 mos.,
39	Ernestine E.	2 yrs.,	Children of Mrs. Bert Smith,	Weston, W. Va.
	Madaline	6 mos.,
	Mildred Lucille	6 mos.,
41	Margaret Irene	5 mos.,	Mrs. D. B. Dupes,	Knoxville, Tenn.
42	Lavern	5 yrs.,	Children of Mrs. Clinton Keller,	Sauk City, Wisc.
	Evon	3 yrs.,
	Orlyn	1 yr.,
43	Celia Mildred	2 yrs.,	Mrs. C. O. Avery,	Stockton, Kans.

No. 5.

Will you sell me your spare time for $3.00 an hour

I want your spare time. I've got a job that pays from $3.00 to $5.00 an hour for every hour that you give, and even more than that after you get on to the work, and you can start at once without any training as hundreds of my men have done—start right in making $3.00 an hour and up at the nicest and easiest work you have ever done.

No Experience Necessary —I Teach You —the job I have for you is taking orders for my fine made-to-order clothes for men at prices that are fully 10% to 30% lower than store prices, and the work is so easy you'll be surprised when I tell you about it and you'll wonder how I can afford to pay so well. Remember you don't have to know a thing about it. I show you everything and furnish everything you need to go right to work.

You Can Start At Once

You don't have to wait a minute and you don't have to send me a cent. Just write your name and address on the coupon below and mail it to me today. Remember you're losing $3.00 an hour every hour that you delay. So don't wait. Write Name and Address on the Coupon below and mail it to me at once.

To L. E. ASHER, President
BANNER TAILORING CO.
Dept. 924, CHICAGO, ILL.

Dear Sir:—Send me your special offer at once.

Name.....

R. F. D.....Box.....St. & No.....

P. O.....State.....

GET THIS WONDERFUL RING. If You Can Tell It From a Genuine Diamond Send It Back

These amazing, beautiful CORODITE diamonds positively match genuine diamonds in every way—same blazing flash and dazzling play of living rainbow fire. They, alone, stand the diamond tests, including terrific acid test of direct comparison. Lifetime experts need all their experience to see any difference. Prove this yourself.

Wear a Corodite Diamond 7 Days Free

Make this test. You risk nothing. Wear a genuine Corodite and a diamond side by side on the same finger for 7 days. If you or your friends can tell the difference, send it back; you won't be out a single penny. That's fair enough. If you keep the ring, the price printed here is all you pay. No installments. Remember, Corodites alone have the same cutting as genuine stones.

No. 1—Ladies' Solitaire 14K Gold S. Ring . . $2.84
No. 4—Ladies' Hand-Carved Basket Setting, flat, finish $3.96
No. 5—Ladies' Solitaire Bridal Blossom Engraved . . $3.54
No. 7—Gents' Heavy Belcher 14K Gold S. Ring . . . $3.60
No. 8—Gents' Massive Hand-Carved Octagon Gypsy . $4.28

Carat size gems. Beautiful mountings of most modern design. Choice of gold or latest white platinum finish. Unqualified 20-year guarantee. Handsome art-leather case free with each ring.

SEND NO MONEY Keep your money right at home. Just send name, address and number of ring wanted and size as shown by slip of paper, fitting end to end around finger joint. Your ring will come by return mail. When ring arrives deposit amount shown above with postman. If you decide not to keep ring after 7 days' wear, send it back and your money will be immediately returned. Send today.

E. RICHWINE CO.
19 W. Jackson Blvd., Dept. 581, Chicago, Ill.
Sole Importers Genuine Corodite Diamonds

Now $1.00 Down

KEEP the New Edison Amberola—Edison's great phonograph with the diamond stylus reproducer—and your choice of records, for only $1.00. Pay balance at rate of only a few cents a day. Hear it in your own home before you decide. Only $1.00 down. Seize this opportunity.

Write for Book

Get our New Edison catalog. Your name and address on a post card or letter is enough. Find out about this offer—while this offer lasts.

F. K. BABSON, Edison Phonograph Dists.
19th St. and Marshall Blvd., Dept 37-06, Chicago, Ill.

"What's in a Name?"

"'Tis but thy name that is my enemy,—
Thou art thyself, though not a Montague.
What's Montague? it is nor hand, nor foot,
Nor arm, nor face, nor any other part
Belonging to a man. O, be some other name!
What's in a name? that which we call a rose,
By any other name would smell as sweet;
So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd
Retain that dear perfection which he owes Without that title. Romeo, doff that name,
And for that name, which is no part of thee,
Take all myself."

Such is the lament which Shakespeare puts into the mouth of Juliet in deploring the name of her lover.

"A name is a kind of face whereby one is known," declares Fuller; and his simile is apt and forceful; for a euphonious, prepossessing name has a subtile charm which, like a pleasing face, has no small effect in making a favorable impression. The possession of such a name has a real advantage over a person burdened through life with a name that is harsh and unpleasant to the ear, or of sinister suggestiveness.

"It is quite as easy," says Locke, "to give our children musical and p'easing names as those that are harsh or difficult; and it will be found by the owners, when they have grown to knowledge, that there is much in a name."

Though some people appear to delight in inflicting freak names on their offspring, most parents appreciate the importance of a good, sensible and attractive given name, and the desire for such has prompted the requests that our Mother and Baby department has received from expectant mothers for a list of boys' and girls' names.

More especially for their benefit, but also because it will be interesting to our readers generally, we print the following list of names, with the derivation and meaning of each. The Universal Self-Pronouncing Dictionary is our authority for the derivations and meanings.

The abbreviations and initials appearing in parenthesis signify the respective languages from which the names are derived, as follows: A-S., Anglo-Saxon; Brit., British; Celt., Celtic; Fr., French; Gael., Gaelic; Ger., German; Gr., Greek; Heb., Hebrew; It., Italian; L., Latin; O. H. Ger., Old High German; Per., Persian; Sw., Sweedish; Syr., Syrian; Teut., Teutonic—Editor.

NAMES OF MEN

Aaron. (Heb.) Lofty; inspired.
Abner. (Heb.) Father of Light.
Abraham. (Heb.) Father of a multitude.
Adolphus. (O. H. Ger.) Noble wolf, i. e, noble hero.
Albert. (O. H. Ger.) Nobly bright; illustrious.
Alfred. (O. H. Ger.) Elf in council i e., good counselor.
Algernon. (Fr.) With whiskers.
Amasa. (Heb.) A burden.
Ambrose. (Gr.) Immortal; divine.
Amos. (Heb.) Strong; courageous; otherwise, burden.
Andrew. (Gr.) Strong; manly.
Archibald. (Ger.) Extremely bold; otherwise, holy prince.
Arthur. (Celt.) High; noble.
Augustus. (Lat.) Exalted; imperial

Baldwin. (O. H. Ger.) Bold, courageous friend.
Bartholomew. (Heb.) A warlike son.
Basil. (Gr.) Kingly; royal.
Benedict. (Lat.) Blessed.
Benjamin. (Heb.) Son of the right hand.
Bernard, Barnard. (O. H. Ger.) Bold as a bear.
Bruno. (O. H. Ger.) Brown.

Cadwallader. (Brit.) Battle-arranger.
Caleb. (Heb.) A dog.
Calvin. (Lat.) Bald.
Charles. (O. H. Ger.) Strong; manly; noble-spirited.
Clarence. (Lat.) Illustrious.
Claudius, Claude. (Lat.) Lame.
Clement. (Lat.) Mi d-tempered; merciful.
Conrad. (O. H. Ger.) Bold in council; resolute.
Cyril. (Gr.) Lordly.
Cyrus. (Per.) The sun.

Daniel. (Heb.) A divine judge.
Darius. (Per.) Preserver.
David. (Heb.) Beloved.
Donald. (Celt.) Proud chief.
Duncan. (Celt.) Brown chief.

Ebenezer. (Heb.) The stone of help.
Edgar. (A.-S.) A javelin (or protector) of property.
Edward. (A.-S.) Guardian of property.
Egbert. (O. H. Ger.) The sword's brightness; famous with the sword.
Eldred. (A.-S.) Terrible.
Elias, Elijah. (Heb.) Jehovah is my God.
Elmer. (A.-S.) Noble; excellent. (a contraction of Ethelmer.)
Enoch. (Heb.) Consecrated; dedicated.
Ernest. (Ger.) Earnest.
Ethan. (Heb.) Firmness; strength.
Eugene. (Ger.) Wellborn; noble.
Evan. (Brit.) The same as John.

Ferdinand. (O. H. Ger.) Brave; valiant.
Francis. (Fr.) Free.
Frank. (Fr.) A contraction of Francis.
Frederic, Frederick. (O. H. Ger.) Peace; or peaceful ruler.

George. (Ger.) A landholder; husbandman.
Gerald, Gerard. (O. H. Ger.) Strong with the spear.
Gideon. (Heb.) A destroyer.
Gilbert. (O. H. Ger.) Yellow-bright; famous.
Godfrey. (O. H. Ger.) At peace with God
Gustavus. (Sw.) A warrior; hero.
Guy. (Fr.) A leader.

Harold. (A.-S.) A champion; general of an army.
Henry. (O. H. Ger.) The head or chief of a house.
Herbert. (A.-S.) Glory of the army.
Herman. O. H. Ger.) A warrior.
Hilary. (Lat.) Cheerful; merry.
Hiram. (Heb.) Most noble.
Hubert. (O. H. Ger.) Bright in spirit; soul-bright.
Hugh, Hugo. (D.) Mind; spirit; soul.

Icabod. (Heb.) The glory has departed.
Ingram. (Teut.) Raven.
Ira. (Heb.) Watchful.
Isaac. (Heb.) Laughter.
Ivan. (Brit.) The same as John.

Jacob, James. (Heb.) A supplanter.
Jesse. (Heb.) Wealth.
John. (Heb.) The gracious gift of God.
Jonathan. (Heb.) Gift of Jehovah.
Joseph. (Heb.) He shall add.
Joshua. (Heb.) God of salvation.
Josiah, Josias. (Heb.) Given of the Lord.
Julius. (Gr.) Soft-haired.

Kenelm. (A.-S.) A defender of his kindred.
Kenneth. (Gael.) A leader; commander.

Lambert. (O. H. Ger.) Illustrious with landed possessions.
Laurence. Lawrence. (Lat.) Crowned with laurel.
Leander. (Gr.) Lion-man.
Leonard. (Ger.) Strong; or brave as a lion.
Levi. (Heb.) Adhesion.
Lionel. (Lat.) Young Lion.
Llewellyn. (Celt.) Lightning.
Lucius. (Lat.) Born at break of day.
Luther. (Ger.) Illustrious warrior.

Martin. (Lat.) Of Mars; war-like.
Matthew. (Heb.) Gift of Jehovah.
Maurice. (Lat.) Moorish; dark-colored.
Michael. (Heb.) Who is like God?
Miles. (Lat.) A soldier.
Moses. (Egypt.) Drawn out of the water.
Napoleon. (Gr.) Lion of the forest-dell.
Nathanael, Nathaniel. (Heb.) The gift of God.
Norman. (Ger.) A Northman; a native of Normandy.

Obadiah. (Heb.) Servant of the Lord.
Oliver. (Lat.) An olive-tree.
Oswald. (O. H. Ger.) Power of God.
Owen. (Celt.) Lamb; otherwise, young warrior.

Patrick. (Lat.) Noble; a patrician.
Peter. (Gr.) A rock.
Philander. (Gr.) A lover of men.
Philip. (Gr.) A lover of horses.
Phineas. (Heb.) Mouth of brass.

Quintin. (Lat.) The fifth.

Ralph. (O. H. Ger.) Same as Rodolphus.
Raymond. (O. H. Ger.) Wise protection.
Reginald. (O. H. Ger.) Strong ruler.
Reuben. (Heb.) Behold, a son.
Richard. (O. H. Ger.) Rich-hearted; powerful.
Robert. (O. H. Ger.) Bright in fame.
Rodolph, Rodolphus. (O. H. Ger.) Famous wolf, or hero.
Roland, Rowland. (O. H. Ger.) Fame of the land.
Rufus. (Lat.) Red; red-haired.

Samson, Sampson. (Heb.) Splendid sun; i. e., Great joy and felicity.
Samuel. (Heb.) Heard of God; asked for of God.
Sebastian. (Gr.) Venerable; reverend.
Silvester, Sylvester. (Lat.) Bred in the country; rustic.
Simeon, Simon. (Heb.) Hearing with acceptance.

Theodore. (Gr.) The gift of God.
Theodoric. (A.-S.) Powerful among the people.
Thomas. (Heb.) A twin.
Timothy. (Gr.) Fearing God.

Ulysses. (Gr.) A hater.
Uriah. (Heb.) Light of the Lord.
Uriel. (Heb.) Light of God.

Valentine. (Lat.) Strong; healthy; powerful.
Victor. (Lat.) A conqueror.
Vincent. (Lat.) Conquering; Victorious.
Vivian. (Lat.) Lively.

Walter. (O. H. Ger.) Ruling the host.
William. (O. H. Ger.) Resolute helmet, or helmet of resolution; defense; protector.
Winfred. (A.-S.) Win-peace.

Zaccheus. (Heb.) Innocent; pure.

NAMES OF WOMEN

Abigail. (Heb.) My father's joy.
Adaline, Adelina, Adeline. (O. H. Ger.) Of noble birth; a princess Agatha. (Gr.) Good; kind.
Agnes. (Gr.) Chaste; pure.
Alberta. (O. H. Ger.) Feminine of Albert.
Alice, Alicia. (O. H. Ger.) Same as Adeline.
Amabel. (Lat.) Loveable.
Amanda. (Lat.) Worthy to be loved.
Amelia. (O. H. Ger.) Busy, energetic.
Amy. (Lat.) Beloved.
Angelica, Angelina. (Gr.) Lovely; angel c.
Anna, Ann, Anne. (Heb.) Grace.
Augusta. (Lat.) Feminine of Augustus.
Aurora. (Lat.) Morning redness; fresh; brilliant.

Barbara. (Gr.) Foreign; strange.
Beatrice, Beatrix. (Lat.) Making happy; blessed.
Bertha. (O. H. Ger.) Bright; beautiful.
Blanch, Blanche. (Teut) White.
Bridget. (Celt.) Strength.

Caroline. (O. H. Ger.) Feminine of Carolus, the Latin of Charles. (Fr. form.)
Catharina, Catharine, Catherine. (Gr.) Pure.
Cecilia, Cecily. (Lat.) Feminine of Cecil.
Charlotte. (O. H. Ger.) Feminine of Charles.
Chloe. (Gr.) A green herb; blooming.
Clara. (Lat.) Bright; illustrious.
Clarice, Clarissa. (Lat.) A variation of Clara.
Clementina, Clementine. (Lat.) Mild; gentle.
Constance. (Lat.) Firm; constant.
Cora. (Gr.) Maiden; another form of Corinna.
Cordelia. (Lat.) Warm-hearted.

Deborah. (Heb.) A bee.
Diana. (Lat.) Goddess of the hunt and of the moon.
Dinah. (Heb.) Judged.
Dora. (Gr.) A contraction of Dorothea.
Dorcas. (Gr.) A gazelle.
Dorothea, Dorothy. (Gr.) The gift of God.

Edith. (O. H. Ger.) Happiness; otherwise, rich gift.
Edna. (Heb.) Pleasure.
Eleanor, Elinor. (Gr.) Light.
Elizabeth, Elisabeth, Eliza. (Heb.) Worshiper of God; consecrated to God.
Ella. (Gr.) A contraction of Eleanor.
Ellen. (Gr.) Diminutive of Eleanor.
Elvira. (Lat.) White.
Emeline, Emmeline, Emily, Emma. (O. H. Ger.) Energetic; industrious.
Ernestine. (Ger.) Feminine and dim. of Ernest.
Esther. (Per.) Star; good fortune.
Ethel. (O. H. Ger.) Noble; of noble birth.
Ethelind, Ethelinda. (Teut) Noble snake.
Eugenia. (Gr.) Feminine of Eugene.
Eugenie. (Gr.) Same as Eugenia. (Fr. form)
Eunice. (Gr.) Happy victory.
Euphemia. (Gr.) Of good report.
Eva. (Heb.) Life.
Evangeline. (Gr.) Bringing glad news.
Eve. (Heb.) The same as Eva.
Evelina, Eveline. (Heb.) Diminutive of Eva. (It. form)
Fanny. (Ger.) A diminutive of France.
Faustina. (Lat.) Lucky.
Felicia. (Lat.) Happiness.
Fidelia. (Lat.) Faithful.
Flora. (Lat.) Flowers.
Florence. (Lat.) Blooming; flourishing.
Frances. (Ger.) Feminine of Francis.
Frederica. (O. H. Ger.) Feminine of Frederick.

Georgiana, Georgina. (Gr.) Feminine of Geo.
Geraldine. Feminine of Gerald.
Gertrude. (O. H. Ger.) Spear-maiden.
Grace. (Lat.) Grace, favor.
Griselda. (Teut.) Stone-heroine.

Hannah. (Heb.) The same as Anna.
Harriet. (O. H. Ger.) Feminine diminutive of Henry. (Eng. form.)
Helen, Helena. (Gr.) Light.
Henrietta. (O. H. Ger.) Feminine and diminutive of Henry. (Fr. form.)
Hester, Hesther. (Per.) Same as Esther.
Honora, Honoria. (Lat.) Honorable.
Hortensia. (Lat.) A lady gardener.
Huldah. (Heb.) A weasel.

Ida. (O. H. Ger.) Godlike.
Inez. (Gr.) The same as Agnes.
Irene. (Gr.) Peaceful.
Isabel, Isabella. (Heb.) The same as Elizabeth.
Jane. (Heb.) Feminine of John; same as Joanna.
Janet. (Heb.) Diminutive of Jane.
Jaqueline. (Heb.) Feminine of James. (Fr. form.)
Jean, Jeanne, Jeanette. (Heb.) The same as Jane or Joan. (Fr. form.)
Jemima. (Heb.) A dove.
Jerusha. (Heb.) Possessed; married.
Joan, Joanna. (Heb.) Feminine of John.
Josepha, Josephine. (Heb.) Feminine of Joseph.
Judith. (Heb.) Praised.
Juliet. (Lat.) Diminutive of Julia. (Fr. form)

Katharine Katherine. (Gr.) Same as Catharine.
Keturah. (Heb.) Incense.
Keziah. (Heb.) Cassia.

Laura. (Lat.) A laurel.
Letitia. (Lat.) Happiness.
Lettice. A corruption of Letitia.
Lillian, Lilly. (Lat.) Lily.
Lois. (Gr.) Good; desirable.
Louisa, Louise. (O. H. Ger.) Feminine of Louis
Lucia. (Lat.) Same as Lucy (It. form.)
Lucinda. (Lat.) The same as Lucy.
Lucretia. (Lat.) Gain; otherwise, light.
Lucy. (Lat.) Feminine of Lucius.

Mabel. (Lat.) A contraction of Amabel.
Madeline. (Heb.) Same as Magdalene. (Fr. form.)
Magdalene. (Heb.) Belonging to Magdala.
Marcia. (Lat.) Feminine of Marcius.
Margaret. (Gr.) A pearl.
Maria. (Heb.) The same as Mary. (Lat. form.)
Marianne. (Heb.) A compound of Mary and Anne.
Marion. (Heb.) A French form of Mary
Martha. (Heb.) The ruler of the house; otherwise, sorrowful.
Mary. (Heb.) Bitter; otherwise, their rebellion or star of the sea.
Mathilda, Matilda. (O. H. Ger.) Mighty battle-maid, heroine.
Maud. A contraction of Magdalene.
May. A diminutive of Mary.
Mehetabel, Mehitable. (Heb.) Benefited of God.
Melicent. (Lat.) Sweet singer.
Melissa. (Gr.) A bee.
Miranda. (Lat.) Admirable.
Miriam. (Heb.) The same as Mary.
Myra. (Gr.) She who weeps or laments.

Nancy. A familiar form of Anne.
Nora. A contraction of Honora.

Olive, Olivia. (Lat.) An olive.
Ophelia. (Gr.) Serpent

Penelope. (Gr.) A weaver.
Phoebe, Phebe. (Gr.) Pure; radiant.
Phyllis. (Gr.) A green bough.
Priscilla. (Lat.) Somewhat old.

Rachel. (Heb.) A ewe.
Rebecca, Rebekah. (Heb.) Of enchanting beauty.
Rhoda. (Ger.) A rose.
Rosa. (Lat.) A rose.
Rosabel, Rosabella. (Lat.) A fair rose.
Rosalind. (Lat.) Beautiful as a rose.
Roxana. (Per.) Dawn of Day.
Ruth. (Heb.) Beauty.

Salome. (Heb.) Peaceful.
Sara, Sarah. (Heb.) A princess.
Sibyl, Sibylla. (Gr.) A prophetess.
Sophia. (Gr.) Wisdom.
Sophronia. (Gr.) Of a wise mind.
Stella. (Lat.) A star.
Susan, Susanna, Susannah. (Heb.) A lily.

Tabitha. (Syr.) A gazelle.
Theodora, Theodosia. (Gr.) The gift of God.

Urania. (Gr.) Heavenly; the name of one of the Muses.
Ursula. (Lat.) She-bear.

Victoria. (Lat.) Victory, Feminine of Victor.
Viola. (Lat.) A violet.
Virginia. (Lat.) Virgin; pure.
Vivian. (Lat.) Lively.

Wilhelmina. (O. H. Ger.) Feminine of Wilhelm, German of William.
Winifred. (Teut.) Lover of peace.

Zenobia. (Gr.) Having life from Jupiter.

Brainograms

By Blair Tremaine.

HOW MANY COLLEGES DO YOU KNOW?

1. The commonest surname.
2. The head of the duck family.
3. Commander-in-chief of the first American army.
4. A popular brand of locks.
5. A confederation, or league.
6. The holy three.
7. The gem of the ocean.
8. A widely-known manufacturer of soap, talcum, and other toilet articles.
9. An arrow, and the opening between the lips.
10. The American bison.
11. The author of "Poor Richard's Almanac."
12. A place of worship.
13. A color resulting from the mixture of yellow, red and black.
14. Grain, and a part of the alphabet.
15. The second largest city in the United States.
16. A member of royalty, and a unit of weight.
17. Between west and north.
18. A popular automobile, and a piece of meat.
19. One who seeks and kills wild animals.
20. A. M., and the longer border of a surface.

ANSWERS.

1. Smith.
2. Drake.
3. Washington.
4. Yale.
5. Union.
6. Trinity.
7. Columbia.
8. Colgate.
9. Dartmouth.
10. Buffalo.
11. Franklin.
12. Temple.
13. Brown.
14. Cornell.
15. Chicago.
16. Princeton.
17. Northwestern.
18. Fordham.
19. Hunter.
20. Morningside.

FREE 6 Room House

STOP PAYING RENT This offer is so liberal it is hard to believe, but it is true. There are no strings to my offer. I will give a house away just as promised in this offer. You can get a home FREE if you send me your name quick and do as I say. Surely you have longed for the day to come when you could stop paying rent to a heartless landlord and call your home your own. I am now offering you the opportunity to free yourself from the clutches of the money-grabbing landlord, and at no cost to yourself. Picture a handsome 6-room house, nice lawn and pretty shrubbery, etc. Don't you want a place like this, and FREE, too? Of course you do, so send me your name today.

The House Can Be Built Anywhere You Want It Don't say "no such luck for me." You can have the house built anywhere you want to live—California, Maine, or anywhere in the United States.

I Even Buy the Lot If you do not own a lot or have no place to build, I will arrange to buy a lot for you. A beautiful and comfortable home can be yours if you promptly answer this advertisement and do as I say. Take no chances of some other person getting ahead of you. Rush name and address quick. This offer may never come to you again.

Costs Nothing to Investigate You run no risk whatever. Rush your name and address—a post card will do. Just say, "I want one of your free homes."

C. E. MOORE, President, Home Builders Club, Dept. 507, Batavia, Illinois

The Charles William Stores Inc. New York City

This Book Brings New York to Your Door

HAVEN'T you longed, almost every season, to visit the big metropolis; to review the new styles and take advantage of the tremendous bargains? Who hasn't? Then think of being able to enjoy the solid satisfaction of shopping to your heart's content, choosing to suit yourself from huge stocks of the latest styles.

No longer is it necessary to make a personal trip to New York, for this surprising book brings New York to you. Every page reflects the advantages of the great market in style, quality, variety and, best of all, in the lower-than usual prices.

Seated in comfort at home, you can now shop in the style center and market center of America, choosing at leisure from among the finest that New York has to offer in up-to-the-minute, fashionable wearing apparel for every member of your family and from a general line of merchandise complete enough to supply your home or your farm.

And everything is guaranteed. When you see an illustration in the catalog and read the description, you can believe in both implicitly, for both must pass the acid test of TRUTH.

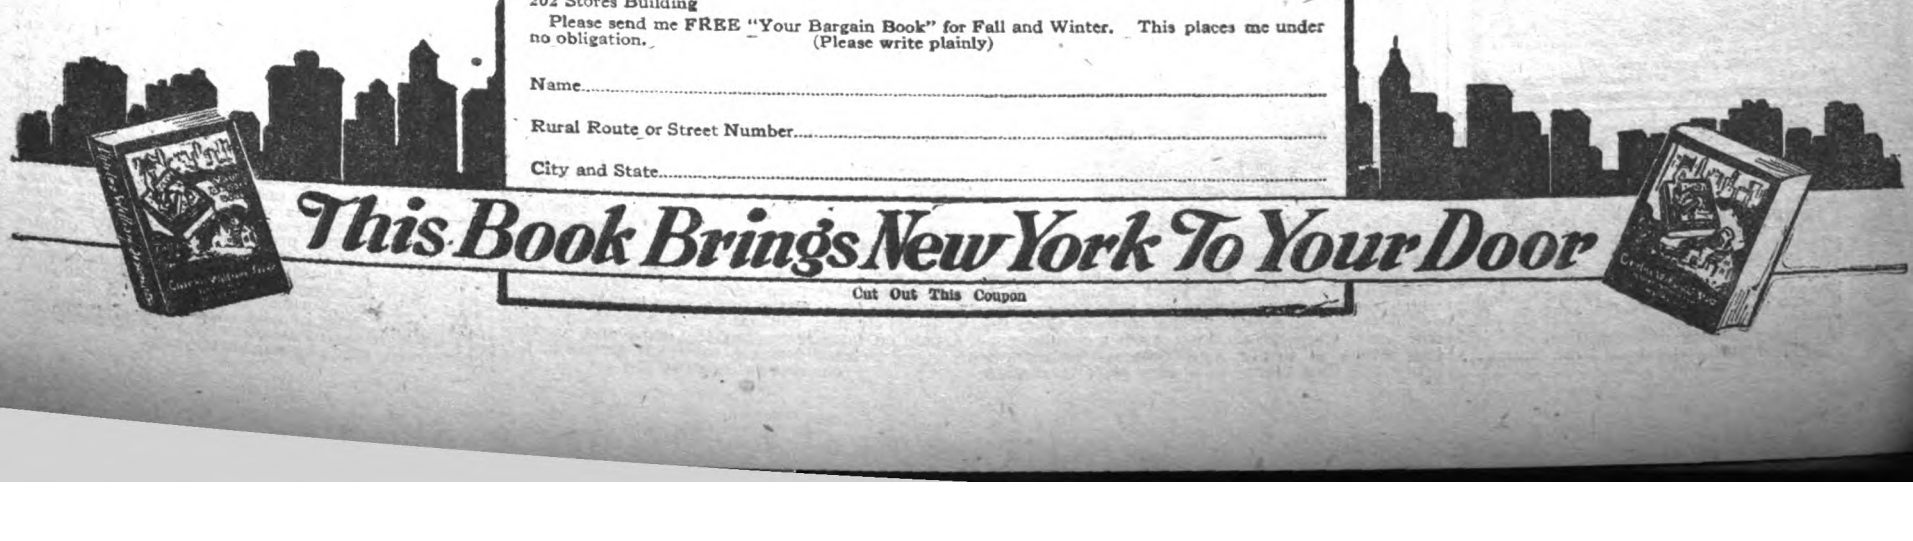
The new edition of this splendid book is now ready. If you are an old customer you needn't be told to look for it—you will. If you are not already on our mailing list and want a catalog, use the coupon below TODAY and this fine new catalog will — Entirely Free — "Bring New York to Your Door."

Both New and Low Priced

This Bolivia Coat, with its Collar of Manchurian Wolf and lining of Satin de Chine, reflects the newer mode in women's coats for the fall and winter.

It is typical of the wide range of styles and the appealing prices that you will find all through the catalog.

See "Your Bargain Book," Page 4A—also pages 4 to 23 for other coat bargains.



The Charles William Stores Inc.
New York City
202 Stores Building

Please send me FREE "Your Bargain Book" for Fall and Winter. This places me under no obligation. (Please write plainly)

Name.....

Rural Route or Street Number.....

City and State.....

Cut Out This Coupon

The Very Latest Style—PLEATED Dress of KING "TUT" Satin & Serge

Biggest Bargain Ever Offered $15 Value

ONLY $3.98 C.O.D.

Almost unbelievable to get such a dress at our special low price, but see for yourself without any risk and entirely on approval. Every cent back if you are not entirely satisfied. The lowest price ever asked for a dress of such style and such high quality materials and workmanship. Everywhere fashionable women will wear this original Paris model King "Tut" Egyptian Silk finish cotton Satin in many colored designs, a material all the rage this season, and long wearing, double warp, navy blue serge. The most beautiful dress of the season. Waist, vestee, wide crush, draped Balkan effect girdle with loose hanging panel are of Silky finish cotton Satin, in King "Tut" design, a specially strong and stylish material. Newest style, surplice collar, cuffs and full cut skirt of navy blue serge. Skirt is with pleats, which are very stylish this season. A bargain you cannot afford to miss.

Newest Girdle, Panel and Buckles

Color: Navy Blue

Sizes 14, 16 & 18 for Misses. 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 42, 44 & 46 bust for women.

SEND NO MONEY

But rush your order now! Give us NAME, ADDRESS and SIZE. We will ship the dress by parcel post. Pay the mailman $3.98 and postage when the package arrives. Then examine the dress in your own home. If not satisfied in every way, return the dress to us, and we will refund every cent of your money.

Money Back If Not Satisfied

FRED'K M. DUNHAM & CO.
Dept. 197 Chicago

A disc instrument which plays all makes of disc records

The Embassy Phonograph

$1.00 After Trial! Most Beautiful Phonograph Outfit

An offer which removes all risk and doubt. Enables you to hear its wonderful tone and to inspect its beautiful design.

Sent on free trial. You are the sole judge. If you like it, keep it, and send us only $1.00 as first payment, after the free trial—easy monthly payments after that 20 Selections FREE! We include, without charge 10 double-faced records—20 selections

Write for Free Book

Send letter or postcard today asking for free book which gives you complete information about this unusual offer. This book is mailed free and prepaid. Write for it today.

F. K. Babson, DESK 97-06 19th St. and Marshall Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

Do you want Mary Ann?

She is just a big, fine, darling doll every girl's heart is hungry for. Mary Ann will come to you without costing one cent. She wants a play mother to walk with her, sing to her when she cries, rock her to sleep.

13 Inches Tall

Mary Ann Can Walk—Cry Sleep—Wink

WALKING DOLL

Her brown hair is soft and silky. Jointed arms and legs, bright blue eyes that sleep. Cries when you lay her down or take her up. Unbreakable head, eyes won't jar loose. Cute silk cap, pretty figured lawn dress, stockings, patent leather slippers.

She is YOURS for doing me a little favor I will send a Mary Ann doll just as described above in return for a small favor. Just write me today and I will tell you how to get her without cost. Send name and address and say "I want Mary Ann."

Send No Money

THE DOLL MAN, Dept. R, 1102 Ellsworth Bldg. Chicago, Ill.

14 KT. GOLD FILLED $5.95

14 KT. WHITE GOLD FILLED $7.55

Save ½

Save one-half by ordering direct from us. Your choice of either high-grade watch. Octogon or round case. 14Kt. gold-filled 20-yr.-case with 20-yr. gold-filled link bracelet. Full jewel. Stem wind and set. Adjusted and regulated. $12 value, our price ONLY $5.95, prepaid. Tonneau shape 14Kt. White-gold-filled, 25-yr. case. Silk grosgrain ribbon, gold-filled clasp. Beautiful white dial. Sapphire crown, 6 jewels. Regulated adjusted. Fully guaranteed. $15 value, our special price ONLY $7.55, prepaid Order today. Send no money. Pay on arrival. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded promptly.

SUPREME JEWELRY MFG. CO. Dept. 9241 434 Broadway, New York

MONEY Made quickly by smart men. Artol Co., 115 Nassau St., N. Y.

What's Wrong With This Dress?

Any girl or woman, 15 or over, can easily learn DRESS DESIGNING and MAKING in 10 WEEKS, using spare moments. Designers earn $40 to $100 a Week

Why pay $15 for a $5 Dress?

Cut Here

Franklin Institute Dept. B842, Rochester, N.Y.

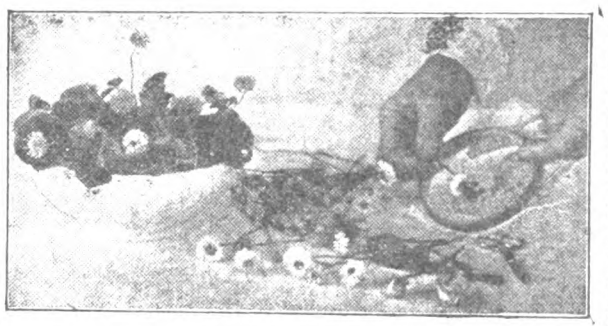
Kindly send me free sample lessons in Dress Designing and Making.

Name .....

Address .....

COZY LIVING-ROOM WITH CARPETS REPLACED BY RUGS.

From Attic to Cellar



By Estelle Garland

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

NO matter what our furnishings consist of, through wear and tear and a desire for added conveniences and comforts which shall also be pleasing to the eye, we create and arrange our dream rooms in little flights of imagination, from which we derive a certain pleasing expectancy that in part at least, our dreams may come true. "Where no vision is, the people perish."

September provides the ambitious housewife with more ways for spending her time than does any other of the eleven months of the year. With the preserving and pickling not quite out of the way, getting the children ready for the fall term of school, the daily routine of duties and the big job of going through the house from attic to cellar while the weather is still mild, do seem, even on paper, beyond the possibilities of one woman, yet we each know from the activities in our own surrounding communities that there are millions of women in these United States that are working out all these problems single-handed, except for the possibility of some assistance from her children. But these women, whom we can well call wonderful, do not live in a state of unthinkingness, nor blindly follow traditional methods that have long been distanced in the march of progress.

It isn't so many years ago that going to market was a big event with the housewife. Father and the children went along without her, because the housework was never done. But if you will bother to look around at your next opportunity, you will notice that the whole family go together, excepting the children who are in school. The answer is, that housework has undergone a great change; the home is no longer lagging behind the field in advancement.

FOR SHORT-STEMMED FLOWERS.

Workable Rules for Housekeeping

Do not undertake more than your strength allows. Health and strength saved draw a high rate of interest.

Keep clean without being painfully immaculate.

Avoid wasting effort by repeating motions and steps unnecessary.

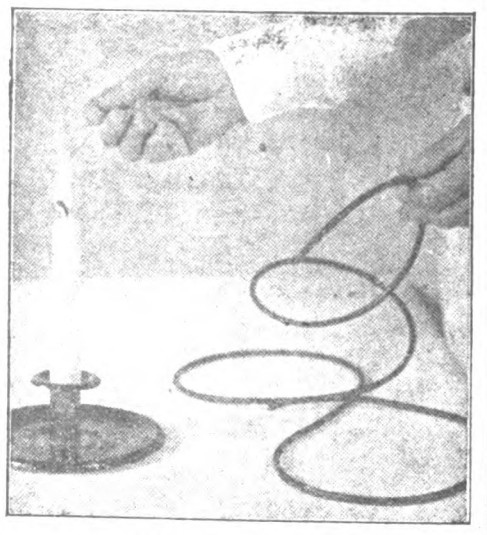
Study short cuts that greater efficiency may be attained.

Avoid confusion by finishing and removing the evidence of one kind of work before another is begun, as far as possible.

Keep Monday as a general utility day and wash on Tuesday.

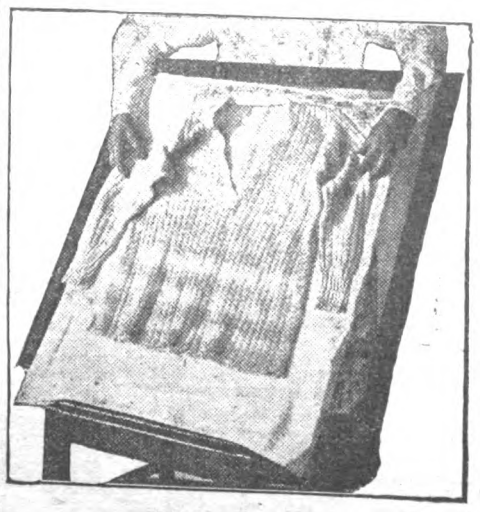
Never form the habit of spending Sunday in preparing a "big" dinner. Your family needs your companionship on this day, and you need theirs.

Make it a practice to keep a little plant life about the house. Even one flowering plant in the kitchen window radiates cheerfulness and sunshine. Children often bring in short-stemmed flowers which they delight to see placed about the rooms, and it takes but a few minutes to teach them the trick of putting the stems through mosquito netting which is firmly held between embroidery hoops and then placed in a deep plate or shallow bowl. Children will spend hours picking and arranging flowers in this way.



Fall House Cleaning

The highest test of good household management is whether the semi-annual cleaning is one of clearing away the confusion caused by the "slick and a promise" working principle, or whether the keep clean rather than to make clean one is the order of the daily routine. If you have experienced the former method, you should make a mental resolve that the latter shall henceforth be your ideal, for a chaotic house is a breeding place for more chaos, for like will forever attract like.



The greatest source of chaos is being disorderly, brought about by the carelesss habit of leaving things just where they are used instead of returning them to their proper places. Any housewife who undertakes to pick up and restore to place the things daily used by her family is doing them and herself a great injustice, for they will become helpless and selfish, while she is wasting the nervous energy required in the daily pursuit of legitimate services to her family. Each member of a family must do his or her share by helping themselves, for thereby they help each other to diffuse an atmosphere of serenity and inspiration.

First aid to neatness in a home is to establish a large rubbish receptical in the shed or nearby outbuilding, and several moderate-sized scrap baskets on each floor. Also, each floor should have its cleaning kits of long-handled floor brush or broom, dry mop, corn and hair brushes, dust pan, dusters and cleaning cloths, and if there is running water on the second floor a cleaning pail and soap should be added. This plan saves an immense number of steps and will prove an incentive for frequent use not to be thought of if al the equipment for brushing up and dusting is kept at a distance.

The proper place to start cleaning is on the top floor; in the attic if you have one. As most attics are given over to packed-away clothing, bedding and other household goods not in use, or possibly in a state unfit for use, all these should be examined with the idea of discarding worthless things, sunning and washing things that may become motheaten, or giving them a gasolene bath, and carefully inspecting and brushing out all trunks and boxes that show any traces of moths, mice or other pests. The attic is to be swept and aired, floor washed with ammonia water, and, if possible, closed and fumigated with a sulphur candle.

SHORTENING THE MACHINE BELT.

DRYING A SWEATER.

The first step in cleaning a bedroom is to care for the beds. If there are mattress covers, these are washed and put back on the mattresses, and the bed-spring given a wiping. If the mattresses have been used uncovered, they must be taken out of doors and given a thorough sweeping or brushing. Do not beat as it is unnecessary and rips the seams. The blankets should be hung in the sun and wind several hours. Return the mattress to the bed and cover with an old sheet. On this lay all the clothing from the closet. Brush the closet ceiling and walls, and then go over them with a hand cloth and brush up the floor which, if unfinished should be washed with ammonia water. Return clothing to the closet.

Dust the chairs and place them on the bed, if they are of the light, bedroom type. Clean the pictures and bric-a-brac (which should be limited in amount) and also place.. on bed and cover over the whole with old sheets or furniture cover.

Dust and set tables out of room and cover other pieces. The rugs are taken out of doors for cleaning, or they may be cleaned where they are with a vacuum cleaner, and in either case should be hung over the clothes-line to sun and air. Cover a broom with flannel or other thick, soft material and brush the ceiling. The wall paper should be dusted by hand while standing on a step-ladder. Brush mop-boards and floor or matting. Wash painted finish with tepid water and a very little soap, wipe with the cleaning cloth and then with a dry cloth. A painted floor is treated the same and matting is wiped with tepid water to which ammonia has

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 25.)

A New Way to Get Twice the Heat at Half the Cost

Think of having INSTANTLY all the heat you want IN ANY STOVE—without building fires, without kindling, ashes, dirt or odors. Think of having—at the touch of a finger—a fire that is three times hotter than coal—just enough to simmer a kettle—a fire that stays where you want it. Think what warm, cozy home such a fire will give you in any weather, and what wonderful cookbaking it will turn out. This fire is available to every user of this new invention.

No Wood no Coal

NOTE SCIENTIFIC APPLICATION OF AIR TO FLAME

Fits Any Stove

INSTANT-GAS

a scientific combination of 96 per cent superheated air and 4 per cent kerosene (common coal oil)—cheapest and safest fuel known. Produced by amazing invention which, in one minute, can be slipped into the fire box of any coal or wood stove. All the convenience of gas at half the cost. Start with turn of valve, turn high or low to suit, and stop with another turn of valve. Child can operate. Clean, steady fire. No ups and downs to make life miserable and ruin the cooking and baking. Saves cleaning bills, doctor bills, wall paper and curtains. Eliminates back-breaking work of carrying and lifting coal and wood. No damage to stove, lasts a lifetime. Money-back guarantee gives you absolute protection.

TRY IT 30 DAYS FREE

Try the Instant-Gas Oil Burner in your own stove. You don't risk a penny. See for yourself how hundreds of thousands of Instant-Gas users have saved money and cut their work in half. Write today for money-saving book "Scientific Oil Burning" and 30 day trial offer. Hurry. Special low introductory price to those who write immediately. No obligation. Send a postcard before you turn this page.

AGENTS—Tateishi, of California, made $200.00 weekly. People everywhere using this remarkable new method of heating. Write at once for details and be ready for big Fall and Winter profits.

INTERNATIONAL HEATING CO. Dept. 326, 117 South 14th St., St. Louis, Mo.
Manufacturers of Scientific Heating Equipment

Prices Slashed

Wonderful Feather Bed and Pillows

Sleep on It 60 Nights!

Yours to sleep on for 60 nights—a Magnificent Feather Bed, all new, live feathers; Best Ticking. Use as if it were your own. If you're not amazed with the quality and sensational price, return bed to us. Big factories wonder how we do it.

Amazing Bargains in Fine Feather Beds!

Prices Guaranteed Lowest in America. Quality finer than you ever dreamed possible. Full particulars in FREE book, full of astonishing bargains, also SPECIAL FREE GIFTS—nothing ever like it. Send today for Free Book, Samples of Feathers and Ticking, Read our Free Trial Offer and $2500 Guarantee Bond. Mail Postal Now.

LEWIS FEATHER BED COMPANY, Dept. 933 Nashville, Tenn.

GIVEN TO YOU FREE

This guaranteed Watch and many other valuable premiums. Given to you FREE for selling only 25 easy selling articles at 10c each. Order today. We trust you.

KEYSTONE PRODUCTS CO. Dept. 102 1840 N. Keystone Ave. CHICAGO, ILL.

CARDS, Dice, Magic Goods, Novelties, Catalog Free. D. M. SMYTHE CO., Newark, N.J.

FREE 2 WONDERFUL PURE SILK KNITTED TIES

GREAT BARGAIN. 2 Shirts, neat colored stripes, highest quality madras and poplin. Soft Cuffs. Finished beautifully.

FREE 2 Ties of finest SILK KNIT. Fast colors. Full length. With every shirt order.

SEND NO MONEY

Just name and size of shirts. Pay postman $3.79 on arrival of 2 shirts and 2 ties. We pay postage.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED. Sizes 14 to 17.

FREE, Pair of snap on Cuff Buttons if you send cash.

RUSH ORDERS NOW. Send for FREE Catalog of Bargains!

PUBLIC TRADING CO., 263 Fifth Ave., Dept. 151, New York

FREE!

Big, Handsome, Dressed, Sleeping Doll sent prepaid for selling ONLY SIX PACKETS new Highly Perfumed Sachet Powder AT 10c.

This is a Special Offer to introduce our sachet.

We also give Mama Dolls, Walking Dolls, and premiums for boys.

Lane Mfg. Co. Dept. 107, Mt. Vernon, N.Y.

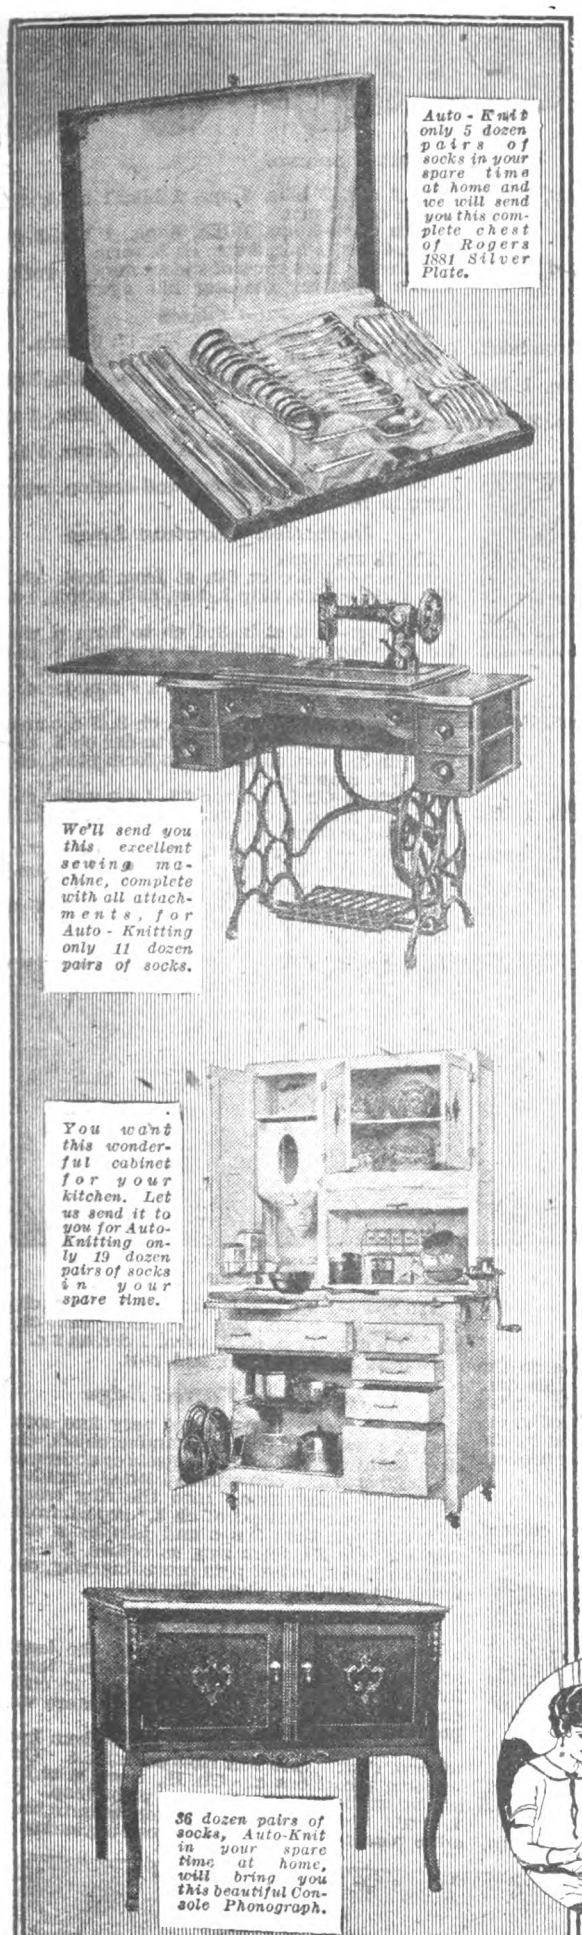
GIVEN! GENUINE HAWKEYE CAMERA

Takes pictures as pictured. Regular size, non-focusing, snap-shot and time exposure. It's a beauty. Yours for selling only $3.60 worth (12 boxes) famous Mendo-Soap which everybody should buy on sight. Send us name. We trust you till goods are sold. Many other valuable premiums. What do you want? Write now.

U. S. SUPPLY CO., Dept. U S-7, Greenville, Pa.

MAKE MONEY AT HOME

YOU can earn from $1 to $2 an hour in your spare time writing show cards. Quickly and easily learned by our new, simple "Instructograph" method. No canvassing or soliciting; we tell you how, guarantee you steady work at home no matter where you live, and pay you cash each week.



Full particulars and Booklet Free.

AMERICAN SHOW CARD SCHOOL
238 Ryrie Building Toronto, Can.

Hybrid Blueberries

The little old swamp blueberry has been lifted under the nursing specialists of the Bureau of Plant Industry, United States Department of Agriculture, from its wild environment and come to occupy an aristocratic place among our other domestic fruits. A blueberry an inch in diameter is not a dream but a possibility. At the Department of Agriculture testing plantation at Whitesbog, 4 miles east of Brown Mills, N. J., about 25,000 hybrids have now been fruited. Many of them have produced berries three-fourths of an inch in diameter, several fourfifths of an inch, and one of them this year reached almost seven-eighths of an inch. Among these large-ferried hybrids several have been selected for propagation. The progress of blueberry culture is evidenced by the fact that during the season of 1922 nearly a thousand bushels of blueberries were picked at Whitesbog and that these sold in the open market in New York at prices about 75 per cent. higher than those of wild blueberries. In the fall of 1921 more than 250,000 cuttings of selected blueberries were made by our nurserymen.

Would You Auto-Knit - At Home - 5 Dozen Pairs of Socks for This Chest of Silver? - Or Shall We Pay You Cash?

HERE'S a plan that makes it possible for you to turn your spare time into the things you have always wanted. This chest of beautiful Rogers 1881 Silver Plate, for instance, consisting of 26 pieces and guaranteed for 25 years, is yours for Auto-Knitting in your spare time at home 5 dozen pairs of socks.

Through this unique plan, you are given the remarkable opportunity to earn the things you want by utilizing the spare time that otherwise might have been wasted. And in a double-quick way—for this new plan actually makes your spare time worth twice as much as ever before.

—11 dozen pairs for this sewing machine?

Think of it—this handsome, six-drawer model, oak sewing machine, complete with all attachments, sent to you for Auto-Knitting only 11 dozen pairs of socks! See what this new plan will mean to you. The things you want, earned right at home, in time that you can spare from other duties.

Auto-Knitting is an established, national home industry. For every dozen pair of socks knitted at home, a fixed standard price is paid—which is today the highest ever paid in the history of this organization. Thousands are Auto-Knitting at home today, earning extra money in their spare time, turning wasted hours into luxuries and comforts. What about you?

—19 dozen pairs for this kitchen cabinet?

The modern home is not complete without a kitchen cabinet. It saves steps, time, trouble. The substantial kitchen cabinet here pictured, of white enamel, will be sent to home workers for Auto-Knitting 19 dozen pairs of standard Olde Tyme Wool Socks. That is the name by which the product of our spare-time home workers is known. More than 18,000 stores throughout the country are now retailing these socks.

Why don't you start Auto Knitting at once, making the Olde Tyme Wool Socks that will bring you this kitchen cabinet? Or would you rather Auto Knit —36 doz. pairs for this console phonograph?

You'll be proud to give this Console Model Phonograph a place in your home. It is Queen Anne in period, and Mahogany, Oak or Walnut in finish, as desired. The tone is rich, beautiful.

This phonograph is yours for Auto-Knitting only 36 dozen pairs of socks. Or if you prefer a popular upright model, or a console of different period — you may select from our big REWARD BOOK. This book, just off the press, contains many pages of useful and beautiful things that you can earn at home by Auto-Knitting in your spare time.

May we send you a copy of this REWARD BOOK today?

This New Plan Doubles The Value of your Spare Time

Ever on the alert to be of greater service to its home workers, the Auto-Knitter Hosiery Company has perfected a plan which doubles the purchase value of every pay-check. Henceforth, Auto-Knitter workers will be paid in double-value money. This plan represents one of the greatest forms of profit-sharing ever attempted. It makes every spare hour worth two, makes your spare time worth twice as much.

Find out NOW all about this great new plan. Get in on it at once, and earn the things you have always wanted in this remarkable double-quick way. The coupon is the GOLDEN KEY that opens the treasure chest. Use it! It will bring you free full information regarding Auto-Knitting and all details concerning the new plan. THE AUTO KNITTER HOSIERY CO., Dept. 109, 630-638 Genesee St., Buffalo, New York.

The Auto Knitter Hosiery Co., Dept. 109
630-638 Genesee Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

I want to turn the key to the treasure chest. You may send me FREE full information regarding Auto-Knitting and how it turns wasted hours into dollars. Also all details concerning the new plan that now makes every Auto-Knitter dollar worth two. This does not obligate me in any way whatever.

Name .....

Address .....

City ..... State.....

NOTE—The treasure is heavy. Please enclose a 2 cent stamp to cover cost of mailing.

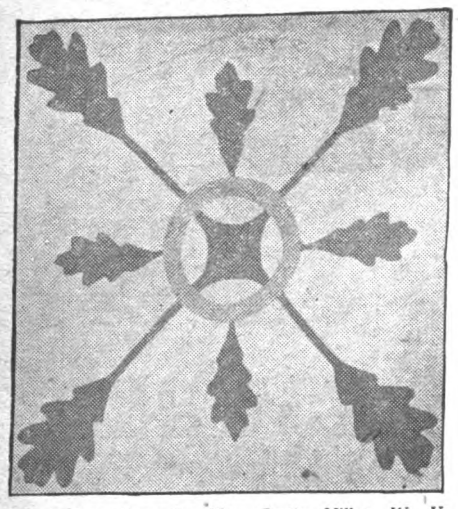
Other DOUBLE Value Rewards You Can Earn

Washing Machine
for Auto-Knitting 7 dozen pairs of socks

Handsome Library Table
for Auto-Knitting 10 dozen pairs of socks

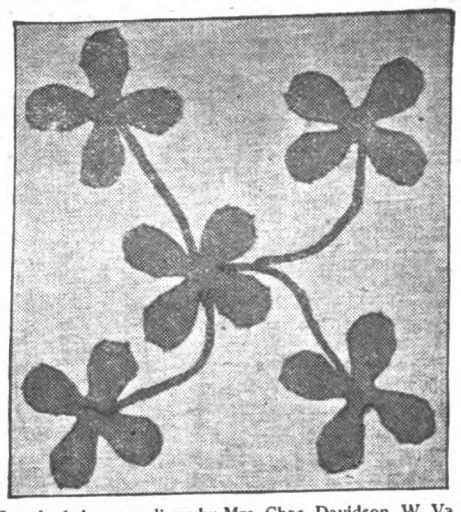
Genuine Reed Rocker
for Auto-Knitting 6 dozen pairs of socks

Dining Room Suite
for Auto-Knitting 56 dozen pairs of socks



Vacuum Cleaner
for Auto-Knitting 20 dozen pairs of socks

Porch Furniture
for Auto-Knitting 24 dozen pairs of socks



And many other useful and pretty things that you can now earn in a double-quick way. Be sure to get your copy of the big Reward Book, just off press.

Send Today For Big FREE Book →

Designs in Patchwork and Filet Crochet

Oak leaf applique by Mrs. Gertie Miller, W. Va. White background, green leaves overlaid with a pink circle.

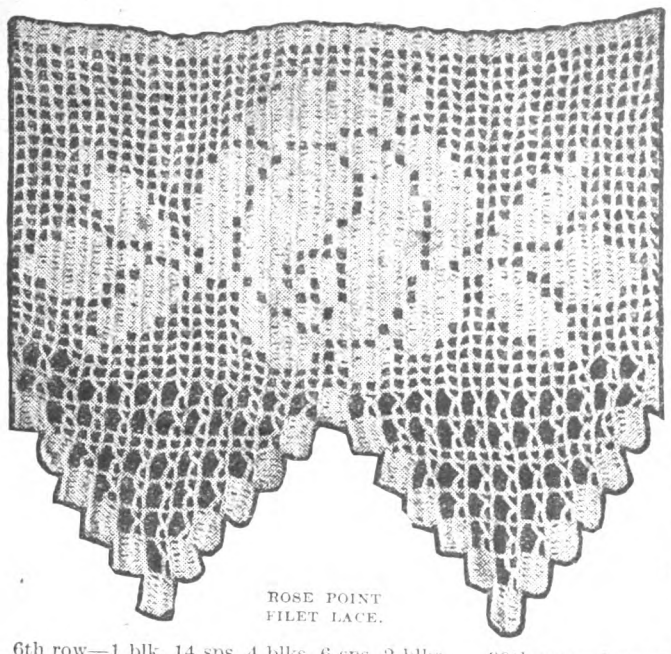
Four-leaf clover applique by Mrs. Chas. Davidson, W. Va. White background, green leaves and stem. Buttonholed with darker green.

Terms Used in Crochet

Ch st., chain stitch, simply a series of loops or stitches each drawn with the hook through the preceding one; s c, single crochet, having a loop on hook, insert hook in work as indicated, draw loop through thread over, and draw through both loops; d c, double crochet, thread over hook, insert hook in work, draw loop through, thread over draw through two loops, thread over, draw through two loops; tr c, treble crochet, thread over hook twice, then work off as in double crochet, there being three groups of two loops to work off instead of two; block, blk, 4 d c preceded and followed by a space; sp, formed by ch between 2 doubles; skip, sk, to miss, omit or not work over a certain number of preceding stitches.

Rose Point Filet Lace

BEGIN with ch 78 sts.



1st row—1 d c in 4th st from hook, 2 d c next 2 sts, 23 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

2nd row—Same as 1st row. Ch 3, turn.

3rd row—1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk, 16 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

4th row—1 blk, 15 sps, 2 blks, 6 sps, 1 blk, ch 10, turn.

5th row—2 blks (7 d c), on ch 10, 6 sps, 3 blks, 15 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

ROSE POINT FILET LACE.

6th row—1 blk, 14 sps, 4 blks, 6 sps, 2 blks, ch 10, turn.

7th row—2 blks, ch 3, 1 s c on 4th d c, ch 3, 1 d c on last d c in 2 blks, making 1 closed lacet. 6 sps, 4 blks, 5 sps, 1 blk, 8 sps, 1 blk.

The directions as given omit the lacets which cut into the filet background, under the leaves, and substitute sps, as this keeps the bottom line of spaces even and gives a better effect.

8th row.—1 blk, 9 sps, 3 blks, 2 sps, 4 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, ch 5 (making open lacet over closed lacet), 2 blks on blks, ch 10, turn.

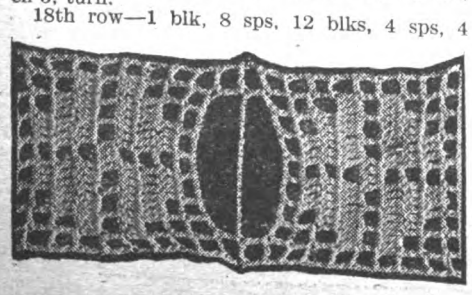
9th row—2 blks, 2 closed lacets, 3 sps, 2 blks, 2 sps, 2 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 10 sps, 1 blk, ch 3.

10th row—1 blk, 10 sps, 4 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 2 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, 2 chs 5 over lacets, 2 blks, ch 10, turn.

11th row—2 blks, 3 closed lacets, 4 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp. 3 blks, 11 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

12th row—1 blk, 12 sps, 2 blks, 2 sps, 4 blks, 4 sps, 3 open lacets (see 8th row), 2 blks, ch 10, turn.

13th row—2 blks, 4 closed lacets, 5 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 13 sps. 1 blk, ch 3, turn.



14th row—1 blk, 14 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 6 sps, 4 open lacets, 2 blks, ch 10, turn.

15th row—2 blks, 5 closed lacets, 8 sps, 1 blk, 14 sps, 1 blk, ch 3.

16th row—1 blk, 10 sps, 4 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 8 sps, 5 open lacets, 2 blks, turn.

17th row—2 blks over open lacet, 4 closed lacets, 5 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 6 blks, 9 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

18th row—1 blk, 8 sps, 12 blks, 4 sps, 4

FILET BEADIN(

open lacets, 2 blks, turn, sl st as in 16th row, ch 3.

19th row—2 blks, 3 closed lacets, 3 sps, 5 blks, 5 sps, 4 blks, 7 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

20th row—1 blk, 3 sps, 2 blks, 2 sps, 2 blks, 2 sps, 5 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, 3 open lacets, 2 blks, turn sl st, ch 3.

21st row—2 blks, 2 closed lacets, 4 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 9 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, 4 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

22nd row—1 blk, 5 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 11 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 2 sps, 2 open lacets, 2 blks, turn, sl st, ch 3, 23rd row—2 blks, 1 closed lacet, 1 sp, 2 blks, 1 sp, 13 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks 4 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

24th row—1 blk, 3 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 3 sps, 8 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 1 sp, 1 open lacet, 2 blks, turn, sl st, ch 3.

25th row—2 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 4 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 3 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

26th row—1 blk, 4 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 5 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 4 sps, 2 blks, ch 10.

27th row—2 blks, 1 closed lacet, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 6 blks, 1 sp, 4 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

28th row—1 blk, 3 sps, 4 blks, 1 sp, 6 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 2 sps, 1 open lacet, 2 blks, ch 10.

From here directions will not be given for the point, as it is the same as the one just completed.

29th row—For filet and rose, 2 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 2 sps, 7 blks, 1 sp, 4 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

30th row—1 blk, 4 sps, 4 blks, 1 sp, 9 blks, 1 sp, 3 blks, 2 sps, point.

31st row—After point, 3 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 7 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 5 sps, 1 blk, ch 3.

32nd row—1 blk, 5 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 2 blks, 2 sps, 4 blks, 1 sp, 3 blks, 4 sps, point.

33rd row—After point, 7 sps, 1 blk, 4 sps, 4 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

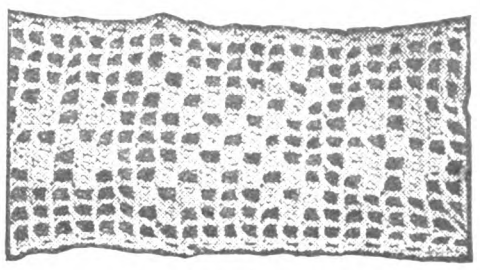
34th row—1 blk, 8 sps, 8 blks, 8 sps.

35th row—8 sps, 6 blks, 10 sps, 1 blk, ch 3.

36th row—1 blk, 12 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 7 sps.

37th row—8 sps, 1 blk, 15 sps, 1 blk, ch 3.

38th row—1 blk, 14 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 blks, 6 sps.



39th row—5 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 13 sps, 1 blk, ch 3.

40th row—1 blk, 12 sps, 2 blks, 2 sps, 4 blks, 4 sps.

41st row—4 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 3 blks, 11 sps, 1 blk.

42nd row—1 blk, 10 sps, 4 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 2 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps.

43rd row—2 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 4 blks, 2 sps, 3 blks, 9 sps, 1 blk.

WIDER FILET.

44th row—1 blk, 8 sps, 1 blk, 5 sps, 4 blks, 6 sps.

45th row—6 sps, 5 blks, 14 sps, 1 blk.

46th row—1 blk, 15 sps, 3 blks, 6 sps.

47th row—7 sps, 2 blks, 15 sps, 1 blk.

48th row—1 blk, 16 sps, 1 blk, 7 sps, work one point with all spaces above before repeating pattern.

If a wider lace is required work one or more blocks on the point before beginning to decrease the point as directed, but in doing this above the point copy the directions for the rose and leaves as given.

Simple Filet Patterns

These three illustrations, showing a beading insertion and edging are very simple to make and all feature practically the same design.

For children's dresses use No. 30 or 40 cotton, and to trim fine lingerie No. 60.

Filet Beading

Ch 42 sts.

1st row—1 d c in 9th st from hook, 8 more sps, ch 5, turn.

2nd row—3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, ch 5, turn.

3rd row—2 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 2 sps, ch 5, turn.

4th row—1 sp, 3 blks, 1 sp, 3 blks, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

5th row—4 sps, 1 blk, 4 sps, ch 5, turn.

6th row—Same as 4th row.

7th row—Same as 3rd row.

8th row—Same as 2nd row.

9th row—9 sps, ch 5, turn.

10th row—1 sp, ch 20, skip 7 sps, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

11th row—Same as 9th row.

Repeat from 1 st row.

Filet Insertion

1st and 2nd rows—2 d c, 9 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

3rd row—2 d c, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

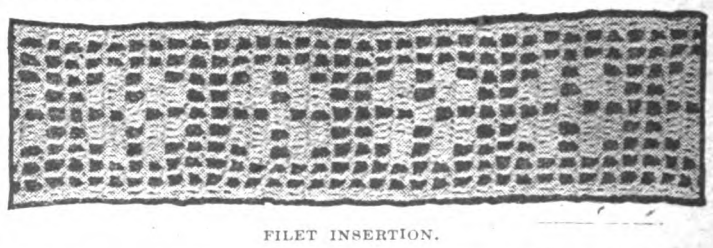
4th row—2 d c, 2 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 2 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

5th row—2 d c, 4 sps, 1 blk, 4 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

6th row—Same as 4th row.

7th row—Same as 3rd row.

Two or more rows all spaces, and repeat from third row.



Wider Filet Insertion

Ch 38 sts.

1 st row—2 d c in 4th and 5th sts from hook, 11 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

2nd row—2 d c, 4 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 4 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

3rd row—2 d c, 3 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 3 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

FILET INSERTION.

4th row—2 d c, 5 sps, 1 blk, 5 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

5th row—Same as 3rd row.

6th row—Same as 2nd row.

7th row—Same as 1st row.

8th row—2 d c, 2 sps, 1 blk, 5 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

9th row—2 d c, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

10th row—2 d c, 2 sps, 1 blk 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 2 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

11th row—2 d c, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

12th row—2 d c, 4 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 4 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

13th row—2 d c, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

14th row—2 d c, 2 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 2 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

15th row—2 d c, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

16th row—2 d c, 2 sps, 1 blk, 5 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

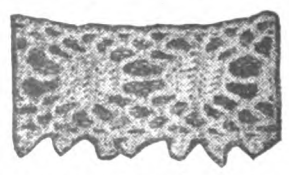
17th row—Same as the 1st row.

18th row—Same as the 2nd row.

Now repeat pattern from 3rd row.

If desired the pattern from the 8th to the 16th rows may be used as a repeat with one, two or three rows of spaces between. This design of crossed blocks may be easily extended, or more spaces may be worked in the width of the insertion if a wider band is needed.

Filet Towel Insertion



This pattern worked of white or colored silkateen is especially good for Turkish bath towels.

Ch 56 sts.

1st row—3 sps, 1 blk, 19 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, ch 5, turn.

2nd row—Same as 1st row.

3rd row—3 sps, 1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk, 5 sps, 1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, ch 5, turn.

IMITATION TORCHON.

4th row—2 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 5 sps, 2 blks, 3 sps, 2 blks, 5 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 2 sps, ch 5, turn.

5th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 4 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 3 blks, 4 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

6th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 3 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 1 sp, 3 blks 1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

7th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 3 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

8th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

9th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 7 sps, 1 blk, 7 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

10th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, 3 blks, 3 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

11th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 2 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 1 sp, 3 blks, 2 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

12th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 3 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 1 sp, 3 blks, 1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

13th row—1 sp, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 4 sps, 3 blks, 1 sp, 3 blks, 4 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, ch 5, turn.

14th row—2 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 5 sps, 2 blks, 3 sps, 2 blks, 5 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 2 sps, ch 5, turn.

15th row—3 sps, 1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk, 5 sps, 1 blk, 6 sps, 1 blk, 3 sps, ch 5, turn.

Three or more rows of spaces may be worked before repeating the star like figure.

FILET EDGING.

Filet Edging

1st row—2 d c, 8 sps, 1 blk, ch 6, turn.

2nd row—1 blk on ch, 9 sps, 2 d c.

3rd row—2 d c, 4 sps, 1 blk, 1 sp, 1 blk, 2 sps, 1 blk, ch 6, turn.

4th row—1 blk on ch, 2 sps, 2 blks, 1 sp, 2 blks, 3 sps, 2 d c.

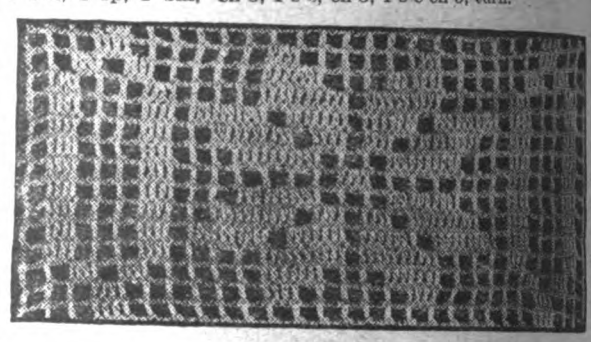
5th row—2 d c, 5 sps, 1 blk, 4 sps, 1 blk, ch 3, turn.

This is center of design and scallop, repeat rows in reverse order.

Imitation Torchon Lace

Ch 18 sts, turn.

1st row—1 s c in 6th st from hook, ch 3, skip 1, 6 s c, ch 3, skip 1, 1 st, ch 3, skip 1, 1 s c, ch 5, turn.



2nd row—1 sl st in 3rd ch to form p, ch 3, 1 d c on last s c, ch 3, 1 s c under ch 3, ch 3, 1 s c under next ch 3, ch 5, 1 tr c in 3rd s c, ch 5, 1 s c, under ch 3, ch 3, 1 s c under ch 3, ch 5, turn.

3rd row—1 s c under ch 3, ch 3, 2 d c under ch 5, 1 d c, on treble, 2 d c under ch 5, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 5, sl st to form picot, ch 3, turn, 1 d c on s c.

4th row—Ch 3, 1 s c, ch 3, 1 s c under ch 3, 5 s c, on 5 s c, 1 s c under ch 3, 1 s c, ch 3, 1 d c under same ch, turn.

5th row—1 s c under ch, ch 3, 7 s c on 7 s c, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 5 from p, ch 3, turn, 1 d c on s c.

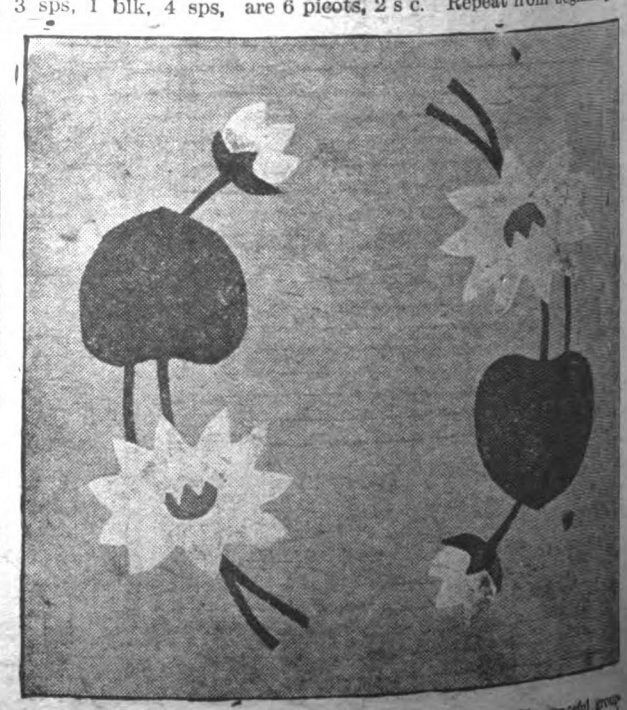
6th row—Ch 3, ch 3, 1 s c, 5 s c on 5 s c, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 3, 1 s c ch 5, turn.

FILET TOWEL INSERTION.

7th row—1 s c under ch 3, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 5, 1 tr c on 3rd s c, ch 5, 1 s c, under next ch 3, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 5, p, ch 3, turn. 1 d c on s c.

Repeat pattern from 2nd row.

Imitation Tatted Edge



This tiny edge, if made of very fine cotton makes a dainty finish for handkerchiefs, children's clothing, collar and cuff sets or underwear.

Ch 20 stitches, slip st into 10th st from hook to form a small ring. Into the ring crochet * 2 s c, 1 picot formed of ch 3,* repeat from * to * 6 times, then 2 s c and join by sl st to first st. Ch 20, form ring as before, 2 s c in ring, ch 1, sl st to last p in preceding ring, ch 2, finish same as first ring. Repeat.

Double Loop Edging

This pattern is also worked in the length and is especially pretty made of fine thread for underclothes, of coarser thread in either ecru or white either of these edgings are very pretty for curtains.

Ch 30 stitches, sl st into 13th st from hook to form ring. Into this ring work 5 s c. Ch 3 to form picot, 5 s c. Ch 19, turn, sl st into second st before the finished picot loop. Ch 1, turn. 3 s c, 1 p, 3 s c, 1 p, repeat until there are 6 picots, 2 s c. Repeat from beginning.

This is another effective lily arrangement by Miss Janet Becker. The graceful grouping of appliques was worked out very attractively on a light blue quilted background.

The World's Greatest Style Catalog FREE!

COUPON

Chicago Mail Order Co. Dept. 431
26th Street and Indiana Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Please mail me, at once, ABSOLUTELY FREE, your Great Paris Fashion Catalog, showing me how your great consolidation of 8 mighty mail order houses enables me to buy everything to wear for every member of the family, at only 3 cents profit on the dollar.

Delivered Free!

Name .....

Address .....

Post Office .....

State .....

Just Sign and Mail the Coupon and You Will Receive FREE Our Wonderful Paris Style Catalog Showing Thousands of Bargains—and the Most Stunning Advance Fashions for Fall and Winter.

Exquisite Models at World's Lowest Prices

Paris Styles for the American Woman

Get Your Catalog Save Your Money! Send This COUPON

We Pay Postage on all Orders

You will love our Paris styles

Just Like Shopping in Paris But You Don't Pay Paris Prices!

Send Right Now—for your FREE copy of the World's Greatest Bargain Style Catalog, showing stunning reproductions of Advance Paris Fashions! Think of it, Madame!—the world's most exquisite style book is yours without the payment of a penny! Send the coupon; get the catalog; look at the low prices which enable every American Woman to wear Genuine Paris Styles and save money besides! Send Coupon—get your Free Catalog Now! Remember, We Pay the Postage on Every Order, Everywhere!

Millions of Dollars Saved to Our Customers! Get Your Share, Too!

The Chicago Mail Order Company has purchased two of New York's Greatest Mail Order Houses—Perry, Dame & Company and the Standard Mail Order House—cutting down expense and Saving Millions of Dollars for our Customers. Our Great Free Catalog shows you how to get Your Share.

Unequaled Service!

Thus with one bold stroke the Chicago Mail Order Co. becomes a gigantic institution, serving 3,500,000 customers! Instead of three houses with their expense of three staffs of officers, buyers and clerks, with three catalogs to issue, there is one mighty establishment, with one organization, one staff, and one catalog, saving millions of dollars for Mail Order Buyers!

Tremendous Saving

made in operating and distribution expense is shown in the unparalleled bargain prices of everything you buy from the Chicago Mail Order Company. Be sure to get YOUR share of the enormous savings as they appear in page after page of our wonderful catalog. Remember, our profit is only 3c on the dollar, and we deliver everything Free to your home.

The World's Best Styles!

We have shopped the world over for the pretty clothes you love, and throughout the 332 pages of our wonderful FREE catalog you will find the most thrilling surprises—styles that delight—prices that invite! Also amazing bargains in standard staple wearing apparel for every purpose. Send for the book—see for yourself! And remember, We Pay the Postage on Every Order Everywhere.

Get Advance Fashion Facts First!

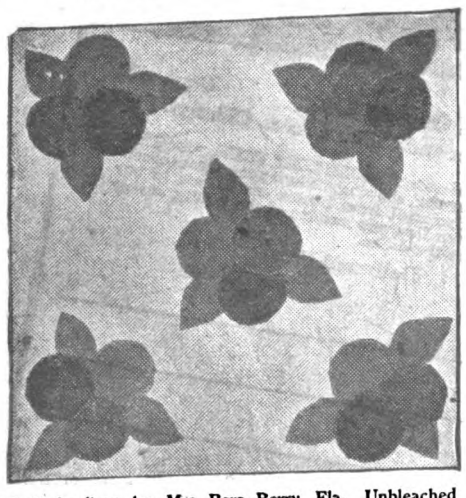
Would you like to have just the information you need to dress in the most becoming fashions? Our style catalog will tell you! Would you like to know how to get Marion Davies' Beauty Secrets FREE? Our catalog will tell you! Would you like to be sure that every dollar will bring you a bargain overflowing with value? Mail the coupon or a post card for our catalog today sure!

Our Profit Only 3c on the Dollar! Send Today for Your Free Catalog!

Our profit is only 3c on every dollar you pay us for merchandise. Price boosters and profiteers are again shouting "Higher Prices," but we say "Prices must not go up"—and we hold our own prices down with our 3c-on-the-dollar-profit plan. Pay no attention to all this talk about advancing prices! Let the prices in our Free Style Book be your guide to Safe and Economical Buying! We Guarantee Lowest Prices! Read Our Guarantee!

Money-Back Guarantee

Every article is sold to you on a positive understanding that if the goods don't please you, you are to return them and we'll refund your money! Also, we guarantee that our prices are the lowest in America. If you beat our prices we refund the difference.



You must see this book of Stunning Styles and Wonder Values to appreciate all it means in opportunities to save money on wearing apparel! Everything to Wear for Every Member of the Family, Delivered Free to Your Home! Don't spend a single penny for clothes until you fill in the coupon, mail it and receive your free copy—then, and not till then, will you fully realize that we bring you The World's Best Styles at the World's Lowest Prices!

Send the Coupon! Get Your Catalog! Save Your Money!

Chicago Mail Order Co.

Dept. 431 Chicago, Illinois

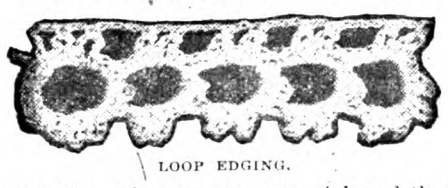
Applique and Crochet for Busy Workers

Fruit Applique by Mrs. Bera Berry, Fla. Unbleached background, groups of green, yellow and red, backed by green leaves.

Applique Suggestions

THE different patchwork squares for applique given this month on Home Workers' pages, are all graceful designs suggested by natural forms.

In this branch of fancy work it is not at all difficult to originate your own designs, as everything attempted is merely suggested rather than copied.



As always, rose patterns of all sorts are most popular and the wild rose appliques shown in the square block by Mrs. Henness, gives one a very good idea how much forms may vary and yet suggest the same thing.

This is because in this especial line of work color is equally as important as outlines.

One should not be afraid to copy or follow out ideas for this work without a pattern, for failure is hardly possible. Just remember that little depends upon accuracy of form, much on color and workmanship.

For example notice closely the difference in the three rose forms in the square, and yet each suggests a wild rose and nothing else.

In using this particular idea as an applique decoration, select a pretty rose pink and then whatever your form, if the grouping of flowers and leaves is pleasing and the workmanship good the result cannot fail to be attractive.

LOOP EDGING.

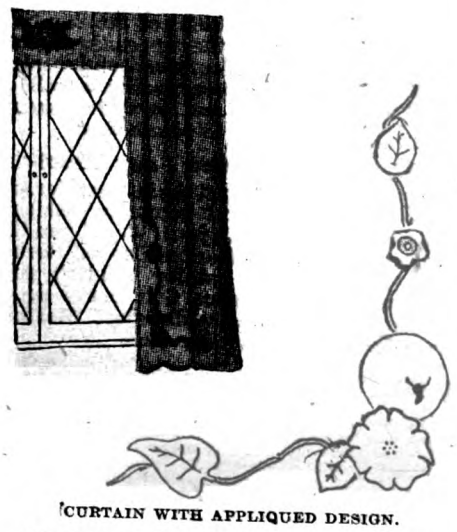
In our sketch the ideas given for a bedroom set may be very easily carried out even though not exactly copied, without any pattern, and will be a success even though no two flowers are alike in outline.

This however need not be, as unity is an addition and it can be secured by using two or three outlines for cutting all of the flowers.

For the spread, draw a circle or oval to form a guide for the floral wreath. The decorations in the corners can be used on the bureau scarf, table cover and curtains. Stems if used should always be of narrow bias material.

The edges of each article may be finished either by turning hems on the right side and running with black, by buttonholing with black or binding with pink as preferred.

The oak leaf, clover and lily designs are all very good and could be used in an endless variety of ways on pillows, runners, bags and clothes.



If one does not feel equal to any thing but the simplest forms, such as squares and circles, notice the block by Nellie Blair which is a very good example of what may be accomplished in this line.

Repeating groups of this or any simple motif such as th's depends largely for their effectiveness on attractive color combinations.

Fig. 3 shows the arrangement which consists of three circles overlapped and backed by three green triangles, representing leaves.

The addition of a French knot and a couple of stitches gives to each motif the appearance of a group of fruit.

Curtains with similar repeats placed alternately about a foot apart, in an all-over pattern on unbleached are very handsome for corner decorations, such as are shown on the curtain below are pretty.

CURTAIN WITH APPLIQUED DESIGN.

Checked gingham appliques for trimming plain colors are attractive too.

Either squares or circles buttonholed with a harmonious color or black, and worked into a connected pattern by running stitches or a few lazy-daisy loops go far towards making children's clothes, house dresses and aprons individual and out of the ordinary.

Loop Edging

Made of No. 30 white or ecru crochet cotton this is very pretty for curtains.

Ch 15 sts, join in ring, * 5 s c in ring, ch 5, 2 s c, ch 5, 2 s c, ch 5, 3 s c, ch 5, 2 s c, ch 12, turn ring, 1 sl st in 2 s c between last two chains 5, repeat from *. After length needed is completed work last ring thus after 4th picot, 5 s c, ch 5, 2 s c, ch 3, 1 d c under ch 5, ch 2, 4 s c, 4 s c under next ring, ch 3, 1 tr c in last picot ch 2, 2 s c, ch 3, 1 d c in last p, ch, 4 s c. Repeat completing each ring.

Simple Over Crochet Design

Rapidly worked yokes can be made very easily in the following way and although the pattern is of the simplest a very attractive sort of herring-bone effect is gained.

OVERLAPPED FRUIT. FIG. 3.

Using No. 30 cotton for a four-inch band begin with a ch 38 sps, turn.

1st row—3 tr c in 6th st from the hook, ch 3, 3 tr c in next 4th st, * ch 3, sk 3, 3 tr c in next st, repeat from * to end of ch, making 11 groups of trebles in all, ch 5, turn.

2nd row—3 tr c under ch between first and second groups of trebles, ch 3. Repeat groups of trebles under each ch 3 in last row, making 10 groups in all, ch 3, 1 tr c on last treble in 1st row, ch 4, turn.

3rd row—Same as 1 st row, working the first groups of trebles in the first sp. At end ch 5, turn.

Scalloped Edging

Ch 45 sts.

1st row—1 d c in 4th ch from hook, 7 d c in next 7 sts, ch 3, skip 3, 14 d c in next 14 sts, ch 3, skip 3, 7 d c in 7 sts, ch 2, skip 2, 3 d c, ch 3, turn.

2nd row—2 d c on 2 d c, letting ch answer for first double, ch 2, 5 d c on d c, ch 3, 1 s c in ch 3, ch 3, skip 2 d c, 10 d c on d c, ch 2, 1 s c in ch 3, ch 3, 5 d c on d c, ch 3, turn.

3rd row—2 d c, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 3, 6 d c, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 3, 3 d c, ch 2, 3 d c, ch 3, turn.

4th row—2 d c, ch 2, 1 d c, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 3, 2 d c, 4 ch 3, with 1 s c between 1 d c, ch 4, turn.

5th row—2 d c on ch, 3 chs of 3 with 1 s c between each, 2 d c on ch, 2 d c on d c, 2 d c on ch, 3 chs of 3 with 1 s c between, 2 d c on ch, 1 d c on d c, ch 2, 3 d c, ch 3, turn.

6th row—2 d c, ch 2, 3 d c on d c, 2 d c on ch, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 3, 2 d c on ch, 6 d c on d c, 2 d c on ch, ch 3, 1 s c, ch 3, 2 d c on ch, 3 d c on d c, 16 d c under ch, ch 3, fasten to end of third row, ch 3, turn.

7th row—21 d c, 2 d c under ch, ch 3, 12 d c, working first and last 2 under chains, ch 3, 7 d c, ch 2, 3 d c, ch 3, turn.

Now repeat the pattern from the 2nd row for the scallop.

3rd row—Skip first 2 d c, 1 d c on each double with ch 1 between, fasten to 2nd row with sl st, ch 3, turn, picot, ch 3, 1 s c between each double. The scallops are all worked alike in this manner, although the pattern above the scallops will vary somewhat.

4th row—Same as 2nd row.

Edging to Match

A suitable edging for yokes can be made to match as follows: Into the edge of all-over band work one row of spaces.

2nd row—Ch 5, 1 s c in every other sp.

3rd row—Ch 5, 1 s c under each ch.

4th row—1 group 5 tr c with picots between groups, worked under each ch of 5.

Ring Edging

Ch 12 sts, join in ring, 5 s c, ch 3, 5 s c, ch 3, 5 s c in ring, ch 19, sl st in 13 st to form second ring, 5 s c, sl st to last ch 3, in first ring (turn ring so right sides of work will come together), ch 1, 5 s c in ring, ch 7, sl st to second ch 3 in first ring, ch 1, 10 s c under ch 7, 5 s c, ch 3, 5 s c to finish second ring.

RING EDGING.

Wild Rose Applique by Mrs. Nellie Blair, Pa. White background, pink roses, centers of yellow French knots, green leaves.

Fan Bar Edging

Ch 11 sts, turn.

1st row—1 d c in 4th st from hook, 7 d c in next 6 sts, ch 5, turn.

2nd row—1 d c on last d c in 1st row, ch 2, skip 2, 1 d c in next sp, 2 d c in next sp, ch 3, turn.

FAN BAR EDGING.

3rd row—5 s c, ch 3, 1 d c under end ch 5, ch 3, 1 d c in ch 3, 1 d c, ch 3, 1 d c, all under same ch 5, ch 3, 1 d c in end 1 st c, turn.

4th row—3 s c under ch 3, ch 3, 1 s c on d c, 2 s c, 1 p, 2 s c under 3 sps between doubles, 1 p, on 4th d c, 3 s c under ch 3, ch 5.

5th row—1 d c in 4th d c, 1 sp, 2 d c, ch 3, turn.

Repeat from 1st row.

Crocheted Kimono Sleeve Sweater

This summer wrap for a child, 2 years old, requires 4 skeins white Saxony, 2 skeins colored Saxony and 1 bone hook No. 4. Begin with ch 53 sts, turn, 1 d c in 4th st from hook, 1 d c in the 49 sts of ch, ch 1, turn.

2nd row—1 s c in each of the 50 d c working through both loops of each st, ch 1.

3rd row—Same as 2nd row.

4th row—Same as 1st, then 2 rows like 2nd and 3rd. Repeat these 3 rows until there are 12 rows of doubles. Ch 55 sts for front do not break thread. Join extra wool to other side of sleeve and ch 54 sts for back.

Start where wool was left on opposite end, 54 s c on ch, 1 s c on each d c across sleeve, 54 s c on back ch, ch 1, turn. Work back in the same way.

Repeat the rows of doubles and singles until 7 rows of doubles have been completed. This last row will end on the back. Now work back and forth on 77 sts until there are 7 more rows of doubles, the last row ending at the neck. Do not break wool.

Leave 4 sts on the shoulder for the neck, join wool from an extra ball in 5th st and work to bottom of the front, making 2 rows of singles first, then 1 of doubles. Repeat, making 6 rows of doubles in all. Shorten the 4th and 6th rows of these doubles 1 st each at the neck.

For the right front ch 81 sts. This is bottom of front. Turn, 77 s c, ch 1, 77 s c, 1 row doubles. Repeat, making 6 rows of doubles as on the other side. Between the last 2 rows of singles on this side plan and make as many buttonholes as desired, ch 3 or more, skip the same number of singles, 1 s c in next st and proceed to next space marked for buttonhole. On this side drop stitches at the neck to correspond with the opposite side. Break wool. Join on opposite side of this front, work back and forth to bottom of the back, making rows to correspond with the other side, then make second sleeve. Break wool, sew up side seams and sleeves.

For the collar, with white wool make a ch of about 60 sts or long enough to reach round neck if stretched a little, turn.

2nd row—1 s c in each st, ch 1, turn.

3rd row—1 s c in each s c working through both loops of each st. Repeat 3rd row until there are 8 rows in all. Break wool. The turnover collar is of colored wool. Ch 1, 1 s c in each s c, ch 1; each end, turn. Repeat making 17 rows in all.

For the cuffs, with white wool ch 50 sts, make 8 rows same as for the collar, then 15 rows of colored wool for turnover cuff. Sew collar and cuffs in place, fulling in the bottom of the sleeve a little if necessary.

Make the belt of colored wool. Ch 22 sts,

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 26.)

The Embroidery Basket

Conducted by

Beth Taske Brown

ONE cannot have too many scarfs to freshen up the living-room every little while. The scarf is equally serviceable for either a between-meal runner or a library table scarf.

The scarf illustrated here is stamped on tan linen in effective stitchery of French knot flowers. Each flower is embroidered in a different color

NAPKINS. NO. W-4.

no. W-1.

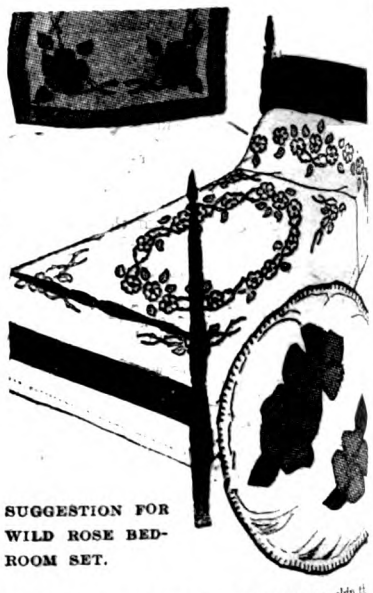
arranged according to the individual's taste, using purple, henna, copper, red, and two shades of peacock blue. All six strands are used for the knots in order to make them effective. Four strands of green are used for the outlining and lazy-dazy leaves. The centers of the flowers are worked solid in the same color as the knots, and then outlined with three strands of black, and the straight lines coming out from the center are also done with black. The edge of the scarf is in buttonhole with the wood-grey shade of floss in all six strands.

This centerpiece is 18 inches in diameter and is a very useful size for a library table, tabouret, round serving tray, or many other places where a medium sized doily may be used. The design is simple yet extremely effective with only knots, lazy-dazy and outline for stitches. The lazy-dazy flowers are done in three strands of the light blue; the sprays, of leaves and stems, of three strands of dark blue; and the French knot forget-me-nots of four strands of medium blue with yellow centers. A straight stitch of two strands of dark blue is placed in the center of each lazy-dazy stitch of the flowers, and a dark blue French knot in the center of the flower.

The edge may be finished with blanket stitch, tatting, machine or handmade lace. Directions for the lace used on this particular doily are as follows:

Abbreviations: ch, chain; s c, single crochet; d c, double crochet; st, stitch; tr c, triple crochet.

Ch 18, d c into 5th st, ch 4, s c into 4th st, ch 4, d c into 4th st, six times with ch 2 between 3rd and 4th st, ch 3, turn, 6 d c into loop of shell with ch 2 between 3rd and 4th st, 4 d c under ch of four, ch 2 and 4 d c under next ch of 4, d c into d c, d c into 3rd st of previous row, ch 3, turn, d c into d c, 8 d c into space between blocks, d c 6 times into loop of shell with ch 2 between 3rd and 4th st, ch 2, * tr c into loop at end of shell leaving 2 sts on needle, tr c into loop leaving 3 sts on needle, tr c into loop leaving 4 sts on needle, draw thread through 3 st, then through 2 st, ch 2, repeat from * 4 times, s c 1 st into end of ch (beginning of work), ch 3, catch under 1st ch of 2 with s c, ch 3, catch under 2nd ch of 2 with s c, ch 3, catch under 3rd ch of 2 with s c, ch 3, catch 4th ch of 2 with s c, s c into next ch of 2, ch 2, d c 6 times into loop of shell with ch 2 between 3rd and 4th st, ch 4, catch with s c between 4th and 5th st of shell of 8, ch 4, d c over d c, d c 1 st, into 2nd st of previous row. This completes one section of the lace. Repeat from beginning of directions.



A thirty-six inch square luncheon cloth with four napkins is a very popular set for serving. This particular set illustrated is to be worked with the simple lazy-dazy and knots. The entire set is finished with fringe about one-half inch deep on the napkins, and one inch deep on the lunch cloth. This is made by first drawing out one thread the depth wanted for the fringe. Where this thread is drawn out, stitch on the sewing machine with black thread; then fringe the other threads to this stitching.

36-INCH SQUARE. NO. W-3.

NO. W-2.

The flowers are worked in reddish pink, red, orange and copper; while the clusters of knots are of peacock blue and purple. The lazy-dazy leaves and stems are of green, while black for the basket and knots in the centers of the flowers, sets the other colors off and gives the desired effect. Two strands of thread are used for the basket, four strands for the knots and three strands for the leaves, stems and petals of the lazy-dazy flowers.

SUGGESTION FOR WILD ROSE BEDROOM SET.

Patterns and Stamped goods illustrated and described in this article can be obtained from COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.—See Page 26.

From Attic to Celler

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 20.)

been added freely. Wash windows in ammonia water and wipe with old cotton cloth free from lint. After the furnishings are restored to place the room is finished, and has been done without taking unnecessary steps.

After the bedrooms are clean, close the doors and do the upper hall. In cleaning the lower floor, commence at the least used room of the living quarters. Assuming this may be an old-fashioned parlor, a down-stairs guestroom, or possibly a general utility and sewing-room, it should be thoroughly cleaned and used as a receiving place during the remainder of the cleaning. Such an arrangement saves many steps and much confusion.

Should it be necessary to extend the cleaning of the living-room into the second or third day, be sure to have your plan of procedure definitely made before starting in. Otherwise, things in general will seem in a state of upheaval. The family will suddenly need everything which happens to be at the bottom, begin to trip over things in unusual places and possibly reach the point of thinking they are being abused, all of which reacts on the housewife and causes greater fatigue than per actual physical labor.

Modern ideas of housekeeping and cleanliness have banished the carpet, the real bugbear of housecleaning. But if for various reasons you are still using one on your living-room floor, do, I implore you, take it up and do not put it back again. You may answer that your floor is unsightly, but this problem has been met in several ways. One is to cover the whole floor with linoleum, using the plain, or the undecorated plain color. Either makes a good background for rugs, which can be made from the parts of carpet showing the least wear. If the carpet is in good condition and an art-square is desired, rip off one breadth, cut off the same width from the end less a two-inch hem allowance, if it is to be hemmed, but a better edge is obtained by binding with a good quality of upholstery braid, or with strips cut from the strongest parts of an old suit. This makes a thin edge which is desirable. If the floor is smooth but has wide cracks, these may be filled and the whole floor or just a border painted a dust color which is very satisfactory.

The first day's work should consist of removing and cleaning all the pictures and bric-a-brac, and putting them in a safe place. Couch cover, pillows, any draperies and tablecovers are brushed, or hung to blow in the sun and air. The main thing to keep in mind is to finish as you go along; do as soon as these things are finished, don't lay them in a heap somewhere, but carefully fold such as require it, and place the whole in your receiving place. Remove old newspapers and magazines to a suitable place of storage. This much well done will constitute work enough for the first day and the room has been in a usable state.

Early the next morning take down the window curtains. If they simply require dusting carefully hang them by the two ends over the line and pin frequently to prevent stretching the hems. If they are to be washed, place in cold water to which one tablespoonful of ammonia to the pail has been added. In two hours, gently work through the water, drain without wringing and place in a fresh ammonia water. Work through this water and place in a warm suds to soak one hour, then wash by squeezing with the hand. Boil if the curtains are white, but if tinted, restore the tint by rinsing through a water colored with boiled tea. Hang by the two hems, and as soon as dry fold away in a drawer until they can be ironed. After the curtains are removed, the fixtures are returned to place, as this prevents their getting mixed or lying about. Roll the shade to the top. Dust the chairs and small tables and set out of the room. The larger pieces are dusted and covered. Books are dusted, shelves are wiped and books returned to place, then the whole covered. Brush the ceiling and walls the same as in the chambers. Sweep the floor. Take down one window shade, carefully unroll and wipe with a soft clean cloth over a large table. Wash the inside of window and sash, and the inside casing, and return the shade. Repeat until all the windows are finished. During the window washing you have been obliged to attend to the curtains and various other details of housework, so the forenoon will be well advanced, and you now plan to restore the room as far as possible. If you have shelves, these are cleaned and whatever was taken from them is returned. Wall pictures are replaced. Furniture is uncovered and the floor wiped or otherwise treated according to finish. Return chairs sufficient to the family comfort and call the day's work done. On the third day the woodwork can be cleaned, the curtains ironed and hung, and other furnishings replaced.

The remainder of house is cleaned in the above order. Plan your work well in advance and always make an allowance for unexpected interruptions.

Here and There About the House

Like everything else the sewing machine requires its regular cleaning. Otherwise it will become gummy from hardened oil which causes the machine to run hard and do poor work. Select a day on which you can have the machine in an open window. Slip off the belt and turn back the top. Lay several thicknesses of old cloth in the pan to catch the drip. Fill an oiler that has a generous delivery with gasolene and work it through every part of the machine until it runs clean and let it stand while the gasolene is forced into all the openings on top, then again apply it underneath until you are sure all the old oil is removed. Wipe and at once hang the cloth out of doors. Lay a fresh cloth under the machine and work the gasolene into the openings each side of the treadle and around the wheel until the old oil is removed, and lastly thoroughly oil the machine, using only sewing machine oil. Air the room thoroughly to avoid danger of explosion or fire from the gasolene fumes.

Turned needle points can often be straightened on a fine emery wheel.

If the machine belt has become loose, cut off a very small portion, and pierce a new hole just back of the old one with a hat pin heated red in a candle flame.

Cretonnes that do not require washing should be carefully hung to blow on the line, and taken in as soon as they appear free from dust. If to be washed soak one hour in cold water to which one tablespoonful of turpentine and one of coarse salt has been added to each pailful. Rinse in cold water, then wash in a tepid suds, rinse thorough two tepid waters and dry quickly in the wind. If the cretonnes are faded, they can be restored in a very pleasing way by tinting in the rinse waters. If the predominating shades are brown, add strong coffee or tea to the rinse waters. If the colors are generally light, tint with ball bluing tied in a cloth, or with pink tissue paper soaked in the rinse waters. The tinting conceals much of the fading and gives a shadow effect to the design. Care must be taken not to overdo the tinting. If the color is not deep enough from the first rinsing, more may be added to the second.

Washing sweaters for school wear is a part of the fall work and should always be done on a bright, windy day. There are two "dont's" in washing sweaters. One is never rub, and the other is never wring if you desire them to be soft and shapely when dry. Make a good suds by dissolving the soap before it is put into the water, which should be only lukewarm. Soak the sweater about ten minutes, and then press about in the water without lifting it in and out, as the weight of water will stretch the sweater. Drain off the water and add a new suds, and keep working it about until clean. Drain, add a clean water of the same temperature and work free from suds. Use two rinse waters, and the third if the sweater is very heavy. A hand vacuum washer is excellent for sweaters. Have ready a window screen covered with a clean white cloth, and resting in a slanting position or on top of two chairs. Lift the sweater from the water and lay it on the screen to dry. The screen allows the water to drip through from all parts of the sweater at once and the air to circulate.

Rub all the varnished furniture, dull finish or bright, with a furniture polish that cleans without leaving damp or sticky. This can be done after all the rooms are settled. This can be done after the wall paper was found to be loose in places along the seams, make flour paste and apply it with a flat mucilage brush, then press gently with a clean cloth.

Zinc under stoves and on tables can be brightened and cleaned with a strong solution of water and vinegar, but it must be applied over a small surface at a time and washed and wiped dry immediately. Zinc can be scoured with bath-brick and water, but the process is slow and hard.

Lacquered metals do not tarnish, for the metal is protected from the action of air and moisture by a shellac preparation, which only requires dusting and wiping with a wet cloth. If the lacquer cracks or appears worn, before the abrasion reaches the metal it should be given a touching up with shellac.

With the discarding of heavy carpets fastened in place has come the problem of finishing the floors underneath so that rugs can be used. Most of these floors are of soft wood and have had no finish of any kind applied to them. First of all, any remnants of tacks must either be drawn or driven below the surface with a nail set. Thoroughly sweep, including the edges and the openings between boards. Level and remove any surface roughness by planing. Scrub clean, and avoid leaving any soap on the floor by following each washed section with hot water.. and a cloth free from soap. Otherwise the finish will not wear well. Any stains that are liable not to be covered by the finish are removed with a solution of one teaspoonful of oxalic acid to one cup of hot water. This solution is poisonous and should be carefully labelled and kept from the reach of children.

Various kinds of crack filler are used, but a simple and satisfactory one may be made of genuine whiting and linseed-oil putty into which is thoroughly worked about 10 per cent. of dry white lead and coloring matter to match the floor. Another good filler may be made of Cabinet glue melted with a little water in a dish set in water, thickened with fine sawdust, and colored to match the wood. This must be used while hot and can be worked smoothly into cracks with a small knife.

In the Cellar

That the cellar be clean and well ventilated, especially if used as a storage place for food, is of great importance. If possible there should be a cross current of air, as the air from the cellar affects that all over the house. Openings should be well screened, and cellar windows not put in until there is danger from freezing. Where the cellar bottom is damp and board walks are used, they should be removed as soon as signs of decay appear, otherwise the rotten wood will harbor slugs and bugs that will find their way into the vegetable boxes.

The only practical way of treating cellar walls is with an annual coat of whitewash, because the white reflects the light and the whitewash is a germicide. The cellar walls should be thoroughly brushed, and scrubbed with a broom and hot soap suds before applying the whitewash.

Boxes of vegetables should rest on racks or blocks of wood to avoid dampness and mustiness. Shelves of the swinging or hanging type allow the air to circulate freely and are.. more easily cared for.

Openings through which rats and mice may enter should be filled up with a mixture of cement, sand and small stones or broken brick. Other places, such as those in partitions where the rodents may have gnawed through, may be effectively closed by covering the hole on both sides of the partition with a sheet of zinc.

The Feast of the Dead

By Everett McNeil

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

THE Indians of California had many queer customs and ceremonies, at least they seem queer to us, possibly because we cannot now understand the background of religion and tradition on which they were built. One of these odd ceremonies, probably religious in its origin, might be called The Feast of the Dead. Just what its origin was no white man knows; but it probably dates back to the early history of the tribe and, therefore, has an historical and religious as well as curious interest to the student of the American Indian. The following account of this feast is taken from a description given by an eye-witness.

A few days before its coming the Indians began to make ready for this feast by preparing large quantities of food, chiefly beef, acorn pudding and tortillas (a thin round cake made from maize flour and baked on a hot, flat stone). In addition they made images to represent every member of their tribe who had died during the three preceding years. These images were made of wood and were completely dressed, including hats, shoes and stockings, in the best clothes obtainable.

Early on the morning of the appointed day the Indians from all the surrounding country began gathering at the spot selected for the feast. At about ten o'clock the squaws inaugurated the ceremonies by squatting down on the ground in the form of a large circle. The men at once took their stations a few feet behind them. An Indian priest now entered the circle and read, in Spanish, a passage from a book. This done he began to chant a song or prayer, while, at the same time, he shook an odd-looking rattle made from a dried gourd. He then read another passage from the book and then again chanted his song or prayer and shook his rattle. He did these two things alternately for some time. In the meantime the squaws in the circle were wailing and crying in the most heart-breaking manner, as if they were about to perish of grief, hugging their arms close to their bodies and rocking back and forth. This was their way of expressing their sorrow for the dead.

When this ceremony, evidently religious, was completed, the Indians all repaired to the spot where the images had been left standing on the ground. Each image was now grasped by a man. These men at once formed themselves into a line and began a march or rude dance, holding their images much as if they were dancing partners and grunting guttural grunts with every step. During this march other Indians tossed coins, baskets and pieces of fine calico up into the air. These articles were offerings from the dead and could be carried off freely by anyone who wished, except a relative of the dead represented by the images. At the end of the march or dance all the images were placed in a pile and burnt.

The feast now came next in order; and, accordingly, the eaters all squatted down on the ground and the good things were passed around by the squaws, who were careful to see that the aged got the choicest morsels.

But it was after the feast that the strangest rite of all came, the burning of a maiden, as it was called. This was not as bad as it sounds; and was accomplished by placing a young Indian girl in a hole previously dug in the ground and covering her, all but her head, with wet reeds and cloths. Then a fire was built as near her as was considered safe and a dozen or more squaws formed a circle around the girl and the fire and danced and sung as they moved around her. This dancing, singing circle was kept going around the girl during the rest of the day, fresh squaws taking the place of those who became tired. The maiden, after having passed through this ordeal, was no longer to be considered a girl. She had become a woman and could now marry whenever she found the man she wanted.

Those not engaged nor interested in the ceremony of burning the maiden, spent the rest of the day eating, playing games, gambling, dancing and having a general good time after the rude manner of Indians.

Just what the burning of the maiden symbolized is hard to tell. Possibly it was meant to symbolize the burning away of the foolish fancies of youth and the assuming of the responsibilities of womanhood. At least it was a most disagreeable test of the hardihood and endurance of the young Indian girl; and again possibly, it was to show her fitness to become the wife of an Indian, a position that often required both hardihood and endurance.

They met on the crossing at twilight,
Ne'er will they meet again—
One was a speeding motorist,
The other a railway train.

—The Automobilist.

FREE

1 Damask Table Cloth
6 Napkins and 2 Doilies with this High Grade 110 PIECE
Dinner Set
Your Own Initial on Every Piece

Your Own Initial on Every Piece

$1 WITH ORDER

Martha Washington Initial Dinner Set

110 PIECES on 30 Days' Free Trial. The picture shows, in reduced size, the attractive initial design. This design is in 7 harmoniously blended colors and gold. SUPREME QUALITY. Everything that high class materials, manufacturing skill, art and design can do, has been done to make this beautiful Dinnerware a Remarkable Bargain. All the decorations; the initial, the wreath, the scroll of roses in natural colors, the gold edge, and the inner line of orange, are absolutely put on to stay. We guarantee against breakage in shipment. Each piece wrapped separately in tissue paper.

No picture can do justice to this dinner set. I want you to see it on your own table. I want you to know the Attractiveness of its Aristocratic Colonial Shape, the Beauty of its refined Gold Border and Orange band. I want you to see how the big, wide, brilliant gold handles enrich and beautify the set. Then I want you to know the Pride of Possessing a high-class dinner set that has your initial on every piece. I will send you the entire set, 12 7¼-in. Pie or Lunch Plates, 12 9¼-in. Dinner Plates, 12 6¼-in. Bread and Butter Plates, 12 7¾-in. Soup Plates, 12 Cups, 12 Saucers, 12 5½-in. Dessert Dishes, 12 6-in. Oatmeal Dishes, 1 Covered Vegetable Dish (2 Pieces), 1 8-in. Open Vegetable Dish, 1 10½-in. Meat Platter, 1 13½-in. Meat Platter, 1 9¼-in. Round Salad Dish, 1 Sauce Boat, 1 Sauce Boat Stand, 1 Gravy Bowl, 1 Covered Sugar Bowl (2 Pieces), 1 Cream Pitcher, 1 6-in. Pickle Dish, 1 7-in. Butter Dish.

THE 110 PIECES

This dinner set formerly sold for $44.75 and without the Free Table Cloth, Napkins and Doilies. You would have been satisfied to pay this price for the High Quality and Exquisite Design of this set Alone.

SPECIAL 30TH ANNIVERSARY
Sale Price Only $29.95
30 Days' Free Trial—Easy Monthly Payments

To these points of excellence I have added these additional features: The exclusiveness of your own initial on every piece; the lavish beauty of seven colors and Gold in the decorations; the distinctively handsome big, wide, bright, gold handles. I have also added a daintily colored floral spray which is opposite the initial design on every piece.

I want to send you the 110 pieces on 30 Days' Free Trial to use as your own. If your satisfaction is not complete, return the set. I will refund your first payment and all freight charges. The trial will not cost you a penny. Be careful to state the initial you desire. Order No. RA2920. Price $29.95. Terms: $1.00 with order; balance $2.50 Monthly.

FREE Table Cloth, Napkins and Doilies If you will send your order QUICKLY, I will send you Absolutely Free a Table Cloth, 6 Napkins, 2 Doilies, all nicely scalloped. These articles are made of High Class Full Bleached Satin Finish Cotton Damask. The design is attractive; the wearing quality thoroughly satisfactory. The table cloth is round, beautifully scalloped, and finished with a mercerized corded edge of dainty beauty; it is bigger, and of a better quality than is usually found in similar sets; it measures 56 inches in diameter—a very practical size. The napkins are scalloped and corded to match the table cloth and are also larger than usual; they measure 17½ x 17½ inches. The 2 round doilies match the table cloth and napkins and are 13 in. in diameter.

© 1923 Spear & Co.

"I Will Trust You Gladly"

Get My Big Free Book

If you want to know all about the fairest, squarest and easiest way to get the things you have long yearned for on the easiest terms send for my Free Catalog Now. It shows Thousands of Bargains in Furniture, Bedding, Springs, Mattresses, Bed Spreads, Rugs, Carpets, Linoleum, Lace Curtains, Portieres, Dishes, Baby Carriages, Glassware, Stoves, Ranges, Lamps, Enamel Cooking Sets, Aluminum Ware, Refrigerators, Washing Machines, Sewing Machines, Guns, Silverware, Clocks, Cameras, Phonographs, Children's Automobiles, Wagons, etc., Bicycles, Table Linen, etc.

NATHANIEL SPEAR, Pres.

Of Pittsburgh → SPEAR & CO. ← Dept. E-2, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Home Furnishers for the People of America

SPEAR & CO., Dept. E-2, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Send me the 110-piece Initial Dinner Set and Free Table Cloth, 6 Napkins and 2 Doilies. I enclose $1.00 first payment. It is understood that if at the end of the 30 days' trial I am satisfied, I will send you $2.50 Monthly. Order No. RA2920. Terms: $1.00 with order, $2.50 Monthly. Price $29.95. Title remains with you until paid in full. Send me your Big Free Catalog also. Please print or write name and address plainly.

Print plainly in box the initial you desire

Name..... Occupation.....

R. F. D., Box No. or Street and No.....

Post Office..... State.....

If your shipping point is different from your post office fill in line below

Send Shipment to.....

FREE CATALOG { If you want the Free Catalog Only, Send No Money, put an X here ☐ and write your name and address plainly on the above lines.

Don't Build Fires BURN FREE AIR

Remarkable new device takes one part of coal oil (kerosene), and TWENTY parts air and turns them into gas. Much cheaper than city gas. Inserted in a minute in your present heater, range or furnace. Cuts your housework in half. No fires to build, no coal to buy, no wood to haul, no dirt or ashes. Brilliant, intense heat in a few seconds. Warm, cheerful rooms to dress in, even during coldest blizzard.

A Warm House as Soon as You Arise-Cuts Housework ½

Twist wrist. Fire ready in few seconds. Rooms warm in few minutes.

Evenly distributed, and steady oven heat for perfect baking. Government Experts, Domestic Scientists and Architects recommend and use oil-gas now in preference to other fuels. New discovery "Nu-Heat" is latest best and lower priced. Three times the heat of coal. Absolutely safe. Iron-clad guarantee. 30 days' free trial. Don't buy coal—burn air, it's free. Write to-day on letter or postcard for free information. Mention if you have a heater, range or furnace.

AGENTS Make $50.00 to $200.00 a week. Full or spare time. Personal co-operation. Write quick for exclusive territory and free sample case offer.

WADE HILL MFG. CO
Dept. 98, St. Louis, Missouri

FREE

— this big book, accurately describing human diseases and those of horses, cattle, sheep, swine, dogs, cats, poultry and birds. Symptoms and treatment explained in detail, in plain, everyday language. Like a doctor in your family. Also contains slashed, rock-bottom, wholesale-to-consumer prices on drugs, chemicals, toilet goods, rubber goods, antitoxins, veterinary instruments, sundries, etc. Send for your copy today—it's FREE, POSTPAID.

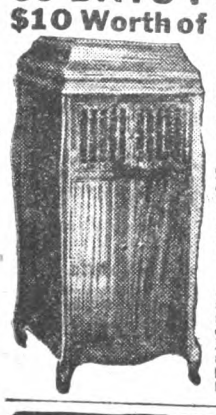
Hospital Products Co.
Dept. 9, 2806-2808 Roosevelt Road, CHICAGO

How Many Pounds Would You Like To Gain in a Week?

If you are thin and want to gain weight, weak and want to be strong, I will send you a sample of famous Alexander Vitamines absolutely Free. No money, just name and address for sample. Alexander Laboratories, 1202 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo.

31 Pc. DINNER SET GIVEN

SEND NO MONEY
SIMPLY SEND NAME AND ADDRESS



Exquisite Dinner Set

Easy to Earn. Just Give Away 12 Big Colored Art Pictures FREE to your friends with 12 Boxes famous White Cloverine at 25c each as explained in new big illustrated catalog of 100 marvelous gifts; musical instruments, aluminum ware, new octagon dish set, wrist watches, and many other startling new gifts for home and personal use. Millions use Cloverine (a wonderful household necessity) daily the year 'round for chapped hands, faces, pimples, colds, etc. Easiest and squarest plan for twenty-eight years makes us most reliable. Write quick. Be first in your town. Cloverine and pictures sent same day order received.

The Wilson Chem. Co., Dept. D16, Tyrone, Pa.

30 DAYS FREE TRIAL
$10 Worth of Records FREE

Simply wonderful! The limit of value giving! Just think! A GENUINE DAVIS PHONOGRAPH on 30 Days' Free Trial, and on terms as low as $2 A MONTH in case you decide to buy. Magnificent instruments in quartered oak or mahogany piano finished cases, equipped with the finest worm gear motors, rich toned machines — at less than half the standard prices—and $10 worth of records FREE.

Send No Money

Just a postal with your name and address. Only a limited number of machines shipped on this extra-liberal offer. Better act quickly. This is a life-time opportunity.

DAVIS, 314 West 43rd St. Dept. F-82, CHICAGO

A Business College Course AT HOME

Bookkeeping, Shorthand, Salesmanship, Civil Service, Higher Accounting

Trained workers earn big Salaries. Write for free catalog.

Brown's Home Study School
600A Brown Bldg., Peoria, Ill.

Better Babies and Happier Mothers

By C. F. Sweeney, M. D.

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

STATISTICS tell us that in 1918 twenty-three thousand women died in the United States from causes connected with child birth, and of course the actual number is far more than this, as in some sections of the country causes of death are not reported or recorded. Each year more than two hundred and fifty thousand babies, about one-eighth of the total number born, die before they reach the age of twelve months.

There is no question but what a large percentage of these deaths of mothers and babies are due to ignorance and neglect and could be prevented.

The many unnecessary and preventable dangers never designed by Nature to be attendant on motherhood and babyhood can and should be eliminated by care and forethought.

Motherhood lends to the life of a woman the sublime qualities which are the guide of the human race—pity and love.

In the feelings which motherhood inspires reside the best elements of moral perfection.

In shielding with her protection the defenceless young being for whom she has passed through the valley where the angels' whispers are almost audible, in pressing to her heart the creature thus consecrated by her travail pains, in letting herself be seized with love for the still unconscious child, who can repay her only with ingratitude and misunderstanding, woman is clothed with divine beauty, suffering and love.

All that is best in creation shines in motherhood affection, and rekindles with boundless hope the human race of every age.

For this source of love gushes forth for all, leaves within our souls unforgetable and imperishable traces and lightens with its blessed tenderness the hardest paths of our Calvary and darkest recesses of our hearts.

Motherhood, childbearing is the most wonderful, the most sacred thing the world has ever known or will ever know, whether it be the Wonderful Child born in that lowly manger or the offspring of the most ignorant and obscure individual that comes to our shores.

This being the case, tell me if you can, why an intelligent American public does not dare discuss maternity freely, fully, out in the open before their children and not consider it a subject to be discussed only in whispers, or in hospitals by nurses and physicians. I hope I shall live to see the time when we foolish physicians do not have to look intelligent children in the eye and plead guilty of bringing them a sister or brother in our black bag or that mother has now another premium from a soap order.

These children as they look back cannot respect the parties in these foolish, deceitful lies, but, alas, they must forgive them as history repeats itself, and they later, hand on the same to their children.

It has been my misfortune to hear girls who had paid dearly for their ignorance cry out, "Why did not mother tell me about these things", and more than one mother say, "My daughter has learned her lesson". Yes, she has learned her lesson, paid tuition with pain and sorrow; but madam, if you had learned your lesson and knew the duty of a true mother, all of this could have been prevented.

The first step to be taken in order to lessen the mortality of mothers and babies is to have the health and strength of the parents improved. The world is not yet ready for any radical step along these lines, but the time will come when getting a marriage license will be an important matter, and both parties will have to pass a thorough medical examination, which will include a blood test so as to make it impossible to infect each other or hand down any blood-taint to their offspring.

There is more truth than poetry to the statement made in the Bible when it says that, "the sins of the father shall be handed down from generation to generation."

We now come to pregnancy and I wish to say right here that the most delightful moment in the lives of a happily married couple is the time when the first baby arrives, strong and well and without excessive suffering on the part of the mother, nor injury to her health. And such should be the happy consummation when there is no impediment to hinder or prevent the normal course of Nature in the performance of her most wonderful work in the unceasing repetition of that miracle—the reproduction of life.

What should a pregnant woman do? Lead a happy normal life, avoiding excitement, sexual and otherwise. Do not diet but remember she is feeding two people instead of one, and eat nourishing food rather than things that tempt the palate. Keep the bowels regular and know that the kidneys are performing their proper function. This last can be proven by occasional examination of urine. If this analysis is not possible, any patient can drink plenty of pure water, and if danger signals present themselves, like severe headaches, swelling hands and feet, go on a strict milk diet, flush bowels with Sulphate of Magnesia, apply counter irritation over the small of back. Continue this treatment until all symptoms subside.

Pregnancy is a normal physiological condition, and it is the exception to the rule for things to go wrong, but it is these exceptions that we must appreciate and treat properly.

The breasts do not need any great attention except only if there is any discharge. This can be checked by a snug binder worn for a few days. And during the latter weeks of pregnancy the breasts may be hardened by bathing with solution of tannin and alcohol.

Pregnancy should last 280 days, and if the last day of last menstruation was January 1st, the baby should arrive October 8th.

The expectant mother should spend her spare time getting the baby's wardrobe ready, and this should consist of at least one flannel wrapping or receiving blanket, four knitted abdominal bands, four knitted shirts, four flannel petticoats, three night gowns, four to eight cotton slips, three wraps or blankets and five dozen diapers. Do not discuss baby's coming with anyone who has a long list of calamities to tell you about, but with people who have had a happy normal birth or births, such as yours is to be.

It has been my displeasure to sit during the still dark hours of the night and hear these tales of woe told to an expectant mother who was nervous, when it seemed as if I should be obliged to adopt drastic measures, but had to refrain from doing so in the interests of peace and harmony. Most of these old-fashioned nurses are wonderful as they have had many of their own (and lost some) but they do delight in telling of the accidents, forgetting the many, many thousands that are normal as they should be. If it ever happens that you have to choose between an inexperienced nurse who will do exactly what she is told or an experienced one who knows a few things herself, by all means choose the former.

The newly arrived baby is wrapped in a soft wool or outing flannel blanket, previously made warm by brick or hot water bottle, then wrapped with another warm blanket, laid on its right side with small opening above to admit fresh air. A hot water bag should then be laid against the blankets instead of upon them because of its weight. After the mother has been made comfortable, the baby should be thoroughly oiled with olive oil, white vaseline or unsalted lard, as these dissolve the protective substance that covers the skin. Wrap the navel cord in clean absorbent cotton, see that it is not bleeding and put on abdominal binder with end of navel pointing toward the chin. The nurse should observe that the baby is breathing properly, its color good, that it is warm, properly covered and lying on right side. After it has slept at least four or five hours, it should be bathed and dressed. Very soon after baby is born, the attendants should drop a few drops in each eye of either a one per cent. of Nitrate of Silver solution or 15 per cent. Argyrol solution. This is most important and has saved many cases of blindness and should be required by law in all the States, as it is in many. In washing baby, be careful not to get soap in baby's eyes, and it is best not to use soap on face for this reason. Just a line in regard to the navel string. It must be tied carefully and cut one and one-half inches from the umbilicus, and it is best to put on flannel band over it, and this is especially important if baby is inclined to cry or cough.

Umbilical hernia in babies is getting to be far too common, and yet it is preventable in all cases. The baby's bowels and kidneys should move within twenty-four hours, the mother's by the third day.

After the baby has been washed and dressed and the mother rested, it should be put to the breast. This is important as baby needs the colostrum which acts as a laxative in clearing the bowels. Every healthy mother should try and nurse her baby, as mother's milk is the ideal food and is something that even the greatest chemists cannot even imitate.

The lying-in room should be the most comfortable and most quiet in the house, and the mother should lie abed ten days or two weeks at least and not know about the incidents and accidents of the rest of the household.

Inexperienced mothers are often greatly at loss to know whether a baby is properly thriving or not, and may be unduly alarmed at small matters, or may not understand the serious nature of certain conditions.

It may be helpful to mention the leading characteristics of a normal, healthy baby, and the mothers may assume that the lack of these conditions shows temporarily, or otherwise, the baby is not in perfect health. These indications of health are:

A steady gain in weight, bowel movements of the normal number, color and consistency, absence of vomiting or regurgitation of food, a good appetite, a clear skin, bright wide open eyes, alert springy muscles, which respond readily to any stimulus, a contented expression, very little crying, quiet unbroken sleep with eyes and mouth tightly closed, no evidence of pain or discomfort, a constant growth in stature and intelligence. The baby learns to hold up its head during the fourth month. He laughs aloud from the third to the fifth month. He reaches for toys and holds them from the fifth to the seventh month. At seven or eight months, he is usually able to sit erect and hold the spine upright, and the first lower teeth appear. During the ninth and tenth months he makes the first attempts to bear his weight on the feet and can usually stand with assistance at eleven or twelve months. At one year, baby can usually speak a few words and at the end of second year baby makes short sentences. Children differ in the rapidity of their development, some slower, some faster; therefore, the mother should not be unduly alarmed at variations from this description of a normal child.

A baby should not be hurried either in learning to walk or talk, and if a baby seems nervous or with a large head, the more quiet it is kept the better. If they are encouraged to walk before their legs are strong enough, bow legs result.

The two most important qualifications for a person entrusted with the care of babies are patience and unselfishness, and with a fond memory of a good mother who brought up ten children oftentimes with not the best of everything to do with, but with a gentleness and devotion that made even long hard nights nursing seem a pleasure, I submit this paper with the following toast—God Bless the Mothers.

Why Have a Sour Stomach

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets After Meals Insure a Sweet Stomach From All Dyspeptic Distresses.

You have probably been through the experience when your stomach went sour and filled with gas and nothing at hand to give relief. And after two or three days you got over it. It took that time for the stomach to right itself naturally. But why go through such misery? If you chew one or two Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after eating you can have pie and cheese, doughnuts, baked beans, steak and fried onions, sausage and so on for your three meals a day and not have a sour stomach with gas, belching fullness, pressure and the misery that comes from an ill stomach due to indigestion. The reason is that these tablets supply the stomach with an alkaline effect that neutralizes the acid, hence the stomach becomes calm and sweet. If you find you are a chronic dyspeptic and afraid to eat get a 60 cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets of any druggist and get back your eating appetite.

Be a Nurse

Learn In Spare Time at Home

Earn $30-35 a Week

Every woman should learn. We train Beginners, Practical Nurses, Mothers and Religious Workers by our Fascinating Home-study Method. Leading Chicago System. Endorsed by physicians. Established 25 years.

Earn While Learning

If you are over 18 and under 45 years write for Illustrated booklet and 32 Sample Lesson Pages with FREE details of Money-back Contract and FREE NURSES EQUIPMENT.

CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Become Independent
Dept. 289 421 South Ashland Boulevard Chicago

"Mizpah" Baby Nipples

Do not collapse—Prevent much colic Sample Free to Mothers and Doctors.

Valve (A-B) prevents vacuum. Inside ribs prevent collapsing when child bites nipple. Rim is made so nipple cannot be pulled off bottle. Guard your babe's health. Send no money! We send you a sample nipple free, postpaid on request. Write now to

THE WALTER F. WARE CO., Dept. A
Philadelphia, Pa.

THIS BIG BEAUTIFUL SLEEPING DOLL FREE

This big doll is jointed at the Elbows, Shoulders, Knees and Hips. Has Turning Head, Closing Eyes, Beautiful Hair, Pearly Teeth. She is elaborately dressed, wears a swell little bonnet, and a complete outfit of lace trimmed underwear, also shoes and socks that you can take off and put on. We send this big doll to you, also Doll's Carriage, both free for selling only 20 packs Standard Bluing at 10 cents. Write today.

STANDARD BLUING CO.,
DEPT. 726, ATTLEBORO, MASS.

FREE BRACELET WATCH

RUSH your name and we will tell you HOW you can get this handsome 7-jewel 10-year guaranteed gold-filled Bracelet Watch ABSOLUTELY FREE. Bracelet Watch comes in an elaborate velvet box. Write at once for FREE Watch Plan.

HOME SUPPLY CO.
131 Duane St., Dept. 52, N.Y.

Crocheted Kimono Sleeve Sweater

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 24.)

turn, skip 1, 1 s c in each st, ch 1, turn. Repeat until belt is about 25 inches long, make 2 buttonholes, then add 4 rows more. Make straps of white wool of singles a little wider than the belt. Sew to side seams and run belt through. Face the under side of the left front with a piece of ribbon before sewing on the buttons.

U. S. Drinks Half the World's Coffee

Of a world coffee production of 2,500,000,000 pounds for the year ending June 30th, states a report of the National Coffee Roaster's Association, the United States consumed 1,281,601,596 pounds.

It is noted that since the enactment of national prohibition coffee drinking has increased 21 per cent., the equivalent of 100 cups per year per capita. Equal distribution of the coffee consumed during the year ended June 30th provides 484 cups of the beverage for every man, woman and child in the United States for the year.

$1000 Prize Novel The Great Fiction Sensation of 1923, for 15cts

THE PATHFINDER, the popular national weekly magazine with over half a million subscribers, has made another ten-strike in securing serial rights to the $1000 Pulitzer Prize Story, "One of Ours." Willa Cather, concededly the foremost living woman novelist, has put so much of love, adventure, realism and excitement into this gripping, fascinating tale that hundreds of thousands are being sold in book form at $2.50. This story will cost regular readers of THE PATHFINDER nothing but new trial subscribers may also have this complete prize novel by sending in applications at once, with 15 cents. Besides this complete prize novel these issues of THE PATHFINDER will contain many short stories, up-to-the-minute interpretations of what is going on all over the world, and many other absorbingly interesting features that will keep the whole family informed and entertained for three months. "One of Ours" begins at once and as it will be difficult to supply back numbers your order, with 15 cents, should be mailed promptly to THE PATHFINDER, 404 Langdon Sta., Washington, D. C.

"One of the best pieces of fiction writing that has been done in America. We are almost prepared to say that "One of Ours" is that Great American Novel which has been so long in coming." New York Globe.

See How Easily You Can Obtain from COMFORT Patterns and Stamped Goods for Embroidery

TO brighten up the home, to give rooms a cozier atmosphere and to improve one's spare time.—these in part, are the obvious results that make needlework a permanent diversion in every worth-while American home but foremost of its charm is the irresistible fascination to make beautiful things with one's own hands.

To watch a design assume beautiful shape, stitch by stitch, brings a thrill of pleasure to the needleworker which only those who have sensed it can appreciate.

The better to perform its mission as the key to happiness and success in its million and a quarter homes, Mr. Gannett has added the "Embroidery Basket" (on page 24) to the many departments of COMFORT and in addition to featuring the latest design and stitches has made it possible for anyone, at slight expense, to obtain the patterns or stamped pieces illustrated and described from month to month.

Designs for the embroidery can be transferred to cloth by either the Hot Iron Transfer pattern or the Perforated Stamping pattern. To stamp with the hot iron method one needs only to spread the cloth smoothly on a table or ironing board and then place the pattern printed side down on the cloth and run a hot iron over the pattern.

The perforated pattern, as the name implies, has a series of perforations which correspond with the design to be worked, but is transferred to the cloth by a brush and stencil ink. The value of the perforated pattern is in its permanence. With care it can be used dozens of times. The hot iron pattern can be used but once.

Some there will be also who will prefer to obtain the design, all ready to work, stamped on a good-quality serviceable cloth.

Make your own choice from the four patterns shown on page 24, then order by name and number from the following list:

SCARF—W-1
Stamped on tan linen (18 x 54)	$1.50
Hot Iron transfer pattern	15c
Perforated pattern with transfer materials	25c
Floss to work	60c
18 INCH CENTERPIECE—W-2
Stamped on white linen	50c
Stamped on white Butcher cloth	10c
Hot Iron transfer pattern	10c
Perforated pattern with transfer materials	25c
Floss to work	35c
Thread for edge	10c
36 INCH SQUARE—W-3
Stamped on unbleached muslin	60c
Hot Iron transfer pattern	10c
Perforated pattern with transfer materials	25c
Floss to work	40c
NAPKINS—W-4
Four napkins 12 inches square stamped on unbleached muslin	40c
Hot Iron transfer pattern	10c
Perforated pattern with transfer materials	15c
Floss to work	40c

Send all orders to "Embroidery Basket", care of COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Clothes for the Woman Who Makes Her Own

By Eveline Vance

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

NO doubt many of COMFORT's readers are using the Home-Made Dress Form, while others have either read or heard of its advantages and are eager for directions for making one for themselves. Right here I will mention the fact that Miss Minnie Zimmerman, president of the Loughton Woman's Institute in Essex, near London, while touring the United States and observing the activities of our extension and home economic department workers, has become so keenly interested in the making of gummed paper dress forms that she intends to introduce this labor-saving device to English housewives as soon as she returns. Thousands of women in this country, especially those in rural districts who can not get help with their sewing, have made dress forms according to instructions given by extension agents so that they can fit their own clothes more easily and remodel old garments.

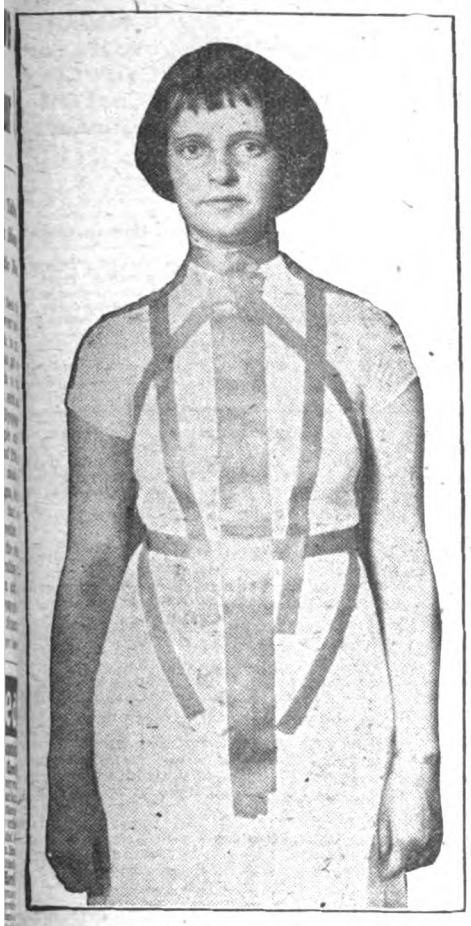

FIG. 1.—SHIRT AND FOUNDATION STRIPS.

However, we have thousands of women readers, who, for various reasons, cannot avail themselves of the instruction given through the extension work in home economics which is being carried on by the U. S. Department of Agriculture in cooperation with State Agricultural Colleges, and for the benefit of these, COMFORT is giving a carefully prepared description for making the gummed paper dress form together with illustrations which show the work in four different stages.

Every woman knows it is to her advantage to dress well, which does not mean she must have many or expensive clothes, but rather that she must be dressed suitably for her needs, becomingly and have a certain style which only a well-fitting garment can produce. For years the thing that bothered women in making their own dresses was the difficulty encountered in getting the garment properly fitted on themselves, but that difficulty can now be entirely overcome, for the home-made form is, naturally, an exact replica of the figure. One woman of a group helping each other make dress forms, and who chanced to be both fat and short, was heard to exclaim, "Well, this is the first time I ever saw myself as others see me, and I am going to start right in getting thin." Needless to say the remark made by this woman contained a sermon that should make us all desire to "see ourselves," that we may know beyond a doubt if our shoulders are back, or if we are acquiring an all too common slouchy attitude so destructive to health and good appearance.

The original gummed paper dress form seems to have come from one of the southern states and was called the "Home Betty." It requires three persons to do the work to advantage, two besides the model, as it is far too fatiguing for the model to stand long enough for one worker to apply all the strips. Even the fourth person would be useful providing they all work with understanding. There should be a head-worker who will also direct and thus prevent confusion.

How the Writer Made the Dress-Form Here Pictured

NECESSARY MATERIALS.—A gauze shirt, with high neck and cap sleeves, which measures six inches smaller than the regulation bust size. For instance: for a figure of 38, a 32 bust size would give the proper fit for dress-form foundation, as the gauze stretches smooth and prevents the possibility of wrinkles. One roll of inch-wide gummed paper. A piece of board, not less than three-eighths of an inch thick, to form a base if the dress-form is not to be mounted on a standard. Other materials are a sponge or cloth in a small dish of water, needle and thread sharp scissors, pencil and yardstick.

To make the form proof against moisture it should be given a protective coat of shellac or varnish inside and out, after it is thoroughly dry. A small brush and about a half pint of shellac will do the work.

FIG. 3.—ONE-HALF OF COMPLETE FORM.

It is well to have a basin of warm water and a towel for wiping sticky fingers.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS.—The model should stand still. If she twists about or moves head or arms, she may stretch the moist paper or pull the strips out of place.

The work should be done as quickly as possible without sacrificing accuracy. All preliminary preparations should be made with the model seated. The actual pasting on of the strips should not take more than an hour and a quarter. A practiced team can do it in a much shorter time.

The strips should be moistened enough to soften the glue thoroughly, but should not be too moist. Beginners should take care that they do not wipe off the glue instead of merely softening it.

Where the ends meet, they should be lapped just enough to insure strength, as over-lapping will destroy the exactness of the form.

While the first layer must be well and strongly constructed, the same regard for appearance is not necessary with this layer as with the outside layer.

There can be no fixed rule for applying all of the strips. For instance, the curves of a large, stout woman will require different treatment than where the figure is straight and slender. The important consideration is to have two coats of paper, each to fit smoothly and of uniform thickness.

FIG. 4.—APPLYING SHELLAC.

While the shirts made especially for the gummed paper forms are far superior to any other, it is possible to construct a makeshift from an ordinary shirt. If this is necessary, rip the buttonhole section off the front of a high-necked shirt, cut off the sleeves half way between shoulder and elbow, and from an old shirt cut a strip crossways (not bias) wide enough to sew on to the neck edge of shirt from which the finish has been trimmed, and to extend nearly to the ears. Remember the shirt is to be six inches smaller than the bust measure, which will bring the collar down to neck-band height when the front of shirt and ends of collar are sewed together.

PREPARATION.—All usual graments should be worn except the dress, taking care to have a comparatively smooth surface over which to stretch the shirt. Put on the shirt and with strong thread overhand the edges together.

First Coat

Pull the shirt down tightly over the hips, and pass a strip closely around the waist-line. For very heavy figures it may be advisable to make this waistband of surgeon's tape. Next, place a strip around the neck and down the center front and one each side of the front, looping each side strip well onto the center strip. The center strip must follow a straight line for it is through this and through the center back strip that the form is cut from the figure. Following these are some foundation strips that make a degree of rigidity over which to work. Fig. 1 illustrates the first steps in making form.

FRONT.—Fig. 2 shows one-half of first coat finished. If the figure is slight, the strips may be continued to the bottom of the shirt. For a full figure and over the fullest part of the bust it will be necessary to use separate pieces above and below the waist-line. Where necessary, tear the paper at the waist-line and use the balance either above or below the waist, according to length. The strips on the bust may curve toward the center. When they do this, tear off the surplus paper after it is lapped. Use short strips to extend the shoulder.

BACK.—Begin the back on the side already completed in front, lapping the strips on the shoulder and pasting the paper tightly and smoothly down to the waist-line. Paste the strips on the back as for the front.

UNDER ARM.—For a full figure, as shown in illustrations, fill in the space between waist-line and armpit with slanting strips, brought well up under the arm and alternating front and back. For a very heavy figure the strips may be started at the waist-line in center front and center back and carried diagonally across to center back and center front. For a slight figure the strips may be placed horizontally.

BELOW THE WAIST.—Paste strips straight down from the waist-line. Fill in any triangular spaces left between the strips with shorter strips. Be sure the lower part of the form is firm and strong, but do not distort the waist-line by too much overlapping there.

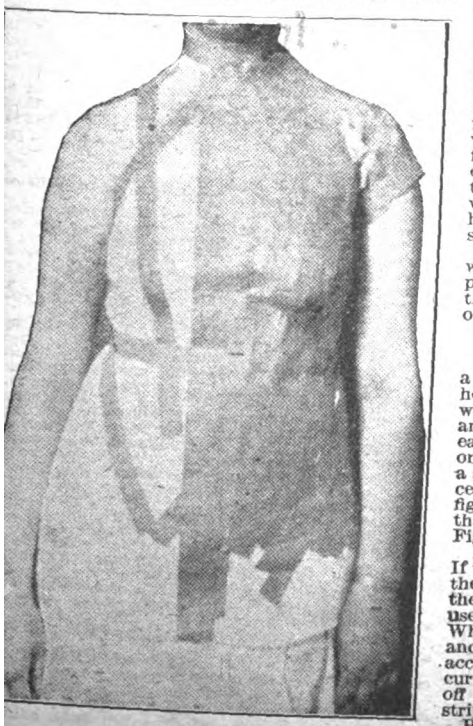

FIG. 2.—ONE-HALF OF FIRST COAT.

Second Coat

Brace the first coat above the waist by placing two or three short strips horizontally at the front and back below the base of the neck. Brace it below the waist by bringing several strips diagonally from waist-line to bottom of form. Several strips placed almost horizontally over the fullest part of the hips will help to stiffen the lower part of the form, which by reason of the spreading of the strips, tends to be less firm than the upper part. Place guide strips on shoulders and under arms to indicate where strips should meet. The front of the second coat, above the waist, should be completed before the work on the back is begun.

FRONT.—Starting from the top of the right shoulder at the neck bring strip diagonally across the chest and well under the left armpit, to the guide strip. Repeat with the left shoulder and continue with alternating strips, crossing at center front, until front is covered to the waist-line. The strips may curve toward the center over the bust.

BACK.—Proceed with the back as with the front.

BELOW THE WAIST.—Place strips as for the first coat. Cover in the ends of the strips at the waist with one or two horizontal strips.

SLEEVES.—To make sleeve, have the model stand with arms slightly akimbo, resting the hands well down on the hips. The pose must be held while the sleeve is being made and until it becomes partially dry. Paste a strip of paper around it as far down as the sleeve is to extend, and loose enough to remove readily. Draw two or three strips snugly up under the armpit and lap them on the shoulder, covering in the edge of the armhole. There will be a few wrinkles under the armpit. Fill in the sleeve with strips passing around the arm and lapping on upper side. Finish sleeve and shoulder by pasting several strips lengthwise from neck to bottom of sleeve, covering in the lapped ends.

Neck.—Place two strips snugly around the neck, making small slashes on the lower side to make them fit smoothly.

MARKING AND REMOVING.—Draw a line down the exact middle of the front and back. Several short lines should be drawn horizontally across the dividing line, both front and back, to serve as guides in bringing the halves of the finished form together. With yardstick and pencil mark several points equidistant from floor around the fullest part of the hips, keeping a record of the distance between hip and floor. Cut a line down the center front and center back, and remove the form. See Fig. 3.

Trim the lower edge on the hip line. Three persons will be needed to put the form together and the work should be done immediately after the form is removed. Cut a number of three-inch strips, moisten one-half and paste them about an inch apart along the front and back edges of one-half of the form. Now place the back edges together, and while two hold the form the third person wets the other half of strips and presses them into position. Finish the front in the same manner. It is well to put long strips on the inside of the form to reinforce the outside short ones. Stand the form on the base and if not quite level it may be trimmed even. Securely tack the form to the wood after it has been coated inside and out with shellac, but it must be thoroughly dry first. See Fig. 4.

Any reader wishing to know where to get the Dress Form Shirt and gummed paper tape can obtain this information by writing to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

In many localities the cooperative making of dress forms has fostered a community spirit which otherwise might never have existed, because thrifty housewives call for material results if they are to give several hours of time away from home, or if they are to give over their kitchen or living-room for holding a "Betty School." Out of the many practical purposes of the dress-form, one is the making of them for girls going away to school or work, for then their clothes can be made at home and sent to them, an appreciated saving, for room and board make a large hole in the pay envelope.

Planning the Winter Wardrobe

With the clear cold days of autumn comes the reminder that the time for changing ginghams for serge, and sweaters for coats is close at hand. We are quite apt to go on enjoying the easy-to-wear summer garments until we find ourselves with nothing suitable on hand unless we can resort to the warmer things which we so gladly hung and packed away last spring. Recently I heard a woman express the wish that all her old clothes could be disposed of and a fresh start made. As I listened it occurred to me that theoretically this idea might be a good starting point; that is, one could make a list of what she would buy if her entire wardrobe was to be "bran-new," then, after making a careful survey of all the garments on hand with full appreciation of their real value, check off from the original list such as could be substituted by cleaning, repairing and remodeling.

With most of us the amount to be spent for clothes is more or less limited and we are searching for ways to stretch the dollar. Every housewife should make a business of taking an inventory of the famiy wardrobe, at least twice a year, just to learn, if for no other reason, how many garments have been little worn because they were not well selected. Good judgment in buying is only acquired by those who learn what they can spend and have full knowledge of the family needs, and the ability to select materials according to their value and appropriateness. Over-zealous clerks are too frequently responsible for the inexperienced or doubtful shopper buying that which later on proves to be far from satisfactory; so one must learn to understand the clerk whose only object is to sell.

Among the mistakes most commonly made is the buying of that which in no way corresponds or harmonizes with the clothes on hand. This practice constitutes a great waste, for one seldom gets much service from badly selected clothing.

A good rule for the one who would reduce the cost of clothing to a practical minimum is to wear simple clothes that require few repairs and remain in fashion. Select styles that will answer the most purposes; select seasonable colors that are becoming and not pronounced, and buy good materials, for they wear the longest and can be remodeled, and a good quality adds very much to the style and general appearance of a garment.

Right Dressing and Fashions

In no sense is the word freedom more expressive than in the present-day dress for women, for they are gradually freeing themselves from the bondage of corsets, and I suspect, if we knew the whole truth, we would be thanking the athletic girl for this blessing. To be in a position to obtain a near-view of the passing throngs at one of our large resorts, is to discover that we are well advanced into a corsetless era, so much more natural and stronger do women walk since the diaphram is no longer held in restraint. While a large per cent. of women and girls have gone from the narrowest type of girdle to no support at all since the dresses that hang straight from the shoulders have come into vogue, the soft waist which is being generally adopted offers a happy medium to those who call for something that can be worn loose and yet give the figure a more definite line without affecting its freedom. These waists have camisole tops, hose supporters front and back and are frequently made with a section of elastic across the hip.

Low-heeled shoes have also made their contribution toward the comfortable dress women are now enjoying, to say nothing of the health benefit they will derive by allowing the spine to maintain the position that nature intended. Women who have long worn high heels that gave their feet such a small surface to balance upon, will experience some discomfort in the change of position which the low-heeled shoes will at first give when walking, because the muscles and ligaments have become weakened through inactivity and they should be strengthened gradually by changing several times a day from the low to higher heels. Shoes for all purposes are now seen with low heels, so it becomes an individual matter as to the style of heel a woman wears. Already high heels on the street appear in bad taste and it is predicted that they will disappear entirely.

Costumes that Meet the Average Demand

By "average" I mean clothes for street wear, motoring, afternoons at home, church and informal social affairs.

Under the term "sport" clothes is a range of styles that have gone a long way toward revolutionizing women's dress. These styles have come to stay and are worn in attractive combinations. Except for indoors they are less seen in cold winter weather, but as many of COMFORT's readers migrate to, or live in the warmer climes a little talk on sport clothes will not come amiss. One of the earliest combinations was the short sport skirts, the shirt waist and sweater, and today it is as "strong" as ever. To waists have been added the slip-over blouse, which is merely a waist worn outside the skirt and finished with a four-inch band large enough to slip over the shoulders. All descriptions of sweaters are seen. New ones are added to the list, but a sweater that fits well in any style is wearable. The sleeveless sweater, which meets below the waist-line in front and fastens with four pearl buttons shares in newness with the plain tailored coat-sweater which is made in a fine firm weave. The slip-over sweater with round or V neck is still in vogue and can be highly recommended for school-room wear.

Of skirts, there is a wide range to choose from, the plaited ones being quite in favor just at present. Sport models are excellent for street wear, motoring and many informal gatherings. For extra warmth, capes of homespun and Scotch mixtures are worn and they add a touch of smartness as well.

For church, street and many other occasions nothing is better than a plain, well-fitted and made suit. Navy-blue suitings, small two-toned even checks, colored homespuns and Scotch mixtures make the most useful suits, and if cut on simple lines, the coats can be worn with sport skirts that harmonize in color. In this way two different costumes can be made from one coat and two skirts; which illustrates the advantage of considering the whole wardrobe from the point of harmony, when adding a garment to it. A simple hat, with scarf to match, that indicates the tones of the skirt will give the suit-coat an entirely different appearance. For more formal occasions the suit is worn with a fancy silk blouse and a small fur piece at the neck. Capes, mantles, loose coats and the cape suits are all shown in great variety, and surely nothing could be better looking or more useful.

Dresses that hang from the shoulders or are slightly held in at a low waist to suggest a blouse are the principles on which most of the dresses are made this season. Among the special features in the thin materials are one or two rows of plaiting around the bottom which extends to the knee, or may form two-thirds of the entire length of skirt. The short sleeves are trimmed with a plaiting, while the neck is piped. Figured or striped silk dresses are extremely simple in lines and may have side ruffles of the same material which extend from waist to hem. Hip trimmings are seen in square knots with sash ends, narrow ribbons around the waist which end at the hip with loops and ends, narrow soft folds of dress material terminating with a rosette or ornament, straight six-inch wide strips sewed on one edge to the side of skirt and left free at both ends to fall in graceful folds. Berthas have again made their appearance, adding a pleasing feature to otherwise very simple dresses. On the wool dresses they are made of ribbon which is fulled by pulling a thread in the selvage until the ribbon lays nearly flat on the lower edge. Some of these ribbons are made with one edge scalloped, while straight edges are sometimes finished with flimsy lace tinted to harmonize. Some of the berthas are made of the dress material with scalloped and bound edge to match the bottom edge of skirt. Others are of lace edges, or of net with inserts.

Over-blouses are shown in a variety of material, and styles, though the keynote is always the simple line. Many of them hang straight from the neck to lower edge, slightly held in at the hip line with gathers which are concealed with narrow string ties with loops and ends falling below blouse. Other blouses are slightly gathered all around, or over the hips into a four-inch band wide enough to step over the shoulders, or in case of large hips the band and under-arm seams for about three inches are finished open and fastened with snaps. The surplice front which closes well to the left is usually finished with the straight coat collar which is often of a contrasting material and color, many of the necks and sleeves are finished with a piping, while other necks have fitted collars.

Making Over Dresses

Old clothes should be thoroughly cleaned and pressed before being made over. Frequently two garments can be combined to excellent advantage in a straight dress, as many are made with two materials of the same color, or of a plain color combined with a striped, figured or flowered silk. In using the same colors the difference in materials should be very marked, such as velvet and a smooth wool material. The tops of these dresses may extend below the narrow string sash or end well above the waist-line where often they are finished in panel fashion or in long horizontal curves.

Many a pretty blouse is made from old silk dresses velvet or light-weight woolens. The bib collar cut square or round, shallow or deep, can be made of odd buts of organdy or lace and give an up-to-date touch to a made-over dress or blouse. As skirts are beginning to show a slight side-flare, the wide gored skirts can be brought into use recutting the gored edges until they meet the required width measurement.

Old coats of light-weight suitings can be made into over-blouses and attractively finished with soft satin collar, cuffs and band in the same shade. A careful selection of color must be made when combining new with old material.

A word regarding fall and winter color combinations well assist the woman who is substituting old for new clothes. Brown in variations lead, and these combine most effectively with henna, or a touch of turquoise blue and salmon pink in simple trimmings. Green, a favorite color during the summer, will be worn in the darker shades, but brown is better for a winter color as it suggests warmth, while green is cold. Shades of red from old coral to deep wine will share with brown in popularity. Red is effective in winter, but don't over-do it. Touches of rich tans or soft grays blend well with the red shades. Navy-blue seems never to lose its hold and can safely be worn in all materials for all occasions. Black in soft materials is particularly good for simple evening gowns and when worn with a string of white or cream-colored beads the effect is most pleasing.

Special Worsted 10 Colors 3¾ oz. 50c.

KNITTING YARNS

Regular Beacon sample card containing samples of over 200 colors of assorted grades of yarn with illustrated instruction leaflets of latest styles sent

FREE ON REQUEST

BEACON WORSTED CO., Dept. 16
112-119 East 19th Street, N. Y.

BY KATE V. SAINT MAUR.

September Work

NEGLECT of any sort at this crucial time will invariably affect the supply of winter eggs, on which the real profit of the year depends. Poultry houses must be put into thorough repair and sanitary condition before the first of October, so that the birds may be placed in their winter quarters and not again disturbed.

It is my own custom to go over all the buildings in the chicken yard, mend any cracks or holes which may be found, and paint the roofs with liquid tar. The floors are scraped out to the depth of two or three inches, perches and nest boxes taken out, and the whole interior given a coat of hot whitewash. To make the whitewash, three quarts of fresh lime are placed in a pail and just covered with hot water. When the mixture commences to boil, it is stirred until the lumps are dissolved, and as it thickens, boiling skim-milk is added until it is of the consistency of cream. Lastly, a cupful of crude carbolic acid, a pound of whiting and a half pound of powdered glue are mixed in. This makes a wash which sticks almost as well as paint, and which, when applied hot, effectually banishes vermin.

Cleaning a poultry house is a task which must not be done in a slipshod way. Before whitewashing the walls, floor and ceiling with a brush, if you have a garden spray, fill it full of the liquid mixture, and apply it to all the corners, kinks and crevices, for they are the places which harbor vermin, and cannot be reached with an ordinary brush.

When the whitewashing is all done and has had time to dry, the floors are covered with fresh lime, which burns out all the impurities, and after a few hours, dry sand or soil is filled in to the depth of two or three inches. Windows are cleaned, inside and out, so that the sun may have free access; perches and nest boxes are thoroughly scrubbed with kerosene, whitewashed and replaced. When all this is accomplished, the biddies' home is sweet and wholesome.

I try to finish all this work before the fifteenth of the month, so that there will bo no delay in getting the hens into their winter quarters. Any change of houses after pullets have once commenced to lay, invariably stops them, and should cold weather start in before they have regained their equilibrium, much time may be wasted.

Vermin are disagreeable against which the poultry keeper must maintain perpetual war. A good liquid exterminator is made by dissolving crude naptha flakes in kerosene oil, using just as much of the flakes as will dissolve in any given quantity of oil. Paint the roofs, nest boxes, and any supports or frames about the house with the mixture. It does not take very long to do the work. Half an hour every Saturday will increase the birds' comfort and your profit.

Powder to use on the birds can be made for a few cents. Mix thoroughly, equal parts of finely sifted coal ashes and tobacco dust, and moisten with the liquid exterminator. Allow it to dry, and put away in cans for ready use. Tobacco dust can be bought at most florists, and at all seed stores for twelve cents a pound. An empty baking powder tin, with some holes pierced at one end, makes a good dredger.

The birds should be dusted with the powder before being put in a clean house. Hold the hen by the feet, head downwards, and shake the powder well into the feathers. Use plenty of it, and with your hand rub it down into the fluffy parts of the feathers near the skin, and especially near the tail on the body, and under the wings. If you have not been using any such precautions, or when you buy new birds, you ought to go over them every other night for a week. This will make it an easy matter to keep them free from the various pests which seem to have been specially created for the undoing of poultry keepers.

My winter houses are one hundred feet long, twelve feet wide, and are divided into eight compartments, into each of which I put twenty-five layers. This gives them plenty of room for exercise, even when heavy snows necessitate keeping them shut in for days and weeks at a time.

If you have pullets and year-old hens, to secure the best results they should be kept in separate coops, as they require a different amount of food. If you do not have a sufficient number of houses, it would be an easy matter to run a partition through the middle of one house, and so make two compartments.

I spend much of my time at this season of the year watching my hens, both old and young. I don't believe in keeping unprofitable birds through the winter, and the birds which look mopy are consigned to the fattening pen. Even slow, dull-looking pullets are rejected, as I want only bright, energetic birds in the laying houses.

Lazy hens, although they do not produce eggs, fatten easily, and bring as good a price as roosters. Close weeding out of unprofitable birds is really more than half the secret of success, and should be rigidly practiced.

Roosters are not allowed with the hens whose eggs are sold in the market, as infertile eggs are nicer for the table, and will keep fresh longer than fertile eggs. All the male birds are kept in one house and yard, so that they will become friendly and will not fight when distributed.

Hens intended to produce eggs for hatching are allowed free range until November; then they are divided into flocks of twenty-five, and four males are assigned to each flock, two being kept in a coop, two put with the flock, the pairs changing places every week. This prevents favoritism, the usual cause of infertile eggs. I make up my flocks in November, because I start the incubators in December, and like to have the birds running together for three weeks before using the eggs for incubation.

Exercise is of primary importance in the life of laying hens, and every means should be taken to promote activity. The most natural way to do this is to provide a heavier covering of litter on the floor and to scatter small grain broadcast over this once a day, for the birds will scratch in it for hours at a time.

Straw or hay will answer the purpose, but both cost money and take time to cut; so, in October and November, before snow falls, we go into the plantation at the back of the barn and rake up the fallen leaves, placing them in bags, and storing them in a shed near the poultry house. Twice a week, all through a bad winter, a bag is emptied into each compartment. The birds delight to work and scratch among them, which keeps them busy, and also breaks up and converts the leaves into fertilizer for spring use in the garden.

Both ducks and geese are such easy keepers when they have a wide range, that it is advisable for every small farm to keep a flock of either one or the other. Imperial Pekin ducks start early in January, when hens' eggs are bringing very big prices, so the ducks' eggs are a great convenience and economy, as they can be used at home, and usually sell to neighbors for cooking purposes, even if they don't like to eat them. Ducks' eggs make better cakes and custards than do hens' eggs, and people who are living near towns and cities can always dispose of any surplus quantity to confectioners and candymakers.

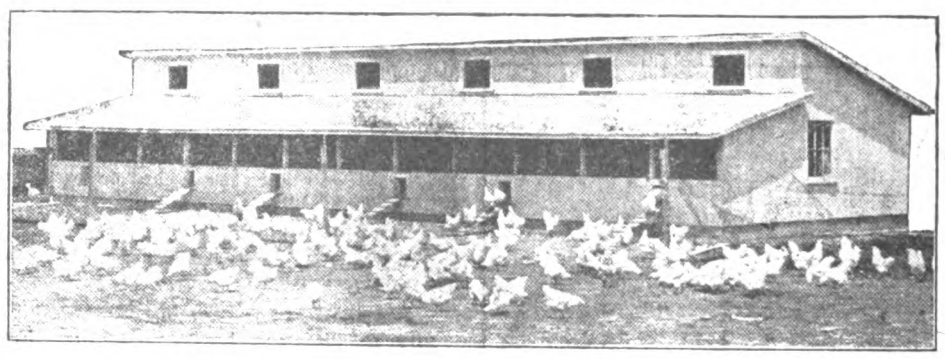
I give you this hint, as it is not advisable to hatch ducks before April in most localities, and by that time hens' eggs have gone down in price so that one does not mind using them in the kitchen.

If you have raised any number of ducks or geese during the last season, now is the time to fatten and market them. Confine them in rather small yards, boil and mash any waste green vegetables, small potatoes, and any other root crop that you may have on hand. When cool, mix about a quart of wheat middlings or cornmeal through a panful, and you will have a good fattening mash for twenty birds, and give them all the skim-milk you can spare in a dish they can only get their bills into, and they will be ready for market within three weeks.

Old ducks and geese, which are to be kept for breeding in the spring, must have a dry place to sleep in, and good feed. Chopped cornstalks or fodder, well steamed, and a little bran, make a good, inexpensive mash. If skim-milk is plentiful, give them some every day, to take the place of insects which they can no longer find for themselves. If there is no milk to spare, get some commercial meat scraps, and mix about a tablespoonful for each bird in a mash three times a week. Also, be careful that they get plenty of grit and water. Ducks and geese often suffer for water on a general farm after outdoor pools and troughs are frozen.

The care the birds receive now will influence their laying and the strength of the ducklings and goslings next spring.

Turkeys



I want to give you a few hints about the care of old turkeys at this season of the year, in the hope that it may help in the raising of young ones in the spring, for during the last few years the number of letters telling about the loss of young turkeys in all parts of the country has been positively appalling, and it all springs from an intestinal disease commonly called blackhead, which is spread through the droppings of infected birds. For this reason I want you to do a little doctoring right now to get the old birds in good condition if possible.

First of all, plow the yards or grounds where the turkeys have been in the habit of congregating, and thoroughly disinfect the roosts or fences which they frequent; then once every week put forty grains of Epsom salts in half a pint of water, and place it where the birds are likely to drink from it in the morning. And before you give them their feed in the morning, mix one grain of sulphate of iron and one grain of silicate of soda and make it into a pill with a little curd cheese or bread which has been moistened with milk. The above amount is for one pill, and each bird should get one of these. At night, again try to force them to drink the water with Epsom salt in it. Or if you have only two or three birds which are pretty tame and easily handled, give them a teaspoonful of castor oil night and morning instead of the salts. Sweep up and burn all the droppings from under the roosts as early as possible in the morning. Repeat this treatment once a week for four weeks. After that time, add seven grains of catechu to every two quarts of drinking water every day for another month. After the first of the year, give the turkeys some of the laying hens' mash every morning, and all through the winter give them a good feed of corn at night.

Subscribers are entitled to advice of our Poultry Editor free, through the columns of this department. Address Poultry Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. BE SURE to give your full name and address, otherwise your letter will receive no attention.

Correspondence

S. M. B.—The chicks have what is called brooder pneumonia, which is caused by a mold spore, which originates in old or mouldy hay or old litter or manure. In advanced stages the symptoms are so like white diarrhea that it is often mistaken for that disease. The vapor of tar or turpentine will sometimes help. Put two tablespoonfuls of the tar in a quart of warm water and let it steep for two or three hours, stirring frequently. Then take a good sized box with a tight fiting lid, put a smaller box or a basket in one corner, and an iron pan in another corner. Make a brick or stone very hot, and place it in an iron kettle, and when all is ready, put the chicks in a small box, and slowly pour some of the hot water on to the hot brick. Close the lid of the large box; after it is filled up with vapor, let the chicks remain about three minutes. This is also a very good remedy for gape worm.

A GOOD TYPE OF SCRATCHING SHED HOUSE.

M. E. B.—Blackhead, a name which is very misleading, as the head turning black is only one of the symptoms which develop occasionally when turkeys are in an advanced stage of the disease, which is especially characterized by sores in the cecum and liver, which are caused by a protozean which has been named Amoebae meleagridis, a minute protoplasmic animal, found to vary between six and ten-millionths of an inch in diameter. While they are microscopic in size, they are at least three to four times larger than the red blood corpuscles, but they are, nevertheless, small enough to float in the blood capillaries of the portal system from the coecu to the liver, where they seem to be stopped from going further. This short description of the parasite contains all that is of general interest. It may be summed up as follows: The amœba is a microscopic animal or parasite capable of living within the tissue of the turkey, its host. It can, therefore, eat, grow, and reproduce itself in large numbers, thereby causing irritations, destruction of the tissues, and nearly always death of the invalid turkeys. The majority of young pullets die after a day or two of droopiness. Adults may droop longer and pass into chronic stages of the disease. Refusing to eat and standing apart are later symptoms. Starvation in chronic cases produces thinness. When the disease in the cecum is light, it is doubtful if the affected birds have diarrhea, which is more or less present in other cases. In many of the older poults the droppings will be liquid, and stained orange yellow; this is the most characteristic symptom of all. Sometimes there are blackened blood clots in the droppings, indicating slight hemorrhages. Experiments show that more than four-fifths of the young poults exposed to infected yards die before they are six weeks old. The disease has been popularly supposed to be one confined to older birds. It is notably a disease affecting young turkeys, but one from which the older turkeys do not escape. Of the one-fifth which do escape or survive its ravages, at least ten to twenty per cent. may die, throughout the year, at almost any age. Examination of the organs is the only sure means of telling the cause of death. The amœbae are transmitted from diseased turkeys to others through the droppings, which contaminate the food with which they come in contact. Evidence obtained here indicates that the amœbae may also be carried by ordinary fowl and may be transmitted by them to turkeys in the same manner. So you see once again the importance of exercising strict cleanliness is impressed upon us poultry people, for if droppings are removed regularly, there is little danger of infection. Plow up the old yards and grounds where poultry usually congregate. Disinfect the coops and houses, and don't let the turkeys roost in the same house with the hens. An open shed is the best place for them, even in zero weather. After blackhead, I think the most serious trouble that assails turkeys is worms. In fact, some authorities declare that they are the fundamental cause of blackhead. Now, I am a strong believer in prevention rather than cure, and my advice is to take time by the forelock and dose the old birds for worms right now. Then there will be less fear of contamination in the spring, when the young ones are around. You may not realize that the old birds have worms, for unless they are very badly affected, they cause the old birds no special inconvenience, nor mater ally affect the health of old birds; but young stock are not strong enough to stand any strain on their vitality, and what is more, all intestinal parasites seem to develop and mature more rapidly in young creatures than in mature stock. Young birds can be kept free if they are properly fed, unless they become contaminated by droppings from other birds. For this reason it is wisdom to purify the old birds, who are strong enough to stand medicine; besides it is easier to dose a few old birds than a lot of youngsters. When the little ones commence to arrive, chop up the green tops of onions and mix with pot cheese or any other soft food you may be using, for at least one feed a day, and don't torture the poor little creatures with red pepper. On cold, wet days, add a little ginger and sugar to the drinking water, making it just about as strong as you would for a baby.

We feed baby turks as follows: Nothing for thirty-six hours, then milk which has been turned with ordinary household rennet, or just allowed to stand in a warm place until thoroughly congealed, then broken, strained through cheese-cloth or a fine sieve, just as one does when making cottage cheese, catching the whey in a pan so that it can be used in a drinking fountain, and then feeding the curds mixed with the dry mash.

Now to the schedule of reduced feeding, which must be rigidly adhered to. Nothing for the first forty-eight hours; after that, hard boiled eggs which have been chopped fine (include the shell.) The young birds must have only the smallest imaginable quantity. If you have one of the little spoons which come with mixed mustard, use it as a measure, and divide that amount among the birds for a day's feed. If you don't use mixed mustard, or haven't such a spoon, a number nine thimble will do, but be sure it is on y half full, and that two birds share the quantity. The fourth day the thimble may be three parts full, and a pinch of finely chopped green stuff added to it (the best green stuffs are tender clover, grass or the green sprouts of oats.) The fifth day, fill the thimble with the chopped egg, and add a tiny pinch of rolled oats and a degree more green stuff. Increase the amount about a grain a day up to the tenth day, at which time the sour milk treatment should commence. At first give just a few grains mixed with still fewer grains of drymash. Increase slightly each day, at the same time decreasing the amount of chopped egg, in such proportions that by the fourteenth day the egg may be entirely discontinued. At this time the birds should be getting one quarter of an ounce of green food, half that quantity of rolled oats, a pinch of dry mash, and half an ounce of curds. This is for each bird. Keep whey before them all the time so that they can drink when they please.

By the third week, the rations should be as follows: Two ounces of green feed, one ounce of rolled oats, half an ounce of dry mash, half a gill of curds, and not quite half an ounce of small mixed grain. Remember that this amount is for one week's ration, and must be divided for seven days. Increase at the same gradual rate as before all the articles of diet except the rolled oats, which should be gradually decreased so that it is entirely left out by the seventh week, when the quantity of feed given each bird for one week should be: Green feed, four and one-half ounces, dry mash, two ounces; curds, about a gill and a half; mixed grain, a trifle over one ounce. Again increase up to the eleventh week, when green feed should be six ounces; dry mash, six ounces; curds, one quart and one gill. At this time, cracked corn and whole wheat in equal parts take the place of small grain, and the amount given should be three ounces. Continue the same rations with a slight increase from week to week until the birds are twenty-four weeks old.

The above schedule is for young birds confined to yards. When the youngsters are allowed free range, after they are two months old, the green food can be entirely omitted, and so can the mixed grain, but they must have the sour milk curds and dry mash given to them before they are allowed out in the morning and when they come up at night.

Read the end of article in first part of the department for this month.

C. F. R., P. P., E. H. C. and A. B.—Please read answer to M. E. B. in this issue.

N. R.—Please read answer to S. M. B. in this issue.

J. J. G.—It seems evident that the hygrometer does not register correctly. Are you sure that the thermometer is true, for if that does not register temperature correctly, you cannot equalize heat and moisture. Take both thermometer and hygrometer to a drug store or a doctor, and have them tested. Are you sure that the incubator is standing perfectly level? You should always use a spirit level to be sure on that point, as it is very important. Run the machine without using a hygrometer, and set a hen at the same time that you start the incubator, and every five days compare the eggs under the hen with those in the machine, using a tester, of course. Then you can regulate the moisture by the air space at the large end of the egg. If the air space in the eggs which are in the incubator develop more rapidly than they do in the eggs under the hen, the evaporation in the machine is too quick or you are airing the eggs too long each day, and you must either put a pan of moist sand or a damp sponge under the egg tray, or, if the difference is not very considerable, just curtail the time of airing the eggs for a few days. Of course, if the conditions are reversed, and the air space in the incubator eggs is not deve oping as much as in the eggs under the hen, air them a little longer each day until the conditions are equal.

W. O. K.—The hygrometer is not absolutely necessary, but it is a help to the amateur. Please read answer to J. J. G. in this issue. The make of incubator that you are using is so arranged that it requires no extra moisture.

A. H. M.—Please read the article in the first part of the department this month.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 9.)

not too long to be printed. It has taken me a long time to write it. Well, now, thanks again to all my cousins for their kindness, and good-by for a little while.

Your loving niece and cousin,
MARJORIE BUCHANAN.

P. S. Some of you asked my middle name; my whole name is Teresa Marjorie Kathleen Buchanan.

Not one of the Family, Marjorie, is going to enjoy your letter more than I did. I truly wish I could have given space to all of it and not cut out a single word. It is no small achievement of brains and energy to write as carefully and completely as you did about your antipodean home, and I offer thanks on behalf of all the Bunch. I hope you may read this copy of COMFORT, Marjorie, somewhere on the shore of a Minnesota lake, with birds you love singing in the pine woods and sunlight shining on cool, wind-rippled water. For Australia may be a wonderful country, Marjorie, but it is a country of wonderful heat. I'll wager you like Minnesota better, and if you never saw any snow in Queensland, you will surely see snow enough this winter to bury the land of any queen or king who ever walked out in a drift without putting on the royal galoshes.

I hope you had a safe and happy trip back home from the Land of Jack Rabbits, Marjorie, and that you'll tell us all about the voyage and your new life, some day in the future when the Minnesota snowflakes are keeping you indoors next to the fire.

BOX 8, SEGUIN, TEXAS.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Here comes a Texan, but I can't say I'm a "talented Texan" or anything like that. Some authors have a habit of saying "and along came a six foot Texan." Now according to my notion that wouldn't be human, much less a Texan. I'd call that a centipede! But nuff of this.

My description wouldn't interest anyone in particular, but it would Uncle Lisha (bless his heart!), I'm sure—because I'm a strawberry blonde. Uncle is always talking about this "Red-headed Division." I am wondering why. Red hair denotes temper, Uncle Lisha.

Everything is nice and green in Texas—especially the poison ivy. My, but you would laugh if you could see me! I'm having a swell time just on account of this same glorious ivy.

ROUGH ON RATS
TRADE MARK
DON'T DIE IN THE HOUSE
Unbeatable Exterminator
GETS every rat where ordinary rat poisons fail. The secret is—you vary the bait by mixing it with a different food each night. Write for free booklet—"Ending Rats and Mice."
E. S. WELLS, Chemist, Jersey City, N. J.

We Pay $7 a Day
taking orders for Can't Clog Coal Oil Burner
Most perfect burner ever invented. Intense blue flame. Can't clog up. Turns any coal or wood stove into a gas stove. Heats oven to baking point in 10 minutes. Cheapest fuel known. Low priced. Sells everywhere. Nothing else like it. Not sold in stores. Write quick for sample.
PARKER MFG. CO., Burner 817, Dayton, Ohio

EARN MONEY AT HOME DURING YOUR SPARE TIME
painting lamp shades, pillow tops for us. No canvassing. Easy and interesting work. Experience unnecessary.
NILEART COMPANY, 2285 Ft. Wayne, Indiana

CHIX 7½c UP 14 varieties. Best laying strains. Big catalog free. Booth Hatchery, Box X, Clinton, Mo.

I sure enjoy reading COMFORT and there isn't any page like "our" page, is there? Uncle Lisha, be a dear and publish this letter won't you? And I'll give Billy a Texas bear hug if he leaves my missive alone.

I know the cousins will write. That is, some of 'em will, won't you? Well, I'll be waiting!

Lovingly your niece, ANNIE LEE BERDWELL

Annie, why do you think I'm the only one that likes strawberry blondes? If I did not like us I'd have to be on bad terms with a large portion of our Big Family, for that carrot-topped, freckle-dressed section just grows and grows. As for red heads being bad tempered, some of the most cheerful and good-natured letters I read I find to be from cousins who optimisticaly describe themselves as "auburn haired." No, Annie; strawberry blondes are just as sweet and nice as strawberries and I'm for 'em both, by saucerfuls and with or without cream.

Gee, it's no fun to have ivy poisoning, Annie. As a kid, I once fell over a rail fence into a patch of the darn ivy, and what happened to me after I have remembered all the eighty-seven years which have elapsed.

Write again, Annie Lee, and tell us just how hot tempered and red haired you are. I wonder if the bobbed-haired red heads have shorter tempers than the rest of the Brilliant Division? Perhaps you know, Annie, and will tell us.

BRANTWOOD, R. 1, BOX 56, WISCONSIN.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

At last I am going to pick up enough courage to let you know there is such a state as Wisconsin. I am an American by birth, although my parents both came to this country from Finland. This part of the state has been settled by Finns who lived here long enough to clear the land and pull up the stumps. Now, however, when the land is all cleared and stumps pulled, the early settlers are moving out and the English-speaking people moving in. I guess a Finn is not satisfied unless he can be a new settler, and when the country gets too open, he moves to another wilderness—not because he has to, but because he wants to! They have been settled the northern parts of Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Now for my description: I am seventeen years old, have light bobbed hair which I am now letting grow, brown eyes and dark eyebrows. I am five feet, three inches tall and a few pounds underweight for my height. As a result of the last-named fact, the county nurse says "drink more milk, milk, milk!" And, oh, how I hate it!

At the present writing I'm spending my vacation at home, but at other times I'm away at school finishing my teacher's course. Last week we had our practice teaching in a rural school. Cousins, you can't imagine what a big feeling it is for you to get up and have a whole school mind you! It's just wonderful! The pupils remarked after we left (there were two of us) that the practice teachers had been "nice," although they were "awfully strict." We ought to maintain good discipline, for that's all we hear at the Training School—"Look after your discipline."

One of my hobbies is writing to strange people whose names I get from departments like our Cousins' Corner. It is a great deal of fun trying to picture the writers of the different letters. Won't you cousins write to me? I'll promise to answer the longest and most interesting letters.

Your Wisconsin cousin, HELEN KAARTUNEN.

Yes, Helen, you Finns are hardy settlers, wilderness lovers and conquerors of waste places. I think your people have preferred the lake-dotted and well-watered sections of Minnesota, Wisconsin and nearby States because of the resemblance the country may have borne to your homeland in Europe. I was in northern Michigan a couple of summers ago, and for a time in Hancock where there are many Finns—as doubtless you know. I talked with many a blue-eyed, two-headed, intelligent-tongued Finnish boy who some day will make a good citizen for Michigan or any other State. You, Helen, as a clever, capable young American, are an example of what our melting pot national life can turn out in the second generation—particularly when this generation is land-born and bred. Such evils as we suffer in our foreign-born or foreign-rooted population are almost always festering in cities. Work on the land, under the sun, is an antiseptic, a purgative. A soul out in the sun sweetens like a milk pail from a Wisconsin dairy!

APTOS, CALIFORNIA

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Well, here I am again—trying to be lucky enough to get this one in print, although I admit the other one didn't have enough in it to Print. I have not been a member very long, but I am very much interested in the League. Seeing that all the cousins describe themselves, I will also; I am fifteen years old, five feet, six and a half inches tall, and weigh about 130 pounds. I have brown eyes and light brown hair.

Back in 1920 when I moved to Aptos, it was one of the deadest little holes in this great State. It was owned by the Spreckles Company, whose headquarters were in San Francisco, with no interest in this place at all. But about a year and a half ago the entire ranch was sold to another company, and this company sold and leased it out. Now all the fields around the town are in artichokes. Five big pumping systems have been put in, and many houses—some very expensive ones—have been built. We have two stores, a barbershop, two ice cream parlors, a shoe shop and a pool room. We are soon going to have a movie house, a butcher shop and a big electric power house. There are only about 250 people here, but we surely are all "up and comin'," as the old saying goes.

We have a nice little home of three acres, just outside of our little city. We raise chickens and Muscovy ducks.

Aptos is just three miles from the great summer resort of Capitola. This boasts of the best fresh water swimming lagoon on the Pacific coast. We are also only seven miles from the city of Santa Cruz, another summer resort.

We have one of the finest beaches here that one could ever see. It is about fifteen miles long and over a hundred yards wide, with pure white sand and a high bank all the way.

My letter is getting long, so I will close, hoping to

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 33.)

A Forgotten Love

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 6.)

to pull most of it away, to kneel with her eyes smarting and her throat stinging, and feed the flame that ran wanderingly over what horsehair she had left.

"Oh, it won't catch!" she muttered, brushing the water from her smarting eyes. "It won't catch!" But even as she said it she heard the first snap of kindling wood.

The lower edge of the door had caught, almost before she knew it was flaming, with the strong draft under the threshold. Sparks flew out in her face as she kept on feeding the fire with the oil-soaked horsehair, that caught, flared, smoked, and was gone.

What could she do if the fire went out? If it burned only a tiny hole she could not get her hand through!

"It shall burn!" she cried fiercely, and tore at the flimsy old table till she had it in pieces. With the oily wick of the lamp to start them they burned like tinder, being old and thin. The door caught smolderingly, higher up; the smoke and the stifling smell were suffocating her, but the fire gained.

Presently she had to get back from it, and lie down on the floor to get the air the fire was drawing under the threshold.

The flames crept to the doorposts, flickered out there, caught the panels higher up with a smell of singeing varnish. But to her sore eyes the door looked strong as ever, scarcely two inches of it had burned away. She drew her skirts about her, and, standing up, drove her foot hard at the door. A charred fragment broke away, but she was afraid to try again. And the floor in front of the threshold was catching.

After all, had she accomplished nothing but to burn herself to death? Would the flames leave the door and creep into the room, filling it with fire, roasting her in slow torture till she died? Between weariness and want of air she was exhausted. She could do no more, and, lying down on the floor for the better breathing, shut her eyes to keep out the pungent, stinging smoke of the horsehair.

Suddenly a wave of heat made her start up, scorching.

The doorpost had caught, the door by the hinges was burning bravely. But the fire was creeping round the edge of the floor, till in a few minutes there would be a ring of flame round her!

It was a duel now between the slow charring of the thick door and the smoldering of the floor that was helped by the little hoards of dust that flared up viciously.

If the door burned faster she might get out; if the floor went first it meant death by inches.

She could not watch them for the stinging of her eyes; her breath hurt her as the room grew slowly to an intolerable heat. So small was it that nowhere could she get farther than six feet from the fire, and she would have stifled long ago if it had not been for invisible cracks in the boarded-over skylight. She thanked Heaven it was not glazed.

A kind of dullness crept over her body that might have deepened to a swoon if it had not been for the pricking torture in her lungs as she drew her difficult breath. Only that saved her from sinking into a stupor that would have ended in death, for little flames were licking round the edges of the floor now, flashing up into the cracks of the surbase, reaching nearer every minute to that huddled figure on the floor.

She dared not raise her head to look at the blazing door lest she should only see that escape was hopeless, only face the agony of death before her sooner than she need. A sharp anguish in one outstretched arm made her scream, sit up, leap to her feet.

The room seemed full of choking smoke, leaping flame. That was creeping fire in a crack of the floor that had burned her, a tongue of flame that had licked up the dust between the boards and died. But next time it would not die! Scarlet and orange the walls glowed in the firelight, black whirls of smoke wreathed up to the skylight, the doorway was the most awful flame of all, a very gate of hell that she must face or die in agony. Cowardice or bravery would make very little difference in that!

Dry-tongued, her throat so scorched she could scarcely breathe, Jacky turned her thick serge skirt up to her knees, holding the doubled folds of it round her with one hand. Her other arm in its cloth jacket-sleeve she held across her face, and so went as near the flaming door as she dared.

That it opened outward was the only thread of hope that upheld her. Whether it was burned through or not she dared not uncover her smarting eyes to see.

Blind, desperate, she stood as near as she could and drove her foot in its thick shoe straight and hard at the hinge of the door.

Sparks, charred, burning fragments, flew back at her in a threating shower that only singed her thick clothes as she shook them off.

With all her strength, she drove her foot again and again at the door. The coat-sleeve covering the arm across her face scorched, singed, burned nearly through where she stood at her hopeless task.

There was a roaring in her ears now, an agonized longing in her lungs for the air that was not in the blazing place; from behind her the fire crept to her very heels. Once more she could try and never again, for her strength was gone.

With all her weight, she kicked once more at the stubborn door, and nearly fell forward into the flame that surged into her face.

The hinges had torn out of the charred wood, the door was open—only a crack, but open—and it was the draft of air from the passage that was sending the blaze into her face. That one breath of air was like a breath from heaven, hot as it was. Hope made her heedless of her scorching skirts, her shoes and stockings that were singeing off her feet as she drove at the door again. And this time it gave, indeed.

It fell away from the burning post a space of some half-yard, and through that narrow gap Jacky Hamilton jumped for her life, over a threshold that flamed high.

Out in the passage she fell, crushing out her smoldering skirts with her hands, brushing the singed ends of her hair out of her eyes; tearing off the smoking boots that blistered hands and feet.

The cold, close air of the shut-up house was rapture to her parched lungs; the dull daylight of the passage rested her eyes after that flaming hell behind her—and she was not on fire! Scorched, singed, blistered, blackened with smoke, she was yet alive—yet free!

She staggered on a few paces, fell, forced herself up again, and leaned against the wall.

"I must get out!" she thought, and could scarcely move. Her back, that she had forgotten, was sickening her with shooting pain.

Were there people in the house, or was it as it seemed, empty?

"Lesard's gone," she thought, "no one else can matter. And the house is on fire, other people would only think of that."

She had no more dread of danger; the fire was in the very top of the house, and would burn everything above it before it crept down. And let it burn as it would, let the house be empty or not, she must make her way out of it as fast as she could; make her way to Gillian in jail, and that Lesard her unfaithfulness had ruined as it had nearly ruined herself.

But she could scarcely drag herself along as she crept to the end of the passage, down a rickety stair; stumbling blindly down other stairs till at last she stood in the empty entrance hall with its locked door.

Through the dirty cracked panes of the fanlight came a gleam of dusty sunshine, the spring sunshine that could be so sweet. It was day there, afternoon by the lowness of the sunbeams—that was why no one had noticed the fiery smoke from the cracked skylight.

Was it burning still? She hardly cared! She leaned against the wall trying to calculate the time she had been in this dreadful house. It seemed like years; she did not realize it had not been twenty-four hours.

With painful fingers she tried to tidy her masses of singed hair. The sunbeam that fell on her showed her blackened face, her blistered hands, her shoeless feet, with rags of stockings half-scorched away. Her beauty was gone from her, but there were no tears in her bloodshot eyes, no quailing of her steadfast spirit as once more she began to creep through the dusty house which, for all she knew, might yet be her death-trap.

Down the kitchen stairs something guided her blistered feet. And the kitchen window was raised a scant inch. Somehow she got it up, the pain of using her scarred hands making her shut her teeth; somehow she scrambled through it, and was free in the deserted mews outside.

Without looking to right or left she stumbled on, and at the entrance to a little court of five or six houses fell headlong on the stones.

A woman in a dirty blue gown gave a sudden cry where she stood at a doorway.

"Look!" she cried to a pallid man in shabby clothes. "For God's sake, look at that."

For Jacky was face down on the pavement, her hair fallen anyhow, her bare feet and hands dreadful in the afternoon light.

"She's dead!" said the woman, with an awe-struck grin.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Brownie's Triumph

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 7.)

her, and made herself offensively free with my son, who is now in Germany," replied Mrs. Coolidge, with every appearance of sorrow that she was obliged to make the confession.

"You'll have to be older than you are now to make me believe that," muttered the old lady, indignantly, in an undertone, as she eyed Isabel, and her mother suspiciously, while Viola and Alma looked the daggers they dare not use to defend their beloved Miss Douglas.

The date of her accident and advent into Lady Randal's house was identical with that of her leaving Mrs. Coolidge, their description of her was the same, and Isabel recalled to Sir Charles the evening of their ramble, when they had seen her at the villa, and she had questioned him regarding the companion.

Every one was convinced now of Brownie's unworthiness, and believed that she had taken herself out of the way because she feared an exposure on the part of Mrs. Coolidge, and dare not meet it; or that she had eloped, but who with, was the question.

All but Lady Ruxley.

Her confidence was unshaken yet.

"I don't believe a word of it," she said to Lady Randal, as she assisted her to her room.

"But, aunt, it must be so. Mrs. Coolidge's word is indisputable."

"Maybe you think so," retorted her ladyship, irritably.

"The evidence is so clear, too," resumed her niece, unheeding her remark. "I have feared from the first that you were being imposed upon. That's always the way with these girls who have no recommendation; they are all adventuresses. I only hope you won't find that she has helped herself from your belongings."

"Shut up, Helen! You are always ready to believe the worst of everybody. I tell you I believe that there has been foul play in this matter, and, if the girl has gone away, she has been driven away in some underhanded manner I can read the signs of the times, if I am superannuated, and I shall not rest until I know more of this matter," and the crusty old lady actually shed tears over the absence of the patient, gentle girl, to whom she was becoming deeply attached.

"The very fact of her giving a false name goes against her," persisted Lady Randal.

"That was not just the thing, of course," was the rather subdued reply. Then she added, as if a new thought struck her: "I believe that I was to blame for that, after all. I had a bad cold at that time, and was as deaf as a post. I am convinced now that she gave me her name correctly, and I misunderstood her, and she, having had trouble with those folks, let it go so."

"She had no business to do that," returned Lady Randal, with an expression of righteous indignation.

"If she never does anything worse than give an assumed name, she'll be better than some folks whom I know. I reckon you've some sins on your conscience, Helen, blacker than any that poor girl ever thought of," said Lady Ruxley, spitefully.

Notwithstanding the general belief that Miss Douglas, as she was now called, had absconded, Sir Charles gave orders that the search should be kept up a while longer.

Something might have happened to her, he reasoned, and he would give her the benefit of the doubt.

About eight o'clock Adrian Dredmond was announced. He had been to Lady Ruxley's villa, but, upon being told that she and her companion were at the Hall, he drove immediately thither.

Lady Randal met him in the hall on her return from Lady Ruxley's apartments.

She greeted him cordially, and then, taking his arm, led him into the drawing-room, where he was received with loud acclamation, for he was a favorite wherever he went.

The conversation ran in a new channel for a few moments after his entrance, but the all-absorbing topic was soon resumed, and Brownie's character was most unmercifully picked to pieces again, while with a terrible sinking at his heart, Adrian soon learned something of what had transpired, and it was with great difficulty that he maintained his composure, hoping to learn more.

But he could not bear the aspersions cast upon his betrothed, and after a terribly scathing remark upon Brownie's virtue from Isabel, followed by a bitter denunciation from Mrs. Coolidge, his indignation burst forth.

He arose, and, with flushed face and blazing eyes, demanded of the latter:

"Of whom do I understand you to be speaking?"

"Of Miss Douglas, Mr. Dredmond—the governess who came to England with us, and who has turned out so sadly," she replied, serenely, and all unconscious of the terrible storm hovering over her head.

"Perhaps you know who is accountable for Miss Douglas's misfortunes since she came abroad?" he returned, meaningly, and with a look that made Isabel's heart quake, for she knew he had seen Brownie lately, and it was possible he, too, knew all the story of their abuse.

But Mrs. Coolidge was, as usual, equal to the occasion.

"Really, no. She told me she knew no one in this country," she returned, with raised eyebrows, and in surprised tones.

"I know something of Miss Douglas, and that she is undeserving a word of the censure which you have heaped upon her this evening; and I demand that you retract every word you have said—all of you!" he said, in tones which could not be mistaken.

There was a sudden hush among the company, while all eyes were fixed upon the young man, towering so proudly in his haughty strength before them.

Mrs. Coolidge felt by no means as easy as she appeared; but hers was a desperate case, and it would not do to relax in the least her vigilance. So she glowered disapprobation and surprise upon him, while Isabel tried to curl her trembling lips in scorn.

"Really, Adrian," soothingly, said Lady Randal who began to be afraid of a quarrel, "I am sorry to see you so excited over this unfortunate affair. "I know you are very philanthropic, but I am afraid you are allowing yourself to become quixotic regarding this very singular young person."

His fine lips curled, and he turned and bowed slightly, as he replied:

"If it is quixotic to defend a pure and lovely girl in her absence from such abuse as you have heaped upon her here tonight, then I plead guilty to the charge. I met Miss Douglas several months ago in the United States. I know that she is as well-born as most of you in this room, and few possess the cultivation and accomplishments which she is mistress of. At the time of which I speak she was believed to be the heiress of more than a million, and moved in circles equal to our own, but sudden misfortune reduced her to the necessity of becoming a governess."

"Why, Adrian, I am astonished! I did not suppose that you knew aught concerning Miss Douglas," replied Lady Randal, beginning to regard the companion rather more leniently.

"Nor I, that he was so interested in the poor but misguided girl," added Mrs. Coolidge, with sarcastic commiseration.

She had never forgiven Adrian's preference for the beautiful governess that night at the opera, and could not now conceal her spite.

He wheeled upon her in an instant.

"I am deeply interested in her, madam. Miss Douglas is my betrothed wife; and I warn you to be very careful how you speak of her in the future. I could say much more, but"—with a glance from Isabel to Sir Charles—"existing circumstances compel me to be silent."

CHAPTER XXXI.

BROWNIE'S STRANGE VISITOR.

Had an earthquake shaken the house at that moment greater consternation could not have prevailed than at this announcement.

"Adrian, surely you are crazy!" almost shrieked Lady Randal, at last. "You make a such mesalliance as that!"

"Call it whatever you choose, madam, but please remember when you speak of Miss Douglas in the future, that you are speaking of the future Lady of Dunforth," he said, coldly, but proudly.

Surely a nobler specimen of manhood never braved the world's scorn than Adrian Dredmond at that moment; and poor Brownie, although in "durance vile" above them, might well look hopefully into the future, which should be passed by the side of such a noble defender as this.

Turning to Sir Charles, he made a signal for him to follow him, and then, with a haughty bow to the assembled company, he withdrew.

"Charles," he exclaimed, seizing his friend's hand when they were alone in the hall, "will you lend me your aid in this trouble? Something is wrong," he went on speaking, in tones of anxiety; "she was expecting me to come to her, and I know she would never have gone away of her own accord!"

"I am constrained to take that view of it now, after what you have told me; although I must confess, before you came, I was inclined to believe the very worst of her. I hope," he added, with some uneasiness, "that you have not been deceived in Miss Douglas."

Adrian's lips curled again.

He knew what he had reference to. Sir Charles believed that something must be wrong or Mrs. Coolidge would not have spoken as she had done.

"The future will disclose whether I have or not," he replied coldly.

"You may depend upon me, Adrian, to do all in my power to unravel this mystery. Miss Douglas certainly appeared like a very lovely person, and until tonight I admired her very much, although I have rarely met her. Believe me, you have my sympathy," and he meant it in more senses than one.

"Thank you, but I am wild in trying to think what has become of the poor child. I am almost tempted to believe——"

He checked himself suddenly.

He was upon the point of saying he feared treachery on the part of the Coolidges; but, remembering that it would not do to speak of them thus in Sir Charles's presence, he stopped.

"What?" Sir Charles demanded, with a curious look.

"I do not know what to believe," Adrian said; then added, suddenly: "You may think what you choose concerning what I have told you tonight, and the world may say what it will, but Miss Douglas is of unexceptional parentage, and I shall marry her just as soon as I am fortunate enough to find her."

After a few more minutes spent in consultation as to the best means of seeking for the lost one, Adrian departed, his heart filled well-nigh to bursting with grief, insulted affection, and anxiety.

* * * * * * * *

"Mamma, did you ever hear anything like it?" demanded Isabel of her mother as soon as they could excuse themselves from the drawing-room and retire to their own rooms.

"No; things are getting terribly mixed up, it seems to me. How, when, where did he meet her again, I wonder?"

"I have it," said Isabel. "Lady Ruxley attended the dinner at Danforth Castle; of course her companion accompanied her, and they met there. It must have been quite recent, I judge."

"Well, he won't find her again for one while, that is sure," returned Mrs. Coolidge, with a savage glitter in her eyes.

"Oh, mamma, you look almost as though you would like to kill her!" Isabel exclaimed, in a frightened whisper.

"I believe I wish she had died before she ever saw Adrian Dredmond," she answered, vindictively. "To think that she should win him, while you will only be a baronet's wife!"

Isabel flushed angrily.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 35.)

The Pretty Girls' Club

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 14.)

as you can, do it rapidly. You can go clear across your room rapidly, while doing this exercise, and it is excellent for ankles. So also is the first exercise given "Brown Eyes."

DOTTIE.—Your weight is about right, and your description of yourself does not indicate many defects to remedy. Your blackheads indicate that you are not quite careful enough about your skin, and perhaps not quite careful enough about your food and your bowels. See what I have said to "Donna" about a daily bodybath. This is essential if your skin is to be kept in good condition. Then your bowels must move once or twice a day fully. If you can buy a soft camel's-hair complexion brush at your druggist's, use it at night on your face, with hot soapy water, scrubbing gently but thoroughly then rinsing in hot water, warm water, cool water, and finally cold water to close the pores. Do not use soap or hot water on the face in the daytime, and of course never rub soap on the face, only dissolve it in the water at night when you are taking your nightly scrub. Use tepid water in the morning, and rinse in cold water. Keep your hair very clean and well cared for—shampooing once in two weeks.

GRACE.—The only way to reduce is to cut out fat-building foods. You are very much too fat, and unless you exercise some self-control now as to eating, you will be a great unwieldly fat woman when you grow up. So, make these resolutions: First, never to eat or "nibble" between meals. Second, to cut out candy, cake, pie, preserves, ice-cream, sodas, etc. until you get your weight down to not more than 110 at the most. You do not need so much food as you are eating. And you do need to change the kind of foods you are eating. You can eat lean meat, and all green vegetables, and all fruits (without sugar), except bananas, and you can eat fish and poultry. So you do not at all need to "starve" yourself. You can eat eggs, so long as they are not fried. You could have for breakfast, for instance, a canteloupe, or a piece of water melon, or a dish of berries, or some sliced peaches without sugar or cream, and then you could have two soft-boiled eggs. That is plenty of breakfast for anyone so much overweight. Then for lunch you can have a salad and some spinach, and any other green vegetables you wish, and some fruit. And for dinner you can have broiled steak or roast beef or a lamb chop or some roast chicken, with string beans or squash, or other vegetables, but no potatoes or rice or macaroni or white bread and butter, and then you can have fruit again for dessert. If you would try to do this, you would find yourself reducing and in three months you would be a very nice looking girl, and glad you had made the attempt. Exercises help to work a little fat off muscles, but nothing does any good in reducing unless one is willing to give up eating the fat-producing foods for a time. You see all foods do not make fat, but candy does, and other sweet things, and gravies and other fat things, and white bread, butter, milk and cream.

Address all letters containing questions to KATHERINE BOOTH, care COMFORT,
AUGUSTA, MAINE.

Stacomb

Prevents "Flying Hair" Even After Washing

Wash your hair as often as you like now, and don't worry about its untidy appearance.

Both men and women know the value of STACOMB. After a shampoo you can comb your hair just as you like it and it will stay neatly combed all day.

Adds luster and leaves the hair soft.

Women find that STACOMB keeps the curl in, and is an excellent aid to permanent waving.

At all drug counters.

Tubes—35c
Jars —75c

Send coupon for Free Trial Tube.

STANDARD LABORATORIES, Inc.,
759 Stanford Ave., Los Angeles, California. Dept. 1C.
Please send me free trial tube.
Name _____
Address _____

REAL BEAUTY
in 20 Minutes

FAR off lands have given to this marvelous skin beautifier—Paris, the home of style and beauty, Egypt, the mysterious, and Florence, the romantic. It makes a new skin, clear and radiantly lovely——smooth and firm, with the rich, fresh glow of youth.

To use, simply cover face and neck thoroughly. Wash off and BEHOLD—a new complexion—a skin soft and velvety. It draws out the impurities, cleans the pores and removes wrinkles, blackheads, pimples and other unsightly and disfiguring blemishes. Prepared and GUARANTEED by a physician.

SPECIAL OFFER!
$5 Jar for $1.45
PLUS POSTAGE

SPECIAL OFFER: You can now secure this miraculous beautifier at a special low price.

SEND NO MONEY—Just send your name and address, and a full $5.00 jar will be sent you. On arrival, pay postman only $1.45 plus postage. If not satisfied your money refunded.
Magic-Klay Co., Station D 30, St. Joseph, Mo.

Clears Skin of Pimples

Remarkable Action of Stuart's Calcium Wafers in Ridding Face of Pimples, Boils, Rash, Blotches, Etc.

You know what a tiny pinch of saleratus does when added to milk and acid. It stops curdling, and this is comparatively the same influence that takes place when you add calcium sulfide to the blood. It is a refining influence. Calcium is the principal agency in Stuart's Calcium Wafers and exerts a peculiar stimulus to skin repair. Pimples, blackheads and other such evidence of localized skin sluggishness are replaced with new material and soon the skin renews itself with firmer, healthier tissue. This makes the beautiful complexion so much admired. No use to hide pimples with cold cream and lotions. These blemishes either come from within or become localized if the calcium influence is lacking and they keep coming until such an influence as calcium is supplied by the blood.

Let nature clear your skin through the influence of Stuart's Calcium Wafers which you can obtain in any drug store at 60 cents a box. These wonder wafers are used by thousands of women who have learned from experience their remarkable influence to make the skin beautiful and keep it so.

Kill The Hair Root

My method is the only way to prevent the hair from growing again. Easy, painless, harmless. No scars. Booklet free. Write today enclosing 3 stamps. We teach beauty culture.
D. J. MAHLER, 119-A, Mahler Park, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

FRECKLES fade and disappear when you use "MURILLO" SUPREME FRECKLE CREAM a sure remedy. Let us prove it. Send 10ct for trial package and three other beauty preparations.
MURILLO CHEM. CO., Dept. 10, Aurora, Ill.

Get The Book FREE!

If you would like to read the whole of this wonderful story at once and learn its thrilling conclusion, rather than wait for the monthly installments as they appear in COMFORT, we shall be glad to make you a present of the complete story in book form. Send us only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, and we will send you a copy of the book free and postpaid.
Address COMFORT,
Augusta, Maine.

One on Dad

"Willie, let me hear you count up to ten."
"One, two, three, five, six, eight, nine, ten."
"Wrong! You skipped two numbers."
"Well, that's the way my father counts."
"Is your father an expert accountant?"
"No'm! He sells gasolene."—Judge.

1000 Talking Dolls Given Away

Get one for nothing. Loveliest doll you ever saw—over 13 inches tall. Big blue eyes that open, close and wink. Golden hair, rosy cheeks and dimples. Dressed in cute pink rompers, trimmed with lace. White socks, patent pumps.

Can Walk, Talk and Sleep
Hold her hand and she walks. Tip her gently and she talks. Falls asleep when you lay her in your arms. A marvelous dolly—can't break or chip!

Mail Postal for Dolly
Just write your name and address on a postal card and mail it to me. I'll tell you how to get one of these beautiful dolls for nothing. Write me now—quick!

Aunt Adeline, Desk 26, 90 Chambers St., N. Y.

FREE—extra shoes, socks & spectacles COUNT THEM Gold finished Necklace, Handsome stone set Bracelet, Hawaiian Ring, Cameo Ring, Persian Brooch, your Birthstone Ring and Signet Ring with your initial. Complete 14-K Gold-Plated Jewelry Outfit Free for selling 20 packets perfumed Sachet at 10c each. Send no money.

LANE MFG. CO., Dept. 198, MT. VERNON, N. Y.

9 pc. TOILET SET FREE

Ivory-finish brush, comb, mirror, etc., in handsome box, all given for selling only 30 cards of best Dress Snap-Fasteners at 10c per card. Easily sold. Get sample lot today. Send no money. We trust you.
American Specialty Co. Box 32-T Lancaster, Pa.

King TUT GOOD LUCK RING — Don't Send a Penny!

Famous Movie Stars wear King TUT'S GOOD LUCK ring. They say it brings success, happiness, love. Over one million sold. Only original LUCKY ring, beware of imitations. Genuine silver finish. Order Today! Was $3, now only $1.95 c.o.d. postage paid. Cash with order $1.75. 2 for $3.25. Be sure to send paper strip for finger size. State if men's, women's boy's or girl's style.
$1.95
GOLD WATCH CO. Dept. 224 3501 S. Michigan Av., CHICAGO

50 Articles FREE

3 Pencils, 2 Penholders, Pens, Ink and Pencil Erasers, Ruler, Pencil Clips, Rubber Bands, Note Book, Pads, 8 colored Crayons, Calenders, Metal Paint Box with 12 Water color Paints, Brushes, and many other articles, all with handsome School Case.
We give this Big 50-piece Combination FREE for selling 18 packets Perfumed Sachet at 10cesch. Order today. Send no Money.
JONES MFG. CO., Dept. 695, ATTLEBORO, MASS.

FREE GENUINE EASTMAN CAMERA & RING
Takes wonderful pictures. Easy to operate.

Both Camera and Ring given for selling 20 pkgs. beautiful Post Cards at 15 cents per package. All sent Postpaid. EXTRA PRIZE for promptness. ORDER TODAY.
D. R. LEE, 29 So. Clinton St., CHICAGO.

MAKE MONEY SELLING GLASSES
Prescriptions filled — Broken lenses duplicated.
Send for Catalog. COULTER OPTICAL CO., Dept. B, Chicago

What Mesmer Found Out

About the year 1770, all Germany, at first, and soon after the rest of Europe, were startled by the announcement that Frederick Anthony Mesmer, a fairly well-known scientist of those days, had discovered a miraculous force that emanated from all human beings. It enabled him to read thoughts, he said, to make others do his bidding, and to effect wonder cures.

One-half of the scientific world branded Mesmer as a charlatan and a fraud, the other half promptly proclaimed him as a discoverer of a new branch of nature knowledge. He was alike feted and abused, admired and ridiculed. Finally, the notoriety he had attained turned his head and he began to make the most extravagant claims. The result was that the really serious part of "Mesmerism" which later led to hypnotism, was submerged in a welter of fantastic theories.

The First Loaf of Wheat Bread

The baking of wheat bread is not the chance development of a custom nor an art of untraceable origin. The man who baked the first loaf is a historical figure of renown.

His name was Ching-Noung, and he was emperor of China about the year 2000 B. C. He was a great friend of the farmer, a ruler of domestic instincts, an innovator in many lines. He milled the flour, he kneaded the dough and he baked the bread. Then, having completed the task, he bade his subjects do likewise.

Europe learned all about the Chinese art of baking wheat bread from a monk, known under the name of Collap Coll Frewi. He told the British about it in the sixth century, and about the same time he carried his knowledge into Germany and France.

In 1300, baking was commercialized by the bakers' guilds of the various European nations.

Bird Builds Several Nests

Some birds get very nervous and become much excited if you approach their nests and among them is the black-throated green warbler, says the American Forestry Association, of Washington, which is conducting the national bird-house building contest for school children. Another thing about this bird is that it frequently builds several nests. Whether this is because it changed its mind after building the first one and decided to select a better location or with the deliberate purpose of deceiving any intruders who might come along is not known. The bird is very beautifully colored, the top of its head and the region nearly down to its shoulders being a yellow green, the back olive green, the throat and breast jet black and the under parts white with some yellow in them at times.

Millinery Book--FREE
Women—Girls—15 or over, can easily learn Millinery Designing and Making during their spare moments IN 10 WEEKS.
Millinery Designers Frequently Earn $45 to $100 a Week
Many Women Start Millinery Parlors in Their Own Homes
Tear Here
Coupon immediately
Franklin Institute Dept. B 824 Rochester, N. Y.
Kindly send me free book, containing sample lessons in Millinery Designing & Making.
Name .....
Address .....

Conducted by Cousin Marion

In writing this department always sign your true name and give your address; if not, your letter will receive no attention. Name will not be published.

HERE'S a joke, girls; it's one on me but I'll tell you just the same. You know how I pounce upon you for trifling mistakes in grammar and spelling? Well, I've been pounced upon, twice, by a most estimable lady of California. The first time, she told me I was "frivolous," and sent me a batch of lovely little tracts which I read and distributed among my friends who are more frivolous than I. Now she says I'm "irreverant," because of an innocent remark I made about religious noses. (The first time it was something about angels.) She insists that I'm not a Christian and asked the Lord for a verse for me and says, He gave her one about "children of the devil,"—meaning that I am one. I think she must have got the wrong number, don't you?

Maybe I haven't as much religion as she has; at least not the same kind, and it is my belief that a laugh from a girl I have helped will do quite as much good as her prayers, though I'm very grateful for her interest in me, but I must say that she isn't a very tactful person.

Now I'll try and be very serious. Would you like me more if I were werry, werry serious?

M. L., Pennsylvania.—The number of women who live with unworthy husbands "for the sake of the children," is surprisingly large. You must know of such cases in your own town. If the man you think you are in love with had been halfway possible as a husband do you think his wife would have left him and deprived their little girl of a father's care? I don't. Mothers are not like that. To be sure, there are unworthy wives as well as husbands, women who are not capable of making or appreciating a home and who care nothing for the welfare of their children if it interferes with their pleasure, but, thanks be, they are few. If this man's wife was like that you would know since you live in a town small enough to see the same people at the post-office every night. Do you go to the station first and wait for the train to come in, and then go to the post-office and wait around till the "mail's sorted?" But that is digressing—a habit of mine. What I want to say is this, don't speak to him on the strength of seeing him every night unless you have been introduced. If he is at all interested in you he will find someone to introduce him. I'd be willing to bet my place in line at the window that after you know him you'll wonder how you ever thought yourself in love with him.

SUNSHINE OF MISSISSIPPI.—When you promised to be his wife he supposed you meant it, and had every right to feel "blue" when you talked as you did. If you don't want to marry him why want him to come back and waste his time and yours? Better let him make the first move. If he comes back don't "joke" that way again. You have a peculiar sense of humor.

JOSEPHINE, Georgia.—There is no reason why a town boy shouldn't go to see a country girl if he is a nice town boy and she is a nice country girl. Thanks to Hennery, the difference between town and country isn't as great as it used to be.

SWEET WILLIAM, Georgia.—My dear, you must use discretion and moderation in all things. First you frightened the men away because you were too sweet and lovely to them, and I told you to be more indifferent and let them do the chasing, and you went to the other extreme and the other girls got them while you were being indifferent. What am I going to do with you? You never could understand "how high is up," could you? There is a happy medium and you'll have to keep on losing them until you find it. The average girl is born with this knowledge, just like being born with curly hair, but other girls have to have this sense sort of permanent-waved in by experience. I won't say, "Be yourself, be natural," as I do in a great many instances. Some girls can't be natural and still be popular with the men. I don't mean that you should be affected and silly and gushing and all that; rather, learn to conceal all that isn't flattering to them. Learn to listen interestedly to all that interests them from Japanese prints to bee culture. Laugh at their jokes, no matter how venerable, and admire their most ordinary achievement. Flatter them a little, they like it; in fact, they lap it up and purr for more. Never, never say, "I think you are a conceited prig, your collar is dirty and I'm not interested in prize fights, or what you told Jones the time he told you, and your mother must have been a kind-hearted woman to have let you live. "I've always been too busy to flatter the dear things, consequently I never was very popular, but I remember years and years ago, when I was about your age, I knew a boy who worked in a bakeshop. He was a generous soul and bought liberally of candy and theater tickets and all because I used to listen while he told me how many loaves of bread he had made that day. I know the personal history and habits of more than forty-five thousand loaves of bread, but he made good bread. He said he did.

I still insist that matrimonial agencies are risky things to meddle with and whoever does so should be most cautious. It is dear of you to invite me to Georgia to see you and to eat watermelon—after you lost a perfectly good man by following my advice, or did you hope I'd choke on the seeds? That's a joke. You take things so literally that I'll have to make myself plain—though Nature took care of that long ago.

HAPPY ROSE, Ohio.—"Is a young girl who cannot dance, just as popular among decent young men and women as one who can dance? If not, how much difference?" You sound like a problem in arithmetic. If she can't dance and doesn't attempt it she will be more popular with the men than if she can't dance but tries to. As for being popular with the women, she should be very popular with the women because she won't take their men away from them, unless she sits out dances with them. A clever girl can get in as much deadly work by sitting out a dance as she can by dancing, particularly if she is a better talker than dancer. (2.) Your size and general appearance as well as your age must be taken into consideration when deciding how to "do" your hair. Don't be in a hurry to put it up.

JESSIE, Okla.—Don't bob your hair. Personally, I like it if it is becoming and a person wants it very much. You don't or you wouldn't be so undecided about it. Remember that hair grows only half an inch a month and it will be a long time before yours reaches its present length. Bobbing the hair makes it grow thicker but don't bob it if it will be necessary to curl it.

ANXIOUS JERRY, Okla.—Here's a good one, a girl of fourteen engaged to a boy of nineteen and the only objection her parents have to their marriage is that his hair is red. If they don't object because of your extreme youth then they shouldn't mind a mere trifle like red hair. Why don't you wait a while, four years, say, and see if his hair isn't darker by that time? Even if it isn't you will be old enough to realize the seriousness of marriage—but I'm almost sure his hair will be much darker then.

R. J., Kentucky.—I understand, you are not jealous but there are some things you don't like, and if he takes another girl out Sundays he can't come to see you during the week. I don't blame you a bit. He isn't being fair to either of you and if he feels that he owes her allegiance, let her have him.

PETE, Kansas.—If you've known him two years and he hasn't drank liquors during that time it is safe to say he doesn't. Personally he seems all right, but you are in danger of spoiling your life and his if you marry him and find you do not love him. Can't you go away for a while, two or three months, say, and give yourself a chance to find out how you really do feel about him. Then if you find you do not care for him, tell him so, no matter if he does "look sad." Better to look sad now than to be sad when it is too late.

M. and H., Texas.—There isn't a thing you can do but thank your lucky stars matters aren't any worse. He may have a wife or two already and such being the case he couldn't very well marry you. (2.) Explanations and apologies should come from him. Since he didn't see fit to offer either and has consoled himself with another girl, why should you "cry most of the time." That's very foolish of you. Of course if you had rather stay at home and shed salty tears than go out and have a good time, it is your privilege. Would you like a handkerchief shower?

BETTY, Iowa.—At eighteen and nineteen years of age you and your fiance are too young to be married, and I strongly advise you to obey your parents and go to business college or take up some work wherein you would be self supporting. And have your fiance finish school or get a start in business. Then get married if you still want to. How do you know you'll never use your business college education after you are married? Supposing your husband should die and leave you, with children, perhaps, to care for. Wouldn't it be better to be able to care for yourself and them than to be dependent on your people or his for support? (2.) If it was a cousinly kiss, he shouldn't have minded and that is the only kind it should have been.

OLD TRUSTY, Ky.—A boy of seventeen is just a boy, no matter how industrious and true he may be. Your life has made you seem older than you really are. Have an understanding with him, if you wish, and get married when you are older and he has a home for you. In the meantime go out to work, if your mother approves, or stay home with her if you can help her more by so doing. If you think your life is hard, what about hers?

SUSAN, Michigan.—Are long curls in style now? You haven't noticed Mary Pickford cutting hers off have you? They are in style if one is fortunate enough to have them. If it "anoys" you to have a boy talk to you because you are "to" young, it annoys me because I think you are too old to spell like that, and in the eighth grade too. But I'm not scolding. A great many people make the same mistakes.

J. M. B., Ohio.—Go to school as your mother wants you to do. If he really cares he will wait two or three years, anyway, and by that time you will know your own mind better. You are quite likely to decide then that he is too old for you, and I really think he is.

WANDERING HOPE, Wis.—Don't give him a present. If he loves you he will let you know it, and presents won't help matters a bit. Don't try to bribe him.

BROWN EYES, Georgia.—Wait until he grows up. It would be terrible to marry him and then have his folks decide he could see you only every other Wednesday. They may object because of his extreme youth and not because they dislike you. Talk it over with him and decide to wait until he is twenty-one.

C. J., Missouri.—It is seldom that I advise contrary to a mother's wishes, but in this case it seems best to do so. The opportunity to go to school, be treated kindly and meet good people, seems much to be preferred than marrying a worthless boy of eighteen, your mother's choice. Pay more attention to your studies than to any man.

BOBBYKINS, Michigan.—Better break him of this sulking before it gets chronic. Next time he starts to sulk, pick up a book and read until he gets over it. If that doesn't cure him, tell him he isn't much company and that you are going to your room, say good-night and ask him to lock the door when he goes out. He may not come again but the loss would be small. A sulky husband must be most unp'easant. (2.) There is danger only in what might follow.

BLONDE-HAIRED GIRL, Texas.—Did the ring cost $5.00 or $500? If the latter, won't you send me his address? Why doesn't your mother approve of him? There must be a reason, or does she object just on general principles. I hope you will be happy if you marry him, but don't act hastily. Pay a visit to his home town and find out if his home is a regular place or a shack, and if his bank account is real or in his imagination.

HEART-BROKEN GIRL, Missouri.—You must be heart-broken indeed to write, "Shou d I of went in?"—and you a school teacher too! You did right in not going into his place of business. Let him come to you. Doubtless you have grounds for a breach of promise suit, but I know you won't do anything as silly as that. I would advise you to forget him and find another sweetheart only that I feel sure you have done so before this.

DADDY'S DARLING, Texas.—You are too young to have a sweetheart, but since you already have one, and are such a sensible little girl in other ways, your parents should allow him to come to your home. If they were wise they would do just that, because you might not care so much for him then, and there could be no gossip about you because you are meeting him away from home. He should protect you against that, and the best way to do it would be to go to your parents and ask permission to see you once in a while, and give them his word of honor that he won't try to see you secretly. If your love for each other stands the test of time I don't believe you need worry about different religious beliefs.

BONNIE BELLE, Louisiana, —You'll probably marry the man who earns the largest salary and spends all of it, rather than the one who earns less but who saves more. It does do a woman so much good to be able to say, "My husband earns $..... a week" to the woman whose husband earns only half as much. We are all more or less cats, only some of us conceal our claws better than others. This reminds me of an explanation given by a wealthy manufacturer of prepared mustard. He said that he got rich from the mustard people left on their plates and not from the mustard they ate. There's a moral to this snappy little tale if you can find it.

JENNIE, Idaho.—Do I believe that boys get tired of girls who chase them? I certainly do, just as sure as—as sure as fish on Friday.

COUSIN MARION.

Missing Relatives and Friends

For the convenience of its subscribers, COMFORT reopens the "Missing Relatives and Friends" column.

To the readers of COMFORT is extended the privilege of inserting three-line notices in this column if they will secure only one new yearly subscriber to COMFORT at 50c. If you wish to find a missing relative or friend you can insert a three-line notice containing not over 22 words in this column by securing only one new subscription at 50c. If a longer notice is required send one 50c subscription for each additional seven words.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Will Fred Newton, please notify Arthur F. Lanfear, Burns, Box 353, Oregon.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of John Ihnen, last heard of in Orlando, Okla., please notify his sister, Mrs. Otto Hoehne, Atkinson, Nebr.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of my father, Linnues Parks, please notify Mrs. G. A. Ward, Aurora, 385 Benton, St., Illinois.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of "C. M." or Charlie Kooken, last heard of working in the lead mines near Galena, Kansas, please notify Mrs. A. C. Kooken, Deer River, Minn.

Anyone knowing the address of any of Wyet Burt's family, please notify Rebecca Hick, daughter of Philip Burt.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 17.)

New Testament as a prize as the one who first memorized the 13th Chap. of 1st Corinthians and was able to write it. A wee little girl learned the chapter in a short time. Then I had the pupils make a little Alphabet. Here's an example of one of the best papers.

A stands for Adam who was the first man created.

B stands for Benjamin who was the youngest son of Jacob.

C stands for Cain who killed his brother Abel.

Each one was required to read enough from the Bible to make an original sentence about each person mentioned alphabetically.

Some folks didn't like it because I had the children memorizing verses from the Bible, and said all sorts of ugly things about it. Even one of my fellow-teachers said, "There are schools where people can go to learn that Bible junk." But that hurt her worse than it did me and I went on with the work.

I hope to hear from some of the sisters, especially school teachers. Here's success to every teacher as she takes up her schoolroom duties this fall. Sow seeds of enthusiam in the hearts of the children and reap the same: sow firmness and reap obedience; sow kindness and reap love—the true mission of the teacher.

NETTIE E. HUGGINS.

BROWNSVILLE, TEXAS.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

I have been a constant reader of COMFORT ever since I could read, and enjoy every bit of it.

I am a rural school teacher and have been for seven years, so I am always glad to see a letter from a teacher. I would like to hear from some country teachers, especially those doing primary work as that seems, in one way, the hardest part. For three years I taught the higher grades in a two-teacher school, but now am teaching my home school. Have eight grades and thirty pupils enrolled. I find that the hardest part is starting the child in the right way, for so much depends upon that.

I have a blackboard in the room with the names of my pupils on it and put a mark after the name of the child who has had perfect lessons all day.

At the end of every month I count the marks and give the winner a small, inexpensive prize. Then we start all over again for the next month. This has proven so much better than giving a prize at the end of the term, for when one would get behind the others he was ready to quit. Of course I don't think they should be taught to work for prizes alone but it seems a good way to help small ones form a habit of studying, which they will keep up until they are old enough to realize the value.

I let the children find mistakes in each others' reading and spelling. Of course I tell them of all mistakes they did not notice, but one would be surprised at the small number I have to tell them. The one that noticed the mistake, even if at the foot of the class, goes to the head.

We do not have written tests every month, but have "matches" every two weeks in different studies. It seemed odd at first to have third and fourth grades with higher grades but starting with simple questions such as, "What is a sentence?" and getting harder until higher grades were left, I have had third grade pupils answer questions which sixth or seventh graders couldn't. That was because they had recently studied that subject. But they are interesting and so much more helpful than the written tests.

If I can once get my pupils out of the Primer I feel all right but it seems such a responsibility for their future depends upon their starting in the right way.

We play games and have a good time at playtime and do not have any trouble keeping order. I think I have the best pupils anywhere. There is nothing I enjoy more than teaching and it doesn't seem like work.

I haven't had any interesting experiences like other sisters write about. All of them have been in school for I began teaching the year I graduated. I have had some nice trips during vacation. One was a visit to my aunt at Freeport, Texas. While there we went down to the Gulf, three miles away, and picked up many beautiful shells. We also went to the "Sulphur Mound," for which Freeport is so noted, and saw mountains of sulphur, and trainloads leaving.

Sincerely, MRS. E. B. OSBORN.

LAKE DELAWARE, DELHI, N. Y.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

Since my letter in December COMFORT I have received hundreds of lovely cards and letters for which I am truly grateful. I was not very well and they helped to pass the weary time. I answered all I possibly could. We've a darling little daughter who came on March 26th. We call her Merry Ethel. She has lovely gray eyes and soft brown hair.

So many of those who wrote asked me to write again to COMFORT, I must ask Mrs. Wilkinson to open her page once more for me.

We live in the Catskill Mountains. There is a good deal of rain and we had more than our share of snow last winter. Some grain is raised and a little corn. Dairying and hay are the principal things. Quite a good deal of maple syrup is made too. It goes mostly to the Maple Growers' Association. There are extensive tracts of timber in this part of the state. It is very well watered with countless brooks and springs, a well is a curiosity. About 90% of the houses have water in the kitchens. The houses, as a rule, are quite large, from eight to twelve rooms.

There is a lot of wild life too, deer, bears and the fat. Trout fishing is to be had in nearly all of the streams.

In summer a great many city people spend the season on the farms and in the hundreds of boarding houses. It is a fairly lucrative business.

I told you in my other letter what I look like. I was born in Lincoln, Nebraska, I have lived on a ranch in the Sandhills, slept under the stars, spent a year in Denver, was educated in Wisconsin, that is, the last years of my student life were spent there. I am of French, Danish and American descent. I have traveled some and had many amusing adventures. One was more serious than funny.

My hobbies—I like dancing and baseball. I am very fond of music, and paint a little. Do fancy work of nearly all kinds. I love designing, and last but not least, I sometimes write poetry, some of which has been printed.

I love all things beautiful. Even such mournful, weeping skies as we have today have an element of beauty.

Mrs. Hanika and Mrs. Brock, I've lost your addresses. Please write.

I hope you all had a good supply of vegetables and

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 35.)

How You Can Make Money In Your Spare Time

By Learning to Play Your Favorite Musical Instrument This New Easy Way.

"I BOUGHT a house and lot, and paid $1,100 toward it; all earned through teaching piano," writes Mrs. Mary A. Olsen, 3715 Wadsworth St., Los Angeles, Cal. "I would not take $1,000 for my financial and social gain through your lessons. I don't know how you can give as much for so little. I think your method is just wonderful."

Mrs. Olsen is only one of more than three hundred thousand men, women, and young people who have become accomplished musicians through this wonderful new method. All the intricate "mysteries" of music have been reduced to a system of amazing simplicity. Every step is made as clear as A. B. C. You don't have to know anything whatever about music. You learn to play your favorite instrument right in your own home, quickly, easily, and without endless study and practice. Long before you now think it could ever be possible, you will actually play well enough to be in demand as a well-paid entertainer, teacher, or musician.

The new way is fun—not drudgery. You'll begin to play melodies almost from the start. You don't have to pin yourself down to regular hours and regular classes. You practice whenever you can, and learn as quickly as you please.

Three Months from Today You, Too, Can Play

Is it the piano that you wish to play, or the organ, violin, guitar, harp, or cello? Do you want to learn to sing from notes? Are you eager to play "jazz" on the banjo, clarinet, saxophone, trombone, or the drums and traps? Does the cornet call to you, or the flute or piccolo? Would you love to learn the ukulele (the Hawaiian steel guitar)? Chose your favorite—and play it three months from today.

You will learn by notes—the only practical way for you to learn. There are no "numbers" and no "tricks" in this marvelous method.

Learn To Play Any Instrument

Piano	'Cello
Organ	Harmony and Composition
Violin	Sight Singing
Drums and Traps	Ukulele
Banjo	Guitar
Tenor Banjo	Hawaiian Steel Guitar
Mandolin	Harp
Clarinet	Cornet
Flute	Piccolo
Saxophone	Trombone
Voice and Speech Culture
Automatic Finger Control

FREE Book and Sample Lesson

Send for this free, valuable book, "Music Lessons in Your Own Home." It costs you nothing. You obligate yourself in no way whatever. With it will be sent — without obligation — a sample lesson which proves, better than words, how delightfully quick and easy the famous Print and Picture Method is.

It will tell you how you can make music a delightful hoby or a money-maker for your spare hours; how you can take the first steps to a profitable musical career if you are dissatisfied with your present life work; how you can be a social favorite, and go everywhere or have fun at home; how you can do these delightful things quickly, easily, and at a cost so low it will surprise you.

Special Short-Time Offer

This Free Book also tells about a Special Short-time Offer now being made to music lovers. Mail the coupon at once for your copy. Remember, it is FREE! Act now before the supply is exhausted!

U. S. School of Music, 49 Brunswick Bldg., New York City

U. S. SCHOOL of Music, 49 Brunswick Bldg., New York City

Please send me your free book "Music Lessons in Your Own Home," Sample Lesson, and particulars of your special offer. I am interested in the following course:

.....
(Name of Instrument or Course)

Name .....
(Please Write Plainly)

Address .....

City ..... State.....

September, The Harvest Month

SEPTEMBER is the farmer's month of realization, the "pay day" of the year. Coming close upon the heels of hot August, the cool nights make sleeping a joy and complete rest a reality. It may still be hot in the fields at midday, but there is a certain indescribable "tang" to the air that tells of frosts and Indian Summer not far off. In fact the threat of frost may cause worry for those whose corn is backward, and there are bound to be many readers who fall in that class. Hazy, lazy days and crisp nights when the big red harvest moon beams down on a season's work well done; big red apples in the orchard to be sold or stored for cold winter eating—or perhaps made into sweet cider; vegetables to be dug and stored in the cellar; spring pigs that are reaching market size apace. But why try to list all September's blessings that are to be found on every farm at this glorious time when the leaves are beginning to take on the tints of autumn, when the hickory nuts are ripe, and when the old hound frets and impatiently waits for that first rabbit hunt.

Now is the time to select early maturing ears of corn for next year's seed. Walk through the field, find the early maturing ears, mark them by stripping back a bit of husk or by tying bits of white rag to the stalk close to the ear, then leave them on the stalk to dry out and fully mature. Before the corn is harvested go through again and snap off these marked ears and store them separately. Have enough so that a later selection may be made for type and size, choosing those that conform most closely to the variety standard, and that show the best filled tips and best covered butts. Keep this field selected seed in a dry place where it will not freeze in cold weather, and you will have seed of high quality and germination.

Hill selection of potatoes is a practice that pays well for the time it takes, though perhaps this will not come until later in the month. Here is how it is done: When potatoes are ready for digging, choose two rows well away from the edge of the field, then dig carefully by hand. Compare the number, size, shape and quality of the potatoes turned out of each pair of hills. Though the yield may run quite uniform, there are sure to be hills that will stand out above the general average, and it is these hills that we are looking for. Avoid hills that show a large number of "nubbins" or deformed tubers. Pick out the best potatoes from the all-around best hills, choosing potatoes that are uniform in size and shape. Store these separate from the crop that is harvested later, and the increased yields that will result when this practice is followed year after year, at no cost but a little time and work, will be truly surprising.

Plant rye now in the hog lot to provide for early spring hog pasture. Early seeding, heavier than when intended for a crop of grain, gives more time to make strong fall growth, and the more extensive root system established by early seeding in a favorable season will force earlier and quicker spring growth. Now is the time, too, for the fall house cleaning in and around the hog lot. Get rid of trash that so often accumulates, clean out the house thoroughly, then give it a coat of whitewash. Ceiling, walls and floor should all be treated to this cheap but efficient aid to hog health. Mix one pound of common salt with each pail of whitewash to make a mixture that will not rub off.

How about the chicken house? It should have a house cleaning at least once a year—and the job should not be left for the "missus and the girls" to attend to, either, for it is a man's work. Take out nests, roosts, dropping board, fountains and feed troughs. Remove all old litter from the floor and old ashes or dirt from the scratch house. Then scrape down the walls and ceiling with an old garden hoe, digging out the cracks that are sure to be found in such places as around the windows with a putty knife. These cracks are the hiding places of lice and mites that await the return of the farm flock to their winter home. Clean the roosts, dropping board, etc., out of doors, then give them a liberal application of coal tar disinfectant made according to the instructions printed upon the can. Inside of the poultry house spray or use a whitewash brush to get the disinfectant over every inch of ceiling and walls, particularly in the corners and around windows and doors. If the floor is of wood, treat this also; if it is of dirt, a disinfectant soaking will do no harm. Then fill the dusting box with new clean dirt or ashes, replace the roosts, nests, and dropping board, clean the windows so that they will admit the light they should, see that the roof ventilator is in working order and not clogged with sparrow nests, fill all rat holes with concrete, and the house is ready for winter occupation.

Choose Sugar Beet Land Now

Many farmers who grow sugar beets have learned from long experience that the time to decide where next year's crop will be grown is now, in early September. Others who raise this crop can well afford to follow their good example.

In deciding where beets will be grown, every grower should see that the land selected is well drained and that it is in a good state of fertility. Clay or sandy loam soil serve best for beets; light sandy soil or muck soil should be avoided, as both dry out too quickly during periods of drought. Clover, corn or potato land, to which a liberal top dressing of well-rotted manure has been applied before plowing, usually serve best for sugar beets.

Good drainage is highly important for this crop. If land is low and subject to flooding, or even if the water table lies too close to the surface in a wet season, beets will not thrive, but will be stunted, underfed and undernourished. Even when the excess of moisture is only temporary, the effect will be lasting; crippled beets will not overcome the damage and delay, even when good growing conditions are restored later in the season. The ideal condition for beets is, besides a soil in good tilth, a soil in which the water table is not too close to the surface. This condition induces the formation of a single well-defined tap root, and discourages the formation of the numerous side roots common to beets grown on wet land. Many rooted beets, even though they may grow to large size, are usually coarse and poor in quality. But if the land selected is rich in humus and is reasonably fertile and well drained, the crop will thrive and return a profit. Get the land manured early, then plow it as soon in September as possible. Fall plowing improves the tilth, allows for early and repeated discing next spring and permits a good early start with this crop without delaying other farm work.

Surface Rot of Sweet Potatoes

Infection with surface rot may take place slightly before or during sweet potato harvest, or it may take place in the early storage period. For this reason it is recommended that, wherever possible, harvesting be done only during dry weather and that the potatoes be allowed to dry in the sun for a few hours before picking up. Conditions in the storage house should be dry and warm when the potatoes are put in, so that curing will begin promptly. Potatoes that are dug in damp weather, piled and stored immediately in a storage house that is not perfectly dry, are most susceptible to surface rot disease.

Surface rot has many characteristics in common with black rot, caused by Sphæroneme fimbriatum, but nevertheless it is an entirely different and distinct disease that is readily distinguished from black rot. It has now been discovered that the organism responsible for the surface rot disease is Fusarium oxysporum, inoculations with which under moist conditions in storage have produced the disease.

The disease is generally recognized as a storage trouble by growers, and is characterized by nearly circular brownish sunken spots, usually several in number. These vary in size according to age, and may attain a maximum size of about three-fourths of an inch. Three well-marked stages of the disease are noted; the first, which consists in the formation of the spots; the second, a shrinkage of the potato; and the third, the drying up of the potato, which makes it entirely unfit for food. The last stage is usually most pronounced during the latter part of the storage period.

How to Make White Lard

Is the making of pure white lard becoming a lost art on our farms? Country merchants who occasionally buy lard or "take it in trade" from farmers, say that white lard is now uncommon, while once it was almost the rule. Perhaps the methods once employed so successfully by pioneer housewives has been lost in the rapid advance in all things culinary. Anyhow, here's how to make lard that is really white.

Keep the leaf lard separate from the fat that comes from trimming the hams, shoulders and sides. Render out the leaf lard first, as it is the highest grade product and most desirable for home use or sale. Before throwing the fat or trimmings into the kettle, cut into one-inch cubes after all the strips of lean have been removed. The lean meat sticks to the kettle and also gives the lard a scorched taste. Do not cook fat with the rind on; this helps produce a dull or dirty color. Do the rendering in a big iron kettle, filled about three-quarters full of the uniform sized cubes. Keep a moderate steady fire under the kettle and stir the cubes frequently. If the lard foams, the fire is getting too hot. When the cracklings become brown and are light enough to float, the cooking should be stopped. Dip out and strain the lard through muslin cloths into stone crocks or lard pails.

To whiten the lard, stir occasionally until it cools; when it is almost cold and is practically "set", stir vigorously. This will cause it to whiten and become smooth. A teaspoonful of soda is added by some to each 20 gallons of lard to produce whiteness. Store in a cool, dry place that is free from odors.

What Causes Mottles in Butter?

Mottles appear in butter from time to time, to the dismay of the housewife and even of the expert commercial buttermaker. It has now been found that mottles appear only in salted butter that has been improperly worked. The deep yellow patches in mottled butter contain relatively large and few water droplets; the whitish dapples contain a great number of very minute droplets. This indicates uneven and improper working. Study has determined that the presence of salt disturbs the water-in-fat emulsion and that uniformity in the emulsion is restored by the process of working.

"In order to prevent mottles," according to the creamery experts who conducted the investigation, "butter must be worked sufficiently to accomplish this fusion and reemulsification of water and brine." This point is usually reached when butter has been reduced by working to a plastic, tough and waxy body. The working must be uniform throughout the churn. Overloaded workers and workers that are improperly set, loose, or slipping, will not work butter evenly and are likely to produce mottled or wavy butter. Therefore, when a batch of butter is found to be mottled, wavy or marbled and uneven in color, inspect the churn to see that everything is in good working order, then proceed more carefully with the working in future.

The Weight of Newborn Calves

"What breed of dairy cows gives birth to the largest calves?"

That is a question frequently raised by dairymen who each argue lustily that the honor belongs to their own favorite breed. Considerable study has been given to the subject, with the result that now definite facts and figures are available. To put an end to argument, the following figures are presented:

Brown Swiss calves, average at birth	100 pounds
Holstein calves, average at birth	90 pounds
Dairy Shorthorn calves, average at birth	73 pounds
Ayreshire calves, average at birth	70 pounds
Guernsey calves, average at birth	67 pounds
Jersey calves, average at birth	55 pounds

A close study of additional results of the investigation show several interesting points. In the first place, though it might be expected that the size of the offspring would depend directly upon the size of the dam, such is not always the case. The average weight of Dairy Shorthorn dams tops the list, with Brown Swiss second and Holsteins third; but it will be noticed that the weight of Dairy Shorthorn calves drops to third position. Among Ayreshires, Guernseys and Jerseys the weight of the dams has a direct bearing upon the weight of the calves of the breeds.

A second interesting point is that in every breed the birth weight of bull calves averaged considerably higher than that of heifer calves. Brown Swiss showed an average difference between males and females of 17 pounds; Holsteins, 7 pounds; Dairy Shorthorns, 1 pound; Ayreshires, 6 pounds; Guernseys, 5 pounds; and Jerseys, 6 pounds. Except in the case of the Dairy Shorthorn, the difference is quite marked.

A third interesting point is that the weight of calves at birth, instead of being directly proportional to the weight of their dams, really increases more rapidly as we advance from the smaller to the larger breeds. For example, Brown Swiss calves have a birth weight of 8.9 per cent. of the weight of their dams; Holsteins, 7.9 per cent.; Ayreshires, 7.1 per cent.; Guernseys, 6.7 per cent.; Jerseys, 6.3 per cent.; and Dairy Shorthorns, only 6 per cent. The Shorthorns are the exception that is said to prove the rule, for except for this breed, the decrease in percentage of the birth weight of calves as compared to the weight of their dams is quite marked.

It may be well to add that there seems to be little immediate proof that the weight of the sire has a direct effect upon the weight of his offspring at birth; his influence seems to become apparent only after calves are born and begin to grow. The age of the dams, however, does have a bearing upon the weight of their calves, as an increase is noted with each lactation period until the fifth is passed, then a corresponding decrease takes place.

Pea Straw for Feeding Sheep

The question often arises "Is pea straw a safe feed for breeding ewes and lambs, and what kind of results can I expect from its use?" An experiment recently completed at the Washington Agricultural Experiment Station, Pullman, Washington, gives some interesting information on the subject.

A lot of 6 lambs fed an average ration of 3.49 pounds of pea straw gained 30.8 pounds per head in 120 days, and produced fleeces averaging 10.17 pounds. A similar lot of lambs fed an average ration of 3.42 pounds of alfalfa hay gained 43.7 pounds during the same period and produced fleeces weighing 10.41 pounds. Each of the lambs in both lots received one pound of grain daily. Though the lambs receiving alfalfa hay showed the greater gain, the extremely low price of the pea straw showed this to be the more profitable roughage when both gain and cost of gain were considered.

During an average winter period of 80 days, pregnant ewes receiving pea straw and grain required 0.16 pounds more grain daily than did ewes fed on a standard ration of alfalfa hay and 0.5 pounds of grain. After lambing, a group of 7 ewes and 9 lambs were continued on each of the roughages, the amount of grain being varied to secure an equal growth in both groups of lambs. During the first 60 days of the suckling period the alfalfa hay lot consumed 1.9 pounds of grain per ewe daily, while the pea straw lot consumed 2.93 pounds of grain. Here again the low price of the pea straw made it an economical ration for ewes with lambs, but the additional grain consumed left but a small margin in its favor over alfalfa hay.

Corn Webworm Eradication

Early fall plowing is the one and only remedy for corn webworms, and this simple control measure should be taken in all regions where this pest is known. Plowing as late as October is of little or no value, as by this time the webworms are already safely housed in their winter webs under the ground surface. Therefore the sooner the early plowing is begun, the better results will be. Land that has been in sod or pasture, or that has lain fallow and has grown up to weeds, should by rights have been plowed even earlier, in July or August, if it is to be planted to corn next year, but September plowing is certainly better than later plowing.

Grasslands of all kinds, such as pastures, meadows and lawns, furnish the normal food for sod webworms, but they also gnaw young corn plants below the ground surface and deform them to such an extent that recovery and the production of a crop is seriously impaired or entirely prevented. After the corn is once planted and the ground is found to be infested there is no practicable method of getting rid of the worms; therefore prevention now is the only safeguard of the crop for next year. Discing in the spring, the application of plenty fertilizer to force early growth and the use of sound seed of strong germinating qualities are all beneficial, but should not be depended upon alone. Poisoning and trapping have given unsatisfactory results. Injury to grasslands themselves is difficult to control and little can be done except to plow up the sod and plant to some crop that is immune from attack.

Wet Cotton Fiber Injured by Pressing

Recent tests conducted by the Department of Agriculture have fully proved that compressing wet cotton to high density increases the per centage of waste and reduces the breaking strength of the yarn. The tests also showed conclusively that compressing cotton to standard or high density when in a dry or normal state is not injurious to the spinning value of the fiber.

The varieties of cotton tested were pure strains of Cleveland Big Boll, Delta, Rowden and Webber No. 49. All of the various types of bales were tested; namely, a flat bale with a density of 12 to 15 pounds per cubic foot; a standard or railroad compressed bale with a density of 22 to 28 pounds; a high density bale with a density of 28 to 40 pounds; a high density bale compressed wet; and a round bale with a density of 35 pounds per cubic foot. The strength of yarn made from cotton that had

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 38.)

ELGIN'S
NEW BOULEVARD
17 JEWEL!

ONLY $1.00 DOWN

New special 25 year gold cases. New 17 Jewel Boulevard Models. New gold moire dials—real works of art.

Greatest Watch Offer since the war, but none. You can now own the world's best known watch at the lowest factory price—a price lower than most houses charge you for inferior and off-brand makes.

Sent On Approval. We send you this new 17 Jewel Elgin on approval and after you are fully satisfied, you pay only a little each month, so little that you will never miss the money.

$5.00 CHAIN and KNIFE SET FREE

Write Today for catalog and full particulars of this special introductory offer. We are the world's largest Elgin Watch House; we have trusted wage earners for nearly a quarter of a century and will trust you.

HARRIS-GOAR CO.
Dept. 197, Kansas City, Mo.

GENUINE FOOTBALL GIVEN

OH, BOYS! Simply send name and address. Greatest thing ever. Get this American football for simply

Giving Away 12 Big Colored Art Pictures Send No Money

Send No Money to friends and neighbors with 12 boxes famous White Cloverine at 25c each. Send the $3.00 collected, and we will mail football at once, postage paid, to your door; Lots of other appealing gifts for boys offered in our new big illustrated catalog. Millions use Cloverine for burns, cuts, colds, pimples, etc. Easiest and squarest plan for twenty-eight years makes us most reliable. Write quick. Be first in your town.

THE WILSON CHEMICAL CO., Dept. FB16, TYRONE, PA

ALL THESE SELECTIONS

Fox Trots
1. CarolinaMammy
2. Swingin' Down the Lane
3. Yes! We Have No Bananas
4. Bambalina
5. Wild Flower
6. Barney Google
7. Carolina In the Morning
8. Who's Sorry Now
9. Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean
10. I Love Me
11. Parade of the Wooden Soldiers
12. Sun Kist Rose
13. You Know You Belong to Somebody Else

Waltzes
14. Love Sends a Little Gift of Roses
15. Red Moon
16. Mellow Moon

Amazing Offer of DANCE RECORDS!

16 Latest Fox Trots and Waltzes on Eight Full-Size Double Face 10 Inch Records $2.98 FOR ALL

Every record a HIT and BRAND NEW

HERE is the greatest phonograph-record bargain ever offered! All brand new records, right straight from factory to you! The very latest Broadway hits—the most popular dance music of today. All New York is dancing to these wonderful, catchy, swingy Fox Trots and Waltzes. Eight full size, ten-inch brand new records which play on BOTH SIDES, giving you SIXTEEN complete selections. PLAYED BEAUTIFULLY by the most wonderful DANCE ORCHESTRAS you ever heard! A wonderful collection of latest hits—ALL FOR ONLY $2.98. Never before such a bargain in up-to-the-minute records.

Send No Money

Try these records for 10 days in your own home. Note the beauty of recording, the catchiness of the tunes, and the wonderful volume and clearness of tone. Send no money now—just give the postman $2.98, plus delivery charges, on arrival. If not delighted with your bargain return the records and we will refund money and pay the postage BOTH WAYS. This low price made possible by manufacturing in tremendous quantities and selling direct to users.

Do Not Wait! Write Now!
Thousands of Sets are Being Ordered.
Mail Coupon or Postal to National Music Lovers, Inc.

Dept. 69,
354 FOURTH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY

National Music Lovers, Inc
Dept. 69,
354 Fourth Ave.,
New York City

Please send me for 10 days' trial, your collection of 16 Fox Trots and Waltzes on eight double-face ten-inch records, guaranteed equal to any records made. I will pay the postman only $2.98 plus delivery charges on arrival. This is not to be considered a purchase, however. If the records do not come up to my expectations, I reserve the right to return them at any time within 10 days and you will refund my money.

Note: If you desire Prof. Morgan D. Stern's Course in Dancing including 10-inch double-face instructor record place X in square. ☐ (Price 98c.)

Name .....
Address .....
City ..... State .....

They Stay Caught!

Every trapper knows that with ordinary traps one-third of his catches "wring-off". You can hold them all with

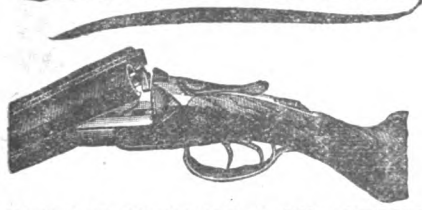
GIBBS TWO-TRIGGER TRAPS

Two sets of jaws grip the animal by the leg and over the body. They do not have to be set to drown and there is no spring breakage.

Sent direct if your dealer does not sell them. 65c each in less than dozen lots, or $7.00 a dozen in dozen lots or over, prepaid. Write for FREE folder,

W. A. GIBBS & SON,
Dept. ZZ, Chester, Pa

TRAPPERS GET READY — BIG FUR PROFITS



FREE BOOKS

BIG SEASON

A Postcard brings you FREE New Trappers' Treasure Books complete with Traps and Trapping Supplies at BIG SAVINGS—New Trapping Secrets, How to Grade, Game Laws and loads of other useful information ALL FREE. Write at once.

W. IRVING HERSKOVITS FUR CO. Inc.
Dept. 5, 44 West 28th St., New York

Davis Guns

THEY "SHOOT WELL AND STAND The Wear and Tear"

Have done so continuously since 1853 (70 years). Prices lower than others of equal prestige. Inquire of all dealers or address for catalogue

DAVIS GUNS, Dept. DC 9, 90 Chambers St., New York

$50,000.00 REWARD

DEAD OR ALIVE
Toronto, Can. Millionaire Missing
BE A DETECTIVE
Earn $250 to $300 per Month. Be a Finger Print Specialist. Learn Scotland Yard Methods. Experience not necessary. Write today for FREE Illustrated Booklet.
United Detective Training Ass'n, 245 Dinan Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

$1.00 down!

Balance in easy monthly payments. The 21 Jewel STUDEBAKER -The Insured Watch

64 Different Art Beauty Cases. 8 adjustments. Buy direct—big savings. FREE BOOK Write today for Book of Studebaker Advance Watch Styles and $1.00 down offer.

Chain FREE! With every Studebaker Watch. Limited offer. Write today.

Studebaker Watch Company, Dept. 569 South Bend, Indiana

Throw Away Your Razor!

Now you can shave without a razor. Magic Shaving Powder does the trick—quickly, simply and thoroughly.

It is harmless. Removes razor bumps and is beneficial to the skin. Removes hair from all parts of the body.

Send immediately for a can of this wonderful, new product. 45c a can. 3 cans for $1.10. 6 cans for $2.00. Postage Prepaid.

GEORGE M. DUSAUZAY,
Distributing Agent,
51 West 128th Street, New York City

YOUR NAME ON HANDLE — KNIFE FREE

For SELLING 6 BOXES ROSEBUD at 25c each and remitting $2.00, Knife has best steel blades. A SPECIAL OFFER. Order at once.
ROSEBUD PERFUME CO., Box 232, Woodsboro, Md.

Earn $20 to $60 A WEEK

Household necessities, Summer Drinks, Jewelry, Perfumes, Soaps, Extracts, Foods, Spices, Toilet Goods, Aluminum Ware, Bath Towels, fancy boxes toilet soaps, selling like hot cakes. Big profits. Write today for catalog.

WESTERN PRODUCTS CO., 663 No. Oakley Ave., Chicago

SENSATIONAL SALE
GUARANTEED TYPEWRITERS
Limited quantity fully guaranteed standard make typewriters. Five Days Free Trial. Lowest prices ever offered. Easy monthly payments. Send today for FREE booklet of ValuableTypewriter Information and Special Sale Bulletin.
SMITH TYPEWRITER SALES CO.
299-360 Grand Ave. Chicago, Ill.

30 DAY TRIAL — FINE STROP FREE

We will send a STERLING razor on 30 days trial. If satisfactory, costs $1.97. If not, costs nothing. Fine Horsehide Strop FREE. Write today.
STERLING COMPANY Suite 15, BALTIMORE, MD.

Where Traplines Cross

A Story of North Woods Trails

By Kenneth Fuller Lee

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

CHAPTER I.

HUMPY Jean was in a savage mood, even for him, and at best he was very far from being angelic. Less than five feet in height, with long, gorilla-like arms reaching to his knees, he was most repellent in appearance. Dame Nature had taken a few pains to do a perfect job on him, as the unsightly hump between his narrow shoulders attested. As is frequently the case, the little man's mind was even more warped and twisted than his body.

Despite the handicap of physical and mental deformity, Humpy was justly ranked among the most skillful trappers in northern Maine; his yearly catch of furs would average well with those of such experts as Joe St. Auber, Redmond, Holloway and MacDonald, each of whom annually reaped a rich harvest from the bearers of valuable pelts.

There was this distinction between Humpy Jean and the others: They were normal, honest and fair-dealing men, who took great pains to keep well within the bounds of law; killing only when it was necessary and pulling their traps when the season closed.

Humpy, on the other hand, trapped in season and out, killed at times out of shere deviltry, and had been known to boast that he once supplied a chain of lumber camps with their winter's meat by slaying more than a hundred deer during the time of the deep snows, running the helpless animals down on snowshoes and slaughtering them with his keen-edged ax.

It was a fine afternoon in late September, the hardwood ridges flaunted wonderful colorings, busy jays called to each other, Nature was in a peaceful mood. In front of his camp, Humpy was mulling over the happenings of the past few days. His trapline, running through almost a hundred miles of practically virgin wilderness, he had always regarded as his own personal property. The fact that a strange trapper was now cutting in on it, at a point where Humpy anticipated getting a good catch of beaver, aroused the little dwarf's ire almost to the point of frenzy.

Nervously raising and dropping the milled hammer of his stubby Winchester carbine, he muttered wild, half-formed threats of vengeance on the unknown trapper who had dared to encroach on his territory. Humpy's dog, a mongrel cross between an Airedale and some sort of terrier, incautiously crossed between him and the door of the little cabin. Hopping with spider-like agility to his feet the venomous little dwarf kicked the unsuspecting animal half-way across the yard, where it dropped and lay moaning with the agony of its broken ribs. Grinning malevolently, Humpy stood watching the poor beast writhe for a moment, then, slowly raising his rifle, he deliberately shot it through the head. "There, dam' you, that'll teach you to keep out of my way," he snarled between clenched teeth, jacking the empty shell from his rifle as he scuttled into the cabin.

Hastily starting a fire in the little sheet-metal stove, the dwarf took down a slab of bacon from the nail on which it hung, scooped a handful of coffee into the dirty coffee pot, poured in a dipper of cold water, opened a can of beans and dumped them into a skillet, still muttering and swearing under his breath. "I'll plug that . . . . fur thief the first time I get sight of him," he gritted, spitefully kicking an unoffending stool from his path.

He slid crab-wise over to the rude table, filling a tin plate with steaming beans and bacon, which he devoured wolfishly. His meal ended, Humpy piled the dirty dishes into his wooden sink, then picked up an empty pack-basket, into which he put a small coil of wire, several traps, and his belt-ax. He filled the magazine of his rifle with soft-nosed shells, shut and locked the cabin door, and slipped silently into the timber.

CHAPTER II.

Smoke curled peacefully up from the chimney of a tiny log cabin on the banks of Bear Brook; the sound of a buck-saw eating its way through a white-birch log came cheerfully through the forest. Inside the little cabin, Peggy Lane, a bride of less than a month, whistled softly to herself as she peeled the potatoes for the noon meal. Her big, muscular husband, the musician who was responsible for the buck-saw solo, now darkened the little doorway.

"Peggy Girl, how about some dinner?" he queried, sweat standing out in little beads on his bronzed forehead, and running down inside the flannel collar of his shirt. Clinton Lane went at sawing wood as he did everything else, and his wife glanced at him affectionately as she replied, "Most ready, Clint. I'm going to French fry these potatoes, and the meat is done already. You must be pretty tired; you've sawed more than a cord of that birch since breakfast."

Clinton glanced affectionately back at his busy little wife, and thought to himself that few men were so blessed with a true mate. She fitted into this rude environment, far from all pretense of civilization, as easily as did Clint himself. Despite the absence of nearly all conveniences, she appeared to be enjoying herself thoroughly, making the most of what she had to work with in a manner which delighted her big husband beyond words.

The couple had been told that no one was trapping the section they were in. Accordingly, they had made plans to spend the entire winter in camp, picking spruce gum and running a pair of traplines. They had made of the tiny cabin a cozy home. Peggy had made red curtains for the four windows, they had brought in a few rugs for the rough board floor, and the crevices between the logs were solidly chinked with clay from the bed of the stream close at hand. A huge pile of sawed and split birch was growing steadily under the shed roof back of the camp, in anticipation of the thirty or forty below zero which was bound to come later.

In the shed a fat buck and an equally fat doe swung side by side frozen slightly, while in a little storeroom inside the camp several large hams, slabs of bacon, a bushel of beans, two whole barrels of flour, with potatoes, apples, and canned foods of all sorts were piled in sufficient quantity to carry the couple well along into the winter. A few luxuries in the shape of seeded raisins, a large bag of mixed nuts, and some pop-corn on the cob, had been added. Clint and his wife felt that the winter ahead would be a pleasant one, whether they made much at the trapping game or not.

"Clint, can I go with you when you make those beaver sets, so I can find them if you should happen to be laid up for a day or so?" asked Peggy, placing a platter of browned deer-meat and crisp potatoes on the little table.

"You certainly can, as soon as we get the dinner dishes put away," her big husband replied, sliding out of his leather jacket and sitting down at his place. "We ought to get quite a little bunch of stuff out of that colony," he went on enthusiastically. "We'll try some of that castor scent that Saulnier gave me, and if there are as many beaver there as I think there are, we'll clean up in good shape this winter."

"Maybe we can make enough to buy those camps at Lost Pond, in the Spring. Wouldn't that be just splendid?" Peggy retorted, with an eager flush on her smooth cheeks at the thought. She and Clint had discussed the Lost Pond camps as a remote possibility, but so far had been unable to raise the money needed to buy them.

"Two thousand dollars is a lot of money, dear. The camps are easily worth more than that, and we could make a fine thing of them, but it'll take a lot of fur to bring that amount," Clint answered, not wanting to hold out false hopes which might not be realized.

Thus they talked during the noon meal, laying plans for months ahead, neither dreaming of the actual peril which was even then taking form about their little cabin. On a rug in front of the door their big Airedale, Rags, watched them eat, and when the meal was at last completed, he came forward for the leavings; Peggy placed these in a tin plate and set it beside the stove, where the husky pup made quick work of the scraps of fried meat and potato, wagging his stubby tail and whole rear end with appreciation. "Did like, didn't you Rags?" asked Clint. The dog came over and put his head on his master's knee, looking up with his honest brown eyes alight. "Better take Rags along, hadn't we?" Peggy assented. "But we will have to watch him, or he'll get tangled up with another of those porcupines," she added.

They cleaned up the dishes and put them away, then, each taking a 22 repeater and a few traps, they set out for the big swamp where their beaver colony was located. Rags worked ahead and flushed a big flock of partridges; his barking told the couple that the birds were treed, so Clint and Peggy stole cautiously in. At the foot of a big birch, Rags sat alertly up, yapping frantically at five or six fat biddies who craned their necks to watch him. "You take the lower right-hand bird, Peggy," whispered Clint, and the little rifles smacked together, two birds thudding solidly to earth. The rest did not move. "Take the right-hand bird again," said Clint. With the double smack of the 22's one bird came down with a thud, the other slanted to earth and started running, trailing a broken wing. This suited Rags; with a yelp he started in swift pursuit, hurdling logs and brush-heaps. Peggy and Clint fired simultaneously at the last bird, which flopped down beside the first three. By the time they had retrieved the down birds Rags had caught the cripple, but refused to bring it in. He stood guard over it, proudly wagging his stub of a tail, awaiting the forthcoming words of praise from his beloved master and mistress.

Stuffing the birds into Clint's pack they continued along the blazed trail for a mile or so, till the shine of water ahead apprised them of their nearness to the beaver pond—their destination. A small flock of black ducks still clung to the open water below the big beaver dam. With a great splashing and beating of wings the birds arose and swung in widening circles over the little pond, quacking excitedly among themselves in a conversational manner.

Taking off his pack, Clint tore a big hole in the dam and concealed three traps in the muddy bottom near the opening. He fastened wires to the dam and attached a rock to the far end of each, slinging the rocks out into the pond. The sliding ring of a trap chain was placed over each wire in such a manner that a beaver getting into one of the traps would have freedom to dive, the trap and drag sliding down the wire with him, drowning him effectively.

Other traps were set under water at various points along the shore of the pond; twigs were dipped into the castor scent to serve as a lure and no other bait being used, as the beaver feed almost entirely on bark and the pulpy wood coating under the bark.

Peggy found a couple of openings where bank beaver resided, and in these also traps were placed, being staked out with wire in the same manner.

Suddenly Rags set up a fearful clamor and darted into the underbrush. Startled at Rags' unusual behavior, and feeling that something must be wrong, Clint dashed after him in time to see the dog felled by a savage blow from a club in the hands of an unknown assailant whose body was concealed by the dense undergrowth. Wild with anger he rushed in to protect his dog. A scurry in the brush came to his ears. Rags' attacker was making his getaway, but for the moment Clint was vitally interested to learn the extent of the dog's injuries. Lying motionless, his head doubled under him, Clint for a moment thought him dead, and his eyes blurred with tears. Anger succeeded his grief, and carefully examining the ground the track of a small moccasin caught his eye. Racing to the top of the next ridge he listened for further sounds. All was silent, and he hurriedly retraced his steps.

As he reentered the clearing he was overjoyed to see Rags weaving hazily to his feet, uninjured except for a big lump on the back of his head.

"How did Rags get hurt? Was it a bear, Clint?" asked Peggy, her eyes wide with excitement.

"If it was, he was pretty handy with a club, for there is the stick Rags was knocked out with. His moccasin track proves him to have been a small man, or at least one with small feet. I trailed him to the top of the ridge but he got clean away. Whoever he was he must have been spying on us for some reason, though why he should do so is beyond me."

"Rags must have seen him, Clint, and attacked him because he thought we were in danger from him. But who could possibly have any reason for trying to injure us?"

"I'm sure I don't know. Some woods-queer hermit, perhaps," said Clint, who had never heard of Humpy Jean, and could think of no reason for enmity on the part of anyone.

CHAPTER III.

"That dam' dog! If it hadn't been for him I could have bounced a bullet off his master!"

Humpy Jean was busily soaking iodine into a series of punctures in his leg where Rags had sunk his teeth just previous to being clubbed into unconsciousness.

"There are two of them, and that makes it all the worse; but if they stick their noses into my trapping ground they'll get theirs." It was quite evident that Humpy's temper had not been sweetened any by his encounter with the visitors that afternoon. "If I can get the man, the girl wont stay here long alone," he reasoned.

It did not occur to Humpy that he had more trapping ground than he could possibly handle alone, outside of the one beaver colony which he considered that Clint had taken from him. With him it was "whole hog or none"; the idea of any competition was odious to him. His entire life had been spent in killing, and in his twisted mind there was little difference between the life of a man and that of an animal.

Among his possessions was a patent spring-gun—a short barrel and lock attached to a swivelled post, with a wire running parallel to the barrel. In use, the swivelled post would be stuck into the ground and a piece of meat or fish fastened to the end of the wire would serve as bait. An unwary fox, raccoon or bear, as the case might be, upon grabbing at the bait would be shot between the eyes with the 38 slug with which the weapon was loaded. "Maybe I can fix that thieving cuss with this," chuckled Humpy vindictively, as he slipped a ball cartridge into the short barrel.

Putting the deadly contrivance into his pack, the dwarf set out for the beaver pond. It was fast growing dark but he knew the trail well, and soon reached the point where Clint had set his traps in the hole torn in the big dam. A short distance below the traps Humpy went into the brush and stuck the swivelled post into the ground, then fastening a fishline to the trigger he carried this across the trail about a foot from the ground and attached it to a little maple. Going back, he adjusted the gun barrel to point breast-high and pulled back the hammer.

"When he comes along tomorrow morning that'll fix him, an' I'll make it look as if he shot himself. Hope she don't come with him, though, with that dam' dog!"

Hastily looking over the premises to be sure that he had left no incriminating signs of his presence, Humpy betook himself into the shadows again, slinking stealthily to his own cabin to await the morrow. Sleep forsook the dwarf that night, the rustle of a mouse along the log walls, the crackling of wood in the stove, and the sudden wail of a bob-cat out in the black night kept him shivering and wide awake; but remorse had no part in it, and he had no intention of trying to prevent that which he had so deliberately set in motion.

CHAPTER IV.

"Hallo, there! This is no time for trappers to be asleep!" Big Dave Burns, the game warden, stood in the little clearing on Bear Brook and shouted to Clint Lane, who had overslept that morning. "Come on out and see a fellow," Dave roared merrily.

A moment later Clint came to the door, rubbing his eyes and smiling a good-natured welcome. "Glad to see you, Dave; wait till the Missus gets dressed and we'll have a bite to eat. What are you doing over in here? Not looking for me, are you?"

"What have you been doing? Ain't got any moose meat hid out, hev ye?" asked Big Dave shrewdly.

"You are welcome to all you can dig up, Dave," retorted Clint. "I'm mighty glad you came in though, for things have been happening around here that I don't understand, and maybe you can help me figure them out."

"Spin your yarn, then," said the warden, glancing speculatively at Rags, who just then came to the door, the big lump showing plainly on the top of his head. "Who gave him that?"

"That's just what I want to know," said Clint angrily. "Some son-of-a-gun is letting himself in for a whole bundle of hard luck by doing that to a dog of mine" he went on. He then told Dave just what had happened the day previous, and asked him what he made of the affair.

"Wa'al, did ye ever meet up with the party called Humpy Jean?"

"Can't say as I have. Who is he and why should he be spying on me?"

"Don't know as he has been. Seems likely he might hev been, though, s'long's you're trappin' on his grounds. Humpy ain't quite all there, he's a touchy leetle cuss, 'nd he's meaner'n a lucivee."

This was the first intimation that Clint had received of the presence of another trapper in the section, and he was immediately convinced of the correctness of the big warden's theory. He resolved not to say anything of the matter to Peggy for fear of frightening her.

"Clint, ef that leetle runt hez a grudge agin you, take my advice an' light out uv here. He ain't the kind to stop at nuthin', he knows the woods better'n you, and he's part nutty anyhow. I don't want the job of lugging you in with a bullet smashed through yuh."

Thus spoke Big Dave, and in his words volumes were hidden. Himself practically immune to fear, yet for his friend he felt deepest anxiety, knowing the type of miscreant he had to deal with.

"No dwarf is going to run me out of this section, and that is flat!" Clint felt affronted to think that Dave held him in so low esteem; he also had an idea that Peggy would think less of him if he left the country because of the enmity of a hump-backed rival trapper. "Come on in and we'll eat; then I'd like to have you go with me to look over the beaver sets we've made."

Peggy greeted the warden cordially and the two men sat down to a table laden with fried deer liver and onions, hot coffee and doughnuts, which disappeared as if by magic.

"Aren't you feeling well, Dave? You don't seem to be eating a thing," said Peggy slyly, as Dave helped himself to his fourth doughnut.

"No m'm," said Dave gravely. "My stummick has ben acting sumpin terrible lately. Old Doc Brann sez as how I should go on a diet, so I've been sticking to biled dinners, fried sausage, mince pie and sech. I've allers been mighty fond of hot biskit, but he says they aint good fer me; so now I open up nine or ten of 'em around my plate and let 'em cool off!"

Clint and Peggy laughed uproariously, while Dave sheepishly reached out for the last doughnut on the plate. "'Spose I'll have to resk it, but I'd ruther be an old maid than miss that doughnut."

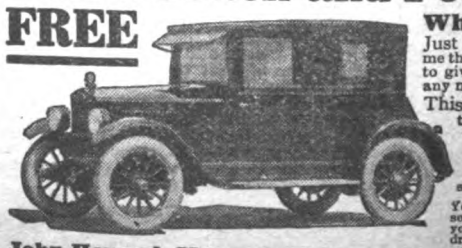
After breakfast Clint kissed his wife good-by and, picking up his pack and rifle, set off up the trail with Big Dave, Rags frisking on ahead as usual. The two men conversed in low tones as they swung along through the woods.

"Do you think that dwarf would take a shot at me?" Clint asked incredulously.

"Wa'al, I wouldn't give him a chance if I could help it. He's pretty handy with a gun and would pick you off from behind a tree if he took a notion. You'd stand as much show as an angle worm in a fish hatchery!"

As they started to cross a small brook a large mink flashed into sight below them, crossing a sand-bar. Clint tossed the little 22 to his shoulder and fired without apparent aim. At the shot the mink jumped spasmodically and rolled to the edge of the water, where he lay motionless.

"Whoopee! That was some shot! Guess you kin take care o' yerself when it comes to shootin'," yelled Big Dave as he retrieved the dead mink, pointing to the dark spot of blood welling from its ear.



"Easy money," laughed Clint, as he slipped the heavy little body into the pocket of his hunting coat and resumed the trail.

They now approached the edge of the beaver swamp, and Clint said softly, "Dave, there was a bunch of duck in here yesterday. Take it easy and maybe I can get a crack at one of them." The two stole quietly forward, with Rags still slightly in the lead. Not a twig cracked under foot as they made their way toward the open water below the dam * * * * *

The crashing report of a gun shattered the still morning air. Rags leaped high and came running excitedly back to meet the two men. Big Dave snatched his Luger from the holster under his arm and ran up the trail with Clint in close pursuit. Nothing was to be seen, and Dave commenced to circle the spot from whence the shot seemed to have come, his pistol poised for instant action. Clint watched the warden in puzzled confusion, rather expecting a bullet from some hidden foe and wondering from what point the attack would come.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Essex Coach and Ford Touring Car FREE

Which Car Do YOU Want?

Just get busy and write to me today and tell me that you want one of the automobiles I am going to give away to advertise my business. Don't send any money—a postal card will do.

This is the first, last and only announcement of this grand, free distribution of automobiles that will appear in the paper, so take time by the forelock and put in your request before someone gets ahead of you. This is not like some offers with a lot of strings tied to it, because when I say free, I mean free. Don't Send Any Money You run no risk—you have nothing to lose. Don't even send a stamp. Send your name and I will know what you want. Write plainly. Be prompt and you will be driving your own car before you can realize it.

John Howard, Manager, National Auto Club, Dept. 106, Batavia, Illinois

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 28.)

see this in print in grand old COMFORT I would like to hear from all the cousins near my own age, especially those from my own State. I will answer as many as I can.

Your loving nephew and cousin,
HENRY JESSE HARRIS

Henry, I'm glad to know your 250 Aptosians are all "up and a comin" down among your fields of artichokes. A town needs to be only as dead as the people who live in it. You sound alive, and I'm sure the other 249 are just as lively now that the sleeping acres have been awakened. The holding of large tracts of land in idleness away from the hands which might use the acres and develop them is always an evil. It is one that has been gradually but not entirely overcome in our biggest and broadest acred states. To give people access to the land and keep them happy and prosperous there is the secret of happy and prosperous government. Rather it is no secret, but a course that the tendency of modern-day national life does not follow. When wealth accumulates in cities and men decay there, so national life decays. Conditions on the land constitute always a barometer-reading of national weather. This has been so down all history. When the condition registered has been "change and storm," it has been a dark time for old empires.

RAYMOND, SOUTH CAROLINA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

For a long time now I have wanted to write— to come into your circle and talk a while. I live in the hills region of the Palmetto State, where the clay and the sand of the ancient sea are both meet. The sand is mostly tiny quartz pebbles. The predominating forest growth is the long-leaf pine which often reaches a height of over a hundred feet. This pine is tall and straight, and has few limbs except a tuft of them at the top. The needles are eight to twelve inches long and the cones are as large as a quart cup. Rosin and turpentine fill the pores of the wood in the mature trees. They make splendid lumber and produce large quantities of turpentine, tar and rosin.

The North Edisto River is one and a half miles from where I live. It is a slow-moving stream, narrow, deep and black, with wide swamps on each side. The water gets its dark tinge from the decaying vegetation, but is clear. The swamps are mostly black bogs with a jungle growth of vines and bushes, and many big trees such as cypress, gum and tulip. Sometimes, on still mornings we have heard the bellowing of the alligators. The swamp is infested with snakes, moccasins and others. An abundance of beautiful birds, flowers and insects also exist in its dark recesses. Edisto means "Medicine Man River." Before going to war, the medicine man of the local Indian tribes got water from the river and sprinkled it on the ground —thus indicating how the blood of the tribe's enemies would be poured out. Then he would quench burning pine knots— showing how he would, with his power, blot out the opponents' lives.

A great misfortune has befallen our farmers: a small insect, the cotton boll weevil, has destroyed three crops for us in succession. Many thousands of colored people, who made a living in the cotton fields, have moved away. Their lusty and melodious songs no longer rise from the happy laborers as when they hoed, plowed and picked the cotton.

We have a fine climate, with green crops often growing the year 'round. Our good soil will grow corn, peas, potatoes, sugar cane, rice, truck, and support poultry and livestock—but marketing conditions are bad.

A few words about myself: I am just a country lassie with medium brown hair, brown eyes and fair complexion. I weigh 110 pounds. I live nine miles from town and get lonesome sometimes, but I read and do fancy work a great deal in addition to housework, and I care for a flock of hens and visit some, too.

Now a word for COMFORT: I have been a subscriber for several years and think it is the best paper in the world. Why don't more of the cousins from South Carolina write? I have only seen three letters from this state. Write to me cousins, for I often have the "lonesome blues."

Affectionately your niece, LUCIA RUMFF.

I just gotta congratulate you upon your letter-Lucia. Upon your astoundingly clear handwriting and your well-expressed description of that part of the Palmetto State where you feed the chickens and do fancy work in between egg-gathering times. There must be good schools in Raymond—or a bright scholar!

Mr. Boll Weevil and his large family have indeed made great havoc in your main crop, Lucia, and even Uncle Sam has had to take a hand in fighting the pesky pest. Your words about your negro cotton pickers made me think of the lines of an old song which went, if I remember right:

"Picture tonight a field of snowy white,
Here the darkies singing, soft and low;
It's there I would be, for someone waits for me,
Down where the cotton blossoms grow."

If Mr. Boll Weevil has stopped the "soft and low" singing of your happy cotton field laborers, Lucia, it is just another grudge we will have to chalk up against the weevil family. There is a natural resilience, flutiness and harmony about negro voices which makes their singing of peculiar charm, I had rather hear such a chorus than the thrills of the most cultivated soprano or the most throaty baritone of the opera stage. Our Crowd will take care of your "lonesome blues," Lucia, and anybody who gets one of your cleverly and clearly written letters will be in luck, I'll say.

BOX 532, NEW KENSINGTON, PENNSYLVANIA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

Perhaps I ought not to write again and expect you to give space to my worthless writing; but I feel that I must express my thanks for the many letters I received. It was an utter impossibility for me to answer all of them—for there were over a thousand. Some came from those high on the tower of happiness, others from those deep in the "slough of despair." My mood often responded to the mood of these writers, but the general emotion from all of the letters was one of joy.

Many asked how I liked to teach. I find it neither the Utopia of some imagination nor the horror of the dreams of others. There is much to encourage and to inspire higher, greater efforts; there is much to discourage and break down the high aims of the real teacher. My school is over and I have permanently left the profession. With my experience, yet without seeming a booster, I hope I may say that no one merits more support and honor from the nation that do its school teachers.

I thank you for advising me to be master of the books I read. If you could see my books, you would not think that I do not master them. Every passage and every theory that I cannot agree with is marked. From time to time, I try to find the author's line of reason. Finally, if we still do not agree, the passage is covered with a pencil mark. How do you like this system of reading?

Oh, yes: don't let me forget! I am no longer living at Greason. I am now in one of the busiest sections of the state. Pittsburgh, with its huge iron mills, is only a few miles distant. It has been well called "The Smoky City," for all of the coal entering from the surrounding regions, it seems as if one quarter must pass through the flues into the air. All around is the rushing world. I truly believe this is the age of speed in travel, business and pleasure.

I am very curious to know the name of the person who has been writing to me and signing herself "Bobie Lou and Dean." I have some very important things I would like to say to said person. I would be very glad if she would write me, signing her name.

Sincerely yours, PAUL FINKEY.

We'll all be glad to have news of you again, Paul. You do not tell us what you are doing with your wise young brain now that you have given up teaching. Yes, teachers do merit "support and honor," Paul. The worth and influence of a good teacher, a true teacher, is incalculable. Yet the best and truest teaching is fairly rare. Of course certain facts and rules, the elements and ingredients of knowledge must be given. This is no small task in itself. The tools of the brain must be placed in a child's hands and he must be urged to use them and use them correctly. And then, beyond that, the best of teaching can awaken the child to express himself, to become more than a receptacle for book-knowledge.

No classroom equality, no systems of shortcuts and facilities of mental gymnastics, can give the results often hoped for by our educational specialists. Results are always found to be less or more than the teaching, and this must be always so. It has always been so when schools and systems were simpler and scholars fewer. There are brains which are sponges, brains which are sieves, brains which are machines—and brains which are dumbbells! You know this if you have been a teacher, Paul, and perhaps the joy, too, of finding the right sort of answering chord in some finely tuned young mind destined later on to make harmonies of wisdom for its fellowmen. A teacher is a Giver, Paul—and the Givers are the blessed, even when the Takers are many and the Thanks unseen.

ALBUQUERQUE, 410 E. SANTE FE AVE., NEW MEXICO.

DEAR UNCLE AND COUSINS:

Just twenty-three years ago today I received my first piece of mail from the United States Post-office. It was a copy of "COMFORT" I was a very young chap then and I placed great store by that paper, and as well as I can remember I kept that copy of COMFORT for many months. Since that time I have been a pretty steady COMFORT "fan" and considering my naturally talkative disposition and my quill-pushing profession, I think I have held my peace wonderfully well.

Mention of the word "profession," brings me to the principal motive that prompted this letter. In the many years that I have zealously read the COMFORT Cousins' Page I have seen almost every class, nationality and profession come in for a write-up; all have had champions to extol their virtues and hold up to the world the importance of their particular set in the human scheme.

THAT IS, ALL EXCEPT THE STENOGRAPHER!

It hardly seems possible that in all these years no stenographer has "felt the call" to speak out in behalf of this noble calling. Certainly there should be more than one among the million or more members of this profession who would raise a voice to tell Uncle Lisha, the Goat, and the whole cock-eyed world that the quill-pushers are all right. At any rate this silence has ended; here is one to champion the cause of the great army that writes the letters that keep the world's business in smooth running order. The real importance of this calling is sadly underrated by the average individual, but it is nevertheless a fact that fully eighty per cent. of the country's great men made use of that wonderful combination, pencil and typewriter, as a stepping stone to their greatness. By the same method, thousands of others are today hammering their way upward to distinction. If the stenographers of the country called a "walk-out" the world's business would be placed in the same position as a motor without oil. It couldn't go.

But enough of that for the time being. Let us hear from someone else on the subject. For the present no doubt some of the "back-easters" are asking; 'why does he not tell us something about the West?'" That is a good large question; so large, in fact, that I hardly know how to start the answer. If all the cousins would pack their bags and come out here I would take pleasure in cranking up the "hoopie" and showing them everything worth while in New Mexico, and that is covering a lot of territory, for we certainly have some worth-while things to see. This State can boast of having the oldest inhabited village on the American Continent as well as the oldest church in the United States. We have all the mountains, deserts, canyons, etc., of the other western States equalled, if not surpassed and no place can show a more quaint, picturesque, or wider range of scenery ingeneral. The various tribes of Indians here follow more closely the original tribal customs and show less effect of the "white man's coming" than in any other part of the country.

Albuquerque is by far the largest and most important city in the State. It is located on the famous Rio Grande, about which whole volumes could be written. It is situated on the eastern side of the river along an immensely fertile valley but the Albuquerque of today has far overgrown this valley and now spreads along the entire slope that leads off up to the mesa, or plain, two miles or more from the river. Beyond the Mesa, running parallel with the river, is a beautiful mountain chain; the majestic Sandies, forming a fitting background for the wonderful setting spread out below. These mountains are twenty miles away but the mesa is so absolutely level and devoid of landmarks, and the atmosphere so clear, that the average "tenderfoot" will gamble that the distance is less than three miles.

Health seekers from every point of the compass attest the fact that this is the most wonderful climate in the world. Sufferers from asthma, tuberculosis, and similar complaints, discard their medicines and become strong again through the action of the atmosphere alone. The sun shines every day in the year, the nights are cool, the days pleasant, and no words can accurately describe the wonderful sweetness of the air as it sweeps along in a gentle, but almost continuous breeze from beyond the Rio Grande.

I haven't space to tell a hundredth part of it, but I have considerable spare time and some postage stamps, and invite everyone who is interested to write. Especially do I want to hear from every other stenographer and typist in the United States. I promise to answer every one of them and send them some literature and pictures. Also would like to have a personal letter, or better still, a personal visit from Uncle Lisha and the Goat.

Regards to all, E. A. BLOUNT.

I'm giving place to your fervent plea for the stenogs, E. A. Yep, your profession is the important first cog upon which the business wheel revolves. It would have to move pretty slow without your army of dot and dash and curlicue makers. If I were just such an army member, I could make our Family's always growing wheel grind through its grist of letters much better than I do in my slow old-fashioned way. For I'm a darn poor typist, E. A., and I don't know a curve of shorthand.

You give a shining picture of life down near the Rio Grande, E. A., and in between tapping of the types you and your "hoopie" must get in some fun and sunlight. It's a long trail to Albuquerque and I don't know whether Bill and I will ever get that far from Brooklyn and the trollies, although I'm sure the climate would be good for Billy's atrocious rheumatism. But here's thanks for your invite, and if I ever hit town, I'll drop in to show you how fast I can write "The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog" on any Albuquerquan writing machine. I'm some typer, E. A., when I get both fingers going and my eye peeled!

MAPLE HILL, KANSAS.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

Greetings from a new cousin! And I hope my letter gets by Billy's inspection. First let me describe myself: I am nine feet five—or else five feet, nine inches tall, and I weigh about 156 pounds. I have brown hair and eyes and a tanned complexion. I am not so durned much uglier than anybody else But, Uncle, don't think that I am a beauty, for I am not.

How many of you cousins would like to go fishing for a week or two? I'll make the flapjacks and bile the coffee, if any of you can catch fish enough for a good mess for me to fry.

Maybe you would like to know what kind of a place I live in? It is a rough hilly country, with lots of rocks. It is mostly pasture land, except along the creeks. The hills pastures are now all full of cattle.

I will close with much love to Uncle and all the cousins, and I would like to hear from any that would care to write.

Your nephew, EARL GILLASPIE.

Just as you say, Earl, if you don't want to be entered in our Beauty Contest or in Bill's Album, all right. We'll leave you out and not even put you in the appendix or in the vermiform. Yet if I should be durned hungry some cool, dew-kissed Kansas morning after a fishing trip, and you should come into my tent with a tin plate heaped high with steaming flapjacks and sizzling bullheads—why I'd think you as handsome as William Allen White or the front door of an Emporia restaurant. For it is truly a beautiful thing to be a good cook, Earl. On a fishing and camping trip a chap that burns the flapjacks on one side and makes weak coffee is ugly as sin—no matter how handsome his sideburns may be—even if they are handsome as those of Cousin L. Hollis Bowen!

Earl, if you and I ever fish the Maple Hill creeks, I'll let you wiggle the frying pan and agree to keep it full of perch, bullheads, or any other sort of finny food that swims in the Kansas floods. We'll even keep two fry pans going, and when you get tired flipping the flapjacks, we'll let Bill hold the handle and bake the flapjacks scientifically and according to the Encyclopedia Brittanica formula.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 36.)

Mind Your Own Business

A woman stopped here the other morning and asked for permission to blow up her tires. When she had put in 110 pounds ,I said:

"Lady, you are putting in too much air. You will blow out your tires."

"Oh, no, I won't," she replied, "my husband told me to put in sixty pounds a week, and we are going away for three weeks."—The Car.

Comfort's Home Lawyer

Through the columns of this department, subscribers may have free advice from our eminent legal adviser on all questions of law except divorce matters.

Address Home Lawyer, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published.

W. T. D., Kentucky.—We are of the opinion that a remarriage during the lifetime of the husband or wife, unless divorced, is a bigamous and illegal marriage under the laws of all the states of the union, and that the party contracting such a marriage would be liable to punishment for such act.

V. B. S., West Virginia.—If as we understand from your communication your father died in 1906, and the present holder of the property in Massachusetts claims title to some land through a purported quit claim deed from him dated and acknowledged in the year 1916, we think you should have no difficulty in having this deed and the conveyance of the property set aside in the proper action brought for the purpose.

A. J. D., Kansas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that a married woman has no interest in her husband's property unless she survives him except that during the marriage she is entitled to be supported by him, unless she forfeits her right to such support, so that if the property you mention all belonged to your father you acquired no interest therein upon her death during his lifetime, but if the property stood in your mother's name, and she died without a will you would have inheritance rights in her estate, depending upon the nature of the property and upon who was left as her heirs at law and next of kin; we think the share of any minor child should during minority be administered by a properly appointed guardian.

Mrs. J. H., Pennsylvania.—We think it will be necessary for your husband to sue the man who refuses or neglects to pay him the wages he owes him.

Mrs. X. Y. Z., Michigan.—We think that if the property you mention all stands in your and your husband's names as tenants by the entirety or as joint tenants the whole property upon the death of one becomes the sole property of the survivor.

Mrs. M. H., Virginia.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that during the marriage a married woman shall have the right to acquire, hold, use and control her separate property except that she cannot sell or mortgage her real estate without her husband's signature and that she cannot bar his right to his curtesy in the real estate in case he survived her and in case children were born alive to the marriage; we think, however, he is entitled to own and control property turned over to him by his wife even though such property at first belonged to her alone.

Mrs. M. J. C., Texas.—Under the laws of your state, we do not think step-children have any inheritance rights in their stepparent's estate, except that they, of course, would inherit from their own parent's estates such interest as may in turn have come to the parent from the stepparent's estate.

Mrs. J. S. M., Nebraska.—Your mother has a legal right to make a will provided she possesses testamentary capacity and is not under undue influence from an other person, but we are of the opinion that such a will cannot dispose of such property as she voluntarily turned over to your stepfather during her lifetime; she can, by will, dispose of only such property as she owns at the time of her death.

A. A. G., North Carolina.—We do not think you can now enforce your claim for damages for personal injuries after a lapse of 17 years.

Mrs. M. C. H., Texas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that if you were the sole beneficiary named in your husband's life insurance policy neither your children nor any of your former husband's relatives have any interest in the property purchased by you from the proceeds of that policy, but if such policy was payable to your former husband's estate we think the children of the marriage would have an interest in the proceeds of such policy if they were not cut off by will.

R. L. S., Texas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that if your mother died leaving no will your father, after payment of debts and expenses, would be entitled to receive one-third of her separate personal estate absolutely, and one-third of her separate real estate for life, and his one-half share of the community property, the balance of the estate going to your mother's children in equal shares, the descendants of any deceased child taking the parent's share; we think any person in interest can, in the proper action or proceeding, compel a division of the estate, or the sale of the property and a division of the money proceeds of such sale.

W. T. D., Kentucky.—We think the remarriage of the man you mention during the lifetime of his wife, from whom he is not divorced, would be a bigamous marriage and would make such man liable to prosecution for such act, regardless of where such remarriage took place.

V. B. G., Kentucky.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that if your father possessed proper mental capacity and was not under undue influence of any other person, he had a legal right to make such division of his property among his children as he saw fit regardless of whether some of the children received larger shares than the others.

A. M. J., Tennessee.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that the consent of the parents is necessary for the marriage of either males or females under 18 years of age.

Mrs. E. R. M., North Carolina.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that the property rights of the husband and wife are not affected by the fact that the marriage took place in some other place; we think property voluntarily turned over by the wife to her husband becomes his property and is subject to his disposition and control; we think the husband is liable for the support of his wife unless she abandons him without good cause, or unless she has means of her own sufficient to provide for her support.

Mrs. M. S. W., Washington.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a widow, leaving no will, and leaving two children as her only heirs-at-law and next of kin her estate, after payment of debts and expenses, would go in equal shares to such children.

Mrs. G. S., Wisconsin.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that women become of age at twenty-one, but that married women may make will and bar dower at eighteen.

M. B., Texas.—We do not think you can now recover any interest in the land in Georgia, if you and your ancestors have neglected to prosecute your claim to same since 1865.

Mother, New Jersey.—We do not think you would be entitled to have the name of your small son changed to that of your present husband without notice to his father, if the father is living.

Goodyear Raincoat Free

Goodyear Mfg. Co., 3167-R Goodyear Bld'g., Kansas City, Mo., is making an offer to send a handsome raincoat to one person in each locality who will show and recommend it to friends. If you want one write today.—Advertisement.

Be a Certificated Electrical Expert

Earn $3,500 to $10,000 a Year

You can do it. Even the ordinary Electrician—the screw driver kind—earn top wages, but I can quickly fit you for one of the big "bossing" jobs paying from $70 to $200 a week. Lack of experience or education no drawback. Learn at home in your spare time. Radio Course, Employment Service, Consulting Service and Big Outfit of tools, material and Instruments given absolutely free. Investigate! Write today for Electrical Book, Sample Lessons, Proof and Guarantee Cash Bond—all FREE.

L. L. COOKE, Chief Engineer
Chicago Engineering Works
Dept. 386, 2150 Lawrence Avenue Chicago

SAW 15 Cords a day, EASY!

—with the wonderful OTTAWA Log Saw. Saws more than 10 men—Save your back. Write for Special Offer. CASH OR EASY TERMS. 90 DAYS' TRIAL.

FREE BOOK! Tells how to make big money sawing and selling wood. Send a Post Card for it—TODAY.

OTTAWA MFG. CO., 911-R Wood Street, Ottawa, Kansas.
Magee Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Learn Electricity Free Railroad Fare. Great Shops of Coyne. Complete in 3 1/2 months. Enter anytime. Special limited offer. Earn your way. Drafting—Radio free. Send for big FREE Catalog!
Coyne Electrical School, Dept. 370s
1300-1310 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

A NEW WAY TO GET YOUR CLOTHES ABSOLUTELY FREE and Make Big Money during your spare time—something different, better, bigger, more liberal than any offer ever made. Lower prices—better clothes—bigger cash profits—express or postage paid on everything.

DOUBLE PAY

Free Clothes and Cash Profits Besides. You can easily earn $30.00 cash, extra, every week during your spare time, taking orders for our made-to-measure clothes. We don't ask you to use your cash profits for your own clothes. That's not our way of doing business. Ours is a new and better plan.

Fifty-six stylish, real cloth samples—FREE colored fashion plates; inside wholesale prices—everything FREE. Just drop us a line today and we will send complete outfit FREE.

SPENCER MEAD CO., Dept. W215 Chicago

Sell Shirts

Sell Madison "Better-Made" Shirts, Pajamas, and Nightshirts direct from our factory to wearer. Nationally advertised. Easy to sell. Exclusive patterns. Exceptional values. No experience or capital required. Large steady income assured. Entirely new proposition. WRITE FOR FREE SAMPLES.

MADISON SHIRT CO., 503 B'way, N.Y. City

MAKE MONEY AT HOME

We pay 15 to 50 Dollars a week for your Spare Time—No Canvassing—Experience Unnecessary. Write today for illustrated Booklet & Free Working Outfit.

United Show Card Studio, 245 Dinan Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

$1.97

GUARANTEED WATCH

To advertise our business, and introduce our bargain price list of Elgin Watches, we will send this elegant guaranteed watch by Parcel Post C.O.D. $1.97 ONLY, nickel silver plated case, stem wind and stem set, genuine American lever movement, fully guaranteed a reliable timekeeper. Give your full P. O. address, box or St. No., and watch will be sent at once. Pay your Postmaster $1.97 and it is yours. Satisfaction guaranteed. Boston Jewelry Co. 39 W. Adams St. R 18 Chicago, Ill.

FREE TRIAL

Let us send this fine Razor for 30 days free trial. When satisfied after using, send $1.85 or return razor. Order Today.
JONES MFG. CO. 925 N. Lawler Ave., Dept. 948, Chicago

United States Consumes Most of World's Rubber

Big as the growth of world production has been, says the Trade Record of The National City Bank of New York, the increase in our importation and consumption has been equally great. World production in 1913 was 208,000 tons and in 1921 approximately 400,000 tons or about four times as much in 1921 as in the year before the war, while the quantity imported into the United States in the fiscal year 1922 is five times as much as in 1913. World rubber production since 1913 has aggregated 4,800,000,000 pounds, while our own importations in the same period have aggregated 3,140,000,000 pounds or 65 per cent. of the world production during the eight years in which the rubber plantations of the Orient have been astonishing the world with their unexpectedly great outturn, which has brought prices to a point far below those before the plantations came into active operation.

WANTED
RAILWAY POSTAL CLERKS
$1600 to $2300 Year
MEN—BOYS 18 UP SHOULD MAIL COUPON IMMEDIATELY

Steady work. No layoffs. Paid Vacations

Common education sufficient:
Travel—See the country

COUPON

FRANKLIN INSTITUTE, Dept. B215, Rochester, N. Y.
Sirs: Send me without charge, (1) Sample Railway Postal Clerk Examination questions; (2) List of government jobs now obtainable; (3) Send free illustrated book, "How to Get Government Jobs."

Name .....
Address .....

$100 a Week Time to stop drifting, young man! Make up your mind you're going into the $5000 a year class. I can show you your Big Opportunity in the automobile business. I'll show you how to prepare for it, how to cash in.

Your Own $10,000 a Year business! Men all over the U. S. have stepped from poverty to fortune after completing my remarkable "Job-Way" course. Do you realize you can go into business for yourself with little capital—that if you know how to do any job you can get all the work you can handle?

Be an Auto-Tractor-Truck EXPERT!

You can NOW learn at Home! Without leaving your present job, without leaving home. My new copyrighted "Job-Way" method enables me to crowd 2 years of school work into a few months of pleasant home-study! I guarantee to make you an Auto Expert, expert in Electricity, Welding, Vulcanizing and Battery OR TO REFUND EVERY CENT OF YOUR MONEY!

Write Today! Get my special offer quick! Price reduced, terms smashed, $18.50 Repair Kit free, $45 Radio Course free and many other inducements to have you start NOW! Write for Free book!

Cooke Auto School Trains You to do Any Job

Learn by "Job-Method" how to find trouble, make repairs, test Electrical system, time engine, adjust carburetor and make the big money!

$18.50 Repair KIT FREE! Battery outfit, tool kit, Vulcanizing outfit. Helps you to do any job, and turn your spare time into money soon after you start your course.

B. W. Cooke, President
COOKE AUTO SCHOOL
Dept. 104,
1553 W. Madison St., Chicago

NEW CORD
Price-Lowest Ever

GREAT PRICE CUT ON GEM CORDS
the tire that gives 10,000 miles of satisfactory service. Cut your tire costs by these excellent GEM CORD TIRES at low prices. Best tire ever seen. Another Gem Cord half price for any tire not satisfactory.

30 x 3½ $6.75

10,000 Mile Guarantee Policy

SEND NO MONEY
All GEM CORDS shipped C. O. D. EXAMINE TIRE. If not the best buy you ever made, return the tire and get your money back.

Size	Cords	Tubes
30x3	$6.15	$1.05
30x3½	6.75	1.25
32x3½	8.45	1.55
31x4	9.75	1.65
32x4	10.25	1.75
33x4	10.75	1.90
34x4	11.25	1.95
32x4½	13.45	2.00
33x4½	13.95	2.10
34x4½	14.50	2.25
35x4½	14.95	2.50
36x4½	15.25	2.50
33x5	16.00	2.75
35x5	17.00	3.00

ORDER NOW—5% discount for cash with order.
GEM RUBBER COMPANY
Dept. 424, 1315 S. Oakley Blvd., CHICAGO, ILL.

Only $14.24 Down
Puts this WITTE (Magneto Equipped) On YOUR Place
For 90 Days FREE TRIAL

Amazing Throttling Governor Engine burns Kerosene, Gasoline, Distillate or Gas. Simple and trouble-proof. The low price includes famous WICO Magneto. Sold DIRECT to YOU at FACTORY PRICE. All sizes—2 to 25 H-P.

FREE—Write today for details of this remarkable free trial offer and wonderful, new, illustrated Engine Book. No obligation. Address
WITTE ENGINE WORKS
3643 Oakland Avenue, KANSAS CITY, MO.
3643 Empire Building, PITTSBURGH, PA.

30 X 3½ CORD $2.00 NEW TIRE PRICE

GUARANTEED 8 MONTHS AT HALF PRICE

These are Goodrich, Goodyear, Firestone, Fisk and other best known standard make tires. All slightly used, but readily give our customers thousands of miles of splendid service.

LOWEST TIRE PRICES IN AMERICA

	Tires	New Tubes		Tires	New Tubes
30x3	$1.90	$ .90	32x4½	$3.75	$1.65
30x3½	2.00	.90	33x4½	3.75	1.65
32x3½	2.50	.90	34x4½	4.00	1.65
31x4	2.75	.90	35x4½	4.25	1.65
32x4	3.00	1.40	36x4½	4.25	1.65
33x4	3.25	1.40	35x5	4.25	1.95
34x4	3.50	1.40	37x5	4.25	1.95

SEND ONLY $1.00 for each tire shipped. Balance C.O.D. Express shipments sent section unwrapped for inspection. Tires guaranteed eight months. Another tire given at half price for any not perfectly satisfactory. Dealers and Agents wanted everywhere. WRITE—RUSH ORDERS.
ROSE TIRE CORPORATION
Dept. J123, 1526 S. WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Tire Agents Wanted
Use and Introduce MELLINGER CORD TIRES
12,000 Miles Guaranteed!

Lowest Wholesale Prices in America. Shipped prepaid on approval. Make big money all or part time. No capital or experience. Sample sections furnished.
FREE TIRES FOR YOUR CAR to one user in each locality. Simply send name today for valuable book, tells how thousands have gone into big business. SPECIAL AGENTS' OFFER. Wholesale Prices and FREE SAMPLE KIT.
MELLINGER TIRE & RUBBER CO.
$600,000 Capital. DEPT. 506, KANSAS CITY, MO.

FORDS run 34 Miles (on Gallon of Gasoline)
Low Gear Seldom Used
With Air-Friction Carburetor

Guaranteed to reduce gasoline bills on any car from one-half to one-third and increase power of motors from 30 to 50%.
Sent on 30 Day's Trial
Fits any car. Attach yourself. Starts easy in cold weather. No shifting of gears in slow moving traffic. Send make of car and take advantage of our special 30-day trial offer. Agents Wanted.
AIR-FRICTION CARBURETOR CO.
41 Raymond Bldg. Dayton, Ohio

You Can Save $35.00

$4.45 and up Parcels Postpaid

Recover it yourself. Custom tailor made to fit all makes and models. Roof and quarters sewed together, with rear fasteners, welts and tacks, complete. Anybody can put it on. Give name, year, model number of your car. Catalog FREE. Agents wanted.
LIBERTY TOP & TIRE CO. Dept. F1 Cincinnati, O.

Automobile and Gas Engine Helps

Questions relating to gasolene engines and automobiles, by our subscribers, addressed to COMFORT Auto Dept., Augusta, Maine, will be answered by our expert, free, in the columns of this department. Full name and address is required, but initials only will be printed. That we may intelligently diagnose your trouble please state the year in which your car was made.

About Repairs

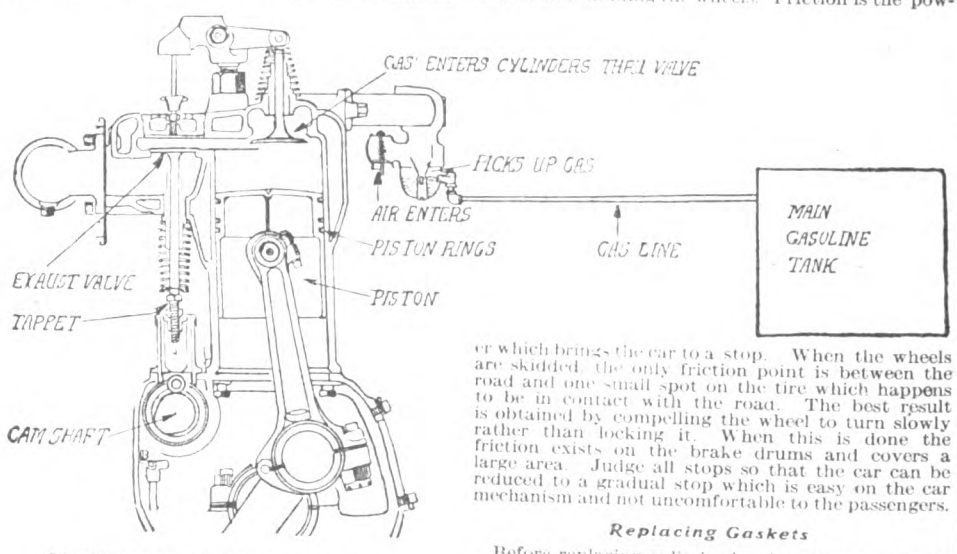
SOME automobile owners entertain the belief that the repair mechanic is a miracle worker and that all troubles should vanish immediately before his magic touch. While such a condition is surely desirable it is not always humanly possible. The owner will often work on his car and after many hours of labor find that he has not helped conditions but if anything has made them worse. It is then that he will speed off to the mechanic and expect the miracle to take place.

One instance which I well recall was when an owner brought his car into the shop and stated that the engine was not hitting evenly. A test of the compression proved that two cylinders were developing 65 pounds compress on while the others developed from 30 pounds to almost nothing. Inquiry divulged that the valves had been ground in and carbon removed. The owner had handled the work and stated that he had blued the seats and he was absolutely sure of the valve seating. It was impossible to shake his belief. After much persuasion he agreed to the pulling off of the cylinder head and to his surprise it was noted that carbon was piled under several exhaust valves, preventing their seating. The valves had been newly purchased and were of a 45 degree angle. The valve seat next was checked and this proved to be 40 degree angle. The owner had acted in good faith and had put in several hours of hard work. Grinding a valve of one angle into a seat of another angle had produced a seat which did not stand up. When the seats were cut to a 45 degree angle and the valves refaced to the same angle, they were easily ground in to a perfect fit.

Owners who do their own repair work or have the same done by others who are not completely familiar with the car should be careful of the parts replaced to make certain that they are of the proper kind. If care is not used along these lines, it is a simple matter to create a condition which will baffle the mechanic who specializes on repair work for that particular make of car.

When new parts are needed they should be purchased from the car manufacturer or from the authorized representative. The parts clerk should be given the model and serial number of the car as he will then be in position to pass out parts of the same pattern as originally furnished with the car. This is the only safe method.

The owner is also sometimes hasty in passing judgment on a repair job.



One owner whom I can recall had a friend do considerable work on his car. Shortly afterwards he called at the shop stating that the engine was missing badly. He was loud in his condemnation of the work which his friend had done and expressed his sorrow that he had not brought the car in at the first. Inquiry brought out the fact that the engine had operated very satisfactorily when the friend had finished but had started to miss after being driven for a few days. A check of the job showed that the friend really had accomplished a good job of tuning. He had ground the va ves, taken up the bearings and accomplished various other minor adjustments. The cause of the mistiring was due to having set the valve tappets up a trifle too close. The valves after a little driving had pounded down into the seat bringing the valve stem closer to the tappet. The expansion which took place when the engine warmed up was sufficient to cause the valves to stick open. A slight adjustment to the tappets restored the necessary clearance and produced a smooth running engine.

Gas Engine Operation

Several inquires received of late would indicate that there are now many readers of these columns who do not possess a clear understanding relative to the operating principle of the gas engine as used in the automobile.

Gasolene is first poured into the storage tank. If the tank is at the rear of the car, turning the engine over creates a vacuum which lifts a certain amount of fuel out of the storage tank and places it in a small tank where it is in position to flow by gravity to the carburetor as needed. As the gasolene flows into the carburetor it comes in contact with a float which, when a certain level is reached, closes a valve and prevents any more gasolene from entering. After entering the carburetor, the gasolene flows in a jet where a certain amount is picked out by air which is drawn through the carburetor and around the jet by the suction, or downward, stroke of the piston. On the way to the carburetor the gasolene and air become thoroughly mixed taking the form of a gas which is combustible. This gas enters the cylinder through an open valve. After entering the cylinder, the valve closes, and on the upward stroke of the piston the gas is tightly compressed. At the point of highest compression a spark takes place in the cylinder and explodes the tightly compressed gas. The explosion drives the piston down on what is termed the power stroke. This is the stroke which gives power. When the piston is at the bottom of its power stroke a valve opens affording a passage from the cylinder to the muffler. The next upward stroke of the piston sweeps the burned gases through this opening into the muffler and finally into the atmosphere.

Regardless of the number of cylinders which make up the engine, the same operations must take place in each cylinder. No two cylinders fire at the same time. The power strokes may occur in rapid succession but, although the interval is very brief, the explosions are separate. The operations through which a cylinder must pass are suction, compression, power and exhaust.

ONE-CYLINDER 4-CYCLE GAS ENGINE.

Waiting

The gate tender at the railway crossing is not hired by the railroads to hold up traffic. This is contrary to the belief entertained by many who seem to be of the opinion that he has the power to lift a long freight off the track so that traffic may go on. It must be admitted that a long wait at a crossing tries the patience of the driver but if one would take the time to consider he surely would appreciate the folly of the action which many times takes place. It is amusing at times to wait at a crossing when the gates are down and have a long freight come to a stop across the path of traffic. All is peaceful for about a minute but if the freight has not started after that period then there is certain to break forth the chorus of horns from the waiting motorists. The engineer is hundreds of yards away and cannot hear the chorus. Even if he could hear them he would be helpless to take any action. The gate tender up in the tower becomes the source of admiration. Heads pop out from the sides of the cars and the glances are directed at the tower. What is really expected of this man is beyond the writer to determine. The noise becomes a nuisance to the residents in the neighborhood of the crossing and is really uncalled for, as it has no effect in obtaining action.

Another matter of interest is the racing of the engine while waiting at the crossing. Some drivers believe that they are called upon to step on the throttle every five seconds. Some engines when stiff or not properly adjusted are apt to stall when idled for a long time. If it is not desired to shut the engine off the tendency to stall can be overcome by opening the throttle a trifle, placing the speed of the engine at a point a trifle above idling. Racing the engine at short intervals as above described causes rapid heating is not good from a mechanical standpoint and last, but not least, is a condition which commands considerable attention from people on the street and in cars. It is anything but desirable.

Healthful Pointers

Driving Down Hill.

Considerable has been read at different times regarding the proper procedure when driving down hill. Some instruction books yet publish recommendations relative to turning off the ignition switch and permitting the car to coast with the clutch engaged and the gear shifting lever in high. Nothing to my way of thinking could be more contrary to the principle of operation. The throttle valve controlling the amount of fuel taken from the carburetor cannot be fu'ly closed. When the ignition is turned off the engine is drawing a small amount of combustible mixture from the carburetor. This mixture which is not fired attacks the oil on the cylinder walls and thins it. The mixture is then pushed out into the muffler where a certain percentage remains. Consider the condition which takes place at the base of the hill when ignition is turned on. The hot gases from the first exploded charges are pushed into the muffler where they come into contact with the combustible gases which col ected there while coasting down the hill. The result usually is a loud explosion in the muffler, many times causing the muffler to tear apart. When the engine is to be used as a brake close the throttle but do not turn off the ignition switch.

Cleaning Strainer

Strainers are often placed in the carburetor and gasolene line to catch particles of dirt. In time the fine meshed screen may become clogged with an accumulation of foreign matter and require cleaning so as not to impede the flow of fuel. The best way to handle this is to blow the particles off with air pressure. Never try to pick the particles off with a pin or nail as this is almost certain to spread or damage the screen so that straining action will not be perfect.

Proper Use of Brakes

The best effect is not obtained by locking the brakes and skidding the wheels. Friction is the power which brings the car to a stop. When the wheels are skidded, the only friction point is between the road and one small spot on the tire which happens to be in contact with the road. The best result is obtained by compelling the wheel to turn slowly rather than locking it. When this is done the friction exists on the brake drums and covers a large area. Judge all stops so that the car can be reduced to a gradual stop which is easy on the car mechanism and not uncomfortable to the passengers.

Replacing Gaskets

Before replacing cylinder head, carburetor, manifold, water and other gaskets rub them on both sides with a cup grease or heavy oil. This will insure a tight joint when the stubs and bolts are drawn up.

Carbon

When the engine knocks and loses power on the hil s or should it keep on firing after the switch key is turned to the off position, the indications are that carbon has accumulated in large quantities in the cylinders. Scraping is the best way to rid the cylinders of this substance. However, it is not always convenient to have the work done immediately and should the owner desire to improve the operation it is well to experiment with liquid removers. After the motor has been thoroughly warmed up pour in about three or four teaspoonfuls of kerosene in each cylinder and allow to stand over night. The car will emit considerable smoke when first started in the morning but will soon clear. A mixture of alcohol and kerosene is said to be very effective when used in the above manner. Some liquid carbon removers proffered for sale on the open market contain acids which are injurious to the motor.

Battery Hints

Never lay anything on top of the battery.

Do not hold lighted match or other open flame in mouth of cell when trying to determine the amount of electrolyte.

Keep all connections tight and covered with vaseline to prevent corrosion. Wipe off spilled solution with waste or rag wet with ammonia.

Take the specific gravity reading of the battery before adding distilled water. It is not reliable to take the reading directly after adding the water as it has not had the opportunity to become thoroughly mixed with the electrolyte.

When one cell continually requires more water than the other cells the indication is that the jar is leaking. A leaky jar allows the electrolyte to leak out and causes the cell to weaken. It is always well to have the jar repaired at once as it may weaken the battery to a point where it will not furnish sufficient current for operation. This may occur when you are urgently in need of the car or miles away from help.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 35.)

NEW-TREAD TIRES AT 40¢ ON THE DOLLAR

Send No Money!
Here is a real opportunity to cut your season's tire bill notwithstanding advances in prices. For a limited period only we offer our famous NEW TREAD Tires—as illustrated—at less than ½ Made of NEW LIVE RUBBER and built on the best carcass money can buy.

Special Sale Prices

Size	Tire	Tube	Size	Tire	Tube
28x3	$4.95	$1.25	30x4	$6.85	$2.25
30x3	4.95	1.35	32x4½	8.85	2.45
30x3½	5.85	1.40	33x4½	8.90	2.45
32x3½	6.50	1.50	34x4½	9.15	2.50
31x4	7.00	1.60	35x4½	9.25	2.60
32x4	7.50	1.85	36x4½	9.45	2.70
33x4	7.85	2.15	35x5	9.75	2.80
34x4	8.10	2.25	37x5	9.95	2.90

ALL OUR TUBES ARE NEW FRESH STOCK and Guaranteed for One Year. Shipped same day order is received. Fay on approval. If not satisfied, return AT OUR EXPENSE. Specify whether straight sides or clincher wanted. FIVE PER CENT DISCOUNT when cash accompanies order. DEALER AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY LOCALITY.
STANDARD TIRE & RUBBER CO.
3253 S. Morgan St., Chicago, Illinois

NEW TIRE REDUCTION
30x3½ CORD $2.00

10 MONTHS WRITTEN GUARANTEE
Sensational Price Reduction on these almost new Goodrich, Goodyear, Firestone, Fisk, U.S., and other standard make tires. Our customers getting thousands of miles of satisfactory service.

America's Record Price Sale

Size	Tires	Tubes	Size	Tires	Tubes
30x3	$1.90	$ .90	32x4½	$3.50	$1.65
30x3½	2.00	.90	33x4½	3.60	1.65
32x3½	2.25	.90	34x4½	3.75	1.65
31x4	2.50	.90	35x4½	4.00	1.65
32x4	3.00	1.40	36x4½	4.00	1.65
33x4	3.00	1.40	35x5	4.00	1.65
34x4	3.25	1.40	37x5	4.00	1.65

FREE EXAMINATION
Enclose only $1 deposit with each tire ordered—balance send C. O. D. Section unwrapped for inspection. If not entirely satisfactory return. Written guarantee sent with each tire protects you for 10 months' satisfactory service or another given at ½-price. Buy now.
CAPITAL TIRE CO. 2129 S. Wabash Ave. Dept. 100 Chicago

NEW TIRE GUARANTEE

ACT NOW
30X3½ CORD 2.00
WRITTEN GOLD BOND GUARANTEE WITH EACH TIRE

Greatest tire sale in America now on! Goodyear, Goodrich, Firestone, Fisk and other fine makes of tires going at record-breaking prices. These almost new tires will easily give thousands of miles of satisfactory service.

GUARANTEED 9 MONTHS

	TIRES	NEW TUBES		TIRES	NEW TUBES
30x3	$1.90	$ .90	32x4½	$3.75	$1.65
30x3½	2.00	.90	33x4½	3.75	1.65
32x3½	2.50	.90	34x4½	4.00	1.65
31x4	2.75	.90	35x4½	4.25	1.65
32x4	3.00	1.40	36x4½	4.25	1.65
33x4	3.25	1.40	35x5	4.25	1.95
34x4	3.50	1.40	37x5	4.25	1.95

Just send $1.00 deposit for each tire ordered. Balance C. O. D. subject to inspection. Our written gold bond guarantee with each tire positively assures you nine months satisfactory service or another tire will be given at half price. Shipment made same day order is received. Order today—NOW.
INTERNATIONAL TIRE CORP.
86 EAST 14th STREET CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

INSYDE TYRES

Inner Armor for auto tires. Prevent blowouts and punctures. Double tire mileage. Easily applied to any tire between casing and tube. Details free. Agents wanted. Liberal profits. Amer. Accessories Co., Tire 251 Cincinnati, O.

$50 to $100 a Week
—and much more is being made by many of our 4000 Paul men demonstrating and selling—
AIR-GAGE Inner Tubes
—greatest improvement ever made. Air Gauge in valve stem of every tube shows pressure at a glance. Build a profitable and permanent business of your own. Experience not necessary. We teach you how to sell and give exclusive territory. Free boot explains all.
PAUL RUBBER CO. Dept. 7, Salisbury, N. C.

Gigantic Clearance Sale!
100,000 Tires

TWO TIRES FOR LESS THAN THE USUAL PRICE OF ONE
Our tremendous stock of Tires must be sold at once! Here is your opportunity, if you act quickly, to get two tires for much less than the usual cost of one—and a free inner tube with each tire. Take advantage of this record-breaking sale! Thousands of motorists everywhere are getting exceptional mileage out of these tires—and you, too, can get
12,000 Miles
SEND NO MONEY! We require no deposit. We make shipment C.O.D. subject to your approval. If not fully satisfied on examination, your money promptly refunded, including shipping charges. You take no risk at all. ACT NOW—MAIL YOUR ORDER TODAY!
ALBANY TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY
1506 S. Michigan Ave., Dept. 30 J, Chicago

Size	1 Tire	2 Tires
30x3	$7.25	$11.95
30x3½	8.25	13.95
32x3½	9.45	15.95
31x4	10.65	17.45
32x4	11.85	19.75
33x4	12.45	20.95
34x4	13.25	21.95
32x4½	13.45	22.45
33x4½	13.95	22.95
34x4½	14.45	23.45
35x4½	14.95	24.90
36x4½	15.90	26.45
35x5	15.90	26.45

Specify S. S. or Clincher

FREE TUBE WITH EACH TIRE

Brownie's Triumph

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 29.)

"Let us go and see how it fares with her now; methinks the proud beauty will be somewhat humbled by this time. But, humbled or not, she will have to stay there until after your marriage, for if Mr. Dredmond should find her now, there would be an end to all your fine plans," said Mrs. Coolidge, moving toward the draped door.

She shoved the heavy bolt, and the two women entered Brownie's prison.

They found her sitting upon the floor, looking pale and wan.

The light which they bore blinded her eyes at first so that she could scarcely see, but she arose as they entered and stood in haughty silence before them, and holding the precious casket tightly clasped in her hands behind her.

"Well, how do you like your place of retirement? Quiet, isn't it?" sneered Isabel, while she began to walk about the place as it to examine it.

The insulted girl deigned her no reply.

"Miss Douglas, I have come to make one more appeal to you. Are you willing to accede to my terms?"

"No, madam!"

"Will nothing move you? Cannot I persuade you, under any circumstances, to let Isabel retain those jewels a while longer, and you keep silent about them?"

"You cannot, madam; there is a limit to human endurance I have reached that limit."

But scarce were the words spoken when she uttered a cry of pain and dismay.

Isabel had glided stealthily around behind her, and with one powerful blow had dashed the casket from her hands.

The next instant, and before Brownie could turn to prevent her, she had captured it, and with a low, mocking laugh, glided from the place.

With all her spirit roused to battle, Brownie sprang to follow the artful girl, but Mrs. Coolidge barred the way.

"No, no, miss, you cannot leave this place tonight; you are in too dangerous a mood," she said.

"What do you mean by detaining me here?" Brownie demanded, almost passionately.

"I mean just what I said, that you are too dangerous to be let loose tonight, unless you will solemnly promise not to make any trouble for us."

"You are very much mistaken if you think you can make any such terms with me, Mrs. Coolidge. I do not fear you in the least, and unless you restore my jewels, and let me go at once, I shall make such trouble that you will rue it until your dying day."

"You do not fear me, and I have power to keep you here indefinitely?" she retorted, flushing angrily.

"That may be, but there will come a day of reckoning sooner or later," Brownie replied, dauntlessly. "You do not suppose," she added, scornfully, "that in this nineteenth century you can keep me concealedd for any length of time. I shall be missed, if I am not already, and the whole house searched for me."

"You have been missed, and the whole house and grounds have been thoroughly searched for you, but no one has thought of looking here for you, Miss Douglas," Mrs. Coolidge replied, with a malicious gleam in her eyes.

Brownie's heart sank, and she grew whiter about the mouth at these words, but she would give no outward sign of the growing fear in her heart.

"May I ask how long you intend to keep me in solitary confinement? You are aware, perhaps, that people cannot live very long shut up in a dark place like this," she said, thinking to frighten her into letting her go.

The woman started. She had not thought of its being solitary confinement before, and it was a good while before the grand wedding would come off.

She meditated a moment before replying, then she said:

"I will endeavor to see that you do not suffer, Miss Douglas, but I must keep you here for the present. Undoubtedly you know that Isabel is to marry Sir Charles Randall very shortly, and I am resolved that nothing shall interfere with that match. If I should let you go now, you would raise such a breeze for us that everything would be upset. There is only one condition upon which I would release you," she concluded, with a searching look into the young girl's face, and really feeling anxious to let her go, if she would only keep silence.

"What is that?" demanded Brownie, quickly.

"That you would go quietly away from Vallingham Hall and conceal yourself from everybody until after the wedding; then, I promise you, we will return the jewels to you."

The delicate lips curled, and the lovely eyes flashed ominously.

"Will you?" asked her enemy.

"No! I will not yield to you in a single point!" was the haughty reply.

"Very well, there is nothing more to be said, then. I will arrange a good bed for you, give you plenty of books and papers to read, and bring you food three times a day. You shall have plenty of candles, too, so that I imagine you will manage to exist quite comfortably for a few weeks," and she left the room as she spoke.

Mrs. Coolidge soon returned, and Isabel with her, bringing a mattress, bedclothes, and a tray containing a dainty supper, the former having taken care to provide it, knowing that her prisoner had been long without food. They also brought her a chair, and left her a candle, and then retired, leaving her somewhat anxious for the future, but by no means subdued.

Left to herself, Brownie's first work was to eat her supper, for she was really very hungry, and the inner man thus strengthened she felt somewhat more cheerful.

She arranged her bed, for she was weary with sitting for so many hours upon that stone floor, and then retired, feeling rather lonely and sad, but confident that the Lord, her shepherd, would care for her there as tenderly as in her own room; and ere long she was sleeping soundly.

She never knew how long she had been sleeping, for her rest had been unbroken and dreamless, but she was suddenly awakened by a cold clasp upon her hand!

In an instant every sense was unlocked, and she was broad awake, with that instinctive consciousness of a horrible presence, which people sometimes have when danger lurks near.

The candle still burned, and lighted the place with a reddish glare, for she had not extinguished it, feeling that the darkness would have been too horrible, and by its light she could distinguish a strange-looking object kneeling by her side.

With a cry of terror she started up to find herself face to face with a form so misshapen, so frightful, so weird and uncanny, that the sound suddenly died upon her lips, and left her paralyzed with fear.

The creature immediately arose and moved away from her a pace or two at seeing her so terrified.

"Have I frightened you? I am so sorry, and yet I might have known. But, do not fear, I would be the last person in the world to harm you," were the words which greeted her ears, in tones so soft and gentle that Brownie involuntarily raised her eyes, and was at once reassured, though still so weak and trembling from her first fright that she could not speak.

His head was very large for the rest of his body, and rested forward upon his breast, while his shoulders came up so high that he seemed to have no neck at all; one hand hung limp, withered, and helpless by his side, while one foot and leg were twisted entirely out of place, the heel being where the toe should be.

Ah! he was a sad-looking object, but Brownie felt no fear of him now.

He had a true, good face, full of intelligence and mental power, and while she looked into it, a great pity came into her eyes, and the tears involuntarily started.

He was quick to read her sympathy, for he said, with his sad smile:

"Thank you; I see you don't fear me any longer."

"Oh, no," she answered, gently; "but I did not think any one could get in here, and I was startled at first."

"I ought to have been more careful, but I did not like to speak loud enough to wake you, lest I should be heard," and he glanced toward the door.

Then he added:

"Can you trust me sufficiently to let me take you out of this miserable place? I came to release you."

"Can you? will you?" she exclaimed, eagerly. "Oh, yes, I can trust you fully!"

"But how did you get in here?" she asked, the next instant.

"I have been here many times, and yet I never entered by that door," he answered, pointing to the door by which Brownie had come in, and speaking somewhat bitterly.

"But how did you know I was here?" and she looked perplexed, for she could not detect so much as a rathole anywhere.

"I overheard all that passed between you and those women," he answered, with a nod in the direction of Isabel's room.

She looked more astonished than ever.

"Come this way and I will explain it all to you," he said.

He stooped and picked up the candle, and then moved with difficulty to the opposite end of the cell.

Holding the light close to the floor, he continued:

"Do you see that semi-circular block of stone about a foot and a half in diameter?"

"Yes."

"And what looks like a huge iron bolt set close to that small round shaft of stone which runs clear to the ceiling?"

"Yes."

"If you will step upon that block, and press your foot firmly upon that bolt, you will find that this stone pillar will begin to slide slowly down. When you have descended about four feet you will see a short flight of stone steps; step upon these and this shaft will return to its place. Follow the stone steps and they will lead you to a comfortable room; I left the door open, and there is a light within, so that you will have no difficulty in finding the way."

"But you—you will have to remain here, "Brownie said, hesitatingly.

It all seemed so wonderful and mysterious to her, that for a moment she could scarcely comprehend it.

"As soon as the shaft returns to its place, I will join you; only one can go at a time, because the platform is so narrow," he replied.

Brownie lifted her clear eyes once more and searched his face.

It was a noble countenance, and full of marks of pain and patient suffering, and while she looked it seemed suddenly to grow strangely like some other face which she had seen, but whose she could not at that moment recall.

"Yes, I will go," she said, and stepped upon that semi-circular block of stone.

"You will only be alone for a moment," he said, "for I shall follow you immediately; now lean close against the shaft. There! now plant your foot upon the bolt—so. Now you are all right."

Brownie obeyed his directions without a fear for she saw that he was only intent upon serving her, and she felt herself going slowly and smoothly downward.

A moment more and she found herself in another dark closet, or passage, from which a short flight of stone steps led up to an open door, through which a light shone, dimly lighting the place.

She stepped from the platform upon the stairs, and the shaft instantly began to ascend again.

Following the stairs, she soon found herself, as she had been told, in a large, airy, and comfortable room.

The walls were hung with ancient and faded tapestry, but the flo r was carpeted with bright, warm colors, and the room was quite tastefully furnished.

It was lighted by two tall wax candles in silver candlesticks, and a cheerful fire burned in the grate. There were several bookcases well filled with nicely bound volumes, and a few fine engravings, with some beautiful drawings, hung upon the walls.

She had not time for a more minute survey of the apartment, for she was rejoined by her strange companion.

He smiled at her look of wonder and curiosity, and after shutting and locking the door, and dropping the tapestry over it, said:

"Now, I will explain how I happened to know that you were in trouble and needed assistance."

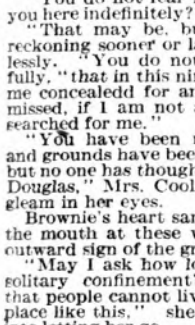
He moved a few steps further up the room, thrust aside another portion of the hangings, and Brownie saw the same shaft or pillar of stone that she had seen in the cell. At the right of it she also saw that a portion of the stone wall had been hammered or chiseled away, until only a very thin surface divided the two rooms, and this had been punctured full of tiny holes, through which could be seen the light of the candle which they had left behind; and yet from the room they had just left nothing of this could be detected.

"Ah! I see," Brownie said.

"Yes," the young man replied, while a look of infinite pain swept over his features, "it is always very quiet here, and tonight while reading I was startled by the sound of voices and a low, mocking laugh coming from this direction. Much astonished for nothing like it has ever happened before, I threw down my book, crept to this spot, and listened. Although I could not see very distinctly, I could hear, and soon discovered that some one had been forced into yonder cell to cover up some dark deed or other. I learned that your name is Miss Douglas, and that you possess a very brave spirit, for you refused to yield to your tormentors, when most young ladies would have begged and prayed to be let out upon any terms."

He concluded with another glance of admiration.

Her lips curled in a little mischievous smile, as she wondered how Isabel and her mother would feel the next time they unbolted that door, and found their bird flown!



"But I don't see how you got the shaft down those stairs," she said, in perplexity. Her spirits were rising every moment.

"It works in the same way from this room that it does from the other; only when it got down, I moved around to the opposite side without stepping off, and then, not pressing upon the bolt, it arose to its place again. I thought it best for you, however, to come up by the stairs, fearing you might fall from the platform if you moved," the young man explained.

"How came these holes punctured here, and this stone cut away so?" she asked, feeling deeply interested in the strange piece of machinery and that riddled wall.

"There is a sad story connected with that, Miss Douglas, which I fear it would do no good to relate," was the pained reply, while the white face flushed a sudden, vivid crimson.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Get The Book FREE! If you would like to read the whole of this wonderful story at once and learn its thrilling conclusion, rather than wait for the monthly installments as they appear in COMFORT, we will be glad to make you a present of the complete story in book form. Send us only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, and we will send you a copy of the book free and postpaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 32.)

are busy canning. I started the middle of May with rhubarb.

Your COMFORT sister, Mrs. Purl R. Grudny.

P. S. Mr. Grudny's name is Purl, his twin is named Earl.

TEXAS.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

This is to tell you how much I enjoy the chats and helps of our Corner. Yes, "ours" for having taken COMFORT so long I feel that there's a chair for me too and that it is "our" paper.

I wanted to write years ago and tell you about my "dream home" but never did, so I tell you now that it is no longer a dream but a reality. Of course my dream began several years ago but it is only two years since we really went to work in earnest to acquire a home.

Living in a rented house, paying a high price with nothing to bring in either profit or pleasure, outside of my husband's work, we decided we'd enjoy poultry, a garden and a cow. Sour milk cost us thirty cents per gallon. Just here I want to tell you a little of how I managed to save and make things "reach." After a mistaken move in search of the "Honey pond" we had less than $100.00 in the bank. It was summer and my husband wore his winter suit with the lining removed from the coat. All of my last year's dresses that were light or faded I treated to a good bath in the dye pot, making them over, and freshening up with new collars and cuffs, "made from scraps." Others were made into dresses for the little daughter. All of our everyday underwear, nightshirts and gowns were made of sugar sacks, purchased at the grocers for ten cents each. Our general wear hosiery were the cotton ones. I could get lovely hosiery in town for $2.50 and I could and did order them from catalogues at seventy-five cents! I took an old straw hat from the scrap bag, gave it a coat of dye and retrimmed it. For fall wear I made a satin turban. Purchased a fairly nice coat suit and made one new blouse. I cut the tops from a pair of expensive kid shoes, bound the edges with tape and wore them to church all the next spring. I still have the Oxfords thus obtained, as well as the suit which is still doing duty. We bought nothing for the house that was not a necessity, and it is wonderful the things one can get along without! I always cooked dinner and supper at the same time, that is, together. We have always eaten cold food for supper, this saved the gas bill. I saved all fat from meats to season vegetables, never threw away cold bread or left-overs but converted them into something else. We had the laundry done out as I was not strong. Last spring we bought ten acres of woodland and hired a space cleared, large enough to set the house, then, by working evenings, we cleaned, burned brush, watched our little bungalow grow, and did many things about the place. When the house was finished I began to tack canvas while my husband painted. I hung paper and though I had never done such work I must have made a success of it as I've received many compliments on my work. I also stained and oiled the floors, then we moved in and after that, I helped do the fencing, build poultry yards and houses and made a garden, cared for my little flock of Leghorns and my flowers and many a night found me eating supper after ten o'clock to get up by six the next morning.

As I worked I grew stronger. I now do all my own work at home. I have always made our clothes and baby's little bonnets and hats. I make rugs of rags, crochet, knit and embroider. I am a flower lover and hope someday to have many kinds. We are very proud of our little brown house in the woods. We have a fine well and do not owe one cent. By doing as much work as we could we saved a good many dollars. My work at $2.50 a day was enough to buy a nice cow and fifty pure-bred baby chicks. Of course had we hired a man it would have been much more. We plan to raise our own feed for the chicks and cow, have a garden every year, and a three-acre orchard planted.

Shall I come again and tell the sisters about the interior of my little house and how I have planned to save steps and time?

I can see Mrs. Wilkinson's gentle face as she ponders over this writing of mine, but, dear, I'm using the pencil and dime tablet for the same reason that I'm wearing cotton hose, only this time it is to furnish the house that's already built. You'll forgive it I am sure. (It would be all right if you wrote on wrapping paper, Mrs. W.)

To the young married people especially, I want to say that anyone can own a home. However small it gives that sweet contentment, of Home, that no rented house, however grand, can give. What joy I found in planning my house. I drew all the plans myself, keeping in mind the size of our little bank account. We paid cash for our land and building material, though land may be had on the installment plan and on easy terms. If you'll just set something ahead to work for, let nothing turn you away, and learn to do without what you don't need, you'll have a home in a short time and you can keep on with your church work or other social activities. I never miss an opportunity to attend divine services.

One word more, let's have only one standard for our girls and boys.

DREAMER.

THAYER, MO.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

It is now nearly seven years since my last letter appeared in COMFORT, and I received over one hundred I tried to answer all but just couldn't as I had met an old sweetheart while visiting near my old home in Virginia and was preparing to be married. We spent a few months in Virginia then moved to Jacksonville, Florida.

Right here I want to speak of something of which I have thought a great deal—the training of girls for some future lifework, as well as the boys. Although the day of "woman's rights" is here and though we speak of women being on an equality with men, still there are many girls who go through high school, or perhaps not that far, who are content to wait at home with but one main idea—to make a successful marriage. And do I hear someone ask, "Well, is not a woman's chief mission in life to marry, rear children and make happy

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 36.)

A NEW OIL LAMP FREE

Burns 94% Air

M. A. Johnson, 609 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill., the inventor of a wonderful new oil lamp that burns 94% air and beats gas or electricity, is offering to give one free to the first user in each locality who will help introduce it. Write him for particulars. Agents wanted.—Advertisement.

Automobile and Gas Engine Helps

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 34.)

Adding sulphuric acid in order to bring up the reading of the electrolyte is risky producere except when handled by an experienced battery man.

Don't short the terminals with the plier handles or some other metal article just to see the sparks fly. It does the battery much harm.

Questions and Answers

MAYBE LATE TIMING.—I have a 1915 model Ford car which is giving me trouble enough. It began cranking hard, grew worse until it would not crank hot or cold—even though it had been running a minute before. Then I put in a 1923 engine with a new stationary coil, though still using the old ignition but it would not start with cranking. Since then I have had the magnets recharged three times, but with very little, if any, benefit. Furthermore, since the recharging the engine gets so hot that in driving three miles the radiator boils nearly dry. I also have to run my car with the carburetor open one and a quarter way round. I now have dry cell battery installed for starting with crank. Kindly help me to locate the trouble. Mrs. E. R., Mud, Texas.

A.—From this distance, I am inclined to believe that I would change repair shops. I cannnot understand why it was necessary to recharge the magnets three times. This is unreasonable. The carburetor as now set is not badly out of adjustment and should not be the cause of overheating. The new motor should have corrected any motor irregularity which would cause trouble of this nature. Possibly the ignition timing is late and this would be one point which I would check closely.

SPARK PLUGS SHORT CIRCUIT WITH OIL.—Our 1921 model Ford pumps so much oil that the spark plugs short-curcuit with oil almost as fast as we can clean and put them back in. Have put in new rings, and cylinders don't appear to be scored. Please tell me the cause of this trouble.

J. McD., Cherry Tree, Texas.

A.—It would be well to first drain off the old oil in the motor and refill to the proper level with a light grade lubricant. In the flywheel casing will be found two pet cocks. Run a wire through the cocks to make sure they are not clogged. Pour in the oil slowly until it flows out of the upper cock. Leave the cock open until the oil stops running, then close it. This is the proper oil level. If this does not correct the trouble it will be necessary to pull the cylinder head and measure the cylinder bores. They may be a trifle oversize and require rings of a different size. If the oil level is correct and the rings are properly fitted the cylinders should not pump oil.

CHANGING IGNITION SYSTEM.—I wish to put a magneto into my 490 Chevrolet. Please tell me how it may be done. Will any four-cylinder magneto work in this car's ignition system?

R. H. M., R. 2, Olathe, Colo.

A.—I am unable to state just how you would proceed to install a magneto on your car. I assume that you desire to replace the generator with the magneto and if such is the case allow me to point out some of the difficulties you will encounter. You will be eliminating the producer of current. Should you use a storage battery you will have no means of keeping it charged. Use of the starting motor, lights, horn, etc., will quickly exhaust the battery which means that the electrical system will always be a source of trouble. There is no doubt but that a magneto can be installed, but consider the disadvantages instead of the advantages with which you will have to contend and I believe you will decide to repair the present system and enjoy the benefits.

Wonderful bargain prices on these slightly used Goodyear, Goodrich, Fisk, U. S., and other Standard Tires. You can get 12,000 Miles. You are absolutely protected by our guarantee to replace any tire that does not wear 1 year at ½ price. FREE tube with 2 tires. Order Quick.

LOWEST PRICES EVER OFFERED

	Tire	Tube		Tire	Tube
30x3½	$2.25	$1.15	32x4½	$3.75	$2.25
32x3½	2.75	1.40	33x4½	3.75	2.35
31x4	3.25	1.50	34x4½	4.25	2.50
32x4	3.25	1.75	35x4½	4.50	2.50
33x4	3.50	1.85	36x4½	4.50	2.75
34x4	3.75	2.00	35x5	4.50	3.00

EXAMINE TIRES ON ARRIVAL

Just send $1.00 deposit as good faith, or save 10% by sending cash with order now. In either case, if tires are not satisfactory you can return them. Don't Delay. Order TODAY—while our stock lasts.

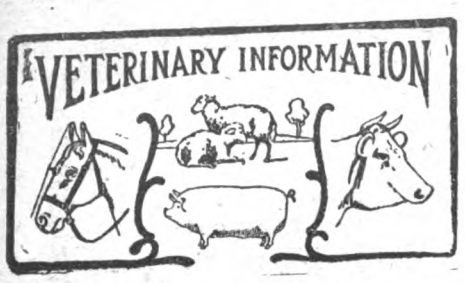
CHALLENGE TIRE CO.
2601 S. Wabash Ave. Dept. 219. Chicago, Ill.

FREE

HANDSOME 42-PIECE BLUE BIRD FULL SIZE DINNER SET

NO MONEY NEEDED. WE PAY FREIGHT.

SELL ONLY 10 BOXES OF SOAP,



each box containing 7 cakes fine Toilet Soap and with every box, give as premiums to each purchaser all of the following articles; a Pound of Baking Powder, Bottle Perfume, Box Talcum Powder, 6 Teaspoons, Pair Shears and Package Needles, (as per Plan 2351) and this artistically decorated Dinner Set is Yours. Many other equally attractive offers and hundreds of useful Premiums or large cash Commissions.

EXTRA PRESENT FREE—ALUMINUM SET

As an inducement we give a 5-Piece Full-Size Aluminum Kitchen Set, consisting of Sauce Pan, Pudding Pan, Fry Pan, Sugar Shaker, and Measuring Cup FREE of cost in addition to the Dinner Set, if you order promptly. You advance no money. We trust you. You risk nothing. WRITE TODAY for our BIG FREE CATALOG and full information for taking orders.

THE PERRY G. MASON CO., 866 Culvert & 5th St., Cincinnati, O. Founded 1897.

Subscribers are invited to write to this department asking for any information desired relative to the treatment of animal troubles. Questions will be answered in these columns free by an eminent veterinarian. Describe the trouble fully, sign full name and give your address; direct all correspondence to the Veterinary Department, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

No attention will be given any inquiry which lacks the sender's full name and address, but we will print only initials if so requested.

EVERY dairy cow should have a rest of at least six weeks before calving. During that time she stores up material from which milk will be manufactured when she "freshens." Feeding during the rest period should be complete, to provide all the protein, vitamines and minerals needed by the body. When not so supplied the cow robs her own tissues and bones of mineral salts and other elements and may become dangerously weak or go down paralyzed. Lack of rest and complete feeding commonly causes little or no milk to be secreted at calving time. Start "drying off" the cow eight weeks before she is due to calve. Milk her once daily for two or three days; then once in three milkings; then once in four miklings. Some cows dry off quicker than others. If, for instance, a cow is giving 15 pounds of milk per day and one milking is dropped out she will give perhaps 12 pounds next time. Then milk once daily until milk shrinks to 10 or 11 pounds a day after which drop to one milking in three periods. That usually stops milk secretion. If not stop grain and feed dry hay.

SUMMER ITCH.—I have a mare that has pimples that come every spring and stay until the hair grows longer. I know she must itch because she bites and scratches herself until the blood comes. It is mostly on the neck and front legs. A. E. N.

A.—The mare will be less likely to have the itching skin disease mentioned if you clip her about the time the coat begins to shed and do not feed her green grass or corn until the season of hard work is over. Should the trouble start mix one tablespoonful of granular hyposulphite of soda in the evening feed and apply to the affected parts as often as found necessary, a mixture of two ounces of flowers of sulphur, one-half an ounce each of oil of tar and coal tar dip and one pint of cottonseed oil.

LAMENESS.—I have a mare, ten years old that is lame just above the ankle, in one of her front feet. It seems to hurt her all the time and when she stands she rests on her toe. H. S.

A.—Pointing of the foot indicates that the seat of the lameness is in the foot below the fetlock. A search should be made for corns, stone bruise, nail prick or quarter crack. If such a cause is not found clip the hair from the hoof-head and blister it by rubbing in a mixture of one dram of powdered cantharides, one dram of biniodide of mercury and one and one-half ounces of lard. Rub it in for 15 minutes, then tie the mare so that she will be unable to lie down or lick the blistered part. Wash the blister off in 48 hours and then apply a little lard daily. It may be necessary to repeat the treatment two or three times at intervals of three weeks. Do not apply the blister in very hot weather. At that time better keep cold wet swabs upon the hoof-head.

CATARRH.—I would like information about my dogs. One, especially, snuffs as though he had a bad cold. Last winter he had a discharge from the nose and eyes and, at times, was weak. The other seems to have a slight attack of it. Mrs. E. A. S.

A.—Catarrh of the head apparently is present. Syringe out the nostrils twice daily with a lukewarm 1-to-1000 solution of chinosol by means of a soft-nozzle ear syringe. Also let the dogs sleep in a small room in which has been placed a kettle of steaming water containing an ounce or two of compound tincture of benzoin or oil of eucalyptus per quart.

CHOREA.—Will you suggest a remedy for my Collie dog, eighteen months old. She had distemper, three months ago, and since then has a twitching of the face, on one side, and a jerking in the sides and stomach and growing worse. Mrs. J. W. B.

A.—The dog is afflicted with chorea (St. Vitus' dance), which commonly follows distemper and is practically incurable. Let the dog live an outdoor life as far as possible. Once daily feed cooked or raw meat, but not pork, and also give the soup, with vegetables, poured on stale bread. Do not feed corn meal or potatoes. Fowler's solution of arsenic is a popular tonic in this disease. Start with one drop twice daily in a little water and every two days increase the dose a drop. Stop for a time if any alarming symptoms appear and later repeat the treatment. Also give cod-liver oil twice daily starting with a teaspoonful and gradually increasing the dose as required.

RUNNING FITS.—I have a two-year-old dog. When he gets hot he takes spells of running—something like fits. Around my neighborhood dogs are taking those spells. What is the cause and is there a cure? I. M.

A.—In some cases of this sort an abscess in the rectum has been discovered as the cause and liberation of the pus quickly stopped the occurrence of fits. In most cases, however, hookworms are the cause. To dispel them withhold feed for 24 hours and then give carbon tetrachlorid in soft gelatin capsules. The dose is one drop per pound of body weight for a puppy and two drops per pound for a grown dog. Great care must be taken not to break the capsules when being administered. At time of a fit confine the dog in a dark, cool, quiet place and give 10 to 20 grain of bromide of potash in water according to age and size of dog and if necessary repeat the dose in 20 minutes. As far as possible, keep a susceptible dog from becoming excited.

"FREE MARTIN" HEIFER.—I have a cow that has twin calves, a heifer and a bull. Which, if either will be barren? L. A. R.

A.—The heifer calf twinned with a bull almost invariably is sterile but the bull is fertile as are twin heifers and twin bulls. The barren heifer is termed a "free martin." Occasionally such a twin heifer proves fertile but it rarely pays to raise such a heifer with the hope that she will breed.

MANGE; WORMS.—I have a dog; his hair is coming off in spots. He is so poor that what we feed him doesn't seem to do him any good. I think he has worms. Will you tell me what to give him. T. G. W.

A.—Tapeworms probably cause the thriftless condition. To expel them give the following treatment. Confine the dog in a clean-swept box stall and withhold feed for 24 hours. Then give one dram of fluid extract of male shield fern and 20 grains of powdered areca nut in one-half an ounce of simple sirup for every 25 pounds of body weight of dog. Repeat the treatment in four or five days. Burn the droppings. When the treatment has been finished clip off the coat, tub the dog in a bath of coal tar dip made according to directions given by the manufacturer and when dry rub in a little of the following mixture on the worst affected spots. Four ounces of flowers of sulphur, four ounces of oil of tar and one pound of melted, unsalted lard. Repeat the application when seen to be necessary. Treat a new part each time and do not cover over one-third of the body at any treatment.

ABNORMAL MILK.—Will you tell me what to do for my cow? She has freshened with her second calf and is giving from two to two and one-half gallons of milk. I fix my milk up at night and by morning it is ready to churn. After churning from one and one-half to two hours I make about one tablespoonful of butter from two and one-half gallons of milk. By night the milk is water on the bottom and milk on top and not sour. I feed the cow meal and hull. Mrs. H. J. B.

A.—Set a sample of milk from each quarter of the udder in separate bottles sterilized by boiling and label each so that the source of its contents will be known. In that way you will be able to find if all of the quarters of the udder yield abnormal milk or if one or more is to blame. We fancy, however, that bacteria in the milk utensils may be to blame for the trouble. More scrupulously cleanse, scald and sun-dry the vessels. Set the milk in a new, cool, clean place. Use only pure water for cooling and cleansing purposes. It would be better to run the milk through a separator and then set the cream to ripen before churning. Do not churn the whole milk. Churn at a temperature of 54 to 58 degrees F. in summer. If cream foams add salt and a little water at 70 to 80 degrees F. Do not feed cottonseed meal when there is trouble in churning.

BLOODY MILK.—I have a cow, five years old that gives bloody milk out of her right-hand teat. She has had one calf and it is weaned. She seems to be in good health and is not going to freshen. Please name the cause and give a remedy. M. M. W.

A.—By rolling the teat between the thumb and finger you may be able to feel growths which bleed from irritation at milking time. When such growths are just inside the opening of the teat a veterinarian can remove by operation, but when high up it is best to let a calf nurse or dry off the secretion in that quarter. That, too, is the best treatment when chronic mammitis (garget) is the cause as that disease is incurable.

DISEASED COW.—I have a cow twelve years old. She eats heartily and gives two gallons of milk each day. She has a discharge from the ear, the odor of which is offensive. Chewing, white froth drips from her mouth. When fresh, the milk and butter has a rancid taste. Is it fit to use? M. M. L.

A.—Milk such as you describe is unfit for use. Better have a veterinarian test the cow with tuberculin by the intradermic and ophthalmic methods combined as she may be afflicted with tuberculosis which is contagious and incurable and makes the milk dangerous for use by man or animals. That disease is more likely to be present if the cow was shipped in from another state. Spinous ticks may be the cause of the ear trouble. They may be removed by filling the ear with a mixture of cottonseed oil and pine tar. Then after perfectly cleansing the ear with wood alcohol fill it with finely powdered boric acid.

FITS IN DOGS.—I have a dog eight months old. She will be walking along and it seems as if something were the matter with her. She will run and bark as though after something, but never bites. She has from one to two a day, but not every day. She is poor and does not eat much.

A.—Hookworms are commonly the cause of such fits which are brought on by excitement. To expel the worms withhold feed for 24 hours; then give carbon tetrachlorid in soft geletin capsules. The dose for a puppy is one drop per pound of body weight and for a grown dog two drops per pound. At time of a fit confine the dog in a cool, dark, quiet place and give 10 to 20 grains of bromide of potash in water according to age of dog. Repeat in 20 minutes if seen to be necessary. In some cases a boil or abscess in the rectum has found to be the cause and liberation of the pus by lancing has ended the trouble.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 35.)

homes? All well and good, but when the day of adversity comes to those not heavily burdened with this world's goods, what then? I will tell you of my own case.

I have two dear boys, Belmont and James and when they were thirty-two and eleven months old, their father's mind became unbalanced and he was taken to an asylum. It all happened so suddenly I had no time to prepare myself for the terrible shock, but through all the nightmare of the next few weeks, I kept saying, "I mustn't give way for the children's sake, I mustn't." It was the one thing which kept me up. I tried to think what was best for me to do. My parents lived in Ohio but I had been obliged to leave there because of the cold winters for my lungs are weak, so I could not go there.

We had a houseful of furniture, a small car, a couple of hundred dollars and that was all. Before I was married I had graduated from a three-year high school and had six months of college work, which was the extent of my education. I had taught school five years but I realized that the requirements for teachers were much higher than before, and I bitterly regretted my limited education. I have an aunt and uncle here in the Ozarks where the climate is delightful and with their help I got a school. I sold the car and all our household goods, and with the help of my parents I bought a little home here, though I was forced to go in debt for it. I am a strong advocate of people buying their own homes. It doesn't pay to rent for a long time. This is my third year teaching in Thayer and now my home is almost paid for and I have been going to college every summer and taking correspondence work every winter.

I have three big lots, fenced in. I hire a girl while I teach and my two boys have been as well and as happy as two little ones could be.

Two years ago my husband left the asylum, but I was afraid the same thing might happen again and I had gotten a divorce. Just before Christmas he surprised us by a visit and he soon convinced me that he was all right. We were married on December 26th, after three years of separation. I have resigned from school here but am going to college next month to stay the rest of the year when I will get my life diploma, after having made up the fourth year of high school work and completed two years of college work. Then we are going back to my husband in Savannah, Ga., and I shall have the satisfaction of knowing that if the occasion demands I am perfectly capable of supporting myself and children! After what I have passed through it seems like a very important fact. If ever I have any daughters I shall do my best to fit them for some vocation in life.

Another thing concerning which I have very decided opinions, is the subject of birth control. I think that every woman should have the right to decide just how many children her strength and their pocket-books will allow them to rear properly, and that they should have no more than that. Also to avert to the first part of my letter, I think that if every woman is capable of earning her own livelihood, whether she does it or not, it means greater happiness at home than where a man feels that after marriage his wife is tied to him so that she has to stay with him, no matter how he treats her, simply because she has no way to earn an honest living. What do the sisters think about these matters?

Best wishes to all. MRS. ETHEL SHAFER MILLER.

ROSWELL, 419 E. 4th ST., NEW MEXICO.

HELLO, MRS. WILKINSOM AND COMFORT SISTERS:

The main subject of my letter is to let the sisters know about this little western city. Many were anxious to get a description of it. And I want to thank the sisters for their kindness and generosity with their flower seeds. I received a very valuable collect on and hope they grow well. At least seventy-five to one hundred people wrote to me and I shall try and answer their questions through this department.

Roswell is a city of 9,000 inhabitants. Its altitude is 3,600 feet. There are 320 days with more than 20% of sunshine, very little cloudy weather. It is the gateway to the Lincoln National Forest and is on the southwest trail,—Kansas City to El Paso, Texas. Also on Lea Highway from Washington, D. C., to Los Angeles.

Every year Roswell ships out about 1,000 cars of fine apples, 1,500 cars of pea green alfalfa. The cotton crop of 1922 Durango cotton estimated at $750,000. The wool crop of 1922 estimated at $850,000. Cotton growing has become a fixed industry. Truck farming is another important feature. The raising of cattle and sheep is done by nearly all in the farming section.

The school system here is excellent, with modern high school and six ward schools. Twelve churches. Ten miles of paved streets. There are 750 flowing artesian wells furnishing pure drinking water and water for irrigation.

In Roswell is situated the New Mexico Military Institute, the second best in the U. S and the best of its kind in the southwest.

The climate and altitude are especially adapted to patients with lung trouble. They are starting a $100,000 sanitarium to accommodate the tubercular patients.

There are some interesting sights here in this western country, one, for instance, being the bottomless lakes, about twelve miles east of Roswell. Also the Lost River caves are the famous cave at Ft. Stanton, eighty miles west of here. The end of this cave has never been found. I went in one day, with others, to look around. The entrance to the cave is so small you can just squeeze through. We left a guiding string behind us so we could find our way out again. We went two miles or more and on our way out nearly lost our strings and I said when we got out I would never go in there again.

Quite a number of people are coming here to take up homesteads as there is land to be taken up around here. Some people prove upon their land and make enough to buy a modern city home. Others become discouraged and leave. I believe in the saying, 'First be sure you are right, then go ahead." Don't let others change your ideas unless for something better. Have a way of thinking for yourself.

Many of the sisters, in their letters to me, expressed themselves as though I had a lot of grit, nerve, etc., to get a little home of my own. It takes nerve and determination to stick to one thing and win out. One must expect handicaps but face each one bravely.

I enjoy the helpful letters that the sisters write. Sometime I'll give my experience in the Great Fire and Earthquake disaster of April 18, 1906, which I encountered in San Francisco.

MRS. PETE FAHRLENDER.

GRAND ISLAND, 303½ WEST 3RD ST., NEBRASKA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

I have a problem to solve and am coming to the Corner for help.

I am twenty years old and as I lost my mother when I was only fourteen, and my father was quite poor and had a large family to care for, I had no opportunity for the thorough education I so much desired. But I found work to do and by saving the money I earned I managed to secure a scholarship to the Business College here. I had gone seven months and had completed the bookkeeping course and made a grade in English, Arithmetic, Salesmanship and Spelling when I was obliged to go to work again. I have a good position here and the work is easy but I want to go back to school in September and finish my course, which all leads up to my problem.

My younger sister came here last fall intending to take the same course in college I was taking. She had finished only the 7th grade in school but had studied at home and after entering school here kept up in her studies with the other students and was doing splendidly when she became ill with pleuropneumonia. That meant weeks in the hospital and doctor's bill and even after she was able to leave the hospital she was too weak to return to school and the doctor ordered her to go West for the summer. Fortunately we had a married sister living in the mountains and there Josephine is regaining health and strength. I am afraid to have her come back here to school. The doctor thinks it would be better for her not to. Do any of the sisters living in the West or the South know of a good girls' school where I could send her and where there would also be an opening for me to work, either as bookkeeper or stenographer, and where I could pay her tuition and other expenses for the salary I could receive.

I can furnish the best of references for both of us. I would appreciate it so much if you would write to me if you know of a school of this kind.

Sincerely, ELIZABETH MILLER.

Elmore City, Okla.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

I enjoy reading COMFORT, especially the Sisters' Corner.

I have been married ten years and have two children living, a girl eight years old and a baby boy eleven months old. My home is in the oil fields. When I tell you there are places where the oil stands in puddles like water you may not believe me. Nevertheless it is true and last winter they brought in a well about a quarter of a mile from my home, that flowed for nearly fifty-six hours. The oil went as high as the ninety-four foot derrick and then drifted with the wind for a thousand feet from the well. The well was at the foot of a slight rise and the oil would run back down the hill into earth tanks. The men who worked around the well wore slicker suits and hats and they were dripping in oil. It was a wonderful sight and people came from miles around to see it. There is also a wild abandoned gas well near here. It blew itself out. It was so strong it could not be capped in and the ground finally fell in, derrick and all. The hole is about thirty feet deep around the edge, about two hundred feet in diameter and they say it is 700 feet deep. It is always full of water up to within twenty feet of the top. Why don't the other sisters write and tell of the curious things near them?

I will be thirty years old the 19th of this month. Am five feet seven inches tall and weigh 130 pounds. I have dark hair and eyes and a dark complexion.

I shall be glad to get letters and will answer as many as possible.

Mrs. Augusta Kelley.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 39.)

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 33.)

League Shut-in and Mercy Work for September

"Inasmuch as you have done it unto the least of these you have done it unto Me."

Written references from doctor and postmaster must positively accompany all appeals from shut-ins. Every month brings to me many letters which disregard this simple and necessary rule. Appeals unaccompanied by the references required will be destroyed.

C. C. Johnson, Hebron, Md. Down and out financially as a result of a series of misfortunes, and with a wife lately taken to an insane asylum, this worthy man asks a boost from COMFORT readers to give him a new start. Isaac Price, Lenoir, N. C. One of our League's old shut-ins who has been helpless within four walls for twoscore years. Deserving and grateful, he again asks aid. Mrs. Mary E. Williamson, Tomahawk, Ky. A widow of fifty-five years, caring for a mentally deranged niece of twenty-one. She asks help in her struggle to support her little household. Fulton R. Lowe, Sheppard's, Va. Half-blind and physically incapable of support, this man's case is pitiful indeed. W. D. York, Chavies, Ala. An old man of 78 upon whom the struggle of life hangs heavy. Help him to lighten the load. Mary M. McGill, Portis, Ark. With her right leg amputated above the knee, here is a brave and loving-hearted woman who seeks financial help to purchase an artificial limb. Mrs. Jennie Robbins, Monmouth, Ill. R. F. D. 1. Far from friends and fifteen miles from town, this is a lonely member of our League asking for letters and for cheer. Give her a joy-boost, cousins! Pearl N. Cockram, R. R. 1, Box 31, Woolwine, Va. Weakened by fever so that he is incapable for many months to come of self-support, this young man of twenty-three asks temporary aid of cash and warm clothing for the coming winter. Well-recommended. Adam Budesheim, Men's Surgical Ward, Samaritan Hospital, Troy, N. Y. Letters of cheer are asked for this lonely boy of eighteen who is a long-time sufferer in a hospital ward. Mrs. Sallie Sutton, Boons Camp, Ky. A mother almost blind and with two girls, five and nineteen years of age, and two boys, nine and fourteen. The case of this family is pitiful in its destitution.

We have a sad listing this month. Read over the necessarily short statements of names and conditions—and then try and imagine the true situations the few bald words cover, but cannot truly convey. Strivers, sufferers, brave dwellers in pain and darkness these are. Help them with what money and cheer can do to ease their lot.

Lovingly,

Uncle Lisha

Uncle Lisha

Comfort's League of Cousins

The League of Cousins was founded as a means of bringing the scattered members of COMFORT'S immense circle of readers into one big, happy family. Its aim is to promote a feeling of kinship and relationship among all readers.

Membership is restricted to COMFORT subscribers and costs fifty-five cents, only five cents more than the regular subscription to COMFORT which is included. The fifty-five cents makes you a member of the League and gives you an attractive League button with the letters "C. L. O. C." a handsome certificate of membership with your name engrossed thereon, and the privilege of having your name in the letter list, also a paid-in-advance subscription to COMFORT. You continue a League member as long as you keep up your subscription to COMFORT. There are no annual dues, so after you have once joined all you have to do to keep in good standing is to keep your subscription to COMFORT paid up.

How to become a Member

Send fifty-five cents to COMFORT'S Subscription Department, Augusta, Maine, with your request to be admitted into COMFORT'S LEAGUE OF COUSINS, and you will at once receive the League button and your membership certificate and number; you will also receive COMFORT for one year if you are a new subscriber; but if you are already a subscriber your subscription will be renewed or extended one full year beyond date of expiration.

The League numbering over forty thousand members undoubtedly is the greatest society of young people on earth.

Address all letters to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and they will promptly reach the head of the department for which they are intended.

The number of feet of lumber cut in the United States during the year 1920 amounted to 33,798,800,000.

What A Beautiful Life-Like Doll For Some Little Girl In Your Home!

Won't She Fairly Shout With Joy When She Finds This Big, Handsome, Sleeping Dolly Is All Her Own?

OF course she will—no girl could help being delighted with this big, beautiful Dolly which is even more beautiful and lifelike than she appears in the illustration. It is a prettier and better doll even than we offered last season. And just think—a club of only six subscriptions to COMFORT brings her right to your door—yours to have and to own without one cent of expense. What a delightful surprise for some little tot in your home.

She Opens And Closes Her Eyes. She Has Real Teeth, Brown, Curly Hair And Wears A Pretty Dress With Hat And Real Stockings And Slippers.

NOW let us tell you more about this Doll. She is sixteen inches tall and jointed in such a manner that her arms, hands, legs and feet will stay in any position you place them. Her dark brown hair falls in bewitching curls, she has real teeth, her eyes are as blue as the sky and she opens and shuts them and goes to sleep like a real baby whenever you want her to. And she is always smiling and showing her pretty white teeth in a truly lifelike manner.

As shown in our illustration, she wears a very becoming hat trimmed with a large ribbon bow and a dress of the very latest style, with cute short sleeves, handsome figured lace and button trimmed waist and short skirt and she has on real stockings and slippers with silverold buckles.

Fathers and mothers—just look at this beautiful Doll as she stands smiling and waiting for someone to pick her up, hug her and kiss her and take her out to play. Don't you think your little girl would just love to have her for her very own? Of course she would—and you should take advantage of this offer at once. Remember we have but a limited quantity of these Dolls on hand and when they are gone this offer will be withdrawn.

FOR A CLUB OF ONLY SIX!

YOU can surely find six neighbors and friends who will be glad to subscribe to COMFORT at the present bargain rate of 50 cents a year. Send us their names and addresses and the money collected ($3.00 in all) and we will send you this big, beautiful, Sleeeping Doll, fully dressed and otherwise exactly as described above, packed in a strong box so that it cannot possibly get broken, free by parcel post prepaid. There will be no expense to you whatever. Your mail carrier will deliver the Doll right to your door without charge. This Doll is Reward No. 7856 and please mention this number when ordering.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

"Virtue itself offends when coupled with forbidding manners."—Bishop Middleton.

Through the columns of this department free information pertaining to Etiquette, Personal Appearance and kindred subjects will be given in answer to questions by our subscribers, but not more than two questions the same month by any one subscriber. Address Etiquette Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and give your own full name and address. Name will not be published.

S. B., Fullerton, N. D.—Surely it is pleasant and correct to be willing to take part in the work of a home where you are visiting and where no help is kept. (2.) As to taking sides in an argument between husband and wife, this is a delicate matter and depends upon your intimacy as a friend of the household and whether or no you are strongly pressed by both to give your opinion. We think you might express this, when asked, if it was concerning a matter having no particular bearing on personal home relations or affairs.

M. T., Brownsboro, Tex.—Berry, plum, and all pies, are eaten with a fork. In the case of pies containing cherry or plum pits, these are quietly slipped from the lips back to the fork and then conveyed on the fork back to the plate containing the remainder of the serving of pie. (2.) Yes, you should certainly say, "Thank you," when given a plate serving at a social or other like entertainment.

ANDIE, Alabama.—Moles and like facial blemishes may be removed by a capable dermatologist, and we do not recommend that you attempt the removal yourself through any home methods. Scars might result.

JUST SIXTEEN, Huron, S. D.—You should thank this boy when he brings you home from any entertainment to which he has taken you, and tell him that you have had a pleasant time. (2.) No expense of peanuts, lemonade or sideshow need be borne by a girl who is taken to a circus. This is up to her escort's wallet and it is properly his duty to pay all admittance fees and incidental costs of the entertainment.

MILLY, Texas.—When introducing yourself to strangers you would not use the title "Miss." It is only necessary to say, for instance, "I am Mary Smith." (2.) It would be the boy's place to say, "I am delighted to have met you." Send us your other questions at another time.

HOPELESS, North Carolina.—Although opinion differs in the matter, our own is that it is best for the lady to follow behind the usher in going down the aisle of a theater or church, and for the gentleman to come last of the three. However, modern-day etiquette does not regard it improper for the gentleman to precede the lady in such instances. (2.) When you want to make what you call a date with this girl, that is, ask her to accompany you to some dance or other entertainment, you do it by stating plainly just what you want. Say, for instance: "Miss Blank, won't you let me call and take you to the dance next Thursday night?" Isn't this easy?

JACK, North Carolina.—By registering at a hotel, is meant the signing of one's name and home address on the book which is open on the desk before the clerk. Before doing this, you may, if you wish, ask the clerk what are the hotel's rates for such accommodations as you require—specifying if you want single or double room, bath, etc. If the rate is satisfactory to you, register, and the clerk will assign you to a room, calling a bellboy to take you and your hand baggage to the quarters assigned you. Should the clerk require you to pay in advance, he will specify this. If not, you pay on your departure, asking for your bill at the desk. Large hotels have the matters of payment handled through a cashier's department to which the clerk may direct you. In smaller houses your payment will be taken by the clerk himself. Bills are not usually rendered for less than a week's stay, although one may be asked for and obtained if desired, or if there have been a number of incidental charges for telephone calls, meals, etc. (2.) You need not remove your hat when at the soda fountain with this girl, although it is correct usually to remove it when the ice cream or soda is taken at individual tables. The hat can be laid on some vacant chair if no other place is more convenient. Usually the waiter bringing the order of soda or cream takes the payment, and you should offer it to him. If payment is made at fountain or cashier's desk, the waiter will give you a check indicating the amount you are to pyy.

ROSA, Arkansas.—If you are expecting the arrival of this boy as a caller, it would be pleasant and correct for you to open the door and be first to meet him. (2.) We see nothing improper in this boy taking you to church if your parents do not object.

J. T. C., Oklahoma.—Although as a widower we do not think you should call or pay definite attentions to this widow before a year has elapsed since your bereavement, yet there would be nothing wrong in your attempting a little preparatory chat and friendly relationship with her in church when you meet her there. This will pave the way for asking if you may call to see her, when the time has arrived that you may properly do this without causing unpleasant criticism or comment.

L. E., Montana.—We think you were entirely correct in refusing to dance with this stranger at the street party you tell us about. It was the place of this man to obtain an introduction to you in some way through one of your friends who might be one of his also. And at any rate you did not lack partners.

ANXIOUS, Missouri.—Write just as nice a letter of thanks as you can to your fiance when he sends you this engagement ring. Tell him how well you like it and how much you think of it—and him! And of course you should also, in your various letters, mention, with thanks, the candy and other gifts he mails you. It is this young man's place to speak to your parents concerning this engagement, and we think he should have done this before affairs had gone so far that he had sent you this ring. But if you have given him reason to believe they already know of your relationship through your telling, why he cannot be blamed for not bringing the matter up before now. Best set it this up at once and come out in the open, so that your parents know how things stand between you. When a girl talks of being married in the fall and her parents know nothing at all, even of an engagement, it seems hardly the right thing—to speak mildly!

R. J. S., Fla.—Tiny individual pickles may be regarded in the same way as olives—that is, as food which may be taken from the fingers. Any pickles of a cut, sliced or moist nature should assuredly be eaten from a fork, however. (2.) Consult the menu at this restaurant with your escort, and let him give to the waiter the order for the dishes you select. A simple luncheon in the warm season might be, a soup, a salad of some sort, and any pastry or ice cream which you prefer. Also hot or iced tea or coffee. For dinner, you may order oysters, a soup or a fruit cocktail as a first course, to be followed by a roast meat and any potatoes and vegetables you select. A salad may be added before the dessert if you are very hungry. Have a demi tasse, which is a small cup of coffee, with whatever sweet you order for dessert.

L. O., Tennessee.—If you love this young man you may have known for so long, and in every other way he fulfills the requirements of a good husband, we do not think you should let these vague stories of what happened during his school course interfere with your acceptance of his proposal. Surely your knowledge for so many years of his character is worth more than these gossipy reports which seem, from your letter, at least, to have no established basis. And at most they are not very serious in a boy in his teens. If you love him, accept him, is our advice. But your letter does not sound as if your affections were seriously engaged—not when you speak of the other strings, you have to your bow—or should we say beaus to your string?

J. C., Macon, Ga.—The proper courtesy is assuredly being shown this young man when he is placed at table at your right hand, yet as he is your daughter's caller, we think as much courtesy and more pleasant results would be established by placing him at the right of your wife, and thus bringing him next to your daughter's seat on the diagram you send us.

B. F. H., Arkansas.—Yes; your choice of white for your September wedding gown is entirely appropriate. COMFORT wishes you all happiness.

F. E. T., Colorado.—Bashfulness is another term for self-consciousness—which is, of course "consciousness of self." When you are bashful you are thinking of yourself too much, of what people are thinking about you and how you may be appearing in their eyes. Youth is naturally conscious of self as it makes a new appearance in the world and in social affairs, and this is rightly so. We would not give much for a boy or a girl who could not blush and did not often do so. Physical nervousness and sensitiveness of temperament may increase the natural bashfulness of youth, but the best remedy is to get outside of self as much as possible and to start thinking of others and not oneself. Try speaking slowly, giving a little thought to what you say before you say it. Do not feel that everyone is looking at you and considering you and your appearance. Very likely they are thinking of themselves or of something totally unconnected with the awkwardness you may think you are showing. Those with the best manners will recognize youth's first social timidity and aid a bashful boy in every way to feel at ease. And Time, you may be sure, will remedy your difficulties and bring you assurance and what the French call "savoir faire."

B. W., Hillsboro, Ore.—We are sure we cannot tell why this young man is so strong with his assurances of affection when alone with you and then neglects you in public. We think you are right in considering it curious and a matter to feel hurt about. Either by hints or in plain words let him know that his protestations do not seem to be borne out in practice. If he takes you to a party or to a dance and fails in his duty as an escort, he should be brought sharply to account. We fear he feels too sure of you and that you would do well to let him think differently for a while.

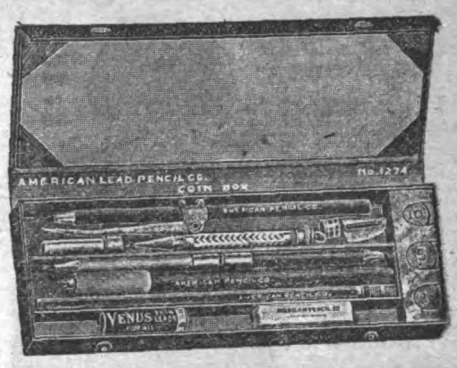
V. B., Fayette, Ala.—Of course you should "make up" with this boy whom you once slighted by refusing his escort. If you have thought better of this and he is still at your feet, so to speak, let him know in boy-and-girl language that he is now not displeasing to you. This ought to be easy for golden hair and blue eyes to do.

A. C., Quincy, Miss.—The matter of leaving home to marry at eighteen is one to be carefully considered in the circumstances you mention. We are inclined to say yes if your parents are not too opposed to the project. This young man has waited long and faithfully for you, is able to support you, and has, from what you tell in your letter, the qualities that should make you happy. Perhaps you might make a compromise: obtain your parents' consent to your marriage at the end of one year during which you can continue your schooling. If your faithful suitor knows for certain that you will marry him at the end of this period, he might be willing to add this much longer to the time he has loved you.

BLUE EYES, North Carolina.—Your letter gives us an unpleasant impression of this young man who calls himself engaged to you and continues to break dates with you and to flirt with other girls. If he is as uncertain as this now, he would make a more uncertain husband. Bring him to book and tell him your relation with him must be at an end if he continues his attentions to other girls. We do not see a very happy way for you out of the difficulty. We fear this chap is of the philandering, chasing sort and is not one that your more faithful and tender heart can safely tie to and find happiness. But give him a chance to prove that he really loves you enough to stick to you and his promise. If he fails, let him go to make some other girl unhappy. For better a grief and a short unhappiness now than later years of the same.

A. E., Hamilton, Ala.—You may say to this relative you meet for the first time: "We should have met before, but it is good that we meet now!" Then smile and shake hands cordially. (2.) When your boy friend brings you back from this "singing," you may say: "Thank you for bringing me home. I enjoyed the evening very much."

INQUISITIVE, Homer City, Pa.—In introducing these relatives and "in-laws" it is well to state relationship. It helps conversation and clears up any chance of misunderstanding. Your nervousness in making introductions will be helped by speaking slowly, and thinking about what you have to say before you say it. No conventional reply is needed to the conventional "I am glad to meet you." It is best to take the remark smilingly and let talk begin.



E. W., Rex, Ga.—In connection with the Thanksgiving season at which your birthday party is to take place, there would be no decorations so appropriate as those of the harvest season. Have jack o' lanterns made from big pumpkins peeping out with lighted faces from various corners. Frame your doorways with cornstalks tied with big bows of orange colored crepe paper, and have festoons of strings of red apples curving about in appropriate places. And do not forget pumpkin jardinieres filled with flowers and foliage. In your main room, where possibly you may dance later on in the evening, suspend a fine big red ear of corn from the chandelier or center of the ceiling by a red ribbon, and have the celebrated and fun-making red ear decorated with a big bow of bright red. Your guests will soon note the red ear's relation to the mistletoe, and merriment is certain to arise. For your refreshments, have your table decorated with yellow flowers, yellow crepe paper, and pumpkins hollowed out and filled with fruit, doughnuts, nuts and candy. As a menu, we suggest cold chicken, bread and butter sandwiches and biscuit, pickles and jellies, coffee, cider and cake.

You and your guest will have suggestions for appropriate and fun-filled games, and we add the following: If you have twenty guests, for instance, let each guest be supplied with ten sheets of white paper, tied together with pumpkin-colored ribbon and bearing at the top his or her name. Pencils are supplied and the sheets of paper are numbered from one to ten. Partners are selected, and at a given signal by a bell or motor horn, each guest begins to draw the picture of his or her partner. Three minutes only are allowed for time, when the signal sounds and a change of partners occurs, and the portrait drawing recommences. No names are added to the drawings, and when the ten changes of partners have occurred, the portraits are all called in and pinned up on the wall for exhibition. Each guest in turn tries to guess as many as possible of the likenesses, and a prize should be given to the most successful guesser. Much fun can arise from laughable mistakes. A prize should also be given to the guest who has, by popular vote, accomplished the best-drawn likeness. As another contest a small pumpkin can be hollowed out, its seeds placed inside, and a piece of orange crepe paper pasted over the top of the pumpkin. The guest guessing nearest to the number of seeds can be given a box of home-made candy or other prize.

Let the birthday presents of the party be displayed on a separate table, covered with orange crepe paper and with a pumpkin centerpiece about which the gifts may be grouped.

The evening may end with dancing, and some informal singing.

An Everpointed Pencil and Coin Bank come with this Useful Pencil Set

Gift No. 9153.

For Three Subscriptions.

COMFORT'S host of schoolboys, and big folks too, will be delighted with this convenient 8-inch case of rich grained leatherette with its big supply of writing and drawing supplies.

The particular features of this box are the Everpointing pencil and the handy compartment bank for pennies, nickles and dimes.

In addition to these two useful pieces each box contains a compass with pencil attached, a pen holder with rubber finger grip, a box of four extra pens, an eraser-tipped pencil, Indian No. 2, a combination red and blue pencil, a pencil sharpener and a large soft rubber eraser. There is also a box of 12 Venus thin leads and one dozen Perpetual Point refill leads for the Everpointing pencil. The partitions in the box hold everything securely in place. The set is made by the American Lead Pencil Company and is considered by them to be one of the handiest, most useful sets in their assortment. Just to add one last touch of utility, they have inserted a removable sheet of blotting paper on the inside cover.

Given To You! For three one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 5c each we will send you this useful Pencil Set, free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 9153.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Winter and Summer
Enjoy the Beauty of an Everblooming Garden of Flowers

Winter or summer you can enjoy a perpetual garden of everblooming flowers and plants. Winter's frosts and snows need not shut out the pleasant companionship and beauty of growing things. This collection of house plants and bulbs will make the long winter months radiant with an unending series of brilliant blossoms, foliage and fragrance. And when the springtime comes again they will continue to bloom in your summer garden outdoors.

The collection consists of 5 favorite house plants and 6 popular bulbs. The plants are all well rooted, hardy stock, and guaranteed to grow. The bulbs are from tested stock and should any fail to grow they will be cheerfully replaced.

Read the description below and the terms of our Free Offer. Then send your order.

Boston Ivy—No. 1

This beautiful Ivy, with its thick, dark, glossy leaves is just what you want to climb around the window. It is a rapid grower and hardy.

Two Narcissi—No. 2

Narcissus bulbs can be grown in a shallow dish partly filled with water and small stones. You will enjoy these beautiful fragrant flowers during the coming months. The flowers are double and extra large and retain their fragrance for a long time.

Fuschia—Black Prince—No. 3

This well-known house plant needs very little description except to say that the variety that we are including in this collection is the prettiest of them all. The flowers are dark purple and extra large. The foliage is glossy, giving the appearance of being waxed. You will like this plant.

Two Hyancinths—1 Blue, 1 White —No. 4

These double flowers may be grown in pots or in the water the same as the Narcissi. The flowers grow on long spikes and are especially fragrant. You will want these flowers for your indoor window garden. They will give your rooms a cheerful atmosphere.

Coleus—Brilliancy—No. 5

This is the most beautiful plant to be seen anywhere. It is literally alive with color. The foliage is its chief attraction. Every shade of the rainbow is to be found on its leaves. This is an exceptionally attractive plant that will give the home a cheerful appearance.

Geranium—Ricard—No. 6

The flowers are a brilliant scarlet, each bloom being large and full. This variety is a heavy bloomer and has dense foliage. The Ricard is a new variety which is much prettier than the common red varieties.

Calla Lily—No. 7

This wonderful lily needs but little description with its large leaves and waxen white flowers which are from five to seven inches long. Plant this bulb now and have it in full bloom during the winter months.

Chinese Sacred Lily—No. 8

This is one of the most beautiful of all known lilies. Its coloring is exquisite and with its dark green foliage makes an exceptionally pretty plant. The outside of the flower is white with a slight tinge of yellow. The inside of this lily is a canary yellow shading to pink at the top. When you see this lily in bloom you will thank us for offering it to you. This lily will be included as an extra free gift if you send your order for both collections within 15 days.

Cyclamen—White—No. 9

This attractive plant is one of the prizes of this collection. Large plants in full bloom sell from $3.50 to $5.00 each at the greenhouses. The young plants that we supply will be in bloom by Christmas or soon after and you will have a plant that will fill your neighbors with envy. The beautiful white flowers closely resemble Orchids and the attractive variegated foliage combine to make this the most pleasing plant of the lot.

How To Get the Plants and Bulbs

5 House Plants—Collection No. 8901. Consisting of one each of the following plants: GERANIUM, ENGLISH IVY, COLEUS, FUSCHIA, CYCLAMEN, will be sent to you free and postpaid for only one one-year subscription (not your own).

5 Bulbs—Collection No. 8911. This collection consists of 2 Hyacinth, 2 Narcissus and 1 Calla Lilly Bulb and will be sent to you free and postpaid for only one one-year subscription (not your own).

Order Both Collections and Get Free the extra gift of Chinese Sacred Lily. Collection 1802. This collection consists of both the 5 house plants and the 5 bulbs and if you send us the two subscriptions required within 15 days we will send you as an extra gift, the Chinese Sacred Lily.

Send all Orders to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Stylish Stout French Serge

$3.98

Sizes 39 to 55

PRIZE DESIGN

Yes! The season's newest most popular style, in imported French Wool Serge and lavishly Silk Braid Embroidered. A most graceful model for stout women, and only $3.98 on approval. Not only that, but six pairs of ladies cotton hose FREE--yes, included without charge with every dress ordered, for a limited time only! Positively the most amazing offer of the year, but surely as an advertisement for Gordon Bates Co., so that every woman may KNOW that Gordon Bates values are without equal anywhere, anytime.

Send No Money

Embroidery in black and gold braid gives the necessary note of smartness and decoration to this becoming one-piece dress. Banding on yoke and sleeves is of fine black braid. Long narrow sash ties at front in popular style. And the material--imported French Wool Serge--insures most generous service. Be sure and send quick. No, don't miss this advertising offer! Sizes 39 to 55 inch bust measure in black and navy. Order black by No. 12436, Navy by 12437. Remember--on approval. And six pairs black cotton hose free. Just pay postman on arrival, plus few cents postage. Your money, every penny, gladly refunded at once if you are not delighted and amazed at this bargain.

Six Pair Hose FREE

With Every Order

Gordon Bates Co.
Dept. 918
Minneapolis Minn.

10 DAYS TRIAL

1000 of these Home Barber Outfits for Comfort subscribers at HALF PRICE

This introductory half price sale won't last long. The 1,000 will soon be sold. You'll have to hurry. Each set consists of 1 close cutting barber's hair clippers, one 7-inch barber comb, 1 barber hair shears of razor like steel. This is our regular high grade $4.00 set, guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction. Special offer complete outfit only $1.98 if you decide to keep the set--less than price of clippers alone.

MOTHERS Save time, strength and money. This outfit cuts children's hair perfectly in 5 minutes. Always have the children's heads looking nice. Quicker and easier to do it with this outfit than to go to the barber shop.

GIRLS WITH BOBS

For good looking bobbed hair this splendid set is as necessary as your brush and comb. Clip it close in the back and with these shears you can always get a perfectly even bob. THE WHOLE FAMILY will use this set and save barber bills. Four hair cuts pays for it if you get in on this special offer.

SEND NO MONEY Just write today and ask for the home barber outfit. It will be sent by return mail. When it arrives pay the postman $1.98 and postage. Use the outfit for 10 days. Then if you are not perfectly satisfied return it and your money will be promptly refunded.

HOME SUPPLY CO., Dept. K Topeka, Kan.

Handsome FREE Wrist Watch

Guaranteed time keeper. GIVEN for selling only 30 cards of Dress Snap Fasteners at 10c per card. Easily sold—EARN BIG MONEY OR PREMIUMS. Order your cards TODAY. Send no money. We trust you till goods are sold.

AMERICAN SPECIALTY CO.
Box 32-Z Lancaster, Pa.

How Would You Like To Grow Hair in a Month?

Getting bald, hair falling and fading? If you want to grow new healthy hair right away I will send you absolutely Free a sample of the famous Alexander Glandahair. No cost, no obligation, just send name to ALEXANDER LABORATORIES, 5100 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo.

UNLUCKY?

Then wear this Mystic Serpent. Replica of Ancient Hindu charm against evil spirits, sickness, spells, and symbol of GOOD LUCK in love, business, games. Heavy, weird and startling. Genuine 14-Karat gold shell, 3 year guarantee. Men and Women. Secret "formula for luck" FREE. Send measure (string tied around finger.) ALA X. BABA, Box 55, 116 Str. Sta., New York. Pay $2.27 and postage to postman on delivery.

District Salesmen Wanted, all or spare time. Earn $1500 to $3600 yearly. We train the inexperienced.

NOVELTY CUTLERY CO.
76 Bar St., Canton, Ohio

WATCH FREE

This fine American made Watch, new style, stem wind and set, GUARANTEED to keep time; Given for selling only 8 boxes of ROSEBUD at 25c each and returning the $2.00. EASY TO SELL. We TRUST YOU. Order today.
ROSEBUD PERFUME CO.
Box 142, Woodsboro, Md.

Would You Like to Have $75 a Month Extra?

You can!—by spending only a few hours a week introducing Dixon Household Necessities. Most complete line of soaps, toilet goods, extracts, etc., offered. Everybody buys—again and again. Make $200 to $300 a month full time. No experience or capital needed. No delivering or collecting. You must write quick to get agency. Just say, "Send me your Great Special Offer."

DIXON MFG. CO.,
DEPT. 5, DAYTON, OHIO.

THIS AIR RIFLE FREE

for selling 15 packages Bluine at 10 cts. each. Rifle first class in every way. When sold return our $1.50 and we send rifle.
Bluine Mfg. Co., 81 Mill St., Concord Jct., Mass.

Comfort's Information Bureau

Under this heading all questions by COMFORT subscribers on subjects not relating to the special departments elsewhere in the paper, will be answered, as far as may be. COMFORT readers are advised to read carefully the advertisements in this paper, as they will often find in them what they seek through their questions addressed to this Bureau. They will thus save time, labor and postage.

No attention will be given any inquiry which lacks the sender's full name and address but we will print only initials if so requested.

F. J., Parsons, Tenn.—The Sam Houston you ask about was an American soldier who was born near Lexington, Va., March 2, 1793. He died at Huntsville, Texas, July 25, 1863. Houston's father, who was a veteran of the War of the Revolution, died in 1807 and Sam's mother, with six sons and three daughters, went to East Tennessee, close to the Cherokee country of that time. The boy grew up to an active life among the Indians, by whom he was much liked, and he fought in the war of 1812 with Great Britain. He emerged from the war a lieutenant and later became an Indian agent in connection with the government's dealings with the Cherokees. He after became a lawyer, adjutant general of Tennessee, district attorney, representative, and finally governor of Tennessee, to which office he was chosen in August, 1827. He married in 1829, but separated, for unknown reasons, from his wife after only three months of wedded life. He turned then toward his old friends, the Cherokees, and by official act of the ruling chiefs was admitted to all privileges of the Cherokee nation. He took an active part in championing all causes of the tribe. In 1832, Houston began to take a leading part in the revolutionary movement forming in Texas against the Mexican government, and when the war with Mexico began, he became military chief of his district. Any U. S. history will tell you of the famous part which Gen. Sam Houston took in the Mexican war and the securing of the independence of Texas, of which he became president. When Texas became a state in 1845, Houston was one of the first senators sent to Washington by his grateful fellow citizens. In 1859 he became governor of Texas. Write to the county clerk of Walker County, Huntsville, Texas, concerning any descendants of Sam Houston who may be living in that or other local ities of the state. (2.) You are only forty miles from Jackson, in your state, the city where Union University is located. Show your mysterious "black rock" to some professor at Union who specializes in mineralogy. He will be able, we are sure, to promptly identify it for you, and this will be much better than attempting to mail the heavy specimen. From your brief description, we guess that the rock is a meteoric fragment.

V. E. W., Widewater Va.—The common black soot obtained when cleaning out a stove is considerable of a specific to use against the ravages of bugs and worms which attack cabbage and melon plants. Replace the dusting whenever rain, wind or showers have destroyed the protection. Arsenate of lead or Paris green made into a mild spray solution are the usual bug cures for potato vines. It is well to mix a little slacked lime with these poisonous sprays. The solution sticks better to the plant and the danger of burning the foliage is lessened. The packages in which you buy this spray material will tell you in what strength they should be mixed.

M. S., Jennings, Okla.—Henry Ford's home is at Dearborn, Michigan, where he may be addressed. (2.) We know of no information bureau maintained by the Federal Government, although the various departments of our government grant through literature and otherwise much information connected with their particular lines and activities. (3.) We must tell you that such gathered battlefield relics as your cigar box collection exist literally by tons, and we could not tell you where you might dispose of what you have picked up. (4.) Ask some G. A. R. veteran concerning the original name and use of the lead "slugs" you mention.

L. H., Wisconsin.—We certainly do not believe that a man's proper vocation can be told by an inspection of his nose shape or the color of his eyes, although it is probable that a man's abilities along certain lines could be judged by one versed in human nature who would join to mental tests and questions some of the fundamental laws—or traditions—of physiognomy. To this extent the claims of "vocational experts" are justified. Also we believe that as an adult who is capable of asking the questions you do in as intelligent a manner as you phrase them, that you could extricate yourself from being what you call a "round peg in a square hole" as readily as could any "expert" who must always fail to know you as well as you know yourself. A man's life is often a record of holes and mistakes from which he pulls himself, and the oftener he helps himself and the less he is helped from these sloughs, the more certain is his future success and strength. We have little faith in or praise for modern-day methods of cheap-john "science" which attempts to make the average man over from something he has been for many thousands of years. We would not care to recommend to you any "vocational expert."

Mrs. W. A. G., Georgia.—The inscription in your violin is intended to convey the impression that the instrument was the handiwork of Paul Maggini in Brescia, Italy, in the year 1695. We say "impression," because we are compelled to doubt that your violin is of this age or craftmanship. As we have many times printed here, there has been and is a thriving trade established in the marketing of fraudulent "old violins" which contain inscriptions stating them to be the productions of old makers. We believe that your instrument is one of these often creditable imitations. Show it some day to an expert violinist in one of our big cities.

Mrs. H. C., Oklahoma.—See reply above to Mrs. W. A. G., Georgia. The markings in your violin are in Latin and meant to represent that the instrument is the work of Antony Stradivari, in Cremona, Italy, in 1636.

Mrs. G. H. W., Missouri.—See reply above to Mrs. W. A. G., Georgia. We are very sure that Joseph Guarnerius did not paste this printed inscription in your violin in the year 1714.

T. A. R., North Carolina.—We could not tell you of labor demands or conditions of pay at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, but we feel very certain that it is not necessary to look for a supply of help as far south as North Carolina. You can write, if you wish, to the Supt. of Brooklyn Navy Yard, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Miss. M. H., Clovis, N. M.—Harold Bell Wright, the author, may be addressed at Tucson, Arizona, his home.

L. H. S., Arkansas.—Most assuredly a Stradivarius violin is of "extra value," provided it is a production of that most famous of violin makers. But inscriptions are more easily made than are great violins. We fear you are but the possessor of a more or less cleverly made and marked "fake" old violin. See reply to Mrs. W. A. G., Georgia, in this issue.

Mrs. I. G. S., North Carolina.—Experts say that the past two hundred years have left but some thirty of the violins made by Stradivarius, and that these are now in the hands of collectors and museums. All COMFORT readers who have violins marked as having been made by Stradivarius should please take notice of the fact stated above. The evidence is practically certain that the trade in fraudulent old violins is increasing—and numbers many of COMFORT'S readers among buyers and owners of these variously marked instruments.

Mrs. W. E. S., Mississippi.—It is almost impossible to glue or cement glassware or china so that it will stand repeated washings in hot water, but it is possible to repair it so that it can serve with careful use or little handling. Try any of the china cements that your druggist or hardware merchant may recommend. There are many good ones on the market—that is, both merchants and cements!

Mrs. R. B., Missouri.—Marie Corelli was born in 1864 in Italy. She became the adopted daughter of Charles Mackay, a well-known Englishman, and received a careful and cosmopolitan education in France and Italy. In 1886, she wrote her famous, "Romance of Two Worlds" which made for her a reputation her future novels maintained. What you call Miss Corelli's "creed" is doubtless best shown in her works. We do not know of it being otherwise formulated or taught by her or any of her admirers. Miss Corelli is still living and makes her home in England.

A. L. F., Oklahoma.—There are but a few thousand acres of vacant public land left in your state, and the one U. S. Land Office is located at Guthrie. Write the Register there for information regarding what acres are still available and their situtaion. (2.) We would be unable to pass capably upon the reliability of this Oklahoma land company you name. Best let your local bank officials investigate for you and report.

Mrs. M. T., Alabama.—As a later subscriber, we publish for you the method of re-silvering a mirror which was given in this column in the issue of July, 1920: "The re-silvering of a mirror is by no means an amateur job, and we doubt very much if you can successfully accomplish it at home. The following method is one which, for its simplicity, is recommended by the "Scientific American." The mirror is placed face downward on a table. With a piece of cotton, clean and polish the place to be re-silvered. Now spread out on the spot a piece of tinfoil a little larger than the place to be repaired. After spreading smoothly, let fall on the center of the foil a drop of metallic mercury and, with a bit of cotton, rub the foil until it becomes brilliant. Now place on this new amalgam a piece of writing paper and on it pile books or a weight of other sort. The weight need not be great, but sufficient to keep the new amalgam smoothly in contact with the glass. The amount of mercury needed should correspond as nearly as possible to three drams to each square foot of glass that is to be silvered.

The Modern Farmer

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 31.)

been baled wet in a round bale with a hard core was found to be reduced 7 per cent. In each case where cotton was baled wet, the amount of waste was increased. Therefore it was determined that dry baling is far superior to baling when cotton is not in dry or normal condition.

Succulent Feeds for Dairy Cows

Succulent feeds are of more importance for dairy cows than for other farm animals; the extent of this importance is not fully appreciated by a great many farmers. These feeds are essential to the most economical production of milk. Their cooling, slightly laxative action aids greatly in keeping the digestive tract in good condition. They are highly palatable, as a rule, and whet the appetite of cows so that larger amounts of roughage are consumed than would be the case if only hay and other dry forage were fed. The consumption of the larger amount of nutrients which they encourage naturally results in greater milk production—and greater returns from the sale of same.

Corn silage is the cheapest and most satisfactory succulent feed available. It is highly relished by cows, furnishes a steady and uniform supply of high quality feed for winter, and is economical by virtue of the large tonnage that may be grown per acre. Where a large enough number of cows are kept to prevent its spoiling, it is excellent for summer feeding also. Corn cut when the kernels are nicely glazed (dented in the case of dent varieties) but when most of the leaves are still green produces best silage. Only good silage should be used; moldy silage is likely to set up digestive disorders. A common rule is to feed three pounds of silage and one pound of roughage for each 100 pounds of live weight of each cow. Silage may be abused by overfeeding it, by feeding it in poorly ventilated barns which results in the production of "off flavor" in milk, and by careless feeding of silage that has become spoiled by mold or other cause.

Corn stover silage, made from cured corn stover after all the ears have been removed, is worth far less than silage made from silo-ripe corn ears and all. It is preferable, however, to dry shredded or cut corn stover, as it is more palatable and is eaten with much less waste. The feeding value of corn stover silage is about 60 per cent, as much per ton as good corn silage. Rations including corn stover silage will require additional amounts of good hay and concentrates to make them compare with rations containing normal corn silage.

Sunflower silage has been found to vary widely, as have the results from its use as a feed for dairy cows. Where sunflowers grow successfully, unusually large yields of silage per acre are secured. The silage is less nutritious than is corn silage, however. In certain feeding trials it has been found to be as much as 40 per cent lower than corn silage in digestible nutrients. But where the growing season is too short or is otherwise unfavorable for corn growing, sunflowers for silage undoubtedly have a place among crops worthy of recommendation.

Sorghum silage, made from the grain and the sweet sorghums, ranks next in value to corn silage. Sorghum varieties that will mature fully in any given locality, and the refuse crushed cane from sorghum mills may be made into silage and fed to dairy cows to very good advantage.

Pea vine silage, made in pea canning districts from the vines from which green peas have been removed for canning purposes, is a highly nutritious feed for dairy cattle. Where it is fed after milking time to avoid fainting the milk with the rather strong odor of the silage, it is prized highly as a succulent feed, and the fact that these vines are considered as waste and may be had for little or nothing adds to the economy of their use for silage.

Legume silage, made from clover or alfalfa, is far more difficult to make of the same good quality as corn silage, but either may be made into silage in seasons when the weather is unfavorable for haymaking. When clover or alfalfa is to be made into silage, allow it to cure for a few hours in the swath after mowing. This reduces the water content and improves the quality. Do not let drying proceed so far that the crop will not pack well in the silo; thorough wilting is desired, but not drying to brittleness. These same general rules apply to such crops as peas-and-oats, soy beans or cow peas and to others less commonly grown for the same purpose.

Roots such as mangels are excellent for dairy cows, and serve nicely as a supplementary source of succulence, but not as a substitute for silage if both can possibly be provided. Feeding trials have shown that one pound of dry matter in roots is equal to one pound of corn or to a mixture of barley, oats and rye. It is therefore safe to figure one pound of roots as being equal to one pound of dry matter in grain. As an appetizer for test cows, and as a succulent feed that keeps the digestive tract in fine working order, roots are of great value.

Wet beet pulp is liked by cows and may be fed with good results when cows are fed from 50 to 100 pounds of wet pulp daily with concentrates and hay. Wet beet pulp is considered worth about one-third as much as corn silage per ton. Cows should receive plenty legume hay in addition to the pulp allowance; otherwise weak calves will result, doubtless due to the fact that the pulp is low in lime.

Number of Ears Influences Corn Yield

For years careful selection of seed corn has been followed to standardize certain types that produce a single ear per stalk, or under particularly favorable conditions, two ears per stalk. Today we have as a result two distinct types, one commonly listed as a single-ear type, the other as the prolific type producing more than two ears per stalk. In the South where both kinds are extensively grown, experiments have recently been completed testing under ordinary farming conditions the yielding qualities of each, and determining whether or not the large ears borne by the single-ear type yield more per acre than the smaller ears of the prolific type.

In these experiments the prolific type was found to be more productive than the single-ear type. It also was more efficient in increasing the yield per plant and in increasing the number of ears per plant. While the single-ear type was more efficient in increasing the weight of the ear, the prolific type produced a larger yield per acre because of this percentage of several smaller ears over a few ears of larger size. The results of the experiment indicate that in sections to which both types are adapted, the prolific will be the more productive under conditions of ordinary field culture, as it is self-adjusting to meet varying soil conditions and state of fertility.

Through the columns of this department subscribers may have free advice from the eminent specialists and experts of our Agricultural Staff on questions relating to farm, live stock and dairying.

Address Modern Farmer, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published.

Questions and Answers

TO GET RID OF MOLES.—Will you please tell me how I can put an end to the moles that are plowing up in my lawn, eating my flower bulbs, and destroying my carrots and potatoes? I have tried putting poison in the burrows, but the moles are just as numerous as ever, and the damage goes on. Mrs. J. J. V.

A.—Moles do much damage to gardens and lawns it is true, but they do not eat bulbs, vegetables or grass roots. The damage is due entirely to the disturbance they cause to the soil, loosening it about the roots of growing plants. Moles live entirely upon animal matter, such as earth worms, white grubs and other insects. While they are found to be numerous, it is a certainty that insects of all kinds, both adult and larvæ are numerous also in the garden soil. Otherwise the moles would not be working in it so persistently. The moles are not responsible for the injury to your garden crops directly, but still they are partly to blame. The moles make the endless burrows; pine and field mice and shrews follow the burrows, eating the bulbs and damaging the crops growing in the ground. Trapping is the one and only certain way to control moles. Special mole traps are on the market; buy half a dozen and set them as directed by the manufacturer. You will soon get results. Don't try to use ordinary traps such as you would for rats; they will not serve. Poison baits will do no good against moles, but poisoned slices of apple and potato will perhaps rid the runs of mice and shrews. Thus, between the trapping and the poisoning, you should be able to get the upper hand of the pests. Remember that mole skins are valuable if taken in the fall or winter, and tan those you get at that time. It may help pay for the damage they have done.

Find Prehistoric Corn In Tennessee Stone Caves

Corn that grew in Tennessee in prehistoric times, possibly before Joseph put away his seven years' supply in Egypt, was unearthed recently by W. E. Meyer, of the Bureau of American Ethnology, and sent to the United States Department of Agriculture for identification. During recent excavations in Davidson County, Tenn., Mr. Meyer came upon a number of stone slab graves containing mortuary vessels. Some of these held specimens of charred maize in fairly good condition. From the size and shape of the grains it was possible to identify the variety as Mammoth Rowed Tropical Flint, a form about half way between true flint and popcorn.

The same type of Indian corn occurs in the West Indies, and there is no question in the minds of scientists but that there was a very early communication between the West Indies and North America. Not only corn but beans, squashes, pumpkins and tobacco are of tropical and subtropical origin. These staples, now so important throughout both hemispheres, found their way into North America and were cultivated beyond the Great Lakes in Canada long before the discovery of America. There is abundant evidence of communication between the West Indies and Florida, and up the Mississippi and its tributaries.

The Alphabet and Who Started It

The Phœnicians, who are credited with more inventions that have lasted all time than any other nation, are said to have been the first one to use a systematized alphabet.

The first obtainable records date from the ninth century, B. C., but even then the use made of distinct letters was so elaborate that it probably originated at least one or two centuries before.

Students of ancient languages have come to the conclusion that the Phœnicians accomplished their task by applying efficiency to the use of Egypt's hieroglyphics.

At the very dawn of history they carried their message to the Greeks, and it was they who gave the standard arrangement of letters and adopted the name under which it is known to this day, the word "Alphabet" being composed of "alpha," the first letter in the Greek alphabet, and "beta," the second.

The Man Who First Saw Uranus

The discovery of the planet Uranus may not mean very much to the average man, but to the science of astronomy it was an event of the greatest magnitude, and the man who brought it about is looked upon even today as one of the greatest savants of all times.

This was the great savant, Sir William Herschel, who, in 1781, after indescribable struggles with adversity, finally located Uranus in the heavens. Being poor, he had to construct his own telescope, and with it he accomplished wonders in his chosen field.

He first thought he had discovered a comet but his later researches convinced him that a planet, until then unknown, had come into his vision.

George III. had many faults, but he appreciated scientific merit. He placed Herschel on his permanent pension list with 400 pounds a year, and thereafter, the famous astronomer, faithfully assisted by his sister Caroline, added discovery upon discovery to his record.

In the modern hospitals when a baby is born a print of the child's foot is taken and on the same paper the thumb-print of the mother, for identification. It is claimed many mothers fear hospital action. It is claimed many mothers fear hospital accouchement lest the nurses "mix those babies up."

—Dearborn Independent.

FREE ELECTRIC FIXTURE CATALOG!

1000 Different Fixtures Illustrated

Write today for your copy. Save 50 per cent—direct from Mfrs. No Middleman's Profit.
Our Special: 8 Room Electric Set Ready to hang $24.50—other bargains.
UNITED LIGHTING FIXTURE CO.,
280 Bowery, Dept. 115, New York City

Feather Beds Delivered FREE

Write at once for Free Big Bargain Book on New Sanitary Feather Beds, Pillows and Feathers. You'll be surprised at our low factory prices. We deliver all goods free and give you 10 days trial. Everything Guaranteed. Before you buy at any price, send a postcard today, get free bargain book and sample of feathers, all postpaid.
AMERICAN FEATHER & PILLOW CO.
Nashville, Tenn.
Dept. 10,

Send NO MONEY This ALUMINUM SET GIVEN

GREATEST ALUMINUM COMBINATION EVER GIVEN

Quickly obtained for Giving Away 12 Big Colored Art Pictures to friends and neighbors with 12 Boxes famous White Cloverine at 25c each, as explained in new big illustrated catalog of 100 other amazing gifts. Twelve practical uses possible with this highly polished set of four pieces. Made for lifetime of hard service. Nationally advertised Cloverine sells on sight. Millions demand it for burns, bruises, pimples, chapped hands, face, etc. Easiest and fairest plan for twenty-eight years makes us most reliable. Write quick. Be first in your town. Cloverine and pictures sent same day order received.
THE WILSON CHEMICAL CO., Dept. A16, TYRONE, PA.

The Family Doctor

The remedies and advice here given are intended only for simple cases; serious ses should be taken to your local doctor. Address, The Family Doctor, COMFORT, ugusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give ur address. Name will not be published.

Mrs. S. C. S., Scranton, N. C.—The pain in back is eumatic. Take after meals a five-grain tablet of icylate of sodium Drink plenty of water, and avoid eets and pastries of all kinds. You might also, as local remedy, iron the back. Apply a moderately t iron over several thicknesses of flannel wrung out mustard water.

Mrs. C. B., Roseboro, N. C.—There is no danger far as tuberculosis is concerned; but you should ve the boy examined and find out if he has enlarged nsils and adenoids. If so have them removed at ce and this tendency to constant spitting will be viated.

"Blue Eye", Wenday Gap, N. C.—In your next tter kindly give full name and address to warrant a ply. You can develop the chest by proper breathing ercises. Consult your local doctor and have him escribe the proper exercises for this purpose.

Miss H. C., Castlewood, Va.—Hayden's Viburnum mpound can be obtained at any reliable drug store. ke as directed in the article referred to in another mber of COMFORT.

Mrs. A. G., Mt. Carmel, Ill.—Have the bladder shed out witha solution of permanganate of potasm. Use a teaspoonful of a saturated solution to e pint of hot water. Of course you must have this ne by your local doctor. You can also take after eals a five-grain tablet of urotropin.

Mrs. P. D., Covington, Va.—Dobell's solution can obtained at any drug store, as it is an official preparaon. Catarrh can be cured if not due to nasal obruction, which can only be cured by operation.

Mrs. A. R., Shaw, West Va.—Have your son's scalp assaged and apply at night a two per cent. solution resorcin, to stop his hair falling. Dissolve the resorn in equal parts of alcohol and rose water.

Mr. R. L. C., Cleveland, Tenn.—Basham's mixture n be compounded by any reliable druggist. It should made up fresh and kept in a cool place while being ed.

Mrs. S. E., Newville, Pa.—Have the warts removed use of the actual cautery. This is the only sure way.

Miss G. S. W., Holmes, Iowa.—You may or may not ve tuberculosis. Have your sputum examined and d out. If you have a beginning tubercular lesion the lungs, better change your climate at once. Diet r Bright's disease is milk, and milk only.

Rev. M. A. T., Addison, Ala.—Better be examined y some good nose specialist and find out whether or ot you have some nasal obstruction. If this is the se have the obstruction removed surgically. In the eantime you can use Dobell's solution which is official d can be compounded by any reliable druggist.

Mr. W. T. W., Sturgis, Miss.—You probably have a gh blood pressure. Take after meals ten drops of turated solution of iodide of potassium well diluted. void sweets of all kinds and keep the bowels free. he nose-bleeding is a good thing as it relieves the headessure.

Mrs. M. M. A., Sanger, Calif.—You have ruptured me of the fibers of the large back muscle. Gently assage the back and apply over hot flannels wrung t of mustard water a hot flatiron In other words on e back in the region of the pain. Think your trouble urely a local strain.

Miss A. H., Richland, Mo.—Have the "birth-mark" emoved by use of carbon dioxide snow. Of course is must be done by some surgeon accustomed to the se of the snow. The result will be more than satisictory.

Mrs H. C. L., Plaquemine, La.—You seem to have mild form of epilepsy. Avoid meats of all kinds; eep your bowels free; eat sparingly always, and take fter meals five grain tablet of bromide of sodium.

Miss D. L., Surray, Va.—You have a neuritis. Take teaspoonful of Warburg's tincture well diluted after eals. Also massage the limbs at night.

Mrs. E. J. A., Lenoir, N. C.—Have your dentist lean the teeth and remove matter that is present around or between the teeth and gums. Then wash the outh three or four times a day with a solution of hlorozene. Dissolve one tablet in a glass of hot water.

Mrs T. B., Southfield, Mass.—The difference in ize of the breasts has no significance. Just wait until ou are confined and they will be all right again.

Mrs. C. A. S., Condersport, Pa.—Rheumatism. Have your husband take a five-grain tablet of salicylate f sodium after meals.

Mrs. J. M., Hunter, North Dak.—May be you have mong other things a so-called floating kidney. If so ave it replaced. Your weight and rheumatic condiion will be helped by taking five drops of a saturated olution of the iodide of potassium well diluted after eals. You should avoid sweets and pastries of all inds and on the alternate days use only one quart of nilk in divided doses as food and drink. If you follow his diet and treatment you will reduce and be benefited n every way.

Mrs. L. L., Moccasin, Mont.—Massage your hands nd limbs daily. Have your daughter's eyes examined or correcting lenses. The sties come from eye-strain. She can also apply to the lids at night yellow oxide of nercury ointment. Use a one per cent. ointment.

Mrs. B. L. T., Greensboro, N. C.—May be if you take good tonic to improve your blood during your pregnancy you will not flow so much at confinement Try tablespoonful of Basham's mixture well diluted after meals for one or two weeks at a time.

Mr. G. B., Evergreen, L. I.—You are rheumatic. Take after meals a five-grain tablet of salicylate of sodium. Also avoid sweets and pastries of all kinds.

Mrs. G. B. W., Taunton, Mass.—Have your hair shampooed and then apply a two per cent. solution of resorcin dissolved in equal parts of alcohol and rose water. This should stop the hair from falling out.

Mrs. J. C., Belle, Mo.—You have answered your own question. Have your little girl take a prolonged nap in the afternoon so she will not sleep so soundly at night and she will be cured of the bed-wetting.

Mrs. D. M. L., Charleston, Va.—The "brown spots" can be removed by applying with care a one-to-one-thousand solution of corrosive sublimate to them once or twice a week. This is a poison and must be used with care and not too often.

Mrs. E G., Madison, Maine.—Have your teeth looked after by some competent dentist and use, as a mouth wash, one tablet of chlorozene dissolved in a glass of hot water. This remedy will cure the mouth condition, if used three or four times a day, and continuously.

Mrs L. S., Ashby, Minn.—The bats will not hurt any one as far as we know.

Mrs. J. S. N., Denmark, Iowa.—You seem to be suffering from a chronic malarial poison Take after meals two teaspoonfuls of Warburg's tincture well diluted after meals. You can also iron your shoulders and back with a hot flatiron applied over several thicknesses of flannel wrung out of hot mustard water.

Mrs. E. O., Winchester, Tenn.—By all means have your teeth attended to at once or you may become a chronic invalid.

Miss P. W., Summerville, Ill.—Vinegar is harmful if used too long and will not reduce you. Diet and exercise will do more for you in every way.

Mrs. McC., Gate City, Va.—Your gums need the care of some good dentist. Have them thoroughly cleaned and then use some good tooth-powder and keep them in good condition. Your other trouble is due to a morbid mental condition. Just mix with your friends as much as possible and, in time, you will forget your morbid fear and supersensitiveness. There is no other way to overcome this condition.

Miss. M. G., Greenville, S. C.—Small moles and warts as well are supposed to come from a bacterial origin. Have one or more removed by use of the actual cautery and the others will disappear.

Mrs. H. A. A., Corinth, Miss.—You must wear an elastic woven bandage during the day for the enlarged veins on leg. You can also take as a tonic a tablespoonful of Basham's mixture well diluted after meals. For the vaginal discharge use a douche of normal salt solution morning and night. Use about a teaspoonful of salt to the pint of water.

THE BLUE HAT

By Ernest L. Thurston

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

IT happened because John Conrad ran for the street car and caught it. There was no reason for haste. His boarding house, where dinner awaited him, had no drawing power. Rather, it repelled by its lack of home atmosphere and by its overcharge of those varied and heavy odors which present one with practically the whole bill of fare, past as well as present, when one opens the front door. Moreover, another car was in sight. But it is an instinctive habit of the real American to run for a car. So John developed an extra burst of speed, swung aboard as the door closed and instinctively made for the one vacant seat. As he reached it, the car rounded a sharp curve and he was precipitated neatly and with dispatch against a young girl seated by the window.

"Oh, please pardon me. That was exceedingly careless of me and—" he added with his ready smile, "of the motorman. I shall write the Traction Company tomorrow, directing it to establish a rule for slow speed on all curves."

The girl looked up with a slight smile and a little nod of acknowledgment. John caught a delightful glimpse of clear, frank dark eyes, a firm but sweet mouth and a positive little chin, all framed by her dark hair and by a dainty blue hat that somehow spoke of spring and out-of-doors. A straightforward little business girl she was, dressed for her work, perfectly capable of taking care of herself, yet mightily alluring to the clean young fellow beside her.

John Conrad felt strongly the dainty attractiveness of her. Girls had had no place in his life during his few months in the great, strange city in which he was struggling to make his place. The girls and fellows had always been running into his home in the old village and he and his sisters into theirs. Real comradeship had been a natural part of his life. A wave of utter longing and homesickness passed over him.

"You're a thoroughbred and a little beauty. Wouldn't I like to know you?" he said to himself, "Think of getting away from that factory after office hours for a walk in the park, or a tramp out into the country with you, or to the movies, or for a canoe ride, or for a bite at a tea room."

Lonesomely, he pictured her at the other side of a little table overlooking the river. Just then, in the stillness as the car stooped, he heard her say quietly,

"Splendid! And then we'll stop at the Greenwood Inn for a salad and parfait."

"I know just the corner and the table, overlooking the river and the island." The words were out, impulsively, and then he caught his breath as the girl looked up sharply, with mounting color and embarassment.

"For the——. Oh, there I go again. I spoke without realizing, before I could think. I did not mean to be rude. I—" John stumbled in his distress.

"And I," said the girl, "was evidently thinking out loud about something. It doesn't matter."

John looked down at her as she turned away and gazed out the window, the color still deep in her cheeks, and the suggestion of a smile about her lips. She looked more enticing than ever. A daring thought came into his mind. Again, impulsively, he turned to her.

"Please do not be offended, but may I say just a word? I do not wish to presume in the slightest degree, or to appear unmanly."

The girl looked at him with a queer little flicker of light in her eyes, but said nothing, and gathering his courage, John went on,

"I'm a stranger in the city and I'm absolutely starving for an acquaintance with a nice girl—with you. My name's John Conrad. I'm a chemist for the Randolph Manufacturing Company. I'm working all hours to make my work go there. It's new and untried. And I've missed home and the girls and fellows horribly. You look so delightful you make me homesick. Won't you give me a chance to get acquainted with you? Put me up against anything you wish. I was wishing for all I was worth that I knew you well enough to take you out to supper or just to an afternoon tea room. That was on my mind when I spoke out just now. Would you,—could you save my life and do it? You must know I'm honest and straight about it."

The girl gave him a straight, keen look, but hesitated thoughtfully before she spoke.

"I know you are honest, but it's—," and then after a moment she went on, a little smile playing about her lips, "I'm nothing but an office stenographer, a business cog, but if you really care to do it I will let you take me to—" she hesitated and then laughed, "the Greenwood Inn."

Joyously he piloted her to the quiet and cheerful Greenwood Inn, sought his particular table, overlooking the river and wooded island. There, over salad and parfait and other dishes they established communities of interest. John told her of his work, of his interest in the new field of which he was in charge and of his efforts to convince the president of the company of its value. Her interest was so evident, and her questions drew him on so skillfully that finally he noticed how keen they were.

"Either you know something of the business I am in, or you are an expert at cross questioning. Do you happen to know anything of our line?"

"Yes," with a smile.

"And where did you learn it, may I ask?"

"In the Randolph Manufacturing Company."

"What! Say that again."

"I'm your president's new stenographer." Then she giggled. "You have possibly seen my back bent over the typewriter when you have been in the office recently."

John gasped, then reached out and seized her hand.

"Why it's your voice I've heard over the telephone when I've been summoned to the office. I knew it was familiar. Why we're not strangers after all, are we? When I'm in that office, facing the Old Man's cross fire of questions, I can't to save me tell who else is there. Thundering crickets! What have I been missing all these weeks!"

"And do you think, sir," she laughed, "that I would go off to a tea room with a young man who does not know me, and who does not even know my name, unless I knew quite a little about him? However Mr. Ranfield has given you a very good word in my hearing. So I dared, and I'm not sorry."

"Well, this is sure my lucky day. Now I want to be made properly acquainted with your name. And, say, I've a hankering to know what you were thinking about when you spoke out in the car."

"My name is Elizabeth Robinson. As to that remark," she began to color but looked him straight in the eyes, "do you think it proper to inquire as to the secret thoughts of a young woman, on so slight an acquaintance? However, I will tell you. This city is very strange and cold to me too, and I'm but a boarding house girl. I was—sort of—wishing a young man would take me out somewhere this evening."

"The fates are smiling on me," said John reaching over to shake hands again. Somehow he felt impelled to shake hands on every slightest occasion.

A little later, as they wandered through the park Elizabeth told him just a bit about her life. Her paremts had died when she was a child. Then had come a few years of schooling under the care of distant relatives. Now she was supporting herself and in training for an executive secretaryship. Then she turned the talk back to him and to his home life in the distant village. Somehow she drew him on to talk of his friends and neighbors, seemingly deeply interested in the little sketches he gave of them. Gradually she carried him back to reminiscences of his boyhood days.

"When I was a kid," said John, "harvesting was the great time."

"Gathering fruit, and having all the apples one wanted."

"Yes, and choosing the best pumpkins for Hallowe'en."

"And probably sneaking off with mother's best sheet to help make the ghost."

"You sure know it. And going chestnuting up the Back Ridge."

"And going fishing, I suppose."

"Sure, with most of the girls afraid of the worms. And then came the winter coasting and the maple sugar run. Funny thing, it comes back to me now. A small crowd of us kids used to go together in those days, but my boon companion was a girl. She was my age, about twelve or fourteen, when she suddenly left town. She was gritty and game for anything. She was my first and only love. I was going to marry her when we grew up, but I've never seen or heard of her in all these years since she moved away. Let's see, what was her name? Betty, that's it, Betty what? Betty, Betty, Oh, Robinson, Betty Robinson. Why, Great Guns!" He looked across at a hot-faced laughing girl, "You're Betty Robinson."

Later, considerably later, Betty said they really must go home.

"There's a car, let's run for it." and hand in hand they raced across the grass and caught it.

As they swung on the straps on the way back to the now warm and friendly city, and he looked down at the bright face beside him, his eyes kept going to her hat, with a puzzled look.

"What is the matter with my hat?" said Elizabeth finally, "Don't you like it?"

John thought for a moment.

"Prettiest ever. Now I have it," he exclaimed triumphantly, "my first and only love always used to like to wear a pretty blue hat."

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 36.)

CHARLESTON, 410 WALNUT ST., ILL

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

I wish you would publish a few words of thanks for me to the many kind sisters who sent me letters, tracts and books, in answer to my request some time ago. I am not able to write personal letters, as I have tuberculosis. I am sixty-five years old and have read COMFORT half my life and I like it better all the time.

Love to everyone, MRS. MARY E. GRAY.

OLDS, ALTA., CANADA.

DEAR SISTERS OF COMFORT:

I am coming to you with a request.

We have lost a dear brother in our home and my mother is grieving her heart away. This is the second child she has lost. My brother was twenty-five years old and was sick just a few days.

I thought maybe the sisters would write comforting letters to her and help cheer her up, as I am a long distance from her. Her address is: Mrs. G. E. Gadd, Colome, So. Dak.

MRS. J. C. CRAMER.

TENNESSEE.

DEAR READERS:

I have been a reader of COMFORT for some time and enjoy it, especially the sisters' letters.

I am a school teacher and they deserve sympathy but you will find few to acknowledge her need of it. While I have been teaching only a few years, I think I am competent to say a little on that subject. To my way of thinking it is a great and particu ar work. If children love their teacher they are almost sure to try to imitate her in one way or another. Therefore, not only do we impart to them our knowledge of the subjects taught, but we also help to mold their character. The minds of children are as an unwritten book, upon which the parents, teachers and experience may imprint the thoughts and ambitions that may help in forming a noble character. Thence, it behooves us to "watch our step."

Wishing all good luck, SMILES.

God's Girls

BY DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I think God took a patch of blue
To make your baby eyes;
They are so much alike, the two
God's babies and God's skies.
I think God took a robin's call
To make your baby words;
I cannot tell your song at all
From music of the birds.
I think God took a woodland rose
To make your baby lips.
They are pink petals like to those
The honey-merchant sips.
I think God took a bit of sun
To make your baby curls—
Of all His treasures, every one,
God makes His baby girls.

Sent by Mrs. W. Schoenefield, Wentworth, S. Dak.

Best Ways of Doing Things Around the Home

At fruit time make a screen frame to run different kinds of fruit butter through. Mine is about twelve by eighteen inches. Nail four boards together for frame, then tack the window screening on to boards. If this screen is used, apples do not need coring, as the screen catches the stems, seeds, etc.

Before using a new quilt or after washing an old one, bind the top with a piece of goods, old or new, about eighteen inches wide. Practically all the handling will come on this piece which, when soiled, can easily be removed and washed, thus saving washing the entire quilt. I take my quilts apart to wash them. Then after beating the cotton filling, I tack them together again and they are as fluffy as when new.

MRS. HELEN JACKSON, MAXWELL, NEW MEXICO

How many of you ever tried:

Putting about a tablespoonful of water in the whites of eggs when beating them? They are much easier and more quickly beaten and it makes almost twice the amount without changing the quality.

Putting a cushion of some kind (I use a quilt or pillow) on a chair or tal stool and sitting down to iron. It is as easily done and much less tiresome.

Using a vegetable ladle for taking up butter. Much of the milk will drain out; it is especially good if the butter is too soft.

Cooking over your old butter for shortening purposes. Just cook the milk out and pour in a jar. I like this much better for cake and cookies than I do fresh butter. It will keep indefinitely.

Using warm vinegar to wash arms and hands when you get lye on them.

Binding a place where a rusty nail has stuck, or a thorn or cut for that matter, with turpentine on sugar. If you haven't turpentine, coal oil is almost as good.

Wetting baking soda to the consistency of paste and binding to a sting of any kind, centipede included Change about every ten minutes until two or three applications have been put on.

Add a little cocoa to bread pudding when making it. It is a "nice change."—FRECKLES.

Cayenne pepper will drive ants away if put into cracks.

Cloth wet in vinegar, wrung dry and wrapped around cheese will keep it from moulding. Keep in a cool place.

Pour a little kerosene into trap of kitchen sink occasionally. It keeps it clean.

Don't Wear a Truss

BE COMFORTABLE—Wear the Brooks Appliance, the modern scientific invention which gives rupture sufferers immediate relief. It has no obnoxious springs or pads. Automatic Air Cushions bind and draw together the broken parts. No salves or plasters. Durable, Cheap. Sent on trial to prove its worth. Beware of imitations. Look for trade-mark bearing portrait and signature of C. E. Brooks which appears on every Appliance. None other genuine. Full information and booklet sent free in plain, sealed envelope.

MR. G. E. BROOKS

BROOKS APPLIANCE CO., 157T State St., Marshall, Mich.

The Bee Cell Supporter

A BOON TO WOMANKIND

Made from the purest, softest rubber. Six cups or faces render misplacement absolutely impossible. Endorsed by the medical profession. Send us $2.50 and we will mail you one postpaid in plain package. Money back if not entirely satisfactory. Write for descriptive circular. It's FREE.

The Bee Cell Co., Dept. 168 White Bldg., Buffalo, N. Y.

"FIBRE-LITE" LIMBS

Easy Payments—Do Nature's Work. AGENTS WANTED who wear Leg. Good Pay. FREE Fibre Sample. DESCRIBE STUMP TO WORMAN CO., 252-C Hennepin, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

A pair of scissors are essential in a kitchen. Use them to open fish and chickens and to cut meat into small pieces.

When making gelatine, use one-quarter the amount of boiling water called for to dissolve the gelatine and use ice water for the balance. This causes the jelling to take place more quickly.

THE KITCHEN STUNT SISTER, GEORGIA.

Grass stains may be quickly and easily removed from white serge by covering the spots thickly with powdered magnesia. Leave the powder on for a day or longer and then brush off.

To remove mildew, put one teaspoonful of chloride of lime in a quart of water, strain twice through a cloth, then saturate the mildewed article in this and lay in sun. A more simple way is to soak the article in sour milk one day and night and let remain in sun next day.

Grease spots on velvet may be removed by rubbing briskly with alcohol.

Oil spots may be taken off white linen with turpentine. This will also remove tar, paint and varnish.

Ink may be removed by soaking in fresh milk.

Tea stains will come out if they are covered at once with salt.

Common lump starch made into a paste is fine for cleaning silver.

To clean white iron beds, use one-half cup of soda dissolved in one cup of vinegar.

LUCY, WEST DURHAM, N. C.

Requests

Cure for chronic constipation.

Wanted: To hear from sisters living in Arkansas as to land, weather, labor conditions, etc. —MRS. ANNA JAY, FLAT CREEK, STAR ROUTE, MISSOURI.

Where to get an American Family Cook Book.

How to make a toy horse on wheels.—ALICE ENGMAN, WANNASKA, MINN.

Poem: "The Old Negro Preacher on Prohibition," and any other negro recitations.—MRS. CHAS. M. ANDERSON, FORT PIERCE, P. O. BOX 605, FLA.

Poems: "Bingen on the Rhine" and "An Old Sweetheart of Mine."—MRS. CHLOE GASTON, MILBRIDGE, R. R. 2, MAINE.

Wanted: To hear from sisters who can knit the man's vest described in January issue of COMFORT.

GRACE SARTIN, WARSAW, MO.

Poem beginning: "I've got an older sister, who's got a stylish beau."—GERTRUDE MILLER, CHETEK, R. R. 5, WIS.

Poem: "Socrates Snooks."

Wanted, the following songs, with or without music. "On the Beach at Long Beach." "The Drummer Boy of Waterloo." "Banks of the Wabash." "Waxford Town."—MISS OMA NEWELL, WESTVILLE, R. R. 1, ILL.

The following wish back numbers of COMFORT. Write first as only one copy is desired.

Mrs. Albert Parten, Las Cruces, P. O. Box 1052, New Mexico, October, November and December 1922.

Mrs. Joe Helget, Williamstown, R. R. 2, N. J., September, October, November and December 1922.

Mrs. Iva M. Bland, Sedalia, 410 S. Hancock St., Mo., January and February 1923.

Mrs. Lee F. Norton, Lake Toxaway, N. C., February 1923.

Miss Alice L. Fielder, Park Falls, Box 80, Wis., May 1922.

Eleanor Heck, Barthage, R. R. Box 8, Mo. January and February 1923.

Mrs. Tara Conner, Osco, Ky., December 1922, February, March and May 1923.

Mrs. Frank Moffett, Williamsport, P. O. Box 40, Indiana, January and February 1923.

Mrs. Nettie Warren, Miles, Box 41, Texas, July and August 1922.

F. A. Thorpe, Wynot, Nebraska, November 1922.

W. W. Hopkins, Darlington, Maryland, January, February and March 1923.

Mrs. W. E. Barnes, Syracuse, 124 East Pleasant Ave., N. Y. February 1923.

Mrs. Ruby Hughes, Garland City, Box 95, Ark., December 1922 and January and February 1923.

Mrs. Victor J. Rider, Dunkirk, 210 Robin St., N. Y. January and February 1923.

Mrs. Leona Rust, DeSoto, Wisconsin, March, April May and June 1922.

Mrs. Fred Harris, Star City, Sask, Canada, Oct. 1922.

Mrs. Clara Haser, Malta, Box 551, Mont., Oct. 1922.

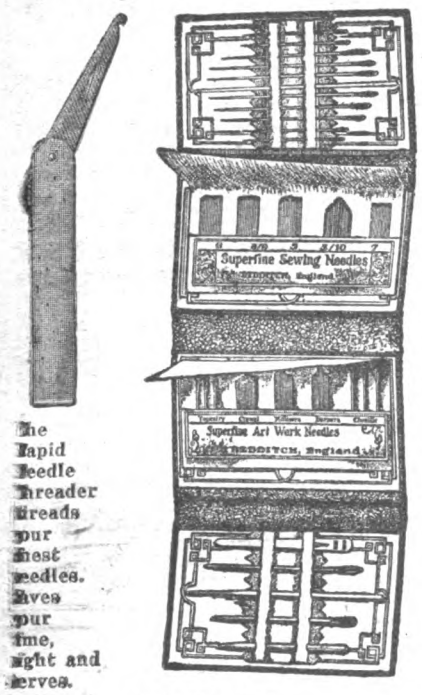
Sisters' Circle Pin

Free! EVERY COMFORT Sister should wear this beautiful Sisters' Circle Brooch Pin—the one and only official Sisters' "badge" of membership, uniting in one grand Circle of Friendship and love the thousands of COMFORT Sisters living in all parts of the world. It is the size of a 25-cent piece, gold finished, and the front is inlaid with handsome cloisonne enamel in two colors—your choice of red or blue—with the words "COMFORT Sisters" deeply embossed, as shown in the illustration.

If you are a COMFORT Sister, send us only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50c and we will send you a Sisters' Circle Pin free and prepaid. Or, if you prefer, you may send 50c to pay for a one-year renewal (not your own), and we will send you the Pin free. Be sure to mention color wanted. Reward No. 8671.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Crooked Spines Made Straight



If you are suffering from any form of spinal trouble you can be relieved—and probably wholly overcome your affliction—right in your own home without pain or discomfort. A wonderful anatomical appliance has been invented by a man who cured himself of Spinal Curvature. Its results are marvelous. It is nature's own method. Eminent physicians are endorsing it. The Philo Burt Method relieves the pressure at the affected parts of the spine, the whole spine is invigorated and strengthened, all soreness is taken out of the back, the cartilage between the vertibræ is made to expand, the contracted muscles are relaxed, and the spine is straightened. There is bright hope for you, no matter how long you have suffered. We have strong testimonials from every State in the Union. Each appliance is made to order from individual measurements and fits perfectly. There is positively no inconvenience in wearing. We guarantee satisfaction and let you use it 30 days. Write today for our new book. It gives full information and testimonials.

PHILO BURT MFG. CO., 334-5 Odd Fellows' Bldg., JAMESTOWN, N. Y.

Any Gift on This Page Is Yours for 2 Subscriptions

The Rapid Needle Threader threads your finest needles. Saves your time, sight and nerves.

Gift No. 1132.

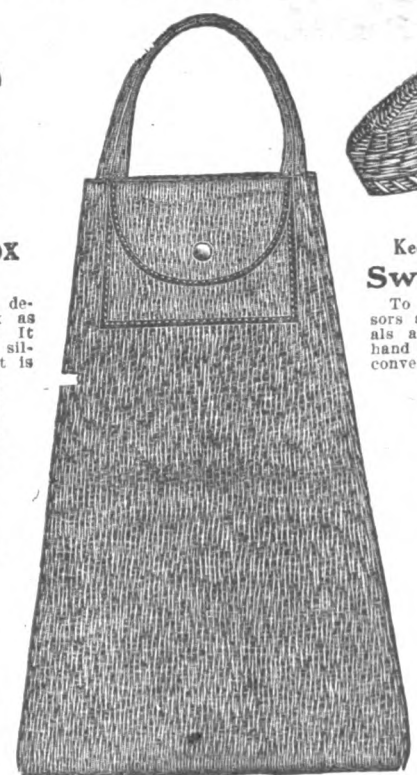
Rapid Needle Threader FREE with Every Needlecase

The addition of the new handy needle threader makes this favorite sewing set still more useful to COMFORT'S needleworkers. The complete set comes in a neatly folding leatherette case 3x14 inches and consists of 75 gold-eyed sewnig needles, 15 milliners' needles, 15 silk and cotton darners, 15 embroidery needles, ring needles, stiletto, crochet book and several other useful pieces—in all 142 useful pieces.

All the needles are made of the finest steel, with eyes perfectly beveled and gauged. This needleworker's companion is a practical necessity in every home.

Antique Jewel Box

Gift No. 9952.



It seems hardly necessary to describe this beautiful Jewel Box as our illustration speaks for itself. It is made entirely of rich oxidized silver which will never tarnish. It is heavily embossed on all sides and on the cover. It is silk lined throughout and sufficiently large for all kinds of small articles of jewelry, trinkets, etc., measuring four inches in length, two and a half inches wide and two inches high.

2-Piece Toilet Set

Reward No. 9982.

This is a good grade Toilet Set, consisting of comb and brush. The comb is seven inches long, with coarse and fine teeth, and comes in the new popular "Malachite" green finish. The brush is nine inches long, two and a half inches wide, with firm white bristles, and is finished in the same beautiful "Malachite" green, with a silverine shield on the back. We have given away thousands of these sets and they never fail to please. Each set is carefully packed in a strong carton which will bring it to your home in perfect condition. Why not order one today?

Gift No. 1752.

Yes, Two Subscriptions Get
3 IN 1 SHOPPING BAG

A handier bag than this has never been devised. It may be used as a hand bag or opened up to twice its size (as shown in the illustration) for shopping purposes. When folded it measures 9x9 inches, when unfolded, 11x16 inches. It is made of waterproof, art-grained leatherette. Closes with snap fasteners. Large and roomy when opened. Serviceable and neat when closed. Th change purse (also shown in illustration) adds the finishing touch of utility. It is rightly the "3 in 1" bag—change purse, neat hand bag and roomy shopping bag, all three in one.

Gift No. 1512.

Keep Your Sewing Work in This Sweetgrass Basket

To keep needle and thread, scissors and thimble, embroidery materials and buttons all conveniently at hand every woman needs one of these convenient work-baskets. Fragrant sweet grass and colored reeds combine to make a basket of rare beauty. It is 6 inches in diameter and about two inches deep. Every basket is fashioned by hand by American Indians.

Gift No. 1232.

Opera or Field Glasses

Although commonly known as opera glasses, these glasses can also be used out of doors for identifying people, animals and objects within a reasonable distance. Farmers, motorists, Boy Scouts, hunters, fishermen, etc., will find these glasses to be just what they need to take with them on their trips through fields and woods.

Gift No. 9992.

10-Inch
Cuddly Teddy

Every little boy and girl wants a Teddy Bear and here is an opportunity for every father or mother who reads COMFORT to get one without expense. "Teddy" is a plump, shaggy fellow, 10 inches tall, made of brown plush, carefully stitched and finished, and his head and legs are jointed in such a manner that you can place him in almost any position. He will stand up, sit down, stand on his head, walk on all fours, in fact he gets himself into all kinds of positions, so comical and lifelike that it makes the children scream with delight just to look at him.

The soft, smooth plush of which Teddy's furry hide is made is steadily growing more difficult to obtain. This year, in order to be sure that there would be enough bears to supply our club-raisers we began buying last April. To make sure of your bear better send your club at once.

Birthstone Rings

Of Sterling Silver

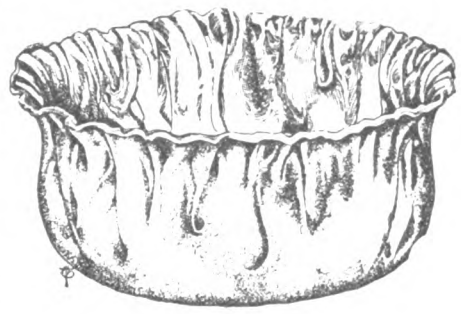
These handsome birthstone rings are the very latest. Every woman and girl who wants to be in style should wear one with the stone which corresponds to the month in which she was born.

Jan., Garnet; Feb., Amethyst; March, Bloodstone; April, Diamond; May, Emerald; June, Agate; July, Ruby; Aug., Sardonyx; Sept., Sapphire; Oct., Opal; Nov., Topaz; Dec., Turquoise.

Gate Top Mesh Purse

Reward No. 7833.

Reduced from Three to Two Subscriptions.

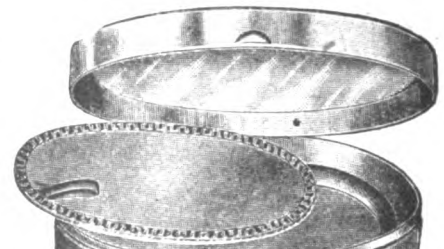


Hundreds and hundreds of our club-raisers have sent us three subscriptions for this stylish mesh purse and have felt abundantly repaid for their efforts. Now to make room for new gifts we offer the remainder of our supply for only two subscriptions. We can assure you that the value is the extreme value that can be offered for so small a club.

The new "Gate Top" mesh purse comes with a 10-inch wrist chain, is handsome, stylish and perfectly safe for the carrying of money and other valuables. A slight pull with the forefinger of each hand instantly opens the purse, a gentle pressure with thumb and finger closes it. Our illustration shows the purse closed. When open the top is as large as the bottom, or in other words, two inches in diameter. When closed it leaves an opening only three-fourths of an inch wide over which the brightly polished German silver cover snaps down tightly so that the contents of the purse cannot possibly become lost."

Classic Design
Silver Bon Bon Dish

24-K Gold Lined.



Gift No. 9942.

This beautiful dish can be used for a variety of purposes—for candy, nuts, salted peanuts, popcorn, etc. It is much larger than it appears in the above illustration, measuring over five inches in width and two inches deep. It is heavily silver plated outside and 24-K gold lining.

We have sent out many thousands of these dishes to club-raisers and have received many compliments on their beauty, utility and extreme value.

Mirror, Powder and Puff In This Handy Vanity Case

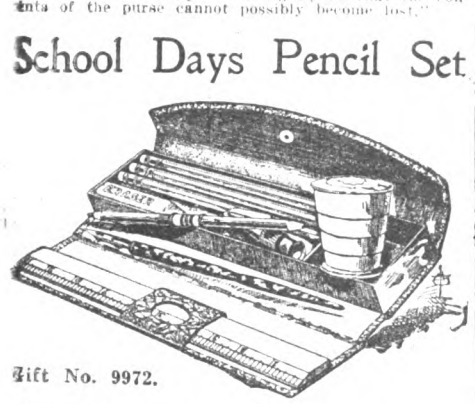
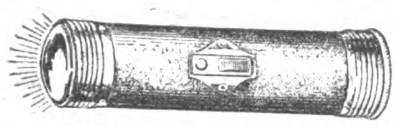
Gift No. 1772.

A high grade mirror, a generous-sized powder compact and a satin covered powder puff all neatly enclosed in a beautiful golden case with hinged cover briefly describes this new gift. The cover of the case is beautifully chased and lacquerd to prvent tarnish. Case can be refilled with new powder compacts. Powder comes in three shades—flesh, white and brunette. Which shade shall we put in your case?



Two Turkish Towels

Gift No. 9912.



After bathing there is nothing quite as fine as a good rub down with a Turkish towel, in fact it is the best towel for all purposes, whether for the bathroom guest-room or everyday family use. They absorb the water much more readily than other towels and the soft fleecelle surface imparts to the body a delightful feeling of comfort. They are also fine for baby's toilet as they will not hurt the tender skin. They are 15x32 inches, which is a good convenient size for all-around use, are of good weight, well made and finished. Remember we send a pair for two subscriptions.

School Days Pencil Set

Gift No. 9972.

Here is something that is needed in every home and by every schoolboy and schoolgirl—a big value—assortment of almost everything needed for writing and drawing. Our illustration is, of course, greatly reduced in size. The case, which is made of fine leatherette, is 10 1-2 inches long and 2 1-2 inches wide. It is of the folding style, with a snap fastener, so that it can conveniently be carried in the pocket or in the children's lunch basket. Inside the case there are three high-grade pencils with erasers, one good quality penholder with pen, one twin pencil (in reality two pencils in a combination holder), one pencil sharpener, one large rubber eraser, one 10-inch ruler and an aluminum collapsible drinking cup with cover.

Every Home needs a Handy Flashlight

Gift No. 1212

Don't stumble around the house or barn in the dark or with the uncertain aid of dangerous matches or lanterns. A flashlight will throw a penetrating beam of light far in front of you or wherever you want it. This flashlight is 6 inches long, 1¼ inches in diameter, equipped with powerful battery that will last many weeks. It is always ready for use—a simple pressure of the thumb turns the light on or off as desired. Absolutely safe. Can't blow up, blow out nor set anything afire.

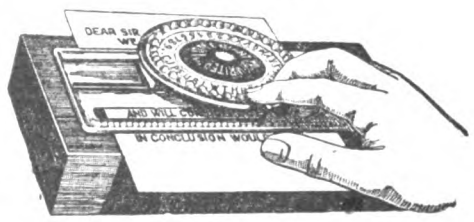
Every Scholar Needs a Serviceable Fountain Pen Like This

Gift No. 1462

Self-Filling Pen

We have examined many fountain pens, first and last, but we have never before found such a good writing pen as this self-filler.

To fill all you have to do is to raise the lever on side of barrel, dip the pen point into any good writing fluid and, after the reservoir has filled, snap the lever back into place.



Pen is 6 1-2 inches in length, made of best hard rubber, finely chased, with genuine 14-K gold nib.

The manufacturer fully guarantees this pen to give satisfaction. It combines all the qualities of pens that sell for several dollars.

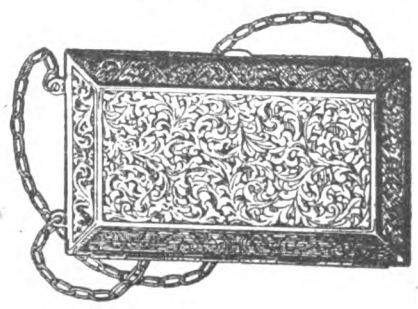
When school begins there will be a call for a serviceable pen like this. Why not send for it today?

Little Giant Typewriter

Gift No. 1202.

This is a practical, satisfactory machine that writes very distinctly. It has every letter in the alphabet, all the numerals from one to ten, and the punctuation marks. You can use any size letter paper on it up to five inches in width and any length desired. For personal or business correspondence, making out statements, bills, addressing envelopes, etc., this machine will do the work very well. It is very easy to understand and operate, in fact a child can write on it after a few hours' practice.

Crystal Necklace



Gift No. 1161.

Right from New York, the center of fashion, comes this new, stylish necklace and we were indeed fortunate in obtaining a good supply of them. We only wish we could show it in its actual colors because mere words fail to do it justice. It is thirty inches long, composed of brilliant crystal cut beads, alternating with seed beads, with transparent long oval and round bead ornamentations and tassel. It comes in four different colors—Topaz, Amethyst, Emerald and Sapphire.

This is your opportunity to secure a necklace as handsome and stylish as any that will be seen anywhere this season. And best of all, it will not cost you one cent if you will accept the following special offer.

Nifty Vanity Case

Gift No. 1152.

Every woman and girl who likes to keep up with the styles should have one of these handsome, embossed silver finish Vanity Cases. It is the very latest design, having a thin model case like that of a thin model watch, is very light, weighing a little over two ounces, and of good size—3 3-4 inches long and 2 1-2 inches wide. The chain is twelve inches long. Inside the case is a fine little mirror and two dainty powder puffs.

Any Gift On This Page for Only Two Subscriptions

You can have any gift on the page if you will send us only TWO subscriptions.

Look the gifts over, make your selection and then send us two yearly subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c a year. Each subscriber will receive COMFORT one full year and you will receive whatever gift you select. Remember that your own subscription counts one in any club of two or more.

All gifts sent free and prepaid.

Send All Orders to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine

After Five Years

By Jean O'Brien

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

He called himself a fool, a romantic fool, for going where he was going. It was always ridiculous for a man to walk back to the past this way Why had he ever urged her to meet him here? Why, having done so, was he twice a fool to go keeping his promise? Well, he told himself, "I'll never do it again. For all I know she may be a brazen creature by this time, who'll jump at the chance to fasten herself on me, maybe for life."

He recalled their last interview, and the little, but charming supper at the Casino, as he walked up the steps and seated himself on the first bench to his right, as agreed. It was the time when the wisteria bloomed, even here in the city, it had been blooming then, for they had come over here to look at the blossoms and to inhale the delightful perfume of them.

Nervously, he sat down to wait. She was not here—yet. What a relief it would be, he thought if she did not come at all. He helped himself to a cigar and smoked while he waited. Before him, on the Mall, lovers, or people who thought they were lovers, strolled northward and southward aimlessly, trying to lose themselves in the shadows of the park.

At last a voice—hers, though different from that of five years before—made him start. Turning, he looked up into her face. What he saw was not altogether pleasant.

He could see very little of her hair which he fancied must be "dragged" back into an unlovely tight knot under her shabby, formless hat. She had forgotten, apparently how to adjust a hat; she knew, once.

How poor her clothes were too. Poor black, of all hues the cheapest. As he said gently, "Oh, how are you? Won't you sit down?" he noticed that her skirt was almost touching the ground as she stood, and that her coat sagged, and her shoes—horrors—were cheap, unblacked, and so large that they actually turned up at the toes. He was glad the place was secluded; all the better for this disillusion with a vengeance.

"I thought," she began seriously, "You might not be here. But I came anyway. Even when I saw you I almost planned to walk on without speaking."

He wished she had. Yet he said, "I'm glad you didn t do that. Well, how have you been all these years?" and he laughed a little as he motioned her to the seat beside him.

She sat down, twisting her hands nervously. Ungloved the hands were and less beautiful than they had been five years ago. She too, laughed as she replied to his question. "I've been up and down," she admitted." Mostly down. It doesn't matter though."

"That's too bad. You should have succeeded if you've kept the character and the mind you had—five years ago."

"Ah—but I haven't. When I met you I believed in people, and in myself. After—I doubted everyone, including myself. It's easy to fail when you feel so."

"You mean—I was perhaps responsible for your lost faith—even your lost fortune?"

"Oh, no." She turned frank, shining hazel eyes upon him for an instant, "No one is to blame in my life, but myself. Nor in anyone's I suppose. But if you please, I'd rather not be too serious—just now."

"Very well; after another minute I'll excuse you from explaining. But first, let me say I was at least honest, wasn't I, when I said I couldn't—marry you—because of your family?"

"Yes," she agreed calmly, "You were honest—then. But were you honest when you married—"

He made a gesture of impatience, almost of anger. "No, I wasn't. I deserve the rebuke. She had no family, nor character either. I married her for money. With the money I've won a career. She is—dead. You knew?"

"Yes, so I read. So—you've succeeded?" She eyed him appraisingly.

"I see," he said, "That's a question, not a statement. Well, I an a failure, in some ways."

"Oh, so am I. But I might have been worse. Might have done worse."

"Yes. You too, might have married for money; or—sold yourself without marrying. I ought to congratulate you. Somehow, I thought you would go under. You loved company, you were temperamental, warm-hearted, gifted, poor. The proud kind that no one—" he sneered, "helps! Yet—you've been strong enough to keep your freedom."

"If," she interrupted bitterly, "I ever had it."

"Well, there, let's not make this a wake. I proposed this meeting and so it's up to me to make it as pleasant as I can. After we'd had our 'understanding' that night, about my being unable to marry you, I thought you'd never keep the promise I'd exacted earlier in the evening. Somehow, I got you to promise because, honestly, I was more interested in you than in any woman I'd ever met; I wanted to know what five years would do to you—and to me, psychically, financially, every way. Well, there—enough of the past. Suppose we go to some place and have a little supper as we did five years ago?"

He really trembled for having said this, fearful lest she use a woman's privilege and say she would like to sup at the Casino. How embarrassed he would be, under the circumstances.

But her answer relieved him greatly. "I'm hardly dressed," she said smiling, "for any nice place; my level would be the 'Busy Bee' or some such joint."

He laughed. "Well, choose the place. I'm game."

"Very well," she said rising, "Let's walk east; that will be toward my home anyway, and we can choose some place we pass."

They had walked several blocks in silence, and had come to a dingy restaurant, where she stopped and said, "would you care to try this?"

He entered readily, though frankly he was averse to trying it. She ate heartily, explaining truthfully that she had come out without any supper. She seemed quite at home in the dinginess. He noticed with pleasure that her table manners were above reproach and her conversation as good as ever before.

The voice which seemed a little harder, and the enunciation, which seemed more careless, changed at times. As if, in his presence, so he felt, she regained her old possibilities. He remembered how well she used to read, and her clever imitations of various players. How interesting it would be to resurrect that old self, which lived once, mostly for him; how charming to make it greater than ever.

When the meal was finished and paid for, he walked out with her again. At the door she said casually, "It'll be all right not to come beyond the corner."

"But why not—go to your door?" he asked.

She hesitated.

"Any good reason?" he smiled down at her.

"Yes," she said seriously, "there's a good reason." And suddenly, she smiled too but only for an instant.

"Oh!" He thought possibly her house was so poor she did not want him to see it. He felt very sorry. Standing irresolutely under the corner electric lamp, he looked down at her and said, "When can I see you again?"

"I hardly expected that," she confessed. "Well, let me see. In two weeks about—if you'll give me an address, I'll write and let you know."

He gave her a leaf torn from a pocket note-book with his address written on it. "I'll be glad to call on you—at your home—if you'll let me," he said. He was much surprised to learn he really meant this.

"Thank you—I'll write in about two weeks. Good-by."

He put out his hand, and only then did she extend her own. "Good night," he said, "and good luck. I'm glad to have met you again."

* * * * * *

Two weeks and a few days passed, when he saw a plain, shabby little envelope on his table with the rest of the morning mail. Just as he thought, the note inside was signed with her name; Julia Fair.

He read it curiously. "Dear Mr. Landon. If you care to call next Friday I'll be glad to see you here. About four o'clock if that suits you." She gave an address on Avenue A. which sounded hideous, he thought. He answered at once, reflecting that a poor woman deserves the highest courtesy.

On Friday afternoon, when he walked far eastward, he anticipated real pleasure, and he smiled to himself at his first idea that he could "do something" for her. It began to look as if she would do things for him. Wake up his soul, his ambitions, his old ideals.

The reveille of all these finer things, he reflected, curiously, would be all the easier because she used no personal charms such as once fascinated him so greatly. Charms which had kept him contemplating her changing face, graceful hands, light figure, instead of that character which had stood so nobly the test of years, defeats, and want.

At last he reached the number he sought. A poor shabby house almost tumbled-down. It looked almost as if she had tried to find a bad one. The iron rail was broken away from its moorings on the stoop; the stone steps were broken and empty sockets gaped where once were old bells to be pulled.

In the halls, as he ascended, for she lived up four flights, smells of cooking, soap-suds, disinfectant, assailed his nostrils. The cries of children vied with the shrill voices of women scolding, and of a girl singing, who shouldn't.

Julia Fair had her name written on a slip of paper and nailed to the door. He knocked, and she let him in, at once.

As he murmured a greeting, he took in swiftly the place where she made her home. A poor, bare place, not a thing in it to stir one's soul, unless it was the realization of the fortitude necessary to live and grow there.

The wash-tubs were covered with clean oil-cloth, and a small table too. A cat and a plant fought for the sunniest spot in the window. Two chairs, a few dishes and utensils, completed the furniture of this "living-room."

He caught a glimpse of a poor bed, in a narrow adjoining room which reminded him of a cell. A little trunk stood by the bed, evidently serving as both seat and dressing-case at times.

Julia wore a calico house dress and gingham apron, both ironed badly evidently by herself. On her feet were old felt slippers. But she looked much better even so, than in the seedy black of their last meeting.

He was very glad she did not allude in any way to her surroundings, nor to her poverty. How well-bred she was in this, he thought. He talked to her of such things as they used to speak of five years ago; ambitions, art and artists, Greek plays, nature—his own work and travels.

It pleased him to imagine he was carrying her once more to her Holy Land; to the sort of Arcadia where she really belonged. It pleased him still more to hope he might, delicately, somehow, offer her means to reach something like that Arcadia and stay there forever after.

Every hour she spent in this place would hurt him now; he knew that it must be the wrong place for her. Finally, deciding he must offer something he said, "you should have a better at least a different—chance. Tell me what you would like to do and I'll find means for you to get it."

She smiled, and considered for a full moment. Then she said seriously deliberately., "the thing I'd like to do—is what I'm doing. Please don't ask questions; and above all, don't worry. The thing I like to do is to develop my own soul in my own way; without help—without—excuse the harsh word—without interference—from others. Poor people—" she seemed instantly to regret having used the word 'poor'—"we love our liberty of choice—of renunciation—as much as—other people. I'm glad though—always shall be glad—to see you—if you care to continue coming here."

"I didn't mean to offend you," he said gently, "surely you must know that. Then I'll ask no questions. Indeed, I'm very willing to accept you as you are. Surroundings of course, matter much less than character."

She appeared to dismiss the whole subject of herself and her affairs and began talking of trivial things. And after about an hour she announced "we must have some tea now."

He protested against it, fearing it might cost her more than she could afford; but she insisted. "The cake is baked already," she said, "and I've put the water on to boil."

Presently they sat down to the tea; the oil-cloth was left on, and she did not furnish either him, or herself, with a napkin. The dishes were common and heavy, but by way of pleasant balance, the cake was uncommonly light and good.

As he sat opposite her he found himself trying to calculate how much a yard her dress might have cost: it was so very like what one sees in prisons; this, and the common spoons, and dishes, almost made him feel she must be trying to destroy his illusions about her. He wondered how she could be so brutal to herself; surely, in these circumstances, nine women out of ten, would have either kept him away from her house, or else, bought just a few decent things.

He fancied that the sting of his parting words to her, five years before, his light rejection of the love he knew now she must have given him, had awakened a resentment in her which lived and flourished all this time, and his presence made it burst forth upon him, to hurt him in these little ways by showing him what she lived with, and rose above; to show him that she was above acting for such as he; that she would not spare him but let him see the naked truth everywhere.

When he left her, he asked if he might come "next Friday; every next Friday." She considered and then said, "well, yes, but in the evening; about eight. At four, I'm usually busy."

For seven weeks he called. Each time he offered her something. Even though she refused "help" he thought she might change her mind. He was really sorry to see her buried, psychically, by poverty which he could relieve. He offered her a chance, on the stage, and the wardrobe which would be necessary there. He offered to pay the rental, to buy furnitire for a nice apartment. Then he offered money—to be used in any way she thought best. But she refused everything. Then, just before his seventh visit, he sent her a basket of fruit and some violets.

Even this she seemed to resent. From him. "I'd rather you didn't send me things," she said. He felt confused, cheap.

"I'll be giving up this place, in a few days, "she said, "and I've been thinking perhaps it might be better if you didn't come to see me."

His own shock at this news, announced so quietly, astounded him. He wondered why he felt so hurt. "Why"—he stammered, "what have I done?"

She only smiled. "Oh—please don't feel hurt. You've been kind as you could be. Only—I don't think it's well to go on; these weekly visits, they can't be spontaneous; you've just made coming here a habit; maybe a bad habit. I think probably you've drifted into a situation you'd like to extricate yourself from. But you can't—gracefully. I don't mind being *dis*graceful; so there you are. I just want to give you back your liberty; and to thank you once and forever for having left me mine."

"You think," he stammered, his face reddening. "I've come here because I pity you? Nothing more?"

"Well—yes. That's a natural impression, isn't it? Why else?"

"It's not true," he said. "Not true. At first I did pity you. But now—I think I'm beginning to pity myself. Of course, I recognize your right to dismiss me from your house; from your life. I dismissed you, far more coolly, far more cruelly. "A thought flashed upon him, and his color mounted still more. "Is it possible you are trying to 'pay me back'?"

"Oh—please," she protested, "don't think me so mean. I admit you did hurt me five years ago. Perhaps ever since I've been a little too much on my guard to prevent anyone, especially any man, from hurting me again. If I thought that—I'd be sorry. For no one has the right to be always saving her own soul regardless of the reast of the world."

"You have the right to dismiss me," he repeated mournfully, "but before I go I'd like to say something. When a man has something to give, the best thing he has, he should offer it; whether it's to be taken, or left. I love you. I've divined it for some time; at first I admit I fought against loving you; but now my whole will is my ally. I love you more than I've ever loved any other, more than I can ever love any other. I want to marry you. I'll be glad to give you as much time as you want, to know me better; to know your own feelings better."

He thought her smile was very beautiful as she began to speak. "You—are so much better than I imagined," she said. "I really don't know what to say. Maybe I'd better not try to answer you just now. Only of course I must thank you. I realize you've offered me—more than any other man has offered. More, doubtless, than any other ever will offer me. But I hate to be mercenary. A generous man deserves better than such a woman. I would like to be sure I did not accept a generous man as a last resort—from the poorhouse; I'd like him to be sure, too. So—I'll wait; and only say thank you, now." She put out her hand.

He clasped it in his own and asked, "When can I see you again?"

"Next—Saturday," she said, pondering, "about eight." Then she wrote an address on a slip of paper and gave it to him.

He put it in his pocket. "Perhaps I'd better go at once and leave you to think, he said, smiling, "the more time I give you, the sooner I may hope for a decision."

"Yes," she agreed, "good-by."

"You will see me though," he asked anxiously, "you're not thinking of going away where I can't find you?"

"Oh, no. I'll see you. And—if you change your mind—just write. I think you're acting on impulse; generous impulse. A week isn't much time but it may be enough to warn you that you've done a foolish thing today. If such a warning comes, please—for my sake and your own—write and tell me. It will be better than to go on misunderstanding."

"I see you can't believe I've changed in five years," he said. "I deserve the very worst you can think of me; I admit that."

"Indeed, I think you deserve the very best. But we can't help our impulses; they will lead us astray. I was only trying to protect you from your better self."

"That s hardly moral is it?" he asked with a smile.

"Well, maybe not. I'm not always moral. Good-by."

So he left her. More charmed than ever by her personality. All the way home he asked himself, "how could I have known her so well and yet so ill, five years ago? What a young fool I must have been."

* * * * * *

The following Saturday, just just before eight, Roger Landon walked along Eighth Street, till he reached the address she had given. He liked the aspect of her new home. It was a broad house, old for New York and its hall was suggestive of class, atmosphere.

He wondered could Julia be a servant for someone here? But no, she would have told him the name of the family. Perhaps she had a tiny, dark room up at the top of the house.

He examined the bells and saw her name beneath one. He touched the button and a second later the hall-door was opened.

Opened by—was it Julia? Yes, and this was the face, the figure, the taste, the air, of five years before. But with an added charm of fuller womanhood. His charmed glance took in gratefully her her soft satin dress of a beautiful blue with a billow-lace blouse beneath a nice little satin jacket. Her bronze hair was swirled about in a sculpturesque fashion he loved and remembered. An artful artlessness, just right—for her. As he followed her in, he noticed the snugly fitting black pumps on her pretty feet.

She led him into a large and lovely room on the lower floor. The walls were lined half way up, with books; above these, good sketches hung. Casts, bowls filled with brushes, an easel, portfolios, betrayed the home of an artist.

The old tapestry furniture showed the taste of its owner. Two candles in old brass candlesticks, and shaded by rose colored shades, cast a soft light upon a table, where a Cupid and a Psyche upheld a row of little books.

Julia, indicating the easiest chair, near the little circle of light said, "won't you sit down, please?"

As Landon sank gratefully into the chair, he said, "well, this is the sort of place you ought to be in."

Julia smiled. "I'm so glad you like it. Here I have lived—for nearly three years."

He started. "What?"

She colored a little. "Yes, I've deceived you," she confessed. "I wanted to see, that night, if you'd care even if, as you thought, I'd gone down. I wanted to see if you'd pretend you didn't know me, or, if you'd agree, hypocritically, to help me, and then disappear. So I made a plan. When I found you really wanted to do something kind, if you could I took those two rooms in that tenement to see how you'd wear. I wore the old clothes so you wouldn't be—you know—sex-attracted and I succeded better than I deserved. You were serious, and you really tried to learn what my soul was like; that's what I've always longed to have a man do. Most of them never get beyond a woman's white skin." She was white and scornful.

"I'm so glad," he blurted out, "so glad you—lied. I might have acted worse if you had looked that first night as you look now."

She smiled. "When you asked me—that last time—to marry you, and told me you loved me, I could not believe it; it seemed too good to be true."

He got up quickly and took a step toward her but she rose too, and said, "don't. You must let ne finish all I have to say. I was so happy. But I was a little bit afraid you might be saying it all from pity; so I couldn't take a mean advantage; I had to let you see this place; I'm not so poor; I teach the rich debutantes, and gilded youths to draw a little and paint, and to chatter knowingly about art. You see, I have made some compromises to 'get on.' I want you to know—you don't have to marry me to save me from starvation, or the streets." He took another step toward her, but again she said,"no. Wait. I have more to say; I've always loved you; even when you didn't deserve it. I'm not skillful at showing how much I care. It would take me a lifetime. I—I'd been keeping you in a shrine, and I wanted to see whether you deserved it. I'm so glad you've been what I hoped, for there could never be any other for me; there never has been; I'm like that."

"I'm so glad you are," he said. "Though it's more than I deserve." Then he went swiftly to her and took her in his arms. "I've been punished," he said, "whether you realize it or not. I've lost five years of you. Nothing worse could have happened, unless I lost you forever. But maybe I can make up for the lost time."

"I hope you can," she said mischievously, "because you haven't only cheated yourself; you've cheated me."

Dr. Hahnemann's Heritage

Homeopathic physicians may owe their knowledge to a German but they are fully aware of the fact that if any nation put obstacles in the path of the advance of their science, it was the one that gave birth to its originator.

This man was Dr. Samuel Hahnemann, a well-known physician of the old school before he evolved the method that made him famous.

It is claimed that Dr. Hahemann's final removal to Paris, in 1835, was mainly due to the fact that his wife was a Frenchwoman.

There are records to show, however, that the older medical school of Germany so violently opposed him and lost so few opportunities to pronounce him a quack, that he realized he could never hope to be fully honored in his own country.

In Paris he gathered about him a circle of eminent medical men who later carried his message throughout the world.

Cubby Bear's Book Is Now Ready

Illustrated in Color!

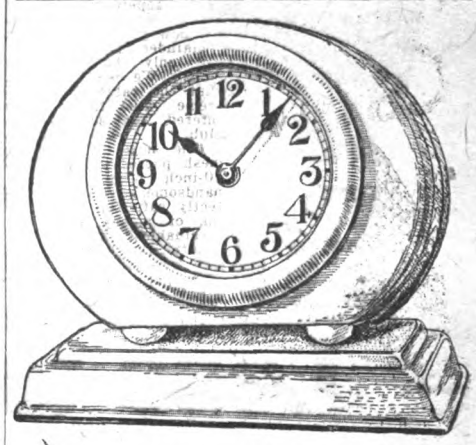
Gift, No. 8871. For One Subscription.

Cubby Bear's own stories in book form!

How this news will please COMFORT'S host of readers who have eagerly read month by month each new story in that series of bright, happy adventures in which Cubby Bear and his forest friends are always interestingly entangled.

Hundreds of Cubby's friends have written him asking him to save a copy of his book. Thousands, yes perhaps half a million, other friends are waiting this good news of the completion of the book.

And Such a Splendid Book!



First in mind has been the selection of the most interesting and entertaining of the Cubby Bear Stories. There's surely as fine a collection of stories as can be assembled between two covers. And to put her own seal of approval on the work, Lena B. Ellingwood, the author and creator of the lovable little characters of the forest world, has written the introduction. This introduction is accompanied by Mrs. Ellingwood's picture.

Every story is illustrated in bright, sparkling colors with one of Harrison Cady's famous animal pictures and every story is printed in type large and clear so that even the youngest reader can pick out every word. The book is printed on fine grade paper and attractively bound in covers that will not easily tear or soil. The cover illustration is also done in colors.

Your copy of this delightful book is ready. Send for it today and perpetuate in the minds of everyone in your home the sterling characteristics that have made Cubby the favorite among millions of readers.

Given To You! If you will send us one one-year subscription (not your own) at 50c we will send you a copy of the Cubby Bear Book free and postpaid. Mention Reward No. 8871.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Ivory Boudoir Clock

FOR sleeping-room, living-room or desk this white ivory clock is not only a beautiful ornament but a reliable timekeeper. It is 3½ inches high, with a 3¾-inch base and pure white dial with large, easily-read figures. It is fitted with an American movement, fully guaranteed. The design is one of the latest styles that are now being shown in all the leading jewelry stores of the big cities.

We guarantee you will be pleased with this clock as well as surprised to learn that we can give such a splendid value in return for so few subscriptions. Buying in large quantities direct from the factory enables us to do it. We will give you this clock, exactly as described, free upon the terms of the following special offer.

Given To You! For five one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50c each, we will send you this beautiful, white ivory clock free by parcel post, prepaid. Reward No. 7638.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Stamped Pillow Top, Back And Fringe

A Handsome Design

THIS beautiful Pillow comes stamped on natural linen. It is 18x20 inches in size, exclusive of the fringe, which is four inches wide. The design should be worked in colors—rose, pink, blue, green and brown are perhaps the most effective shades. The basket is embroidered in satin and outline stitches, the flowers in French knots, the leaves either in satin or lazy daisy stitch. We will make any woman a present of this handsome pillow upon the terms of the following

Special Offer. For two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each we will send you this Pillow complete—top, back and fringe—free by parcel post prepaid. Reward No. 9382.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

$1.00

Brings All Four Rugs on a Month's FREE TRIAL!

Ours is the only house in America that can make you such an offer. No one else can bring you a genuine guaranteed Gold Seal Congoleum Rug, in the full 9 foot by 12 foot size, with three small rugs extra, and all for less than the regular price of the big rug alone. And on a year credit.

Year to Pay

Clip the coupon below. Write your name and address plainly. Say which pattern you want. Pin a dollar to it—mail at once. We will ship immediately — on approval — all four Congoleum Rugs — in one complete neat package. No muss, no bother, no trouble to lay. If satisfactory, take a year to pay.

The Greatest of Bargains Pay Almost As You Please

Almost everybody knows the price of the famous Congoleum Gold Seal Art Rugs. They are advertised and sold at the same standard price everywhere. Look everywhere else first if you wish—stores, catalogs, magazines and newspapers. You'll find no offer like ours—lower price, 3 rugs free, 30 days trial, year to pay.

If you return the rugs, your dollar will be refunded and also all freight costs.

Three Rugs FREE For heavy wear spots in front of range, sink, kitchen. At thresholds, in hall, in front of dresser or bed. While this offer lasts, we give three of these small rugs free with each large rug; all four for less than the price of one.

The Rug of Guaranteed Wear Ideal for the Farm

Congoleum Gold Seal Art Rugs are the most popular floor coverings known. They are rapidly becoming the national floor covering—highly prized in good homes for any and all rooms.

Waterproof. No burlap for water to rot. Surface is hard, smooth, and wear-resisting. Does not stain. Not marred or hurt by spilling of hot liquids.

They Lie Flat from the first moment without fastening. They never curl up or kick up at edges or corners. No need to tack or fasten them down. Dirt cannot accumulate underneath.

Less Work. Rid yourself of back-breaking drudgery. Dirt, ashes, grit, dust or mud cannot "grind into" Congoleum Gold Seal Art Rugs. A damp rag or mop keeps it clean and colorings bright.

No laborious cleaning, no sending to cleaners, absolutely sanitary. All this guaranteed by the famous Gold Seal that means complete satisfaction or your money back.

On the Farm saves endless toil; the trail of muddy boots or "tracked in" dirt disappears under a damp mop.

Four CONGOLEUM GOLD SEAL Rugs Less than Price of One

Beyond doubt, this is one of the greatest values that has ever been offered in any kind of merchandise by anyone. Not only do you get four genuine Gold Seal Congoleum Rugs for less than the regular price of just the one big rug alone, but with each of the four rugs comes a guarantee so strong that it can scarcely be matched when buying any other kind of merchandise or any other class of goods.

The Gold Seal that comes pasted on each and every rug is the guarantee of the Congoleum Company of complete satifaction or money back.

This Gold Seal Guarantee is unconditional and positive assurance of absolute satisfaction in the use and service of these congoleum rugs. That's what the Gold Seal on a Congoleum Rug stands for. Behind the Gold Seal Guarantee of the manufacturer is our own Double Guarantee Bond.

Choice of Two Famous Patterns

3 Rugs FREE—Special Bargain Price—Year to Pay

We show two of the most popular Congoleum patterns that have ever been produced. The big rug measures 9 x 12 ft. The three small rugs are each 18 x 36 in. One dollar is all you need send to get your choice of either patterns sent on 30 days' trial. If you wish both patterns —send two dollars—AND GET ALL 8 RUGS.

Oriental Pattern No. 534

This is the beautiful Gold Seal Congoleum Art Rug as shown at the top of this page. On the floor, it looks unbelievably like an expensive woven rug. The richest blue color dominates the ground work. Mellow ecru, old ivories, and light tans, set off the blue field. Mingled with these lovely tints are peacock blue, robin's egg blue and darker tones. Old rose, tiny specks of lighter pink and dark mulberry are artistically placed. Darker browns and blacks lend dignity and richness.

The border background contrasts with the blue all over center by reversing the color scheme. Ecru and tan shades form the border background. In this rug you have all the advantages of design and coloring of cheerful warmth and lovely color effects so much sought after in high grade woven rugs.

An ideal all purpose rug, beautiful in any room. Perfect for living room, or parlor. Lovely in bedroom or dining room. Charming in the kitchen. A real boon to the women folks on the farms. Saves endless drudgery.

Only $1.00 with Coupon—$1.50 Monthly

No. E4C534 9x12 ft. Congoleum Gold Seal Rug with three small rugs to match, each 18x36 in.—all four only $17.95

Tile Pattern No. 408

Probably no floor covering of any quality or kind, ever piled up the popularity of this wonderful design. It is a superb tile pattern that looks like mosaic. Lovely robin's egg blue, with shadings of Dutch blue, and a background of soft stone gray, give a matchless effect. Particularly suited for kitchen or dining room. Don't fear muddy boots and shoes. A damp mop whisks it clean in a jiffy.

Only $1.00 with Coupon—$1.50 Monthly

No. E4C408 9x12 ft. Congoleum Gold Seal Rug with three small rugs to match, each 18x36 in.—all four only $17.95

Very Important—No Large Cities

Our easy credit terms, our wonderful free trial offer, are designed and arranged to serve home lovers in the smaller towns and on the farms. If you live in a city of 100,000 population or over, we cannot fill your order for this Congoleum Rug Offer or send our Free Catalog.

To everyone else we bring all the advantages of our house, freely. We open your charge account without asking. It makes no difference who you are, how modest your home may be or how little you earn. This Special Bargain in intended for you. Our big beautiful Home Lovers Bargain book is ready the minute you ask for it. A postal card will bring it.

Ask for FREE Catalog!

It Shows 10,000 other bargains. It brings credit without asking—everything from cellar to garret.

Beds, Bedding, Carpets, Rugs, Dishes, Cooking Utensils, Curtains, Furniture, Silverware, Lamps, all sorts of odds and ends for the home. Diamonds, Watches, Jewelry.

Your request on a postal card is enough.

Pin a Dollar to Coupon Below

Spiegel, May, Stern Co., 1733 W. 35th St., Chicago

I enclose $1 for the 4 Gold Seal Congoleum Art Rugs—exactly as described—in the pattern selected below, on 30 days free trial. If I return them, you are to refund my $1, also all transportation costs. Otherwise I will pay $1.50 monthly until special price of $17.95 is paid.

I Select Pattern No. .....

If you wish both patterns write down both numbers, send $2.00—pay $3.00 monthly and get all 8 rugs.

Name .....

Street, R.F.D. or Box No. .....

Shipping Point .....

City ..... State .....

Also send me your latest FREE Furniture Book.

10,000 Other Furniture Bargains

Spiegel, May, Stern Co.

1733 W. 35th St., Chicago, Ill.

Ask for FREE Catalog!

COMFORT'S Emporium of Bargains and Opportunities

AGENTS WANTED

Agents—Quick sales, big profits, outfit free. ...sh or credit. Sales in every home for our ...gh class line of Pure Food Products, Soaps, ...rfumes, Toilet Articles, etc. Write today ...r money-making plans. American Products ..., 9641 Americus Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Agents: My prices lowest ever. Good suits ...up. Make $5 to $25 daily. Start in spare ...me. My free suit offer is a wonder. Send ...tal to E. A. Allen, 202 S. Green, Dept. 1826, ...icago, for special offer to agents.

Big Money and Fast Sales. Every Owner ...s Gold Initials for his auto. You charge ...50; make $1.35. Ten orders daily easy. Write ...r particulars and free samples. American ...nogram Co., Dept. 64, East Orange, N. J.

Portraits, photo pillow tops, frames, sheet ...tures, medallions, merchants' signs, water- ...of and tea aprons, silk and wool hose ...talog 50 specialties free. 30 days credit. ..., C. Bailey Co., Desk K9, Chicago.

300% Profit: — Easy seller. Klean-Rite. ...shes clothes without rubbing. Samples free. ...stever Prod. Co., 1947-A Irving Park, Chicago.

Agents: C. T. A. prices lower than ever. ...ts $18.00 made to order, any size or style. ...ers easy to get. Big profits. Agents outfit ...c. Sample suit at cost. Write Chicago ...ilors Ass'n, Dept. 405, Sta. C, Chicago.

We Start You without a Dollar. Soaps, Ex- ...cts, Perfumes—Toilet Goods. Experience un- ...cessary. Carnation Co., Dept. 131, St. Louis.

Agents—Make a Dollar an Hour. Sell ...ndets, a patent patch for instantly mending ...ks in all utensils. Sample package free. ...ilette Mfg. Co., Dept. 462-B, Amsterdam, N.Y.

Everybody uses Extracts. Sell Duo Double ...ength Extracts. Complete line necessities. ...rite today. Duo Co., Dept. E 41, Attica, N.Y.

Agents—the best seller in years is our ...per Fyr-Fyter. Not a cheap tin can at "a ...dollar a throw" but a real high grade arti- ...e, approved by the Underwriters. School ...ards, factories, garages, buy in quantities. ...lso fast seller to farmers, auto owners, homes, ...c. Hustlers make $100 a week and more. ...xclusive territory to the right men. Write ...uick for our plan. Fyr-Fyter Company, ...ept. 2217, Dayton, Ohio.

Greatest Sensation! Eleven Piece Toilet ...rticle Set selling like blazes at $1.75 with ...60 dressmakers shears free to each cus- ...mer. Spring rush on. Foster Reid Co., ...Winslow Bldg., Station C, Chicago.

Make $75.00 a week and up, selling our ...ne made-to-measure, all-wool suits, direct ...wearer. Biggest value—positively sell on ...ght. Biggest commissions, paid in advance. ...e attend to delivery and collections. 6x9 ...watch samples—all one price—furnished Free. ...art or full time men write. W. Z. Gibson, ...c., 161 W Harrison St., Dept. 50, Chicago.

Agents—$1.25 an hour spare time near ...me. Light, pleasant work, showing samples ...d distributing tea, coffee, extracts, spices, ...od products, things people eat, 19 full sized ...ackages and complete outfit to first person ...your locality answering. Write quick. Dept. ... Harley Company, Dayton, Ohio.

Agents—Our soap and toilet article plan is ...wonder; get our free sample case offer. ...o-Ro-Co., 117 Locust, St. Louis.

Agents: $100.00 weekly selling established ...ality raincoats at $3.95. Season now on. Pay ...vanced. We deliver. Free coats. Hydro ...incoat Co., 3610 Polk, Dept. 101, Chicago.

Agents. Men or women. $240 month. Steady ...ployment. Take orders for Jennings New ...aranteed Hosiery for men, women, chil- ...en. Written guarantee with each pair. All ...zes. Finest silk hose. Low priced. Write ...r samples. Big money for spare time. Jen- ...gs Mfg. Co., Dept. 322, Dayton, Ohio.

Tailoring Salesmen. Make more profit— ...your own retail selling prices. You get big ...ofit instead of the manufacturer. We are ...e of the oldest houses in the business. Es- ...ablished 1886. Make fine suits and overcoats ...measure. Low wholesale prices $18.00 up. ...omplete sample outfit. Large swatches in ...arrying case. Write for full particulars and ...r new and better selling plan. Fred Kauff- ...ann, The American Tailor, 1300 W. Harrison ... Chicago, Dept. 32.

No Dull Times Selling Food—people ...st Eat. Federal Distributors make $3,000 ...arly and up. Over 100 high grade Toilet ...reparations also will increase your profits. ...free Course in Salesmanship and ample ...apital furnished. Guaranteed sales. Unsold ...ods may be returned. Free samples and Ad- ...rtising matter to customers. Repeat orders ...re. Exclusive territory contract. Ask now. ...ederal Pure Food Co., Dept. H., Chicago.

General Agents. Something new. Whirl- ...nd seller. "Repeat" washing powder. Washes ...thes without rubbing. Women throw away ...shboards. Big Profits. Exclusive territory. ...rite today free package. Kittredge Co., 2 ...tnam St., Tunkhannock, Pa.

Agents—Make $10 a day representing line ...household, toilet, foods and extracts. ...dern Laboratories, St. Louis, Mo.

AGENTS WANTED

Men's Shirts. Easy to sell. Big demand everywhere. Make $15.00 daily. Undersell stores. Complete line. Exclusive patterns. Free Samples. Chicago Shirt Manufacturers, 241 W. Van Buren, Factory 122, Chicago.

Agents. Tailoring, Raincoat and Side-Line Men—with or without experience get our tailoring proposition. Positively biggest money-maker in America. We supply elegant swatch line outfit. Big assortment of samples and handsome carrying case. Territory going fast. Write at once. Dept. 234, Knickerbocker Tailoring Co., 131 South Peoria Street, Chicago.

You can make big money selling Ladies Silk underwear and silk hosiery. Samples free. Liberal commission. Write for terms to Linke Bros. Dept. F. 119 West 23rd St., N. Y.

Agents: Make 100%, Toilet Articles, Perfumes, Extracts, Home Necessities. Sample Case Free. LaDerma Co., Dept. H, St. Louis.

Start in a permanent business of your own selling guaranteed Hosiery and Underwear direct from mills. No capital or experience is needed; many representatives make $3,000 to $5,000 per year. Become our district manager—get others working for you. Write for details to Malloch Knitting Mills, 239 Hastings St., Grand Rapids, Mich.

Agents—Something new. $8 to $16 Daily easy. New patented Cutlery set. You take orders, we deliver and collect. Your pay daily. No experience necessary. Men or women. Full or spare time. M. H. Mathews, 1129 Kennedy Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

Agents Wanted. Our line of very high-grade perfumes, extracts and cosmetics is a well-known and exceptionally profitable one. Exclusive agency contracts. Manford Pharmacal Company, St. Louis, Mo.

Agents: Big profits, no competition. Make $5.00 to $15 daily selling our beautiful Scripture Text Calendars. Agents now selling from 10,000 to 50,00 yearly. Write now. Messenger Pub. Co., Dept. 102, 314 W. Superior St., Chicago, Ill.

Sell Madison "Better-Made" Shirts direct from our factory to wearer. No capital or experience required. Easily sold. Big profits. Write for free samples. Madison Mills, 503 Broadway, New York City.

$5 to $15 Daily Easy—Introducing New Style Guaranteed Hosiery. Must wear or replaced free. No capital or experience required. Just show samples, write orders, we deliver and collect. Your pay in advance. Outfit furnished. All colors—grades including silks. Mac-O-Chee Mills Co., Desk 2069, Cincinnati, O.

Agents—$15 a day—Easy, quick Sales—Free Auto—Big weekly Bonus—$1.50 premium Free to every customer. Simply show our Beautiful, 7 piece, Solid Aluminum Handle Cutlery Set. Appeals instantly. We deliver and collect. Pay daily. New Era Mfg. Co., 803 Madison St., Dept. 32-R, Chicago.

Earn $10 to $25 a Day. Sell beautiful, durable, "Novo," Hosiery, Knitted Neckwear and Full-cut Shirts. Direct Mill to Wearer. Complete family line, silks, sport wools. Customer satisfaction defies competition. All or spare time. Investigate. Novo Mills. Dept. R, 3rd & Sedgley, Phila., Pa.

Free Offer captivates customers. 20 first day—$20.00 profit. 100 celebrated necessities. National Products Co., 846 Grand St., St. Joseph, Mo.

Agents! A sale in every home for our beautiful Dress Goods, Silks and General Yard Goods. Quick sales! Big profits! Large book of nearly 1000 handsome fabric samples furnished to agents. National Importing & Mfg. Co., Dept. 24X, 573 Broadway, New York.

Agents—New style guaranteed hosiery for men, women, children. All colors. Must give satisfaction or new hose free. Full line of silk hose. Write for particulars. Parker Mfg. Co., Sample 117, Dayton, Ohio.

Agents Make $10 Daily—Big line guaranteed Extracts, Food Products, Perfumes, Toilet Goods, Household Necessities. No capital or experience needed. Free Sample Case and instructions. Write for amazing offer. Perkins Products Co., Desk 10, Hastings, Nebr.

Agents—Earn $60 cash every week and get your own clothes Free besides, taking tailoring orders. We are the only house that pays double. No experience necessary. Real cloth samples sent Free. Full or part time men write at once to this big reliable house. Established 1896. A. E. Stern, Sales Manager, 161 W. Harrison St., Dept. 834, Chicago.

Agents—Sell shoes direct to ladies at home or at work. Fast selling line. Liberal pay. Splendid opportunity. Apply now. Style-Arch Shoe Company, 502 Butler Bld.., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Tailoring Salesmen. Add 50% to your profits. Get the Wright line of Mens' and Boys' Clothes. Lowest prices in America. Every customer for mens' suit is a live prospect for a boy's suit. Women buy too. You double your sales and profit. Large samples of mens' and boys' clothes in one outfit—handsome carrying case—Free. Write for full particulars. Wright & Co., Chicago, Congress, Throop & Harrison, Dept. C 32.

Rummage Sales make $50.00 daily. We start you. Representatives wanted everywhere. "Wholesale Distributors", Dept. 72 609 Division Street, Chicago.

AGENTS WANTED

Sells Like Hot Cakes; Big Profits; New Ironing Wax Pad and Asbestos Rest; Clamps Board; Perfumes Clothes; Outfit 10c. Yankee Mfg's, 380 Atlantic Ave., B'klyn, N. Y.

Agents—New Luminous Glass Name Plates, House Numbers, Glass Signs, Etc. Shine at night—Everybody wants them—Big profits. Your pay in advance, we deliver and collect. Elegant samples furnished. Crystal Products Company, 69 Wayne St., Big Prairie, Ohio.

Agents—Steady income. Large manufacturer of handkerchiefs and dress goods, etc., wishes representative in each locality. Factory to consumer. Big profits, honest goods. Credit given. Send for particulars. Freeport Mfg. Co., 60 Main St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

We manufacture an article of wearing apparel that can be sold in most every home by men or women agents. Enormous demand and no competition. No other firm is selling this same article direct to consumers. Our prices are 50% less than retail stores. Our agents make big profits and get them the minute they make the sale. Absolutely no experience is necessary. We can use part or full time workers. If you want a big money making proposition—easy sales and no competition write us at once for full details. Wright & Co., Chicago, Congress, Throop & Harrison Sts., Dept. D 32.

Salesmen! Sell boys' suits. The biggest money-making side line in America. Boys' suits can be sold right along with your present line to both men and women. No competition Big profit. Sample outfit that fits in pocket. Write for full particulars. Wright & Co., Chicago, Congress, Throop & Harrison, Dept., B 32.

MALE HELP WANTED

$133—$192 month. Railway Mail Clerks Steady work. Sample questions free. Franklin Institute, Dept. B-12. Rochester, N. Y.

Firemen, Brakemen, Baggagemen, Sleeping car, train porters (colored). $140 - $200. Experience unnecessary. 828 Railway Bureau, E. St. Louis, Ill.

Earn up to $400 monthly, living expenses paid. We place men and women; trained in spare time at home for hotel executive positions. Easy Terms. Free Booklet. Stand. Business Training Inst., 299 Carlton Court, Buffalo, N. Y.

Railway Postal Clerks: Start $133 month. Railroad pass; expenses paid; questions free. Columbus Institute, A-2. Columbus, Ohio.

Firemen, Brakemen, for railroads nearest their homes—everywhere; beginners $150-$250 monthly (which position?). Railway Association, Desk M-17, Brooklyn, N. Y.

FEMALE HELP WANTED

Girls—Women, 15 up. Become Milliners. $35 week. Learn at home while earning. Experience unnecessary. Sample lessons. Franklin Institute, Dept. B-800 Rochester N.Y.

Ladies—$10 to $15 daily possible selling a line of factory priced rubber goods specialties for women direct from manufacturer. Free catalogue. American Rubber Products Co., Dept. 905, Pittsburgh, Pa.

U. S. Government wants girls—women 18 up. $1400-$1800 year. Steady work. Short hours. Vacation. Experience unnecessary. Common education. List positions—free. Franklin Institute, Dept. B-9, Rochester, N.Y.

Women wanted as representatives of Priscilla Dress Fabrics, Dry Goods, Hosiery, etc. Pleasant work. Good pay. Beautiful samples, instructions furnished. Write Fitzcharles Dry Goods Co., 619 Fitzcharles Bldg., Trenton, N. J.

Girls—Women. Learn Gown Draping—Making. $30 week. Learn while earning. Fascinating. Sewing experience unnecessary. Sample lessons free. Write immediately. Franklin Institute, Dept. B 501, Rochester, N.Y.

Earn $20 weekly, spare time, at home, addressing, mailing, music, circulars. Send 10c for music, information. American Music Co., 1658 Broadway, Dept. 2-Y, N. Y.

FARMS FOR SALE

$400 Secures 120-Acre Farm. 9 Cows, Horse, 4 a. Oats and Hungarian, acre corn and potatoes, large vegetable garden, hay, 100 poultry, hog, furniture, full implements included to settle quickly; convenient 2 RR towns; fine 7-room house, big barn. Price $3000, only $400 needed. Page 308 Big Catalog. Strout Farm Agency, 150BG Nassau St., New York City.

California has more independent men and women than any other state. Investigate at first hand; go now. Round trip summer excursion fares, on the Santa Fe, until Sept. 30th, limited to Oct. 31st, liberal stopovers. Opportunities in California for the man of moderate means, who desires to establish a home in a delightful country, are better now than ever. Lands reasonable in price; long time payments granted. California State Land Board offers choice twenty acre farms at Ballico, Merced County, on unusual terms. Write us if interested. California folders free. C. L. Seagraves, General Colonization Agent, Santa Fe Ry., 913 Ry. Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

PATENT ATTORNEYS

Patents—Write for free Guide Book, and Evidence of Conception Blank. Send model or sketch and description for free opinion of its patentable nature. Highest References. Prompt Service. Reasonable Terms. Victor J. Evans & Co., 641 Ninth, Washington, D. C.

Inventions Commercialized on cash or royalty basis. Patented or unpatented. Write Adam Fisher Mfg. Co., 91 St. Louis, Mo.

Patents promptly procured. Moderate Fees. Best References. Send Sketch or Model. George P. Kimmel, Master of Patent Law, 27-M, Loan & Trust Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Inventors—Desiring to secure patent should write for our book, "How To Get Your Patent." Send model or sketch and description for opinion of its patentable nature. Randolph & Co., Dept. 112, Washington, D. C.

Patents Procured; Trade Marks Registered—A comprehensive, experienced, prompt service for the protection and development of your ideas. Preliminary advice gladly furnished without charge. Booklet of information and form for disclosing idea free on request. Richard B. Owen, 18 Owen Bldg., Washington, D. C.

HELP—MALE & FEMALE

Wanted—Men and women ambitious to make money writing Stories and Movie Plays. Send for wonderful Free Book that tells how. Address Authors' Press, Dept. 31, Auburn, N.Y.

We Start You In Business, furnishing everything; men and women, $30 to $100 weekly operating our "New System Candy Factories" home anywhere. Booklet free. W. Hillyer Ragsdale, Drawer 5, East Orange, N. J.

Sell us your spare time. You can earn Fifteen to Fifty dollars weekly writing showcards at home; no canvassing; pleasant profitable profession; easily quickly learned by our simple graphic block system; artistic ability unnecessary. We instruct you and supply work. Wilson Methods, Limited, Dept. 68, Toronto, Canada.

Gov't Positions, $1400-$2300 yearly. Many openings. 36-page information booklet free. Chicago Civil Service College, Dept. K, Chicago.

Make Money silvering mirrors, all kinds plating, knives, spoons, auto headlights. Outfits furnished. Free booklet. International Laboratories, Dept. D6, 311 Fifth Ave., New York

Wanted:—Local Manager in each county for outdoor advertising. Big Pay. Whole or spare time. No experience required. National Co., 211 Seventh St., Louisville, Ky.

Earn money at home during spare time painting lamp shades, pillow tops for us. No canvassing. Easy and interesting work. Experience unnecessary. Nileart Company, 2233, Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

All men, women, boys, girls, 17 to 60, willing to accept Government Positions, $117-$250, traveling or stationary, write, Mr. Ozment, 104, St. Louis, immediately.

Silvering Mirrors, Headlights, Tableware, Replate stoves, jewelry. Plans free. Clarence Sprinkle, Dept. 99, Marion, Indiana.

$6-$18 a dozen decorating pillow tops at home; pleasant work; experience unnecessary; particulars for stamp. Tapestry Paint Co., 104, LaGrange, Ind.

REMNANTS

Remnant Store, 1510 Vine St., Cincinnati, O. Greatest Dry Goods Bargains on Earth. Agents and Storekeepers supplied.

POULTRY

Purebred Chicks: 7c up. Twelve best varieties. Catalog free. Missouri Chickeries, Box XC, Clinton, Mo.

FARM WANTED

Wanted—To hear from owner of good Farm for sale. State Cash price, full particulars. D. F. Bush, Minneapolis, Minn.

STAMPING NAMES

Stamp Names on key checks. Make $19 per 100. Send 25c for sample and inst. Either Sex. C. Keytag Co., Cohoes, N. Y.

ENTERTAINMENTS

338 Screaming Acts, Sketches, Monologs, Parodies, Recitation $2. Complete Minstrel Show $5. Gamble Pub. Co., East Liverpool, O.

MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

$35.00 Profit Nightly. Small capital starts you. No experience needed. Our machines are used, endorsed by Govt. institutions. Cat. free. Atlas Moving Picture, 471 Morton Bldg., Chicago.

PHOTOPLAYS, STORIES

Writers—Attention! Stories, poems, plays, etc., are wanted for publication. Submit Mss. or write Literary Bureau, C8, Hannibal, Mo.

Earn $25 Weekly, writing for newspapers, magazines. Experience unnecessary; details Free. Press Syndicate, 451, St. Louis, Mo.

$$$ For Ideas. Photoplay Plots accepted any form; revised, criticised, copyrighted, marketed. Advice free. Universal Scenario Corporation, 200 Security Bldg., Santa Monica & Western Ave., Hollywood, Calif.

Big Money In Writing photoplays, short stories, poems, songs, etc. Send today for free copy America's greatest magazine for writers. Filled with practical help in writing and selling. Writer's Digest, 609 Butler Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

PHOTO FINISHING

Special Trial Offer: Any size Kodak film developed for 5c; prints 3c each. Over-night service. Get a Free Auto. Ask for details. Roanoke Photo Finishing Co., 228 Bell Ave., Roanoke, Va.

Kodak Prints 3c, Developing 5c per roll. This is our regular price. Altine Photo Co., Dept. A, 1962 Kinney Ave., Cincinnati, O.

First trial offer—Any size kodak film developed and six glossy prints 20c. Cameron Photo Co., C-3418, Burch Ave., Cincinnati, O.

Films developed 5c; Prints 3c each. The new Davo finish. Davis Photo Shop, Dept. C, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Special Trial Offer. Your next Kodak film developed 5c, Prints 3c each. Moser & Son, 2122 St. James Ave., Cincinnati, O.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Use Tailor's Mending Tissue to mend your garments. Needed in every home. Three yards 25c. The A. Bauer Co., 8 Arcade, Chattanooga, Tenn.

Increase Your Family Income knitting socks at home. The way to independence. The Home Profit Knitter is the world's most productive and reliable home knitting machine. Be first in your town. We pay you $1.75 for every dozen pairs, furnish free yarn with each machine and replace yarn used in socks you send us. Enormous demand. Free instruction anywhere. Immediate application necessary. Home Profit Hosiery Co., 858-S. Hudson Avenue, Rochester, New York.

Ladies—Earn Money Crocheting, Tatting, making aprons and caps. Material furnished. Patterns and plans 35c. Send remittance now. Returned if desired. Kenwood Pattern Co., 6238 So. Park Ave., Chicago, Ill.

MISCELLANEOUS

Switches made from combings. The new way. Write for Style Booklet. Mrs. B. Vandervoort, Davenport, Ia.

Switches—$2 Made the sanitary way. From your own combings $1.50. Booklet free. Mrs. E. Mack, Canton, N. Y.

HEMSTITCHING AND PICOTING

Hemstitching and Picoting Attachment, works perfectly on all sewing machines. Improved, superior in every way. The only attachment made that does perfect work. Price $2.00 prepaid with instructions. Fully guaranteed. Ladies' Art Sales Co., Box 71-C, Hamtramck, Mich.

Guaranteed Hemstitching and Picoting Attachment. Fits any sewing machine. Makes beautiful work. Literature and testimonials free. $2.00 prepaid or sent C. O. D. LaFlesh Hemstitching Co., Dept D, Sedalia, Mo.

POST CARD CLUBS

Exchange Letters and Postcards. Either sex. Write Correspondence Club, 1013-89th St., Woodhaven, N. Y. (Stamp).

LAND SEEKERS!

Opportunity awaits you near thriving city in Lower Mich. 20, 40, 80 ac. tracts, only $10 to $50 down, bal. long time. Write for free bklt. Swigart Land Co., C1246 First Nat'l Bank Bldg., Chicago.

BUSINESS BY MAIL

$25,000. I made it small Mail Order Business. Booklet Free. Tells How Plan 25c Free 12 Articles worth $3. A. C. Scott, Cohoes, N.Y.

---

hree Wheel Chairs in August

)2 is COMFORT'S Total to Date

The recipients of the three August ...eel chairs are: Mrs. Maude Hall, R 1, ...kadelphia, Ala., 150; Sherman Tidwell, ...nnis, Miss., 74; Ethel M. Long, Mc- ...skill, Ark., 64. The figures following ...eir respective names indicate the num- ...r of subscriptions sent in by them or ... their friends for them.

Mrs Maude Hall, age 36, has been dis- ...led the past sixteen months due to ...structed lymphatic circulation in her ...wer limbs in consequence of which ...r left leg had to be amputated just be- ...w the knee, and she has lost the use ... her right leg. She is a great sufferer, ...d her husband, who is a farmer, has ...hausted his financial resources for her ...edical and surgical treatment in the ...ort to restore her to health. She is the ...ther of five bright little children. It ... a sad case in every aspect, but the ...eel chair will mitigate her suffering ...d alleviate the distress of her family.

Sherman Tidwell, age 18, is unable to ...lk or stand because of white swelling ... his legs. The wheel chair will be a ...y to this afflicted child and a help to ... mother in caring for him.

Ethel M. Long, age 8, has never been able ... walk, due to hydrocephalus (enlarged ...ad with water on the brain). Her head is larger than that of a grown person should be. She can sit supported in a rocking-chair, and can use her hands and arms, but cannot stand. Both of her parents are living, and as there are three other children, two boys four and five years of age respective, and a baby girl, they have their hands full providing and caring for the family. Needless to add that this wheel chair will be a blessing to Ethel and her parents.

The three chairs awarded in August being only half the number awarded in July may seem a considerable decline, but it is no discouragement to me because it is no greater drop than usual at this season when summer work, summer vacations and hot-weather lassitude cause an annual temporary abatement of effort on the part of our subscribers in behalf of the wheel-chair applicants. With the advent of crisp fall weather the Wheel-Chair Club will quicken its pace; and I beg our readers to start the acceleration immediately, for we have a list of poor shut-ins distressfully in need of wheel-chairs.

Sincerely yours,

W. H. GARNETT,

Publisher of COMFORT.

P. S. for the information of our many new subscribers let me explain that for each and every 150 one-year subscriptions to COMFORT, at 50 cents each, sent in either singly or in clubs by persons who direct that they are to be credited to COMFORT'S WHEEL-CHAIR CLUB instead of claiming the premiums to which they would be entitled, I give a FIRST-CLASS INVALID WHEEL-CHAIR to some needy crippled Shut-in and pay the freight, too. It is a large and expensive premium for me to give for that number of subscriptions, but I am always glad to do my part a little faster each month than you do yours.

Comfort's Roll of Honor

The Roll of Honor comprises the names of those who have sent five or more subscriptions, or a dollar or more in money, to credit of the Wheel-Chair Club during the month previous. Following each name is the number of subscriptions or amount of cash sent.

Joshua Baker, Ala., for Mrs. Maude Hall, 150 subs; Mrs. Claude Camp, La., for Eunice Camp, 42; Miss Ruby Greer, Texas, for W. A. Greer, 21; H. F. Fielden, Texas, for W. A. Greer, 21; Mrs. W. A. Yeats, Texas, for Leota Yeats, 25; Mrs. Ella Burkdall, Mo., for Mrs. Amanda Wilkinson, 35; Mrs. Whit Alford, Ala., for her daughter, 16; Mrs. Essie Tidwell, Ala., for Mrs. Frances McKroy, 13; Geraldine Ball, Nebr., for Arline Klingaman, 12 subs. and $1.50; Mrs. W. A. Nix, Texas, for R. B. Banks, 11; Mrs. Minnie Owen, Mo., for Jewel Lightfoot, 10; Mrs. L. A. Smith, Texas, for Mary Woodall, 9; Annie McGahee, for Annie Carpenter, 9; Philip Sentel, S. C. for General, 7; Mrs. Cora Blackwell, Tenn., for Jack Brooks, 7 subs; Mrs. A. N. Weibe, Texas, 6; Miss Ruby McBrayer, Ark., for Ethel Long, 5; Mrs. L. G. Camp, Ark., for Oneds Gartman, 5; Mrs. J. M. Davis, Ark., for own wheel chair, 5 subs. and $3.00; R. B. Banks, Texas, for Carl Banks, 5 subs. and $1.00; Mrs. Laura Frase, Md., for J. L. Swanson, 1 sub. and $1.00; Lafayette Swanson, N. C. own chair, $20.00; Mrs. A. McClellan, Mont., for General, $5.00; From a Friend, $5.00 for General; Mrs. J. C. Seafer, W. Va., for General, $4.50; Weems Chapel Sunday School, Tenn., for General, $3.50; J. B. Banks, Texas, for Carl Banks, $2.00; A Florida Friend, Fla., for General, $2.00; Ricardo Belden, Conn., for General, $1.25; Mrs. W. S. McCulloch, Ill., for General, $1.00; Sarah R. Smith, Fla., for General, $1.00; From a Friend, Mass., for General, $1.00; Betty P. Doubt, for J. L. Swanson, $1.00.

Turn About

Smith got married. The evening of his first pay-day he gave his bride $14 of the $15 salary and kept only $1 for himself.

But the second pay-day Smith gave his wife $1 and kept $14 himself.

"Why, John," she cried, in injured tones, "how on earth do you think I can manage a whole week on a paltry dollar?"

"I'll admit I don't know," he answered. "I had a rotten time myself last week. It's your turn now."—Topeka State Journal.

Bless Him

A man to praise
Is Henry Groner;
He never says
"I pulled a boner."
—Birmingham Age-Herald

A man to praise
Is William Groat;
He never tries
To rock the boat.
—Cincinnati Enquirer

I'll save my praise
For Henry Ruffler;
He never drives
With open muffler.
—Newark Advocate

I'll hand my praise
To Lester Leak;
He never says:
"What's the idea?"

I give my sympathy
To Peter Punk;
He's the comp
That sets this bunk.
—Anon

This superb 110-piece Set, with initial in 2 places on every piece, decorated in blue and gold, with gold covered handles, consists of:

12 Dinner Plates, 9 in.
12 Breakfast Plates, 7 in.
12 Soup Plates, 7¾ inches
12 Cereal Dishes, 6 inches
12 Fruit Dishes, 5¼ in.
12 Cups
12 Saucers
12 Individual Bread and Butter Plates, 6¼ in.
1 Platter, 13⅛ inches
1 Platter, 11¾ inches
1 Celery Dish, 8¾ inches
1 Sauce Boat Tray, 7¾ inches
1 Butter Plate, 6 inches
1 Vegetable Dish, 10⅛ in., with lid (2 pieces)
1 Deep Bowl, 8¾ inches
1 Oval Baker, 9 inches
1 Small Deep Bowl, 5 inches
1 Gravy Boat, 7¾ inches
1 Creamer
1 Sugar Bowl with cover (2 pieces)

$1 Brings 110-Pc. Martha Washington Blue and Gold Decorated Dinner Set

FREE GIFTS with Catalog Orders

A superbly decorated Dinner Set, so beautiful and of such splendid quality that you must see it to realize what a bargain it is. Send only $1 and Hartman will ship the complete set. Use it for 30 days on Free Trial. Then, if not satisfied for any reason, send it back and Hartman will return your $1 and pay transportation charges both ways. If you keep it, take nearly a year to pay—a little every month. Remarkable Presents Given Free—See Below.

Your Initial in Gold, Surrounded by Wreath of Gold, in 2 Places on Every Piece (Gold Covered Handles)

Beautiful Colonial Martha Washington shape. All handles are of solid design and are covered with gold as found only in costliest sets. Every piece decorated with a rich gold band edge, a mazarine blue follow band and 2 pure gold initials in Old English design, surrounded by gold wreaths. Notice the beautiful white lustrous body. It's a set you will be proud to put on your table—and at our price an unrivaled bargain. And if you act quickly you also get

FREE Beautiful Centerpiece, Six Dainty Doilies to Match and 6 Silver Plate Knives and Forks

We want to prove to 50,000 more customers that Hartman gives the best merchandise, biggest values and most liberal terms ever known. And to get these 50,000 new customers at once we send, absolutely FREE, the centerpiece and 6 doilies; also the 6 heavy, richly patterned knives and 6 forks pictured above. The centerpiece is 36 inches in diameter and the doilies are 12 inches in diameter. All are "Indian Head" linene and are finished with dainty embroidered scalloped edges. The 6 knives and 6 forks are of fine extra silver plate decorated in artistic fleur-de-lis pattern. To get these free articles you must send AT ONCE. The offer is limited. Only 50,000 will be given Free—so act quick.

Order No. 320EEMA18. Bargain Price, $34.85. Pay $1 Now. Balance $4 Monthly.

The Centerpiece, 6 Dainty Doilies to Match and 6 Silver Plate Knives and Forks are FREE

FREE Bargain Catalog FREE GIFTS

316 pages of the most astounding bargains in furniture, rugs, carpets, sewing machines, silverware—everything for the home; also farm machinery, etc.—all sold on our easy monthly payment terms and 30 days' free trial. Also explains Hartman's gift plan by which you receive many splendid articles such as glassware, dishes, silverware, tablecloths, napkins, etc., absolutely FREE with your purchases. Send a postal for this big free bargain catalog today.

"Let Hartman Feather YOUR Nest"

Important!

Hartman guarantees that every piece in this set is absolutely first quality—no "seconds." This is a standard or "open" pattern. Replacement pieces may be had of us for three years. Each piece wrapped in tissue paper. Excellent packing to prevent breakage. Shipped at once.

HARTMAN Furniture & Carpet Co.
Dept. 5616 CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Enclosed find $1. Send the 110-Piece Dinner Set No. 320EEMA18, Price $34.85, as described, and with it the centerpiece and 6 doilies; also 6 silver plate knives and 6 forks absolutely FREE. It is understood that if I am satisfied, I will send you $4.00 monthly until full price of Dinner Set, $34.85, is paid. Title remains with you until paid in full. If not satisfied, after 30 days' free trial, I will ship all goods back and you will refund my $1 and pay transportation charges both ways.

Print Initial You Want Here

Name..... Occupation.....

R. F. D., Box No. or Street and No.....

Post Office..... State.....

If your shipping point is different from your post office, fill in line below

Send shipment to.....

HARTMAN Furniture&Carpet Co.

Dept. 5616 Copyright, 1923, by Hartman's, Chicago CHICAGO, ILL.

VOL. XXXV
NO. 12

HARVEST NUMBER

COMFORT

The Key to Happiness and Success in over a Million and a Quarter Homes

Published at Augusta Maine

OCTOBER
1923

See "Little Miss Brown's Harvest", on page 10

Copyright 1923 (Trade-Mark Registered), by W. H. Gannett, Publisher, Incorporated.

Table of Contents on Page 8.

COMFORT EDITORIAL

THOUGHTS THAT BREATHE AND WORDS THAT BURN

Europe Aghast at the Specter of Another War Raised by Italy's Bombardment and Seizure of Greek Island

THROUGHOUT Europe consternation was the general feeling caused by the astounding tidings of Italy's precipitate and unwarranted action in bombarding and forcibly seizing Corfu, the capital and principal city of the Greek island of the same name, in an effort to enforce her demands against the Greek government for indemnity and other amends for the murder of the five Italian members of the Commission appointed by the Council of Ambassadors to decide the boundary dispute between Greece and Albania.

Since the close of the World War mutual jealousy and distrust had engendered unfriendliness amounting almost to hatred between the Greeks and Italians, and conflicting national interests and ambitions for territorial expansion had seriously strained the relations between their respective governments. Under such conditions it was most unfortunate that the Council of Ambassadors of the Allied Powers selected any Italians to serve on the Commission to establish the boundary between Greece and Albania.

The civilized world was shocked and the Italian people were enraged by the official report, on August 28th, that the five Italian members of this Boundary Commission had been assassinated in Greece near the Albanian frontier which they were locating. The Italian government immediately sent the Greek government a humiliating ultimatum demanding the privilege of participating in the investigation of the crime and the detection and pursuit of the murderers, that upon conviction they should suffer the death penalty, that a representative of the Greek government attend the funeral of the murdered Commissioners, that the Italian flag be saluted by Greece, and that within five days Greece pay an indemnity of fifty million lire (equivalent to two and a half million dollars). Italy asserted, in justification of her extreme demands, that a Greek official had aided in the commission of the crime, and charged that the Greek government was responsible, if not as direct instigator, because its hostile attitude and the anti-Italian propaganda it had put out or allowed to be circulated had incited the perpetrators.

In reply the Greek government denied these scandalous accusations, repeated its previous expression of deep sorrow and regret, declared its voluntary purpose to send a representative to show its respect for the dead, and its willingness to pay a reasonable indemnity as the crime was committed on Greek territory where the victims were under the protection of Greek authority, but refused to salute the Italian flag on the ground that such amends would be an acknowledgment that the deplorable incident was a deliberate insult to Italy by Greece, and declined to permit Italy to dictate the administration of justice in the Greek courts as being a gross indignity and infraction of the national sovereignty of Greece. The Greek reply concluded with an earnest request that, if its offer was not in all respects acceptable, the points of difference be referred to the Council of the League of Nations (of which both parties are members) for final adjudication.

Italy promptly answered that she insisted on exact compliance with all her original demands. Meanwhile she had secretly mobilized her army and navy, and without waiting for the expiration of the five days of grace specified in her ultimatum dispatched a military and naval force to seize the neighboring Greek island of Corfu, the largest and most important of the Ionian archipelago. Reports vary slightly as to minor details and the exact hour of certain occurrences, but it is undisputed that the main facts are as follows:

On August 31st the Italian admiral in command of the expeditionary forces established a line of blockade completely surrounding the island which is about forty miles long and fifteen to twenty miles wide. In the afternoon of the same day he brought some of his ships into the harbor of Corfu City and demanded surrender of the island. The Greek Governor asked for time to communicate by telegraph with Athens and get instructions from his government; but before instructions could be received the Italian ships began shelling the town, directing their fire chiefly against the useless old fort, a relic of antiquity, and the police station and school, which buildings were soon demolished, and the ruins burnt, and against the barracks. The entire Greek garrison consisted of only 150 men and offered no resistance against the powerful attacking force. Under cover of this bombardment the Italian troops landed and took possession unopposed. The Governor and ten other Greek officers were taken on board one of the Italian ships and held as prisoners, but the little garrison retreated into the interior of the island. The Italians have since arrested other Greek officials and have set up a military government of their own over the entire island.

Aside from the question of whether or not the seizure of the island was justifiable, the shelling of this peaceful, defenceless town that was not offering, and could not make, any resistance against the overwhelming force that Italy had sent to take it, was a barbarous act of needless, wanton cruelty. Although the firing was of short duration the bursting shells killed a number of the inhabitants and wounded others. The horrible barbarity of the bombardment is vividly described by Col. Stephen E. Lowe of St. Louis, Mo., a member of the American Red Cross, serving at that time in the Near East Relief at Corfu. The old fort and barracks had been turned over by the Greek government to the American Near East Relief and the British Save the Children Fund, and were occupied by hundreds of orphans who were being cared for by these two charitable organizations.

According to the Associated Press report Col. Lowe, describing the bombardment, said: "The number killed reached twenty. Thirty-two wounded are now [Sept.3] in the hospital, and there were perhaps 50 slightly wounded. Of the 20 dead 15 were children. All the killed and wounded were refugees or orphans from American and British orphanages housed in the old fortress. The large number of children among the casualties was due to the fact that several shells landed in the barracks which were being used as orphanages, while shrapnel shells exploded in the water in front of the fortress, where 400 Near East Relief orphan boys were bathing at the time the firing began." Col. Lowe then told how, when the bombardment began, he hastened down to the quay to meet the first Italian officer that might land and implore him to have the "futile firing" stopped, but that it ceased about the time he reached the landing stage. Such fiendish cruelty would be unbelievable were it not vouched for by an eye-witness of such high standing.

Puts League of Nations to the Crucial Test

WHILE these momentous events were occurring the supreme governing body of the League of Nations, composed of delegates representing each of the fifty-one nations that constitute the League, was in regular session at Geneva, Switzerland. The great, primary purpose for which the League of Nations was conceived, organized and exists is to preserve peace throughout the world by intervening in vexatious disputes between nations and deciding them in accordance with right instead of might, and to prevent, cheek and restrain acts of war and other forcible aggressions by or against its member nations, such, for instance, as the present dispute between Greece and Italy and the recent forcible aggression by the latter. Greece denied the charge of culpability in connection with the murder of the Commissioners and asked Italy to submit their dispute to, and abide by the decision of, the League of Nations Council. Italy, instead of accepting this peaceful method of settlement to which she was in duty bound by the League covenant which she had accepted when she became a member, immediately and without giving the League Council an opportunity to intervene committed an outrageous act of war by bombarding and seizing Corfu. Then Greece appealed to the League Council to intervene and adjudicate the whole matter in accordance with right and justice. In reply to the League Council's notice of Greece's appeal Italy flatly refused to recognize the authority of the League Council to arbitrate this dispute, and threatened to withdraw from membership in case the League should attempt to meddle in this vexed affair between her and Greece. Thus the matter stands at the present writing (September 6th).

The general trend of public opinion in most of Europe and all America, as reflected in editorial comment and utterances of men prominent in public life, denounces Italy's demands for reparation as excessive, unreasonable and intolerably humiliating, and condemns her bombardment and occupation of Corfu as an act of war vengefully conceived and ruthlessly executed against a small, weak nation, on doubtful provocation; for as yet the murderers and their motive are unknown. No other incident since the outbreak of the World War has so shaken Europe; for it was a similar military aggression against little Serbia, by Austria, to enforce a like demand for unreasonable and humiliating reparation for the assassination of an Austrian prince, that in 1914 started the great holocaust of war which raged around the world for more than four years. Therefore it is not surprising that from some quarters came gloomy forebodings of another great war as the result of Italy's rash act.

But the greatest apprehension, and that most commonly expressed, is that Italy's stubborn refusal to recognize the right of the League of Nations to intervene in her dispute with Greece will not only impair the League's usefulness but imperil its very existence. The League of Nations has been hopefully relied on by its member nations as a sort of international fire department vested with ample authority, fully equipped and ever ready to respond to an alarm of war and quench the incipient blaze before it could become a conflagration. An A. P. dispatch from Geneva, where the Assembly and Council of the League of Nations are in session, dated September 5th, reports that "consternation and much sadness prevail everywhere, for it is generally, though reluctantly, admitted that the League has been unable to withstand the first great test of its practical use as machinery for regulating differences between nations, as one of its leading members had declined to concede its competence. Hence, there is a growing sentiment among the smaller countries that, if the League covenant applies to them, it apparently does not bind the great powers of Europe."

A Swiss newspaper, in its September 5th issue, commenting on the situation, says: "Once again events demonstrate that we can impose peace only by war. So long as the League of Nations has no powerful army it will only keep from fighting those who are incapable of employing with advantage the eternal argument." In other words, might still makes right when a nation like Italy deems it to its advantage to fight, which goes to show that our country acted wisely in not binding itself by the League covenant which is so soon treated as "a scrap of paper" by one of its leading subscribers. In some quarters hope is still expressed that England and Spain with the support of Sweden, Belgium, Uruguay and other small nations may yet prevail on Italy to accept intervention. But it is predicted that if Italy should persist in her refusal the League of Nations will soon be disrupted.

COMFORT'S EDITOR.

COMFORT, PUBLISHED MONTHLY BY W. H. GANNETT, PUB., INC., AT AUGUSTA, MAINE.

Subscription price in United States and United States Possessions 50c a year; Canadian subscriptions 65c a year, foreign countries $1.00 a year. No premiums or prizes will be given on Canadian or foreign subscriptions. Please send your renewal just as soon as your subscription expires. We can not send you even one copy of COMFORT, after expiration, until your subscription is Renewed. If you do not get your magazine by the 25th of the month write us and we will send you another copy free. Please notify us immediately in case you move, so that we can change your address and see that you do not miss a single copy. Remember that we must have your former address, as well as your new address to make the change. Be sure to send both. We do not supply back numbers.

Entered at the post office at Augusta, Maine as second-class mail matter. Copyright, 1923 (Trade-Mark Registered), by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

Four CONGOLEUM GOLD SEAL Rugs Less than Price of One

Beyond doubt, this is one of the greatest values that has ever been offered in any kind of merchandise by anyone. Not only do you get four genuine Gold Seal Congoleum Rugs for less than the regular price of just the one big rug alone, but with each of the four rugs comes a guarantee so strong that it can scarcely be matched when buying any other kind of merchandise or any other class of goods.

The Gold Seal that comes pasted on each and every rug is the guarantee of the Congoleum Company of complete satifaction or money back.

This Gold Seal Guarantee is unconditional and positive assurance of absolute satisfaction in the use and service of these congoleum rugs. That's what the Gold Seal on a Congoleum Rug stands for. Behind the Gold Seal Guarantee of the manufacturer is our own Double Guarantee Bond.

Choice of Two Famous Patterns

3 Rugs FREE—Special Bargain Price—Year to Pay

We show two of the most popular Congoleum patterns that have ever been produced. The big rug measures 9 x 12 ft. The three small rugs are each 18 x 36 in. One dollar is all you need send to get your choice of either patterns sent on 30 days' trial. If you wish both patterns —send two dollars--AND GET ALL 8 RUGS.

Oriental Pattern No. 534

This is the beautiful Gold Seal Congoleum Art Rug as shown at the top of this page. On the floor, it looks unbelievably like an expensive woven rug. The richest blue color dominates the ground work. Mellow ecru, old ivories, and light tans, set off the blue field. Mingled with these lovely tints are peacock blue, robin's egg blue and darker tones. Old rose, tiny specks of lighter pink and dark mulberry are artistically placed. Darker browns and blacks lend dignity and richness.

The border background contrasts with the blue all over center by reversing the color scheme. Ecru and tan shades form the border background. In this rug you have all the advantages of design and coloring of cheerful warmth and lovely color effects so much sought after in high grade woven rugs.

An ideal all purpose rug, beautiful in any room. Perfect for living room, or parlor. Lovely in bedroom or dining room. Charming in the kitchen. A real boon to the women folks on the farms. Saves endless drudgery.

Only $1.00 with Coupon — $1.50 Monthly

No. E4C534 9x12 ft. Congoleum Gold Seal Rug with three small rugs to match, each 18x36 in.—all four only $17.95

Tile Pattern No. 408

Probably no floor covering of any quality or kind, ever piled up the popularity of this wonderful design. It is a superb tile pattern that looks like mosaic. Lovely robin's egg blue, with shadings of Dutch blue, and a background of soft stone gray, give a matchless effect. Particularly suited for kitchen or diningroom. Don't fear muddy boots and shoes. A damp mop whisks it clean in a jiffy.

Only $1.00 with Coupon — $1.50 Monthly

No. E4C408 9x12 ft. Congoleum Gold Seal Rug with three small rugs to match, each 18x36 in.—all four only $17.95

Very Important—No Large Cities

Our easy credit terms, our wonderful free trial offer, are designed and arranged to serve home lovers in the smaller towns and on the farms. If you live in a city of 100,000 population or over, we cannot fill your order for this Congoleum Rug Offer or send our Free Catalog.

To everyone else we bring all the advantages of our house, freely. We open your charge account without asking. It makes no difference who you are, how modest your home may be or how little you earn. This Special Bargain in intended for you. Our big beautiful Home Lovers Bargain book is ready the minute you ask for it. A postal card will bring it.

10,000 Other Furniture Bargains

Spiegel, May, Stern Co.

1804 W. 35th St., Chicago, Ill.

Ask for FREE Catalog!

$1.00

Brings All Four Rugs on a Month's FREE TRIAL!

Ours is the only house in America that can make you such an offer. No one else can bring you a genuine guaranteed Gold Seal Congoleum Rug, in the full 9 foot by 12 foot size, with three small rugs extra, and all for less than the regular price of the big rug alone. And on a year credit.

Year to Pay

Clip the coupon below. Write your name and address plainly. Say which pattern you want. Pin a dollar to it—mail at once. We will ship immediately — on approval — all four Congoleum Rugs — in one complete neat package. No muss, no bother, no trouble to lay. If satisfactory, take a year to pay.

The Greatest of Bargains Pay Almost As You Please

Almost everybody knows the price of the famous Congoleum Gold Seal Art Rugs. They are advertised and sold at the same standard price everywhere. Look everywhere else first if you wish — stores, catalogs, magazines and newspapers. You'll find no offer like ours—lower price, 3 rugs free, 30 days trial, year to pay.

If you return the rugs, your dollar will be refunded and also all freight costs.

Three Rugs FREE For heavy wear spots in front of range, sink, kitchen. At thresholds, in hall, in front of dresser or bed. While this offer lasts, we give three of these small rugs free with each large rug; all four for less than the price of one.

The Rug of Guaranteed Wear Ideal for the Farm

Congoleum Gold Seal Art Rugs are the most popular floor coverings known. They are rapidly becoming the national floor covering — highly prized in good homes for any and all rooms.

Waterproof. No burlap for water to rot. Surface is hard, smooth, and wear-resisting. Does not stain. Not marred or hurt by spilling of hot liquids.

They Lie Flat from the first moment without fastening. They never curl up or kick up at edges or corners. No need to tack or fasten them down. Dirt cannot accumulate underneath.

Less Work. Rid yourself of back-breaking drudgery. Dirt, ashes, grit, dust or mud cannot "grind into" Congoleum Gold Seal Art Rugs. A damp rag or mop keeps it clean and colorings bright.

No laborious cleaning, no sending to cleaners. absolutely sanitary. All this guaranteed by the famous Gold Seal that means complete satisfaction or your money back.

On the Farm saves endless toil; the trail of muddy boots or "tracked in" dirt disappears under a damp mop.

Ask for FREE Catalog!

It Shows 10,000 other bargains. It brings credit without asking —everything from cellar to garret.

Beds, Bedding, Carpets, Rugs, Dishes, Cooking Utensils, Curtains, Furniture, Silverware, Lamps, all sorts of odds and ends for the home. Diamonds, Watches, Jewelry.

Your request on a postal card is enough.

Pin a Dollar to Coupon Below

Spiegel, May, Stern Co., 1804 W. 35th St., Chicago

I enclose $1 for the 4 Gold Seal Congoleum Art Rugs — exactly as described — in the pattern selected below, on 30 days free trial. If I return them, you are to refund my $1, also all transportation costs. Otherwise I will pay $1.50 monthly until special price of $17.95 is paid.

I Select Pattern No. . . . . .

If you wish both patterns write down both numbers, send $2.00—pay $3.00 monthly and get all 8 rugs.

Name .....

Street, R.F.D or Box No. .....

Shipping Point.....

City..... State. .....

Also send me your latest FREE Furniture Book.

Brownie's Triumph

by Mrs. Georgie Sheldon

He asked her to draw back the bolt and push the door open.

He bent and touched her hand with his lips, with a murmured farewell.

Vain hope! The figure quickened his steps coming directly toward her.

Copyright, 1879-1880, by Street & Smith.
Renewal granted to Mrs. Georgie Sheldon Downs, 1907.
Serial rights by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

Brownie Douglas, waiting at Memorial Hall, Centennial Exposition, Philadelphia, attracts the attention of two gentlemen, Adrian Dredmond, an Englishman, and Mr. Gordon who recognizes Brownie, she being an intimate friend of his sisters. Her father, dying before she is born, and her mother at her birth, she is adopted by her great aunt who gives her her name Mehetabel and brings her up to remember she is a direct descendant from the Scottish nobility. Her nurse calls her Brownie from the first. Adrian Dredmond picks up a costly cuff button with a large D, studded with brilliants and the word "Brownie" upon the back. That night Miss Mehetabel Douglas tells Brownie the story of her betrothal to Lord Dunforth, the ball given by Helen Capel's aunt, Lady Ruxley, her introduction to Count de Lusan, a man of questionable reputation, her refusal to cancel a dance at Lord Dunforth's command, Helen Capel's treachery in suppressing a note, her serious illness, her coming to America, where her father and mother soon died. She gives Brownie her jewels, including her engagement ring, coral cross and all other gifts from Lord Dunforth. That night she dies and upon the reading of the will Mr. Conrad, who has the care of her aunt's property admits using and losing money entrusted to him, leaving Brownie, after all debts and legacies to the servants are paid, two hundred dollars. Refusing help, she secures a situation in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge to be governess to their two younger daughters and a companion and interpreter on a proposed trip to Europe. Mrs. Coolidge and the eldest daughter Isabel admit her personal charms but are jealous of her beauty and many accomplishments. Boarding the steamer, Brownie is saved from an accident by Adrian Dredmond. Wilbur takes her to his mother and sister who realize Wilbur's infatuation for Brownie. Adrian Dredmond overhears their determination to prevent Wilbur's further attention. Going to London they take a house near where Miss Mehetabel lived. Wilbur buys tickets for the opera and insists that Miss Douglas shall go too. Selecting her jewels, among which is a coral cross, Mrs. Coolidge finds her so radiant decides it shall not occur again. Adrian Dredmond entering the Coolidge box, is introduced to Brownie and, when leaving, escorts her to the carriage, where she receives insults from Mrs. Coolidge. Isabel, envious of Brownie's elegant dress and jewels, queries to her mother Brownie's honesty. Seeing her go for a walk, Isabel enters Brownie's room and securing her jewels takes them to her mother, who requests that Brownie, upon her return, be sent to her. She asks Brownie if she has anything in her possession not legally hers and accuses her of stealing jewels and clothing. Brownie demands the return of the casket. Mrs. Coolidge refusing, Brownie threatens legal measures for their return. Wilbur intercedes and promises upon his father's return justice shall be done. Knowing she is to leave, Wilbur orders a cab and directs that Brownie be driven to "The Washington." Adrian Dredmond calls, requesting to see Miss Douglas. Asking for her address, Isabel does not know and he leaves distressed and indignant. Wilbur sends it and Adrian going to "The Washington" fails to find her. Mr. Coolidge hires a detective without success. Going to Lady Peasewell's pary, Isabel wears Brownie's jewels. She meets Sir Charles Randal, who conducts her to the conservatory. Passing Lord Dunforth, he detects the ring and demands where she got it, also the other jewels. Claiming they are heirlooms, did Mehetabel Douglas give them to her. They were my last gift to her. Sir Charles appears and Lord Dunforth begs her to forget what has occurred. Two years after Sir Charles's birth there was a prospect of an addition to the family. Lady Randal was traveling and coming home a year later said it was hard to lose one's children. Mr. Coolidge returning to New York, Lady Randal, who was Helen Capel and a cousin of Lord Dunforth, invites the Coolidges to Vallingham Hall, Isabel being engaged to Sir Charles. Isabel walking with him sees Lady Ruxley leaning upon the arm of a young woman. The next day a dinner is given by the Earl of Dunforth and Isabel is presented to his grandson, Adrian Dredmond, who meets her with scorn and recognizes the jewels she wears. Introduced to Lady Ruxley, she predicts dire things through Isabel Coolidge. Adrian saves Brownie from death and determines to make her his wife. Lady Ruxley, reaching home, finds a summons to Vallingham Hall. Adrian asks his grandfather's permission for his marriage, which is granted until he learns his future wife was born in America and is in reduced circumstances, and leaving her position as governess under false accusations, withdraws his consent and threatens disinheritance. Lady Ruxley brings a box of papers to Brownie requesting her to find an operetta, among which is the note written by Mehetabel Douglas and suppressed by Helen Capel, now Lady Randal. Going for a walk Brownie meets Isabel in the hall and demands her jewels. Isabel refuses to return them. Later, passing Isabel's room, the door being open, Brownie sees the casket, secures it and faces Mrs. Coolidge as she leaves the room. Refusing to give up the casket, and convincing Mrs. Coolidge she can prove by Lord Dunforth, her right to the jewels, Mrs. Coolidge requests the loan of them until after the wedding. Brownie will not yield. Mrs. Coolidge succeeds in entrapping Brownie into a cell-like room. Isabel coming in seizes the casket. Brownie escapes by the help of a human misshapen in form and feature.

CHAPTER XXXII.

HERBERT RANDAL.

"I BEG your pardon. I did not mean to be inquisitive, or to arouse any unpleasant memories," Brownie hastened to say, but she looked somewhat disappointed, as well as embarrassed.

He saw it, and, after a moment's thought, continued, speaking more to himself than her:

"During the last few years of my life I have been led to recognize a higher power as guiding my life, and I have been praying that its bitterness might be removed. I am not sure but what that prayer is beginning to be answered by the events of tonight, and your presence here. So why should I not tell you?"

Then, with sudden decision, he went on:

"Miss Douglas, this place has been my home all my life. Yes," as he saw her look of surprise, and speaking with great bitterness, "a galley slave is scarcely more of a prisoner than I have been ever since my unfortunate birth. I have never seen the outside of these buildings, excepting four blank walls which inclose a small court; I know not what my surroundings are, what my country is like, and, beyond my own attendants, scarce have seen the face of a human being. I think I must have been born with a deformed disposition as well as a distorted body; for, as a child, I was subject to fits of passion, so furious and of such long duration, that those who had charge of me deemed me insane and unsafe for the time, and used to confine me in yonder cell until I came to my senses. The bolt, you perceive, can be fastened on this side, so that the shaft will not move, and I could not get out until they released me. I used to grow frightened and almost idiotic shut up in that dismal place, with its sepulcher-like stillness, and I really think that in those days I was more brute than human. Forgive me for disturbing you with my sorrow—it will overcome me at times. But, as I was saying, I used to think I should die shut up in there away from every one; so, after my passion exhausted itself and I was let out, I would busy myself, when I was alone in this room, by cutting away this wall, and puncturing these holes; and then when they put me in there, I would creep close to this spot, and, with my ear against these holes, I could hear what was said and done here, and did not feel quite so lonely and wild."

A shudder seemed to shake his whole frame at the remembrance of those fearful days.

"No one but yourself," he continued, "knows to this day that the wall has been mutilated thus."

The more she heard him talk, the more she wondered who he could be—this sad young cripple, who was so gentle, yet repulsive, so intelligent, yet to all appearance scarcely human. She looked at her watch, and found it was four o'clock. The young man, noting the act, suddenly said:

"How thoughtless in me, Miss Douglas, to keep you standing all this time. I suppose you will be obliged to remain here until daylight, as there is no way for you to get back into the Hall except by going outside from here, and of course it will be useless to attempt that until the household are astir. If you can be comfortable here for an hour longer I will do my best to entertain you. I have books, and all the latest periodicals, and there is an easy-chair by the fire, which I know you will enjoy."

He led her toward the fire, which really made the somewhat dismal apartment very cheerful.

Her thoughts were filled with this young man; she longed to know more of his sad history, and why his life had been rendered such a blank.

It could not be that he was really insane, and that it was necessary to confine him thus! Was she with a madman?

The thought for the moment startled her so that she actually felt faint. But, no; one look into that calm, patient face, with its deep, intelligent eyes, completely banished all fear, and left her more in the dark than ever.

"You are very weary," the young man remarked, seeing her listless attitude.

"No," she answered smiling; "but I am wondering how my explanation regarding my absence and sudden reappearance will be received by Lady Ruxley."

"Ah! I had not thought of that," he replied, with a painful start, and a vivid flush crimsoning his white face.

"You are an inmate of the family, then?" he asked, thoughtfully.

"I am companion to Lady Ruxley, although before coming to her I was governess in the family of that woman who entrapped me into yonder cell." She then related to him something of her troubles with Mrs. Coolidge.

"And it is her daughter who is to marry m—Sir Charles?" the young man asked, deeply interestedly.

"Yes."

"Is she anything like her mother?"

"Very much like her," Brownie said, dryly.

"A fine wife he will have, I fear!" he answered, with curling lips.

"I am very sorry for him," the young girl replied, gently.

"He is very nice, I expect," said the cripple, his lips quivering painfully, while he shaded his face with his hand.

"He is indeed a very fine young man, I am told."

"Would you mind telling me what he is like?" and Brownie wondered why his tones were husky and tremulous.

She described him as well as she could, and concluded:

"To sum it all up, he is very handsome, and as good—they say—and noble in proportion."

A heavy sigh was the only reply, and then he appeared to be sunk in reverie.

After an awkward silence, he suddenly aroused himself, and said:

"Miss Douglas, you and I are both placed in a very trying position by the events of tonight. It did not enter my mind that any explanation would have to be rendered as to your release from yonder cell, although I should not have hesitated an instant about aiding you had I thought of it. I see now that some account of it will be necessary, but I must tell you frankly that it will bring the direst confusion upon the inmates of Vallingham Hall, when you return and make known the fact of your imprisonment and the manner of your release."

"I expected it would be somewhat embarrassing to Mrs. Coolidge and her daughter, but how else will it bring confusion?" Brownie asked, wonderingly.

"Because it will have to be known that I was instrumental in it, and there are but two or three people in the world who know of my existence; consequently, it would involve some very awkward explanations on the part of at least one individual, and that is my own mother. Miss Douglas, my name is Herbert Randal!"

"What! are you Lady Randal's son?" demanded Brownie, in astonishment.

"Yes; and Sir Charles is my own brother, although I have never yet looked upon his face; neither do I remember having seen my mother more than half-a-dozen times in my life," he replied, with intense bitterness.

"Impossible! Why, it is too horrible!" ejaculated the young girl, more and more astonished and shocked.

"It is even so. It does not seem possible that a mother could so far forget her motherhood as to willingly condemn her own flesh and blood to what I have been doomed ever since my birth; but it is true, nevertheless. I was born abroad while my mother was traveling one summer, but I was such a misshapen mass of humanity that she went into convulsions upon first beholding me, and has seldom been able to bear the sight of me since. While my father lived I was kept out of the country, and I do not believe that even he knew of my existence; but after his death my mother had me brought here, and hired an old woman and her son to take care of me until I was about fourteen years of age. They often abused and ill-treated me, and I think perhaps it was owing to this that I was so ungovernable at times. Since that time a broken-down professor has had the principal charge of me and my education. He has been paid a high salary upon the condition that he would never betray his trust. I think he would be glad to see me in different circumstances, but he has an invalid sister depending upon him, and he has no other means of support. I am never allowed to go out, except under circumstances of the utmost secrecy, and then only into a little court hemmed in by the blank walls of these buildings, and I live here in this secret chamber, unknown to all but my mother, my tutor, and my servants."

"Dreadful!" murmured Brownie, almost moved to tears by the sad recital.

"You may well say that. It is dreadful to be shut up from the beautiful world—for I read of its beauties, if I cannot see them; but it is more dreadful to be shut away from all affection and kindness. In my youth I could not patiently bear it, and gave way to those fearful outbursts of passion of which I have told you. If my father were living, things might be different, for I have heard that he was a good man. My brother I have never seen, and I suppose he does not dream of such a thing as a relative like me; and while my mother not only cannot bear the sight of her crippled son, she is also ambitious that the one who is a credit to her should profit by all the advantages possible. My first thought when I resolved to release you tonight, was that perhaps the event might open a way of escape for me also, and that I could go away by myself and no one ever know who I am. But your connection with Lady Ruxley, and your having been an inmate of the family, will make it necessary that my agency in the matter be explained. Of course, in order to justify yourself, you will have to tell how you came to be shut up, and the next inquiry will be, 'How did you get out?' "

"I see," said Brownie, with curling lips; "and if I proclaim the fact that a young man by the name of Herbert Randal, who has also been kept a close prisoner for over twenty years by a heartless mother's decree, liberated me, it is going to make it very uncomfortable for Lady Randal. Pardon me," she added, flushing a lovely color, and dropping the scorn out of her voice, "but I honestly believe the time has come when it is right that the world should know of your existence, and that you should know something of your kindred and the world in which you live," she concluded, indignantly.

"I sometimes go to a little old chapel, which incloses one side of the little court of which I have spoken. I found an entrance to it through the vaults, and I sometimes go there to read. I might have escaped long ago in that way had it not been for my tutor, whom I knew would be reduced to the most abject poverty if deprived of his situation, and so pity has kept me here."

"But you might go out and assert your rights. Of course, a portion of all this property would fall to you, and then you could see that he did not suffer," interposed Brownie.

"Yes, I might do that, and perhaps thereby gain the hatred of my brother. I want his love—oh, I crave the love of some human being!" he cried, almost passionately.

"He has sent you a friend at all events, if you will allow me to be such," Brownie said, impulsively, and reaching out her hand to him, while two bright tears rolled over her flushed cheeks and dropped upon her black dress.

"Ah! then this is the beginning of good things for me, and I will accept it as a precious omen," he replied, clasping her hand warmly, and his eyes lighted with a deep, and sudden joy. "I do not mean to complain," he added, a moment after, "for I have many things to be thankful for, and I thank my Maker every day that He gave me this ugly body rather than a blunted intellect. I have my books, and moderately good health, though that would be better, I think, if I could be more in the air. But I try to feel that all my privations are sent to teach me some great lesson in life, and fit me for better things."

Brownie sat in deep and perplexed thought for several minutes. There were evidently only two things which she could do; either leave the Hall altogether and hide, as Mrs. Coolidge had proposed, letting her disappearance still remain a mystery, or boldly face them all, and let the guilty suffer for their own wrong-doing.

Herbert Randal read something of Brownie's thoughts in her troubled face.

"I do not see that there is but one course for you to pursue, Miss Douglas," he said, "and that is to explain everything in a straightforward way. Perhaps if you could conceal the fact from all but the immediate family that it was Lady Randal's son who released you, it might save some scandal."

"Do you not think it right and just that the fact be made known?" Brownie asked, gravely, adding, "I shall never rest content until I know you are at liberty to go and come at your own will and pleasure, and have your rights."

"You are very kind. I shall leave it all to your own judgment. If it is necessary, of course the secret will have to come out. You can judge how much of an explanation may be necessary as soon as you reach the Hall."

He took the candle, and sweeping aside a portion of the tapestry hangings, revealed an iron door. He asked her to draw back the bolt and push the door open.

She did so, and saw a flight of stone steps.

He limped down these, she following, and soon came to what appeared a grated window.

He told her to slide back the grating, when she would see another bolt which fastened the window.

She obeyed, and slipping the bolt, the window swung open on hinges, when, descending two or three more steps, they found themselves in what he had called a court, but what was in reality a small, ancient burying ground, surrounded on two sides by the walls of the Hall, and on the fourth by that of the old chapel.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

BROWNIE LIBERATED.

"You would not suppose that Vallingham Hall concealed such a spot in its very heart, would you?" Herbert Randal asked, as they stepped into the court.

"No; it is an enigma to me even now."

"Where you have been tonight is a portion of the original buildings. The chapel and the Hall have been built around this square, and, as you perceive, there are no windows overlooking the place, which was once used as a burial ground, although nearly all evidences of that have disappeared."

"Take care!" he cried, as she stumbled and nearly fell over a grave; "I did not think we were so near that. It seems strange that it should remain when all the others have disappeared."

He halted for her, for her sudden fall, the weird place, together with the night of excitement made her so weak and trembling that she could scarcely walk.

"Are you hurt?" he asked, pityingly.

She shook her head and tried to smile courageously, but he saw that her lips were white and quivering.

It was beginning to be light overhead, but hemmed in by those towering walls, the place, with its deep-tangled grass, and damp, moldy smell, was fearfully gloomy and ghostly, while her guide, with his misshapen form, and his white waving hair and haggard face, rendered more ghastly still the flickering, uncertain light of the candle which he bore, made it seem like some haunted spot in which restless spirits roamed at will.

When they reached the chapel there was another grating to be removed, another window, from which nearly every pane of glass had disappeared, to be opened, and they came to another flight of stone steps.

These they descended cautiously, for they were becoming loosened from their place, and were falling to ruin, and soon found themselves in a vaulted cavern, dismal and gloomy enough for the dwelling-place of the dead.

The candle flickered and flared, giving an uncertain light, but Brownie could see the mutilated shelves which were ranged along the side, each containing a silent occupant, in its moldy, worm-eaten coffin.

A gasp of fear told young Randal something of what his companion was suffering.

He halted at the foot of the steps, and said regretfully:

"Miss Douglas, nothing but necessity would ever compel me to bring a delicate lady into such a dreadful place; and now, if I can only persuade you to put your hand upon my arm, and close your eyes, I will guide you safely through this vault, and you need never realize what is in it."

She laid her hand lightly upon his arm and he thrilled at the touch.

It was a new and strange experience for the lonely boy, and one which he long lived upon in remembrance.

The abode of the dead was soon traversed and they came to still another flight of steps.

Herbert Randal, mounting them first, lifted a trapdoor, and setting his candle down, reached his hand to Brownie, and in another moment she was standing safe, but nearly exhausted, within the altar of the chapel.

The young man made her sit down and rest while he talked cheerfully and interestingly of the place, hoping thus to turn her mind from the horrors through which they had just passed.

After a while he arose, crossed the chancel, and led the way to a small side door, whose key was in the lock.

This he turned and pushed the door open, letting in the fresh breath of morning.

The relief which Brownie experienced was expressed by a long-drawn sigh, and, looking up into her companion's face, she smiled a wan, faint smile, as she said:

"I fear you will think me very cowardly, but indeed my nerves were nearly unstrung by excitement and anxiety before this last experience."

"Do not speak of it; I am sure you have borne it bravely. And now, if you will follow that path," he added, pointing it out to her, "it will lead you directly through this grove, around to the front of the Hall, where I think you will find no difficulty now in entering."

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 7.)

This Department is conducted solely for the use of COMFORT sisters, whereby they may give expression to their ideas relative to the home and home surroundings, and to all matters pertaining to themselves and families; as well as opening a way for personal correspondence between each other.

Our object is to extend a helping hand to COMFORT subscribers; to become coworkers with all who seek friendship, encouragement, sympathy or assistance through the interchange of ideas.

Any abuse of this privilege, such as inviting correspondence for the purpose of offering an article for sale, or undertaking to charge a sum of money for ideas, recipes or information mentioned in any letter appearing in this department, if reported, will result in the offender being denied the use of these columns.

Do not ask us to publish letters requesting money contributions or donations of any sort. Much as we sympathize with the suffering and unfortunate, it is impossible to do this as we would be flooded with similar requests.

Please write only on one side of the paper, and recipes on a separate sheet.

Always give your correct and full name and address, very plainly written; otherwise your letter will receive no attention.

Address MRS. WHEELER WILKINSON, CARE COMFORT, AUGUSTA, MAINE.

OLIVER Goldsmith never would have said, "Man wants but little here below," if he could have read the letters describing their Ideal Wife, that the men have written to the Sisters' Corner.

Here are a few of the requirements:
Petite, etherial widow, whose husband was hanged.
Good form, freckles and red hair.
A flapper.
A non-flapper.
Knowledge of fishing, hunting and swimming.
Good cook and sense of humor.
Good family.
Buxom.
Ability to shoot a rifle and slip through the mountains like a cat.
Interested in medicine.
A Christian.
A Presbyterian and have read the Bible.
A musician.

There are a great many more, so many, in fact, that not all the letters can be printed for which we are sorry, but we are glad that so many men read the sisters' letters and letters from them would be welcome at any time on any subject.

This discussion of Ideal Husbands and Wives was intended in the abstract and not, as so many seemed to think, in the nature of a Matrimonial Agency.

Without a doubt, there will be romances follow these letters, and while COMFORT will rejoice at any that culminate happily, it assumes no responsibility for those that terminate unfortunately. We like to think that every reader of COMFORT is honest, but do not blame us if you find one that isn't. Use discretion in writing to any stranger, regardless of where you get the name and address, and it isn't a bad idea to use discretion when writing to friends.

Here's to the men!—Ed.

MUNCY, R. R. 6, PA.

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Will you allow me to come in and discuss the "Ideal Wife and Husband" subject a while with you? Thanks I won't stay very long.

In the first place, I believe that women should not expect more of their husbands than they are willing to give, themselves. By this, I mean, they should not demand a husband better than they are. In my opinion, marriage should be an equal partnership, each sharing equally in everything. In fact—if they live up to the marriage vow, they will be doing just this.

I think Mrs. B.'s letter in July COMFORT was a good example of broad-minded observations. And I'll wager that she and her husband get along all right.

Now for my ideal of a wife. In the first place, she must be a respectable woman, who is willing to help make a home. (I do not merely want a place to stay). She must be willing to rear children, although I believe that the number of children should depend largely upon the financial possibilities of the family. Personally, I wouldn't want a large family. But of course, everyone to their own ideas on this subject. My ideal wife should be a good cook, and neat in her appearance at all times, not given too much to cosmetics, or in other words, just a common woman with good sense. She need not be of high society, but of good moral character.

To those who picture such high ideals, I want to say that I fear that if they wait till they find one that comes up to those ideals, they'll probably have to wait a long time. Possibly stay single all their lives. However, better this than an ill-mated marriage. I think a couple contemplating marriage, should understand each other fully, before marriage. Little hidden faults found out after marriage, often are the cause of an inharmonious married life. I do not desire my wife to be perfect and it would not be fair to expect her to be perfect, for I am far from being perfect myself. And above all, she must be jolly and good natured, for otherwise, we would be sure to disagree. I would like her to be attractive looking, although not necessarily pretty.

Taking it altogether, I think the average man, appreciates a woman who is a good companion at all times, kind, loving and thoughtful. And I think the man should measure up to these requirements, himself, if he expects to have a happy married life.

A Steady Reader of COMFORT.

AUGUSTUS H. TRICK.

STATESVILLE, N C

TO SISTERS:

As a bachelor I have followed your discussions of your Ideal Husband with much interest and keen enjoyment and I am delighted to see so many hold such high ideals. If all our women and girls had the high ideals expressed by some in the Sisters' Corner and would put them into practice by refusing to keep company with men who did not measure up to their ideals I believe we would soon note a marked improvement in the standard of our manhood.

Mrs. W. says one whole issue of the Sisters' Corner will be given over to the men in which to tell of their Ideal Wife and I am going to discuss some of the things my ideal wife should possess, though I am sure I will not be able to give full expression to my ideals.

The first requirement in my Ideal Wife is love. She must love me as deeply and truly as I will love her for I believe that upon this one requirement is based the foundation for congeniality and a true sense of happiness in married life. My Ideal Wife is broad-minded and intellectually inclined, congenial, sympathetic and always understands in any situation. She has courage, wisdom and patience, a sense of humor and always proves to be bigger and better than is expected of her. She is kind and generous and has a sweet disposition, lots of temper but is always able to control it under any situation. In short, she is a woman above petty things and one who brings out the best there is in me.

Morally she is above reproach. I do not think that size or type is essential to a happy married life, though my ideal woman is of small or medium size; a well-developed figure and is inclined to the brunette type. Naturally I would like for her to be attractive of feature but you know the saying, "Beauty is as beauty does" and I think that beauty of character and disposition is far more to be desired than beauty of feature. She is neither bold nor of the clinging-vine type, but rather, she fills the "happy medium" between these extremes. She is full of life and takes a keen pleasure in life and its many amusements, yet she does not put any of these pleasures before her home, children and duites as a wife and mother. She is a deep lover of music and nature, is optimistic and meets life with a smile.

These are only a few of the qualities necesaary in an ideal wife and I have not mentioned the kindred subjects which can be discussed in connection with this subject. Perhaps I may do so later. But I wonder how many will agree with me in what I have said. If anyone wants to write to me I'll be glad to have their letters but I am not making any promise as to how many I will answer as this will depend upon circumstances at that time. With best wishes to all, I am

Cordially, CLARENCE E. BEAM.

WEST VIRGINIA.

DEAR EDITOR:

I am glad you have let down the bars so that we men can get a word in, in self defense, I for one never did believe the women had a right to "shoot" at us from behind a wall like they have been doing, so please accept my thanks for this one chance, and if I don't get my money's worth it will not be your fault.

Regarding the discussion of the "Ideal Husband" some of the sisters certainly have a great idea of a man, but it is dollars to doughnuts that if they had their own ideal in trousers, that they would soon spoil him, because I know that a woman can make, or break a man almost at will and more good men are ruined,—as husbands—by peevish, nagging women than by all the other influences combined including intoxicating liquors.

Now for the other side of the discussion, we have some ideals also.

My ideal of a wife is, (1) a Christian, as to church membership that is not important, but she must be trying to live right. (2) A mother, in every sense of the word. (3) Love husband above all things earthly.

Personally I have done, and still do lots of traveling, and am in all kinds of homes and I have studied the home life of people of all classes, in the past few years, and I am still looking for the ideal home, I have not found it.

One home in particular, I have in mind. All of the family belong to the same church that I do, and I have been a frequent and welcome guest in their home for years. I thought that home ideal, husband loves wife, wife loves husband, and both love the children, but just a few days ago I saw an example of pettishness on the part of that wife that dashed my ideal to pieces, and spoiled my confidence in another woman.

I will have to say for some of the women and girls that have expressed their ideal, that I most heartily agree with them in some points, that is regarding liquor and tobacco, don't let any man make you believe that he can't quit either of these vile habits, for he can do it, and if he has not love enough for you to do so at your request,—and you are not already tied to him—take my advice and let him go, for he will only make you miserable.

In regard to quitting these habits I speak from experience. I have been intoxicated for weeks at a time, and used tobacco in all its forms, and I quit both, not at the request of a woman however, but for the sake of the lowly Nazerine.

And listen girls, do you know you have it in your power to stamp out this curse of curses, cigarettes. If the girls would only refuse to have anything to do with the boys who smoke them, they would soon be a memory instead of a menace.

In conclusion let me say girls stick to your ideal till you find him, then keep him that way, and you wives that have not your ideal, start making him, out of the man you have.

Here is a recipe that has my guarantee to do the job but it may take some time to do it, depending on how long the case has been running.

First, never nag, nagging is just exactly like oil added to a fire—makes a bad matter worse—and never brings any good results.

Second, keep neat and sweet, if a man comes home tired and hungry after a hard day's work, he likes to meet a neat, smiling woman, and if he knows there is such a welcome waiting for him it helps shorten the hours of toil, and makes life seem a little more worth the living; but if on the other hand he has a grouchy, nagging, dirty wife, what attraction has home for him, so girls while you are fixing a standard for men why not set one for yourself and then try to live up to it, and above all never think of going into a home of your own until you can take Jesus in it with you, or it will in some ways—at least—be a failure, for nothing is worse in the homelife than a vulgar, profanewom an, not meaning that all women who are not Christians are vulgar and profane, but a number of them are or become so.

With best wishes to all, JUST A. MAN.

Just A Man.—Do you think it fair to condemn a woman because of one example of pettishness? Otherwise, I like your letter.—Ed.

NEWPORT, R. R. 4., TENN.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND FRIENDS:

It is very kind of you to give us a chance to tell what our "Ideal Girl" is like. I am sure that I appreciate the opportunity to try and give you a pen-picture of that dream girl o' mine.

But say! Let's you and I get acquainted first. I want you to really know me; then maybe you can feel that what I say is sincere—straight from the heart. I am not perfect—not by any means! But I do wish you to know I'd like to be. It is my sincere desire to do the right thing always; because I know God is just; and—"We'll reap exactly as we sow."

When I look back over the past I can see many, many mistakes. Yet there are no scars because of 'em; which I must carry with me to the grave. Boys have laughed at me because I wouldn't be a "regular fellow"; but I ask you, Does it pay? Will the magic words of preacher convert your "wild oats" into good seed and bring happiness in married life? I should think not! If it were so I would certainly do things which, otherwise, I won't.

Frankly, I don't ever expect to meet "My Ideal Girl"—unless I, at least, try to be worthy of her. So it is my wish to be what God, my mother, and the best girl in the world would have me be. Of course I can't reach such ideals—but dear friends, I'm really trying.

Let me take you back to the past a few moments; then we will get out in the future with the girl. I am just a great big brown-eyed boy. ('Way back when I was little, a very dear old lady often spoke of me as "the boy with such pretty brown eyes", and I wondered, even then, if—someday—a girl would think 'em pretty too.) More than anyone else, I must thank mother for my good luck in avoiding the evil habits which boys so easily learn. I don't smoke. Didn't even learn in Uncle Sam's Army where he gives his boys cigarettes. Neither do I drink or swear. Oh, I wanted to be big and strong. That's why I didn't learn to smoke. I am six feet, two inches tall and weigh 195 pounds.

Honest! Girls, can you really mean that, in your visions of a happy married life, you see a "Morris chair and pipe"? That either eliminates me—the husband—or, I can "see" my head in your lap during the "after effects."

The girl I would like to love and marry possesses that God-given wisdom which enables her to discern the worth-while things in life. She ignores mere trifles and considers obstacles along life's pathway merely as something to be overcome. She believes in the infinite goodness of God and has sublime faith in the ultimate victory of right over wrong.

I want a girl who is so pure and womanly she would scorn the thought of sacrificing her character and good name for even a King's ransom. One who could endure the nervous strain, temptation, and fame of a "movie" star—and still be a pure, noble woman. In other words, her intense desire for love and a happy married life must be greater than anything else. The vivid picture of a happy home and children must be so strong in her mind that she will forsake temporary pleasures and go on being true to her "Ideal Lover."

Wonder how many will write—wishing me luck in finding such a girl. I just wish I could get a letter from every "single" one of you.

Your Tennessee Friend, LUTHER HUFF.

Luther.—If I had a daughter of marriageable age I would want her to marry a boy of your ideals.
—Ed.

ILLINOIS.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

"Couldn't get what I wanted and the devil wouldn't have what I could get," sums up the secret of the single blessedness (?) of more myriad human beings than all other reasons put together. Certainly it has been the bar to my matrimonial inclinations and aspirations and still holds me in its handicap.

And what were the qualities of the wife of my early dreams?

Pretty, petite, dressy, educated, refined, etherial, feeding upon manna and sipping dewdrops, angelic and loving, untouched with the censual and voluptuous—an Undine incarnate.

Forty years of close association with my school girls as well as their "bigger" sisters, have convinced me "there hain't any sich critter" and it's well there isn't. Girls and women, for the most part, are only their fathers and brothers in petticoats, sometimes with a little veneer of refinement and feminine deceit.

With the gas of my youthful balloon let out and my "up-in-airness" well settled earthward, what are my wifely requirements today?

Simply, fair looker and dresser of course, some refinement and accomplishments,—mostly a healthy, good-natured woman, maid or widow, unincumbered; middle aged, good housekeeper and homemaker, country trained, still rather petite and with the grace and spirit of the good Lord Jesus within her heart, guiding and inspiring her every walk and talk.

If a widow, besides not being incumbered, I very much prefer that her first husband was hung or at

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 20.)

Comfort Sisters' Recipes

HARRIET C. Allen, 805 E. B'way, Louisville, Kentucky, wins the Sisters' Pin for October with her recipe for Swiss Steak. The prize-winning recipe is the one that gives the exact proportions and easiest and best way of combining the various ingredients used. Don't say "a little" of this and "just enough" of something else, else you'll never win a prize.—Ed.

SWISS STEAK.—Beat one cup of flour into a four-pound rump or shoulder steak, using the edge of a heavy saucer. Sear the meat on both sides in hot skillet, using four tablespoons of lard. Place in roaster and add three pints of hot water, one small can of tomato pulp, three onions sliced, one garlic button, and salt and pepper. Coves closely and bake slowly for two hours. For a change, one cup of celery or one cup of carrots, diced, can be added. Potatoes may be baked in with the meat, adding them one-half hour before serving.

Harriet C. Allen, Louisville, 805 East B'way, Ky.

CANNED FOWL.—In answer to the one who, in "COMFORT Sisters' Corner" requested the way to can chicken, I will give my method which will, perhaps answer if none better is given. For one medium-sized bird one pint can or two half-pint cans well sterilized will be needed. Cook the fowl, salted as for your table, in your boiler or kettle until well cooked, then remove to a platter and separate all meat from the bones and pack into the jar until it is full lacking one-half inch, then put in water from the boiler until jar is full. Put on new, good rubber ring and cap with one wire snapped in place on top of can. Now place jar in boiler of warm water with water covering jar and boil three hours. Do not let jar touch bottom of boiler. A few iron spikes will answer in bottom of boiler. Put other jars around meat jar to keep it upright, or a wire rack is better. After boiling three hours fasten top on permanently and set aside to cool and to test for leaks. Set jar, bottom side up and after cooling put away in a dark place. I have canned all kinds of meat this way and have never failed to succeed.

Mrs. Will P. Winslow, Oakland, R. R. 35, Me.

POACHED EGGS ON VEGETABLE HASH.—This is a dish that takes care of many small left-overs that might otherwise be wasted. Asparagus, carrots, beets, turnips, potato, cabbage, left-over cereal and rice can all be used in making delicious hash. Avoid using much fat. A good gravy or a little left-over white sauce makes the best moistening. The addition of fresh boiled potato is an improvement to any vegetable hash. Shape the hash into individual servings and fry, or bake in a hot oven. Lay on a hot serving plate, and place a poached egg on each.

POACHED EGGS ON VEGETABLE HASH.

POACHED EGGS.—Have water boiling in a frying pan, adding two teaspoons of salt to the quart. Break each egg separately into a saucer and slip into the water. The water should not boil again after the eggs are put in as it tends to separate the thin edges of white from the egg. Very gently push the eggs from the bottom to prevent their catching on.

SUGAR CURED PORK.—After the meat is thoroughly cooled, rub each piece with salt, or make a weak brine and let the meat remain in it three or four days. Drain and pack meat in barrel with hams and shoulders in the bottom, using strips of bacon to fill in sides or put on top. For each one hundred pounds allow eight pounds of salt, two pounds of dark brown sugar, and two ounces of saltpeter. Dissolve all in four gallons of water and pour over the meat. Bacon strips should remain in this for four or six weeks and hams and shoulders six to eight weeks. Then drain and smoke. If bugs ever bother smoked meat, mix borax and black pepper together and rub over meat.

Mrs. Hazel Wervee, Rushville, R. R. 6, Ind.

CANNED BEEF OR VEAL.—Cut meat in pieces small enough to go into glass fruit jars. Fill quart jars one-half full of meat, then add one teaspoon of salt and one-half teaspoon of pepper and finish filling jar with meat. Place rubbers on jars and turn lids down tight then unscrew lids one turn. Use old rubbers on jars while boiling as the boiling ruins the rubbers. Place jars on a rack in a boiler. Fill boiler with water to within an inch of top of jars. Bring to a boil and let boil three hours, adding more boiling water as it is needed Now take jars out, one at a time, and put on new rubbers, which have been dipped in hot water, and seal as you would fruit. When ready to use, empty meat into a pan and warm. I use the broth for gravy and we are very fond of the meat.

Mrs. A. C. Willis, Lindsay, Calif.

CANNED PORK.—Fill glass fruit jars with mostly lean meat. Use the fat for lard. I seldom put in bones unless to be used soon. Add one level tablespoon salt to quart jar. Put rubbers and lids on but do not screw perfectly tight. Put board or something in bottom of boiler, put cans in and fill to top of cans with cold water. Let come to boil and boil four hours. Lift from boiler while hot and screw air tight, using new rubbers. This will keep indefinitely.

Mrs. J. T. Jones, Glendora, Calif.

THE DELICIOUS PEACH.—Take two or three large peaches, yellow ones, fair and smooth, for each guest whom you expect to serve. Place them in a vessel and pour very hot water upon them until they are entirely covered. Let them remain in the scalding water half or three-quarters of a minute and then pour a covering of cold water upon them and add a lump of ice as large as a cocoanut. After they have stood in the cooling bath ten or fifteen minutes, lift them out one by one and remove the skin which can be done with surprising ease by starting it with a knife and pulling it gently with the fingers as one does in peeling tomatoes after a similar treatment. When the skins are removed put the peaches into a large earthern dish being careful to pile them on top of one another, as little as possible and place the dish in the refrigerator. Ten minutes before it is time to serve them lift them carefully one at a time into a large dish, a cut glass salad bowl answers the purpose nicely, and cover them with finely chopped ice. At the table the hostess is to serve them in flat plates, not in small deep dishes, and for each person there must be a fork and a small fruit knife with which the pits can be removed easily. Served in this way and with fine sugar and a pitcher filled with golden cream, a dish of peaches becomes a luscious melting dream, a dish fit for the gods.

Mrs. Minnie O. Mackintosh, San Diego, 3932 Cleveland Ave., Cal.

TRIPE IN BATTER WITH DRESSED POTATOES.—Cut tripe into serving pieces. If pickled, wash and cover with boiling water and allow it to cook very slowly on the back of stove. Boiling is liable to toughen the tripe. It should cook about twenty minutes. Drain and cover with skim-milk, bring to the boiling point, drain and wipe dry. Season melted butter with pepper and salt, brush it over both sides of the tripe and then dip in batter. Quickly fry in deep fat.

TRIPE IN BATTER WITH DRESSED POTATOES.

BATTER.—Beat one egg with one-third cup of milk and mix with one cup of sifted flour sifted twice again with one third teaspoon of salt and two scant teaspoons of baking powder.

If the tripe is fresh, wipe clean and broil over coals. Spread with melted butter, and sprinkle with salt and a little pepper, or it may be served with tomato sauce.

Boil potatoes, cut into eighths, dress with melted butter, salt, a little scraped onion and heat in a hot oven.

Edison's

Diamond Amberola

YOUR opportunity to have good music—real music—in your home, music unmarred by scratching or surface noises. The Diamond Stylus of the Edison Amberola banishes all mechanical noises. You hear nothing but the music. There are no needles to change.

A cabinet phonograph [without horn] in an artistic case of period design.

$1.00 Down

Yes, we will send you the New Edison Amberola for only $1.00 down. Think of it! Such easy terms for the phonograph invented by the world's greatest genius. Send the coupon now for catalog and full particulars.

You may hear in your own home, on this great liberal offer, the wonderfully life-like music created only by Mr. Edison's Diamond Stylus reproducer on the indestructible Blue Amberol Records. Entertain your family and friends with the latest song hits, with your favorite old-time melodies—with everything from Grand Opera to Vaudeville.

Read and understand this truly great offer we are making you. See how you can try Mr. Edison's great instrument on the most liberal offer made on any phonograph. If, after trial, you decide to keep Mr. Edison's superb new instrument, pay the small balance on the easiest kind of monthly payments.

FREE!

Just send your name on a postal or letter for big catalog, or merely the coupon is enough. No obligation. Find out about Mr. Edison's great new phonograph. Get full details—while offer lasts. Don't delay. Write today—NOW!

F. K. Babson
Edison Phonograph Distributors
19th St. and Marshall Blvd., Chicago, Ill.
Canadian Office: 62 Albert St., Winnipeg, Man.

To F. K. Babson, Edison Phonograph Distributors
19th St. and Marshall Blvd., Dept. 37-07 Chicago
Gentlemen: Please send me your New Edison Catalog and full particulars of your trial offer on the new model Edison Amberola.

Name .....

Address .....

.....

A FORGOTTEN LOVE

By Adelaide Stirling

Copyright, 1849, by Street and Smith.
Serial rights by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

CHAPTER XXXI.

THE LAST CHANCE GOES!

There are queer lives in London, and Annie Sloane's was one of the queerest.

She was on the music-hall stage, where she did surprising feats that were half-strength, half-trick. But she cared nothing for her profession, and had not a friend in the world but the furtive-mannered man she was talking to. And him she loved with all her soul, though he sometimes disappeared from her ken for months.

He would have pulled her back now as she made a quick movement to the girl lying on the pavement.

"Don't go near her, Annie!"—he had turned with disgust from the blistered hands, the bare and dreadful feet. "She's only some drunken beast, and she's all over erysipelas, or something."

"Don't talk rot!" There was scorn in the way she turned on him. "Don't you see she's been burned?"

"Burned, is she?" He sauntered toward the woman, who was on her knees by the pitiful thing that had been Jacky Hamilton. "Well, she's come by it honestly, I'll bet! But I'll call a policeman to send her to the hospital, if you like."

"Hospital!" She had turned the girl's face to the light (but he did not see it, having turned away to light his pipe) and something in the wanness of it cut at her heart, for she was country-bred and not yet callous to the cruelty of a great city. "I've seen hospitals," she went on, almost fiercely; "I know what they're like—and I'll give any other woman a chance to speak her mind before I send her to one. This girl's no tough, either! Can't you see she's only a kid? Get out of my way!" imperiously; "I'm going to carry her into the house."

As if the weight of an unconscious girl was nothing, the woman had caught her up, moving with her burden as easily as a man, Jacky's face hidden on her strong shoulder. She was not the "Feminine Hercules" of cheap music-halls for nothing.

"Lord knows what mess she'll get you into!" the man remarked; but he moved as he was told.

"I'll do what I like," she said viciously; "I'm not your wife yet, Tom Smith! Do you think because I do turns at the halls I'm not a woman with a heart in my breast? Don't you dare go and tell no police about her, either, for it's none of your business!"

She swept past him bearing Jacky like a baby, her unrolled hair hanging in a golden flood, and disappeared into the house. The man glanced about him nervously and slipped away out of the little court behind the house Lesard had found so convenient.

A sudden commotion in the street in front of that empty residence was inaudible in the untidy bedroom of the Feminine Hercules. She never dreamt the fire-engines were extinguishing within a stone's throw the very flames that had burned her protegee.

It was a mystery, like half the fires of a great city, and amounted to nothing. Sir Charles Vivian, driving by in a hansom in that frantic search for Jacky, which was his only way of serving Gillian hardly noticed the smoke from the shabby roof, or dreamed the girl he sought was nearer to him than for many a day. And Jacky Hamilton, her errand all undone, her freedom a mockery, knew as little that behind one block of houses the man was passing who could have finished her work for her.

Of a truth, the Feminine Hercules was thinking little of the outside world as she laid the girl she had rescued on her own bed. There was a kind of passion in the eyes that had been so hard. She had had a little sister once who had been hurt in the streets and taken to a hospital. The woman's lips quivered as she remembered that Polly had died calling for the sister the nurse had never sent for. And something in this girl's face reminded her of the other who was dead.

"It's for Polly's sake," she said, dashing the tears from her eyes; "perhaps where she is she'll know I haven't forgotten her! But there weren't no need to tell Tom Smith that," with unconscious cynicism, beginning to cover the scarred and blistered skin with her best cold-cream.

Jacky moved sharply as her strange nurse anointed and bandaged her burns, but when they were covered from the air she lay quiet, never moving as the woman washed the smoke from her pale face and reddened eyes. But they opened suddenly as the woman put her into bed. Bloodshot, anxious, pitiful, they gazed at the woman, and their look wrung her queer, kind heart.

"Bide still, my pretty," she coaxed; "you're with friends. I'll take care of you. Yes, yes," as the girl muttered something about going, "you'll go in a minute; just you drink this first."

Something cool and bitter in her parched mouth, a soft pillow under her head, and Jacky Hamilton sank into a dreamless sleep. The dose of laudanum Annie Sloane kept for toothache had done its work well, and, half-dead with exhaustion, Jacky slept painlessly. For days she only woke to drink some milk and drop to sleep again, for, by some instinct, the woman kept her drugged.

"There ain't no call for her to suffer with them hands," she observed one day to her friend, Mr. Smith, when they sat in her untidy parlor, pointing to the door of the bedroom in which Jacky lay dozing. "And she's got a bruise on her back to turn you sick. No, you can't see her!"

"I don't want to," the man returned indifferently. He was pale, and carelessly dressed; his hand shook as he lifted the glass of whiskey beside him. "I only want to know when you're going to get rid of her. You've had her a week."

"Well, she don't make any difference to you!"

He looked at her, a handsome, strong animal in her tawdry tea-gown. He had come across her by chance, and her defiant vitality had attracted him. When he was with her he found he forgot things that haunted him night and day, until within the last week. But not even she could keep away the terror that the last two days had brought him, and he looked round the room like a hunted beast before he answered her.

"I want to marry you; I want to get out of this," he said, breathing short through his teeth. "I'm sick of London. I want to clear out and go to America, now—tomorrow! America would suit us," nervously; "think of the money you could make!"

"Money! That's all you think of, I believe," suspiciously, "that's why you're marrying me—because I can support you. And why do you want to get away? Oh, I'm not blind! There's been something queer about you these two days, and I believe you're in some scrape you are scared of. I've seen you watch the door," tossing her angry head. "I've known you've been blind drunk every minute you've been away from me!"

The glass in his hand shattered on the floor.

"My God, Annie! What are you saying?" he had grown ghastly. "How do you know who might hear?" And then he flung himself down at her knees, weak as water.

"Oh!" he cried, "don't you see you're all I've got? Don't speak to me like that! Marry me and come away with me. Can't you see," lying so that it sounded bitter truth, "that it's drink I'm frightened of, that's ruining me? I was a gentleman once. My God, look at me now!"

"Hush, hush!" she said tenderly, and, shrewd as she was, believed him. "I'll marry you, safe enough, if you can swear you love me—that it's not for my money you want me. I always knew you were a gentleman, but I—I'm no lady!"

"You're all I want," he said, with a dry sob, clinging to the strength of her, comforted by her fast-locked arms. "Annie, look here! Marry me today. You're right; I'm blind drunk every minute I'm away from you. Let me stay here, where I feel safe; don't drive me out into the streets again. I tell you I daren't, daren't, leave you!"

There was desperate truth in his voice and she knew it.

"Stay here, if you like," she said simply. "I can sleep with the girl in there, and when she's better I'll marry you. Only let the drink alone, for you're starting at shadows now. It wouldn't take much to give you a go of the horrors."

"Horrors!" he clung to her hands. "Oh, Annie, I'm in hell now! What difference between that and ——" he stopped himself, for she had risen.

"I'll get you some medicine," she said practically; "and you stay here and fight off your hell, as you call it. It's heaven to me to have you here, if you'd like to know," and she hurried to the bedroom door, as if her own words shamed her.

"I've got to go out now," she continued over her shoulder. "I'll just see how that girl is first."

The man threw himself into the chair she had left, a strange look on his face still.

"You won't tell any one I'm here?" he said insistently. "And bring back the papers when you come—all of them."

"All right," she returned carelessly, shutting her bedroom door behind her. But once inside she stopped short.

"Why, you're awake!" she cried. "You're better—at least if you haven't turned feverish."

Her patient for the first time was sitting bolt upright in bed. The coarse whiteness of her borrowed night-gown showed off her milky throat, her gold-colored hair. Only a dark stain under her eyes and a curious flush kept Jacky Hamilton from looking herself again. Annie Sloane laid a hand on her forehead.

"You're not feverish—you're just better!" she said.

"I feel dizzy."

"That's the laudanum I gave you. But you needn't have any more, unless you're in pain."

Jacky shook her head.

"I'm all right—you've been so good to me!" she whispered. "But tell me how long I've been here. Is it long—since that day?"

"Just a day or two," soothingly.

"A day or two! Oh, why didn't you keep me awake and let me bear the pain?" for that day or two might mean anything. "Oh!" with a sudden wildness, "I must go! Give me my clothes. I must go."

"Get up and try," glancing at the clock while she made a hasty toilet for her evening's work.

Jacky, flushing with effort, stood in the middle of the room and caught at a chair suddenly with her bandaged hands as a man's voice called "Annie" from the next room.

"Oh! who's there? Who's that?" she breathed.

"It's no one—just my young man. He won't come in."

"What's his name?" great drops of perspiration were round the girl's mouth.

"Smith. Why?"

"I don't know. He—his voice—reminded me of something." White as ashes, she fell back on the bed, for the man had called again, and his voice was the voice of Brookes, the butler!

Yet it was madness to think it, for how could Brookes be here?

"Shut up, Tom; I'm coming!" shrieked Miss Sloane through the door. "What do you mean he reminds you of?" she demanded.

"Oh, nothing! It's because I'm not well, and he startled me. I must go out, and I can't stand."

"Wait till morning and I'll take you," kindly.

"Oh, will you? Jacky put her face up to the painted one that was near it as the woman stooped to tuck her in bed. "You're so good, and you don't even know who I am! You've never asked me."

"I'll ask in the morning. I can't wait now," and she rushed out, caring very little who the girl was she had taken in for Polly's sake. She would be gone tomorrow, and her name did not matter. She little knew how soon she would be cursing herself that she had not listened to the girl's story, any more than she noticed that she had left ajar the door of the bedroom, where Jacky Hamilton sat in her bed hearing what to her was like the trumpet of the Judgment Day.

"Hurry back," the man was saying," and bring the papers. They're trying Flash Lesard for murder, and it will—amuse me"—thickly—"to read about it."

Lesard! Then it was Brookes. She had not been dreaming. Why was he here, and why was his voice so dreadful when he spoke of the murder? He could have nothing to do with it.

"It was Lesard!" Jacky thought wildly. "But can this man know anything? Why did he say this afternoon that he was frightened to go out?"

Shaking, heedless of the pain it gave her, she got out of bed and huddled on her clothes, leaning against a chair for support. Her stockings were gone, and she dragged a pair of Annie Sloane's over her bandaged feet.

How weak she was, how slow, when any moment he might go away! Yet something prompted her to go over to the dressing-table and smear out the waves of her hair with vaseline till, with that and her pallor, she looked like enough to the Mary James of Hamilton Place; though, even as she did it, she was sure that Brookes—if this were he—could know nothing that would not ruin either her or Lesard—the real Lesard.

She was ghastly as she softly opened the sitting-room door, her eyes all that looked alive in her haggard face.

The man did not see her; he was looking into the street, with his side face toward her.

It was Brookes! The girl caught her breath, and the man turned as if he were shot. She saw plainly that his face was changed as by a miracle; remorse had drawn a finger round the mouth, terror round the eyes.

"You, you!" he cried, and threw out his hands to keep them away. Was this Mary James, or was it only that he had the horrors, as Annie said? "Speak! can't you?" he almost screamed. "That is, if you're flesh and blood," or either she was a phantom of his sodden brain, or the hounds of death were on him. He would die rather than face Lesard in the dock.

"What do you want the papers for?" she said slowly.

"I should think you knew enough about that murder!"

He started back against the wall.

"You did it—you and Lesard!" he cried. "I don't know anything."

"Do you know who I am?" her voice suddenly strong. "I'm Jacky Hamilton; I never was really Mary James—and I mean to save Lesard!"

"Then you'll hang!" The man shook like a leaf.

"Not if you help me. You know——"

Brookes cut her short with an oath that was little less than a shriek.

"I help you? I?" and as if death had touched his elbow, he turned and ran.

Jacky fell back against the doorpost. What had she done? He might have helped her—and now he was gone.

CHAPTER XXXII

FACE TO FACE.

No murder trial for years had caused so great an excitement as that of Gillian Hamilton and Lesard.

The two missing witnesses were not the least mysterious thing about it. What could have become of the butler—the lady's maid, who had been said to be her mistress' sister? The courtroom was hushed as Mrs. Gibbs came on the stand.

With desperation in her eyes, knowing quite well that she lied and Lesard knew it, she identified him as his brother, stubbornly refusing to allow that there were two Lesards. She gave damning evidence, too, against Gillian, letting the absent sister go scot-free, since it was no matter which of them had killed Marchmont so long as one of them paid for it. In her way she was faithful unto death to the man she had loved, for after her cross-examination, she knew quite well that on leaving the court she would be apprehended on that old charge against Mary Gresham and finish her life in prison for starving helpless children. Yet she would bear that cheerfully to see Marchmont's murderer swing.

On the second day of the trial, when the case for the prosecution closed, things looked black enough for Lesard and Gillian. Blacker still when the defense began, and there was no one to support his assertion of an alibi on the night of the murder. His servant was forced to admit his master had been absent from eight in the evening till ten the next morning, and no jury could doubt he had had more than time to get to Hamilton Place and back.

His open statement that it was his brother who had been there, and not he, was knocked to pieces by witness after witness, who swore there was but one Lesard. It seemed that in all London there was no one who knew there were two.

Gillian damaged his cause more than any one, for, in spite of all her lawyers had told her, she could see no difference with her cried-out eyes in this Louis Lesard from the one she had loved. Evidence about that night in the cave she would not give, and that her silence brought her near to being hanged herself she did not care. Jacky must be dead to have deserted her, and no one else mattered. She shut her eyes as she looked up and saw Charles Vivian's haggard face.

The block of stone that held that handprint had been quarried out and brought into court. Gillian never winced as it was shown to be the exact counterpart of her own hand, except for a trifling shortness of the little finger that might have been accident.

And Lesard, who knew Jacky's little finger as a priest knows his prayers, had no mind to speak. They were sure to find Jacky, and that thing would hang her.

A look of rage came in his eyes when Atkins was sworn as a witness for the defense. Was his lawyer mad? Atkins could ruin him.

But Atkins, who would have liked to clear Lesard, only dwelt at great length on two facts—first, that it was nearly certain that the murder was committed in the cellar and not up-stairs, and, second, that the girl who dropped that blood-stained cuff in the tunnel was the girl whose handprint they had seen, and who had committed the murder. Lesard was ghastly when Atkins ceased speaking, yet, oddly enough, the color came back to his face a little as the cross-examination began and the man was forced to admit that it was Lesard who had taken him to the cave; Lesard who had shown him the narrow pathway where he had found the cuff; Lesard's own pencil that he had picked up in the cave and given back to its owner.

Gillian bowed her head in her hands. If she spoke now what good would she do? Only ruin herself and him.

Lesard's lawyer looked grim and worn as he turned over some notes.

"My Lord," he said to the judge, "in common fairness to my client, Miss Hamilton should be allowed to speak to him. She may not be certain that she did not see him in the cave, but she must be if she is confronted with him, be certain that he is not, and never was, her husband."

A hush of expectation fell on the room. What would the judge do?

But the judge's eyes were turned to the door. A girl, lame, with bandaged hands, whose face shone like an angel's, was pushing her way through the crowd, had stopped by Sir Charles Vivian.

"It's I—Jacky!" she said, and her voice rang through the quiet. "Sir Charles, make them take me."

Gillian cried out, and the note of it caught at a man at the heart. For this was Jacky, who might be come in time to die!

Lesard's face grew gray.

Jacky it was. He could not believe his eyes as she was sworn and put on the witness-stand, still knowing that she held in her hand evidence that kept her out of the dock. And as all the long story of Hamilton Place came from Jacky's lips, and the truth tore Mrs. Gibbs's lies to shreds, the latter would have turned and run if she could.

Judge and jury alike held their breath as the whole history of the jewel robberies, the murder, the restoration of the stolen goods, came out.

Lesard, who had been ashy at the thought that his little love had come to accuse herself, grew dark flushed with pride as she told her tale very simply, sparing herself not at all, and ending with the discovery that there were two Lesards and she had taken along taken one brother for the other.

"It was on Tuesday, the tenth of March that I burned my way out of the empty house the other Lesard shut me in," she ended, "the afternoon of the day Gillian was arrested."

Sir Charles Vivian started. Lesard this Lesard had been with him that very day. He pencilled a hasty note to the lawyer for the defense.

"And on that day Mr. Louis Lesard was at Sir Charles Vivian's house and at Hamilton Place," said the lawyer triumphantly. "He missed the eleven o'clock train he was to have taken with Sir Charles, to go to Hamilton Place, and there was no other till three, in which case he could not have reached London till six."

The prosecution objected.

"A man had, according to the witness imprisoned her in an empty house, but who was to prove that it had been a Lesard at all?"

The brilliant color left Jacky's face.

"That is the dreadful part of it," she said slowly. "That woman, Annie Sloane, who took me and was engaged to Brookes, Mr. Marchmont's butler, whom she only knew as Tom Smith.

"Yesterday, the first day I was better, I heard his voice in the next room to hers, where I was lying. When she went out I got up and went in there, and while I was speaking to him he ran out of the house. When she came home she was frightened, for she said not been like himself all day. We were out in the all night looking for him, and this morning she caught her breath as at a dreadful memory, 'as found him.'

"He was at King's College Hospital; he was dying, for he had been run over in the street. When saw me and knew he must die, he made a statement and signed it. He thought I knew more than I and he—oh! I think he was glad to make amends." Her voice rang out sweet and pitiful, even for the man who might have ruined her life.

"But the poor woman who helped me!" She faltered, then with a gesture that was somehow grand, handed a paper to Lesard's lawyer. There was not a sound in the room as he read it aloud to sign from the judge.

"I John Brookes," (it ran—)"being at the point of death, do declare, on my solemn oath, this a true confession, made for no other reason than to wish to die in peace.

"I was ostensibly butler at the house of Paul Marchmont, better known as Jim Adams, burglar. He had taken Hamilton Place as an retired country gentleman in order to rob the neighboring houses, adopting the granddaughter of the former owner in order to get himself entree. There was an organized gang—Billy—— (whose other name I never knew), Victor Lesard, Marchmont and myself. The first two did the robberies, Marchmont and I found out who had jewels worth while stealing.

"I began to suspect Victor Lesard of not playing to play fair, the first thing that made me certain being my discovery that he had a brother of whose name he passed; I saw he could establish us all and clear himself by having his brother incontestable alibis. I watched him, and him entering the cave by the outside passage on night of the murder. I told Marchmont, who down, but I had an accident and fell on the At least, I thought so. I now know that Hamilton, who was in fear for her sister's life me up. But after my fall I got up and quietly after Marchmont. I don't know was so quiet, but I was.

"The tunnel to the cave curved, and in the of the curve I stopped. I had no light. could see Gillian Hamilton in front of the the light from the cave. She was crouched as if she was frightened, and she had her her ears. I could see over her, and I saw mont and Lesard in the cave. They were ing. I heard Lesard boast he had taken the diamonds, and I saw Marchmont throw a him. It cut his shoulder. Lesard turned stabbed him. I saw him fall.

"I saw Lesard go away without looking at but I was afraid to move. I saw Mary whom I now know to have been Jacqueline ton, come out from somewhere and run to mont, trying to stop the blood from his I saw her wash her hands in the stream, the stone, so that I knew afterward how of it was there. I saw both girls leave the the outside way, and then something send me crazy.

"I thought they knew all about the and had gone to tell the police. I ran into past Marchmont, and looked into the we kept the jewels. They were gone—and all. And a rage came over me against mont for letting them go. They were all

"I tore off the handkerchief that the on his breast, and I stabbed him that lay by him—twice. I owed him grudge, for he drove me hard; but then. It was I, and not Victor Lesard, him. He might have bled to death from wound, but no more.

"I felt calm when I had struck him washed my hands and ran to tell the She and I together carried him up-stairs up the blood in the cellar, so that there suspicion that the stolen jewels had been there. She thought Miss Hamilton had No one suspected me but Sir Charles knew nothing.

"When Louis Lesard was arrested for jewels I knew he was not the man who them, though I witnessed against him. cause I was frightened of Victor Lesard truth. But by degrees a terror grew could not rest when I knew an man who was guiltless were arrested I hid myself for fear my nerve should confess if I were summoned as a drank all the time, except when I Sloane, to get Marchmont's face out of My only hope was to marry her and America. I loved her and she friend in the world.

"But going to her house on the got a fright. I was standing house on Chives Court, when who I thought was out of England. plainly, coming out of the back house, at three o'clock in the dow opened on an empty off that. He came through the

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 15.)

HER HUSBAND'S OTHER WIFE

By Emma Garrison Jones

TWO women love Roy Dorringcourt, the one passionately, the other devotedly. He loves both, or thinks he does, and marries both; but neither woman at the time of her marriage knows of the existence of her rival. Under an assumed name he courts and weds his first bride and takes pains to keep this marriage secret, for he is of a wealthy, aristocratic family, while her social status is so far inferior that she mistrusts him even from his first declaration of love. Her passionate nature and consuming love of him despite her suspicion are pitifully manifest in her answer to his proposal of marriage.

"Tell me, Dollie, do you love me?" he whispered, his lips touching her flushed cheeks.

"No, no! you do not mean what you say. You are making sport of me because I am a miller's daughter. You'll go back to your own world and leave me as soon as you're strong enough."

"Ah, Dollie, how cruel you are! I swear I am in dead earnest. I love you with my whole heart—I'll never go and leave you; I'll marry you tomorrow, if you say so."

Dollie lifted her head and looked at him, a passionate glow in her black eyes.

"Do you mean that?" she asked, in a panting whisper.

"Yes, I mean it. Try me and see. Now, tell me if you love me?"

She threw her strong young arms about his neck, and hid her face in his breast.

"Yes, yes, yes—I love you!" she sobbed. "I loved you that day on the river; I shall love you till my dying day."

"Now, I have told you," she added, raising her head and looking at her lover with blazing eyes; "but let me add one word more: I love you so much that if any other woman ever dares to come between us, I'll take her life! Bear that in mind."

"Have no fears, my little sweetheart," he said tenderly; "no other woman will ever come between us; you are my first, and you will be my last love," and at the moment he really meant what he said.

And so they are married secretly by the country parson and for six months live together happily in a little cottage love-nest by the river where they first met by chance, and then——

But what brings their idyllic bliss to a tragic end, how and why he wooes and weds a lovely and confiding woman socially his equal, his first wife's extraordinary avengement, how the second wife bears her tribulations when faced with the appalling fact of his first marriage, how he is pursued and tortured by a relentless Nemesis, and how the Fates finally straighten out this tangled web of life, all can be learned by reading the complete novel which will be run as a serial story in COMFORT.

Don't miss the thrilling first installment in November COMFORT. Make sure by renewing your subscription now, today.

BREAD READY FOR THE OVEN.

By Violet Marsh

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

As bread occupies so prominent a place in the diet, it certainly ought to be well made, well baked and properly cared for. Moreover, any girl or woman who desires to be known as a really good cook, will wish to excel particularly in bread making. Although wheat is the leading bread cereal in this country, housewives have learned that many desirable products may be made from meals and flours of other substances or from a mixture of these with wheat flour. Corn has always been an important bread material in this country, but it is within comparatively recent times that rye, oats, barley, rice, peanuts and soy-beans have been gradually added to the list. The war helped greatly in sharpening our knowledge of bread-making materials with the result that white bread has been considerably displaced by the more nourishing and healthful darker loaves.

PREPARATIONS FOR BREAD-MAKING.

With the routes of the bakers' delivery carts being extended throughout the country, it would sometimes seem as if the art of bread-making in the home might become obsolete, which would be a great mistake, for a good home-made loaf cannot be surpassed in flavor and texture, and it costs much more to buy bread than it does to make it. Three quarts of flour and one quart of skim-milk is the chief cost of three loves of bread and a large tin of rolls if made at home, when if bought from a baker, this amount would at least cost 65 cents.

Because the process of bread making requires so many hours it seems to many as a very laborious task, when as a matter of fact, if one will be painstaking with the first few lots of bread and have the assistance of a bread-mixer, the knack is soon acquired and all ideas of a hard task will disappear in the satisfaction of having golden brown loaves from your own oven.

Good yeast bread is often described as porous or as containing a large number of holes and cells, all of which are of about the same size if well raised and baked. A loaf of bread should be light in weight, considering its size. The loaf as a whole should be elastic, and if pressed out of shape, as it often is when slices are cut from it, should regain its form when the pressure is removed. Bits of bread, if bent a little between the fingers, should show a like springiness.

There is a general idea among dietitians that yeast bread is more wholesome than the baking powder "hot" or "quick" breads. However this may be, it is quite probable that hot breads, because of their freshness and softness, are often swallowed hurriedly and without thorough mastication, so that it is especially important that thorough baking, lightness and porosity should be obtained in their preparation as well as good flavor and appearance. The rapid eating of hot breads is one cause of constipation. Thorough mastocation of bread is important because the process of digestion begins in the mouth. Hot fresh breads contain so much moisture that they quickly form into a soft mass in the mouth, so that it is only by thorough mastication that the digestion juices of the saliva can be properly absorbed. The physician will prescribe toast for the invalid and child because its hardness renders chewing necessary and thus causes a thorough mixing with the saliva.

General Yeast Bread Directions

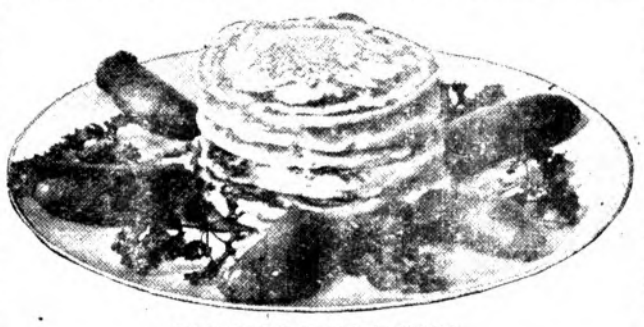
Everything connected with the process of bread making should be scrupulously clean. This is true of all forms of cookery, to be sure, but there is a special reason in the case of bread making. Dirt almost always contains bacteria, and these are likely to produce in dough substances which spoil the flavor of bread. Yeast has no flavor which survives the cooking, and the substances which it produces, carbon dioxid and alcohol are driven off by the heat of the oven. Bacteria on the other hand, are likely to produce sour or rancid substances which are not removed by baking. All utensils, therefore, should be clean; the liquids should be scalded; the dry materials should be kept from the dust; liquid yeast should be kept cold and well covered; the hands should be washed and the nails cleaned before they touch the dough.

A bread-mixer costs little compared to the number of years it will give service, and it is a great asset in making excellent bread with a minimum amount of labor. The ingredients are all put into the mixer at once, the top is adjusted and the handle turned until the dough is smooth and cleaves from the sides. No kneading is required. The cover is then removed so that the dash can be taken out of the dough, then the cover is replaced and a cloth laid over it to keep out the air.

If a mixing bowl is used, the liquid with yeast and other ingredients are put in with about one-half of the flour which is stirred and beaten until it is smooth and cleaves from the spoon. If this is done it saves much kneading as the remainder of flour stirs in without lumping.

Flour must be sound and free from foreign taste and odor. Hard-wheat flours, made from spring wheat or hard winter wheats, are often known as bread flours and usually produce a somewhat larger and more spongy loaf. Soft-wheat flours are made from soft winter wheats and are known as pastry or biscuit flours. They are better adapted than are hard-wheat flours to the making of quick breads, and they require a little less shortening. Somewhat more soft-wheat flour is required to combine with a given volume of liquid than hard-wheat flour, because the latter has a greater water-absorbing capacity. Hard-wheat flour feels slightly granular when rubbed between the fingers. When pressed tightly in the hand, it does not retain the imprint of the fingers very long and when shaken soon falls to powder. Soft-wheat flours are of quite a different consistency, and when rubbed between the fingers feel very soft and smooth and retain the imprint of the fingers when pressed.

Good yeast is necessary to successful bread making. Compressed yeast, if used, should be as fresh as possible and free from any odor other than the well-known yeast odor. It should be fairly soft, but should break easily. It should never be mixed with any liquid which is more than lukewarm. Liquid yeast should always be kept covered in a cool place. It should have a yeasty odor only, and should not be kept more than two weeks without freshening.



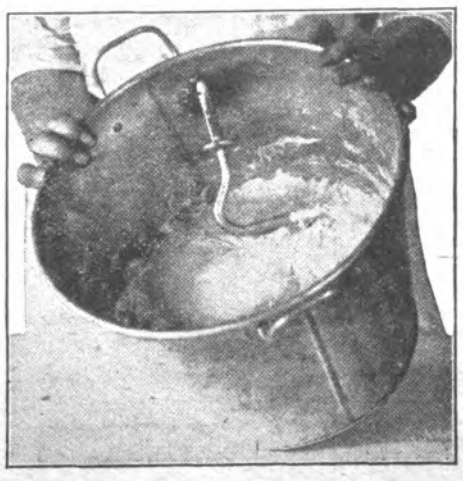
The liquid used in bread making may be whole milk, skim-milk, water, or the water in which pared potatoes have been boiled, or a combination of these liquids. All liquids should be scalded and allowed to cool until lukewarm. The use of milk increases the food value and gives to the loaf a desirable tenderness and richness, besides keeping it moist longer than does water alone. A small amount of potato water, or of mashed potato added to the sponge or dough in bread-making will hasten the fermentation appreciably, and the bread will remain moist longer than ordinarily.

There are two general methods for making bread, one known as the "straight-dough" process and the other as the "sponge" process. In the "straight-dough" process all the ingredients are mixed at one time and the dough is made of the proper consistency before rising. In the "sponge" process only half the total amount of flour is used at first. The mixture is similar to a soft batter and after the first rising the remainder of the flour is added. An overnight sponge must be kept in a cooler place than the straight dough process as it rises much quicker.

Short Process or Straight Dough Bread

Preparations for bread mixing are begun by scalding the liquid in a double boiler. This recipe calls for one quart of milk. If liquid yeast is used, three cups of milk will be sufficient. To the hot milk add four level teaspoons of salt, two tablespoons of sugar and two tablespoons of shortening. Stir and allow to become lukewarm. Add one yeast cake which has been dissolved in half a cup of lukewarm water, or one cup of liquid yeast. Pour into the bread mixer or bowl. Stir in three quarts of sifted flour according to general directions given above.

If mixed in a bowl, turn onto a floured board and knead from five to ten minutes. The bowl should hold three times the bulk of dough or more. Cover and set in a warm place, but not where it will heat. When the dough has risen to twice its bulk, cut it down and let it rise again which will take about one hour. Turn onto a lightly floured board, chop with a knife until all the air bubbles are cut, and then divide into four loaves. Take each part and knead and cut until shaped into smooth loaves, then lay into tins. Spread the top with a little melted butter, cover with a cloth and let the loaves rise until they have a little more than doubled in size. Use as little flour as possible. Many prefer to rub the hands with butter instead of using flour.



FLANNEL-CAKES AND SAUSAGES.

Bake the loaves from 50 to 60 minutes. The oven should be quite hot at first and the loaves begin to brown at the end of the first 15 minutes. Gradually reduce the oven heat. Turn the pans occasionally so that the loaves will bake evenly. After baking, place the loaves across the edges of the pans and cool thoroughly. Bread should be kept in a perfectly clean covered box of tin. If bread becomes damp, or after three days old, it is well to place the loaves in a hot oven on the top grate for a few minutes.

PARKER HOUSE ROLLS.—Have ready a dish of warm melted butter. Instead of making the entire amount of dough into loaves, reserve a part for rolls. Cut off pieces that will shape into rounds about three inches across and about one-third of an inch thick. Shape with buttered fingers. Lightly brush with the melted butter, fold once, and lay in tin about one-half inch apart. Cover and set in a warm place until they have doubled in size. Bake in a hot oven until well browned.

CLOVER LEAVES.—Shape the dough into tiny balls with buttered fingers, brush with warm melted butter and place in muffin tins. Raise and bake the same as rolls.

USING BREAD MIXER.

POTATO BREAD.—(One loaf) One cup of freshly boiled and finely mashed potato, one teaspoon of salt, two teaspoons of butter, one-half tablespoon of sugar, one-half cake of compressed yeast dissolved in four tablespoons of lukewarm water, or four tablespoons of liquid yeast, and about two and one-half cups of sifted flour. Proceed as for straight dough bread.

SOUTH CAROLINA YEAST CORN BREAD.—Mix two cups each of corn meal and flour and add enough warm water to form a stiff batter. Dissolve one yeast cake in a little lukewarm water and beat it into the mixture. Cover and set this sponge in a warm place until light. Scald one quart of meal with boiling water, beat in two cups of freshly boiled and mashed sweet potatoes and two teaspoons of salt, and when the mixture is cooled to lukewarm, add it to the sponge with two quarts of flour. Pumpkin may be used instead of sweet potato. Rise and bake same as straight dough bread.

OAT AND WHEAT BREAD.—Bring one pint of milk to a scald in a double boiler, add one teaspoon of salt, one tablespoon of molasses and two tablespoons of sugar. Stir in one cup of rolled oats and cook twenty minutes. Set to cool and when lukewarm add one yeast cake dissolved in one-half cup of lukewarm water. Thoroughly mix and add one cup of seeded and chopped raisins and three-fourths cup of broken walnut meats. Mix and add two cups of sifted entire wheat flour. Proceed as with straight dough bread.

RYE BREAD.—Scald one quart of milk with one mixing spoon (large) of shortening and four level teaspoons of salt. Cool and add two yeast cakes mixed with one-half cup of lukewarm water and two tablespoons of brown sugar. Beat into this two quarts of sifted flour and set this sponge to rise until it doubles in bulk. Cut down and stir in rye flour until stiff enough to knead which will take about one and one-half quarts. Proceed as with straight-dough bread. Add caraway seed if desired.

PEANUT BREAD.—Stir one cup of peanut meal or flour into each quart of wheat flour and proceed as with straight-dough bread.

RAISIN BREAD.—When mixing bread add three-fourths cup of seeded raisins after one-half of the flour has been stirred in.

FLANNEL CAKES AND SAUSAGES.—Scald two cups of whole sweet milk and gradually add one and one-half cups of fine corn meal mixed with one cup of cold milk. Cook until well thickened. Stir in four even tablespoons of butter, one teaspoon of salt and one tablespoon of sugar and cool to lukewarm. Add one-half yeast cake dissolved in one-third cup of lukewarm water, beat well and set to rise over night. Cut down, drop by spoonful on a hot griddle pan, when full of bubbles, turn and cook on the other side. Do not cook on too hot a griddle. Serve with baked sausages.

Apple Pectin

By making a supply of apple pectin at this time it will be ready to be combined with such fruit juices as strawberry, raspberry, blueberry, peach and other fruits that are deficient in natural pectin.

Apples that are not quite ripe must be used. They must be sound, hard and tart. Wipe the apples and cut crossways into thin slices without paring. The cores and parings contain the greater proportion of pectin. Use five pints of water to four and one-half pounds of apple. Have the fire hot to assure rapid cooking as the quality of pectin depends much on a short period of heating. As soon as the apple is cooked to a pulp, pour it into a jelly bag to drain the same as in jelly making. Measure the juice, pour it into a large shallow kettle or agate pan, cover and quickly bring to a hard boil. Remove the cover and continue boiling until it is reduced to one-fifth of the original amount. Pour into hot sterilized jars while boiling hot and seal.

To use, combine with rich fruit juices, using one cup of pectin to four cups of juice that contains some pectin, or two cups of pectin where the juices contain little or no pectin. Many housewives add a little of the apple pectin to all their jellies so that there shall be no doubt about the success of their product.

Baker's Caracas Sweet Chocolate is a pure, delicious and healthful food. As an addition to school or business lunches or for between meal snacks it is vastly superior to most of the sweets commonly used.

Trade-mark on every package

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

Made only by

Walter Baker & Co. Ltd.

Established 1780

Mills at Dorchester, Mass. and Montreal, Canada

BOOKLET OF CHOICE RECIPES SENT FREE

Brownie's Triumph

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 4.)

"Thank you. And, Mr. Randal, I feel that I owe you a great deal. I trust it will not be long before we shall meet again under happier circumstances," Brownie said, heartily, as she held out her little trembling hand to him.

He took it, while an expression of infinite sadness swept over his face.

"I shall always remember you, and I believe we shall meet again," Brownie said, with quivering lips, and eyes which were swimming in tears.

He bent and touched her hand with his lips, then, with a murmured farewell, he closed the door and went back to his loneliness and desolation, leaving Brownie standing alone in the gray dawn, a strange, deep tenderness in her heart for this poor sufferer, whom God had stricken so heavily.

She leaned wearily against the door and looked about her. She had felt tenfold more dreary than when she had been shut within the cell, for she was still in some doubt as to what was best for her to do, and as to what her reception would be if she should return to the Hall.

She was cold, and weak, and faint, and it was quite a distance around to the front of the hall, but, after a few moments spent in deliberation, she turned into the path leading through the grove.

The morning was cloudy and misty, and within the shadow of the trees, most of which were spruce and pine, the gloom was most oppressive, while the keen air pierced her scant clothing, chilling her through and through.

She had not gone many steps when the crackling of twigs made her start nervously and look around her and her heart stood still with fear as she beheld the figure of a man, enveloped in a long, dark cloak, coming toward her with rapid steps.

She stopped, her heart beating like a trip-hammer, and stepped behind a tree, hoping he had not observed her, and would pass on without noticing her.

Vain hope! The figure quickened his steps, coming directly toward the spot where she stood.

What to do she knew not.

If she attempted to fly he could easily overtake her. If she remained where she was, and harm came to her, no one could hear her cries and come to her aid.

She felt that her strength was failing, the strain had been so great upon her nerves during the last twelve hours that she knew she could not endure much more; but she resolved to meet this new danger as bravely as possible, and, stepping forth from her hiding-place, she went forward with dizzy brain and bated breath.

Another moment and she found herself face to face with her lover, Adrian Dredmond!

CHAPTER XXXIV.

CONSTERNATION OF THE COOLIDGES.

During all those hours so full of adventure to Brownie, Mrs. Coolidge and Isabel had been sleeping heavily, for both had been well-nigh overcome with the excitement of the evening previous, and a sense of their own guilt in the matter of the young companion's disappearance.

They did not wake until quite late the next morning, when Mrs. Coolidge's first act was to order a good hot breakfast, telling the servant that she did not feel able to go down to eat with the family.

As soon as the servant departed, and she was assured that the guests were all assembled in the dining-room, she crept into Isabel's room, and together they sought their prisoner.

They drew the bolt, and pushed the door open cautiously. All was silent and dark within, for the candle had burned down to the socket, and then gone out.

They entered and called Brownie by name.

There was no reply, and with a nameless fear in her heart, Isabel rushed back into her own room, lighted another candle, and returned to explore the cell.

One glance served to show that it was empty!

But with the vain hope that all guilty people have they began turning over the mattress and bedclothes, as if they expected to find her concealed underneath them.

"Where can she be?" gasped Isabel, white as the wrapper which she wore, and shaking as with the ague.

Mrs. Coolidge shook her head, and looked up at the small grated window above them.

She mounted upon the chair, and seizing one of the heavy bars, shook it.

It did not so much as move, and even had it been possible to remove it, their captive could not possibly have reached the window to escape, it was set so high in the wall.

"Isabel, I firmly believe that girl is a witch, for none but a spirit could have escaped from this dungeon!"

"Mamma," exclaimed her daughter, suddenly, "I do not believe you fastened the door last night, and she came out when we were asleep!"

"How foolish you are," was the impatient reply. "I am very sure that I shoved the bolt, and I do not believe it possible that she could have worked upon the door in any way to have slipped it back."

However, to satisfy themselves, they went out, shut and bolted the door, and then tried, by gently working it back and forth, to see if the bolt would slip.

No; it remained firm and tight, and the matter still continued to be a mystery, and a terribly tantalizing one, too.

They tried all the different doors leading from their own rooms into the corridors, but all were locked, excepting the one by which the servant who had brought the breakfast had entered, and Mrs. Coolidge had been obliged to rise to admit her, so that they knew it could not have been possible for Brownie to have escaped that way.

They knew well enough if Brownie had escaped and returned to her post, that the deepest shame and disgrace awaited them.

They little thought, however, during their anxious and almost ludicrous search in the cell, a pair of keen, bright eyes had been earnestly regarding them, while it must be confessed that Herbert Randal never enjoyed anything in his life so much as their anxiety and discomfiture regarding the beautiful maiden whom he had so opportunely aided.

The two disappointed plotters were, however, somewhat reassured, upon descending to the drawing-room, to find that Brownie's disappearance was still the theme of conversation, together with the startling announcement which Adrian Dredmond had made.

Lady Randal looked anxious and annoyed, and was somewhat irritable.

Lady Ruxley was too ill to rise, being overcome with solicitude as to the fate of her companion, a fact which was received with the most cheerful resignation by most of the company, since it relieved them from the sting of her sharp tongue.

Sir Charles was very grave and preoccupied, and while he was not exactly cool, yet there was a certain dignity about him which somewhat awed his betrothed. There were some things which he could not understand, in particular, Adrian's stern words and manner to Mrs. Coolidge, which the more he thought about them the more mysterious and inexplicable they became.

Altogether it was not the happiest company in Christendom that assembled in the Vallingham Hall drawing-room that morning.

Every door that opened made Isabel and her mother quake with fear, and both would gladly have given up every jewel in their possession to have been freed from that horrible suspense.

Several days passed, and still there was no news. Their anxiety began to abate, and with every passing hour they breathed more freely, yet that puzzled, wearing question was ever before them:

"Where is she?"

The drawing-room concert, or musical soiree, came off according to appointment, but did not prove very satisfactory. It was not really a failure, but there was a lack of inspiration which made everything drag, and it was with a uniform sense of relief that at the end of the week the gay company dispersed, while Sir Charles, Lady Randal, Isabel, and her mother departed for Paris, intent upon the all-important trousseau.

The two latter were only too eager to plunge into the pleasures of the gay French metropolis, and busy themselves with the cares which the next few weeks would involve, hoping thus to drive more unpleasant thoughts out of mind.

* * * * * * * * *

When Adrian Dredmond recognized his betrothed in the dim light of that dismal morning, he sprang forward with a cry of joy, mingled with dismay, and folded her close within his arms, while Brownie, utterly overcome by the reaction from excessive fright to a sense of security, and that her troubles were all over, burst into nervous sobbing, and clung to him with a grip so fierce that he was startled.

"My darling, my darling, what does all this mean?" he asked, soothingly.

But she could not tell him; the floodgates were open, and the storm must spend itself ere the calm would come; the restraint which she had imposed upon herself had been so resolute and of such long duration that, now she had once given the rein to her feelings, it was not easy to regain her self-control.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 34.)

Cubby Bear and the Fox Hunt

By Lena B. Ellingwood

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

BUNNY Rabbit threw open the door of Mamma Bruin's house one cold October morning, without stopping to knock.

"Help me bring in my Bunny Babies, quick, Cubby Bear!" he cried.

Cubby, feeling sure that some dreadful danger threatened, rushed out without asking Bunny to explain. Time enough for that later.

Together they brought in the little cart, then shut and barred the door.

"What's all this for?" asked Grandma Bear, as Cubby flew around drawing the shutters and fastening the windows.

"Men—and boys—and guns—and dogs!" Bunny's eyes bulged, and his teeth chattered with fright.

A sharp tap sounded at the door.

Bunny shrieked.

Grandma Bear stepped briskly to the door.

"Who is there?" she asked.

"Shinyblack Crow," came the answer.

"What is the trouble this morning?" asked Grandma, as she opened the door.

"Oh, a terrible time!" answered Shinyblack. "I came to see if you were all safe here."

"Then it is true that——"

Loud voices, shouting—human voices—interrupted Grandma's question. Another sound followed which sent terror to their hearts; the loud, fierce barking of dogs.

A long, reddish streak dashed past, fleeing for its life.

"Oh, it is Foxy Reynard!" cried Cubby Bear.

Following Foxy Reynard, a dog came into view; a lean, savage looking creature, tearing past, eyes staring straight along Foxy's trail.

Shinyblack Crow hastily scrambled in over the doorsill, and the door was closed.

"Foxy has been to the poultry-yard one too many times," he said. "Wise Owl warned him, and now the farmer will stand it no longer, and has started a fox-hunt."

Bang!

They all jumped at the sound of a firing gun.

"Oh, why did Mamma Bruin go out after nuts this woeful day?" questioned Cubby. "I must go and find her!"

"I will go with you!" offered Shinyblack Crow.

They waited a few minutes, until the sounds without had died away, then went forth into the chill air.

"See—how plainly the tracks show on the frosty ground!" said Shinyblack Crow. "They would have no trouble in following Foxy by that, even without the keen scent of the hounds."

Cubby shivered, partly from the cold, but more from fright and misery.

"Oh, I wish we knew where to look for Mamma Bruin!" he moaned.

"We may come across someone who has seen her," Shinyblack Crow said. "I usually see all that is going on, flying around over the forest, but I have thought of little beside the fox-hunt this morning."

"How did you know about it first?" asked Cubby.

"I heard Woozie Weasel scratching and whining at Foxy's door. There was a fresh pile of feathers, and Foxy was inside his den, resting after a night out of doors. 'Come out, come out!' Woozie called to him, 'or you will be trapped here in your own home!'

"Trapped? Not I!' Foxy answered. 'Go away!'

" 'But listen!' Woozie called. 'The farmer is coming, and other men—a crowd! Fox-hounds are with them! I hurried to bring you word. They will soon be here!'

"At that, Foxy hurried out, and away. He will have a race for his life!"

"Where can he go?" asked Cubby.

"Where can he not go? He knows the forests and fields for miles around," answered Shinyblack. "I know something of his tricks. When he is being chased, he runs around in large circles through the woods—which means that he may be soon around this way again, with all the others following; so we must watch, and listen!"

Nowhere did they find Mamma Bruin, nor anyone who had seen her that morning, and poor Cubby felt sick from worry.

"Oh, I hear them—I hear them!" cried Cubby, as a sound of tumult came from the distance, and he covered his ears with his paws.

"To cover—to cover!" called Billy Bluejay's shrill voice, and little animals went scurrying by.

Busy Beaver thrust his head up out of Big Brook.

"If you could only swim under water to come to my lodge," he said, "you could hide there and be perfectly safe. Do you dare to try?"

"There is no need to risk drowning," answered Cubby, "and I am looking for Mamma Bruin."

"Good-by, then! Take care of yourself!" and Busy Beaver disappeared under the water.

"TRAPPED? NOT I!" FOXY ANSWERED. "GO AWAY!"

While Busy Beaver and Cubby Bear talked together, the little fleeing rodents had gone out of sight. The sounds of the hunt drew nearer. Shinyblack Crow, cawing out warnings, rose above the trees on swift wings, and Cubby found himself alone.

Not for long, however, for Foxy Reynard suddenly appeared, seemingly from nowhere. His eyes looked strained and anxious, and his long tongue hung from his open mouth. Seeing Cubby, he jerked out the words,

"Keep—right—behind me, Cubby Bear! They are after us—but I will lead you!" Then he dashed past.

Poor Cubby! He stood dazed for a brief instant, then, terrified, he obeyed Foxy's words, and scampered after his old enemy as fast as his little legs could carry him.

Cubby had thought he knew all the ins and outs of Pleasant Forest, but Foxy led him over a hard trail; in thickets he had never explored before, over rough rocks which hurt his paws, through scratchy underbrush. Sometimes they passed familiar places, sometimes Cubby knew not where he was.

If Foxy was running in a circle, as Shinyblack Crow had said, then the circle was widespread and over a wearisome course!

Cubby's breath came in painful gasps. His legs felt too weak to go further. But he must, he must!

He was headed straight for a great rock, and close beside him, to the right, the ground fell away in a steep bank, sandy and barren below.

Where next?

Foxy had come this way—he was sure of it. But where had Foxy gone? Up over the face of the rock?

Triumphant barking sounded close behind. A dog sprang toward him, snapped at him, and down over the steep bank they rolled together, while the rest of the pack swept by, swerving to the left of the rock, following Foxy's scent.

Cubby lay still for a few moments, then sat up, putting one paw to his head, where a big bump was swelling.

The dog lay on the sand, his eyes closed.

Cubby looked up the steep, high bank, wondering if he could climb up and get away unseen.

"But I could not leave the poor dog like that," he thought.

The dog suddenly opened his eyes, and sprang to his feet.

"Oh, you!" he snapped angrily, at sight of Cubby. "Why did you get in the way, and make me forget my business of fox-hunting? Now I have had a bad fall, and am out of the race, while the others have kept on the scent!"

"I am sorry!" said Cubby meekly. And indeed he looked sorry. He was tired out with the race, and his swollen head was aching. "I was afraid, and I did what Foxy Reynard told me to do!"

"You can't have much sense!" sniffed the disgusted Cubby in disgust. "To do what a fox tells you. Didn't you know he only wanted to get you into the race to be between him and danger! Be thankful a man with a gun did not get near you!"

They started to climb the bank, but it was too steep, and after trying several times, only to fall back, they looked around for a better chance, the dog all the time growling that his master would never never let him take part in a fox-hunt again.

When at last they were out of the sand-pit, they were only too glad to part company—the dog taking up the scent of the trail once more, Cubby starting homeward.

"Home is the place for me to go," he said to himself. "Mamma Bruin can take care of herself better than I. She would never have been fooled enough to get mixed up in the hunt!"

When he reached home at last, what was his joy to find Mamma Bruin, there, safe and sound, and just ready to start out looking for him!

Late that afternoon, Robbie Reddie came tapping at Mamma Bruin's window.

"Good news, good news!" he called cheerily. "Come to Wise Owl's tree and hear about it!"

They all hurried to the place of meeting.

Wise Owl sat in his doorway, and on a dead, broken limb of the tree was Shinyblack Crow, while on the ground stood a crowd of the forest people who had come at Robbie Reddie's call.

"A hard day it has been for us all," said Shinyblack Crow, "and of course everyone wants to know how the fox-hunt ended. I am tired, for I have flown around everywhere, watching to see what happened. The men and dogs divided after a while, in several groups, to drive Foxy out of the forest, into the open fields. He crossed the road and raced across the fields, keeping to the fences and bushes wherever he could. Shots were fired at him, and if I am not much mistaken, he lost the tip of one ear.

"He ran in among a herd of cattle, and started up great excitement among them. Then out into the open he dashed once more, making for the river, where a row of trees edged its bank. Between the trees he dashed, then plunged into the water.

"There were bushes leaning out over the bank further down, and Foxy kept out of sight beneath them while he went down stream a little way. Then he landed once more.

"The water had broken the trail, the hounds had lost the scent, and though they and the men hunted all around, Foxy got away. He did not dare come back home, though, and I waited and watched until I saw him cross the river and go off, miles away, into far-reaching forest land."

"I only hope," said Wise Owl, "we all hope, that Foxy Reynard has gone for good, and that we shall never see his face again here in our Pleasant Forest."

"We do not!" cried an angry voice, and Woozie Weasel suddenly stood among them, his eyes flashing. "He will come back—he must!"

"How happy and how peaceful it would be here," said Racky Coon, "if only Foxy would stay away, and Woozie would go to find him!"

CONTENTS

	Page
Editorial	2
Brownie's Triumph (continued)	4
Comfort Sisters' Corner and Recipes	5
A Forgotten Love (concluded)	6
Home-Made Yeast Bread	7
Cubby Bear and the Fox Hunt	8
Comfort's League of Cousins	9
Little Miss Brown's Harvest	10
Brainograms	10
King Tut-Ank-Hamen's Revenge	12
The Pretty Girls' Club	14
Mother and Baby	16
A Touch of Romany	18
Little Dog Angels	20
The Embroidery Basket	21
Whatsa Creole Is	21
Poultry Farming for Women	22
Novel and Inexpensive Christmas Gifts Fashioned from Ordinary Sealing-Wax	24 & 25
Automobile and Gas Engine Helps	26
The Modern Farmer	27
The Woman With the Hoe	28
Hannah Takes a Hand	31
Home Lawyer	33
Talks with Girls	35
Information Bureau	36
Veterinary Information	37
In Need of a Husband	38
Missing Relatives and Friends	38
Manners and Looks	39
Her First Gray Hair	40
Where Traplines Cross	41
Family Doctor	43
Getting Inside Information	43
Four Wheel Chairs in September	43
Your Family Buttons	45
The Emporium of Bargains and Opportunities	47

All Subscriptions Cut Off At Expiration

All subscriptions will be cut short off on date of expiration, unless the subscriptions are renewed and paid for. Not even one copy will be sent, after expiration, until the subscription is renewed. If the number over your name on the wrapper on this magazine is 420, it means that this is the last copy of COMFORT you will receive until you renew your subscription. DO IT TODAY.

NOVEMBER COMFORT

Our big Anniversary Number for November, with which COMFORT begins its thirty-sixth year of continually improving service to its millions of readers, will contain the first four chapters of our thrilling new serial story "Her Husband's Other Wife." The following are some of the Special Features for November

"Lorrayne Makes Everybody Thankful" An inspiring Thanksgiving romance.

"Training the Little Mothers" Some schools do, and all should, teach health rules, and train the little girls to help care for younger children.

"Mrs. Chipmunk's Thanksgiving Guest" A bedtime story for little folks.

"The Harvest Supper" How to serve at a large gathering. Some Thanksgiving recipes.

"Home-Made Christmas Gifts" Pretty, useful and highly prized as the giver's handiwork.

"The Greatest Thing There Is" Tragic tribulations of an unloved bride struggling to win her husband's love.

"Cubby Bear Hears an Indian Story" Tilly Turtle tells a wonderful Indian adventure of the olden times.

If the number over your name on the wrapper on this magazine is 420 it means that your subscription expires with this present issue and that you will not receive November COMFORT unless you renew your subscription at once—we can not send you a single copy, after expiration, until you have renewed. Don't miss November COMFORT with the thrilling first installment of "Her Husband's Other Wife."

Save money by renewing and extending your subscription two or three years. Use coupon below and do it today.

Please send bills or silver carefully wrapped in paper and securely sealed, or post-office money order. If obliged to send postage-stamps, send two-cent stamps.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES: 50 cents a year, $1.00 for three years, 75 cents for a TWO-YEAR renewal, in U. S. or Cuba. (In Canada 65 cents a year.)

SUBSCRIPTION COUPON FOR RENEWAL OR EXTENSION

Publisher of COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

I enclose ..... cents for renewal and extension of my subscription ..... full years from date of expiration.

Date ..... Name .....

Post Office ..... Street and No. .....

R. F. D. No. ..... Box No. ..... State .....

October, 1923.

Cubby Bear's Book Is Now Ready

Illustrated in Color!

Gift. No. 8871. For One Subscription.

Cubby Bear's own stories in book form!

How this news will please COMFORT'S host of readers who have eagerly read month by month each new story in that series of bright, happy adventures in which Cubby Bear and his forest friends are always interestingly entangled.

Hundreds of Cubby's friends have written him asking him to save a copy of his book. Thousands, yes perhaps half a million, other friends are waiting this good news of the completion of the book.

And Such a Splendid Book!

First in mind has been the selection of the most interesting and entertaining of the Cubby Bear Stories. There's surely as fine a collection of stories as can be assembled between two covers. And to put her own seal of approval on the work, Lena B. Ellingwood, the author and creator of the lovable little characters of the forest world, has written the introduction. This introduction is accompanied by Mrs. Ellingwood's picture.

Every story is illustrated in bright, sparkling colors with one of Harrison Cady's famous animal pictures and every story is printed in type large and clear so that even the youngest reader can pick out every word. The book is printed on fine grade paper and attractively bound in covers that will not easily tear or soil. The cover illustration is also done in colors.

Your copy of this delightful book is ready. Send for it today and perpetuate in the minds of everyone in your home the sterling characteristics that have made Cubby the favorite among millions of readers.

Given To You! If you will send us one subscription (not your own) at 50c we will send you a copy of the Cubby Bear Book free and postpaid. Mention Reward No. 8871.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

LEAGUE RULES: To be a comfort to one's parents. To protect the weak and aged. To be kind to dumb animals. To love our country and protect its flag.

CONDUCTED BY UNCLE LISHA

COMFORT for one year and admittance to the League of Cousins for only 55 cents. Join at once. Everybody welcome.
ADDRESS all letters to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. See Instructions at the close of this Department.

HERE in the great city the peace of October days is hardly to be traced and their beauty is unseen of men. In the parks the leaves already are faded and fallen, having changed only to brownish-yellow and yellowish-brown, they are withered after half life and are dead without glory. The season's haze is swallowed up in the smoke of soft coal and the murk of gasolene and oil. Frosty mornings are memorable only as giving forebodings of the high price of unpurchased coal. October is but a tenth month of a city year—and winter is coming!

This is man's autumn, without hue or ecstasy, but I know that God's colors are hung now on mountain woods. Somewhere the splendor and serenity of the month I love best has arrived. Remembering this, feasting on imagined beauty, I try to take my October vicariously by remembering other autumns when I have not been city-tethered and town-tired. I always feel that in October's serenity, its emanation of peace and quiet strength, Nature is found more than ever to be reflection of that Spirit which is beneath and behind all things of what we call "the visible world." In all races, in all men, where life has not ruined imagination, Nature, for them, has stood thus in spiritual kinship and parenthood. I say "where life has not ruined imagination," for many of us are thus pitifully impoverished and time-crippled. Life enspells us and we early lose dream and vision. The "trailing clouds of glory" are no longer about us; we "become adjusted to our environment," as the modern phrase sadly has it; but somehow this adjusting seems to work differently than the makers of the adjustments plan; the world's machinery goes badly awry and turns out strange products.

Although whatever upward gains man has made—and as yet these are not many—can be said to be but answers to the vision and spiritual insight of men who have dreamed in the past, yet it is the code today to disparage our visioners and mock our mystics. "Give us facts," say the Mr. Gradgrinds and apply for membership in their nearest Rotary Club. It is the sturdy fashion, so long as digestion works well, to believe that man can live by bread alone. Faith in anything unseen is merely a spiritual appendix, with an increasing number of eager surgeons ready to operate—after proper anesthetics have been given. And while the patients are listed as "doing well" and encouraging bulletins are given out, yet the mortality continues to be strangely high!

For I do not mean to tire of telling you here that it is only as we can keep our sense of spiritual reality alive that we can be said to live at all. Otherwise we but walk about, motioning and mouthing for a few years of noise and futility. We need now men in whom all life is one of aspiration and dream, and who are spiritually rich enough to turn this aspiration and these dreams outward in service to the race. By "spiritually rich," I mean that they shall have a vitality of vision, a discernment of values, sufficient to know true ways from false; that they shall be able, by their own vision or by having found kinship with the Spirit of all things, to see beyond the self-seeking which blinds, and make their lives real in the service of all and of One.

The thought of men and nations has turned selfishly inward. As they have visioned only their own success and power, so have their dreams been short and their awakening cruel. Yet they still choose the same dream and their "which of us shall be greatest" becomes not only question but prayer.

We honor routine and build systems; we establish "scientific methods" only to see these become useless before our proud eyes. Then we haste to new routines, to rebuild more elaborate systems, to cast forth discarded "science" and enthrone some "new discovery" so that our boasts of "man's progress," his "conquests of the material world," may go on. No attempt is made but by fools and dreamers to make conquest of the errant soul of man, his quenched spirit, and to link him with the only reality, the only progress which means Life—and Life abundantly.

For man keeps himself spiritually alive by turning his thought outward in love and service to his fellows, and not inward in service of his body and his self. Only as he gives is he given unto. Only as he loves and serves is he at his best. Only as he loves his fellow can he love God. When man orders the world to his own self-conscious, selfish will, we have the individual killing which is murder and the collective slaughter which is war. We have the worship of the intellect whose end is vanity and ashes. We have a man thwarted and distorted by uncontrolled passions and phantoms of self which lead him only to darkness, to disease, to death.

We need to hear less of man's "conquests" over Nature, over savage (?) races, over the poverty, and more of his conquest over self. We need to learn less regarding the latest modes in "discoveries of science" and be taught more concerning the discovery of the spirit which is in man. For there are discoveries, conquests, eternal revealings and uncoverings of what that spirit can do when linked in harmony with the Spirit which is behind our world—which is our world.

Here in this season of Nature's greatest peace, the rest and quiet time of the year, the unrest and discord of all material "conquests" are felt in more appalling contrast. Man's boasted powers are but holding together his self-shattered world, while the nations claw for fragments. Yet our earth and our race are young—eternally young, as young as Spirit. There are signs that tell us we will yet make the last and real conquest, that we will yet turn to something more than dynamos for power, and that greed and gain will not be forever banner and altar. Because these signs and prophecies are as old as the heart of man, they are the more certain to be fulfilled. It is only the waiting which is hard.

Somewhere in mountain valleys I have left behind me there will be the ending of an October day as I write these lines. And over those resting valleys; yes, over this great, noisy, greedy, pulsing city, will fall the peace and strength of that Spirit whose "dwelling is the light of the setting suns" and in the souls of men. To live and move and have our being in that Spirit is to make the strength, the peace and beauty of October ours forever.

And now for the letters:

MONETT, MISSOURI. P. O. BOX 33.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Did you ever notice that the Ozarkian cousins always select a lonesome, rainy, dreary day to write our learned and unappreciated specimens of literary genius to the League Corner? Well, we do. Cousin William Hurley introduced the idea and it has been running rampant ever since. As a proof that the idiosyncrasy still exists, I am disregarding Billy's love for certain types of stationery, and am writing to you today while the dripping trees are bending low before the strength of the wind, and the distant hills are wrapped in an impenetrable mist. Loneliness, thy name is a rainy day in the Ozarks! Imagine if you can a world in which there seems to be no living creature a world which has for its roof a lowering dull gray sky and for its floor a boundless area of drenched green grass, a world which seemingly is inhabited only by lashing, roaring trees—and over all is the rain, falling like a gray veil over hill and valley. Do you wonder that we cousins from this part of the country turn to the Corner for so ace on days of this kind?

For years I have greeted the arrival of each issue of COMFORT with a yelp of joy, and have eagerly devoured the contents of the Cousins' Corner with a "Gee, I wish I could do it" feeling; but I have always stood somewhat in awe of that irrepressible representative of goathood, Billy. But now, after much bolstering up of my courage with the knowledge that he has refrained from dining on other letters from Missouri and might do so again, I have resolved to make a feeble attempt and see what happens.

I won't tell you much about the town of Monett, as I do not wish to speak ill of the dead; but the surrounding country is beautiful. I have seen a great deal of this good old United States, but I have never yet beheld a place that could surpass the Ozark country for picturesque scenery. We have miles of forest, excellent hunting, and an abundance of fish in our clear mountain streams. Roaring River, that famous summer resort, is situated only a few miles from Monett and we are only a short distance north of the original "Shepherd of the Hills" country which Harold Bell Wright has immortalized in his much-read novel. Some of the western cousins have told of their beautiful sunsets, but a sunset in the Ozarks need fear no rival. The sun has always had a queer attraction for me. If I were not a plain, common, everyday Methodist, I think I would be a sun-worshiper!

Boys, don't object too much to the girls' use of kalsomine and paint. If you could see some of them without it, you would realize that it was a blessing in disguise, perhaps, but still a blessing. Personally, I abhor the stuff so thoroughly that nothing under the sun could bribe me to put it on my face. One thing is certain, when a girl starts using that disreputable invention called rouge, there can be but one result; the longer she uses it the more she will have to use—and the more she uses the worse she will look. Figure it out for yourself!

The favorite topic for discussion in all places and all circumstances seems to be the utter hopelessness of the young people of today. Some folks are laboring under the delusion that the present-day young people are mentally, morally and physically inferior to those who inhabited this mundane sphere when they were young! Where this gloomy assortment of pessimists found any foundation for this theory I cannot say; but I would like to tell them in a few concise words just what I think of them. The youngsters of today are not one bit worse than their ancestors were fifty or a hundred years ago. If anything they are better developed mentally and physically, and have a higher moral standard, than the young people of yesteryear. Deny it, you who want to, but it is true; and most people are broad-minded enough to admit it.

In accordance with the ancient custom of the Corner I will describe myself. I am five feet, three inches tall, and weigh 125 pounds. I have a mop of golden-brown hair, blue eyes and a fair complexion. Then, to add insult to injury, I am twenty years old. I do not smoke, swear, or believe in woman suffrage. I am one of those much-discussed (and "cussed") specimens, an only child. I get rather lonesome sometimes, so won't you cousins all write to me? Every blessed one of you? I'm not making any rash promises about answering, but I'll do my best—and that's all anybody can do.

In closing, I want to say that I consider the COMFORT's League of Cousins the greatest organization in the world, bar none. I am more than proud to be a member of this wonderful Family, and I prize my League emblem more highly than any article of jewelry I ever owned. For this matchless organization we have to thank Uncle Charlie, Uncle Lisha and, bad as I hate to admit it, Billy the Goat. Three cheers for all of them!

With all kinds of love and good wishes, I am
Your niece and cousin, IRENE HARMON.

Nope, Irene; I register a decided negative. I have never noticed that the Missouri letters (anyway the last thirty thousand or so) were damp and rain-spotted and dripping with Ozarkian gray and gloom. And in spite of all the lashing, drenched, roaring, dreary adjectives you moistened your letter with, I thought it was a strangely sunny effort after all. Perhaps the sun was shining on the tip of your pen and pink nose all the time you were writing! I remember how Cousin William Hurley fooled us and I'm not as Ozark-trusting as I once was in my early-Uncling days

I'm surely sorry Monett has passed away, Irene. When did it die? It is always a little sad and lonely to live in a dead town—particularly when the undertaking has been badly done and some of the prominent citizens are yet above ground and sitting on cracker boxes. Why don't you move over to Roaring River where there is more noise? You may have read, Irene, of my several-times stated intention of some day settling down in the famous Ozarks with a tame mule or two, a shotgun and a few fishhooks. And so I'm glad to be warned in time about Monett and I shall avoid real estate—or cemetery lots—in that vicinity. I might possibly get along quietly in a dead town, but not Billy. He must have someone always about to listen to him. Anyway when it draws near to election time or a choice of presidential prospects, Bill thinks either Macaulay or Mark Twain would make good presidents, but unfortunately he finds that they are both dead. Just like Monett, Irene!

BIG STONE, KENTUCKY

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS.

I am ten years old, four feet tall, have brown hair and blue eyes. I live on a farm of 150 acres. My father is postmaster at Big Stone and also owns a store. We have four horses which I like to ride. Ruin Creek is close to our house and I go in swimming and can swim on my back. I go fishing every once in a while, but have never caught any big fish. The other day while running a race, the horse stepped on a rock and fell; it did not hurt me, but skinned the horse's head I would like to receive letters from all the cousins.

Your nephew and cousin, PAUL PENNINGTON.

Paul, I'm really, truly sorry to hear that one of your four race horses skinned his eyebrow on a Big Stone so that you could not come under the telegraph wire a winner in this local Kentucky Derby.

It's fine to have a creek, Paul, even only a ruin of one, nearby so one can fool the hot weather by swimming on one's back, front, or even left ear. I like to swim, Paul, and last August I beat a Pennsylvania sunfish by two feet in the finish of a hundred-yard dash.

Maybe the reason you can't catch any big fish, Paul, my boy, is because you do not use the right bait. Did you ever hear of the man who drifted out to sea in an open boat which had, luckily, a hook and line floating in the bottom of it? Well, Paul, history says this man kept himself alive for three weeks by fishing—using his toes for bait! When he was picked up by a coasting schooner, he was just baiting his hook with his sixth toe. So the next time you are swimming on your back in Ruin Creek, Paul, try wiggling your little toes in an appetizing manner. You might get a bite!

FENN, IDAHO

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Tap, tap, tap! May I come in? I am from the Gem of the Mountains. We live on a farm on what is known as Camas Prairie. It is surrounded by mountains on three sides and buttes on one. On the west side the Salmon river runs; on the east side the Clearwater. We can see the Seven Devils which are about seventy-five miles from here. They are always covered with snow. Our mountains have wonderful scenery. My Dad runs the tractor for the boss. Come out in harvest time and I will let you run it.

There are seven of us children: Zelma, aged 14; Muriel, 10; Oscar, 8; Myrtle, 6; Claire, 5; Gene, 4 months, and myself who was 12 on July 19. We older girls do the milking, wash dishes and cut wood for mamma and papa. Also we do other small chores. Mother believes in having us learn to be useful citizens.

I have a pet calf and a cat. I am in the seventh grade at school this term. I am a blonde, five feet, two and one-quarter inches tall, and I weigh 93 pounds. I have blue eyes and I am a throughbred American. I love to read the cousins' letters, also books. I am learning to cook, but not much as yet. Mother takes COMFORT and we all love to read it.

Well, I will close, or else you will get tired of reading this and feed it to Billy. I hope to see my letter in print.

With love to you and all the cousins, I am
Your niece, MILDRED ALICE NELSON.

Come on in, Mildred; don't stop to knock. I should think you would be glad to get away for a while from those Seven Devils. It's good you can keep 'em on the other side of the river and seventy-five miles off. Some people have seven devils after them all the while—and it can't be pleasant—especially in hot weather. That is unless the devils were covered with snow like your cold brand of infernal citizens. Mildred, I do hope those Seven Devils were not named after you seven kids!

I'm not coming out to run your tractor, thanks. I might run it into the Salmon River and get the boss peeved. Once I tried experimentally to run a Brooklyn trolly car. I almost ruined the city police force and sewer system. I am probably the only man and Uncle in the U. S., Mildred Alice, who cannnot run a Ford, and so I might not be good at the wheel of a tractor—which I am sure cannot be half as tractable as a well-broken and well-busted Lizzie.

Mildred, I'm glad you are a thoroughbred American and a blonde. All my nieces believe I favor blondes; they have found it out in some way, so I might as well confess and let the awful fact be known. But anyway all the Nelsons are blondes and always have been—even Lord Nelson. Bill is a brunette, Mildred,—or he was up to the time he dyed his whiskers.

BUENA VISTA, FLORIDA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Well here I am again. While we're having a tropical downpour, I'm going to try to write a few lines. Tent is leaking in a few places, but that's nothing when a fellow gets used to it.

As you see from my address, I am in Florida. Buena Vista is a beautiful little suburb of Miami. And because it is a quiet place, I like it. I arrived down here January 11, after three weeks on the road through mud axle deep in many places.

To give a detailed account of the trip, (which I have all written down in my note book) would take up too much space. Will only relate a couple incidents, and pass on. Near Raleigh, N. C., we stopped for the night, which happened to be "The night before Xmas," because the mud was too deep for night traveling—in fact we could get no farther that night. Well—we wanted some water to drink. I started out to hunt some, went up the road a mile or so, failed to find a house; then went back to the camp. My brother and I started out again, this time through a swamp, following a trail through the woods. We ended up at a deserted cabin at least a mile from NOWHERE, and no water. Then I remembered seeing a house back about a mile the way we had come, so we went back to the camp, and back the road—found the house—nobody at home but a rather vicious dog. I finally made peace with him, and found the well, and we went back. Near Macon, Ga., we had bad luck, tore the rear end out of our car, by towing another tourist along. When we arrived here, they left us and now don't know us and we hauled them from Macon clear down here, after their car had given out—that's the way we got paid for the favor. Well, as I was going to say, we were forced to camp for a whole week, and fix our car.

Of course we didn't allow this to put a damper on our spirits, and we got through O. K. We stopped several times during the trip to take pictures, or to admire the scenery. And once near Camden, S. C., we stopped and helped a lady whose child had fallen and broken its arm. And I must say that ALL of the Southern people that we met, surely used us fine, and if ever I go back over that same route, I will stop and see them, if only for a few minutes at each place. Whether

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 15.)

A Ten-Day Tube is FREE Send the Coupon

No Dingy Film

On the prettier teeth you see everywhere today

Do you realize how many prettier teeth you see in every circle now? And how many smile to show them?

It is so the world over. There has come a new era in teeth cleaning. You and everyone should learn how much it means.

Why teeth discolor

Film is what clouds teeth—that viscous film you feel. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. Food stains, etc., discolor it. Then it forms cloudy coats. Tartar is based on film.

Old methods did not effectively combat it. So most teeth were coated more or less. And few escaped the troubles caused by film.

Film holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Now ways to fight it

Dental science has now found two ways to fight that film. One acts to curdle film, one to remove it, and without any harmful scouring.

Able authorities proved those ways effective. Then a new-type tooth paste was created, based on modern research. Those two film combatants were embodied in it for daily application.

The name of that tooth paste is Pepsodent. Now dentists the world over are urging its adoption. To careful people of some 50 nations it has brought safer, whiter teeth.

Mistakes corrected

Research also proved that former methods reduced Nature's tooth-protecting forces in the mouth.

Pepsodent corrects that mistake. It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is there to neutralize mouth acids, the cause of tooth decay. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits which may otherwise ferment and form acids.

Watch it for a week

A test of Pepsodent will prove a revelation. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear.

You will quickly realize what this method means to the people in your home. Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Compare it with the old-time methods. Cut out coupon now.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

Pepsodent PAT. OFF. REG. U.S.

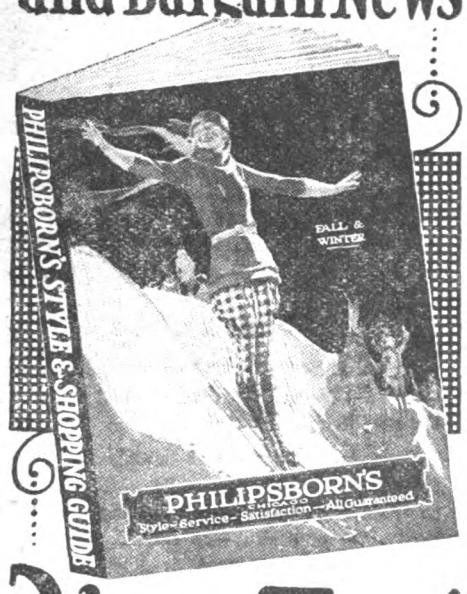
The New-Day Dentifrice

A scientific tooth paste based on modern research, free from harmful grit. Now advised by leading dentists the world over.

1240

10-Day Tube Free

THE PEPSODENT COMPANY,
Dept. 314, 1104 S. Wabash Ave.,
Chicago, Ill.



Mail 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent to

.....

.....

Only one tube to a family.

The Hit of the Season 322 pages of Style and Bargain News

Yours Free!

ATTENTION,—Mail Order Shoppers! This is your last chance to get a Copy of PHILIPSBORN'S 322-page Style and Shopping Guide for Fall and Winter—the season's biggest hit—FREE! A regular Pageant of Fashions! A veritable Bevy of Bargains! Though we printed an extra big edition, there won't be nearly enough!

No fashion book in recent years has created such a sensation! It shows the greatest variety of new style hits ever assembled in one book! PHILIPSBORN'S styles are ENDORSED BY IRENE CASTLE, "the best-dressed woman in the world." Send and see! Rush your request TODAY!

Big Cash Savings for Every Household!

You will be thrilled by the sensational bargains and wonder values in PHILIPSBORN'S Style Book. The most spectacular price reductions in mail order history! Over 3,000 money saving offers on quality merchandise for all the family! These new low prices mean a cash saving of millions of dollars to our 3½ million customers! Why not share in the big savings?

New Service Features! "Money-Back" Guarantee!

Our surprising innovation—"A New Era in Mail Order Service" will be welcomed with delight by millions of mail order shoppers. It means more speed—more accuracy—greater satisfaction; a wonderful advance over present-day methods—the best mail order service in America!

Our guarantee exceeds all others in liberality and fairness. We want your good will more than we want your money. No transaction is considered closed until you are fully satisfied. We gladly abide by your judgment.

Rush the Coupon or a Postal!

This is your LAST CHANCE to get a FREE COPY of PHILIPSBORN'S 322-page Style and Shopping Guide. Send TODAY!

PHILIPSBORN'S
Founded 1890
Department - 452 - Chicago, Ill.

PHILIPSBORN'S, Dept. 452, Chicago, Ill.

Please send FREE copy of PHILIPSBORN'S Fall and Winter Style and Shopping Guide to

Name.....

Town.....State.....

Local Address.....
(Please write plainly)

Sign Coupon NOW Mail Today!!

Little Miss Brown's Harvest

By Joseph F. Novak

See front cover illustration.

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

LITTLE Miss Brown emerged from her tiny cottage, shut and carefully locked the door, and although an involuntary shudder shook her thin shoulders as the October blasts swept about her, she resolutely straightened and steadied herself and started toward the village.

Little Miss Brown had been designated "little" since early young-ladyhood. Thus named to distinguish her from an older sister, the "little" clung even after the elder sister had ascended, as little Miss Brown hoped, the golden stairs.

Her footsteps crackled in the fallen leaves which played in swirls down the lane and the corn shocks seemed to moan mournfully. Yet the scene was not dismal and the gathered herds at the various farmhouses which she passed, lowing contentedly, spoke of a bountiful harvest and a good year.

But what had her harvest been? Little Miss Brown often thought this, when the golden harvests came along. It seemed that each year brought her nowhere, as far as world's goods were concerned. Plenty to eat she had, 'tis true, more than enough, but that was all. Very little money came her way, and as she thought how, from year to year, the little cottage was growing more and more rickety, with no prospect of its being repaired, and as the walls grew more and more faded from cleaning wall paper that was past all cleaning, it really seemed as if she were not getting on at all.

"Why, after all, though, should it make any difference? I am an old woman already, every one knows what my house looks like, and they all love me, so why should I complain? I can enjoy the pretty things in the beautiful homes of the Uptons, the Starkes and the Wellingtons, so why should I care if I don't have them?" Thus her cheerful view of life and she was content.

She directed her steps toward the beautiful home of the Starkes and her errand was, in a sense, one of mercy. Whenever anyone wanted someone to sit up at a sick-bed, little Miss Brown was always called, and she always responded.

At the Starke home this night, young Gabriel Starke lay ill, and dangerously so. Tired with their vigils, the family had called for succor and little Miss Brown responded.

Because Gabriel was so sick, his family had telegraphed to Rutherford Granger, his boon college companion, who, though after college had gone his separate way, never lost sight of Starke and kept in touch with him and loved him better than a brother.

He was now rushing to Barkerville in a high powered motor car and fate decreed that at the moment he rounded a corner of the village street, little Miss Brown should attempt to cross. The wind came in for its share in the near-tragedy for it whisked little Miss Brown's old-fashioned cloak into her face at the crucial moment the car turned the corner.

Thank God for the brakes which held as well as they did! otherwise little Miss Brown's earthly pilgrimage would have been over. But though they did their noblest, still the effort was not quite enough to keep her from being thrown to the street and injured severely.

Rutherford Granger sprang from his machine, picked up the inert figure and brought her to the only place he knew of—the Starkes.

The door was opened to him as he hastened up the walk with his limp burden.

"Call a doctor, quick!" he ordered.

"Why, it's little Miss Brown!" exclaimed Nora who had opened the door.

They brought her to one of the beautiful chambers of the Starke home and soon the doctor appeared.

He shook his head. "Maybe it's internal injuries—but we'll see."

* * * * * * * *

When little Miss Brown awoke again, it was night. The wind had died down and through the window could be seen, sailing through ragged clouds, a glorious harvest moon, while in its effulgent light a well-built figure of a man sat, looking afar off over the landscape.

As little Miss Brown moved, he immediately turned toward her.

"Are you awake?" he queried softly.

"Yes," Miss Brown responded, wondering who he was.

"My name is Rutherford Granger—I am Gabriel's friend and it was my machine that knocked you down at the corner. I'm dreadfully sorry, but really, I can't say it was anyone's fault. However, I shall make all amends that I can for, after all, it was my car that injured you. I suppose it will be quite an inconvenience for you to be here for several weeks?"

"Well, no," little Miss Brown returned, for his sorrow was so sincere she wanted to comfort him. "I think I shall rather enjoy it—that is until I am moved to my own home."

"Ah, but you shall not be removed from this room until you are able to walk from it. I shall insist that it be so."

"Then I shall not mind it one bit," little Miss Brown declared, for the prospect of spending a few weeks in that lovely room was pleasing. The furnishings were of newest type, the curtains and drapes delightful to the eye, there was electric light, soft rugs and other luxuries which made her own bedroom at home, neat though it was, seem like unto the cell of a nun.

"Thank you so much for saying that," Rutherford replied gratefully. "I thought I might have put you way behind in your work—and harvest time is canning and preserving time for the ladies, is it not? I am not up much on housekeeping."

"I don't do such an awful lot of that, Mr. Rutherford," little Miss Brown replied, "and if I make more than I need, I give it away. My neighbors are very kind in giving me fruits and vegetables and so forth. But as I have to look out for just myself, it doesn't take much to keep me going. And I've done my fall housecleaning. I'm afraid to clean much more for if I do I guess I'll go through the paper to the plaster. My house is just a poor, tumble-down little place, Mr. Rutherford, so you see it will be almost a pleasure to occupy a beautiful room like this for a few weeks."

Rutherford was silent for some moments. Then he said:

"You are certainly well beloved here, Miss Brown. It wasn't but a few moments when everyone knew of the accident and the townspeople called without cessation until it was too late to call."

His words cheered little Miss Brown.

"You know, Mr. Rutherford, sometimes I am apt to be a little discontented because I have so little of this world's goods, but when I hear words just like you have spoken, it seems to make up for anything I might not have. You mentioned harvest-time, and when I was younger I was apt to complain of my harvests—they were so meager. Now, though, I realize that all the while I have been harvesting the love and good will of the people of Barkerville, and after all isn't that the best harvest?"

"Undoubtedly it is. Of course, one likes to be comfortable and have things, but to have them at the expense of loss of good will isn't worth while."

"That's what I think and while I'd like to have the nice things I dream of, still maybe it's pleasanter dreaming of them than having them in reality."

"What is your dream, Miss Brown?" Rutherford queried.

"O, you'll think me a foolish old woman for wanting the things of my dream, but I'll tell you, just the same. I dream that I'd like to have my little cottage fixed up—but most of all to have electric lights in it and a pretty floor lamp in the window. Isn't that foolish?"

"Why should it be?" Rutherford asked kindly. "No harm in wanting nice things if we don't let the longing make us discontented."

They had been talking quietly, slowly, and there had been little intervals of quiet between sentences. Little Miss Brown found it delightful to converse thus intimately with the millionaire friend of Gabriel Starke. She had often heard of him and understood that he was very proud and even haughty. How poorly people judge, she thought. A more worldly person might have thought that he was exerting himself to be thus agreeable to lessen the chances of a suit at law for personal injury on the part of little Miss Brown.

To demand reparation for her injuries was the last thing in Miss Brown's mind, however. She studied the handsome profile as Rutherford sat there in the moonlight and somehow she found her heart yearning over him with motherly affection. How must it feel to be the mother of such a son? For Rutherford was about twenty-six and she was—fifty.

With nothing but the kindliest feelings in her heart toward the young man her consciousness drifted away and she fell into a peaceful sleep.

* * * * * * * *

The following morning there was cause for rejoicing in the Starke household for Gabriel passed the crisis and was out of danger and little Miss Brown's injuries were found to be less serious than first supposed.

This news sweet Dorothea Starke imparted to Rutherford as they breakfasted together the next morning. Dorothea was one of those girls whom riches seemed only to have sweetened. There was in her manner a gracious, mysterious aloofness that seemed to set her apart from the run of girls. A something that would have held at bay the worst of brutes.

"Dorothea," Rutherford began after she had imparted her news, "I want you to take me to little Miss Brown's home."

"Surely, if you wish, Rutherford," Dorothea answered, "but I am afraid you will not be impressed with it. It is a tiny tumble-down place, that looks particularly dreary after the vines have shed their leaves."

"That's just why I want to see it," Rutherford answered. "Just think, Dorothea, here is that little woman called upon by everyone in the village when in need, yet they allow her to live in a tumble-down little shed."

"Why, Rutherford—" Dorothea began. "We didn't think——"

"Yes, Dorothea," Rutherford interrupted gently, "no one thought that she might not be perfectly contented in that little shack of hers. Why, do you realize that she told me she actually enjoyed the accident since it allows her the luxury of your home? I saw that in spite of her sweet content there is in her heart the desire for something better than she has. Suppose the poor dear woman had been killed last night? Everyone came to inquire how she was, and if she had been killed how many consciences might have been berating their owners today. We ought to do something for her. I shall at any rate, but why not have the whole village in on it?"

"What would you propose, Rutherford? We cannot give her money—she would think it charity. You see we began in the wrong way. We'd call on her to do nursing as a favor and made it up by sending her a bushel of apples or something of the sort and got into the habit of it. To change now and give her money would have been a hint that we sensed her poverty and were extending charity. I've thought often that we ought to do something but—well, I'd dismiss the idea and think no more about it. And while I have said we didn't think, I believe it was more that we didn't know just what to do. So, what would you propose?"

"Well," and Rutherford's eyes twinkled, "I believe I have the solution of the matter. Here it is. Why not make her cottage into a livable place?"

"It is a splendid idea, Rutherford!" exclaimed Dorothea, "let us go over at once!"

Suiting action to word, Rutherford got out his big car and they started for little Miss Brown's place. It looked cozy and comfortable as it drowsed in the sleepy autumnal sunshine but on close observation one saw the pitiful little makeshifts that little Miss Brown had resorted to. The yard, though, was beautifully kept and the late asters and winter chrysanthemums still bloomed bravely.

Dorothea had secured the key and opening the door, they went into the tiny cottage. Everything was exquisitely neat, but the age of everything testified to little Miss Brown's dire poverty. The curtains at the windows which looked so neat, on close examination showed untold mending, and what was true of the curtains could be said of everything in the house.

They went from room to room.

"It seems dreadful that while she was an angel of mercy for the sick, we allowed her to put up with such dire need," Dorothea said, her voice a little unsteady. "But we must make amends now."

"Well," returned Rutherford cheerfully, "let us be thankful that we found out before it was too late. Now, I intend to do the whole cottage over, put it in A-1 shape before she comes back to it. If the village wishes, it may do its share."

"I believe everyone would want to help," Dorothea answered, "and next Sunday after church we will discuss the matter."

It is surprising how thoughtless humanity will do right when they know the object of their good will is deserving. How much more charitable we all would be if we knew that all charity asked was charity deserved! Ah, if mankind could not dissemble in matters of this sort!

Rutherford selected for his share, the wiring of the little cottage, the fixtures and a beautiful polychrome floor lamp. The Starkes determined upon the redecorating. The Wellingtons ordered new floors and the outside painting, and so down on the whole list of those who had been the recipients of little Miss Brown's unobtrusive kindnesses.

And it seemed that Providence, too, wanted to take a hand in this blessed work, for the glorious Indian summer days permitted the painters to get the outside painting down so that the coming frosts would not injure it. Daily new and beautiful things were sent to the little cottage now changing as if by magic to a place of delight.

Granger and Dorothea superintended it all. They endeavored to place everything just as little Miss Brown always had it, and they were quite familiar (or at least Dorothea was) with such little objects as she treasured and were careful not to disturb them. So it was that the familiar family pictures which little Miss Brown loved remained in their usual places on the walls, the little knick-knacks and bric-a-brac that she liked were left in their accustomed places. Thus the room, while it had a new and charming aspect, bore with it a homelike familiarity, a clever blending of what had been changed with what remained so that little Miss Brown would not feel strange but only that her dream had come true.

"Isn't it jolly fixing up a home!" Rutherford exclaimed one day, "and even though we're doing it for someone else. How glorious then, it must be to do it for oneself!"

He looked laughingly at Dorothea, but there was something in that teasing look and laugh that made her blush, for similar thoughts had stirred her mind as she had worked, but she pushed them aside for Rutherford—well—Rutherford—well, she mustn't think such thoughts!

At last the cottage was finished, and then on one of those brilliant days, when it seems that summer makes a final effort to live before giving up the ghost, the doctor pronounced little Miss Brown well enough to go home.

She was expecting it, but as the decision came, a cold hand seemed to clutch her heart. She had become so accustomed to the dainty room, to the convenience of the electric light, that the thought of cleaning oil lamps every day and all the rest of the inconveniences she had been accustomed to seemed almost unbearable. But there was no other way, she had had her taste of luxury and now she must go home.

So she prepared.

When she reached the door, outside stood Rutherford's big machine glittering in the sunlight, ready inviting her to ride.

"I shall drive you down to your house, Miss Brown," Rutherford said, "and Dorothea will accompany you. I believe you will have plenty of company this afternoon."

Little Miss Brown flushed. She did not like the idea of Rutherford seeing her poor surroundings but there was no help for it.

So she got into the beautiful car and off they started.

Rutherford, however, did not intend that he should go directly home and he drove over the wonderful concrete highway for miles and miles while the soft autumnal winds blew the color into little Miss Brown's cheeks.

"The world is kind," she thought, as she saw what Rutherford was doing. "Poor lad, he wants to make it all right with me, I suppose. I wonder if he realizes how much I enjoyed my stay at the Starkes?"

Thus she speculated upon the matter, and then as she noticed the happy eyes and the rosy blush of Dorothea whenever Rutherford turned his sparkling eyes upon the girl, she wondered if indeed, some sweet emotion was not stirring the hearts of the young people as they sat beside each other. And then she thought back to the years when she was a girl and of stalwart Bud Culver whom she had loved. He had gone off to the Spanish-American War and had never returned for he had been killed at the charge of San Juan Hill. No one knew her romance—no one knew and she had had her chance.

Rutherford now asked her if she'd prefer to return, and really wishing to do so, she assented. He thereupon turned the car and started back and soon came to the familiar landmarks of Barkerville.

As she observed them, little Miss Brown felt the going home spirit. There was something comforting in the thought after all. Home was home and as the poet sang, be it ever so humble there's no place like it.

So she strained her eyes for a glimpse of the tiny cottage. But as she sought the familiar spot, her brain seemed to reel. What was that little cottage gleaming white through the scarlet runners growing where the old tumble-down shack should have been. Had she suddenly become strange to the road she had known for years? Were they right? Wasn't Rutherford mistaken?

He, however, stopped at the cottage.

"But Mr. Rutherford—Dorothea—what—what——"

"Just a little surprise for you, little Miss Brown," Rutherford said gently. "A token of the good will of your neighbors."

"But—but—why?" gasped poor little Miss Brown, "what have I done?"

They had been leading her up to the house and now entered. Little Miss Brown looked around in wonder, and speechless walked from room to room.

"My dream! My dream! O, dear God, it has it has come true!"

They gave her the benefit of seeing it in its most inviting aspect. Now Mrs. Wellington, the minister and his wife and others came in.

"Why did you do it all?" gasped rather than asked little Miss Brown, as she had repeated many times already, "I don't know why you should!"

"You have Mr. Granger to thank for the idea, sister Brown," "and all your neighbors for the rest of it—not that Mr. Granger did not do his share," he smiled correcting himself. "You see you should thank us, I hardly know. When you were hurt, we realized then what you meant to us and we all felt that we never had shown our appreciation of all your unselfish devotion to the community. When you spoke of your dream to Mr. Granger he determined to make it come true and gave us all a chance to help. We hope you will like the result, as we tried to make the dream come true as closely as we could with your ideas. It is the culmination of all your good works, and may I say a harvest which you are most justly entitled to?"

When the minister finished speaking, little Miss Brown could only nod.

"We are all going to stay to tea, little Miss Brown," began Mrs. Wellington, and the whole party settled down to a regular sociable bee. All this put little Miss Brown in her element—no chance of entertaining women like Mrs. Wellington in her own home!

The afternoon waned, then the guests slowly departed until none were left but Dorothea and Rutherford.

And then Rutherford did what was the hardest for him to do. He asked little Miss Brown if she would accept a little book—he would never feel quite right if she did not.

With the look he gave her, she felt she could not refuse, and why not accept a little book?

At the moment, however, she did not know it was a bankbook with a five hundred dollar deposit entered therein.

* * * * * * * * *

"It was worth all of our efforts, wasn't it, Dorothea?" Rutherford asked, as with Dorothea beside him, his machine glided smoothly back to the Starkes.

"Worth it? Indeed it was. Such a dear, happy little task! How I enjoyed it!"

"Dorothea," and Rutherford laid his hand gently over hers, "would you enjoy fixing up another home for yourself—and me? Would you, Dorothea?"

"O, Rutherford! I—I—look out, you're going into the ditch!"

"It's hard proposing and running a big car with one hand, so Dorothea you'll say 'yes' won't you?"

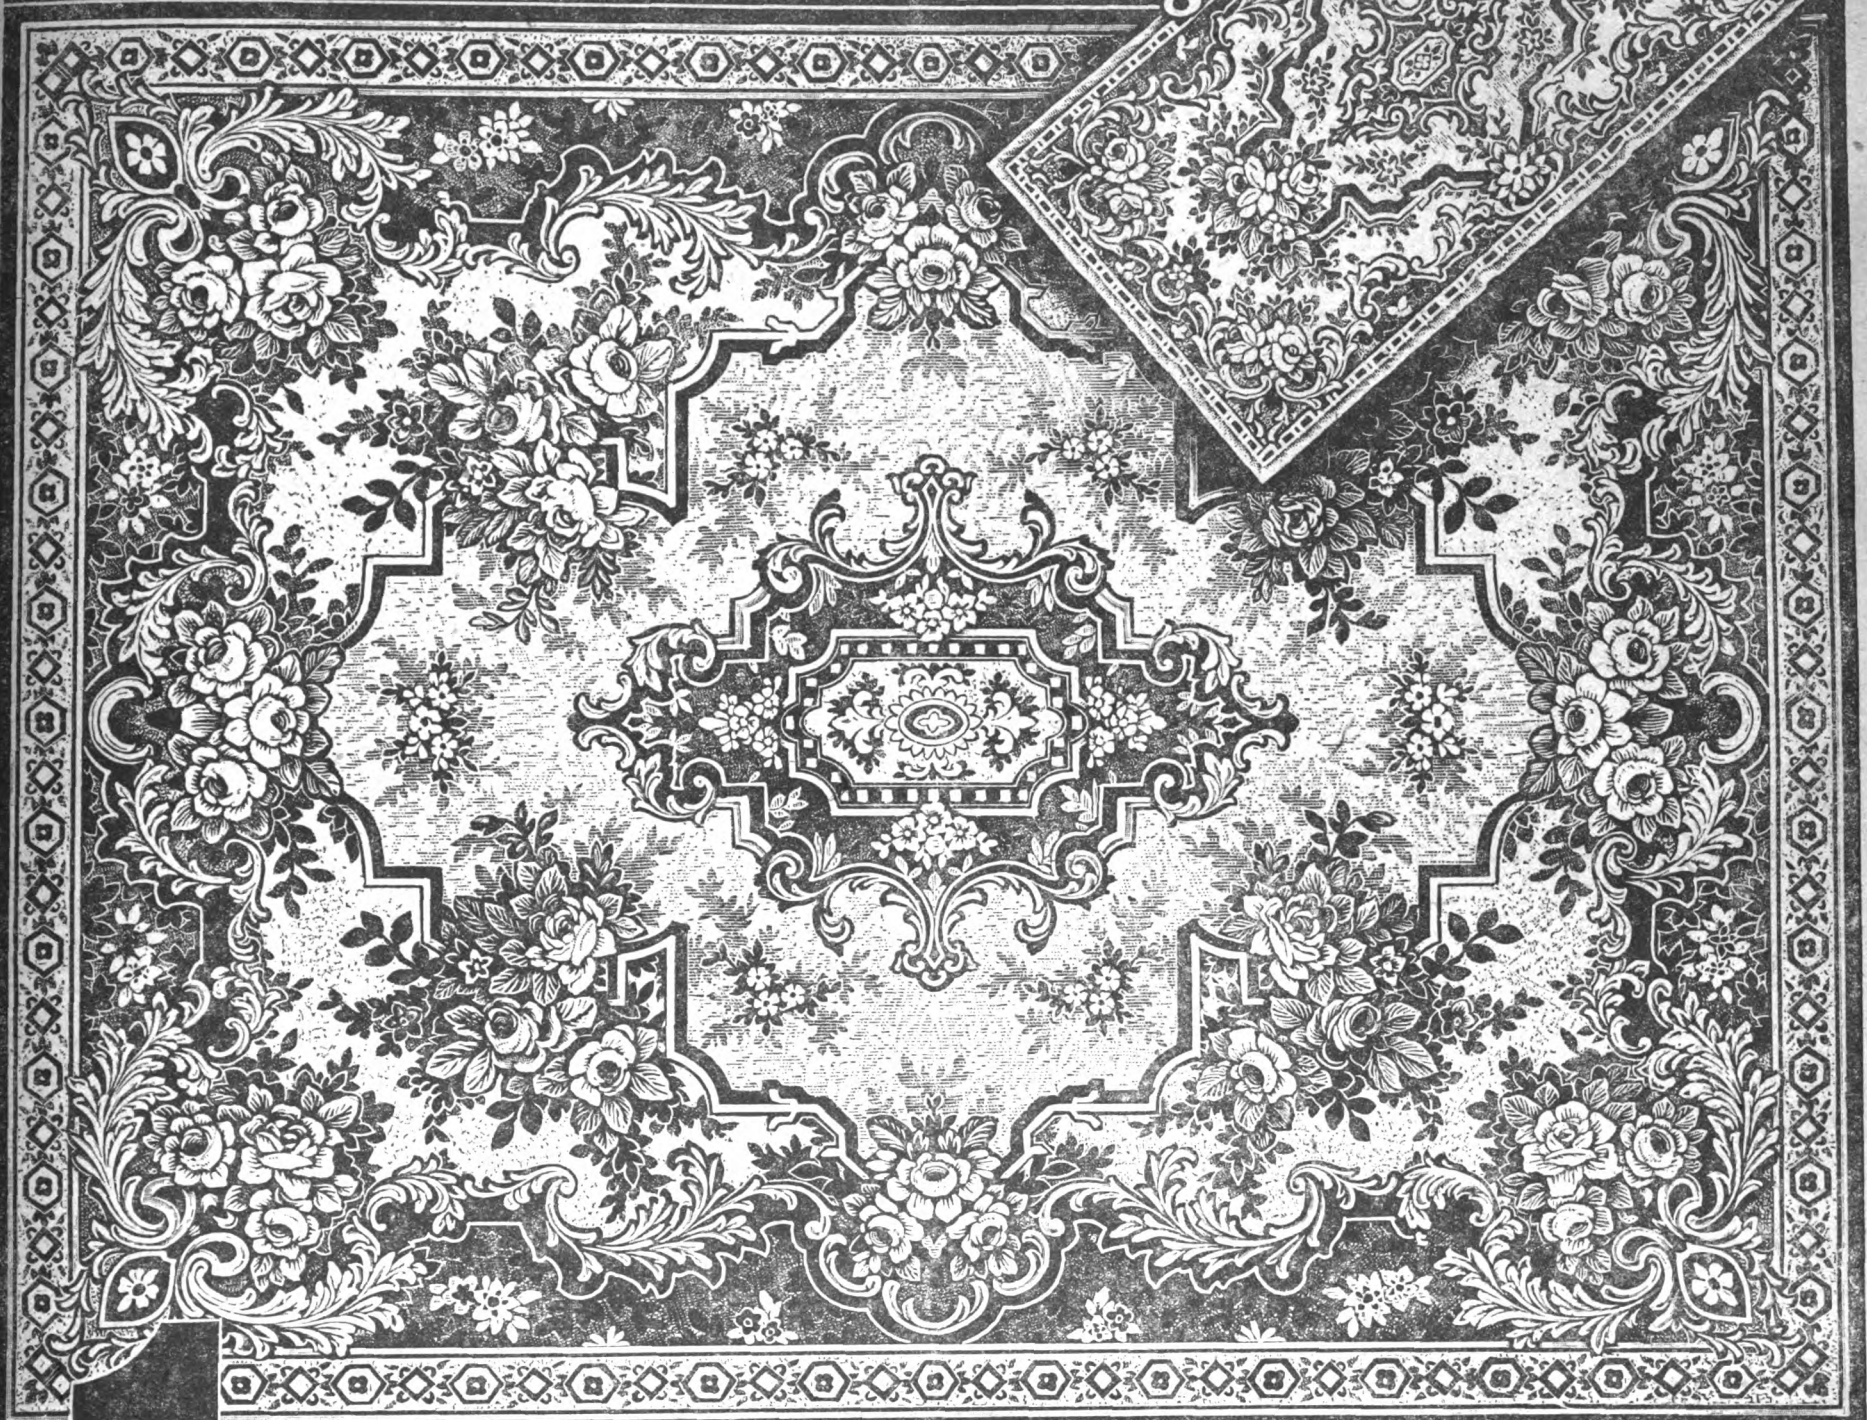
Dorothea smiled at him and there, in that smile, she showed herself like all other women.

"I could think of no happier occupation, Rutherford, dear," she said.

Brainograms

By Blair Tremaine.

HOW MANY COLORS DO YOU KNOW?



1. A nation's warships.
2. The rich part of milk.
3. The River Colony in Africa.
4. Mourning.
5. The bride's color.
6. The coward's.
7. The soldier's.
8. A caged songbird.
9. The kind of a fever accompanied by a type of rash.
10. A Catholic official.
11. Denmark's capital.
12. The royal shade.
13. Autumn's prevailing tint.
14. An inlet of the sea.
15. To put a person ashore and leave him to his fate.
16. The cap of a college freshman.
17. Who wrote "An Elegy in a Country Churchyard?"
18. A province of France.
19. The token of anarchy and revolution.
20. A political appointment.

ANSWERS.

1. Navy.
2. Cream.
3. Orange.
4. Black.
5. White.
6. Yellow.
7. Khaki.
8. Canary.
9. Scarlet.
10. Cardinal.
11. Copenhagen.
12. Purple.
13. Brown.
14. Bay.
15. Maroon.
16. Green.
17. Gray.
18. Burgundy.
19. Red.
20. Plum.

Doctors and nurses by aeroplane is an innovation in Australian districts where families live far from town.

FREE! Hearth Rug FREE WITH 9x12 FT. Seamless Brussels Rug

$1 Use As Your Own 30 Days Free

With Order

No description by word or picture can do justice to this fine rug. You must see it, you must handle it, you must have it on your own floor to fully realize its beauty, its charm, its quality. I want this rug to be its own salesman. I want to send it to you on 30 Days' Free Trial to use as your own at My Risk. If your satisfaction is not complete—or if for any reason in the world you wish to do so—you may return the rug after a whole month's use. The trial will not cost you a penny. I will refund your first payment and all freight charges without quibble, question, delay or formality. Sign the coupon, send it and $1. The rug will soon be on its way to you.

THE FREE Hearth Rug

This 26 x 52 inch Brussels Hearth Rug is of the same quality, the same materials, and the same colorings as the 9 x 12 ft. room rug described on this page. It matches the big rug exactly. When used in the same room, the two will harmonize perfectly. This Free Hearth Rug is a Prize to the Prompt. To get it you must send in your order promptly. Both rugs will be sent together. Send in your order today.

Special 30th Anniversary Sale Price Only $29.95

Easy Monthly Payments

The former price of this Fine Rug was $42.95—and without the Free Hearth Rug of course. You would have been satisfied to pay this higher cost. Now that I have Slashed $13.00 from the price and am including The Free Hearth Rug besides, this offer is a Tremendous Bargain that you cannot afford to miss. Size: Full Room Size, 9 ft. x 12 ft. Material and Quality: Brussels of a very good grade. Genuine, high-quality wool worsted face, with heavy back. The worsted yarns are carefully selected, tightly twisted, and woven in the well known desirable Brussels loop style. Made entirely in one piece and without a single seam. A rich-looking rug that will give many years of satisfactory service. Design: A floral pattern, dainty, yet distinctive. The handsome center medallion is made more beautiful by the rose clusters surrounding it. Then there is the exquisite gold scroll and floral field all enclosed in a rich border. Colors: A pleasing harmony of Tans, Browns, Green, Taupe, Red, and Gold. There are several shades of these colors. Light Tans running into rich deep Browns and Handsome Gold Scrolls predominate. These colors are guaranteed to be absolutely Fast and Will Not run or fade. This is a rug for any room in the house: bedroom, dining room, living room, library or parlor. It will harmonize with any kind of furniture. Former price, $42.95.

Order No. RA5015. Price $29.95. Terms: $1 with order; balance $2.50 Monthly.

Nathaniel Spear President

Thirtieth Anniversary Sale

Thirty years ago in a little store here in Pittsburgh this business made its humble beginning. With small capital but great faith I staked my all on the downright honesty of the average man and woman, the people who deserved credit but found it hard to get. I was a pioneer in the "open account way" of home furnishing. My little business has since grown into a mammoth institution that performs a nation-wide service. To celebrate my thirtieth anniversary I am conducting a Big Sale that will last throughout the year.

Big Free Book

All my prices are Low—much lower than Spot Cash Prices in your home town stores. Everything I sell is sent on 30 Days' Free Trial and Use, in Your Own Home, and I give the Longest Time to Pay. I repeat to you what I said to my first customer 30 Years ago: "I Will Trust You Gladly." Send for My Big Free Catalog today. See the thousands of Bargain Opportunities that await you. Learn how easy it is to get now the things you have long yearned for on terms so low that you will never feel the outlay

The Fairest Squarest Easiest Way to Furnish Your Home

Guaranteed Savings of 30 to 50% on

Furniture	Baby Carriages
Bedding	Enamel Cooking Sets
Springs	Washing Machines
Mattresses	Lamps
Bed Spreads	Sewing Machines
Rugs	Table Linen
Carpets	Silverware
Linoleum	Cameras
Portieres	Phonographs
Dishes	Children's Automobiles and Wagons
Stoves	Bicycles
Lace Curtains	Guns, etc.
Ranges
Refrigerators
Glassware
Clocks
Aluminum Ware

SPEAR & CO.

Department E-3 Pittsburgh, Pa.

Home Furnishers for the People of America

SPEAR & CO., Dept. E-3, Pittsburgh, Pa. Copyright 1923, Spear & Co.

Send me at once 9 x 12 ft. Rug and FREE Hearth Rug as described above. Enclosed is $1.00 first payment. It is understood that if at the end of the 30 days' trial I am satisfied, I will send you $2.50 monthly. Order No. RA5015. Price, $29.95. Title remains with you until paid in full. Send me your Big Free Catalog also.

Please print or write name and address plainly.

Name..... Occupation.....

R. F. D., Box No. or Street & No.....

Post Office..... State.....

If your shipping point is different from your post office fill in line below

Send shipment to.....

FREE CATALOG If you want the Free Catalog Only, Send No Money, put an X here ☐ and write your name and address plainly on the above lines.

Electrical Experts EARN $12 to $30 a Day

What's YOUR Future?

Trained "Electrical Experts" are in great demand at the highest salaries, and the opportunities for advancement and a big success in this line are the greatest ever known.

"Electrical Experts" can earn $70 to $200 a week. Fit yourself for one of these big paying positions—

BE AN "ELECTRICAL EXPERT"

Today even the ordinary electrician—the "screw driver" kind—is making money—big money. But it's the trained man—the man who knows the whys and wherefores of Electricity—the "Electrical Expert"—who is picked out to "boss" ordinary electricians—to boss the big jobs—the jobs that pay.

$3,500 TO $10,000 A YEAR

Get in line for one of these "Big jobs," by enrolling now for my easily-learned, quickly grasped, right-up-to-the-minute, Spare-Time Home-Study Course in Practical Electricity.

AGE OR LACK OF EXPERIENCE NO DRAWBACK

You don't have to be a College man; you don't have to be a High School Graduate. My course in Electricity is the most simple, thorough, and successful in existence and offers every man regardless of age, education, or previous experience, the chance to become, in a very short time, an "Electrical Expert," able to make from $70 to $200 a week.

I GIVE YOU A REAL TRAINING

As Chief Engineer of the Chicago Engineering Works, I know exactly the kind of training a man needs to get the best positions at the highest salaries. Hundreds of my students are now earning $3,500 to $40,000. Many are now successful ELECTRICAL CONTRACTORS

YOUR SUCCESS GUARANTEED

So sure am I that you can learn electricity—so sure am I that after studying with me you can get into the "big money" class in electrical work, that I will guarantee under Bond to return every single penny paid me in tuition if, when you have finished my Course, you are not satisfied it was the best investment you ever made.

FREE—ELECTRICAL WORKING OUTFIT—FREE

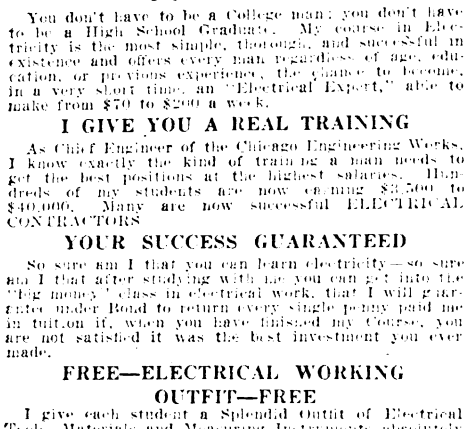
I give each student a Splendid Outfit of Electrical Tools, Materials and Measuring Instruments absolutely FREE. With me you do practical work right at the start—at home. You start right in after the first few lessons to WORK AT YOUR PROFESSION in a practical way.

FREE RADIO COURSE

An up-to-the-minute course in Wireless Telephony and Telegraphy given free with my great Electrical Course—two Courses for the price of one. Coupon brings particulars.

GET STARTED NOW—MAIL COUPON

I will send you a valuable book entitled "How to Become an Electrical Expert," and full particulars of my free outfit if you will send this coupon now.



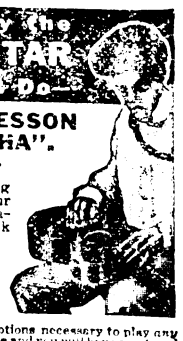
L. L. COOKE, Chief Engineer.
CHICAGO ENGINEERING WORKS
Dept. 387 2150 Lawrence Ave.
CHICAGO, U. S. A.

CHIEF ENGINEER COOKE
Chicago Engineering Works
Dept. 387, 2150 Lawrence Ave., CHICAGO, ILL.

Dear Sir: You may send me entirely free and fully prepaid, a copy of your book, "How to Become an Electrical Expert," and particulars about your Home Study Courses in Electricity and Radio.

Name .....
Address .....
City ..... State.....

"Money Back Guarantee" on OVERLAND
ALUMINUM SHOES



"Comfort Cover" Aluminum Bottoms

Write Today for OVERLAND SHOE CO. Dept. [illegible] Racine, Wis.

Ask for free book showing big values in leather shoes

The famous Ex-Tra-Ox DRESS SHOE

You, Too, Can Play the HAWAIIAN GUITAR Just as the Natives Do

After Your FIRST LESSON You Will Play "ALOHA". We Guarantee That—

Our method is so simple, interesting and appealing that you begin in your first lesson to learn the famous Hawaiian Folk Song "ALOHA". Think how happy you will be when you surprise your friends by playing the fascinating Hawaiian Guitar just as the natives do!

Only Four Motions—and You Master Them Quickly!

In a few minutes you acquire the four motions necessary to play any piece—after that a short period of practice and you will have mastered this weirdly sweet music. Complete course of 52 lessons includes your beautiful Hawaiian Guitar, necessary picks, steel bar, etc. No extras.

No Previous Musical Knowledge Necessary

If you never read a musical note in your life—if you haven't even the slightest knowledge of music, we can quickly and positively teach you to play this wonderfully popular instrument. Don't be just a "listener" when you can easily be the center of interest among your friends.

Just Mail a Post Card for Details of our remarkable FREE Hawaiian Guitar Offer—simply write: "I am interested"—but do it today.

Address
First Hawaiian Conservatory of Music, Inc.
Desk 34, 233 B'dway (Woolworth Bldg.)
New York City

Special arrangements for lessons if you have your own Hawaiian Guitar.

FREE A Beautiful Hawaiian Guitar

KING TUT-ANK-HAMEN'S REVENGE

By Eliot Kays Stone

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

IS King Tut-Ank-Hamen having his revenge?

Is the mysterious death of Lord Carnarvon and the mystifying illness of Howard Carter attributable to natural causes or did this Pharaoh's Ka inflict upon them the revenge threatened on the "Seal of Execration" inscribed on all tombs of the Pharaohs?

Were insidious poisons hidden in the tombs to insure the infliction of the death penalty upon those who should afterwards enter them? Was Lord Carnarvon the victim of the bite of some insect?

"Pooh, pooh!" exclaims Science, the modern God, but are the prophets of this new God always right?

King Tut-Ank-Hamen may at any rate be fancied as exulting with his Ka on the outcome of events.

"Ha ha," we can almost hear this ancient potentate chuckle. "Ye scientifically-minded desecrators of my tomb and disturbers of my age-long slumbers, ye know now what it means to brave the curses of a Pharaoh. Your scientists may explain it away as pleases them best, but the ancient curse of my magicians has fallen upon ye."

Nor is King Tut alone in his belief.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle expresses the belief that an elemental spirit in the tombs takes revenge on all that enter them. "It may be very well," he said, "to record this as the bite of an insect, or some other illness, but the fact remains that many men who have entered these tombs have come to sudden death."

What did Ibrahim Cyrana, the Egyptian priest say in Paris shortly after Lord Carnarvon's death? "The vengeance of the Pharaohs has been wrought upon Lord Carnarvon. Howard Carter may laugh, but he also will soon be stricken down."

Millions of Ibrahim's countrymen will unquestioningly share his views, for the modern dwellers on the Nile are not one whit less superstitious than their ancestors.

The oriental fear of the "evil eye" is universal among all classes of Egyptian society, which fear the Arabs well express in the proverb, "Charm from the eye of a girl, sharper than a spike; charm from the eye of a boy, more painful than a whip," to prevent the dangers of which these ingenious people employ many charms. Even in the higher walks of Egyptian society rings of silver wire are worn by both sexes to guard against the "evil eye." No mother in Egypt would think of exposing the face of her new-born child to a foreigner, and so great is this fear implanted in the breast of the Fellaheen mother that she leaves the face of her child unwashed for months and even years, fearing that an attractive child would bring upon it the "evil eye." This is probably one cause of the frightful prevalence of ophthalmia in Egypt, for, in the summer especially, an infant's face is simply a mass of flies, which, to add to the discomfort of superstition piled upon superstition, are never brushed away, as this act of kindness is considered unlucky. Some Fellaheen paint on their doorways "the bloody hand," others paint thereon the legend, "Bism'illah, ma' sha' 'llah" (In the name of God, may God keep evil from it), while the more wealthy inscribe it on the iron or brass knockers on their doors, to protect their dwellings from the "evil eye."

Charms against the "evil eye" are not the only ones resorted to by the Egyptian to avert from him the misfortunes of life. Charms are even attached to the necks of camels and the radiator-caps of "flivvers" to insure the safety of these means of locomotion. On many Egyptian houses may be seen small windmills or men-like images, their arms revolving in the wind to ward off evil spirits. Nubian mothers insure a fortunate life for their boys, at least, by taking the infant when forty days old to the brink of the Nile, where its eyes are anointed with kohl.

Nor have modern Egyptians lost their reverential awe of certain animals, such as dogs, cats, and serpents. It is considered "unlucky to kill a snake in a house; and so general is this belief," states R. Talbot Kelly, in his "Egypt Painted and Described," "that I understood that in the native houses of Cairo may be found cobra, which are confined to one room, and so constantly supplied with food as to be perpetually in a comatose condition." There is also a proverb, "God bless the house the birds build in," which gives rise to swallows' nests being frequently found "in most inconvenient positions in their living-rooms."

The scarabeaus was the emblem of immortality to the ancient Egyptians. To their descendants it at least represents fertility, and accordingly, "the harem woman, whose social standing and happiness depend so much on the fact of her becoming a mother, eats the insect in this belief and hope. . . . some of the women eat them to become fat, as this is a necessary adjunct to Egyptian beauty. It is believed, however, that the desire to grow fleshy is often expressed only to veil the real motive in eating the beetles." (William McE. Dye: Egypt and Abyssinia.)

Like the Chinese, the Egyptians have great respect for and fear of the myriads of genii, who lurk in every portion of the land. The Ginn, as the Egyptians call their genii, are of a very old family, having been created sometime prior to the entrance of Adam and his delightful spouse upon the Garden of Eden, at which place they proceeded to turn the world topsy-turvy by partaking of the forbidden fruit. The Ginn occupy a position a little higher than man, and a little lower than the angels, and, according to authentic accounts, were created of fire. They are, therefore, hot stuff, and though not immortal, generally manage to survive the shocks of time and of the elements for several centuries. They eat and sleep like mortals, and mate with each other or with human beings. They differ in form from man, and can take on at will any desired form, and can make themselves invisible whenever necessary or convenient. They are ruled over by forty, some say seventy, kings, all possessed of the title of Sulyman or Solyman. Ginn Ibu-Gann, the last of their monarchs, and from whom the Ginn derive their name, is credited as being the builder of the pyramids, for what man could erect such massive edifices? The full details of the history of this marvelous race are believed only by the credulous, even among the Moslems, as many of the fables are not recognized by the Koran. Few however doubt the essential facts concerning them which are here given.

While they are confined to no particular spot, being privileged to roam the earth at pleasure, their principal and favorite resort seems to be a chain of mountains, known to the Egyptians as Kaf. To have an idea of this locality one must have a knowledge of Egyptian geography, which is a science peculiar to itself; and it is only to Egyptian geographers that this mountain is known. Be it known then, that according to the Egyptian atlas, the earth is a plain surrounded by the Ocean (name of ocean not specified), which ocean is in turn encompassed by the chain of mountains, Kaf, which apparently performs the useful office of holding in the waters. It is on this range that the Ginn have established their headquarters, and if they would only be content to remain there, the Egyptians would not have to devote so much thought to them, but unfortunately the Ginn are restless creatures and ubiquitous in their habits. They are everywhere. They live in rivers, ruined houses, walls, baths, ovens—every place conceivable. They infest the solid matter of the earth and the firmament. From this latter vantage ground they learn the future from the whisperings of the angels, and divulge them to magicians and soothsayers, who, in turn, pass them on to anxious humanity for a consideration. As it is known that the Ginn are everywhere, the Egyptians are very careful to offend none of them. Before any water is poured on the ground permission is asked of the genii. "Destroor" (permission) is the magic word, and a person does not let a bucket down a well, strike a light, enter a bath, or do much of anything else, without uttering it, or words of like import.

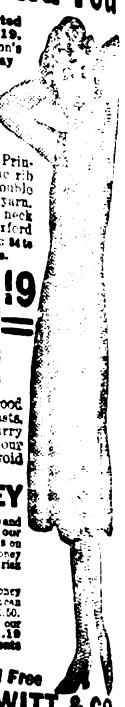
Like the genii of the Celestials, the Ginn seem to have a marked propensity for taking unto themselves the shape of a dog, cat or some other animal, generally domestic. Amusing stories proving this are told, and none of them are doubted. Perhaps, this statement should be qualified, as these stories are amusing only to the Western mind. But the Ginn are not without their redeeming features, as they form a convenient scapegoat for uncaught and unpunished offenders, and they are often accused of throwing tiles from the roofs of houses, and doing other mischievous and malicious acts. Can it be that they are responsible for the numerous unsolved murder mysteries which have so fruitlessly perplexed the brains of our highly intelligent police in New York and other of the larger cities of the United States? If so, what a world of iniquity can be laid at their door.

The effects are either evilly disposed genii or spirits of the dead. Ancient tombs, dark corners in temples, and such places are their favorite resorts. But many spirits, of course, haunt the scenes of their activities in the flesh, especially if the spirit was torn from its habitation by an act of violence. Another form of Ginn are "Ghools" who commit many atrocities. They appear in monstrous and terrible shapes, sometimes that of an animal, and infest graveyards and other secluded places. Their favorite food is corpses, but this does not prevent them from devouring the living who come within their power.

Not content with ascribing such supernatural powers to these creatures of the fancy, the ignorant and superstitious peoples of Egypt have a supernatural reverence for those classes of the population who are the least entitled to their respect. Like the noble "Red Man" of our own country, the Egyptians believe the idiot and fool to be favorites of the gods. Egypt is in fact the paradise of the fool. His very weakness constitutes his strength. An absence of wit is proof that the idiot is in communication with God. Only the most dangerous lunatics are kept in confinement; the others are allowed to roam the streets at will. Idiots are looked upon as saints. A saint-ship is a particularly desirable berth in a country like Egypt so that it is not surprising that impostors swell the ranks of the idiots. Many go about entirely naked and can offer the foulest indignities to women with impunity, so great is the respect in which such saints are held. Others wear dilks—a long cloak of many colors and fabrics—a kind of crazy-quilt. These wear a turban and are usually armed with a staff, to which cloths of various colors are attached. One can tell they are either fools or adventurers by the many maniacal acts which they commit, and which undoubtedly add to their fame and reputation for holiness. They are supported by alms, which they rarely have to solicit, as it is thought that misfortune will fall upon those who are disrespectful or unkind to these "saints." A celebrated saint is known as a sheykh, marabit, or welee. At the head of these is the Kuth, who, although he is often seen, always contrives it so that no one suspects him to be the Kuth. He is always clad in mean apparel and carries himself humbly. He mildly rebukes those who are impious, especially impostors. Although little is known concerning the Kuth, it is certain that he has several favorite resting places. One of these is the roof of the Kaabah at Mukkeh, where, though never seen by mortal eyes, twice at midnight he is heard to call, "Thou most merciful of those who show mercy." The Kuth is also fond of stopping at the gate in the southern end of the old city of Cairo, and he has many other inferior stations in the same city. Welees do not always have an easy time of it, as they are sometimes commissioned to do some very difficult things. Others are as hard on themselves as any Medieval hermit.

Various superstitions cling to the mosques in Egypt. In the Amr Mosque in Cairo there are two pillars between which only the elect are able to pass. Several superstitions are associated with the Kalaun Mosque in the same city, where, according to Mr. Kelly, "the particularly ornate 'mihrab' is credited with healing virtue, and any day men and women may be seen rubbing lemons on one of its pilasters, and licking up the moisture in the firm belief that a cure will ensue. A little stick hangs on the railing of the tomb; this is used to cure fools or idiots by striking them on the head. Women also bring their ailing children here for relief. In this case water is poured into a large porphyry bowl, and with another piece of the same stone they grind until the water is red and muddy, the mixture being given to the children with absolute confidence in its wonderful property." Many Moslems believe that no one can paint the Red Mosque at Bulak. Some misfortune will surely befall anyone attempting it.

Charles Dudly Warner encountered in his ramblings through Cairo "a very interesting old gate of one of the quarters. The gate was a wooden one or two leaves, crossed with iron and fastened with heavy spikes, and not remarkable except as an illustration of one of the popular superstitions of the Arabs. The wood is driven full of nails, bits of rags flutter on it, and human teeth are crowded under the iron bands. It is believed that if a person afflicted with headache will drive a nail into this door he will never have the headache again. Other ills are relieved by other offerings, bits of rags, teeth, etc. It would seem to be a very sure cure for toothache to leave the tooth at the gate."



The magic of the ancient Egyptians was powerful, there are Ginn, efreets and other supernatural beings at their command—the Pyramids stand as a frown down upon few who will not find it most easy to believe that King Tut-Ank-Hamen is enjoying some revenge.

Let Us Send You

2 lovely winter weight knitted Princess Slips for only $1.19. A smashing offer. The season's greatest sensation. Order today sure. Don't send one penny now. We will ship them by return mail.

On Approval

Every woman should have at least two of these extra warm Princess Slips knit in soft elastic rib from carefully selected double threads of combed cotton yarn. Lovely crocheted beading at neck and shaped waist. Color: Oxford gray with contrasting stripes. Bust: 34 to 44 inches. Misses' sizes, 14 to 20 yrs.

2 Knitted Princess Slips $1.19
Worth $1.25 Each

This smashing reduced price good only while our present supply lasts. Wonderful opportunity. Hurry or you may be too late. Send your order in this very minute to avoid disappointment.

SEND NO MONEY

No, ma'am, just your name, address and size is all we want. You pay only our slashed price of $1.19 for two slips on arrival. Rush your order in. Your money back if you are not delighted. You risk nothing.

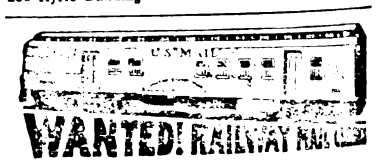
We Guarantee to refund your money immediately if you can match these wonderful slips for $1.50. You pay postman on arrival only our slashed Bargain Sale Price of $1.19 for 2 Princess Slips plus a few cents postage.

Big Catalogue Mailed Free
BERNARD-HEWITT & CO.
Dept. 35310 CHICAGO, ILL.

We Pay $7 a Day

taking orders for new Guaranteed Hosiery for men, women, children. All sizes and colors. Written guarantee with each pair to wear and satisfy or new hose free.

MEN OR WOMEN



Your spare portion. No capital. Regular customers and repeat orders mean you a steady income and a big paying business. Big money from the start. No experience necessary. Write for complete line of samples.

JENNINGS MFG. CO.
Hose 4136, Dayton, Ohio

MAKE MONEY AT HOME

YOU can earn from $1 to $2 an hour in your spare time at home showing cards. Quickly and easily learned by our new "Instructograph" method. No canvassing or soliciting. We show you how, guarantee you steady work at home or where you live, and pay you cash each week.

Full particulars and Booklet Free.
AMERICAN SHOW CARD SCHOOL
238 Ryrie Building Toronto, Can.

WANTED! RAILWAY MAIL CLERKS

Men & Women 17 to 45 years. 1600 to 2000 Salary. Common Education Sufficient—Travel—See the country. No lay offs—lifetime Job—Holidays with pay. Write today for free list of positions obtainable and full information how to get a position.

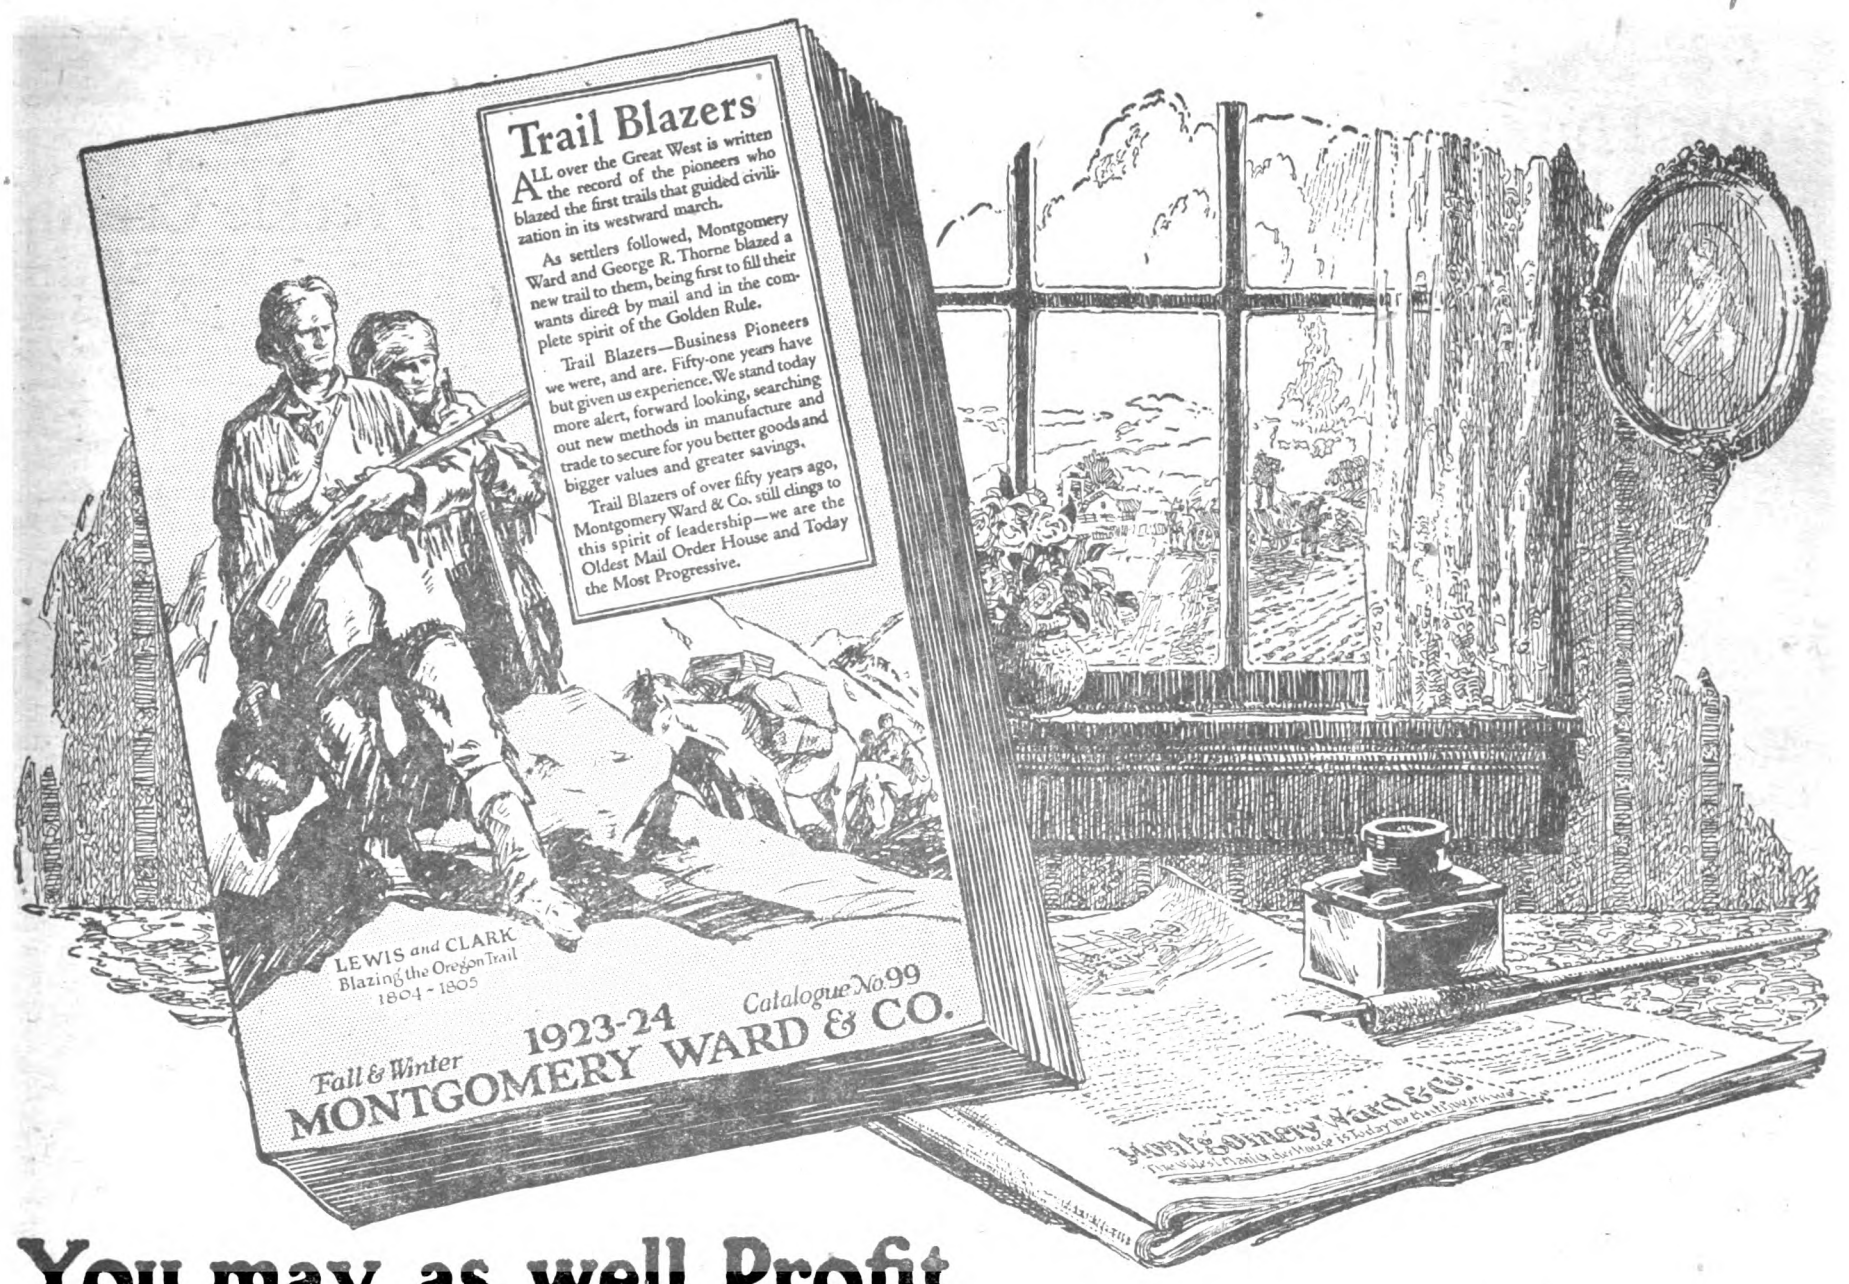
UNITED BUSINESS TR. ASS'N.
245 Dinan Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

CARDS Send 5 cents for large Catalog of Gift Cards, Calendars, Novelties, Stationery, Xmas Cards, Calendars and all other kinds of Cards. Premium Sales Folders. Catalog and Premium Offer given Free. No trash. OHIO CARD CO., B-14 Columbus, Ohio

$18.00 Fine Suits Made to Measure Delivery Prepaid

Most stupendous values ever offered. Same quality costs $30.00 elsewhere. All sizes and all styles cost the same—No extra charges. We pay delivery. Money back if we fail to please you.

SAMPLES FREE A postcard or letter brings you free a big assortment of cloth samples, self measuring charts and style book. Fine all wool serges and worsteds, all latest colors and patterns included.



Your Suit Won't Cost You a Cent

If you have a few spare hours to show and advertise our amazing bargains, your own suit won't cost a cent. This is a wonderful chance for agents to make $10.00 to $50.00 a week for all or spare time. Everybody buys. Our low prices are irresistible. A postcard today with your name and address brings our Samples without delay — Address

CHICAGO TAILORS ASS'N, Dept. 488, Chicago

Montgomery Ward & Co.

The Oldest Mail Order House is Today the Most Progressive

You may as well Profit by the Saving this Book Offers You

This Catalogue is free to you. You need merely fill in the coupon below.

You, too, may just as well profit by the saving this book offers.

Over Fifty Years' experience in buying and manufacturing has gone into this book—to secure for you and your family the lowest prices and the biggest savings.

Over Forty Million Dollars' worth of merchandise has been bought when prices were lowest, and manufactured especially for this Catalogue.

Our World-wide Search for Bargains

Actually, our buyers have searched every important market of the world to secure for you these bargains. Nothing has been left undone to secure the lowest prices. And in all this work we have never lost sight of quality.

To offer only the kind of goods that is best for you to buy, that will give the longest service, that is our policy. We never sacrifice quality to make a seemingly low price.

"Ward Quality" Means Reliable Goods

When you buy from Montgomery Ward & Co., you get only goods that will stand inspection and use.

That has been our principle for over Fifty Years. To sell only Dependable, Serviceable Goods at the lowest prices possible—and always your money back if you are not satisfied.

Everything for the Home, the Farm and the Family

FOR WOMEN: Our own Fashion Experts, living in New York, have selected for you the best New York Styles, only the best. And we offer these for every member of the family, without the usual "fashion profits." You will be delighted with the big Woman's Section of this new Fall & Winter Catalogue.

FOR THE HOME: Experts in interior decoration have provided a treat for all women interested in beautifying their homes. Everything new in furniture, carpets, and decorations—everything practical and new in household devices, everything needed for the home this book offers at a big saving.

FOR THE FARM: For over Fifty Years, the American Farmer and Montgomery Ward & Co. have helped each other. We have helped and are continuing to help by offering everything for the farm at the lowest prices: Tools, hardware, tires, harness, everything a farmer uses is offered at a saving.

FOR THE MEN: Everything for the man's and boy's personal use. Our bargains in clothing alone make this book invaluable to every man. There is a saving on everything a man uses or wears.

And so we say to you—don't you, at least, miss the advantage this book offers you. You and your family may just as well profit by its saving.

The coupon below brings you this big, complete Fall & Winter Catalogue free.

Your Order will be Shipped in Less than 48 Hours

Our new perfected system of filling orders is now over a year old.

And our records prove that during the past year nearly all orders were shipped in less than 48 hours.

48 hour service is our promise to you. But we do better than our promise—because a large percentage of our orders are actually shipped within 24 hours.

So you can order from Montgomery Ward & Co. and feel sure that nearly every time your order will be shipped in less than 48 hours, and frequently within 24 hours.

Mail the coupon below to the one of our five houses that is nearest you

To MONTGOMERY WARD & CO.
Dept. 19-H,
Chicago, Kansas City, St. Paul,
Portland, Ore., Fort Worth.

(Mail this coupon to the house nearest you.)

Please mail me my free copy of Montgomery Ward's complete Fall and Winter Catalogue.

Name.....

Address.....

.....

MONTGOMERY WARD & CO.

CHICAGO KANSAS CITY ST. PAUL PORTLAND, ORE. FORT WORTH

Free Trial Bottle

Read Special Offer

Gray Hair—
Stop It!
—Here is the way

Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer isn't a new experimental preparation, for I invented it many years ago to restore my own prematurely gray hair. It is a clear, colorless liquid, clean as water, which restores the perfect original color to graying, bleached or discolored hair; perfect results assured. No interference with shampooing, nothing to wash or rub off, but soft, clean, fluffy, natural hair which renews your youth.

Now I have discovered a new method of application which hastens results and improves the health of the hair. Fully explained in my free trial outfit, containing trial bottle of restorer with full directions for making test on single lock. Mail coupon for free bottle today and let me prove how easily, quickly and surely your gray hair can be restored.

In the coupon be sure to state the color of your hair carefully. Enclose lock of your hair if possible.

Mary T Goldman's
Hair Color Restorer

Please print your name and address

Mary T. Goldman, 28L Goldman Bldg., St. Paul, Minn.
Please send me your FREE trial bottle of Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer. The natural color of my hair black .....dark brown..... medium brown..... auburn (dark red).....light brown .....
light auburn (light red).....blonde.....

Name .....

Address .....

Stacomb
—For Unruly Hair

STACOMB keeps any kind of hair in place—just as it's combed. Dry and brittle, soft and fluffy, stiff and wiry hair—all kinds controlled by STACOMB.

Leaves hair soft and lustrous.

Excellent after a shampoo, or a swim.

Insist on STACOMB—the original—in black and yellow package. At all drug counters.

Tubes—35c
Jars —75c

Send coupon for Free Trial Tube.

STANDARD LABORATORIES, Inc.,
750 Stanford Ave., Los Angeles, California. Dept 2-C.

Please send me free trial tube.

Name _____

Address _____

FRECKLES DISSOLVED
Like Spots on your Clothing

Send your name and 10c for postage and we will mail you an extra large jar of Harwood's Freckle Cream; use it for one month and if not satisfied within that time return unused portion. Otherwise send $1.25. THE ONLY FRECKLE CREAM SENT ON FREE TRIAL.

Harwood Laboratories, 408, Fox St., Aurora, Ill.

Cuticura Talcum
Fascinatingly Fragrant
Always Healthful

Sample free of Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. D, Malden, Mass. Everywhere 25c.

Kill The Hair Root

My method is the only way to prevent the hair from growing again. Easy, painless, harmless. No scars. Booklet free. Write today enclosing 3 stamps. We teach beauty culture.
D. J. MAHLER, 119-A, Mahler Park, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Pretty Girls' Club

Conducted by Katherine Booth

A Cake of Pumice

"I wish I hadn't such ugly elbows," wailed a young girl of my acquaintance.

And her elbows really weren't pretty to look at. You know the kind—yellow and rough, instead of dimpled and soft.

But it would have been a simple matter for her to acquire the elbows she desired. The yellow color and the rough texture were both the result of neglect. In bathing, she had no doubt given her arms a hasty rub with a wash-cloth and assured herself that they were clean. But elbows need more consideration than that.

The girl who would have pretty elbows must possess a nail or soft bathbrush, and a cake of hand pumice.

We will assume, of course, that she takes a complete body bath daily, for without this she not only will fail in perfect cleanliness but her skin will suffer in time. So, when the daily bath takes place, this girl in pursuit of pretty elbows uses her brush and plenty of hot soapy water and scrubs those elbows of hers thoroughly. Not hard enough to irritate the skin, but much harder than she would scrub the other skin of her arm, for elbows are tougher of texture.

USING PUMACE FOR ROUGHENED ELBOWS.

A little cold cream massaged into the elbow after such scrubbing and thorough rinsing will keep the skin soft and pliable.

If the skin of the elbows is goose-pimply, or rough, then the cake of toilet pumice must be called into play. With this, before bathing, the elbow should be gently rubbed until the rough surface is somewhat smoothed. Use the pumice a couple of times a week until the roughness disappears. After applying it, follow with the bath and the cold cream.

Toilet pumice has other uses which makes it invaluable for the toilet. Too thick or impervious soles to one's shoes often produce callouses on the soles of the feet, through keeping them warm and moist. Such callouses in time produce corns on the soles. Both corns and callouses can become very painful, so the feet should be carefully watched and callouses disposed of as soon as they show signs of appearing. The feet should be carefully bathed daily, well dried especially between the toes, and rubbed with cocoa-butter. If they are inclined to be moist, omit the cocoa-butter and dust with powder, rubbing it in with the palms of the hands.

If callouses already exist, bathe the feet, soap the callous spots and then gently rub with a cake of hand pumice until the callouses are all rubbed away, after which rinse thoroughly so that no soap or pumice remains.

Stains on the fingers can often be removed by gently rubbing with pumice. In fact, a cake of toilet pumice is useful in many emergencies.

To avoid the callouses on the soles of the feet, be careful in selecting shoes. The feet must be aired, and if shoes are worn which have impervious soles then no air can get to the soles of the feet and the skin hardens, in time making a callous. That is why it is bad to wear rubbers except for the brief time in which one is walking in the wet. As soon as one comes under cover, whether in the house, at school, at the movies, at church, the rubbers should at once be slipped off. For the same reason, shoes which are soled in such a way as to be as impervious to air or moistureas rubbers, will produce the same conditions.

Comfortable feet are essential if one is to be happy, rested, pretty. With painful feet, the face shows a tenseness, the nerves are strung to irritation, and both temper and appearance are spoiled, so it behooves us to be careful in picking our shoes.

Answers to Questions

BLACK EYES.—If one cheek flushes while the other is pale, your circulation would seem to be out of order. You need exercises that will equalize the circulation, and should practice them daily. Take plenty of liquid, also, and try to eat nourishing foods—not necessarily fattening foods unless you need fat, but foods that give energy such as steak, broiled; roast beef, mutton, lamb, lamp chops, soup, eggs, soft-boiled or poached, or scrambled if you are careful that they are not allowed to harden. All these foods will give you strength and build up your blood. Milk to drink, cream on cereal and fruit, will do the same thing. Just what to eat depends on your weight. If you are over weight, you should avoid the milk, cream and cereal; if you are thin or none too fat, eat them as well as the meats I recommend and the eggs. A good exercise for you is what we call "sawing wood."

To Equalize the Circulation

Stand erect, knees straight, spine firm, chin slightly raised, chest out. Place the feet eighteen inches apart. Raise the arm high above the head, with elbows rigid and palms together. Now throw them out and down with great force and back between the legs. Breathe in as you raise the arms, breathe out as you throw the arms down. The knees must not be bent, but kept at all times rigid, the body bending only at the waist. Repeat this exercise from ten to twenty times; the lesser number until you have practiced it for a number of days and can increase the amount of exercise without tiring you or making you dizzy. Whenever an exercise makes you dizzy, it is time to stop it.

All arm and breathing exercises will be especially good for you. Remember the amount of fresh air you take into your lungs has a great deal to do with the purity of the blood, and this in turn affects the circulation. The bowels must be kept in good condition not by cathartics but by the foods you eat—stewed prunes, bran muffins, spinach, oranges, baked apples, whole wheat bread, etc., And of course you must give the body the material out of which to make good red blood.

Quince Seed lotion for the hair is made by soaking the seeds in hot water for several hours, then straining. A good recipe is as follows:

Quince Seed Bandoline

Hot water one-half pint; Quince seeds one and one-half drams; Cologne water, one-half ounce; Oil of cloves, six drops; Oil of lavendar, six drops.

After the seeds have been soaked in the hot water, the resulting thick liquid should be strained, and to this the cologne, cloves and lavender oils should be added. As a matter of fact, you can make a little bandoline at a time by using just a few seeds and hot water. It should not be too thick, or the hair will look pasty.

No, I do not think a marcelle once a week, or the use of a curling iron, will injure the hair unduly, provided always that the iron used is not too hot. A careful hair-dresser does not use too hot an iron, but rather goes over and over the wave to make it last. I think that with care in handling the hair, a marcelle once in two weeks would give you enough of a wave to last very nicely. Really the hair is much prettier after two or three days, when the stiff artificial marcelle is loosened, than when just dressed. And if you comb the hair but do not brush it, the wave will last very well. That is what I do. If you intend to have a round wave, and do your own curling, be careful not only about the heat of the iron, always testing it on paper first, but also about using it too frequently.

MISSOURI.—If you are five feet and six inches tall, you should weigh about one hundred and forty-three pounds when you are a few years older. At sixteen, you are entitled to weigh about one hundred and thirty-five. Weight depends somewhat upon the size of one's bones. A small-boned person can weigh more without looking large than a large-boned person. With your dark brown hair, dark gray eyes, and dark complexion, you could wear olive green, wine color, mahogany, a dark reddish purple, a dark pinkish tan. You should also be able to wear seal-brown and navy-blue. The brown could be touched up with trimmings with a little orange or red, the olive-green with yellow or turqoise blue. One way to secure a little variation in color is to use different materials together, as satin to trim broadcloth, or velvet as trimming on woolen dress materials. There is a difference in color through the difference in texture.

L. V.—It is dangerous to meddle with moles, as they sometimes develop into serious growths if they are picked or irritated. Large fleshy moles can sometimes be disposed of by tying a thread tight about their base. After a few days they blacken, wither and fall off. But again let me caution you that meddling with moles sometimes causes more serious troubles.

A. F.—I can't tell you how to remove the brown spots on your cheeks, but if you will regulate your diet, cut out coffee and tea and fried foods, eat sensibly and only at mealtime, drink plenty of water between meals, keep the bowels open so that they move twice a day, I think you may find that the brown spots will disappear of themselves. Practice the exercises given "Black Eyes" in this issue.

GRAY EYES.—There are certainly all kinds of eyes in the world, judging by the pen-names that come to me! Well, about that tan. If you could be with me as I write and see the fashionable young women working harder than they ever worked in their lives before trying to get a wonderful coat of tan, you would be inclined to smile. Here you are bemoaning your tan, and here are others bemoaning their lack of it! They sit out on a raft in the broiling sun an hour at a time, and then rush to a mirror to see what has been accomplished. With tan so fashionable, I shouldn't worry about mine if I were you, but if you still feel you wish to dispose of it, use a bleach, such as I will tell you how to make, and afterward watch your skin with care, wearing a wider-brimmed hat in the sun, and rubbing in a little cold cream always before going outdoors. Wipe off any surplus cream with a bit of cotton, and dust on some powder. Large veins in the hands usually indicate poor circulation, so practice the exercises I have recommended to "Black Eyes." Let your small girl's tanned skin alone. Another summer, see that she has broad-brimmed hats. As she grows older, merely protect her skin with proper headwear, and if it tans, let it! For the baby's hair, the best and only thing is massage. Feed the baby well, of course, so that it has plenty of good blood to nourish hair and make it grow thick; then every day hold it in your lap and gently go over its scalp, massaging it thoroughly. Slip your fingers each side of your child's hair under the hair, then pressing the fingers firmly move the scalp back and forth on the skull and round and round on the skull. Change the position of the fingers and repeat the treatment, and so continue until the whole head has been gone over. What do I look like? Oh, my dear, what an undertaking you have laid out for me! Could you describe yourself? Of course you couldn't! Now, here's that bleach:

Buy some almond meal and a jar of "theatrical face cream." Take one spoonful of the cream and into this mix meal until it is thick and smooth, then thin a trifle with hot water until it is easy to spread. Cut two squares of cheese-cloth big enough to cover the face, and snip a hole in the center of each for your nose. Dampen both, and spread the paste between. Bathe the face in very hot soapy water, massage for a minute, and then apply the mask, pressing it down so it touches the face in every part. Over this mask place two hot Turkish towels, folded, one over the upper half of the face to the tip of the nose, and one over the lower half of the face, leaving just the nostrils uncovered. You will need a bowl and pitcher of very hot water at hand, and the towels must be replaced frequently made hot again with the water in the bowl. Squeeze them out quickly and apply, each time. Keep this up for fifteen minutes, then remove pack, wash in warm, then cool, then very cold water. Take such a bleaching treatment twice a week for three weeks.

CONSIDER THE SOLES OF YOUR SHOES BEFORE BUYING.

LASSIE AND LADDIE.—Your hair is dry at the ends, and probably does not receive enough nourishment, hence the split ends. Your method of shampooing is all right, and the time between shampoos is of proper length. But you probably need to build up your entire bodies a little, giving them more nourishment, blood-making food, so that there may be nourishment enough to extend to the tips of the hair. Brush your hair gently each night, clear to the very tips, thus spreading the natural oil the entire length of the hair. It might not be a bad idea to mix one teaspoonful of olive oil and one of castor oil, put just a little in the palm of the left hand, quickly whisk your brush across it, and then brush your hair with that brush. But you should only have a couple of drops in the hand. Massage the scalp to make the hair grow, doing it every night. Keep the scalp well aired.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 34.)

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound, and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Any druggist can put this up or you can mix it at home at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and make it soft and glossy. It will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.—Adv.

Stillman's
Freckle Cream

Will remove your freckles or we agree to refund your money. It will whiten the skin and refine its texture. No bother—simply apply it before going to bed each night. Cannot grow hair. Two sizes 50c and $1 at all druggists. Be sure to ask for Stillman's—more girls use it than any other. Our free booklet "Beauty Parlor Secrets" describes treatment and gives many make-up hints. Get our special limited perfume offer. The Stillman Company, 59 Rosemary Lane, Aurora, Ill.

Write for booklet
"Beauty Parlor Secrets"
and free perfume offer

Real Beauty
Not Make-Up

The Wonderful Action of Stuart's Calcium Wafers to Drive Away Pimples, Blackheads and Such Skin Blemishes.

It won't take but a few Stuart's Calcium Wafers to prove to you that this is the only rational way to get real beauty in your complexion.

If your face and shoulders are troubled with pimples that become rashy at certain periods get a box of these wonderful tablets.

They clear your blood, they remove the sluggish impurities that gather to make pimples, boils, rash, blackheads, blotches, muddiness and such blemishes. The calcium itself is the greatest skin influence known. It causes the skin to wake up, it begins its work at once, you observe the results and in a few days there is absolutely no question as to the wonderful action of Stuart's Calcium Wafers. Get a 60 cent box today at any drug store, or send to F. A. Stuart Co., 641 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., for a free sample package.

REAL BEAUTY
in 20 Minutes

FAR off lands have given to this marvelous skin beautifier—Paris, the home of style and beauty, Egypt, the mysterious, and Florence, the romantic. It makes a new skin, clear and radiantly lovely——smooth and firm, with the rich, fresh glow of youth.

To use, simply cover face and neck thoroughly. Wash off and BEHOLD—a new complexion—a skin soft and velvety. It draws out the impurities, cleans the pores and removes wrinkles, blackheads, pimples and other unsightly and disfiguring blemishes. Prepared and GUARANTEED by a physician.

SPECIAL OFFER: You can now secure this miraculous beautifier at a special low price.

SEND NO MONEY— Just send your name and address, and a full $5.00 jar will be sent you. On arrival, pay postman only $1.45 plus postage. If not satisfied your money refunded.

Magic-Klay Co., Station D 30, St. Joseph, Mo.

SPECIAL OFFER!
$5 Jar for $1.45
PLUS POSTAGE

"Beauty Talks" given Free with large jar Vanishing Cream. Send Fifty Cents. OHIO LABORATORIES CO., 238 EAST FIFTH, CINCINNATI, OHIO.

MONEY Made quickly by smart men. Artol Co., 116 Nassau St., N. Y.

A Forgotten Love

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 6.)

entrance to the court. I could have touched him, but I got into a doorway. His face turned me sick, for I thought he was hanging round suspicious of me, to catch me and get his brother off.

"When he passed I went to Annie Sloane. She gave me a drink, and it made me careless. I saw her pick up a girl who fell in the street; but she had gold-colored hair, and I never looked at her face. A week after I went to Annie Sloane's again, because I was nearly out of my mind with nervousness. I knew the police were looking for me, and I didn't know why. And in Annie Sloane's house I saw Mary James, the maid, whom I had last seen in the cave at Hamilton Place.

"I ran out of the house and through the streets, for from what she said I was certain she knew. I never connected her for one instant with the girl who had been burned.

"I make this confession because I cannot otherwise die in peace. That there are two Lesards I can prove, and not I alone. On the night of Sir Simon Wellford's ball Victor Lesard was seen by Gillian and Jacqueline Hamilton. On that same night I, having taken advantage of my supposed master's absence to go to London, saw Louis Lesard dining at a cafe. I thought it was Victor, and followed him home, because I could not understand it. Even close to him, I could not believe it was not Victor, till I returned to Hamilton Place and found he had never left the neighborhood. It was after that I discovered he habitually used his brother's name.

(Signed) "JOHN BROOKES."

When the long document was finished there was silence as the judge summed up the case. But the jury did not even leave their box.

"Not guilty!" the foreman said promptly, and Lesard's iron composure gave way for the first time.

His lips trembled as he saw Gillian caught in Jacky's arms, as he saw her turn to him with a look that sent the blood to his heart. It seemed hours as he waited through the judge's address; he hardly knew or cared that Mrs. Gibbs would be committed for perjury, as well as for the old story of baby-farming, or that she stood raging that Brookes had cheated the gallows. But at last the prisoners were free to go, "without a stain on their characters."

Lesard looked neither to right nor left as he followed Gillian and Jacky out. His lean dark face was eager, his hawk's eyes misty, as he touched Vivian's arm.

"Where are they to go?" he said, and did not even look at Jacky. It was not here, before a gaping crowd, that he and she should meet.

"Bailey's Hotel," said Sir. Charles calmly. "They can have my rooms. They can't go back to Blake Street."

Wife or no wife to a thief, he would take care of Gillian!

Lesard nodded.

"Best for now," he assented, and was touched to the quick as Vivian gripped him by the hand in silence, for only he knew that if all else failed Gillian and Jacky, Lesard would have lied himself to his death to save them.

But Jacky, standing at last beside Gillian in their own sitting-room at Bailey's Hotel, was nearer despair than ever in her life. Lesard had never spoken to her, had vanished into the street as they drove away with Vivian.

"He can't forgive me," she thought, "and he's right." Yet her heart swelled as she looked at her bandaged hands; surely she had tried to right the wrong her distrust of him had done.

"He's done with me," she said to herself dully; "done with me," and then she turned with a leaping heart.

The door had opened softly. Lesard—tall, dark, splendid—stood in the room. But there was a look on his face Jacky Hamilton had never seen.

With one glance at him, Gillian had slipped from the room. Just so had Victor Lesard looked to her when the world was young, and now he was a millstone about her neck. But no one saw her go—for once Jacky had forgotten her.

"Jacky!"

Lesard stood devouring her with his eyes, but she dared not look at him.

With a little cry she pushed him away as he would have caught her to him.

"You can't forgive me, I did it all," she said with shame, and coldly. "I never was loyal—never!"

For sole answer he lifted her bodily, put her in a chair, took the bandage from one half-healed hand.

"You—not loyal—when you did that—for me!" he whispered, and his eyes had tears in them as he saw the raw scars.

"I was almost too late—and I wrote those letters that nearly ruined you. Oh! if I had killed you what would I have done?

"Lied for me, died with me, as I would have done for you," said Louis Lesard, lightly enough; but he stooped and kissed the hem of her fire-marked gown.

"My wife!" he said softly, as if he prayed.

It was long before either of them remembered Gillian; then Jacky, contrite and ashamed, cried out with self-reproach:

"Oh, poor Gill! And, Louis, Sir Charles! I'm sure he loves her and she's bound till she dies to ——" she could not speak the name.

Lesard gave a queer, short laugh.

"He says he will serve seven years for her, wait forever—but he won't need to! Victor has a wife in Canada. My lawyers stopped me to tell me so—that was what kept me. She has been married to him for five years, and she is coming over, nearly frantic, because she thinks it was he—not I—who was arrested. You knew we were Candiaans, didn't you? Victor went to the devil there, and only followed me to London because Canada was too hot to hold him. The reason I could bring no Canadian witnesses to my identity was that Victor was supposed to have been killed out there. I never spoke of him here because I knew what crimes hung over his head at home. He was my brother. I promised my mother to be patient with him, as, God knows, she was patient! But there'll be little need now. He daren't come back to England!"

Jacky started to her feet.

"Louis, I feel dreadfully about Annie Sloane!" she said. "She nursed me, and I repaid her by—you know what! What can I do for her?"

"Very little—till she forgets!" he thought; but what he said was quite different.

"Does she hate you? Then you shall go tomorrow and try to comfort her. You forget you have all the money you can spend now, Jacky. And some of it can go to Annie Sloane."

"Gill!" she interrupted him. "I forgot her. Oh, I must go and tell her!" Poor Gill, who would be happy to know that the man she had loved had deceived her!

Lesard caught her wrist in an iron clasp.

"You'd better let Vivian tell her," he said, with a queer laugh. "Would you have liked any one to come between you and me today?"

THE END.

Get The Book FREE! "A Forgotten Love" has proved to be one of the most popular serial stories that COMFORT has ever published. Those who have followed the monthly installments of this fascinating story as well as those who have missed the earlier chapters will want the complete story in book form. Why not send your order before our supply is exhausted? Send us only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, and we will send you a copy of the book free and postpaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 9.)

any of them were Cousins or not, I do not know. So if any of you cousins were bothered with three men, in a big green Chevrolet car you'll know we were it. Also, if any of you say the above described car with the words "PENN-STATE TO MIAMI FLORIDA," painted on the back of it, with the motto, "FLORIDA OR BUST," added to it—IT WAS US. By "us" I mean that the party was composed of my pal I mentioned in my other letter, my brother and myself.

While my brother is thinking seriously of "backtracking" for home, I am planning on going farther. I've been in this place long enough to suit me. Me for back where the trees grow, and where one sees grass growing. Down here all you see is sand, palmettos, etc., on the ground and pine and palm trees (where there are any trees at all). The ONE place I like in Miami is the Ocean Beach. And believe me, I surely spend a lot of time there (when I'm not working.)

And now for a little discussion: Ruth's letter needs some criticism, or I'm mistaken. And you all (Southerners say "yo' all") know my way—plain blunt criticism. Here goes: I am rather surprised to know that you "like" me, Perhaos it is as it is with me. I like you for your plain speech. I will never agree with you though—that a real He-MAN will use cosmetics. Perhaps if you'd see me now, you'd declare my appearance could be bettered by the use of some powder (for I look something like a Mexican). These tropical places are surely hard on a fellow's complexion Or that is—as far as a fair skin is concerned. For I'm tanned and sunburned till my own mother would have to look twice to recognize me. But what's the use hiding it with powder? I'm not ashamed of it. Rather I'm proud of it—it shows that I love the out-of-doors, and am not ashamed of its effects.

I'm sorry old top but I'm thinking you'd have a bigger task on your hands than you ever had before, if you'd try to teach me to like the girls. Because I'd refuse to be taught. I need no teacher. What I learn, I learn by experience; thus have no one to thank. And it'd make a lot of difference in the girl's personal appearance, whether I'd take the trouble to like her or just know her. For first appearance generally tells me pretty near what they are. Human faces are like an open book for me, no matter how much they're disguised with cosmetics.

And to come direct to the point, the fact that you have your hair bobbed, lowers you in my esteem somewhat. Yes—it's a fact. I DO NOT like bobbed hair Fact is, it shows to a certain extent that at least the girl is too much guided by fashion, instead of BRAINS. I do not mean to infer by this, that you haven't any brains. Oh no, that wouldn't be a just accusation, for you have displayed by your writing that you are equipped with a good brain. But it certainly played you false when you had your hair bobbed. A woman's hair is her "crowning glory" if she has such a glory. What a fool a woman or girl is who has nice hair, to cut it off just to please fashion—a false god.

Just add the knickerbockers, and a few other things of fashion's latest craze, and you have the typical girl of 1925. But I notice with relief that the skirts are almost full-grown this year in length—if not in breadth, Although a few of them persist in holding to the old style—I mean last year's style. And fashion has decreed that women wear long hair this year, so let's see you girls hustle a growth of two feet of hair. See if you can do it as quick as you got your locks cut short.

I pity Jack if he allows ANY woman to conquer him in five minutes, whether in a dark corner or a light one. And I pity the woman that tries it on me. I positively will not tolorate a flirt.

Well I guess I'd better "fade"; I've scolded quite a bit, and you girls are looking rather peeved, so I'll close. But not for good. Look for a letter at the end of my next lap. I'm only 1,000 miles from home yet.

Ever the same, AUGUSTUS H. TRICK.

P. S. I don't know where I'll be when this is published. Perhaps buried—with powder.

Well, old timer, here you are, emerging from your cloud of powder and pillar of puffs like an avenging six-cylindered archangel. I'm sure we are all (even Cousin Ruth!) glad to hear from you again and have news of the first lap of your "see the U. S." journey.

Gus, you sign yourself "ever the same", and the same you are, it is easy to see. Still a doughty champion ready to tilt against shams, false gods, and the inhumanities that keep us unhappy, separate and less than ourselves. You have a real gift, old boy, if you have the insight, the intuition, that can make faces "like an open book" to you. For the world turns out masqueraders of both sexes and in many disguises—of which cosmetics are often the least. As for these countenances being "an open book," Gus; have you noticed that some of 'em are like a pocketbook, but not an open one!

You tell Ruth that she has more brains than hair, Augustus; and I can fancy her reading this, giving her bobbed locks a valiant toss and seizing her ready fountain pen. Better step on the gas, Gus, and keep south of Minnesota. Your red curls may not always prove a charm to keep you from disaster and feminine wrath. Remember the girls are keeping their powder dry and you had best let sleeping puffs lie.

PILOT ROCK, OREGON.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

As I did not see my first letter in print, I am trying my luck again. I've been a constant reader of dear old COMFORT for several years and think it is the best magazine I take. Well, I guess I'm the first one to write from this county. I live out here in this wild west, as some may call it, but I like it fine. We live on a large ranch just eight miles below the Blue Mountains We also have a large mountain ranch where we turn our cattle during the summer months. Our mountain ranch is covered mostly with timber.

So many of the cousins describe themselves, so here goes; I am seventeen years old, have brown hair and eyes, and weigh 120 pounds. Well, Uncle I'm sending you a picture of myself standing up on my own horse. So you see I love to ride horseback and ride after cattle. I would like to get letters from some of the boys and girls living in the Wyoming and Montana cattle country on ranches, and I will answer all letters received from these and any other cousins. I wish some of the cousins were here as I write, to eat cherries with me as they are ripe now. As it is almost time for the stage driver to be along, I will close now—and write more next time.

Sincerely your niece, AURA M. J. CABLE.

Aura, you'll never have to pay four bits to see the "Greatest Show in the World" when you are such a bareback artist yourself. I viewed with charm and astonishment that picture you sent, showing that you can horse-trot as well as fox-trot. Billy put the photo in a prominent place in the Wild West Division of his famous Album— which, by the way, now consists of twenty-seven volumes and an appendix.

When I read letters like yours, Aura, I breathe a little deeper of the gas and grease ozone that floats in through my window. I close my eyes and try to see the waving tops of fir trees and not the waving tips of some fur piece. And I say to myself: "Here is America; this is her voice. This is our great country where broad, sun and wind inhabited acres still spread below the Blue Mountains." None of the city's festering sores is under the shadow of Pilot Rock.

I'm sorry you had to cut your letter short to keep your date with that handsome young stage driver, Aura. You might have told us more about the life that is lived on your summer and winter ranches. Perhaps you have to carry a snow shovel at your saddle bow when you "ride after cattle" in January, up on the white slopes of the Blue Mountains.

DANVILLE, 184 SOUTH MAIN ST., VIRGINIA.

DEAR UNCLE AND COUSINS:

Will you permit a tar-heel to enter your circle? Although this is a tar-heel writing at present from Virginia. I dearly love old COMFORT and especially our page. Let everyone meditate for a moment over the splendid rules printed on our enrollment cards. These cover all the ground that the word "comfort" can imply. If each and every individual should conform to these simple rules, what a better place this old world would be in which to live.

Let me say a word in regard to the letters which we write; let us put our best efforts into these letters and strive to make them more and more interesting and beneficial. Uncle Lisha, in his monthly talks, puts forth real efforts and imparts to us some of his store of wealth of wisdom. These talks are practical and helpful. We must remember how many thousands of readers scan COMFORT. Some of our letters may make an impression on someone's mind which impression will last for good or evil. God forbid that it ever be the latter!

You are probably wondering who is talking in this manner. I can only say that I am a lad of twenty golden summers. Have been graduated from high school and at present I am taking a secretarial course. I was reared in the hills of old North Carolina, the best state in the Union. Don't get angry because I said that, for it's natural for every native to say his state is the best. I taught school this past winter and endeavored to train the dear children for better citizenship. I strive to be honest and frank in all walks of life and my personal motto is: U. O. 2 B. 2. Can you read it? As to looks, that is of no great importance as it is not what a man looks like, but what he is that counts. I might say that most people look up to me. Oh, I heard some say: "Some important fellow!" No; Nature has blessed me with more than six feet of stature, and naturally folks must look up to me if they see me!

You may judge from my letter that I am a serious fellow, but I am only a boy grown to the size of a man. I hope I'll always be a boy. I enjoy fun to a certain extent, but I believe that some of our people are not serious enough. Soon we all have to pass the last milepost and we will come to sum up our life's work—and the sum total will be "regret." We may find that we have not been a comfort to others and have been entirely selfish. As we go through the garden of life let us pluck the lilies of purity and leave the red rose of lust behind—for soon the leaves will be shed and nothing but the stain left.

With best wishes to all, I'll say "au revoir."

Your nephew and cousin,
U. B. COBLE—or "ole Ben"

You talk, Ben, with a lot of wisdom early harvested in those "twenty golden summers" you tell us about. Your first score is a good one in the game! To be honest and frank, that is to be truthful and sincere, is no easy end, much though it may be desired. Yet sincerity is perhaps found oftener in youth than in any other period along life's road. There is some of the rarest and sweetest of sincereity to be found on the lips and in the heart of a fine-souled boy of fifteen or sixteen. I have seen this, perhaps, three or four times in my life and it has been a remembered thing. It is rare and it deserves worship and praise. I am not ashamed to say that when I have stood before it I have metaphorically taken off the shoes of my soul—feeling that I was in a holy place. It is hard to see this fine thing, this beauty of frankness vanish. The delicate and perfect bloom is often soon gone in the soil and crowded handlings of life's passings. The fine light, the eager answer of truth to truth, of generosity to generosity, of love to love, can fade from eyes that, in the end, become only shadowed hollows that curtain what the years bring of untruth, dissimulation, and lost illusions.

I believe, harder than I believe many things, that youth deserves and needs more careful soul-handling than it receives in current treatment at home and in school and university. We could make a finer world by a little finer and more understanding handling of those who are to come after us. Our colleges, for instance, standardize youth to a spoiling of himself and his time. The teachings of these institutions, their trending and molding, is of a past generation—and the best of youth is always a dream ahead! Why must we put them back? There results too often a stultifying that injures. And the same injury works often at home. There is curb and criticism, not love and direction. There is the desire to hold and restrain, rather than the sympathy and understanding that builds and releases. Growing things seek sun, and young hearts need love. It is literally their water of life. When it is not given or found, there is a faulty growth.

Well, Ben, you started me going on a subject I could say a lot about. I've said enough to show you that I'm "serious," too! Ben, be a boy just as long as you can, with all of a boy's honesty and frankness to which you are able to hold. It will lengthen well out your "twenty golden summers" and give you golden days.

WILBURTON, BOX 327, OKLAHOMA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

Now I shall try my luck as a member of the League of Cousins—the Happiest Family in the World! Oh, Uncle, I was so proud of my button and certificate which made me a member of the happy bunch.

It is so hot today. These hot days are against the fleshy cousins aren't they, uncle? I'll wager you are fleshy, too, Uncle. Are you?

Well, I hail from the Indian Territory, as it was known before statehood—the home of the five civilized tribes—I being a member of the Cherokee Tribe! No, I don't look like an Indian, although my mother does. I am a mixed breed: Cherokee, English, Dutch and Irish. These are all I can think of just now.

I guess you are all wondering what kind of a looking person I am to be of so many nationalities. Well, I'm just a farmer's daughter and a large-sized brunette with dark brown eyes and hair (just bobbed). I'm five feet, seven inches short, and I weigh, ah-er-well, you can just guess at this and it will have to do you.

O—O—it's kinder cool again now, and the wind is blowing so I can hardly write.

My goodness, girls what are we going to do with such naughty boys? We girls have so many faults while the boys are just perfect. If they would just look around them a little they could find enough faults of their own without letting us girls down so hard—we poor brainless little idiots. Is it nice for the boys to drink? Is it good for them to chew, smoke and use this filthy snuff? Several boys have said to me: "You use too much powder," or "you have too much powder on your face." Oh, but I get back on them! They have as many or more faults than we. They are just small boys, so I don't pay any attention to them. Most of them haven't any sisters—they just haven't any nice sisters to contend with and to slap their jaws and teach them some sense. But, oh my! they just sure like these butterfly type girls all the same!

Uncle, why don't you tell us exactly how you look, or put one of your pictures in COMFORT so that we can tell what kind of a looking person we call uncle?

Yes, I got it in for you, Uncle, 'cause you don't like brunettes. If you don't print this I'll know it's because I'm a brunette. I'll answer all who send stamps if it takes three years. But I don't think so many as that will write to me. Now I must stop this chattering.

Your cousin and niece, OZELLA PITCOCK.

No, Ozella, I am not fat. Where did you get this plump idea concerning the lines upon which my noble figure is formed? The fact is that I am built somewhat like a good stout lath, or maybe like a two by four when you look at it from the narrow side. I am as lithe and graceful as an Oklahoma sunflower swaying in a June breeze. I can tie my shoes without puffing and run up five flights of stairs two at a time—and still have breath left to say "Good morning." I declare again that I am not fat, Ozella, and I am hurt by your suspicion. You should not risk any bets on my weight. Who could love a Fat Uncle? Yet as for bets, I'll just make you one, Zellie! I'll wager a quart of ice cream that you weigh more than I do! Now, come on! Confess and send me your weight—certified to by the Fairbanks Scales Company. I'll agree to let you get weighed before dinner and you need not give me a speck or spoonful of the ice cream if you win!

I'm glad you get some of that powder back on the boys who criticize you, Ozella. I saw a young chap the other night whose left shoulder was quite liberally whitened and I fancy some girl had been getting back at him some in this talcum game. You can't teach a boy anything by slapping him, Zella, no matter how hard you swat or how many times you land on the point of his jaw. They can take a lot of this punishment and still come up as smiling and conceited as ever. Look at Cousin Gus Trick saying the same old things in his letter this month. A boy convinced against his will is sure that he is dead right still.

No, Ozella, I am not fat. And I like some brunettes!

ELKINS, WEST VIRGINIA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

This is my second letter. Billy must have chewed up the first one. However, my motto is to try until you succeed, so here I am again.

First, I will try and describe myself: I am five feet, eleven inches in height, weigh 183 pounds, have steel gray eyes and brown hair. I am seventeen years old and good-natured when I'm not mad. So this is a pretty good description of myself at the present time.

I live one and a half miles from Elkins on a farm of 70 acres. The animals on our little burg consist of two horses, two cows, three hogs, some chickens, one yaller purp, and the old cat and three kittens under barn—which is quite an outfit, don't you think, Uncle Lisha?

I am going to start to High school this fall, which is at Elkins, a fine walk.

We have just finished stacking our oats and wheat and are expecting the threshing machine here in a day or two. Say, Uncle, did you or Billy ever thresh any? It sure is a hot job.

Uncle Lisha, I am very much interested in the letter that one of the cousins wrote from a place called Loveland—which place I intend entering some time in the near future. So, Uncle, you just tell that cousin I

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 23.)

SEND COUPON
It Brings the Catalog

CHICAGO MAIL ORDER CO.
Dept. 432
26th Street and Indiana Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Please mail me, at once, ABSOLUTELY FREE, your Great Paris Fashion Catalog, showing me how your great consolidation of 3 mighty mail order houses enables me to buy everything at only 3c profit on the dollar. Delivered Free.

Name.....
Address.....
P. O.....
State.....

The World's Greatest Style Catalog FREE!

Just sign and mail the coupon and you will receive our wonderful new Free Style Catalog, showing thousands of bargains in the most stunning advance fashions for Fall and Winter, at prices that offer you unparalleled money-saving bargains.

World's Best Styles!
The World's Lowest Prices!

Just Like Shopping in Paris
BUT-You Don't Pay Paris Prices

This wonderful Style Book, filled with splendid illustrations, many of them in colors, shows the exquisite Paris models brought to America and reproduced for you at bargain prices by the Chicago Mail Order Company; also matchless offerings in the best staple apparel for every occasion and in standard underwear and hosiery, shoes and dry goods.

Send Coupon for Your Copy Now

Get the information this wonderful Style Book will give you about the latest, most popular fashions. It tells you also how the Chicago Mail Order Company, by purchasing and combining with its own organization two of New York's great mail order houses—Perry, Dame & Co. and the Standard Mail Order House—has achieved economies in operating expense which enable it to sell to you at the world's lowest prices. Read about this; also read about how we operate on a profit of only 3 cents on the dollar, how we protect you with our money-back guarantee, and deliver all goods free. Send the coupon or a postal today and get your copy of this great book, free and postpaid.

We Pay Postage On Every Order Everywhere

Chicago Mail Order Co.
Dept. 432 Chicago, Ill.

Every muscular ache must yield

Muscular aches — they seem so hard to reach, buried as they are under layers and layers of bodily tissue.

Yet relief is easily at hand. Over the aching place, gently spread Sloan's Liniment. You don't have to rub it in.

Immediately you feel a warm glow of comfort, then — almost suddenly—the pain is gone. Get a bottle of Sloan's from your druggist today.

Sloan's Liniment kills pain!

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves about $2. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a full pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break severe coughs.

To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

FREE

— this big book, accurately describing human diseases and those of horses, cattle, sheep, swine, dogs, cats, poultry and birds. Symptoms and treatment explained in detail, in plain, everyday language. Like a doctor in your family. Also contains slashed, rock-bottom, wholesale-to-consumer prices on drugs, chemicals, toilet goods, rubber goods, antitoxins, veterinary instruments, sundries, etc. Send for your copy today—it's FREE, POSTPAID.

Hospital Products Co.
Dept. B, 2806-2808 Roosevelt Road, CHICAGO

20 Yds Remnants $1.98

Just send us a money order for $1.98 and we will send you, postage paid, 20 yards of first-class piece goods in remnants from 2 to 5 yards. Every bundle includes such materials as linenes, voiles, percales, chambrays, crashes and scrims. You cannot make your own selections of goods. Bundles are worth double our price. This is a wonderful, money-saving, get-acquainted bargain. Remember, we pay delivery charges. If you are not pleased, return it at our expense and we will cheerfully refund your money. Order by No. 9. 20 yards of piece goods, prepaid, $1.98.

Walter Field Co. Dept. Z 1077, Chicago

REMNANTS SILK, VELVET, GINGHAM, ETC.

WONDERFUL BARGAIN IN 4-POUND BUNDLES of beautiful Silk Remnants for fancy work, quilts, portieres, pillows, etc. Send 10 cents for a big package of lovely silk, including free quilt designs and catalog describing our 4-pound silk, velvet, gingham, and other remnant bargain bundles; also instructions how to earn money at home by sewing.

AGENTS WANTED To sell our Remnant Bargain bundles.

UNION S. WORKS 207 Factory St., BOONVILLE N. Y.

DOMES of SILENCE

"Better than Casters"

One set equips a chair or table. Easily applied. Save furniture, floors and floor coverings. On sale at hardware and department stores.

10 cents per set P-415

Through the columns of this department our Doctor's advice regarding maternity and child welfare will be given free in answer to questions by our subscribers.

Address Mother and Baby Department, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and be sure to give your full name and address. Names will not be published.

Summer Diseases of Babies

DURING the last two talks we have used as our subject, summer diseases of babies, and this month we shall discuss cholera infantum, and while this is more often seen during hot weather, it may occur at any time of year.

Cholera infantum, or as it is often called, "Summer complaint," is an acute catarrhal inflammation of the stomach and bowels, the mucous membrane being irritated or inflamed, together with irritation of the sympathetic nervous system occurring with first teething. It is characterized by severe colicky pains, vomiting, diarrhea, and may be accompanied by fever with great prostration, occurring in babies who are teething but who have been previously healthy.

The symptoms are a simple diarrhea, followed by great muscular weakness, some nausea, spasms of griping pain in bowels, great depression, seems hard for baby to breathe, coldness or dampness of the whole or part of the body, cold, pale lips and tongue, great thirst, weak cry, and sunken pinched look to the face.

Cholera infantum is often mistaken for some of the other intestinal troubles of babies and it is important that you know at once what the illness is, for within a few hours you have a seriously ill baby with rapid wasting of its strength and flesh. The most important point to remember is the sudden and severe line of symptoms, that you will notice at once, the great weakness, prostration that comes on in a few hours. The movements from the bowels soon get watery, soaking the diapers or clothing and leaving a green stain, and you may get from ten to twenty movements per day.

The causes of this disease are teething or extreme heat which continues for several days at a time. July and August are the months that give us the most of these cases but it may occur at any time of the year.

The reasons for this are extreme heat, water supply at its lowest point as a rule, and containing more decayed vegetable matter.

Teething is a powerful predisposing cause of cholera infantum and you rarely see a baby ill with it before teething, or after the teeth get through.

Improper diet is another common cause, including sudden weaning or change in food, accidental or careless use of unwholesome food or milk, or unripe fruit or blueberries. Do not allow a baby to eat uncooked blueberries or blackberries until the child has its teeth and can chew them thoroughly and then they are not an ideal food. Unhealthy surroundings, dampness, decayed vegetable matter, poor water, water that has been contaminated by the soakings from cess-pools or sewers.

There are a few things that parents should bear in mind as preventives of cholera infantum; be sure your water supply is good and pure and not contaminated from privies, stable or henyard; do not allow vegetables to decay, or sewers or drain pipes to clog up, see that baby sleeps in well-ventilated room.

In a great many cases it is easy to find the causes of the disease, causes that are due to recklessness and carelessness and can be remedied.

There are parents who would cheerfully give their lives for the protection of their baby, but who through thoughtlessness will expose it to the serious dangers of improper food or water or allow it to breathe the foul air from an obstructed sewer-pipe or cess-pool.

The question most frequently asked is: How can I tell that my baby has cholera infantum and not some of the many intestinal troubles with disturbed stomach that cause frequent bowel movements?

The points of difference are as follows: the season of the year, baby teething, the frequent severe vomiting, the sudden early weakness, the very rapid pulse, with or without fever, cool or cold surface of body, pinched anxious expression, sighing or irregular breathing, with great thirst and great prostration.

In a few words, a child ill with cholera infantum is suddenly, seriously ill with a line of symptoms that are characteristic of this disease alone, and while other bowel troubles may appear somewhat like it they are never attended with the sudden weakness which is almost a collapse, cold clammy skin, pinched look of baby as if it had been sick for months.

Preventive measures are very important in all diseases but in none more so than in cholera infantum; clean up your homes, inside and out before warm weather comes; clean out your cellars; see that the water you use is clear and pure and that there is no chance for it to become infected by its surroundings.

If you use well water, see that the well is cleaned out often enough to keep it clean. See that there is no chance for privy or stable to drain into it.

In some soils a stable or henyard will infect a well at an unbelieveable distance if the well is located on lower ground than the stable.

This is brought about by the soaking into the ground and then getting into one of the many streams that supply the well.

In regard to treatment, send for a physician at once and until he arrives put the baby at rest and use measures to relieve pain and support its strength; you may use mustard or spice poultices or turpentine stupes on bowels. Cool sponge bathing with alcohol and water is very good; also put cold cloths or ice cap to the head if it is very hot. Stop all food and give barley water, albumen water and fresh beef juice.

Five to ten drops of brandy with food or by rectum or hypodermicly if baby seems very weak.

Peptonized milk is very good food in this disease.

If baby is very thirsty give it small pieces of ice in a gauze well wrapped up and let baby suck it.

Subject for next month is Diptheria.

Questions and Answers

CURDLED MILK.—Can you tell me what to do for my three-months-old nursing baby as there are lumps of curdled milk in every movement from the bowels and this has been so ever since she was born?

Mrs. J. M. K., Randleman, N. C.

A.—Evidently your milk does not agree with baby. Should wean her and put her on modified milk.

LENGTH OF PREGNANCY.—How many days is a baby carried after the beginning of pregnancy?

Mrs. A. M. D., Dakota.

A.—280 days from the last day of last menstruation.

DATE OF DELIVERY, AUTO RIDING—LIME WATER.—When should I expect my baby? Last day of last menstruation was May 13th.

Would it hurt me to ride 284 miles during the latter part of August?

Would a tablespoonful of lime-water before breakfast hurt me? Mrs. R. R. A., N. Dak.

A.—(a) Feb. 17th (b) No, if you have a careful driver. (c) No, absolutely not.

VOMITING OF PREGNANCY, DATE OF DELIVERY.—What can I do for vomiting of pregnancy and the headaches that follow?

When should I expect baby? Last day of last menstruation was March 24th.

Mrs. C. N. M., Duscall, Tex.

A.—Keep bowels regular, also be sure that kidneys are performing their function, avoid all excitement, sexual and otherwise; eat simple foods, liquid diet if vomiting often. (b) Baby should arrive Dec. 29th.

WORK DURING PREGNANCY, DATE OF DELIVERY.—Will it harm me to work in a factory during pregnancy?

Last day of last menstruation was May 10th. When should baby arrive? Mrs. C. F., Benton, W. Va.

A.—No, not during the early months if the work is not too hard. (b) Feb. 14th.

DATE OF DELIVERY, TIRED FEELING.—When should baby arrive? Last day of last menstruation was April 11th.

What can I do for myself as I am tired all the time?

Mrs. W. F. G., Defiance, Ohio.

A.—(a) Jan. 16th. (b) Get your druggist to put you up a bottle of Elix Iron, quinine and strychnine. Take a teaspoonful dose after each meal.

CHRONIC DIARRHEA.—My three-year-old boy has chronic diarrhea, not ill, but bowels move five or six times a day. He does not walk or use hands as he should on account of a slight paralysis following whooping cough. Please suggest diet for him.

Mrs. A. V. C., Knippa, Texas.

A.—Get your druggist to put up the following: Two ounces each of Liquid Bismuth and Elix Lactated Pepsin and give baby a teaspoonful dose three times a day; lessen dose as bowels respond to the treatment.

Give baby a quart of milk a day with tablespoonful of lime-water with each four ounces. He may also have toasted stale wheat bread, custards, coddled eggs, baked potato, cooked cereals, oatmeal, cream of wheat.

Should rub the arms and legs thoroughly each day with cocoa-butter; do not hurry him about walking or using arms.

CÆSAREAN SECTION OR LAPARO-HYSTEROTOMY.—Will you please tell me what the cæsarean operation is? Mrs. E. E. H., Wilsall, Mont.

A.—An operation which consists in cutting through the walls of the abdomen and the uterus and extracting the child, and while it is a major operation, the results are very satisfactory if done by a skilled surgeon.

NERVOUS INDIGESTION.—I am an expectant mother and am very nervous; also have lots of indigestion, pains in stomach and back.

Mrs. R. F., Frankfort, Ind.

Get your druggist to give you some tablets containing one grain each of Valerianate of Iron, quinine and zinc and take one every three hours. Keep bowels regular with teaspoonful doses of milk of magnesia and after each meal take two teaspoonfuls of Elix Lactated Pepsin.

DIARRHEA.—Is it harmful for my bowels to move three and four times a day during pregnancy? Normally I am constipated. When should baby arrive? Last day of last menstruation was Jan. 28th?

Mrs. W. W., Nealsville, N. C.

A.—Yes it weakens you if you have this number of movements, especially if the movements are watery. Take five-grain doses of Bismuth Subnitrate three or four times a day. (b) Baby should arrive on or about Nov. 4th.

BRONCHITIS.—Can you tell me what to do for my four-year-old boy who catches cold easily and is inclined to be croupy? He wheezes at night when he breathes. Mrs. J. T. L., Oakland, Calif.

A.—If your baby has large tonsils or adenoids have them removed, build up his general health with good nourishing food, also teaspoonful doses of Pepto-Mangan. After meals three times a day give him one-half teaspoonful doses of Syrup of Hydriodic Acid, (Gardner's) and I think you can clear up this bronchial condition.

SWOLLEN FEET.—I am an expectant mother. What causes my feet to swell, also blue spots on legs? When will baby arrive? Last day of last menstruation was Jan. 15th. Mrs. C. A. C., Elwood, N. Dak.

A.—The swollen feet appear to indicate that the kidneys were not performing their function; for this put teaspoonful of Cream of Tartar in pint of water, to which add a cut lemon, sweeten a little and try and drink every day.

Get some flannel, cut on a bias, four inches wide and make some bandages twenty feet long (sewing ends together), and bandage swollen legs from the toes up to and above the blue spots, as these are varicose veins and the bandaging will relieve. (b) Baby should arrive Oct. 22nd.

CONVULSIONS.—When my last baby was born I had convulsions for twelve hours, but did not have any before baby was born. What was the cause? What can I do to prevent this occurring again as I am now pregnant? Last day of last menstruation was June 3rd. When should baby arrive?

Mrs. F. B. B., Lake View, N. C.

A.—The most common cause of convulsions is that the kidneys failing in their function, urea begins to accumulate in the blood and poisons the nerve centers and unless this condition is relieved causes uræmic convulsions. Aside from this the causes are, violent emotional disturbance, anæmia, reflex irritation due to indigestible food and fecal accumulations.

Have urine examined for albumen, be careful about condition of the bowels and there is not much danger of you having convulsions with the coming baby. (b) Your baby should arrive March 10th.

DATE OF DELIVERY, MARKING CHILD.—Can you tell me when to expect baby? Last day of last menstruation was April 14th. (b) Can a baby be marked during the first month or two, or can it at all?

Mrs. G. B., Vernon, Texas.

A.—(a) Jan 19th. (b) No, I do not believe a baby can be marked.

POOR CIRCULATION.—My right arm goes to sleep and if I hold a small article in my hand it gets numb. Please tell me cause and cure. (b) What do you think of dilators for constipation and piles?

Mrs. D, A. L., Ark.

A.—This numbness is caused by poor circulation and you can get relief by the following:

Put two teaspoonfuls of Epsom Salts in pitcher of hot water and hold the hand and arm in this with water as hot as you can bear it, do this for half an hour, adding hot water from time to time.

Get your druggist to put you up some tablets containing the following: Iron Reduced, one grain; Acid Arsenous one-fiftieth grain; Strychnine, one-sixtieth grain. Take one of these tablets after meals and at bedtime.

Would not advise dilators for constipation or piles; for constipation use Cascara Sagrada; for piles use Iodex suppositories.

WHOOPING COUGH.—What can I do to relieve the spells of coughing in my two babies, aged two and one-half years, and eight months, who have whooping caough?

Mrs. I. P., Cordova Ala.

A.—Cresoline in the form of vapor has a wonderful effect in whooping cough and you can get a Vapo-cresoline lamp and burn it in the bedroom while babies are sleeping. Tincture of Belladonna in two to five drops dose every three or four hours has a splendid effect on the spasms of coughing, but could not advise your giving this unless a physician or nurse was in attendance to watch the pupils of the eyes to note the effect of the medicine.

UNDERWEIGHT.—My three boys, aged 2, 4, and 8, weigh, 37, 35 and 27 pounds and do not gain in weight. What is the matter with them, and how can I make them gain in weight?

Mrs. M. B., Provident City, Texas.

A.—Give them plenty of milk, plenty of sleep, and do not allow them to play too hard or too long at a time. Underweight may be a family characteristic.

SMALL NIPPLES, DATE OF DELIVERY.—What can I do to enlarge my nipples, as they are very small?

The last day of last menstruation was April 9th. When should baby arrive?

Mrs. A. H. Olmstead, Ky.

A.—After baby arrives, hold over the nipples a glass bottle that is heated by hot water, then quickly pound out and applied, this will draw out nipple.

(b).—Baby should arrive on or about February 8th.

Mizpah NON-COLIC Nurser

Number 76

SHAPED like a natural breast. Made of pure gum—exceptionally soft and pliable.

Nipple cut open and turned back to show interior construction.

Valve (A-B) makes nursing easy and prevents vacuum which causes colic. It will not collapse. Ribs inside of tip allow food to flow freely even when baby bites the sides together.

Broad rim (C) grips bottle firmly and won't leak or slip off. Fits any wide-mouth nursing bottle. May be boiled to cleanse without injury.

Mizpah Nursing Bottle has straight sides, no neck and may be washed as easily as a tumbler.

Nurser complete, 35c. Nipple or bottle, separately, 20c each. At your druggist or by mail, postage paid by us. Valuable booklet on "Feeding of the Baby," FREE on request.

The Walter F. Ware Co.
Dept. A, Philadelphia

Do you want Mary Ann?

She is just a big, fine, darling doll every girl's heart is hungry for. Mary Ann will come to you without costing one cent. She wants a play mother to walk with her, sing to her when she cries, rock her to sleep.

Mary Ann Can Walk—Cry Sleep—Wink

Her brown hair is soft and silky. Jointed arms and legs, bright blue eyes that sleep. Cries when you lay her down or take her up. Unbreakable head, eyes won't jar loose. Cute silk cap, pretty figured lawn dress, stockings, patent leather slippers.

She is YOURS for doing me a little favor I will send a Mary Ann doll just as described above in return for a small favor. Just write me today and I will tell you how to get her without cost. Send name and address and say "I want Mary Ann."

Send No Money

THE DOLL MAN, Dept. R.
1102 Ellsworth Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Be a Nurse

Learn In Spare Time at Home

Earn $30-35 a Week

Every woman should learn. We train Beginners, Practical Nurses, Mothers and Religious Workers by our Fascinating Home-study Method. Leading Chicago System. Endorsed by physicians. Established 25 years.

Earn While Learning

If you are over 18 and under 55 years write for illustrated catalog and 32 Sample Lesson Pages with FREE details of Money-back Guarantee and FREE NURSES EQUIPMENT.

Become Independent CHICAGO SCHOOL OF NURSING
Dept. 2810 • 421 South Ashland Boulevard • Chicago

Do Heavy Meals Begin to Tell?

Follow Your Meals With Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They Give Stomach the Alkaline Effect That Prevents Gassiness and Sour Risings.

Those old-time husky eaters often fell down on a glass of milk or a doughnut, the stomach is heavy, fills with gas, is sour and woefully dyspeptic. Truth is, it had just such attacks always, but they didn't last. Now the stomach needs help and the best thing you can do is to fortify your meals with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They give the stomach the alkaline effect, they help it to digest food, they give it materials to do this with, they absorb the gas, stop acidity, relieve pressure, and no matter whether it is pork and cabbage, pie and cheese, sausages and buckwheats or steak and onions, your stomach works without distress and you have none of those troubles due to indigestion or dyspepsia. Get a 60-cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store. Then eat and be merry.

Genuine

BAYER

Aspirin

SAY "BAYER" when you buy Aspirin

Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer product prescribed by physicians over twenty-two years and proved safe by millions for colds, headache, toothache, earache, neuralgia, lumbago, rheumatism, neuritis, and for pain in general. Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proper directions. Handy boxes of twelve tablets cost few cents. Druggists also sell bottles of 24 and 100. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

Sears, Roebuck and Co.

The World's Biggest Mail Order House Gives the World's Biggest Values

Stunning Paris Hat

of exquisite fashionable silk moire. Two immense plaited rosettes of silk moire ribbon. Side poke style with clever dent at side. Tailored cording on brim. Silk lining. Width of hat, 14 inches. Front to back, 12 inches. Colors: All black; all oakwood brown (the new medium shade); sand color hat with dark brown ribbon, or navy blue hat with cinder (pearl gray) ribbon. State color. Shipping weight, 2 lbs. 3 oz.

78N9018D—Av. Head Size.
78N9020D — Extra Large Head Size.

Shipped from CHICAGO or PHILADELPHIA store.

$4.85

Beaverette Fur Collar and Cuffs

This Great Book Offers Astounding Savings

In all America there is no book that equals this wonderful 1100-page Sears-Roebuck FALL AND WINTER CATALOG. To over one-fourth of all the families in the United States it brings the very latest New York and Paris styles—the greatest assortment and variety of new, fresh merchandise from which to select—and the RIGHT PRICES for the RIGHT quality. Are you using this big, money saving book in your home? Over 9,000,000 customers say, "We couldn't buy right without it." Just your name and address will bring a copy of our latest catalog. WRITE for it now!

$12.98

All Wool Serge

The attractive new straight line jacket is handsomely adorned upon back panel as well as at side below pockets with heavy quality fiber silk braid and rows of small tasteful buttons. Narrow tailored string belt fastens in front and tailored revers and collar may be worn open if desired. 32-inch coat lined with good quality fancy sateen. The tailored skirt has slashed pockets and is shirred in back beneath detachable belt.

WOMEN'S REGULAR SIZES—32 to 44 inches bust; 30 to 38 inches front length of skirt. State exact size. Shipping weight, 4 pounds.

31N9250D—Navy Blue
31N9251D—Black
$12.98

Shipped from CHICAGO or PHILADELPHIA store.

Order Direct From This Advertisement

$12.98

Warm! Stylish! Dressy!

Coat is made of all wool velour with a large collar and wide cuffs of fine, dark brown beaverette (clipped coney) fur. The fashionable loose back has a smart box plait down center and is decorated with tiny rows of fiber silk embroidery stitching, ending beneath large button at hip line.

Coat is of the new side closing style with large ornamental button and a graceful side tie sash. Slash pockets are distinctive in their artistic stitched outlining. Length, 48 inches. Unlined.

WOMEN'S AND MISSES' SIZES—34 to 46 inches bust measure. State size. Shipping weight, 6 pounds.

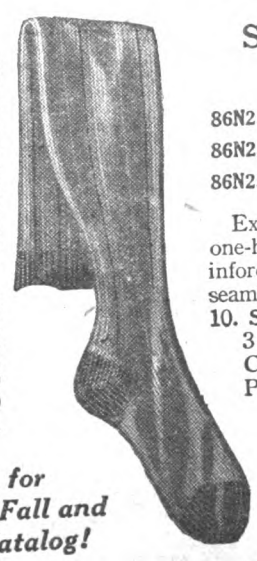
17N1345D—Navy blue
17N1346D—Brown
$12.98

Shipped from CHICAGO or PHILADELPHIA store.

The Season's Smartest Style

15N2834D—BROWN.
15N2835D—BLACK.
GENUINE GOODYEAR WELT
Genuine Vici Kid Lace Oxford.
Military Heel With Rubber Top Lift.
SIZES—2½ to 8. Wide Widths Only.
Shipping wt., 1½ lbs.
Shipped from CHICAGO or PHILADELPHIA store.

$2.98



Charming Fur Choker

Beloved by the style world is the single skin Double Furred Choker of stone marten opossum. The delightful style offered here comes in stone marten opossum fur, brown marten opossum fur or in the rich genuine stone marten fur. Average length, 24 inches. Shipping weight, 1½ pounds.

17N679D—Stone Marten Opossum $4.95
17N680D—Brown Marten Opossum $4.95
17N681D—Genuine Stone Marten. $35.00

Shipped from CHICAGO or PHILADELPHIA store.

$4.95

Stylish Ribbed Stockings

86N2531D—Brown heather.
86N2533D—Sand Tan.
86N2530D—Black.

Extra fine quality. About one-half Australian wool. Reinforced heels and toes. Fully seamless. Sizes 8½, 9, 9½ and 10. State size. Shipping wt., 3 oz. Shipped from CHICAGO or PHILADELPHIA store.

89¢

Write for 1100-Page Fall and Winter Catalog!

The World's Biggest Mail Order House Gives the World's Biggest Bargains

More people buy from Sears, Roebuck and Co., than from any other mail order house in the world, because they get more for their money here. Year after year they have proved that "The World's Biggest Mail Order House gives the World's Biggest Values!" Our great Fall and Winter Catalog shows 28,000 ways to save. Send for it today!

FREE Catalog Coupon!

Sears, Roebuck and Co.
Chicago Philadelphia Dallas Seattle

Send Latest General Catalog No. 91C14

Name .....

Postoffice .....

Rural Route ..... Box No. .....

State .....

Street and No. .....

Sears, Roebuck and Co The World's Biggest Mail Order House

A TOUCH OF ROMANY

By Felix J. Coch

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

WHETHER it was the lazy langour of the early spring morning, or whether, perhaps, it was the result of having stayed up until—well, unknowable hours the night before,—the ideas would not shape themselves to the pen.

Dorothy took up a sheet of the thin, white paper, —wrote a heading, placed her pseudonym beneath; started a sentence,—managed to get half way through; then, crumpled the sheet in her stout little hand, and threw it aside. It would not do!

"What in the world the people do who have to live by their pens I'd like to know!" she mused looking wearily, and half-angrily out the window.

GYPSY WOMEN BEGGING COPPERS IN ROMANY.

"That plot's just as plain to me—I see those situations just as clearly—and yet I simply cannot put things down in such a shape that they'll get by!"

Down in her heart of hearts the girl knew the exact truths, of course; she was tired; suffering from a plain case of brain-fag.

Dropping her pen, and pushing the paper back to the rear of the desk, she leaned into the cushions of the armchair. Her eyes wandered between the drawn curtains, fluttering lazily at the window, and out into the mass of budding foliage, to the avenue. There, just now, the spring sun danced on the wet highway, where snows had been just lately melting; a scissor-grinder called his trade, a nurse was trundling a little one; all the world seemed to be calling to come out-of-doors and play!

Accentuating this challenge to the wanderlust the more, just beneath the open window, on their own walk, Bridget was humming "Little Rover", as she plied her broom at the regular Saturday morning "outside-work."

Things at Roosa's moved as per time-table in the matter of day's work always. Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays, each had their set tasks, each of which took about just so long, and so began and ended at about a given period. So you might have rested assured that, weather permitting, every Saturday morning, at about half past nine, you might have seen Bridget, with her pail, out on the walk, plying the broom, or the brush, on the outside work. With quite as much accuracy might you have foretold that every Saturday morning, up in her boudoir, Miss Roosa indulged in her favorite avocation,—writing, let us hope for print.

The spring breeze,—the rhythmic swish of the broom below; perhaps it was the theme of Bridget's song, sung in a voice that was not wholly unmelodious,—had their effect on the tired brain of the pseudo-literateur, and the girl began to find the thought-train flowing the more easily.

She turned at the desk,—seized the big pen, and then—well, just then occurred the incident without which, it is safe to say there would not have been born the present story!

First, from far out of distance there came a strange jingling of bells, like distant sleigh-bells on a frosty morning.

Next,—and then accompanying this, as it continued drawing ever nearer and nearer, there came the calls of children, their laughter, their shouts; all the hubbub of a miniature mob almost, of girls and of boys, evidently following a mysterious something.

Looking up, Dorothy saw the something coming toward her from the lowermost end of the street, and then out of a quiet cross avenue. In that direction there was only Brown's house; then came a broad vacant lot; then one had the Roosa's.

Whatsoever this unknowable something might be, it had stopped at Brown's; but, finding windows barred, and for rent signs about, it was now moving on.

The girl rose from her chair to study the mysterious comer, when Bridget knowing but too well the shortest cut to her young mistress's favor, burst into this sanctum of sanctums, to which no intrusion was to be made, on any count, except on cleaning days,—unheeding.

"Quick, Miss Dorothy! Where is your camera?"

"There's coming just the kind of picture you been wantin' so long, an' as you been a tellin' me to keep an eye for!"

Even as she spoke, Bridget had the girl's hat from the closet-shelf near, and was bringing the little camera from a dresser-drawer, where the girl kept it handy for just such occasions as these. Pictures of such sorts helped tremendously both to sell the things she wrote, in the first place, and, in the second, to swell the checks which were then paid!

A GYPSY CHIEF.

Dorothy in turn, stopped not on the going.

With a touch to her hair, and a touch to her cheeks, she seized the waiting camera and followed the maid to the porch, and then down the walk to where the gypsy-caravan was already halting.

The wagon in which this particular tribe was traveling was a model of its sort, she marked immediately. It was one of the newest styles of the homes upon wheels built for the richer tribes of gypsies who do not care for the home-on-the-motor-truck employed elsewhere now, that infest the suburbs of our cities in the spring.

At far front, a dusky driver had a seat; this set well back, with a pane of glass placed just before, to protect him from warm spring showers. Next to this driver's seat, in a recess, there was a place for the stove; this serving to heat the entire wagon through the chilly evenings, as well as for cooking when the rains poured outside.

Just behind this sector of the wagon, and reached by a sliding door that folded off, very neatly, into a niche in the wall, there was an improvised china-cupboard, scullery, linen-closet and fruit-cellar; shelf on shelf, crammed with just everything a gypsy heart might desire. The doors to this were open now,—evidently carelessness after belated breakfast here,—and the contents stood revealed to whosoever would gaze!

So much, then, for what one might have seen at first glance.

Even as Dorothy's well-trained eye marked each of the details, the wagon lumbered slowly on. Then a rear view of the van presented.

Berths to hold two persons each, and then set two high, were exposed at the rear here. Access to these was given by a winding stair, a miniature, almost, of those to the backs of the trams of London. At the edge of one berth, a bench these lower ones formed by day; the upper folding against the sides of the wagon; a gypsy woman sat, mending a shirt. Two little children were just across from her.

Behind,—perhaps in order to enjoy the great out-doors the more, —there was a gypsy boy of fourteen years of age or so; a girl, perhaps a year his junior; and then a big, black dog, who trudged along bravely in the highway.

Dorothy rushed off toward the caravan.

"Stop! Stay a minute! I want to get your pictures!" she called at them, eagerly.

The gypsy driver reined his team. Evidently, in the course of their peregrinations, he had fallen afoul of a very great many such enthusiastic picture-seekers.

The gypsy woman too, had heard; she was leaning out of the window at wagon-side to see just what would happen. Meanwhile the children and the dog drew close.

"Silver! You must give us silver, if you want our pictures!" the woman called now to her, covering the face with an arm, against a shrewd snap-shot, before Dorothy had half-ways aimed. The children slipped into the van and hid, the driver turned his back upon her.

Meanwhile, the neighborhood boys and girls, the other children from nearby avenues who'd been following the van, laughed, and scattered themselves in the roadside grass to see what the outcome might be.

Dorothy knew but too well the value of such pictures as promised, in work of her sort, to stop at so slight a matter as "silver." Already the splendid types of genuine Romany had gone squarely to heart with her! She knew what their pictures would mean to the editors to whom shown!

She turned to Bridget, watching also.

"'Got any money with you?" she asked.

Bridget fumbled the big leather pocketbook, kept filled for hucksters, cash-grocers' boys and the like.

"I've only got a silver dollar in change, Miss Dorothy!" she replied.

IN ROUMANIA—GYPSY FAMILY IN FRONT OF MUD HOME WATCHING FOR TOURISTS.

"That ought to do. Lend it to me."

Then Dorothy proceeded to bargain:

"Now, if you folks'll drive the wagon just a little more into the sun there and gather around it, and pose for me in a group, and then as I place you, —singly or in couples,—I'll give you this dollar."

The gypsy-woman, shrewder than her spouse, haggled a moment.

The girl, however, would not be blackmailed.

"No," she fibbed exquisitely, "It's not worth more than that to me. Gypsies come through here ever so often and if you folks won't pose for that, I'll wait till the next tribe comes. I guess I can do without, as well as you can."

With that she turned, and stepped off, toward the houses.

The gypsy woman was disconcerted. Her husband growled an unknown something, and a gypsy boy called out:

"Now Ma!"

Evidently dollars aren't picked up as easily as that, the long trails over, with Romany the days through.

"Come back, Miss! We'll do it for the dollar!" the woman called at last.

Suiting action to his wife's word, the man drove the wagon into the most golden patch of sunshine visible; struck the attitude the girl requested, and the button was snapped.

Meanwhile the gypsy woman, came from the wagon for the group-picture to follow, stood in the path beneath the trees here, staring at the girl in a curious way; seeing, of course, but rather as does one whose thoughts are otherwheres!

Suddenly, waving the inquisitive neighbor-children out of hearing with a gesture that left no misunderstanding, she turned toward her caller, and said:

"You—are—Miss—Dorothy—Black?

"Your—father,—he—was—the—man what open the big coal-mines in Kentucky?

"Your father, he die by fall down shaft in coal-mine!

"You only child.

"You no cousins in this part country. You no aunts.

"You got lots friends. You much liked!"

The woman drew closer still, as one who would impart a tremendous secret.

Then she put a big, brown hand upon the girl's fair white one; smiled, as one would to show the kindest feelings to the visavis, and said:

"Remember what tells you now old woman from Romany:

" 'Friends don't stay always friends!' "

Bridget had slipped away for some cookies for the gypsy children; she was back and distributed these.

Her mistress stood silent, looking, quizzically puzzled, at the gypsy woman.

Hard matter-of-fact, prosaic, and unromantic though the Anglo-Saxon likes to presume himself to be, the lure of the occult persists,—an inherited trace it is, perhaps,—in the veins and will out, given just half-ways the chance!

Romany,—the gypsies,—the chance to peer off to the future—it gripped her, it grips you, it grips me, howsoever much we may deny.

The gypsy woman, knowing her shaft to have struck home—as such shafts from her, she knew well, invariably did—stepped a bit closer still.

Quietly she turned the palm of the girl upon her own hand. Then she bent over, and scanned the white flesh closely. She took the dollar the girl had given her; crossed the palm, looked off to space, and in a low, far-away, almost musical tone of voice went on anew:

"Me see a parting of the ways.

"Me see that there is sickness by you."

The girl's mother was bed-bound; a lingering disease.

"Me see you often in big trouble, wondering who to turn to—to help you—to give good advice!

"Me see you worry over future.

"Everybody must someday say good-by for always to the dear ones.

"You no lose the dear one for long time yet—but, someday—she is like us all."

Manifestly the gypsy had studied hard to improve her English—such English as she must employ in telling fortunes where-so-e'er.

Subconsciously, Dorothy was wondering where woman had read such lines, or who it might be that had taught her.

Consciously, she could not help but finding herself marvelling!

Frankly, this reading of her mind—this stating conditions in which the girl was bound at this time—was small short of miraculous!

The theme of the lonely future was the one which played in Dorothy's mind more, perhaps, than any one other!

When Mother went across the Big Divide and she was all alone, well-to-do though, she might be, what then?

Accustomed to such seances as this, the gypsy man and his oldest boy were keeping the neighbor children away.

The gypsy woman pressed down the thumb of the girl a very little; then straightened two fingers.

"You got—" she paused a moment, "many friends.

"Three of these want to marry you.

"The one,—I see a needle—I see cloth——"

She must have meant Rendigs, the tailor.

"He nice feller, but—he too loose with his money! He not save; he cannot for himself now;—he wants rich wife.

"You take care!

"Next man—you, he—good friends now.

"But never last for life as friends.

"He older in his ways than you now. No theater —no concerts—no movies; no going out, see folks, no dances. He take you out now 'cause he want to marry you.

"After you married—night to home always; no place—no movie-shows!"

Motion-pictures, strangely enough, were Dorothy's especial hobby. She attended very nearly every first national production to come to town.

Nor, in turn, did it take a Solomon for her to guess to whom the gypsy had alluded. Tom Hoard had been coming oftener and oftener of late. He took her here, there, the other place, but more times than once she had remarked how absolutely little interest he showed in the entertainment forming the program.

Once, especially, at the most thrilling bit of climax in the stupendous silent drama on the screen there, she had turned to him for an expression, only to note him half-asleep. Again, on their way home from a symphony concert he actually could not recall the soloist's last name.

"Nice fellow, Hoard, but—perhaps the gypsy was right!

The woman bent the thumb back a little farther.

"Now," she continued softly, but a strange tremor in her voice the meanwhile," there comes the other;

"He love you very, very much.

"Now, he write a story to give you when it finished—because he know you, too, like to make stories here.

"Long time 'fore he knew you, he spent all money can spare on books, on hearing big men talk, on music.

"He know much as you do about movies—pictures—about all the things you love.

"You two marry—you be happy—very happy!"

The gypsy crone raised her dark, wonderful eyes to the girl's soft brown own and fixed them as might some magnet. She laid her soft brown hand on the softer white one once more and stroked it very gently.

Her tones were strangely low, sweet and clear.

"Me see that man—he be a teacher—and you go on—and on—and on! Happy—so happy! He love you much—Oh, so much! I see you, in his play months—on ships—on trains.

"You go England—our England. Some day you go down the blue river—the Danube—to Romany—our old home. You see the gypsies—Romany; then you remember the gypsy-woman — me — what tell you all this happiness if you do—you pick now—as gypsy woman says!"

The man on the wagon-seat called at this point. They really would have to go!

The little gypsies scampered aboard the wagon; the woman bowed, gypsy-wise, to the girl, and took her seat.

The wagon and its bells rattled on merrily toward the next house, where, again, the woman slipped to a door to tell fortunes.

The girl was left behind.

She threw herself to a porch-chair and thought!

Somehow, the gypsy's message was disconcerting!

Foolish?

Of course those things were foolish!

But, foolish or no, it was stran——

There are thoughts left implanted in the minds of the best of us, at times, often by those of meaner degree, that sink home—that fall deep, and that stay!

The more we may try to forget the same, the more we ponder them. The more we ponder, the more convinced we grow.

Dorothy returned to her desk, but the scenario she'd been writing, resting there half-finished, seemed tame, lame, commonplace. She tore it up, and threw the shreds to a basket at one side.

She tried another, then made another, start. Thoughts simply would not come. She gave up in disgust!

Finally, having no rest, she stepped to the bookshelf, and proceeded to scan the account the Encyclopedia gave of the gypsies. Next she dug out an old book of her girlhood days and read more still of these nomads.

But behind the tale—behind each printed page—there rose high the thought—the comparison made —of the three men, and, along with this, the wonderful truth and the accuracy of the gypsy's characterizations. The girl found herself pondering the matter ever more deeply.

By and by the sick mother waked from her long morning nap and Dorothy stepped to the bedroom to tell her a part—but not all—of the morning's experience. They discussed the gypsies—what the girl had read of the subterranean hovels they tenant in Roumania and the like. Then came noon, and life went on as it otherwise would.

It's a strange phase of human nature that we so often discover in people just what we seek to find.

The proverb has it that "To the good all things are good!" and whether that be true or no, to the seeker there most assuredly comes—again and again—that for which he makes his search.

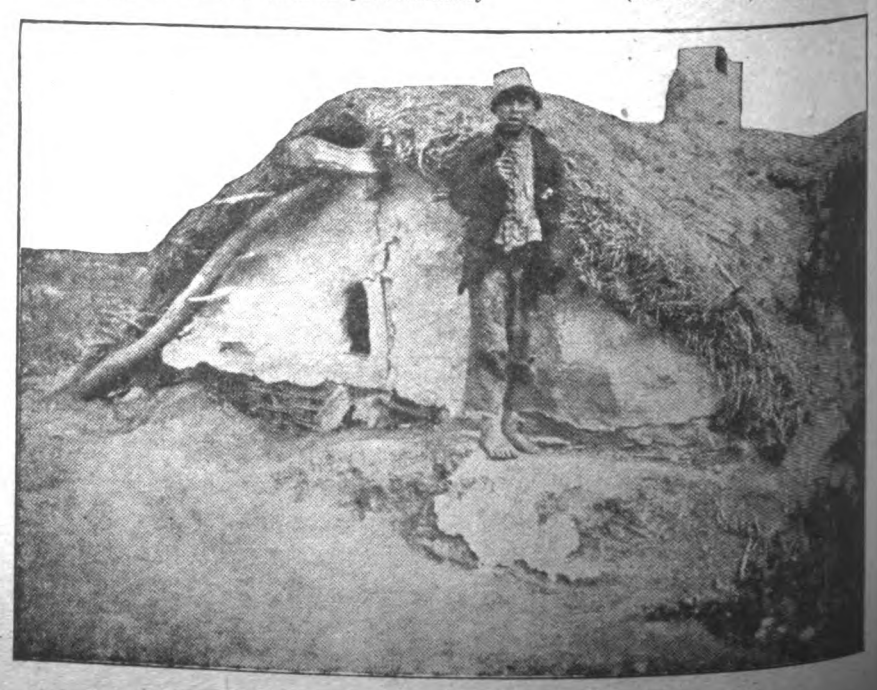
"Ask and it shall be granted unto thee!" it is written, remember.

Dorothy Roosa began to measure her suitors in the terms which the gypsy had set her!

Handsome Joe Rendigs was a mighty nice fellow —good dresser—good spender—attentive; but he had a dozen strings to his bow—was settling to none; counted all these girls as his friends, and so nothing would come of it.

Quiet George Higgins was a student—no more. He enjoyed being with Dorothy because—as he put it once, "she talked sense." She could interest herself in the marvels of Nature—in his ultra-technical discoveries in botanical biology—she could enjoy the hitherto unexplored world the microscope opened for him, as well as talk of much lighter things. But Higgins was too wrapt in his sciences to bother his head over wooing. So with the other men, possibly meant by the gypsy; she found this point and that which excluded them from the list of possible winners.

By and by she narrowed down to the three anew, as the gypsy had done—and the more the words of the gypsy crone returned to her ears, the truer those words appeared!



While man may do the proposing, it is woman who leads up to—who really paves the way—to it! It doesn't take a half-ways skillful woman any time at all to show the most ardent suitor that he simply has no chance at all—and this without ever approaching the real theme of marriage squarely; nor yet wounding his feelings in the least.

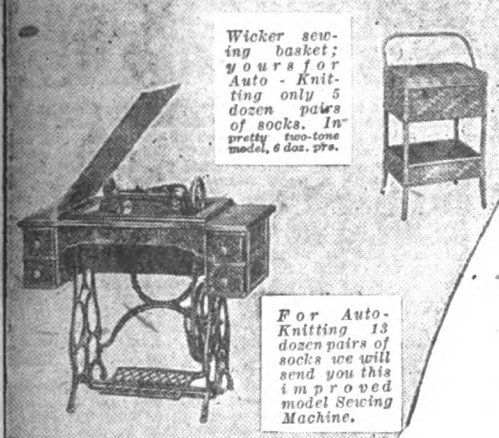
So it followed that bit by bit, the one man, the

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 23.)

A GYPSY KIDDIE.

ANOTHER STYLE OF DUGOUT DWELLING IN GYPSY LAND.

Auto-Knit 20 dozen pairs of socks for this America Vacuum Cleaner complete with attachments.



Auto - Knit 2 dozen pairs of socks and we will send you this handy electric iron.

Chest of Rogers 1881 Silverware, guaranteed for 20 years, sent to you for Auto-Knitting only 5 dozen pairs of socks.

Younced Auto-Knit only 8 dozen pairs of socks for this beautiful and useful 7-day clock.

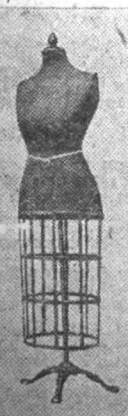
You Can Earn these Things at Home— In a New Double Quick Way!

A Unique Plan Now Doubles the Purchase-Value of Every Auto-Knitter Dollar—Paid for Spare Time Work at Home

Wicker sewing basket; yours for Auto - Knitting only 5 dozen pairs of socks. In pretty two-tone model, 6 doz. prs.

For Auto-Knitting 13 dozen pairs of socks we will send you this improved model Sewing Machine.

For Auto-Knitting 15 dozen pairs of socks you can secure this wicker set consisting of desk and chair. Desk alone, 10 dozen pairs: chair alone, 5 dozen pairs.



Handy valise, reinforced in leather. Sent for Auto-Knitting only 3 dozen pairs of socks.

Handsome phonograph with clear, beautiful tone. Yours for Auto-Knitting only 35 dozen pairs of socks.

Auto-Knit only 2 dozen pairs of socks for this useful Dress Form in your size.

A NEW kind of money will henceforth be paid to men and women who work in their spare time at home on the Auto Knitter. It is double-value money. It is money that does double duty in buying the things you want.

Let us explain the amazing new plan to you in this manner:

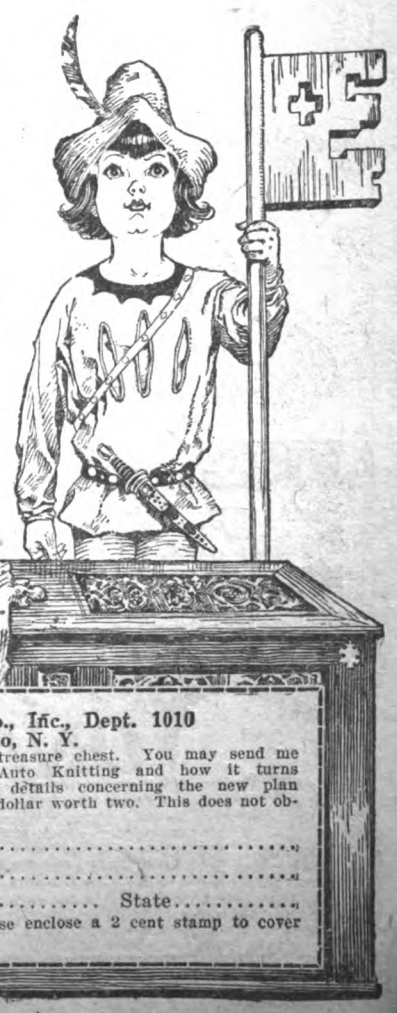
Miss Stasie R. Harabis, of Texas, made $400.00 Auto Knitting for 7 months in her spare time at home. That $400.00 under the new plan, would actually have $800.00 purchase-value.

Mrs. O. F. Ladd, of Arkansas, Auto Knit 2500 pairs of socks in one year. Under the new plan she could have furnished her home with these earnings.

In other words, this new idea represents PROFIT-SHARING in one of its most generous forms. It gives you the greatest value for your spare time. It doubles the value of the money you earn — pays you in dollars that buy twice as much value as ordinary dollars.

As an Auto Knitter home worker you select your own hours, work as much as you please. For every dozen pairs of socks sent in by you we pay a standard, fixed price. The wage-rate now paid to Auto Knitter home workers is greater than ever before in the history of this organization. And now, through the new plan, your pay-check has just twice the purchase value!

Auto Knit Those Wasted Hours Into the Luxuries You Have Always Wanted



Our Big FREE Book Tells How

Perhaps it is an attractive new phonograph you would like to have. We will send you the one illustrated for Auto Knitting only 35 dozen pairs of socks!

Or it may be a sewing machine you want, or a new dining-room suite, or a vacuum cleaner, or a washing machine. See how you will be able to furnish your home by Auto Knitting those wasted hours and half-hours into double dollars—under the new plan.

Only 5 dozen pairs of socks bring you a 26 piece chest of beautiful Rogers 1881 Silver Plate, guaranteed for 25 years. Only 17 dozen pairs bring you a handsome white enamel Kitchen Cabinet, fully equipped. Only 8 dozen pairs bring you a Mahogany Davenport Table.

Our big Reward Book, now ready, illustrates the many useful and beautiful things you can now earn double-quick in your spare time. We will be glad to send you a copy free.

Send For Full Information

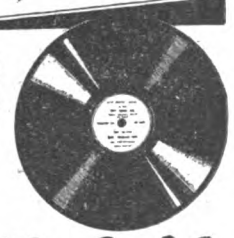
The coupon is a golden key that will open the treasure chest for you. Use it—today, before you forget. Thousands will take advantage of this great opportunity. You cannot afford to let it slip by.

Let us send you complete details. Just clip and mail the coupon—and it will bring you all the information you want regarding Auto Knitting and the new double-dollar plan. We will include a copy of the Reward Book.

No cost. No obligation. Just your name and address on the coupon. But send it off today, before you forget. THE AUTO KNITTER HOSIERY Co., Inc., Dept. 1010, 630-638 Genesee St., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Auto-Knitter Hosiery Co., Inc., Dept. 1010
630-638 Genesee Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

I want to turn the key to the treasure chest. You may send me FREE full information regarding Auto Knitting and how it turns wasted hours into dollars. Also all details concerning the new plan that now makes every Auto Knitter dollar worth two. This does not obligate me in any way whatever.



Name .....

Address .....

City ..... State.....

Note—The treasure is heavy. Please enclose a 2 cent stamp to cover cost of mailing to you.

Home Sweet Home
Lullaby (Erminie)
Old Folks at Home
Sweet and Low
In the Gloaming
Annie Laurie
Ben Bolt
Old Black Joe
Auld Lang Syne
Schubert's Serenade
Comin' Thro the Rye
Last Rose of Summer
Kathleen Mavourneen
Love's Old Sweet Song
My Old Kentucky Home
Nearer My God To Thee

$2.98 For All

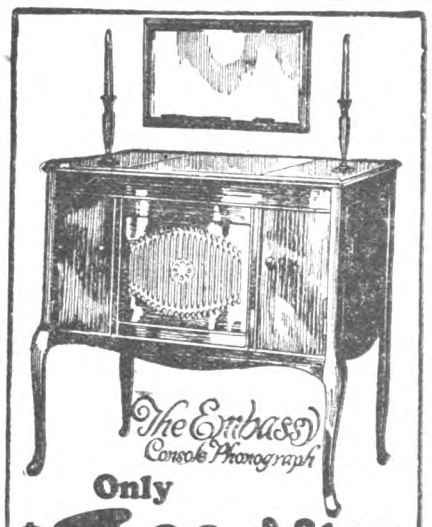
Sixteen Wonderful Old Time Songs

On Eight Double-Face Full Size 10-inch Records

Here are the songs that never grow old—the favorites you remember as long as you live, ballads that touch every heart. Just the music that should be in EVERY HOME. Eight full size 10 inch double face records—16 wonderful old time songs—quality guaranteed equal to highest priced records—All for only $2.98. Can be played on any phonograph.

SEND NO MONEY

Try these records in your own home for 10 days. If not delighted the trial costs nothing. Don't send a penny now. Pay postman only $2.98 plus few cents for delivery on arrival. Money back at once absolutely guaranteed if you are not more than pleased. Mail Coupon or letter NOW. This offer may not be made again.



National Music Lovers, Inc., Dept. 610, 314 Fourth Av., New York

Nat. Music Lovers Inc., Dept. 610, 354 4th Ave., N. Y.

Please send me for 10 days' trial, your collection of Old Time Songs on eight double-face ten-inch records, guaranteed equal to any records made. I will pay the postman only $2.98 plus few cents for delivery on arrival. This is not to be considered a purchase, however. If the records do not come up to my expectations, I reserve the right to return them at any time within 10 days and you will refund my money.

☐ Mark X in square if you also desire Patented Record Album at the special price of only 69c (store price $1.00). Holds eight records.

Name .....
Address .....
City ..... State .....

The Embassy Console Phonograph

Only $100 After Trial

An offer which removes all risk and doubt. Enables you to hear its wonderful tone and to inspect its beautiful design. Sent on free trial. You are the sole judge. If you like it, keep it, and send us only $1.00 as first payment, after the free trial. Easy monthly payments after that.

Plays all Records
A disc instrument which plays all makes of disc records.

FREE Beautiful Mirror Elegant Candlesticks 20 Selections

You get them absolutely Free on this offer. Send letter or postcard today asking for free book which gives you complete information about this unusual offer.

F. K. Babson, 19th St. & Marshall Blvd. Deek 87-07 Chicago, Ill.

You can play a CONN

Easiest of all instruments to play, the Conn saxophone is also hailed best by famous stars.
Play popular tunes in short time.
Big money, lots of fun for you.
Free Trial—Easy Payments.
C. G. Conn Ltd., Elkhart, Ind.
1010 Conn Building

CONN

CULTIVATE YOUR MUSICAL BUMP

Little Dog Angels

By Frances L. Garside

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

"High up in the courts of heaven today
A little dog angel waits,
With the other angels he will not play
But he sits alone at the gates;
'For I know that my master will come,' says he,
'And when he comes he will call for me.'
* * * * * *
"And his master far on the earth below,
As he sits in his easy chair,
Forgets sometimes, and he whisteles low
For the dog that is not there.
And the little dog angel cocks his ears,
And dreams that his master's call he hears,
And I know when at length his master waits,
Outside in the dark and cold
For the hand of death to ope the gates,
That lead to those courts of gold,
The little dog angel's eager bark
Will comfort his soul in the shivering dark."

TO mention the Canine cemetery in the suburbs of Hartsdale, New York, a little town nestled in the hills thirty miles from New York City, is to start an argument. Those who have never known the comfort and courage found more surely in the love of a dog than in the love of a human being, contend that to lay aside ground in which to bury dogs, and to erect monuments to their memory is criminal. They mention, to clinch the argument, the poor children who might be clothed and fed with the money that goes into marble.

But those whose hearts are still tender over the loss of a four-footed friend can agree only so far, but no farther. It may be wicked to erect a mausoleum costing thirteen thousand dollars "to the memory of Sally and Toodles" when children the world over are going to bed hungry; but—a pause, the defender of those who love dogs, beyond the grave looks down. It is almost as if he felt a little cold muzzle pressed against his hand. He sighs, and lamely concludes:

"After all, it is their business."

It is their business, and so seriously do they make it their business that this little last resting-place for dogs has grown from thirty little green mounds the first year twenty-eight years ago to over four thousand, there being over four hundred interments in the past year. These faithful little friends are not buried, and then forgotten. There is never a mound that in time resembles the forgotten one in a cemetery for human beings; the little mound is promptly sodded, a monument is erected, flowers are planted in their season, a uniform covering of pansies in May, with the first snows of November hiding a coat of scarlet begonias. It is the most exquisetly kept cemetery in the United States and the largest canine cemetery in the world.

The idea had conception in the brain of Dr S. K. Johnson, a veterinary surgeon of New York City, while traveling in Europe. There was one in London, one in Paris and one in Edinburgh—little cemeteries for good dogs whose days had ended. He came back to America, purchased the land at Hartsdale, and from the beginning it found favor among those who had loved and lost four-footed friends.

"Ah," those who live in other sections of the country may say, "only New Yorkers would be so foolish as to go to such expense for a dead dog." But a man who moved with his family recently to New York state from Alberta, Calgary, felt the family circle was incomplete, and had the body of his dog disinterred from its resting place in his dooryard in Alberta and brought to the Canine cemetery in Hartsdale. Another man moving from New York to make his home in Switzerland (He was a Scotchman) took the body of his dog from the cemetery, placed it in a metallic casket, and took it with him.

Again the argument ending with a translation of this expense into clothing and food for destitute children, and against the silence of the man who is thinking of a certain little dog angel.

The grounds, which at present cover more than seven acres, spread over the slope of a hill, falling in terraces to the paved street below. Above the entrance to the large iron gates stands a bronze and marble monument to the memory of the American War Dog. The money for this was raised by voluntary subscriptions. If any one felt that it was a foolish expenditure, he somehow was not so decided in his views after gazing on the walls of the cemetery office a framed obituary of a dog whose name deserves memorizing in marble.

Who's Who and Why

Obituary.

Terrier Fido J.

Son of Rover Terrier and Woofie of Yorkshire.
Born September 1, 1912.
In Squire McCormick's Hay Barn.
1914-1915.
Slew 34 woodchucks and 17 rats.
March 6, 1915.
Moved to City and gained Blue Ribbon at Dog Show.
July 7, 1915.
Rescued Child from Drowning in Park Lake.
August 28, 1915.
Gave chase and cornered kidnapper in park.
Nov. 6, 1915.
Tore seat from trespassing hobo's trousers.
Night of Jan. 7, 1917.
Hung on to notorious second-story man until master could cover him with a revolver.
June 9, 1917.
Rescued Italian baby from burning tenement.
July 24, 1917.
Led searchers of outing party to children lost in the heart of woods.
Oct. 5, 1917.
Joined Red Cross for War Relief Service in France.
April 8, 1918.
Killed in act of succoring wounded Americans.

After reading this tale of bravery and courage, one can appreciate the desire of people to make some effort to memorialize their own pets; perhaps they did not do such outstanding deeds of heroism as the war dog, but they were always "faithful and true."

These are the words "Faithful and True" that appear on monument after monument raised to the memory of a dog, a cat, or a horse, for canine are not the only pets that are mourned. There are some forty-odd cats, one lion, two monkeys, two horses, and a number of parrots and canaries sleeping in marble-marked graves in this last home for pets.

The inscriptions are on the whole in good taste, but occasionally one is a little disturbing. "To the memory of Nellie, Erected by her Loving Papa," rather shocks one, but the next one to it relating the fidelity of Bim is more fitting, and a visitor to the cemetery heaves a sigh of kinship with the man who erected over the grave of Gyp a stone that relates, "Home is not what it was when Gyp met me at the gate."

Mrs. Vernon Castle has a plot in which lie three dogs and a monkey. One inscription reads:

"My adored Zowie,
Died August 21, 1917.

I do not cringe from death so much
Since you are gone, my little friend.
Thy dear dumb soul will wait for mine
However long before the end."

There are monuments of the size and cost that would designate the last home of a bank president in towns of fifty thousand population; the mausoleum "To the Memory of Sally and Toodles" is larger than the mausoleums found in the average cemetery for human beings; one dog lies under a marble dog basket, selected and carved in Italy to serve this purpose. Some of the stones are adorned with set-in photographs of the pets lying below; many of the plots have rustic benches. When a dog is interred there are the customary floral offerings from friends of the family, and the little tiny mound has the same ghostly streamers of white and pink chiffon that wave in the breeze from graves in the cemetery for human beings in the valley below, a cemetery that, with its fallen stones, overgrown weeds, and general air of neglect, is a poignant contrast to the last home for what some call "Only dogs."

The price of a grave is fifteen dollars, ten dollars for a plain pine box, and two dollars for interment, making the cheapest grave cost twenty-seven dollars. But few are put away in plain pine boxes; there are coffins for sale ranging in price from ten dollars to $250. The cheaper ones are of wood; in the more expensive the inner casket is of steel with hermetically sealed top. All are lined with white satin. There is a receiving vault for holding coffins till the ground is prepared, but it is rarely used except in winter when frozen earth may render the digging difficult.

The epitaphs show that very few of the pets died young. One of the tombstones relates that the cat under it reached the age of eighteen years. Some of the dogs lived to as ripe an age; many lived to be fourteen. Few stones give the date of birth, proving that the pet under the stone was a mongrel and had nothing but his love with which to make friends when he came into this world. Each owner to a lot receives a deed just as in other cemeteries. In 1914 the cemetery was incorporated so that its permanence for this purpose is assured. The average lot in the cemetery is 6 feet by 6 feet, costing $90.

To return to the thirteen thousand dollar mausoleum "To the Memory of Sally and Toodles," and the allusion it invariably invites to destitute children, is to go back to the difference of opinion between the man who has loved, and known the love of a dog, and the man who has not.

But remember that the two words seen most frequently on the markers of these four thousand little graves are "Faithful and True."

Photo by Bouse.

DOG CEMETERY AT HARTSDALE, N. Y.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 5.)

least sent up for a long term or richly deserving both.
"Only this and nuthin' more."

BACHELOR BILL.

Welcome, Bachelor Bill! Where have you been these long, long years? The Sisters have been asking about you. You know you were rather a favorite with them even if they didn't approve of all you said about them.—Ed.

ANAHEIM, R. R. 5, BOX 175, CALIF.

DEAR SISTERS:

So many girls write about their ideal Husband that I'll tell of my Ideal Wife. I hope some day to get her. I want her to have blonde hair, blue eyes and a fair complexion and be five feet six inches tall and weigh about 130 pounds.

I don't want one of the baby-doll, let-mother-do-all-the-work kind. If a girl won't help her mother she won't help her husband. I don't care if she has bobbed hair for it is not so much trouble as long locks. I want her to be a good cook and neat housekeeper and keep herself as neat after marriage as before and have a smile for me when I come home. I want her to love music and play some kind of an instrument. I want her to be capable of taking care of at least eight children as my ideal home has four boys and four girls.

I am eighteen years old, have brown hair and eyes, am five feet, six inches tall and weigh 136 pounds.

CLYDE HORNE.

Now Clyde, don't you go and let yourself become a crank on efficiency and make your wife have bobbed hair, just so it will take less time to care for it. I suppose you'll allow her seven minutes a day in which to "do" her hair,—from 5:14 to 5:21. At that, somebody has got to be efficient in money making to care for four boys and four girls, and Father is usually It, so you'd better start in saving your money.—Ed.

ROCKFORD, WASH.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT NEIGHBORS:

I have been receiving and enjoying COMFORT for some time, but have kept silent. I am like some people who go to an entertainment; they sit, listen and enjoy it, but never slap their hand or give any expression to show that they are getting their money's worth.

I am inclined to turn a new leaf and express as briefly as possible my ideas—as this issue will be given over to the men.

We all know this quotation: "Experience is the best teacher," but how many young girls, who enter the state of matrimony will take advice from their elders—not many. They think life should continue the same after they are married as before—one continuous courtship. Doing nothing but following dances and shows.

Always bickering over the slightest trifles, not trusting their husbands out of sight for five minutes without getting jealous and starting an argument. Raising Cain when their husbands come home from work and read a paper because they don't give their entire attention to them immediately. Now girls and young women is this the kind of women you are going to make or are? Then don't get married before you have some sense, there is always plenty of time left, never any rush.

A husband always loves his wife, more than ever spoken, but give him half a chance, let him have time to himself when he is tired and doesn't want anyone to bother him. Life is not so short but that there is always time enough for courtesy. Solitude gives him plenty of time for reflection. So if he has made a mistake he will surely try to amend it. Your husband will always live up to what you expect of him. But if you keep pecking away at him, accusing him of false things, he in the end will most likely deceive.

The Inks that God has coupled shall not be broken. Therefore, if ye take not God with you into your state of matrimony, don't expect to 'ive happy in the future. But when two become one, minds pull in the same direction for a definite aim, there is sure to be happiness and success.

MR. R. MUELLER.

STEELVILLE, MISSOURI.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND ALL:

May I come in for the first time? I have been a reader of COMFORT for a number of years and read it with delight and watch for its arrival. I always read the letters in the Sisters' Corner first and have found them interesting, especially those in the June issue in regard to the Ideal Husband and seeing an invitation open for the brothers to tell of their ideal wife, I will tell mine.

She must love me above everything else for which I will reciprocate; must be good looking, clean and neat, a Christian in the truest sense of the word, but not necessarily of the same religious belief as my own, must be my equal or superior to me, patient, cheerful and courteous with a good character and reputation, a companion, who will bear, suffer and enjoy with me everything that life would bring us. She must be a lover of her home and children and the great outdoors. She must have a good disposition and easy to get along with and not let worry and trouble take all the fun and joy out of life. She should be willing to make our home any place where it is to the best of our advantage. She must never nag or quarrel as that has ruined more homes than anything else. I don't expect her to be just perfect or not have any faults, because that's impossible and we all have them. I don't care if she is from the city or country if she can qualify. Those are the things I'd ask of the girl I would marry.

I quite agree with Girlie from Tennessee referring to jealous couples, and also about the man that will not give his wife a dollar to spend, or trust her out of his sight. He may rest assured that in the end she will outwit and deceive him and be as false as he suspects she is.

I am five feet, eleven inches tall, dark brown hair, hazel eyes and am 25 years young, weigh 145 and am a lover of all sports. Hoping I pass the sisters' censorship.

Very sincerely, A. STENO.

CONE, TEXAS.

DEAR EDITOR:

My Ideal Wife must be what people call a flapper. She must have bobbed hair, well-penciled eyebrows, an artist at make-up, dress in the height of fashion, wear short skirts, high-heeled shoes and love to dance and travel. She must love me better than any other fellow though I don't care if she flirts with the other fellows, just for fun. She must allow me the same privileges she takes. I don't care whether she is a blonde or brunette, if I like her.

I have black hair and eyes.

GEORGE THETFORD.

Georgie, Georgie, what a broad-minded young fellow you are. You must be all of seventeen years old.—Ed.

WILD WEST, TEXAS.

HOWDY SISTERS:

I may not be much of a man as you will probably find out, but I do know what kind of wife I want—a buxom, bright-eyed, rosy-cheeked, full-breasted, bouncing lass, who can darn a sock, command a regiment of pots and kettles, feed the pigs, chop wood, whistle with the boys, handle an oar, do a bit of fishing, and be a lady withal is just the girl for me, or for any other man to marry. But you, ye pining, moping, pale-faced, wasp-waisted, consumptive, music-murdering, novel-devouring daughters of fashion and idleness, you are no more fit for matrimony than a pullet is to look after a family of fourteen chickens. The truth, my dear girls, is that you need more liberty and less fashionable restraint, more kitchen and less parlor, more leg exercise and less sofa, more frankness and less mock modesty, lose yourselves a little, enjoy more liberty and less restraint by fashion. Breathe the pure atmosphere of freedom and become as beautiful as the God of Nature designed.

COWBOY.

My Dear Cowboy.—Where have you been and how old are you? Don't you know that the girl such as you describe went out of style and existence along with Grecian Bends and waterfalls? The girls of today are being censored because they have, or take, too much liberty and have no modesty—but I like them, and think they are a little bit of all right.—Ed.

KREMLIN, OKLAHOMA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

As the men are invited to tell of their Ideal Wife, I will tell of mine for she is surely my ideal. She stood by me through poverty and as better times came we would plan what next to do.

When this country opened to homesteaders on the 16th of September, 1893, at twelve o'clock, I made the race. I ran thirty-two miles on a cow pony and got a fine claim. It was a hard struggle to make a living and at the same time hold down a claim, but the country proved to be good farm land and we improved. Now, after thirty years, we drive to the city over paved roads, where I have chased the antelope in years gone by. Seven years ago we went west and got a ranch in Colorado. We kept a store on the trail for three years and did very well, but on account of the boy's education we came back to Oklahoma.

Now sisters, you see my Ideal Wife has helped me and at the same time helped herself. But don't think that we agree on all things for we do not. Therefore, we have a chance to learn something, as we found out long ago that neither one knows it all.

We have two sons, Cecil, 18 years old, over six feet tall and weighing 200 pounds. Russell is ten years old and large for that age. The Mrs. is five feet, seven inches tall and weighs 160 pounds, and I am nearly six feet tall and weigh 212 pounds.

As we are getting old we will retire from active farm life and watch the oil derricks as they are being built nearer and nearer our holdings. But I don't have to sell out and go to the town in order to retire, but can live right here on the farm and enjoy life with my Ideal Wife.

J. E. HILL.

Mr. Hill.—It is splendid of you to give such a tribute to your wife while she is alive and can appreciate it. So many husbands wait until it is too late.—Ed.

ARKANSAS.

DEAR COMFORT SISTERS:

As I have just finished reading COMFORT Sisters' Corner and found so many letters written on the Ideal Man, I have screwed up my courage to give you a few pointers on my Ideal Woman.

First, she must be good to look at, with perfect features and form, small hands and feet. She must be always neat, clothes never dirty or mussed up no matter what her work may be. She must honor and obey her husband, be ready to go at his least word or command, never talking back, but always cheerful and kind, granting her husband's least wish, always seeing to his

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 29.)

The Embroidery Basket

Conducted by

Beth Taske Brown

NOW that the Christmas season is approaching, a few suggestions for gifts are illustrated this month. It is so interesting to make gifts for your friends and, on the other hand, your friends will be so pleased if your gifts to them include a few stitches of your own making.

For the housewife, an apron is an ideal gift. This particular apron comes stamped on unbleached cotton cloth with all the cutting lines indicated, and also directions how to sew together. The design is of conventional flowers worked in two shades of brown and two shades of red with long and short buttonhole stitch. The number of strands of thread used in the flowers is three. The round flowers are brown, while the ones that wind out from the center are red. The centers of the brown flowers are solid in orange surrounded by black French knots. The clusters of French knots among the flowers are worked with six strands of orange floss. The larger leaves are worked in a long and short buttonhole stitch on the edge, while the stems and veins are outlined. The smaller leaves are worked solid in satin stitch. The apron is finished with a narrow hem all around and then a running stitch of black on the stitching line.

If one cares to further decorate the apron, trim off the hem allowance and finish the edge with brown bias-binding that matches the embroidery cotton. For some time unbleached cotton cloth has been effectively used in bedroom sets, curtains and table-covers, and now this material has found its way to milady's wardrobe where it is seen fashioned into aprons and slip-over dresses. This particular apron is new in design and will grace any occasion calling for some protection to the dress. Girls going away to school would be delighted with this stylish apron as well as the young matron who stays at home.

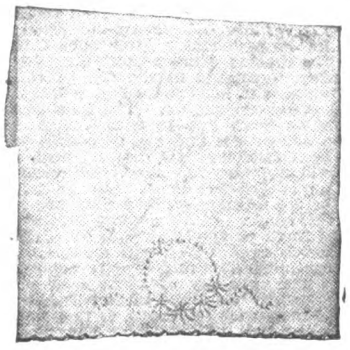
A very nice and also extremely useful gift is a towel of guest size. The one here illustrated is of simple yet very effective design. The ever popular wreath is easy to do, and this design of daisies, clustered a little to one side of the center of the wreath, is unusual and attractive. The girl, who is collecting articles for her Hope Chest, or, the housekeeper, who entertains will appreciate this excellent gift.

Towels have a way of wearing out and must be replaced, so it is always safe to include them in the gifts you make for your friends, for "the more the merrier." With the advent of the guest towel has come a departure from the pure white huck-a-back and damask to something more colorful and decorative. To use a towel daintily embroidered by your hostess is a personal compliment.

Now the Kiddies are the ones who enjoy Christmas most, and how they do love to have a present they can wear. This cute little eating set provides a good-sized bib with a tray-cloth to match. The design is of interest to the children being a duck all dressed up in jacket and sunbonnet walking around in the grass. The whole design is outlined except the duck's eye and the buttons on her jacket which are done solid, the lower edge of the jacket which is buttonholed, and the grass which is done lazy-daisy. The color scheme used on the set is yellow for the duck, blue for the bonnet and jacket, black for the duck's bill and feet, and green for the grass. Three strands of the thread are used for all of the stitches on the set. For the finish around the edge of these pieces the blanket stitch is used, done in three strands of the blue.

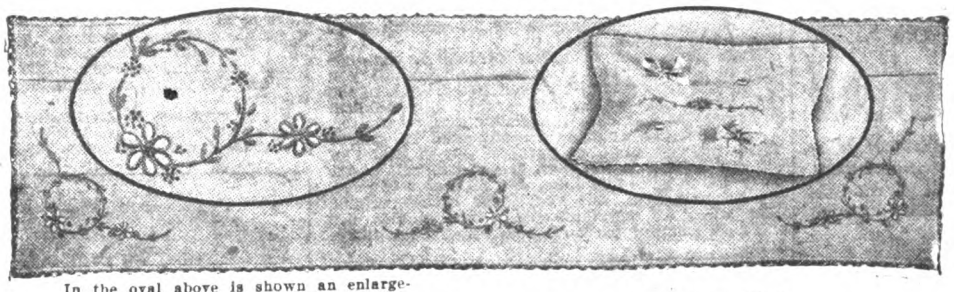
Giving a child this attractive eating set on Christmas is making the mother a gift as well, for the bib-age is a trying one and there never seems to be an over-supply of changes. A square of thin rubber sheeting under the bib and held in place by tiny gold colored safety-pins is a great saving.

No one ever seems to have too many bureau scarfs. A change every little while is welcome. Also, it is a treat to be able to match a scarf with a pincushion. Covers that have become spotted and otherwise disfigured, yet are too good to entirely banish, may be used in less conspicuous places, while new ones replace them for more particular wear. Many a faded and stained cover has been made to do further duty by being dipped into a strong tea bath. Here we have a scarf and pincushion set to match, which is embroidered in solid, outline and knots. The daisy flower is done solid in white, and outlined with three strands of a light shade of pink. All the rest of the embroidery with the exception of the knots, is also done in three strands of light pink. The knots are made of six strands of dark pink.



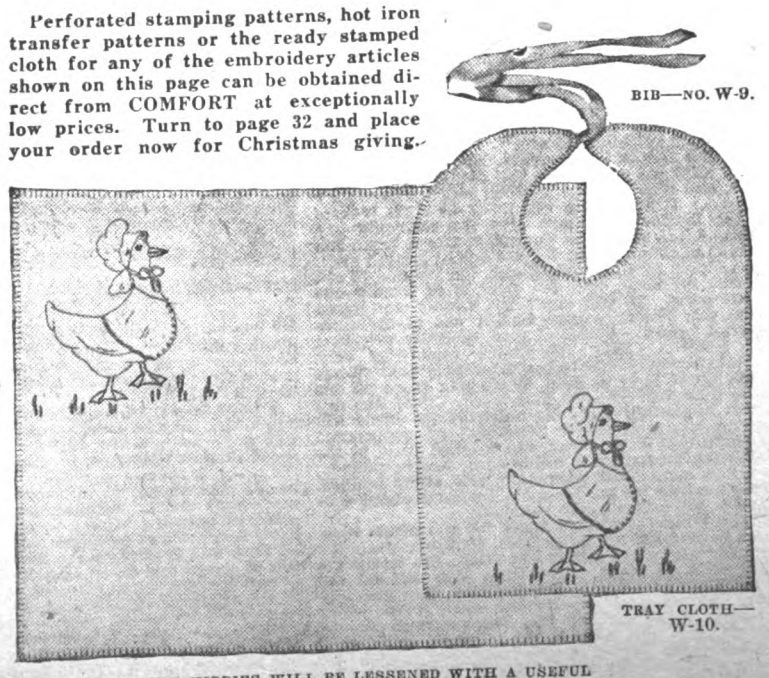
The edge of this set is effective, yet so very simple that any one can do it without much effort. First draw a thread out about a half an inch from the edge of the cloth, then turn and baste a very narrow hem to that space. This drawn thread gives a line to go by so that the crochet stitches will be even. With No. 30 crochet thread and number 8 crochet hook, single crochet over the hem into the space made by the drawn thread, *s c again about one-eighth inch from first s c, ch 4, and make p cot into top of that stitch, s c again about one-eighth inch from second s c, ch 3, s c one-quarter inch from previous s c and repeat from *. The pincushion is finished in the same way and has four eyelets in order that ribbon may be laced around the cushion at either end. This idea of a pincushion top just laid on top of the cushion saves laundering two pieces and lacing the two pieces together.

While designed for a bureau scarf, this cover is equally useful on the sideboard, buffet, a table that sets against the wall or a commode.



One of the greatest charms of a gift lies in having it in perfect condition and daintily wrapped. If it is a piece such as illustrated on this page, the work should be kept in a fresh sewing apron or towel while in process and when finished rolled in a wet clean cloth until evenly dampened and then pressed dry. Hang to air before folding. Wrap in tissue paper and tie with bright narrow ribbons or fasten with Christmas seals. Where the gift is simple it may be accompanied by something from the pantry shelf, such as a tumbler of jelly, some choice apples, a square of rich cake wrapped in paraffin, or if the giver lives in an evergreen section, a Christmas wreath will extend the message of good cheer.

APRON W-8—AN IDEAL GIFT FOR MILADY'S WARDROBE.



TOWEL W-7—WHO EVER HAS TOO MANY TOWELS?

In the oval above is shown an enlargement of the design worked on the scarf. SCARF W-5.

PINCUSHION W-6.

Perforated stamping patterns, hot iron transfer patterns or the ready stamped cloth for any of the embroidery articles shown on this page can be obtained direct from COMFORT at exceptionally low prices. Turn to page 32 and place your order now for Christmas giving.

BIB—NO. W-9.

TRAY CLOTH—W-10.

THE CARE OF THE KIDDIES WILL BE LESSENED WITH A USEFUL GIFT LIKE THIS.

Table Linens of Real Charm In Clark's O.N.T. Book № 11

Lovely New Designs

NO where does beautiful needlework show to such advantage as in household linens. From the simple edging for a guest towel to the elaborate pattern for a centerpiece—each design in Clark's O. N. T. Book No. 11 will offer interesting suggestions for gifts and home use.

Rose Luncheon Set	4, 5	Dining Room Curtain with Basket of Fruit	11, 16
Grape Luncheon Cloth	1, 6	Basket and Bowknot Centerpiece	12, 14
Filet Crochet Edges and Insertions	7, 8	Jonquil Between-Meals Centerpiece	13, 14
Vestibule Door Curtain	8, 24	Bedspread Stripes and Blocks	17, 18
Flower Pot Medallion	8, 16	Apple Sideboard Doily	19, 20
Dresser Set of Scarf and Pincushion	9, 15	Crocheted Fringes	19
Black Eyed Susan Luncheon Set	9, 10	Crochet Stitches	21

If your dealer cannot supply you with Clark's O. N. T. Book No. 11 send us ten cents.

THE SPOOL COTTON COMPANY,
Dept. 152, 315 Fourth Avenue, New York

"What A Creole Is"

By Felice de Valence

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

THROUGHOUT the country an ignorance prevails concerning the Creole.

"Oh!" someone will say, "the Creoles are all of negro extraction."

Or, perhaps: "I hear that the Americans refuse to associate with the Creoles."

Through misrepresentation of these people by writers, because of ungrounded superstition, and unverified reports, the most amazing mistakes are being continually made, simply because most persons have never had the truth clearly explained.

The word Creole was originally Spanish, and was applied only to American descendants of Spaniards. However, the term spread to the French West Indies, and was brought up to Louisiana by the San Domingons. The earliest settlers in Louisiana, who were mostly from New Brunswick (Acadia), Canada, and Paris, never used the word. In the course of time, the term came to include all people of French descent, except the Acadians. For many years the real Creole has been considered: a person born in or near the tropics, with absolutely no negro blood, but of pure French and Spanish extraction. The term, Creole negro, was used to distinguish a negro born in this country from one brought from Africa; he he was never spoken of as a Creole, but always as a Creole negro.

The Creoles are a charming people, quick-witted, intelligent, with gracious manners; they enjoy life thoroughly, are eager for amusement and pleasure—gloriously care-free. But they are very devout in their religion, very warm-hearted, generous and sympathetic, and most loyal to what is held dear.

The girls are noted for their beauty. They are usually small and slender, with oval faces, regular features, great brown or black eyes and very lovely dark curly hair. Their complexions are particularly noticeable, being usually light olive, very clear and soft and of a becoming pallor. Their vivacity of expression, and their lithe grace add much to their attractiveness.

The Creoles of the better class speak pure French or Spanish, sometimes both, but more often French. Those of the lower classes use a patois—a literal translation of bad English into corrupt French. All the people prefer to speak in the foreign tongue, and do so on all possible occasions. In every shop and store in New Orleans there are French speaking salespeople; many restaurants cater almost exclusively to the Creole trade. At the beautiful old St. Louis Cathedral, in the midst of the Vieux Carre (French Quarter), at ten o'clock mass on Sundays the sermon is preached in French.

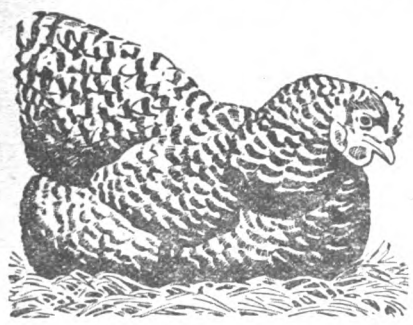
The fame of the Creole cooking is justly widespread. Strangers in New Orleans immediately inquire where the delectable, highly-seasoned, distinctly original dishes may be had.

In the old days the Creoles mingled with no outsiders. They were antagonistic towards the English-speaking population, which lived above Canal Street on the other side of the city. But of late years the two peoples are much together—to the pleasure of both.

The Creoles have played an important part in the history of Louisiana, and the descendants of the aristocratic families are very proud of their heritage—a distinguished one—of brave service, generous loyalty and strong devotion towards all that was worthy.

The Beginning of the Royal British Navy

It is interesting to note that the British government, despite the fact that the English were a great seafaring nation, even in the ancient times, accept the building of the ship "The Royal Harry" in 1488, as the beginning of the Royal British Navy.



It was Henry VII, who had ordered its construction and within the 10 years following 30 ships patterned after that model, were launched.

The famous British Navy List, without which no navy department the world over would consider its records complete, did not appear until 1914, when the celebrated actuary, John Finlaison, prepared the first edition of this historic publication.

Got 117 Eggs Instead of 3

thanks to Reefer's More Egg Tonic

Says one COMFORT Reader

"'More Eggs' Tonic is a Godsend," writes MRS. MYRTLE ICE, of Boston, Ky. She adds, "I was only getting 12 eggs a day and now get 50."

15 Hens—310 Eggs

I used "More Eggs" Tonic, and in the month of January, from 15 hens I got 310 eggs. MRS. C. R. STOUGHTON, Turners Falls, Mass.

"More Eggs" Paid the Pastor

I can't express in words how much I have been benefited by "More Eggs." I have paid my debts, clothed the children in new dresses, and that is not all—I paid my pastor his dues. I sold 42½ dozen eggs last week, set 4 dozen, ate some, and had 1½ dozen left. MRS. LENA McBROON, Woodbury, Tenn.

1200 Eggs from 29 Hens

The "More Eggs" Tonic did wonders for me I had 29 hens when I got the tonic and was getting five or six eggs a day; April first I had over 1200 eggs. I never saw the equal. EDW. MEKKER, Pontiac, Mich

160 Hens—150 Eggs

I have fed 2 boxes of "More Eggs" to my hens and I think they have broken the egg record I have 160 white leghorns and in exactly 21 days I got 125 dozen eggs. MRS. H. M. PATTON, Waverly, Mo.

$1.00 Package FREE

The letters above are just a few out of thousands. I have already convinced over a million poultry raisers of the value of my More Egg Tonic. In order to convince you, too, I offer a full size $1 package FREE. Read my FREE offer below and ACT—for bigger poultry profits.

Results Guaranteed

The Producers and Consumers Bank of Philadelphia has $5,000.00 on deposit to absolutely guarantee that "More Eggs" will give satisfactory results. Your money refunded at once if you are not delighted.

Send No Money

Don't send any money. Just fill in and mail coupon below. You will be sent at once two $1.00 packages of "MORE EGGS." Pay postman on delivery ONLY $1.00 plus a few cents postage. The extra package is FREE. Don't wait—take advantage of this offer today. Reap the profits "MORE EGGS" will make for you. Get eggs all winter. Send today!

$1.00 Package FREE

E. J. Reefer
Poultry Expert
9th and Spruce Sts.
Dept. 107, Philadelphia, Pa.

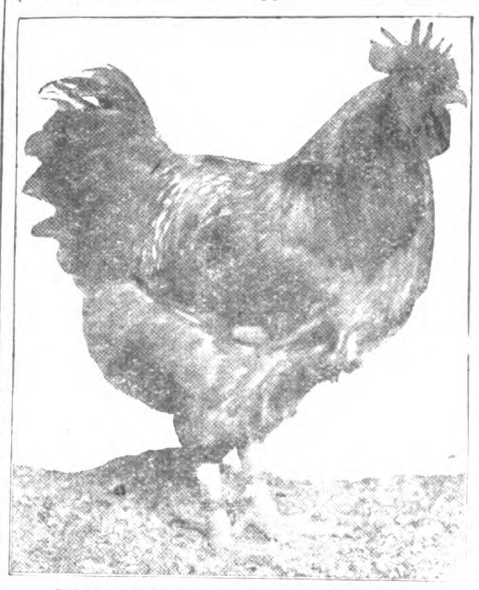
Send me two $1.00 packages of More Eggs Tonic for which I agree to pay the postman $1.00, plus postage, when the package arrives. It is understood that if I am not entirely satisfied at the end of 30 days, you will refund my money.

Name.....

Address.....

.....

If you prefer, enclose $1.00 cash or money order with this coupon. This brings your order sooner. C. O. D. packages sometimes take longer in the post office.



BY KATE V. SAINT MAUR.

Food That Will Fill the Egg Basket in Winter

IN August and September we discussed the matter of housing and selecting stock, so now we can turn to the general care and feeding of the birds kept specially for winter-egg production.

Don't lose any time in getting your young pullets into winter quarters. The sooner they are settled, and winter rations started, the sooner they will commence to lay. Don't forget that to produce eggs they must have plenty of water to drink, and, as they have no teeth, need grit to grind the food after it passes into the gizzard—animal food, vegetables, and lime in some form. Brooks and outside drinking troughs are sure to be frozen; small stone and sand ditto. So when the farmer throws down the corn, which is greedily eaten, the hen profits little, for she cannot digest it properly, and in consequence is unprofitable. Insects (the natural animal food supply) are not to be had, nor is there any vegetable matter available. So the fowls return to natural conditions, which means no eggs until springtime, when they are again able to find the different ingredients from which eggs are formed.

BUFF ORPINGTON COCK. BY REQUEST.

Now the real poultryman, who depends on his fowls for his living, knows by experience that it pays to provide Biddy with all these things when she cannot find them for herself. Besides, there is another advantage, the chicks which will be hatched in the spring will be stronger, and make quicker growth, than those hatched from eggs laid by poorly fed hens.

Don't overcrowd your house. There is nothing more detrimental to egg production or strong chicks in the spring, as overcrowding stock in the winter. Twenty well-cared-for hens, with plenty of house room, will produce more eggs and better birds next spring than fifty which are crowded. Besides which, if a lot of hens are crowded into small quarters in the night their breath and the moisture of their bodies is more than the air can carry off, so it rises to the roof, where it freezes during the night and melts during the heat of the midday sun, so causing a recurrence of moisture day by day, which soon makes the house damp and unhealthy. Plenty of cold fresh air continually circulating through the house keeps it fresh and dry, and is beneficial to the birds.

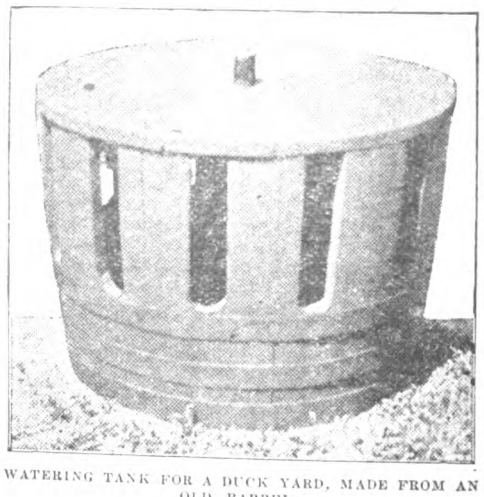
The breed of chickens you keep, the part of the country in which you are located, must influence to a great extent the general care and feeding of your stock. In sections of the country where the weather is extremely cold, hens require rations rich in fat and oils to keep them warm. On the other hand, in the Southern states they require only enough fat-forming foods to nourish their bodies and produce eggs.

Hens must have a variety of food to produce eggs in winter. The best way to convince you of the fact is to give you a chemical analysis of the egg, which is: water, 650 grains; albuminoids, 80 grains; oil fats, etc., 135 grains; mineral matter, 9 grains; sugar, coloring matter, etc., 26 grains. The remaining hundred parts of the thousand of the egg is used in the shell, which contains about 50 grains of salts and lime, and 50 grains of pure, uncombined lime, the remainder being carbolic acid water of crystallization. Albuminoids are the flesh-forming parts of food, often called nitrogens.

Oils and fats come under the head of carbons. Mineral matter consists of lime, soda, potash, magnesia and sulphur. Knowing the materials necessary for the egg, no one ought to be so foolish as to expect a biddy to produce eggs unless she is provided with the necessary materials. Farmers complain that hens lay nearly all their eggs in the spring, when they are hardly worth the trouble of marketing, and stop as soon as the prices go up in the winter. And it is true of most farms, simply because in the spring hens can find all the elements necessary for the formation of the egg, but after frost destroys green grass, clover and insects, they stop producing because they have no materials from which to make the egg.

During the last two years we have almost entirely changed our plans for feeding the laying hens, and find the new method much better than the old. Instead of a wet mash at eight o'clock in the morning, we now give the following dry mash at 2 p. m.: Ten pounds of wheat bran, ten pounds of ground oats, ten pounds of ground corn, ten pounds of white middlings, ten pounds of old process oil meal, and ten pounds of freshly cut green bone. If you can't get freshly cut green bone, use twenty pounds of any one of the commercial brands of animal feed specially prepared for poultry. Mix the above quantities very thoroughly and keep in a barrel for daily use. When fresh green bone is used, don't mix more at one time than will be used in a week. Feed the dry mash in shallow pans, as much as the birds will eat up clean in fifteen minutes. At suppertime a mixture of corn, wheat and cracked corn, in the following proportions: whole corn, twelve pounds; cracked corn, eight pounds; wheat, eight pounds. This mixture we scatter over the litter about 4 or 4.30 p. m., according to the light.

The birds are always eager for the whole corn, and in rushing about to pick that up, push the smaller grain down into the litter, so rarely get any of it at night. But when they get off the roost the first thing in the morning, they are hungry, and start looking for the small grain, which compels them to take just the vigorous exercise which they need early in the morning to set their blood circulating, and to warm them after the long night on the roost. About eight o'clock in the morning we fill up the drinking fountains with water enough to insure its being warm after it is poured into the cold galvanized pans. At twelve o'clock the drinking fountains are again filled with water, and about a pint of cracked corn is scattered on the litter for every forty hens. They also get their vegetable food at noon. In the early winter this is usually cabbage or beets, but later in the season we depend entirely upon sprouted oats, each bird being given about a square inch of the sprouts and matted roots. Green vegetable food is most important, and is usually the most difficult for the farmer to provide during the winter, but now that the price of grain has gone down, it will pay to sprout oats for the laying and breeding stock. There are several sprout cabinets (as they are called) on the market, which are well worth the price, which ranges from five to fifteen dollars; but there are plenty of people who don't want to spend five dollars, so I am going to tell you about a home-made cabinet which only costs two dollars.



Get a case from the village store, five feet long, two feet wide and two feet deep. Line this with zinc at the front end, running the zinc up to about fifteen inches. Then set the box up on end, making what had been the top the front, and from loose boards make a top to fit it. Then get eight pairs of iron shelf brackets from a five-and ten-cent store, and put the first set of four brackets, two on each side of the cabinet, six inches from the bottom, and the other two sets nine inches above. Make legs nine inches high, to lift the bottom of the cabinet from the floor, cut a hole four inches square in the center of the bottom to permit the chimney of a lamp to go through and strike on the bottom of the first tray, which rests on the first set of brackets. This tray must be made at a plumber's shop, but it won't cost more than seventy-five cents. The three other trays can be made of light wood. The strips of wood at the bottom of the trays must be left open, and a piece of burlap tacked over to prevent the oats from falling through. A brooder which has a tin chimney is the best to use, so there is no fear of smashing. When in use, after the chimney has been pushed through the hole in the bottom of the cabinet, a block of wood must be placed under the lamp, to raise it high enough to hold it firmly in place, and bring the top of the chimney within an inch of the zinc tray, which is kept filled with water. The oats are put into pails of warm water the night before the trays are to be filled, and then spread two inches deep in each tray.

I almost forgot to explain that there was another hole two inches square in the center of the top of the cabinet, which was covered with flannel, to act as a ventilator. When the door of the cabinet was closed and the lamp lighted, the heat kept the water in the zinc pan steaming slightly, and insured a moist, warm temperature throughout the cabinet.

The three oat trays were made about an inch smaller than the inside of the cabinet, to permit the moist air to circulate all round them. Naturally the bottom tray, getting the most heat, is the first lot of oats to develop sufficiently to feed, and at that point it can be removed, and the trays dropped down so that the second and third trays are at the bottom, and what was at the bottom is at the top. If you have only a few hens and don't think it worth while to make a cabinet, a few shallow boxes will do almost as well. A shelf behind the kitchen stove, or some other warm spot is a good place to keep them. Make several holes at the bottom of the boxes for ventilation, and cover with burlap or wire cloth to prevent the oats falling through. Soak the oats in a pail of water over night, and in the morning spread them about two inches thick in the boxes and cover with a double thickness of newspaper. Each morning, remove the newspaper and stir the oats with your hands; spread evenly, and sprinkle with water until the oats begin to show, after which don't disturb the oats, but still sprinkle every morning. Replace the paper after sprinkling, until the sprouts are over the edge of the box, as it keeps them from being dried and toughened by the dry outer air of the kitchen. In about nine days the oats will be a thick mass of fine roots, and the sprouts will be two or three inches high, and ready for use. Break into small pieces, so that each hen will get a share. The whole mass of roots is to be used, as well as the sprouts, for there is as much food value in one as in the other. A piece about seven inches is enough for twenty hens. After once commencing to use the sprouts, start a box every day or every other day, according to the size of the boxes and the number of hens to be fed, so that you will have a continuous supply. The oats are ready to feed when from two to five inches high. Just cut a sod—roots and all, of course—and feed to the hens at noon—the improvement in the egg yield will surprise you. A sod six inches square is enough for twenty-five hens. Divide it into small pieces before feeding, so that they are all sure to get a fair share. Don't neglect roosters, for a fair percentage of sprouted oats in their rations insures fertile eggs, which will mean good hatches when the incubators and broody hens get busy.

The quantity of night feed you will have to gauge by what the birds will eat. Hens must go to roost with full crops, or they get cold and miserable before morning, when the egg basket will suffer; but there should be no whole corn left on the floor for them to get in the morning, for if they can fill up on whole corn when they first get off the roost, they will just stand around all day without taking any exercise. Our plan is to go through all the houses, give what we think is a good supply, then start in at the first house again, and give a little more when it seems needed. After watching the birds for a few nights you will soon be able to gauge the right amount. The quantity of feed is one of the points on which experience is the only teacher.

When eggs are to be marketed, it is advisable not to let any male birds run with the layers. But, of course, about three weeks before eggs are wanted for incubation, your best hens should be selected, divided into small flocks of from seven to fifteen, according to the breed you are keeping, and as good a rooster as you can afford to buy introduced to each flock.

WATERING TANK FOR A DUCK YARD, MADE FROM AN OLD BARREL.

I tried an experiment last winter with ten pullets, which may be serviceable to some of our folks who only keep a few birds. Their rations consisted of oats scattered in deep litter at seven in the morning; at eleven o'clock, sprouted oats and beets, buckwheat, Kaffir corn mixed in equal parts—one quart. At three o'clock, a warm mash made of potato peelings or small potatoes which have been mixed and mashed with beef scraps, oil meal and ground oats. About two tablespoonfuls of scraps and half a cup of oil meal and a pint of oats to every quart of mash peelings; two quarts of the mixture. For supper, they had buckwheat and oats mixed—one quart. The potatoes, buckwheat and oil meal are all fattening, so of course generate heat, which is necessary to winter rations, and balance the want of these qualities in the oats almost as well as corn would have done.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 28.)

SALE OF WOOL Embroidered SERGE DRESSES $3.74

Fashionable Panel Model

The Rage This Season

You won't fully appreciate this marvelous bargain until you see it—that's why we send it to you on money down. Don't miss this great offer—a chance to get a real $8.00 dress at an immeasurably low. Our own special model, copied from the finest dresses brought out in these times, offers this season. Becoming to women of every age, it is the rage of the year.

Send No Money

Fine quality Long-wear Blue Serge. Gay with the fashionable tunic effect also shown. Beautiful chain stitch wool embroidery—won't pull out or run. Pearl knot medallions. Silk crochet pearl shell buttons to pencil points. Three-roll collar ending in reverse. The newest loose bodice, wide flare sleeves. Allaround belt. Skirt is the new stylishly long. You may be proud to wear this stunning dress to any company. Order Quick. Only limited offering. Send card or letter—no money. Pay postman $3.74 and postage on arrival. If not delighted after try on, return dress to us and your money refunded without question. Sizes: Misses' 14, 16; Women's, 32 to 46 bust.

Money Back Guaranteed STATE SIZE.

Ruth Lawrence Mail Order House
67th & Halsted Sts., Dept. C 3916, CHICAGO

ELGIN'S NEW BOULEVARD 17 JEWEL!

ONLY $1.00 DOWN

New special 25 year gold cases. New 17 Jewel Boulevard Models. New gold moire dials—real works of art.

Greatest Watch Offer since the war, bar none. You can now own the world's best known watch at the lowest factory price—a price lower than most houses charge you for inferior and off-brand makes.

Sent On Approval. We send you this new 17 Jewel Elgin on approval and after you are fully satisfied, you pay only a little each month, so little that you will never miss the money.

$5.00 CHAIN and KNIFE SET FREE

Write Today for catalog and full particulars of this special introductory offer. We are the world's largest Elgin Watch House; we have trusted wage earners for nearly a quarter of a century and will trust you.

HARRIS-GOAR CO.
Dept. 198, Kansas City, Mo.

GREAT BIG STYLISH IMPORTED Manchurian FOX Scarf $3.98 C. O. D.

Silk Lined

Genuine Warm Dressy FURS!

Greatest value in years. While this SALE lasts only $3.98. At this low price every woman can have a warm, Genuine Fur Scarf and be in STYLE. Order on APPROVAL. You do not pay a cent until the mailman brings the package to your door. EVERY CENT BACK IF NOT SATISFIED

Order Today!

WILL LAST FOR YEARS

Manchurian Fox is soft, warm, lustrous, silky, long hair and thick plie. Animal head, big bushy tail COVERS YOU LIKE A FUR CAPE. Wear it fastened close or loose over the shoulder. Silk lined and padded. First time ever offered at so low a price.

Send No Money But rush your order! Send us your name and address. We will ship the fur immediately by parcel post. When the package arrives, pay the mailman as good faith deposit $3.98 and postage. Try the Fur on in your home. If not satisfied in every way, return the fur to us and we will refund every cent of your money

Fred'k M. Dunham Co. Dept. 1154 CHICAGO

Earn $20 to $60 A WEEK

Household necessities, Jewelry, Perfumes, Soaps, Extracts, Foods, Spices, Toilet Goods, Face Creams, Aluminum Ware, Bath Towels, fancy boxes toilet soaps, selling like hot cakes. Big profits. Write today for catalog.

WESTERN PRODUCTS CO., 606 No. Oakley Ave., Dept. A2, CHICAGO

A Touch of Romany

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 18.)

other man, of the triumvirate of gallant wooers came to find, despite themselves, that somehow, Dorothy Roosa after all wasn't quite the girl for them. There was something lacking, something gone, from her manner towards them—some charm that had held them before!

Simultaneously, the star of Stanley Wilkins had been just as proudly ascendant!

The more the girl saw him, somehow, the better she liked him. There was something in his very enthusiasm—in his half-boyish exuberance over just the things she loved—that appealed to her.

"I played 'hookey' from the alumnal-banquet the other night," he confided, "to finish a story I'm working on.

"You know, I've got what I call a bully plot for a love-story: fellow parts from a girl after some silly gossip—goes to a mining-camp—makes a strike—shared with a rich magnate in developing the claim, both work like Trojans.

"Motion-picture man comes to take pictures of the miners at work—induces the young boss to pose in these as he makes his round.

"Film is shown the country over, with captions telling how the hard work of that young owner accomplished all of this.

"Picture comes to the girl's own town; people recognize the man; chatter of what he's accomplished. Set the girl to thinking—then investigating. Slips out to a town near the mine, and learns all sorts of nice things. Finds, among other things, the gossip untrue—writes the man this—begs his forgiveness for the things she'd said—and you can guess the rest."

Then they discussed it together.

Another time he had declined an invitation to an ultra-fashionable ball—in order to hear a quartette playing the city that night only. So there had been many other little happenings that gave her insights into his nature.

It's a poor rule, of course, that won't work both ways and as the woman came to admire the man the more, his love for her too, grew the deeper.

Spring had grown to summer; summer to fall; fall had turned to winter.

People had already drawn their conclusions; the other men were "staying away," as they said—realizing that the girl was won. Everyone said that Wilkins was engaged to Miss Roosa—everyone except Wilkins and the girl.

Wilkins, master mind at many arts and crafts; a power though he was in the community here, had something of brave Miles Standish in his make-up. He would go up to the cannon's mouth; he had won the Croix de Guerre and the D. S. C. in France in the war—but he dared not face the no of a woman!

Little by little Dorothy came to realize how the land lay.

Things grew ever tenser till there came a winter-evening, and he had come to call as usual.

The ordinary commonplaces of greeting over this night, however, Wilkins drew from his coat-pocket a budget of booklets issued by leading ocean-steamship lines—diagrams of the state-rooms to the major boat of the Shipping Board, schedules of sailings and the like.

"Do you know," he said, more enthusiastic than he'd been in some time now, "this is going to be my septennial year, and so I can celebrate.

"Six years have I labored and done all my work—toiled and saved, and so on—without vacations of which to speak. Now, on this seventh, I will rest!

"I want to see Europe—see the homes, the haunts, of the masters. I want to stand at dusk in Stratford and look at Shakespeare's tomb in the church-floor. I want to see the spires of Notre Dame in Paris—to feel my history, if you please, on the spots where it occurred. I want to visit Belgium and mark what those plucky folk are doing by way of rehabilitation.

"And say, do you know, since you've shown me the pictures you took of those gypsies that day, you've rekindled in me the first wanderlust I suppose I ever knew—'wanting to go back, on their trails, to Roumania—the ancient home, in Europe at least, of the gypsy. All of my life—ever since, when a child, I hid behind some tree lest the gypsies who passed kidnap me for sale somewhere—I've wanted to go to the Balkan States they are today—to that starting-point for the long trails of the gypsy.

"Grandmother, dead these many years, no doubt whetted that desire tremendously in my youth—she used to tell me of the gypsies she knew in Europe, and of how her father, in turn, had traveled through their mud-cities along the Danube.

"I want to see those towns and then I want to hear the genuine gypsy-music, as it's played in the cafes of Buda Pest, and elsewhere, Hungary over."

The man's enthusiasm at the treat in store was quickly getting control of him. The exuberance come of near-realization of a life-time of hoping and planning would not be contained.

"The girl sensed, somehow, that something else, too, was in the offing; that the man had a something he would say first and yet—he did not dare.

She entered into his enthusiasm quickly; it was woman's eternal privilege—her proper step into the breach. Would he go here? Would he be there? Would he visit——?

He would—and the joy of it all broke the fetters. All the long, carefully-plotted campaign leading up to the point he had sought, all the things he had drilled himself to say, by rote if he must, at this time, vanished from memory, as if in thin air!

"Dorothy," he whispered quickly, sharply seizing her hands for very eagerness before he knew it, "I've just received a call as full professor at the University here—a life-time job—at a salary that's too much for one, it's surely meant for two.

"I want that trip as a sort of finishing touch of preparation for the post," and then—well then, before he realized it, it was said, "I want you along—you—my wife!"

He halted.

He read her answer with the guilty eyes with which he faced her.

Then:

"Since you say so," and he stooped and kissed her, "we will proceed to the making reservations for our spring-time wedding-trip."

* * * * * * *

Just far enough removed from the shore-line of the Danube to be safe from the perennial overflows of the river and best reached by the sluggish droschkies which one may hire at Gradobor or other neighbor district-towns, the gypsies throw up burrows like those of the garden-mole, except that they are upon a much huger scale. In these they live for a season or two; while the men and the women and the children "hire out," to till the fields of the nearest landed proprietor.

Gypsydom is picturesque in its poverty here, and travelers on the Danube do well to break their journey long enough to stop and see.

One glorious late-autumn afternoon, roughly a year and a quarter since the day of the gypsy-caravan's meandering into the quiet suburb there in Cincinnati, a droschky of the sort suggested drove, full-tilt, toward just such a gypsytown—an American tourist and his wife.

"Dorothy," and the man's voice quivered with his tense excitement as the nearer of the burrows began to undulate the horizon here, "do you know that coming in view of this gypsy-village is marking a red-letter day in my life for me?"

"It's the concrete symbol—the 'visualization,' I suppose I should say—of what actually served as the starting-point for the wooing of what is now my wife!"

His words were stumbling just a little in their meaning; excitement had the best of him.

The woman looked, a trifle askance.

"Just what do you mean, dear?" she asked him.

"I mean that I have prepared for you just the very best sort of a plot for a double-barrelled love-story, or a triple-barreled hymeneal scenario, that the big Anglo-Saxon writing-game has probably ever known!"

He straightened on his seat, struck the attitude of the proverbial raconteur, and then went on:

"Once upon a time, and really not so many, many years ago, a poor young instructor in a big Mid-Western college loved a girl very deeply. True to all form, with stories of such sort, while he loved deeply, he also loved almost hopelessly, for while he labored and strove to secure such promotions as would mean a salary upon which a girl of her sort might be kept, other luckier suitors—sons of rich men, whose influence, if nothing else, gave them entree to just such positions—were not staying behindhand in their own pursuit of her hand.

"You can spin that part of your story, your script, out just as far as you like, of course. Burning the midnight oil, going dinnerless and supperless to save, tutoring in holidays, and all the heartache and the pining that you please!

"Finally, seeing himself lagging more and more behind the rest, if but for the attentions they could pay—theater, motorings, little suppers, flowers and the like—the man reached the conclusion that he must turn to the drastic—and then there came home to him the ancient axiom that 'all's fair in love or war!'

"You can have the slovenly, but good-hearted char-woman who cleans his garret-room and who knows his secret remind him of that—or wake him to the need of action, if you wish to, in your tale.

"So, to repeat a bit, the man settled himself on a bench in the park to deliberately campaign for his lady!

"Campaigning, he reviewed every phase of the battle he must wage upon rival suitors.

"Measuring thus every friend of the girl that he knew, he reached the conclusion that there were really just two who seemed about closing in, one or other, for the winning.

"And, in justification of his act—for a reader, and audience, always demands moral justification for any seeming unfairness otherwise; as you know—he knew that neither of these men could make the girl anywheres nearly as good a husband as he would himself."

The man stopped a moment—perhaps to survey the colony of hummocks all about them here; perhaps to let so much of the story—the opening chapters of the "double-barrelled romance," as he had called it, the resolve of the poor man to win the girl from her rivals, whether or no—to sink home.

The woman beside him sat severely erect. Woman's intuition made her half-fearful, half-desirous of knowing just what was coming. Not every wooer of what he would have become his bride was clever enough to deliberately sit down and campaign thus. But, a woman doesn't exactly like to have herself looked upon as a subject for deliberate campaign.

On the box, the Roumanian driver whistled the Kara-George March, utterly oblivious of his charges' word. The wind from the Danube played the river reeds and set them to creaking and groaning.

"Pondering and repondering the matter, the lover fell back upon a something his college professor of psychology had emphasized—the value of driving squarely home the desired notion—the desired idea.

"'If you want someone to do something,' Dr. Slaughter used to say again and again and again, till all of us, of his classes knew the sentence by heart, 'get them to want to do that very thing, and this by driving all possible advantages for them to doing the thing squarely home. Don't let them feel driven—let them believe they're leading, driving. And give them time to dwell, of their own parts on the idea.

"I don t know if I'm making myself altogether clear," the man swerved a little from the thread of story. "Briefly, the lover should be shown, in that script you're to write, as resolving to resort to a proper use of what is often called the 'dominance of an idea.'

"You sabe?"

Beginning to understand, or believing that she did, she nodded, affirmatively; but—severely!

"Happening into a motion-picture show—seeing some gypsies upon the screen there, the man was seized with the idea that builds the actual thread of the story!

"He would turn conversation, next time that he called on the girl of his heart, to the motion-pictures; a simple matter. He would tell of having seen this film, with its marvellous gypsy-pictures—an obvious step then. He would lead conversation on to what he'd read from time to time, (and, incidentally, that next evening, at the Public Library, (all a 'purpose), of the gypsies. He would fill the girl with interest, wonder, enthusiasm for these nomads of the public ways. Nothing marvellous at all in such step-by-step procedure.

"Having shown mi-lady the romance, the fascination, Romany Rye presents to all who'll simply stop and see, he would urge her to weave her own tales about them. He would urge that she write a story, a motion-picture script, of life among these homeland gypsies.

"Her story must be true to life, of course; every bit of local color must be exact. Audiences, readers, both, demand such things.

"And to get that local color?

"What so simple as to have all the good folk about keep weather-eye open for the coming of some gypsies to town; and then take snapshots, to refresh memory, of those gypsies?"

The man laughed a little.

His wife's face glowed anger—and she was still more beautiful for it!

"Now you are understanding, aren't you?" he laughed a little.

"But, we're almost at the stopping-place, so I must hurry on:

"Having interested the woman in the subject of Romany—gypsies—the next step in the plan that stole home to him as he watched the movie that first day, required the coming of the gypsies she'd require to some point where she might reach them!

"A little thought to this part of the subject, and the man resolved to find a gypsy-band.

"Broadcasting return post-cards to police-headquarters of some twenty cities near at hand, finally brought word of the presence in the suburbs of one of these towns of a band.

"A week-end trip to the city, to the camp-site, cost little when weighed with results obtained.

"Nor did it cost a great deal—weighed with those results again—to arrange with those gypsies to alter their route to include the girl's home-town—Cincinnati, it just chanced to be," he put in archly here—"and then to make a point of passing—at an appointed hour daily—the girl's father's very attractive suburban place.

"Naturally," the man hurried to conclusions, "the gypsies would camp just outside that srburb, and if, by any chance, things miscarried first time, they would pass, and repass, the girl's home, until somehow the two parties to the story simply would connect.

"Then, well—then the girl would take the pictures! We know she would.

"And then—well, then the gypsy-woman would tell her fortune—and thereby send the good word, that the girl must pick the stated suitor, home!

"So, then, there would be 'planted,' Dr. Slaughter liked to put it, 'the dominant idea.'

"Bridget, of the girl's home, bribed to help on, as result of a meeting, on her day off, arranged with her by telephone—would assist in the 'playing that idea' in the girl's mind the while.'

"'Bridget had seen the gypsy-movie.' Had her mistress seen it? No—then she should. Back in Ireland, Bridget knew the gypsies. Wonderful the accuracy with which they can foretell!

"Bridget, too, would bend every effort to advise the gypsies, by phone to the nearest drug-store, just the time when they should pass.

"And Bridget saw to it that when they passed, she called her mistress.

"As for the rest of the story, you——", but the gypsy children and the gypsy dog were clamoring so loudly, all about now, he could not finish.

The driver bowed, as is these drivers' fashion, and helped the lady to the ground.

The gypsy-leader approached to welcome these strange guests, as is the gypsy custom always here.

The woman rose, her eyes flashing; half in anger, half, and more though, to confess it, in mute admiration for the skill, the cleverness, the innate brain-power, was the way she put it to herself there, of this man—her husband; used to just this one end and that to win her! Neither the tailor nor the other man, nor the legion of admirers otherwise, would ever have thought of that!

"You're a mean, nasty thing, so there!" she flung at him, while the gypsies, understanding the tone, if not words, of her message laughed.

"Come on and hurry! I want to snapshot these gypsies while the light's right!"

And, without further reference to the plot for script, or script of story he'd prepared for her, that day at least, she led on, squarely to the heart of the gypsy-town—to the very heart of old Romany Rye, as both he and she had so long pictured it—and the goal of their wedding-journey!

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 15.)

would like to have that cousin write and tell me something about the mysteries and joys of that Loveland of hers.

Uncle, can you play any music? Or Billy? I can play the violin and guitar until it makes your head ring and your feet think of the song: "Let the Rest of the World Go By."

Well, I'll say au revoir for this time. If any of the cousins write, I'll try to answer all I can.

Your nephew and cousin, GLENN HELMICK.

Glenn, there are no reliable guidebooks to Loveland. Such information as one can gain is always a little out-of-date or misleading. The journey must always be one of discovery and sometimes there are shipwrecks, desert islands and bobbed-haired natives to be met with on the way. It's a trip full of dangers and delights, Glenn. However, I'll wish you "bon voyage" and hope you will write and tell us what you think of the country and its inhabitants—both blonde and brunette.

I do not produce any music, Glenn. I buy mine all canned and ready to eat. It's safer in the long run—or if you can't run fast enough to escape the neighbors. I try to profit by Billy's experience in learning to play the saxophone. You never heard about this? Well, he and I were waited upon by a committee of near-residents who, after a session of remarks and expostulations, ended by saying that either Billy or they would have to be chloroformed. They said that life simply could not go on as it was. They seemed so pained and earnest about it that I persuaded Bill to make a wall ornament out of his saxophone and now he has it hanging under the record of his grandfather's services in the Civil War. It seems that the old chap ate up the uniforms of two Confederate generals and so won a pension for eighteen years before he finally died in 1897 of acute indigestion.

FERRIS TEXAS.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

I will try my luck for once! I have been a silent reader of COMFORT for several years and I certainly enjoy it.

Uncle, I surely must agree with some of the cousins about the powder puff, for I do not like it—although a wee bit sometimes helps the looks.

My, doesn't Cousin Maude Parker boost Arkansas? I live in the black land section of Ellis county where it takes four good mules to pull an empty wagon after a rain. Some mud!

I am just a common Texas farm boy with dark brown hair and eyes and dark complexion. I have five feet, nine inches to my height and you can guess my age between 21 and 25. I'm still single.

I would like to hear from all that care to write, and I'll answer all I can.

With love to Uncle and all, I remain,

Your nephew and cousin, W L. HEATHERLY.

You seem to be enduring cheerfully your lonely bachelor life down in all that Ellis county black gumbo, W. L. It certainly seems a waste of good mule power to use four of these noble, sweet-tempered animals to pull an empty wagon. And why do you want to go after rain? Surely a wagon load of rain would only make more mud, or so it seems to my dusty brain. I never heard much about Texas mud, W. L., or that it was any worse than even Cousin Maude Parker's fabulously famous Arkansas can produce. But I have heard a lot of talk, some of it rather impolite and vigorous, concerning Texas sand and its way of not remaining long in one place. In fact, Texas sand seems to want to be traveling all the while. It never stops long except when it gets in somebody's eyes or ears. I heard an extravagant Fort Worth man say once that half of Oklahoma and two-thirds of New Mexico had been formed from sand blown out of Texas. He claimed that replevin proceedings ought to be started from Austin against both states. I hope your mud doesn't reach as

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 30.)

200 Colors 14 Varieties

KNITTING YARNS

Finest Quality Money Back Guarantee

Send today for FREE SAMPLE CARD and illustrated folder of newest styles in knitted garments with full instructions. Hand-knitted holiday gifts are always most acceptable. 1923-24 color card now ready. Largest assortment we have ever shown—Free on Request

BEACON WORSTED CO., Dept. 16, 112-114 East 19th St., N.Y.

FREE Your New Larkin Catalog

Beautiful Home-Furnishings, Congoleum Rugs, Rogers Silverware, Universal Electric Appliances, and New York's newest Coats and Charming Dresses are among the 1600 valuable Premiums shown in this new Fall Book, just off the press. Send for it and see how to get them as a Factory-to-Family saving for you and your friends. Just buy every-day home supplies, Pure Foods, Soaps, Toilet Preparations, Clothing, etc., direct from Larkin Factories. Satisfaction guaranteed or money back.

This Beautiful Coat Given With Purchases of Larkin Products.

Send for this New Book

Given with Larkin Products

GIVEN TO YOU

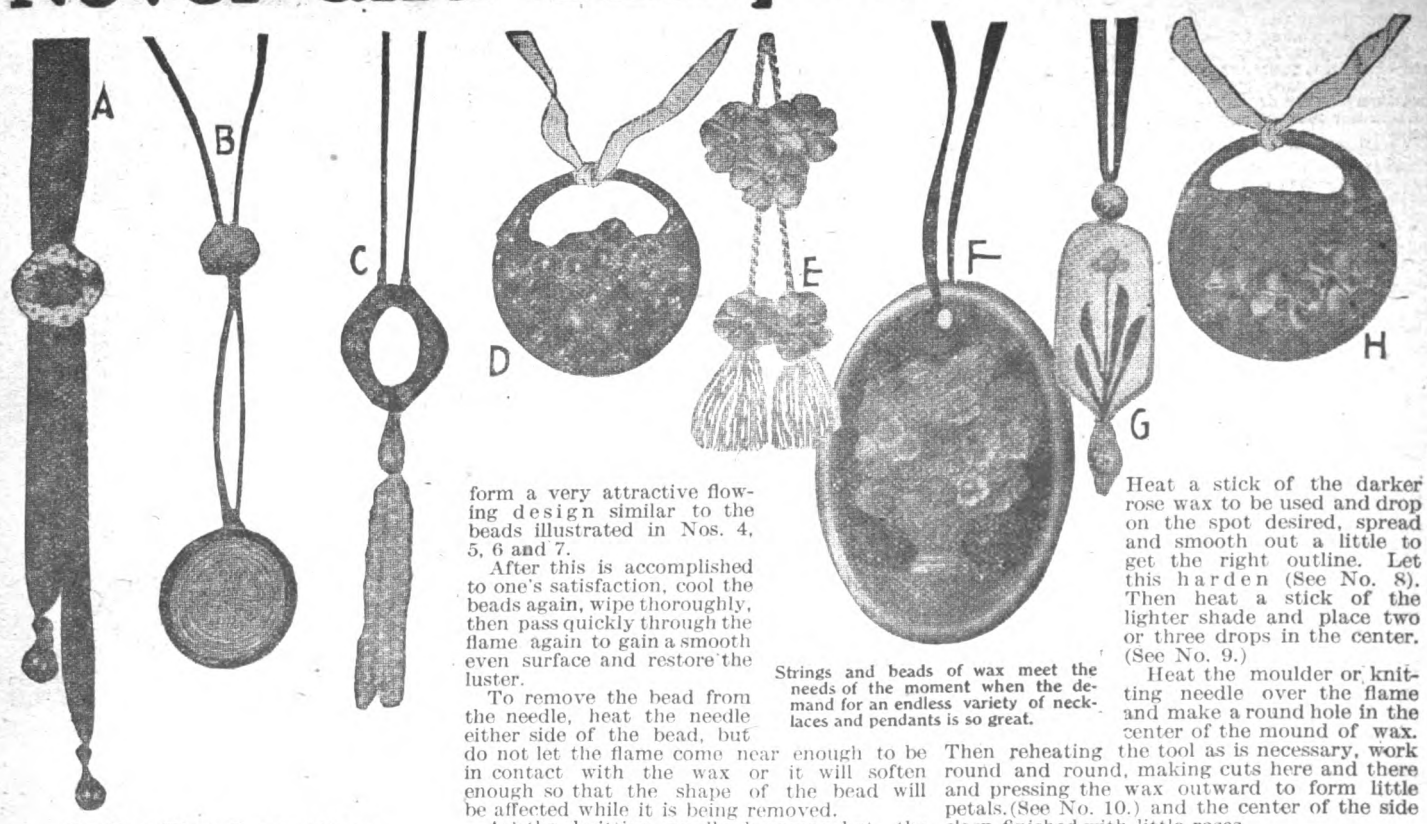
This comfortable, big Rocker is a fine example of the valuable Premiums GIVEN TO YOU in a Larkin Club of friends and neighbors. Thousands of women have found the helpful Larkin Plan the ideal way to make happier, cozier homes.

Let us tell you about it.

MAIL COUPON TO-DAY

to our nearest address for full information and your own copy of the beautiful Larkin Catalog.

Larkin Co Inc. Buffalo, N. Y., Chicago, Ill., Peoria, Ill.



Please send new Fall Catalog No. 76 and information about Larkin Clubs.

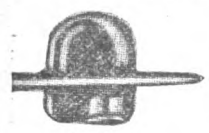
Name_____

Address_____

470_____

Novel and Inexpensive Christmas Gifts

Strings and beads of wax meet the needs of the moment when the demand for an endless variety of necklaces and pendants is so great.

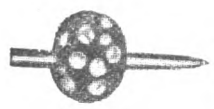


Sealing-Wax Decorations

THE collection of articles shown on these pages this month illustrate some of the many ways in which ordinary sealing wax can be used as a decorating medium.

This modern and fascinating art and these examples of how it can be employed we feel sure will help to solve the gift problem for many of our readers this year in a new and also an economical way.

The wax can be used in several different ways.



First by softening and forming into shapes. over a small flame or applying directly to glass, celluloid or cardboard, or it can be made into a sealing-wax enamel by combining it with alcohol, and then applying as paint or enamel with a small brush.

No. 1

No. 2

No. 3

It is a very flexible medium and the art of using it effectively can so easily be acquired, that any one can successfully learn how to make beads, pins, earrings, fancy buttons, girdles and bracelets, and also decorate boxes, bottles, toilet articles, vases and a host of other things so that they resemble the lovely luster wares.

Sealing-Wax Beads

As the beads are so easily made it is best to begin by practicing on these. For equipment one will need only a few sticks of the wax, an alcohol or chafing dish lamp, an ordinary steel (vegetable) knife, No. 12 steel knitting needle, a wax moulder (orange-stick may substitute), a glass of cold water and some soft clean cloth. Use one piece for wiping the beads dry and one for keeping one's tools clean and free from wax.

No. 4

If possible secure a piece of glass or marble on which to work, or even a child's ordinary slate, then the beads and pendants can be partly shaped by pressing and rolling on this smooth surface as the beads cool.

No. 5

The warmed blade of the knife is also sometimes useful in shaping or the heated point of the knitting needle. This is especially good to score or make lines on the beads running either horizontally or vertically.

No. 6

To make beads, cut the sealing-wax sticks into pieces about the size of the bead desired with the heated blade of the knife. Use one stick of wax as a foundation color. Heat the end of the knitting needle over the alcohol lamp and press into the wax as shown (see No. 1.) If large beads are desired press one piece of wax on each side of the needle. Revolve slowly over the flame, being careful not to melt the wax too much. Work slowly and shape the beads gradually as the wax softens. (See No. 2). As the bead takes on the correct shape dip it into the cold water once or twice to harden. Always dry thoroughly with the cloth before heating again for if any water remains on the surface bubbles are liable to form. When the foundation wax is symmetrical in shape if a combination of colors is desired, heat the ends of the different sticks of wax one at a time and dot on the cool bead (See No. 3). Revolve slowly over the flame again until the wax softens then turning as seems best. With a little practice one can blend the colors so as to form a very attractive flowing design similar to the beads illustrated in Nos. 4, 5, 6 and 7.

No. 7.

After this is accomplished to one's satisfaction, cool the beads again, wipe thoroughly, then pass quickly through the flame again to gain a smooth even surface and restore the luster.

To remove the bead from the needle, heat the needle either side of the bead, but do not let the flame come near enough to be in contact with the wax or it will soften enough so that the shape of the bead will be affected while it is being removed.

As the knitting needle becomes hot, the bead can gradually be loosened. Slip it back and forth two or three times before it is finally slipped off then the hole through the center will be clean cut and smooth as shown in illustration No. 4.

No. 8

As the sealing wax comes in some three dozen different shades lovely blues, greens, reds with black and gold can be combined in almost limitless ways.

Fancy Shaped Beads

After cutting the wax into pieces the size of the beads desired for large beads such as Nos. 6 and 7 cut each piece of wax again lengthwise and proceed as directed for smaller beads.

No. 9

In addition to round, oval and long beads, the shapes of each of these forms may be varied by flattening each side of the beads while the wax is still warm and before it is removed from the needle. No. 6 is a flattened inch and a half long bead with rounded end.

No. 7 is a well-rounded bead with oval pointed ends. Long beads can also be finished with almost square ends.

A large square, diamond or fancy shape such as No. 11 can be used for the slide or center of a pendant.

No. 10

In shaping beads care must be taken to work when the wax is not too hot, and the fingers should be moistened slightly when handling the wax.

Bead Necklaces

Wax beads of the same or graduating sizes may be strung together closely or beads of the same size showing spaces of cord between are the simplest arrangements.

Fine silk cord of any color may be used, but for many of the necklaces, as the beads are of colors, black cord is really most effective.

In stringing beads tie a knot on either side of each bead to hold it in place. See I and J above.

To fasten a "drop" to the center of a necklace use a small piece of wire cut from an invisible hairpin. Double the ends of the wire together to form a loop. When the "drop" is partly shaped slip to the end of the needle. Heat the end of the wire loop, press into top of the "drop", cool, wipe, then complete shaping and slip off the needle. Fill the hole with a bit of wax and round off the end.

No. 12.

For variety small glass beads may be combined with wax beads.

Suggestions for stringing.

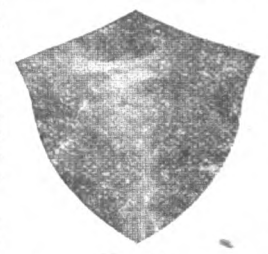
Of any color combination make 1 drop, 2 large beads like Nos. 5 or 6, 3 small beads like No. 4. Knot center of cord to wire loop in drop, inch sp of double cord, knot, 1 round bead, knot, 3 in. single cord, knot, 1 glass bead, 1 round bead, 1 glass bead, knot, 3 in. cord, knot, 1 glass bead, 1 large bead, 1 glass bead, knot. From center repeat 2 groups, knotting cord together in center between last 2 groups.

Suggestion No. 2. 1 yd of cord, 8 round and 3 oval wax beads like No. 5. Fold cord on each side 9 in. from center tie knot, on each cord string 1 round bead, knot, 2 in. space, knot, 1 round bead, knot, repeat again, 3 in. space, knot in oval bead, 4 in. space, knot both cords together, 1 oval bead, knot cords together, then finish each end with 1 round bead.

No. 11.

Suggestion No. 3. Flattened square drop, 1 small glass bead, round wax bead, glass bead all strung closely. Five-inch space of cord on either side then group of 1 glass bead, 1 round wax bead, 1 square flat bead, 1 round wax and 1 glass bead. Knot between each.

Pendants

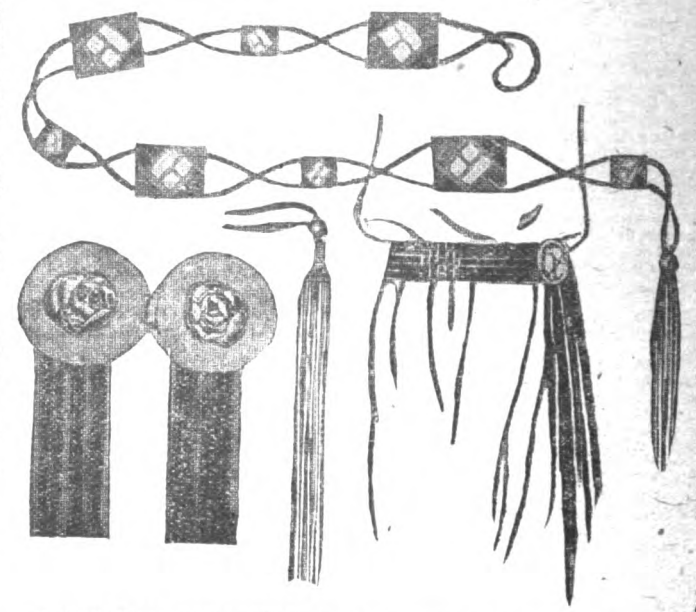


For many of the really exquisite little pendants such as are illustrated, card foundations are wax covered and then decorated with flowers, fruit or conventional forms.

After a little practice well-shaped flowers, especially roses can be indicated with a few strokes of the moulder.

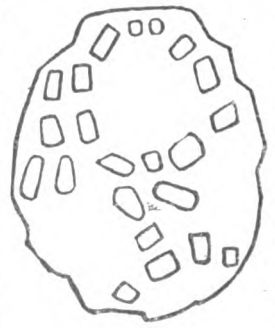
For these two or three shades are necessary. Heat a stick of the darker rose wax to be used and drop on the spot desired, spread and smooth out a little to get the right outline. Let this harden (See No. 8). Then heat a stick of the lighter shade and place two or three drops in the center. (See No. 9.)

Heat the moulder or knitting needle over the flame and make a round hole in the center of the mound of wax. Then reheating the tool as is necessary, work round and round, making cuts here and there and pressing the wax outward to form little petals. (See No. 10.) and the center of the side clasp finished with little roses.



For leaves use green wax, working a drop out into a leaf like shape while warm. For wild roses and forget-me-nots place a tiny bit of softened warm wax in position for each petal, then shape with strokes from the center outward. For the centers use a bit of yellow wax or a small glass bead.

No. 13.



Pendant A. Black grosgrain ribbon run through a small buckle. The foundation of cardboard is covered with black wax. When hardened decorate each side with a rose, specks of green leaves and tiny forget-me-nots. Pendant C shows another way of using a similar buckle. In the foundation cardboard make holes for tying in the silk cord and the tassel of small glass beads.

Pendant B. Silk cord, one flattened round bead of yellow and black and an inch on a half circular foundation cover with black and then yellow wax. Cover the edges as evenly as possible, have the yellow wax quite thick and onto this while the wax is still soft press any article, such as a fancy button or a medal, heat slightly and cool to restore the luster.

A SIDE CLASP AND GIRDLES WITH SEALING-WAX DECORATIONS.

Pendants D and H. These gay little basket-like shapes have for their foundation ordinary tin-rimmed tags. Cut the upper part of the cardboard away as shown, leaving only the tin rim.

No. 14.

The first design (D) features a group of purplish blue grapes and green leaves on an apple-green background. For the grapes cut, heat and stick in place the wax for the grapes, dot on wax for background as needed. Heat and blend. When foundation is nicely covered, add wax to the grapes, soften and round up.

Design H has a blue-and-gold blended background decorated with three white flowers with yellow centers. These flowers can be made on court plaster as are the forget-me-nots and pressed into position while the wax is still warm.

Forget-me-not Design E. Pink silk cord and tassels. Flowers cut from court plaster, two pieces for each flower. The petals are tiny as each flower when wax covered should be less than a half-inch in diameter.

Cover one side of each flower with blue wax, place on the cord and on the back press another flower. Hold together closely. If necessary shape edges of petals with a pair of small sharp scissors. Heat and round over edges with wax. Finish the center of each flower with a bit of yellow and a dot of coral.

Design F. This two-inch oval cardboard is covered with turquoise blue wax finished with a moulded rim of grey. The basket is of brown, marked with the end of the knitting needle, and filled with flowers of the brightest colors. This odd but attractive combination is hung on a narrow black ribbon.

Design G is shaped of cardboard as shown in No. 12. Wire loops as before described are used to attach both the oval drop and the small round beads which are of wax.

The pendant is covered with amber wax, decorated with a white lily and green leaves.

Designs I and J are simple but effective ways of stringing. I features a fancy-shaped pendant similar to diagram No. 11 while J has for a drop a large oval bead such as No. 15 of varied colored wax.

No. 15.

Design K. A circle, crescents and two small triangles of bright blue scarlet and green. The colors are laid on in a conventional design and strung together with black cord.

Such a design as No. 14 is particularly good for a pendant of one colored wax. Say jade, coral, blue or amber. Punch holes as shown in the foundation and on the two or three solid places round up the wax into a mound. Use a toothpick to smooth the wax in the holes. No. 15 shows the finished pendant.

Gift of Girdles

Any article which is so essential to our present costumes can not fail to be a pleasing gift.

Heavier silk cords will be needed for these as the beads or other wax motifs used are larger than in the necklaces.

For the side clasp illustrated use two and one-half inch wooden button molds covered smoothly with black velvet for the foundation. To the edges on the under side sew securely a large hook and eye.

ROSE DECORATED WAX-COVERED BUCKLES.

Decorate the center of each button with a wax rose made as illustrated in No. 10. Cover the velvet completely with black wax and finish each button with several strings of small black beads.

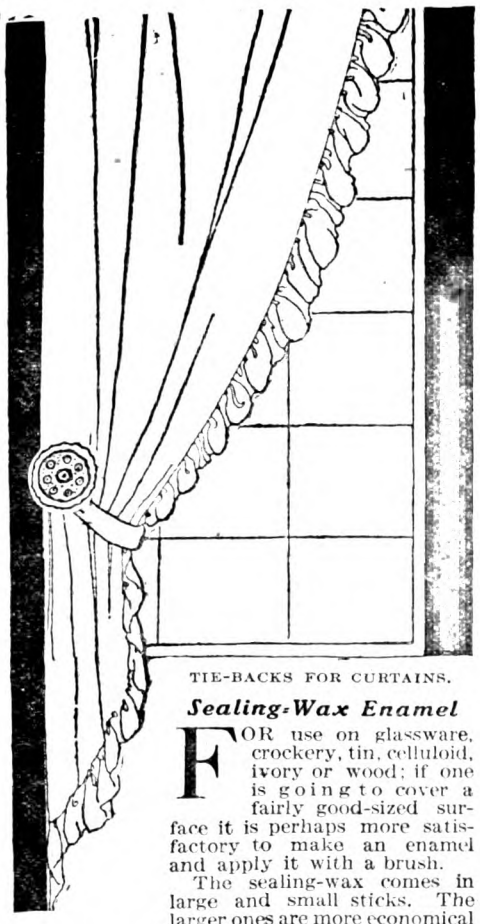
A tassel for the end of a cord or side panel may be finished with sealing-wax beads or a shaped wax-covered top.

A very handsome girdle of wax medallions can be made up of blues, greens and reds combined with black silk cord. The simplest shapes are most effective alternating motifs of two sizes. For closing the girdle loop the cord through the finished end drawing it through as far as necessary.

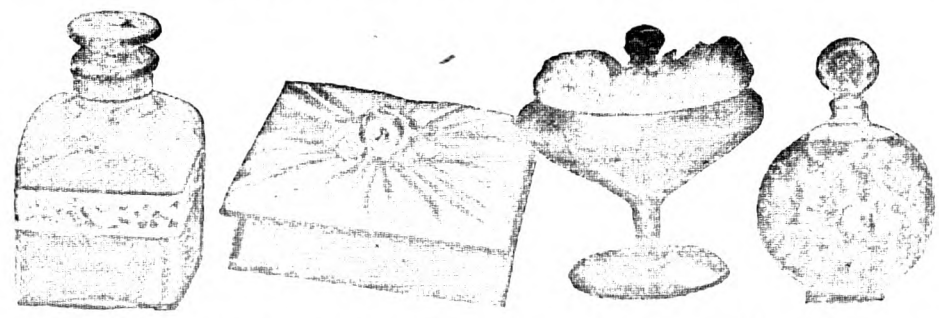
BEAD CUFF LINKS.

Earrings

As jewelry is so much in evidence, earrings are again the fashion. Wax drops may be made in many ways but space will only allow of one suggestion.



For these shown, two small brass rings, a bit of wire and the top of a ten-cent pair of earrings



EARRINGS.

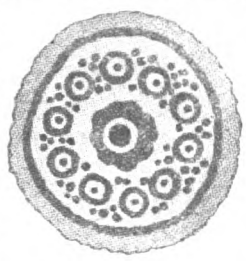
(CONTINUED ON PAGE 32.)

Fashioned from Ordinary Sealing-Wax

TIE-BACKS FOR CURTAINS.

Humble bottles, boxes and even a ten-cent sherbert glass can be converted into charming little affairs by the addition of a few flowers or a coat of sealing-wax enamel.

Sealing-Wax Enamel



FOR use on glassware, crockery, tin, celluloid, ivory or wood; if one is going to cover a fairly good-sized surface it is perhaps more satisfactory to make an enamel and apply it with a brush.

The sealing-wax comes in large and small sticks. The larger ones are more economical for vases, candlesticks, bowls, flower-pots and other articles which require considerable wax to cover the surface.

To make the enamel, a glass jar with a screw top cover is necessary, a smooth wooden stick for stirring, an asbestos mat and some alcohol (not wood alcohol).

The wax should be cut up into small pieces and placed in the dry clean jar. Set this on an asbestos mat on the back of the stove, or over the low flame of a gas or oil stove. Leave the jar uncovered and heat until the wax is melted.

The wax must not boil and the heating has to be done very carefully so as not to crack the jar. When the wax is entirely melted, remove the jar from the stove and allow the wax to cool somewhat. Then slowly, drop by drop stir in a little alcohol. If there is a sputtering the wax is still too hot. Continue the stirring and add alcohol until the wax is thin. One part of alcohol to three of the melted wax makes a smooth heavy enamel which can be applied to large surfaces with a good-sized brush.

DETAIL DESIGN OF CURTAIN HOLDER.

For a painting enamel one part alcohol to one part of wax is a good proportion. After the enamel is thoroughly mixed it will not harden even when cool. To keep, screw the top on the jar.

If too much alcohol has been added leave the jar uncovered until it thickens a little by letting the alcohol evaporate.

To save cost and the work of covering large surfaces, the painted tin candy and lunch boxes which are now so popular can be given a touch which will make them entirely different by the addition of a few wax flowers.

In doing this it is necessary to scrape or scratch the paint from the portion to be decorated, roughing the surface up a little or the wax will not stick.

LINGERIE RUNNER.

Another dainty little gift which is quite "Frenchy" looking, is made by partially covering one of the small gift powder boxes with blue, pink or lavender wax and then working out a spray, garland or group of small flowers on the cover.

Curtain Tie-Backs

Particularly effective holders to use on curtain tie-backs which are again in style, are but another one of the ways in which wax can be utilized.

Very good imitations of the old glass Colonial designs may be used by employing conventional sort of rosette designs worked out wholly in one color such as amber, amethyst, blue or ivory white, or an opal like combination can be made by blending blues and pinks with white.

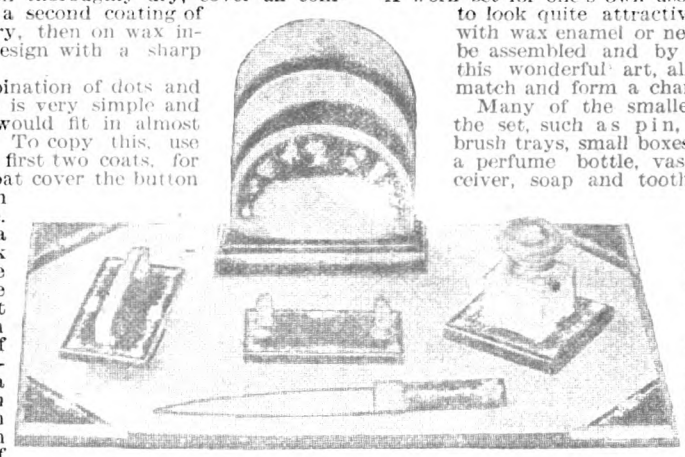
To make the foundation proceed as follows: cut a two and one-half-inch circle of cardboard to the center of one side, attach a small brass ring by thread or a bit of wire. Cover back and front with one coating of enamel and while the wax is still warm press on to the center of the cardboard a two-inch wooden button mold. When thoroughly dry, cover all completely with a second coating of enamel. Dry, then on wax indicate the design with a sharp pencil.

The combination of dots and circle shown is very simple and in coloring would fit in almost any room. To copy this, use gold for the first two coats, for the third coat cover the button only with peacock blue. Next run a line of black around the edge of the button. Next round, dot on ten drops of orange, leaving about a quarter inch between each. When dry put dot of white in center of orange. Dry thoroughly, now surround the orange with small violet dots, care being taken not to run them together. Put a small violet dot on centers of white. Let dry. Paint irregular violet center over the blue, dry, then all but cover this with a coat of geranium. Next a quarter inch dot of light blue, then finish the center with yellow, orange or gold.

Such a pattern as this can be carried out very successfully as it is so simple. Several can be made very much alike if the different colors are painted on each one in succession. Do not work to get an even effect but make one stroke answer, any resulting irregularity really being an addition.

Desk Sets

Such a set as is here shown would surely be an acceptable gift.



The various articles needed including a small inkstand, letter rack, paper-cutter, etc., can be purchased, the blotter-pad bound with pasteboard corners easily made, and then all decorated to match.

In this set roses cut from crepe paper are grouped on a black background on the letter rack and arranged in a running border on the other articles. A coating of this wax enamel applied to a shabby leather set will make it almost as good as new, unless of course, the leather is actually worn out and ragged.

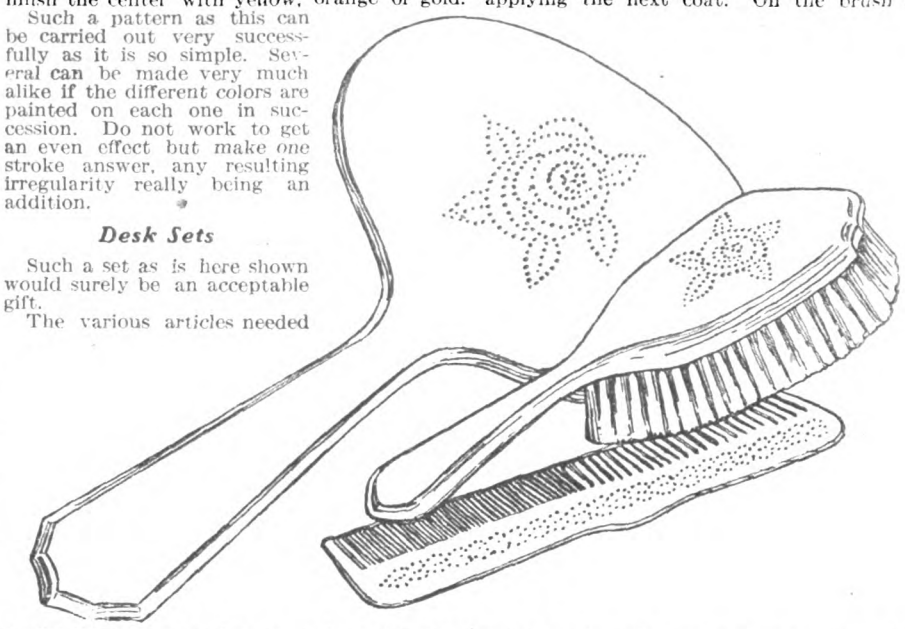
Toilet Set

A worn set for one's own use can be made to look quite attractive by coating with wax enamel or new articles can be assembled and by the magic of this wonderful art, all decorated to match and form a charming whole.

Many of the smaller articles for the set, such as pin, comb and brush trays, small boxes for powder, a perfume bottle, vase, a hair receiver, soap and tooth-brush cases and all the various manicure implements can be found in the ten-cent stores. The brush and mirror will cost more but need not be of an expensive grade of celluloid.

A WAX-DECORATED DESK SET.

When several pieces are to be decorated it will cost less to use the larger sticks of wax for the foundation color at least. Thin the sealing-wax enamel as directed to the consistency of milk.



With a flat brush apply this in thin coats, giving every article at least three coats and allowing each one to dry thoroughly before applying the next coat. On the brush and mirror paint each side, each time allowing it to dry before turning over and painting the opposite side.

When the background is thoroughly covered with a smooth even coating of color select any colored design and place in position or if an outline pattern is to be used, trace it on to the wax by means of a sheet of carbon paper and sharp pencil.

For a raised design of dots forming a continuous outline such as is here shown, use a thicker enamel and place the dots at regular distances apart.

In this example a mist or very soft grey enamel was used, the rose design being dotted in on this with a copper bronze.

Other light colors such as rose or blue combined with gold, old blue or coral with white, or black and white combinations are all very pretty and effective.

A celluloid brush, comb and mirror may be treated with enamel to match a hair receiver, powder box, cream jar and other toilet accessories.

Novel Bracelet

Enough fine black silk cord to encircle the wrist either once or twice, one large and 12 small wax beads and one bunch of small glass beads will be needed to carry out this idea.

WAX BEAD BRACELET.

Any color combinations of sealing-wax can be used for the beads, according to fancy and strung on a colored cord if preferred. A black silk cord however, tends to emphasize the colors used in the beads and can safely be worn with more gowns.

King Tut Turban

These popular and pretty turbans which come in a straight length and are draped snugly about the head to keep one's hair in place, are made of two and one-quarter yards of water-proof maline or georgette.

An ornament is used in the center of the front and under this the ends are tucked.

The ornament can be made very easily of wax, selecting and utilizing a design as suggested in these columns and cutting a working foundation from cardboard or court-plaster.

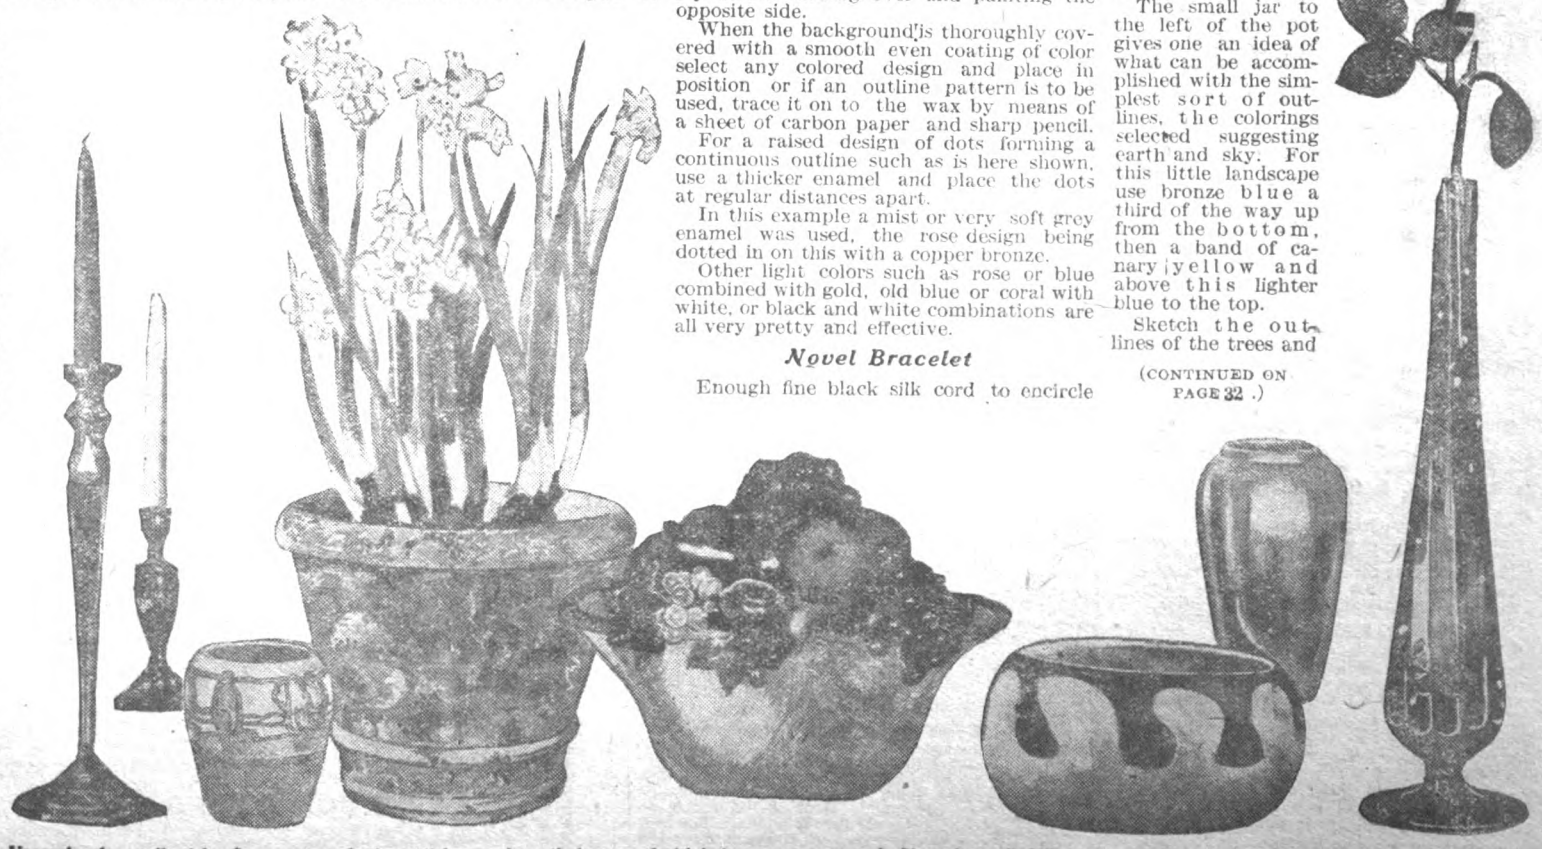
KING TUT TURBAN.

How to Get Designs

Ideas and designs for use in this work can be appropriated from color pictures, crepe paper and paper napkins. Cut out the design carefully and paste it on to the object to be decorated. If this has already had one coat of wax, simply spread the design out and press into position while the wax coating is still soft. With a small brush now paint over each color with thin wax enamel, duplicating the original colors used in the design.

In the case of flowers or fancy ornaments such as the side clasp and the front turban ornament a raised effect can be obtained by waxing some parts of the design much more heavily than others.

Waxing Large Pieces



For vases, jars, pots and bowls well blended combinations of different colors are the most popular as these effects can be so easily obtained. The flower-pot and fruit bowl are good examples of this variegated decorating.

In covering a large surface use the wax rather sparingly, and place dots of the same color some distance apart, heat, blend and then add more wax as needed.

The small jar to the left of the pot gives one an idea of what can be accomplished with the simplest sort of outlines, the colorings selected suggesting earth and sky. For this little landscape use bronze blue a third of the way up from the bottom, then a band of canary yellow and above this lighter blue to the top.

Sketch the outlines of the trees and

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 32.)

Vases, bowls, candlesticks, flower-pots and other articles may be entirely covered with hot wax or wax enamel. If wax is applied direct, dot colors on from end of a stick, hold article over the flame, revolve slowly, always in the same direction, allowing the wax to melt and blend. Add more wax as needed.

Candlesticks covered with wax add an attractive note of color to a room. The smaller one illustrated is an inexpensive wooden one coated with black wax and decorated on the bowl and base with rose on leaves arranged as shown in the detail above.

The flowers are more attractive if two or more shades are used. Do not putter but form each petal with one or two strokes.

See directions for making roses on page 22.

NEW VALUES
30×3½
1 YEAR
CORD $2
Written Guarantee Certificate with Each Tire!

Wonderful bargain prices on these slightly used Goodyear, Goodrich, Fisk, U. S., and other Standard Tires. You can get 12,000 Miles. You are absolutely protected by our guarantee to replace any tire that does not wear 1 year at ½ price. Written Guarantee sent with each tire. Order Quick!

LOWEST PRICES EVER OFFERED

	Tire	Tube		Tire	Tube
30x3½	$2.00	$1.15	32x4½	$3.50	$2.25
32x3½	2.50	1.40	33x4½	3.50	2.35
31x4	3.00	1.50	34x4½	4.00	2.50
32x4	3.00	1.75	35x4½	4.25	2.50
33x4	3.25	1.85	36x4½	4.25	2.75
34x4	3.50	2.00	35x5	4.25	3.00

EXAMINE TIRES ON ARRIVAL

Just send $1.00 deposit as good faith, or save 5% by sending cash with order now. In either case, if tires are not satisfactory you can return them. Don't Delay. Order TODAY—while our stock lasts.

IDEAL TIRE COMPANY
2611 S. Wabash Ave. Dept. 715, CHICAGO, ILL.

NEW TIRE REDUCTION
30×3½ CORD $2.00
10 MONTHS WRITTEN GUARANTEE

Sensational Price Reduction on these almost new Goodrich, Goodyear, Firestone, Fisk, U. S., and other standard make tires. Our customers getting thousands of miles of satisfactory service.

America's Record Price Sale

Size	Tires	Tubes	Size	Tires	Tubes
30x3	$1.90	$ .90	32x4½	$3.50	$1.65
30x3½	2.00	.90	33x4½	3.60	1.65
32x3½	2.25	.90	34x4½	3.75	1.65
31x4	2.50	.90	35x4½	4.00	1.65
32x4	3.00	1.40	36x4½	4.00	1.65
33x4	3.00	1.40	35x5	4.00	1.95
34x4	3.25	1.40	37x5	4.00	1.95

FREE EXAMINATION

Enclose only $1 deposit with each tire ordered—balance send C. O. D. Section unwrapped for inspection. If not entirely satisfactory return. Written guarantee sent with each tire protects you for 10 months' satisfactory service or another given at ½-price. Buy now.

CAPITAL TIRE CO. 2129 S. Wabash Ave. Dept. 127 Chicago

30 X 3½ CORD $2.00 NEW TIRE PRICE
GUARANTEED 8 MONTHS AT HALF PRICE

These are Goodrich, Goodyear, Firestone, Fisk and other best known standard make tires. All slightly used, but readily give our customers thousands of miles of splendid service.

LOWEST TIRE PRICES IN AMERICA

	Tires	New Tubes		Tires	New Tubes
30x3	$1.90	$ .90	32x4½	$3.75	$1.65
30x3½	2.00	.90	33x4½	3.75	1.65
32x3½	2.50	.90	34x4½	4.00	1.65
31x4	2.75	.90	35x4½	4.25	1.65
32x4	3.00	1.40	36x4½	4.25	1.65
33x4	3.25	1.40	35x5	4.25	1.95
34x4	3.50	1.40	37x5	4.25	1.95

SEND ONLY $1.00 for each tire shipped. Balance C.O.D. Express shipments sent section unwrapped for inspection. Tires guaranteed eight months. Another tire given at half price for any not perfectly satisfactory. Dealers and Agents wanted everywhere. WRITE—RUSH ORDERS.

ROSE TIRE CORPORATION
Dept. KI23, 1526 S. WABASH AVE., CHICAGO, ILL.

Tire Agents Wanted
Use and Introduce MELLINGER CORD TIRES
12,000 Miles Guaranteed!

Lowest Wholesale Prices in America. Shipped prepaid on approval. Make big money all or part time. No capital or experience. Sample sections furnished.

FREE TIRES FOR YOUR CAR to one user in each locality. Simply send name today for valuable book, tells how thousands have gone into big business. SPECIAL AGENTS' OFFER, Wholesale Prices and FREE SAMPLE KIT.

MELLINGER TIRE & RUBBER CO.
$500,000 Capital. DEPT. 506, KANSAS CITY, MO.

Only $14.24 DOWN

(WICO Magneto Equipped)

This WITTE Throttling Governor ENGINE Is sold DIRECT from FACTORY to YOU on 90 Days FREE Trial

Here's the engine that has revolutionized power on the farm—makes every job easy and cheap. Low priced—in all sizes, 2 to 25 H-P. Simple to operate and free from usual engine troubles. Over 100,000 WITTE Engines in use today.

Burns KEROSENE, GASOLINE, DISTILLATE or GAS

Delivers power far in excess of rating on the cheapest fuels. Built to burn any fuel—no attachments necessary. Practically no carbon and equipped with the famous WICO Magneto.

Write Today for my FREE BOOK

Investigate this engine now. Write for my Big, Free, Illustrated Engine Book and details of amazing 90-Day FREE TRIAL Offer. No obligation. ED. H. WITTE, Pres.

WITTE ENGINE WORKS
3644 Oakland Avenue, KANSAS CITY, MO.
3644 Empire Building, PITTSBURGH, PA.

Automobile and Gas Engine Helps

Questions relating to gasolene engines and automobiles, by our subscribers, addressed to COMFORT Auto Dept., Augusta, Maine, will be answered by our expert, free, in the columns of this department. Full name and address is required, but initials only will be printed. That we may intelligently diagnose your trouble please state the year in which your car was made.

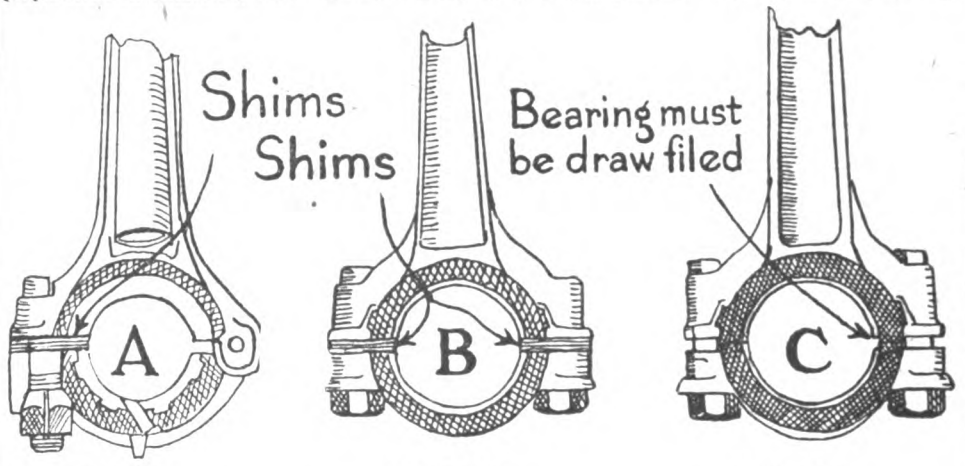
Connecting Rod Adjustments

THE connecting rod bearings are subjected to severe service. They should be inspected at least once a season and adjusted if loose. There are two kinds of connecting rods in general use, one kind having the cap hinged to the rod and using but a single bolt to clamp the parts together. This is termed the hinged type of connecting rod. The other kind of rod known as the marine type, bolts are used on both sides of the cap. The cap must be entirely removed before the rod can be released from the crank shaft.

All connecting rods are not adjusted in the same manner. Same rods are provided with a number of thin shims between the rod and cap. In the event of the rod becoming loose, one or more of these thin shims or laminations may be removed.

Other rods are not provided with shims and any wear can only be compensated for by removing some of the metal from the rod cap. Such an adjustment is made by removing the cap and catching it in a vise. The ends of the cap are then drawfiled a little at a time. Frequent replacing of the cap and drawing up of the bolts is necessary in order to determine the fit.

After tightening up a rod, the fit can be determined by opening all relief cocks and pulling the engine over either with the hand crank or flywheel. It is unnecessary and even dangerous to adjust a bearing until it is difficult to turn the engine over.



After properly adjusting one bearing it is well to slack off on the adjustment and then adjust another rod. Proceed in like manner until the last rod has been adjusted and then tighten all rods. If locks are provided to prevent the bolts from backing out make certain they are in place.

When it is necessary to tow a car in order to loosen the bearings it is an indication of poor workmanship.

When the bearings are tightly adjusted, there is danger of the babbitt melting out providing care is not exercised to run the engine very slowly at the first.

The majority of manufacturers have exchanged propositions on connecting rods. Whenever a rod is burned out a new one can be obtained by sending in the old rod to the manufacturer or authorized dealer at a price ranging anywhere from 50 cents to two dollars.

Rebabbitting the rod by the owner is not advisable unless he possesses a special jig in which to form the bearings. Usually the manufacturer's exchange proposition affords the biggest saving.

HINGED TYPE. MARINE TYPE. MARINE TYPE.

Leaky Rings

When the engine is lacking in power, it is well to test the compression of the cylinders. In the absence of a compression gauge, a fairly accurate check may be made by turning the engine over with the hand crank and noting the resistance offered by each cylinder. When little resistance is offered, it is easy to determine whether the rings or valves are at fault by raising the hood and placing the car close to the cylinder block. If, when the engine is turned over slowly with the hand crank, there is a prolonged hissing sound, the indications are that compression is leaking past the piston rings. No hissing sound is produced by compression leaking past the valves.

Grade Crossing Menace

Highway Commissioner Frederick Stuart Greene of New York has recently authorized the use of a distinctive method of warning motorists and all others of the presence of railway crossings. The grade crossing is still a menace to travel and although different safety methods have been taken, the death toll at such places is still heavy. The Commissioner intends to mark the pavement. The first warning will consist of two wide parallel stripes painted one foot wide and placed five feet apart. These stripes will stretch across the pavement and will be placed 230 feet from the nearest track. At 125 feet from the nearest track will be another warning stripe, this also being one foot wide. Still as a last warning of the presence of a railway crossing will be another signal 25 feet from the nearest track. This signal will be two feet in width and will resemble the markings on railway crossing gates inasmuch as it will consist of diagonal bars in black and white. This method surely gives all travelers plenty of warning of the presence of railway crossings and should be the means of reducing crossing accidents to the minimum.

Lights Fluctuate

When the car lights brighten and dim at the different motor speeds it is an indication that the battery is weak. As the speed of the motor increases the generator picks up the load and supplies current for the lights. However when the motor speed is decreased beyond a certain point, the load is shifted back to the battery. The battery being weak causes the lights to burn dimly. The remedy is to have the battery recharged and to make certain that the terminals are not corroded.

Many times one light will refuse to burn constantly. Pulling the cable or jarring the lamp will often cause the bulb to resume burning. When such a condition is experienced, the trouble is usually due to a loose connection. The remedy is to release the terminal and tighten the screws which hold the cables. If the two wire system is used make sure that the two wires are insulated against each other. Clean the terminals before connecting to lamp.

Useful Pointers

Close Parking

In places where parallel parking is in force, one will sometimes see a space in which he believes it possible to park but due to position of the cars in front and rear of this space, maneuvering is necessary. Running head in is usually impossible under such circumstances as it is impossible to run the rear end of the car into position. The best way to park when the above condition is presented is to run parallel with the head car and then back into the space. Once the rear end of the car has been moved against the curb, but little maneurvering is necessary to place the front end in position.

Use Hand Throttle

When driving over rough cobble stones or on roads that are extremely rough it is difficult to use the foot accelerator and maintain an even operation of the engine. This is due to the condition of the road causing the uneven foot pressure on the foot accelerator. When such a condition is presented it is much better to discard the use of the pedal and control the engine operation with the hand throttle. This lever can be set or manipulated so that the jerky action of the engine can be avoided.

Balloon Tires

A new type of pneumatic tire for passenger cars has recently been placed on the market. This tire is much larger, thinner and lighter than the standard tire and for these reasons has been termed "balloon tire." This tire gives greater cushioning to the car.

Out of Matches

One of the pathetic sights in life is to view a smoker out of matches. While the smoker usually attends to the supply of matches carried on hand, it will no doubt be well to know that should the supply run out, he can obtain a light from the engine. If there are relief cocks in the cylinder head, one of these will supply the necessary torch when opened. Fire spits through an open relief cock when the engine is running. A cigar or cigarette can often be lighted by placing the end of it against the hot exhaust manifold.

Garage Shades

The housewife pulls down the shades to prevent the sun from fading the draperies. The owner who keeps his car in a garage having windows exposed to the sun should take this leaf out of the wife's copy book. The car is usually run into the garage in a certain position. The sun coming through the window will strike a certain part or parts of the car. Naturally these parts will fade out the finish quicker that the balance of the car. While light is desirable for the garage, the windows should be fitted with shades which can be drawn to exclude the sunlight.

Draining Crankcase

Draining the crankcase and refilling with fresh oil is beneficial to any engine if properly handled. However, too many owners believe that the operation merely consists of taking out a plug, allowing the oil to drain away and then refilling with a fresh lubricant. This is not sufficient as the oil in the splash basins cannot be drained away in this manner, neither will all the lubricant drain out of the pan. If there is a pint of dirty oil remaining in the engine, the addition of three quarts of clean oil will not produce 3½ quarts of clean oil. It will give 3½ quarts of dirty oil. After the old oil has been drained off about one quart of flushing oil should be poured into the engine. Flushing oil is light and can be purchased at any oil station. It is inexpensive and is produced for the purpose of cleaning out the engine. Run the engine a few minutes and then drain off the flushing oil. The fresh oil can now be poured into the engine. Save the old oil drained from the engine for lubricating the spring leaves.

Prevent Chattering

The time required to grind in Valves to a perfect fit can be greatly shortened if the seats are first recut and the valves refaced. When this is done, the register is assured and the grinding is only needed to remove one or two high spots. If the workman is not familiar with the work of recutting valve seats he is apt to allow the cutter to chatter. When this is done, considerable more work is involved than would have been the case if the work of recutting had not been attempted. Chatter marks cannot be removed by continued cutting as the cutter will only follow the chatter marks. If the flutes of the cutter be filled with grease before using, the chances of chattering is reduced to the minimum.

Speed Cops

Not all speed cops are mounted on motorcycles. Some cities now have automobiles on the road driven by officers in plain clothes. These cars travel the streets at the speed prescribed by law. Any drivers who pass this car are speeders and the registration number is taken. A car of this kind operating in a city known to the writer brought in more revenue than the three motorcycles combined.

Answers to Inquiries

PUMPS OIL EVEN WITH OVERSIZE RINGS.—My 1920 model Ford car has pumped oil ever since it was new although I have put in two sets of oversize rings, but without much benefit. I don't think the pistons have ever fitted tight enough. When turned up so the top you can take hold of the tops of them and shake them in the cylinder. There is about as much clearance as the thickness of a tin snuff can. Do you think that ten or fifteen thousandths oversize would fit and stop the oil-pumping? B. C., Athens, Ala.

A.—Too much is often expected after installing new or oversize rings in an engine. Merely installing new rings will not correct a certain trouble; they must be fitted. If the cylinder bores are worn oval shape then the rings cannot be fitted. Before installing rings the cylinders should be measured with inside micrometers. If the measurement discloses that the bores have worn oval shape, they should be ground out to the next largest size which will restore the roundness. Regarding the piston clearance do not be deceived about the purpose of the pistons. They have nothing to do with the leaking of oil or the holding of compression. A piston could have .040 inch clearance and still do its work providing the rings fit the bore. The piston having this clearance would be apt to slap but the compression would not be affected. The rings are the pieces which hold the compression. I do not know the exact clearance allowed Ford pistons, but the usual allowance for cast-iron pistons is about .001, while aluminum is given about .005 to .007 inch. Determine the fit of the rings and condition of the cylinder bores. When the motor is reassembled, a few small holes drilled in the lower piston ring groove may help the oiling trouble.

PISTON RUSTED TO CYLINDER.—Owing to the fact that I left my motor-boat engine in a three-day rain with the spark plug out, the piston rusted to the cylinder. How can I get the rust out so the piston will move? Also please tell me where I can purchase the piston rings; they are 3—¼. J. W. L., Jacksonville, Fla.

A.—Remove all the water from the cylinder bore and then pour on top of the piston a mixture of kerosene and cylinder oil. This mixture will in a few days attack the rust sufficiently to allow the piston to be broken loose. You should be able to purchase new piston rings at any accessory store.

REAR END TROUBLE.—I have a D-45, 1916 model Buick, and have put in two ring gears on main drive and two pinions within the last eighteen months. They broke out one or more teeth. Can you tell me what is the cause of this trouble and how to eliminate it? Do the Buick people make gears especially for hard service? F. L. T., Fayetteville, N. C.

A.—You do not state whether or not the new gears were purchased direct from the Buick factory or authorized dealer. Frequently an owner will purchase such parts from dealers in pirate parts. These parts are inferior to the standard parts and will not give the proper service. The manufacturer uses the proper steel, heat treated to a certain formula to give just the right amount of toughness. These are the parts that give service. Pirate parts may be purchased for a few cents less than the parts made by the car manufacturer, but experience has taught thousands that the money saved is poor economy. If, however, you have purchased the manufacturer's product then it is to be assumed that the alignment is affected. The housing on which the ring gear fits may be sprung. The face of the case may need truing or a new case may be needed. If you have purchased Buick parts, it might be well to write directly to the Buick Motor Car Co., Flint, Mich., and state your trouble. An instruction book will assist you in making the correct adjustment.

It Can't Be Done

"FOR SALE.—A good used automobile at a good price. Why? Because I have two and find I cannot run them both at the same time with one leg. Inquire of ——— ———."—Advt. in Up-State Paper.

Ford Runs 57 Miles on Gallon of Gasoline

A new automatic and self-regulating device has been invented by John A. Stransky, 281 Fourth St., Pukwana, South Dakota, with which automobiles have made from 40 to 57 miles on a gallon of gasoline. It removes all carbon and prevents spark plug trouble and overheating. It can be installed by anyone in five minutes. Mr. Stransky wants agents and is willing to send a sample at his own risk. Write him today.—Adv.

NEW-TREAD TIRES AT 40¢ ON THE DOLLAR

Send No Money!

Here is a real opportunity to cut your season's tire bill notwithstanding advances in prices. For a limited period only we offer our famous NEW TREAD Tires—as illustrated—at less than ½. Made of NEW LIVE RUBBER and built on the best carcases money can buy.

Special Sale Prices

Size	Tire	Tube	Size	Tire	Tube
28x3	$4.95	$1.25	36x4	$8.65	$2.35
30x3	4.95	1.35	32x4½	8.85	2.40
30x3½	5.85	1.40	33x4½	9.00	2.45
32x3½	6.50	1.50	34x4½	9.15	2.50
31x4	7.00	1.60	35x4½	9.25	2.60
32x4	7.50	1.85	36x4½	9.40	2.70
33x4	7.85	2.15	35x5	9.70	2.80
34x4	8.10	2.25	37x5	9.85	2.90

ALL OUR TUBES ARE NEW FRESH STOCK and Guaranteed for One Year. Shipment made same day order is received. Pay on arrival and if not satisfied, return AT OUR EXPENSE. Specify whether straight sids or clincher wanted. FIVE PER CENT DISCOUNT when cash accompanies order. DEALER AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY LOCALITY.

STANDARD TIRE & RUBBER CO.,
3253 S. Morgan St., Chicago, Illinois

$50 to $100 a Week

—and much more is being made by many of our 4000 Paul men demonstrating and selling—

AIR-GAGE Inner Tubes

—greatest improvement ever made. Air Gauge in valve stem of every tube shows pressure at a glance. Build a profitable and permanent business of your own. Experience not necessary. We teach you how to sell and give exclusive territory. Free book explains all.

PAUL RUBBER CO. Dept. 7, Salisbury, N. C.

We Pay $8 a Day

taking orders for Insyde Tyres—inner armor for automobile tires. Positively prevent punctures and blowouts. Guaranteed to give double tire mileage.

We Want 2000 Representatives

Easy to get orders. Every auto owner a prospect. Old worn-out casings will give three to five thousand miles more service. Use over and over again. Demand enormous. Write quick and get started.

AMERICAN ACCESSORIES CO., B1823 Cincinnati, O.

You Can Save $35.00

$4.45 and up Parcels Postpaid

Recover it yourself. Custom tailor made to fit all makes and models. Rout and quarters sewed together, with rear fasteners, welts and tacks, complete. Anybody can put it on. Give name, year, model number of your car. Catalog FREE. Agents wanted.

LIBERTY TOP & TIRE CO. Dept. F1 Cincinnati, O.

Gigantic Clearance Sale!
100,000 Tires

TWO TIRES FOR LESS THAN THE USUAL PRICE OF ONE

Our tremendous stock of Tires must be sold at once! Here is your opportunity, if you act quickly, to get two tires for much less than the usual cost of one—and a free inner tube with each tire. Take advantage of this record-breaking sale! Thousands of motorists everywhere are getting exceptional mileage out of these tires—and you, too, can get 12,000 Miles

Size	1 Tire	2 Tires
30x3	$7.25	$11.95
30x3½	8.25	13.95
32x3½	9.45	15.95
31x4	10.65	17.45
32x4	11.85	19.75
33x4	12.45	20.90
34x4	13.25	21.95
32x4½	13.45	22.45
33x4½	13.95	22.95
34x4½	14.45	23.45
35x4½	14.95	24.80
35x5	15.90	26.45

Specify S. S. or Clincher

SEND NO MONEY! We require no deposit. We make shipment C.O.D. subject to your approval. If not fully satisfied on examination, your money promptly refunded, including shipping charges. You take no risk at all. ACT NOW—MAIL YOUR ORDER TODAY!

FREE TUBE WITH EACH TIRE

ALBANY TIRE & RUBBER COMPANY
1506 S. Michigan Ave., Dept. 30-K, Chicago

Glorious October Days

"They's somethin' kinda hearty-like about the atmusfere
When the heat of summer's over and the coolin' fall is here—
Of course we miss the flowers, and the blossoms on the trees,
And the mumble of the hummin'-birds and the buzzin' of the bees;
But the air's so appetizin': and the landscape through the haze
Of a crisp and sunny mornin' of the airly autumn days
Is a pictur' that no painter has the colorin' to mock—
When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock."

WHEN James Whitcomb Riley wrote those lines about October, he felt just as you and I feel—but somehow he had the knack of putting his feelings into words, words that will endure throughout the ages. Riley loved October, and told us why; we all love October, but we lack the power of choosing words to express our high regard. Why, every farm boy loves the month when the walnuts, ripe and brown and tempting, are fairly calling to him from over on the hillside—calling to him to come, stain his hands by shuckin' 'em, then earn a scolding by his teacher. The older boys—and Dad and even Gran'pa fall in the class of boys at this time—feel the strong urge to shoulder a gun and "play hookey" a-huntin' squirrels or rabbits. Perhaps there are teal and mallards down along the creek or in the marsh? Maybe the fence over there needs mending, so we take the gun along. Queer, isn't it, that such a coincidence can be discovered in a time of need? Why, even old stiff-jointed Toller and young Bell, the rabbit hounds have been actin' odd of late; they know it's October and time to be out in the woods while the dew is on the ground! Better catch the spirit from them, folks; get out and enjoy October, for it comes but once a year. Youth and health must ever be considered in the same breath—and remember that youth is really a condition of the heart, not of the body!

October Reminders

If you wish to brighten the windows this winter at a small expense, now is the right time to pot some of your brightest annuals. You can pot petunias, verbenas, portulaccas, in fact almost any of the free bloomers you like, and they will produce abundant flowers indoors. In truth, most of them will bear larger and finer flowers than they produced outside. Snapdragons with finer spikes than you ever saw in the garden will reward your efforts; sweet alyssum too seems to like house culture, for the spikes are larger and heavier and the blossoms are brighter, larger and seem to last longer. Before potting any of these, severely cut them back. Use rich soil and large pots, then keep the soil moist and the results will be truly surprising. Few of the regular house plants will be prettier; besides, these annuals must be considered as extras, simply added for good measure. And how Mother will love them, and her callers will admire them, adding a full measure of pride to her personal pleasure.

October is a busy month for everyone in the farm family with little time in which to enjoy the bounties which the month has to offer. Many "chores" must be attended to by all, indoors and out around the fields and barns alike. But one necessary chore that often remains undone, to come up to haunt us throughout the winter every time we pump soft water for wash day or for our cleansing basinful to lave our face and hands, is the cistern; there never was a cistern built that did not need cleaning out occasionally—annually would be far better. Then there are the gutters and rain pipes. These fill with leaves and twigs and trash, to block the flow of water, causing a low water level in the cistern. Clean them out before heavy frost, clean the cistern too, if it is not too full, then go into the winter with full assurance of a supply of clean cistern water.

Needle Grass Damages Lamb Carcasses

The barbed seed cases of a plant commonly known as "needle grass" have been the cause of a great deal of damage to sheep and lamb carcasses in the southwest. The seed of this grass which is common in sheep-raising sections of Texas and adjoining states, matures in the latter part of May and is shed in June or July when dead ripe. The dry seed cases, about one inch in length are hard and sharp and are provided with retentive barbs which enable them to work through the skin and into the flesh. Sometimes abscesses are formed as a result. In other cases the wound heals and the "needle" when found may be mistaken for a small tick. The irritation it produces causes the greatest objection to "needly" carcasses.

Before the meat can be marketed it is necessary for the packer to trim out these spots and sometimes parts of the outlying muscles in several portions of the carcass must be cut away. As many as six needles have been found within an area two inches in diameter and occasionally has been found infecting a region four or five inches square. Needles seldom go deeper than an inch into the flesh, but they do move about over a considerable area in some instances.

Careful observation by inspectors of the Department of Agriculture stationed at the Fort Worth packing plants show that needles are found more often in the carcasses of lambs or young sheep than in those of older animals. Two possible explanations for this have been offered; the first that the grass grows little more than a foot high or not tall enough to reach the more expensive cuts of larger animals; the second that for some reason not fully understood the fleece of lambs picks up and retains the needles to a much greater extent than does the fleece of grown sheep.

The damage done by needle grass is costly to packers and sheep raisers, as is shown by the fact that packers are often forced to sell lambs costing around 13 cents live weight, or 22 to 24 cents dressed for a price as low as 10 cents a pound. In one lot of lambs examined by the Government inspector, out of 95 lambs 29 were found to have needle grass infections. In another lot of 100 lambs, 40 were infected. Therefore some method of prevention is imperative.

As a means to that end, it is suggested that needle grass be heavily pastured in the early spring while it is still quite tender and before seeds are matured. In this way it will be kept down and seed formation would be prevented to a considerable extent. Thus the cause of the trouble would be lessened.

Fall Management of Lambs

Lambs bought on the fall market for fattening must be accustomed gradually to rich green feeds such as rape, soybeans and cow-peas. The method most commonly used by experienced feeders is to put the newly purchased lambs on a comparatively dry timothy or bluegrass pasture when they arrive on the farm. Here they are allowed to rest and fill up on grass for two or three days. Good, fresh, pure drinking water is highly important at this time, and an abundance should always be easily available. Do not make it necessary for lambs to hunt for water while they are still strange to the place—a not uncommon mistake that often proves expensive. After two or three days on the dry pasture, turn the lambs into the corn field for an hour but not until they have had their morning fill on the dry pasture. When the hour has expired, bring them back to the dry grass pasture and keep them there until the next day. Increase the time allowed in the corn field by half an hour each day over a period of a week; at the end of this time they may safely be allowed to remain for a full day in the corn.

Lambs will eat the leaves of corn, at the same time trimming cut weeds and grass that may have grown since the corn crop was laid by. They will also eat the stalks that are "down," but they will not break down erect stalks to get at the ears as long as there is plenty feed within easier reach. Therefore, when it is intended that the ears as well as the lower leaves are to be pastured off, the stalks must be broken down for lambs. Just enough stalks should be broken down each day to satisfy the lambs and furnish the grain they need. If more is broken down at one time it will be wasted.

Remember that feed makes the fat lambs. Remember, too, that as the fall season advances feed becomes more scarce and less palatable. This applies particularly in cases where lambs are given the run of cropped land, to pick up a living in the fence corners and on the stubble fields. But even for lambs kept in the corn field the same facts hold true in a measure. They should not be kept there too long without some additional feed, if they are to be marketed as fat lambs. This is particularly true where rape is not available. Some of the largest and most successful lamb feeders begin to feed silage as early as November 1st, allowing as much silage as the lambs will "lick up clean" in an hour morning and evening. Provide plenty of salt and fresh water. See that the lambs get sufficient exercise to keep them healthy and lively. Provide some sort of shed or barn in which lambs may take shelter from wet weather or storms, but do not make the mistake of close housing in dark, damp, poorly ventilated buildings. A shelter shed open to the south or southeast and with a gravel or dirt floor that does not become muddy in wet weather is all that is really required in the way of shelter in most regions.

Sand Blowing Prevented by Trees

"Sand blows," or areas of shifting, drifting sand, are a serious menace to agriculture in many regions. Still worse, they are on the steady increase, due to the removal of timber by logging, by fire and by clearing of land for agricultural purposes. Land that has "stayed put" for centuries while covered by timber, soon dries out and commences to drift when the timber is cut off. This is especially true of certain sandy regions in the lake states and here we find experiments under way to determine the best remedy for sand blows.

Willow and poplar cuttings placed one foot apart in rows have been found to give the best results, according to the Michigan Forestry Department. Poplars made a remarkable growth of from four to eight feet in a year. Even though the original root collars of many of the young trees were covered by 6 feet of sand, the trees showed a 100 per cent. survival. Though willows did not make as rapid growth, they stood the effects of deep burying equally well. The particular usefulness of both willows and poplars was in barriers or screens planted several rows wide along drainage ditches and on the windward side of farmsteads where the presence of the trees effectually prevented sand encroachment and consequent damage.

Beach grass was useful in helping to hold in place, but it was found to be useless for use in barriers. Small spruce and pine trees did not survive deep burying when planted alone, though the western yellow pine, Pinus ponderosa, did well under the adverse conditions. The experiments proved the advantage of planting willows and poplars as temporary shelter for longer lived trees such as spruce and pine, however. Given shelter and protection while young, these will soon become established and independent and in time will produce a valuable crop of timber on land that would otherwise be waste.

Kerosene Cure for Thistles

Most farmers worry more or less about that troublesome weed pest, the Canada thistle. Some farmers worry because they have the pests well established on their farms; others worry because they fear that they will get the pesky things. Then, too, some farmers do not worry, even though they have the thistles and have them bad. Such men are not given to the worrying habit—but it would be far better for themselves and for their neighbors if they were more prone to lie awake nights thinking of ways to rid their fields of the prickly weeds with the pretty blue-purple flowers.

Here is a new remedy that is now coming into use, and with good results, to judge from many reports received. It is known variously as the kerosene method or the kerosene cure, and it is especially useful to eradicate thistles from pasture land or from fence corners where they may not be easily reached by tillage implements. For thistle patches in cultivated fields, summer tillage persistently and carefully practiced is still the most favored, the cheapest, and by far the easiest and most satisfactory method of eradication.

To get rid of thistles by the kerosene method, cut off the plants with a tile spade, leaving a sharply defined cup in the earth. Strive to have the cut-off root exposed at the center of the bottom of the cup. Then simply pour a cupful of kerosene into the hole. Keep a careful watch for new growth that will be likely to spring up from old, well-established roots. This is almost certain to happen and patience is necessary if eradication efforts are to be successful, for a second treatment of all new growth must be performed in about ten days after the first "dose" was administered. Do this at intervals of a week to ten days throughout the season, if new growth persists in springing up. Sounds like a large undertaking, doesn't it? But it is not such a chore as it sounds. As a proof of the effectiveness of the kerosene cure, a patch of Canada thistles numbering somewhat over 3,000 plants was reduced to four by the second treatment. Another case reports that a patch of 10,000 plants was killed except for fourteen by the first application, and the second dose got the upper hand of these survivors. Still another case reports that in a patch containing some five square rods, only one thistle survived the second application. From this we feel safe in saying that the kerosene treatment for Canada thistles, if carefully and persistently followed, will give good results.

Hints on Wintering Bees

Winter killing is responsible for heavy losses in northern states. Average losses run from 15 to 20 per cent, but 30 per cent. losses are not uncommon, and beekeepers have even reported losses running as high as 80 to 90 per cent. in large apiaries where 100 or more colonies are kept.

Successful wintering with little or no loss is possible when proper temperature is maintained during storage when liberal quantities of good stores are provided and when bees of the right age are wintered over. Winter care of bees covers three distinct periods. The first, or fall, period extends from September 20 to November 20; this is the period of preparation of bees for winter. It is important at this time to see that every colony has a young queen not more than two years old, whose maximum egg-laying period has not yet been reached. Provide plenty of good stores and allow the bees to arrange their own brood nest. Have the bees well protected and sheltered from prevailing winds. Do the feeding before the first week of November when cold nights prevail.

During the second period, or winter period, extending from November 20 to March 21, the bees may be expected to remain in the hives without flight and should not be disturbed except under extreme conditions. Those in storage should be in absolute darkness and the temperature of the bee cellar held at a constant range of 45 to 50 degrees. Excessive moisture will not be apparent if the proper temperature is maintained. Ventilation of the bee cellar is likely to do more harm than good. The third or spring period is from March 21, or the time when the bees are sent out, until the middle of May. This is the period for rebuilding the loss of colony strength caused by winter conditions.

To insure greater success place the bees in a location where they will positively be protected from direct wind; to do this provide some kind of a wind break if necessary. If colonies of maximum strength are desired at the beginning of the honey flow provide each colony with some outside covering or packing as soon as the bees are put on their summer stands. Provide every colony with more stores than you think it can use during the months of April and May. If you do not have combs of honey, use sugar syrup. Give 40 to 50 pounds; the common allowance of 10 to 20 pounds is not half enough. The strong colony will need 75 to 100 pounds of stores to build up during the spring and if the bees cannot get it in the field the beekeeper must supply it. Bees must have ample room, and the beekeeper who has swarms in May should not be proud of the fact as it is a sure sign of neglect in one way or another, possibly overcrowding.

Copper Carbonate Prevents Smut

Dusting seed wheat with copper carbonate prevents stinking smut, and the new dusting treatment is preferable to the old formaldehyde treatment, according to findings of the Minnesota Agricultural Experiment Station. Several reasons are advanced in favor of the dust treatment over the dip treatment formerly used so extensively. Dusting with copper carbonate saves time and labor; the seed may be treated at any time before planting, then held in readiness for planting; as the seed does not become wet, it is not injured by freezing, nor is there any danger of heating or sprouting if it is held for a long time prior to planting. Another advantage is that the drill need not be set to handle swollen grains, as is the case following the formaldehyde treatment. Copper carbonate dust does not injure the seed as formaldehyde sometimes does. In fact, the dust has a stimulating effect upon seed germination, thus increasing wheat yields.

Copper carbonate dust can be purchased at any drug store for around twenty cents per pound. Two ounces of dust will treat a bushel of grain. Treating is best done with a home-made barrel mixer that operates similarly to a concrete mixer, for the dust must be thoroughly mixed with the grain to gain best results.

Copper carbonate controlled the smuts of oats, and it is thought likely that the dusting treatment will prevent rye smut and covered smut of barley, as well as kernel smut of sorghum and the various millet smuts. Further experiments will be conducted to fully determine its value as a preventive of these diseases. Certain smuts against which formaldehyde was not successful, such as loose or naked smut of wheat, timothy smut and corn smut, have not been prevented by the new dust treatment.

Storing Vegetables for Winter

At least twenty kinds of garden vegetables can be kept in a fairly fresh state for winter use if proper storage methods are employed. This list of course includes the commoner vegetables, such as potatoes, onions, parsnips, rutabagas, carrots, cabbage, pumpkins and squash, but in addition there are a number of others that can almost as readily be stored. These are horseradish, salsify, leeks, celery, chicory, winter radish, dry beans and others.

Temperature in the storage cellar should be low enough to prevent decay, but at the same time sufficiently high to protect from frost. For most vegetables this is from 54 to 38 degrees, but for pumpkins and squash a temperature of around 50 degrees or more is required. Good ventilation is necessary, as dead air favors decay and accumulation of moisture on the roof and walls of the storeroom. Potatoes and root crops that are to be stored should be carefully sorted over and only those that are entirely free from bruises should be placed in storage. Do not make the mistake of having the vegetables bins too large nor too deep. A depth of four to five feet will allow sufficient ventilation to prevent overheating, but shallower bins are better where they can be used. Onions, squash and cabbages keep best in single layers piled on open racks. Since excessive moisture favors decay, the storeroom should have perfect drainage; the damp floored cellar is never satisfactory.

Cleanliness in the storeroom is an essential factor. Clean up the storage cellar before it is used, for bacteria and fungi of decay flourish in rubbish and decayed matter left over from last season. Do not permit vegetable tops to mix in with roots in storage, for to do so is to invite early decay.

Onions should be thoroughly ripened and cured and dried in the field, in drying sheds or on slat trays, before they are placed in storage. Soft onions and those with thick necks and loose skins do not keep well. Even while the best selected onions are kept in storage it pays to go over them occasionally, picking out the few that will be found to be turning soft. Thus decay is prevented from spreading.

In the storeroom fitted with movable bins and slatted racks, it is easier to take these fixtures out of doors for cleaning than to do the work in the cellar. Besides, the benefits of a "sunbath" will add greatly to the success of your cleaning. Scrape off old dirt and fragments of decayed vegetables that are sure to adhere tenaciously to planks, then wash thoroughly with scalding water, reaching all parts. Then leave out in the sun for a day or two in a place where there is freedom from dust and roosting chickens. Move back into the cellar, which has been put in order in the meantime. Look at the windows to see that they are in good "working order," then everything is ready for the arrival of the vegetables that we are all so glad to see on the dinner table in cold weather.

Fresh Rhubarb in Winter

To provide a supply of fresh rhubarb for winter use on the farm is a comparatively simple matter where good lusty roots may be dug out of the home garden. The juicy, tasty, tender stalks secured by "forcing" in the cellar will be so greatly relished by all the family during cold winter months that the work required to grow them is in reality a pleasure. Here is how to go about it:

Lift out the root clumps with a spade after the first killing frost, but before the ground has frozen hard. Two working together can lift out the roots better than one, we have found; if two spades are forced into the soil simultaneously from opposite sides of each root clump, the root is disturbed less and more soil adheres to it. Pile the roots in a heap, with the dirt adhering to them, then cover with six inches of straw or hay and leave until they have frozen. The best place for the pile of frozen rhubarb roots is in the shelter of a board fence or building, where they are left to be taken into the cellar as needed. A few at a time, the roots are taken into the cellar, spaced close together in a row, with about three inches of loose soil scattered on the floor. For convenience choose a corner of the cellar where the forcing may be done out of the way, and where the temperature never ranges more than ten degrees below or above 50 degrees F. After the roots are in place scatter more soil to fill in between them and to cover the crowns a couple of inches deep.

Soak down the forcing bed thoroughly, using lukewarm water if that can be conveniently done, as water that is slightly warm gives quicker and better results. Darken all the windows of the part of the cellar in which the forcing is done; use old burlap bags or pieces of carpet to shade the windows. Where forcing is done in an open cellar where the windows cannot be conveniently darkened and where it is not advisable to partition off a small room to be used as a forcing room, use old porch awnings, stack canvasses or large pieces of burlap to make a screen that will effectually shut out light from a small enclosure around the roots. This may be done by simply tacking carpet, burlap, etc., to the ceiling and joists, allowing it to hang down to the floor. Keep the roots watered and be careful to prevent too great changes in temperature, as extremes in either direction will be harmful.

From the time the roots are set in the cellar to the time that the delicate pink stems are ready for the table will vary from three to five weeks, a month being the average. The stems produced will be juicy and fine flavored, less "woody" or fibrous than the ones grown in the garden, and the leaf growth will be extremely small if light is excluded. To keep up the supply of fresh rhubarb, bring new frozen roots into the cellar from the outdoor storage place every two or three weeks, then set and care for as directed above. Before the soil freezes in the late fall, it will be found a good plan to fill a large box with rich soil from the garden. This, if kept handy in the cellar, will be ready when necessary for making new beds—a much simpler arrangement than striving to dig the necessary dirt after it is frozen. For the needs of the average farm family, six or eight roots planted at a time will be ample. Try forcing rhubarb this winter. Once tried, you'll never be without it.

Through the columns of this department subscribers may have free advice from the eminent specialists and experts of our Agricultural Staff on questions relating to farming, live stock and dairying.

Address Modern Farmer, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published.

Questions and Answers

POISON FOR RATS.—Will you please tell me the best way to get rid of the rats that cause so much annoyance and damage around my buildings? I have tried trapping, but they soon get wise to the traps. Dogs and cats may help some, but not enough to keep the pests within bounds. Poisons have not come up to expectations for them; besides I'm a bit afraid of them, with chickens and children around the place. The fall and winter months are the worst time, so if you can tell me how to get the upper hand I will feel greatly indebted to you. John C. McQ., Ohio.

A.—Poisoning is the quickest and best all-around means of controlling rats, but much depends upon how the poison is used and a lot more depends upon how thoroughly the job is done. Here is how to use it: Always offer rats a variety of poisoned baits. For instance, make one meat, another vegetable, and the third miscellaneous. Meats may consist of Hamburg steak, sausage, canned salmon, bacon or fat trimmings. Vegetables include fresh fruits, cantaloupe, tomatoes, green corn, baked sweet potatoes, mashed bananas, or even a spoiled can of jam or jelly. Miscellaneous baits may be made of eggs, cheese,

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 28.)

Buist Bulbs Bloom
$1.00 Collections—Post Paid
30 Tulips, Assorted $1.00
25 Narcissus, Assorted . 1.00
16 Hyacinths, Assorted Colors 1.00
20 Tulips & 10 Narcissus 1.00
Our illustrated catalog mailed free on request. It lists all seasonable varieties of bulbs and seeds for fall planting.
Robert Buist Company
Established 1828
Dept. C—4 to 6 So. Front St.
Philadelphia, Pa.

Only $2 DOWN ONE YEAR TO PAY
$44 Buys the New Butterfly Jr. No. 2¼
Light running, easy cleaning, close skimming, durable.
NEW BUTTERFLY Separators are guaranteed a lifetime against defects in material and workmanship. Made also in four larger sizes up to No. 5½, shown here; sold on
30 DAYS' FREE TRIAL
and on a plan whereby they earn their own cost and more by what they save. Postal brings Free Catalog Folder. Buy from the manufacturer and save money. (1)
ALBAUGH-DOVER CO., 2182 Marshall Bl., Chicago

ROUGH ON RATS
Get rid of Rats
WHY be annoyed with rats and mice when you can clear them out quickly and cheaply with Rough on Rats? Mix it with some different food each night and you'll get them all. At a Drug and general stores. Send for free booklet "Ending Rats and Mice".
E. S. WELLS, Chemist, Jersey City, N.J.
DIES IN THE HOUSE

1½ H.P. $43.45
Now, a more dependable, durable, powerful engine Direct from Factory at Low Price. 2¼, 3½, 5 and 7 horse-power sizes also at a Big Saving.
OTTAWA
EASIEST ENGINE TO START.
90 DAYS' TRIAL! 10-YEAR GUARANTEE; CASH or EASY TERMS.
FREE BOOK—"How to Know Better Engines." Also Special Offer. Write today!
OTTAWA MANUFACTURING CO.,
1271-Y King St., Ottawa, Kansas.
Desk 1271-Y, Magee Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Extra Fine Singing Canaries, TALKING PARROTS and other birds. Also a full line of cages and supplies. Retail and wholesale. We ship anywhere. Cold weather does not affect shipping. Send for new free catalog. SAM MEYER & CO., 24 W. Washington St., Dept. 10, Chicago, Ill.

RAISE GUINEA PIGS
For us, big profits, thousands needed. We pay our raisers as high as $1.75 pair. No experience needed. Particulars, contract & book free.
LABORATORY SUPPLY CO., 2841-H Ridge Ave., Phila., Pa.

Big Profits in Home Cooking!
Alice Bradley, famous expert, will teach you at home just how to make home cooking, cake-making, candy-making give big profits. How to cater, run profitable TEA ROOMS, cafeterias, etc. Write for free booklet, "Cooking for Profit." AMERICAN SCHOOL OF ECONOMICS, 864 E. 58th St., Chicago

A New Way to Get Twice the Heat at Half the Cost

Think of having, INSTANTLY, all the heat you want IN ANY STOVE—without building fires, without kindling, ashes, dirt or odors. Think of having—at the touch of a finger—a fire that is three times hotter than coal—or just enough to simmer a kettle—a fire that stays where you want it. Think what a warm cosy home such a fire will give you in any weather, and what wonderful cooking and baking it turns out. This fire is available to every user of this new invention.

INSTANT-GAS a scientific combination of 96 per cent superheated air and 4 per cent kerosene (common coal oil)—cheapest and safest fuel known. Produced by amazing invention which, in one minute, can be slipped into the fire box of any coal or wood stove. All the convenience of gas at half the cost. Start with turn of valve, turn high or low to suit, and stop with another turn of valve. Child can operate. Clean, steady fire. No ups and downs to make life miserable and ruin the cooking and baking. Saves cleaning bills, doctor bills, wall paper and curtains. Eliminates back-breaking work of carrying and lifting coal and wood. No damage to stove, lasts a lifetime. Money-back guarantee gives you absolute protection.

TRY IT 30 DAYS FREE

Try the Instant-Gas Oil Burner in your own stove. You don't risk a penny. See for yourself how hundreds of thousands of Instant-Gas users have saved money and cut their work in half. Write today for money-saving book "Scientific Oil Burning" and 30 day trial offer. Hurry. Special low introductory price to those who write immediately. No obligation. Send a postcard before you turn this page.

AGENTS—Tateishi, of California, made $200.00 weekly. People everywhere using this remarkable new method of heating. Write at once for details and be ready for big Fall and Winter profits.

INTERNATIONAL HEATING CO.
Dept. 341, 117 South 14th St., St. Louis, Mo.
Manufacturers of Scientific Heating Equipment.

The Embassy Phonograph

A disc machine which plays all makes of disc records.

Only $1.00 After Trial

An offer which removes all risk and doubt. Enables you to hear its wonderful tone and to inspect its beautiful design. Sent on free trial. You are the sole judge. If you like it, keep it, and send us only $1.00 as first payment, after the free trial. Easy monthly payments after that.

FREE 20 Selections — We include without charge 10 double faced records — 20 Selections

Write for FREE Book!

Send letter or postcard today asking for free book which gives you complete information about this unusual offer. This book is mailed free and prepaid. Write for it today.

F. K. Babson, 19th St. & Marshall Blvd. Desk 97-07 Chicago, Ill.

The Woman with the Hoe

By Laura A. Smith

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

THERE has always been strong affection between Mother Nature and her human daughters. The outward and visible sign of this affection may be one little dwarfed plant, trying its best to grow in a pot on a tenement window-sill. Or, it may be shown by the woman with the hoe, out in the open, cultivating her flower garden or tilling the larger fields. Women have always been equal co-workers with men on the farm. There is nothing new in this situation, some will think. Yet, there are several new and interesting features about it. First, there are now in the United States, 770,055 women engaged independently in agricultural pursuits. That is, they are not listed as "helpmeets." They are farming for themselves.

Another interesting item concerning the woman with the hoe is this; the real woman farmer, daughter of generations of tillers of the soil and wife of one today, is emancipating herself from drudgery. All throughout the West, these women have installed domestic machinery in their kitchens. For every utensil or machine the farmer uses to lighten the labor in the fields and barns, the wife places one in the kitchen and dairy to lighten the labor there. The washing machine, vacuum cleaner, carpet-sweeper, dishwashing machine, fireless cooker, now do much of the work for the farmer's wife. She is making good use of her leisure time thus gained. She has an automobile, she attends the Farmer's Institute where she exchanges ideas with other bright women. She subscribes to the Reading Circles and State circulating libraries. She travels through the United States and abroad with her husband when the harvesting is over. The rural free delivery, the trolley, telephone and big mail order systems have connected the farmhouse with all the cosmopolitan centers. The woman of the farm is taking advantage of these improved conditions to rest from her drudgery and improve herself intellectually.

The city woman of means, the worn-out business woman, the woman who stands for higher education—these are the ones to whom farm life makes the strongest appeal today. Literary women, college professors, actresses, women of each and every profession, go about their daily tasks with the chicken farm or some other farm bee buzzing in their bonnets. Take them through the ranks, from the one with the letters of several college degrees after her name, to her who scrubs other people's floors, all are hungering for the smell of new-mown hay and country life. The woman farmer of the last generation is becoming emancipated. The urban woman is harking back to Mother Nature for rest for tired nerves, health for weak body and stimulants for the mind and the soul. She wishes to lay her head as it were, on Mother Nature's kindly conforting breast. She wishes to change gilded mirrors and all the trappings with which the city surrounds her for reflections in shady pools. She wishes to fill her soul with the health-giving odors of garden, orchard and fields.

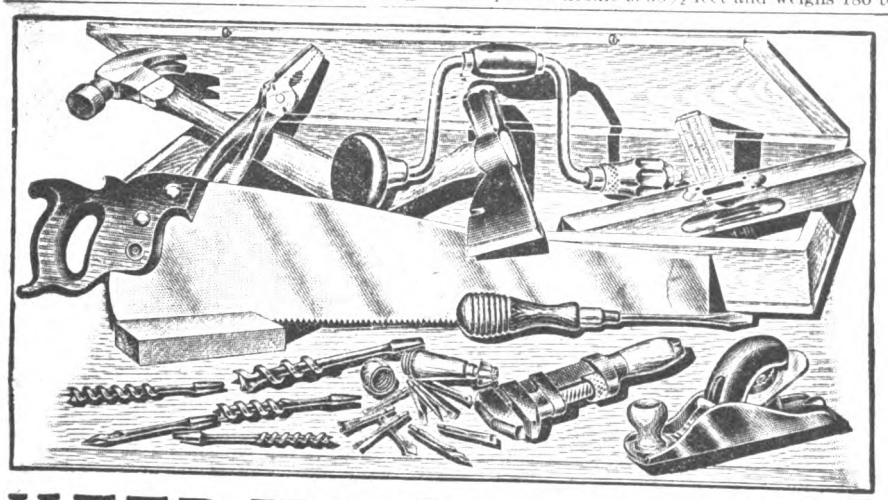
Steeped in education, her life ordered by theory, the would-be woman farmer is timid. She dreads entering a new field and traveling a new path alone. "I must farm," she says, "but I must have some theories to work upon. I cannot just take a hoe and a rake and go out and raise crops." Recognizing her desires and her needs, big colleges, Columbia for example, are adding an agricultural course and inviting women to take it. All throughout the states, women students are plentiful in all the agricultural colleges. They are fast finding out one or more women can live independent, congenial lives on farms. They can have better food at less cost, can save immensely in the matter of clothes, can learn to conserve their forces and farm intelligently and market to exclusive patrons at good prices.

Near New York City a young woman who is a practical and successful farmer has agreed to allow her farm to be used as a school to show other women how to farm. A woman who spends the winter near Columbia University devotes the rest of the year to raising clean, sanitary pigs. She sells these at her own price. She is a woman who likes to experiment. She found physicians would pay 60 cents a dozen for eggs from hens fed on celery and similar food. These seemed fine eggs to give the patients. One year she cleared $900 by selling newly hatched chicks. She raised turkeys for a few families, novelties in winter vegetables, and made a penny here and a penny there. Her latest venture was to seed down an abandoned Connecticut farm with white pine. This is free from taxation and in twenty years she will have the timber for the cutting.

This is only one up-to-date woman with the hoe. Of the entire 770,055 in the United States some devote themselves to flower raising—roses, violets, old-fashioned garden flowers or gather and sell flower seeds. A South Carolina woman is a tea grower. A Massachusetts woman, who moved to Mexico runs a coffee plantation. A woman in Arizona has a successful ostrich farm. Three sisters, and scores of other women run cattle ranches in the West. A California woman, herself a successful farmer, organized a union for the purpose of encouraging women to take up farming, and dairying, stockbreeding, poultry-raising, fruit and flower growing, landscape gardening, cultivating vineyards and managing estates. California women farmers engage especially in horticulture as New England ones, market maple sugar. The navel orange is said to have been introduced by a California woman. Shipping bulbs to retailers is a California industry, and one bright woman saw the possibilities in marketing the plume-like pampas grass.

The woman inclined to harken when Mother Nature whispers: "Come and make your home with me," has a wonderful variety of work from which to choose.

She may have pastures and herds and market milk, butter and cheese. She may have an attractive poultry yard in small space with white frames, wire netting—as dainty as she chooses. Several years ago, two sisters stopped teaching school and bought a farm. They decided it should be a white farm. They raised white chickens, ducks and geese. "No," they said, "there is no extra profit in white poultry but it looks so pretty running about on the green grass. Besides after twenty years of blackboards wouldn't you want to look at something white?" Unanswerable argument, because a woman's. Beehives and honey, vegetable and herb gardens, hothouses radiant with flowers, fruit and olive orchards, vineyards and wide-spreading meadows, cornfields and timberlands may be her work shop.



"A garden is a lonesome thing, God wot,
Rose plot, fringed pool, fern'd grot
The veriest school of Peace; and yet the fool Contends that God is not—
Not God! in gardens! When the eve is cool?
Nay, but I have a sign!
'Tis very sure God walks in mine."

About a century ago the woman farmer was everywhere, and perhaps at her best. The slave women of the South tilled the rice fields, planted tobacco, sowed the cotton seed and helped in the harvest. On the farms it was the women who raised the garden truck, vegetables and herbs. They tended to the poultry breeding. They milked the cows and made and sold the butter and cheese. More than this, they became so adept in spinning and weaving flax and wool from their fields and flocks, that when the spinning mills were established, the women workers were all ready and experienced. They stepped right in and became a big majority of the factory workers of the New England States.

At one time there was great excitement over raising silkworms and making silk in America. James First sent over the silkwork cocoons. Prizes of money and tobacco were offered for spinning and weaving silk, and history recounts that women won the far greater share of the prizes. It was they who fed the worms, reeled, spun and wove the silk. Even before Revolutionary days, three women were noted as silk growers. They were Susanna Wright, Grace Fisher and Mrs. Pinckey. Today our Government is making experiments in silk culture in some states and employing women to look after the work.

A young girl and her girlish vanity led to the manufacture of straw goods in Massachusetts in 1789. Miss Betsy Metcalf of Dedham wishing to adorn her fair head, experimented with meadow grasses. She bleached and braided these and sewed the braid into so comely a bonnet that all her neighbors admired and copied. Out of this little experiment, grew straw works at Dedham which employed over 7,000 women. No small part of woman's work in that period, was the raising and distilling of healing herbs, and making of family medicines. Each farm was a factory in itself, a world if you will, for thereon grew or was manufactured everything which human life needed for its sustenance. We know that the women of the past century were unusually wide awake and active, that they were considered by historians as far ahead of their times in all save the reading of light literature. The men fully appreciated the good work of their wives and other women relatives When in 1870 the western farmers formed the Grangers' Association they made it a rule that no grange could exist without women members. In all the Granges and all the Farmers' Institutes and all the work done by the Government toward helping farmers, the demands of women are given equal prominence with the men. They hold a conspicuous place in the United States Agricultural census as producers of national wealth.

The world's record obelisk has been unearthed at Assouan, Egypt. It is 113 feet long, 14 feet at base, and eight feet at narrow end, and weighs 1,200 tons. Cleopatra's needle is 68½ feet and weighs 180 tons.

KEEP YOUR MONEY!

BUT SEND FOR HANDY ANDY!

Just sign and mail the coupon, and HANDY ANDY, the Gentleman's Tool Kit, will be shipped direct to your home. If delighted, remit $2.90 in ten days, and $2 a month for six months. Otherwise, send him home at our expense.

The Handy Andy Kit is composed of strictly guaranteed tools. The box is inexpensive; the value is all in the tools. Think of what you will get for $14.90, and on monthly payments at that! One 22-inch panel saw, made expressly for Handy Andy, of specially selected steel, by America's most famous saw-makers; one level, 14 inches long; one brace, with 10-inch sweep; four auger bits, —¼-, ½-, ¾-, and 1-inch; one ¼-inch gimlet; one forged steel hammer; one steel hatchet; one steel block plane, 7⅛ inches long, with 1⅝-inch cut; one steel screw driver; one pair flat-nose pliers; one 2-foot boxwood rule; one 8½-inch monkey wrench; one oil stone; one hollow handle kit, composed of one ⅜-inch chisel, one ¼-inch screw driver, one ⅛-inch gimlet, one counterasink, one tack puller, five awls.

QUAKER VALLEY MFG. CO., Aurora, Illinois

Send me Handy Andy, the Gentleman's Tool Kit. I am to pay nothing but express charges on delivery. Then, if pleased, I will remit $2.90 in ten days, and $2 a month for six months. Otherwise, Andy goes back within ten days AT YOUR EXPENSE.

Write your name in full on line above.

Husband's first name, if signed by a woman. | Your occupation, or your husband's if signed by a woman.

Street or rural route number on line above.

City and state on line above. 1160

The Modern Farmer

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 27.)

peanut butter, stale bread soaked in milk, kitchen leavings, or cereal either cooked or dry. Mix the poison thoroughly with each kind of bait so that rats cannot eat even the smallest portion without eating poison also. Mixing is easy with Hamberg steak, cheese, cereal, etc., using a spoon to work in the poison. Other baits are better treated by spreading the poison on with a knife then working it in. When the three kinds of baits are prepared, divide into portions of about a teaspoonful each and place them freely about premises where rats are known to be numerous. Place baits carefully, not haphazardly; set a meat bait, then a fruit bait, then a bait of a third kind. Set them ten to fifteen feet apart. Never mix the baits, or set them in a group. Do your baiting in the late evening, but before dark. Next morning make the rounds early, gather up dead rats and pick up the baits that remain. Make a note of the kind of bait that has been found most attractive by the rats and use this for several days or until the rats "get wise" to it. Then try three new kinds of bait. Bait every night and pick up in the morning as long as there are evidences of rats around the place. Don't stop too soon; your work will have been done to no avail, for the rats will soon be as numerous as ever. Keep poison baits out of reach of dogs, cats, fowls and children. Do this by using good judgment in selecting the places where baits are placed or by protecting baits from anything larger than rats. Placing baits in the evening and picking up remaining baits in the morning also is a protection.

FILTER BOX FOR CISTERN.—Please give me a formula for filling a filter box for purifying water with which a cistern is filled. We depend on irrigation water to fill our cistern and the ordinary charcoal filter seems to me inadequate for such water.

Is second cutting of cane for hay poisonous to cows? I have been told that such is the case.

E. P. N., Arvada, Colo.

A.—A comparatively simple type of filter that is widely used with satisfaction for filtering drinking water consists of a clean wooden barrel, a removable muslin cover, clean sand changed from time to time, and charcoal as a purifier and deodorizer. First cut a hole either in the bottom or on the side close to the bottom of the barrel. Over this place a screen to keep charcoal from coming out of the opening. A cone of screen, double thickness will serve the purpose. Then place a layer of charcoal, say six inches in depth in the barrel bottom. Over this pour clean dry sand, such as would be used for concrete work; avoid the use of fine-grained, "clayey" sand and use "sharp" sand. Fill to within six inches or so of the top of the barrel. Place a muslin cloth on a barrel hoop over top of barrel to remove such foreign matter as twigs and leaves. Change the cloth frequently. A filter such as this will supply you with water that is free from sediment and the charcoal will remove objectionable odors. This filter will operate at a fair rate of speed but no efficient filter can be called rapid for a filter that allows for a free flow of water is not doing the work it is intended to perform.

The second cutting of cane for hay is not a safe feed for livestock, though it is not always poisonous. For some reason, prussic acid is found frequently in large enough quantities to poison livestock in cane that has been frosted and also in cane that is immature. For this reason it has long been the custom to avoid its use for feeding livestock, putting into practice the "safety first" idea that it is well to use in all such matters. For full particulars regarding prussic acid poisoning and the presence of this poison in the cane, we refer you to a bulletin issued by the Nebraska Experiment Station, Lincoln, Nebraska, which will be mailed to you free upon request.

Poultry Farming for Women

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 22.)

When there is a large family to supply the table scraps containing meat, potatoes and bread, leaf scraps and oil meal can be omitted, but to get the best results from table scraps, they should be put through a meat chopper and be thoroughly mixed; otherwise one hen is liable to get all the fat, another all the vegetable, which means that neither will get a balanced meal. And what is more, the hen who wins a large piece of fat is very likely to have an attack of diarrhea and become dangerously ill.

Another small economy is to dry all the egg shells left from the table cooking. Crack them up and add them to the mash, for they will take the place of grit and oyster shell. Of course such a method of feeding is only practicable for the small flock. Farmers should cull just as rigidly and get rid of all the unproductive birds, but as they usually grow much of the necessary food and have sufficient room to grow good-sized flocks, it is better to devote their time and energy to making birds produce as many eggs as possible during the winter months, in spite of the price of grain.

Feed and cleanliness are the two great factors. When I say feed, I don't mean quantities of one kind of grain. The hens must have a variety to furnish the different elements necessary to keep them in good condition and provide a sufficient surplus to form eggs, or they can't lay them. You can feed a hen lots of food, but if it lacks the ingredients which are necessary for the different parts of the egg, it is just wasted, for the hen won't produce eggs, even though she may be so fat that she develops liver trouble or apoplexy. What constitutes a well-balanced ration varies considerably in different parts of the country. In cold climate it takes a good deal of rich food to sustain bodily heat, therefore what would be a well-balanced ration in Dakota would be positively detrimental for birds in the South. For this reason, I collected this information from experiment stations in different parts of the country about their method of feeding laying hens, hoping that our readers will be sensible enough to accept the vicarious experience of the experienced poultrymen who made a study of the subject in the various climates.

The New York Ration

This ration has given the best results when used with large and small flocks at the Cornell experiment Station, and is widely used in the Eastern States.

SCRATCH FEED.—Fed morning and afternoon in straw litter: Wheat, 60 pounds; corn, 60 pounds; oats, 30 pounds; buckwheat, 30 pounds.

DRY MASH.—Fed in hopper which is kept open during the afternoon only: corn meal, 60 pounds; wheat middlings, 60 pounds; wheat bran, 30 pounds; alfalfa meal, 10 pounds; oil meal, 10 pounds; meat scrap, 50 pounds; salt, one pound.

GREEN FEED.—Beets, cabbage, sprouted oats, green clover or other sufficient food given at noon in a quantity that the hens will immediately eat up clean so that none is left to spoil. Oyster shell, grit and water are available at all times.

The Indiana Ration

SCRATCH FEED.—Scattered in litter morning and evening, about one third of the daily allowance in the morning, and two-thirds in the evening: Corn, 100 pounds; wheat, 100 pounds; oats, 50 pounds.

DRY MASH.—Fed in an open hopper accessible at all times except to the heavy breeds, in which the hoppers are kept closed until noon; Shorts, 100 pounds; bran, 100 pounds; meat scrap, 60 pounds.

GREEN FEED.—Alfalfa silage, beets and cabbage, as much as the hens will eat immediately. Milk is fed regularly when available. Grit, shell and charcoal are kept constantly available in open hoppers. Fresh water is always at hand.

The Maine Ration

This ration is used successfully in Northern New England and in other portions of the Northern States where cold winters are the rule. It is designed for winter pullets during the winter period.

SCRATCH FEED.—Cracked corn is fed in the litter in the early morning. At ten to eleven o'clock in the morning equal parts of wheat and oats are fed at the rate of two quarts to each fifty birds.

DRY MASH.—Kept before the birds at all times in open hoppers so that they may eat all they like of it. After the fifth month, or just past midwinter, linseed meal is given only every second month; Wheat bran, 200 pounds; gluten meal, 100 pounds; corn meal, 100 pounds; meat scrap, 100 pounds; low grade flour, 100 pounds; linseed meal 50 pounds.

GREEN FEED.—Sprouted oats, mangels, cabbages or a mixture of these, as much as the hens will eat up clean once a day. Grit and water always at hand.

The matter of litter for the floor is almost as important as the selection of food stuffs. Many people think that any old hay or straw will do for hens to scratch in, but it won't. Musty, mouldy, or old hay causes more sickness among hens than anything else, as it breeds several different kinds of spores and germs, which float in the air when the hens dig up the material, and are inhaled by the birds, and rapidly develop diseases of the lungs and intestines and one special germ even affects the eggs laid by the hens, causing white diarrhea in chicks hatched by them. So you see how important it is to have clean litter and nesting material. We use shavings and chopped cornstalks topped with dried leaves, as long as we have them. We gather all we can in the fall and store them in boxes. Several years ago we tried shavings only, and had many cases of crop-bound hens, but have had no trouble since we used the combination of corn-stalks or straw. The shavings are particularly valuable, because they are cheap and prevent the other material from packing down, and so insure a circulation of air through the litter, which keeps it sweet.

Subscribers are entitled to advice of our Poultry Editor free, through the columns of this department. Address Poultry Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. BE SURE to give your full name and address, otherwise your letter will receive no attention.

Correspondence

M. C. B.—You don't say whether the birds are old or young, which makes a great deal of difference in judging the symptoms of disease. They may be just in bad condition, indigestion or lice, or they may be suffering from tuberculosis. Kill one of them and examine the liver, heart and intestines. If they appear normal, just give the birds a mash made of ground feed moistened with castor oil for two mornings in succession and put a little asafetida in the drinking water for two or three weeks. If, on the other hand, you find any spots on the liver or heart, you may decide that you really have a serious disease to fight. Read answer to E. R. W. and J. R. in this issue.

M. G.—I am sorry to tell you that the sores on the joints which refuse to be healed by any of the remedies you have used, and the fact that one of the birds has already died, point so strongly to a tubercular con-

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 32.)

CHIX 7c UP 14 varieties. Best laying strains. Big catalog free. Booth Hatchery, Box X, Clinton, Mo.

BIRDS Write for our FREE illustrated catalog showing finest Singing Canaries, Human Voice Parrots, Goldfish. All strong, healthy. Cages, supplies furnished. Wholesale and retail. Write now.
CHICAGO BIRD AND CAGE CO.
506 S. Wabash Ave., Dept. 1, Chicago

For Sale at LOW PRICES Many Varities of pure-bred Poultry, Pigeons, Baby Chicks, Eggs for hatching; also Incubators from $6 to 5000 egg size, and Brooders, FREE Catalog with Colored Illustrations.
Frank Foy Box 6 Clinton, Iowa

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 20.)

comfort, letting him have the best chair, the best food, the most comfortable place at the table; in fact, seeing that he gets the best of everything. She should be never tired, sick, sleepy or hungry. Her dress should be very modest, long skirts, long sleeves, and high neck, with no frills to attract the attention of other men. She must be very industrious, really, "Work" should be her middle mane. She must do all of her own housework, including washing, ironing, sewing, scrubbing, caring for poultry, cows, pigs and children, also feeding the horses when hubby comes in from the field, tired and cross, if wifey should happen to have a day in the house, which would be seldom, because my Ideal must help me with the field work. What if the children are neglected and the washing and other housework left undone? She can make that up by extra work when the rush of field work is over, anyway, those are things that don't amount to much, nothing hard nor any worry about housework or raising children. And I would never marry a woman who expected me to carry in the wood and water. But the modern woman, the woman of today, would she ever do those things, the things which are plainly her duty, the things her grandmother did and never complained of? What is the world coming to anyhow, with the business women, the women in politics, the school ma'am, the girl with the bobbed hair, the flapper and Heaven knows what else. It gives me shivers to think of what men may have to do in days to come.

Come on men, tell us of your Ideal Wife, maybe we can bring the modern women to their senses and save them yet.

MERE MAN.

Mere Man.—Sears and Roebuck have some wonderful values in door mats.—Ed.

COLORADA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

This is my first attempt to break into your circle and I feel a little like I am intruding. However, my wife was so fond of the Sisters' Corner that I feel a little bit of ownership in it. She has gone to her rest and left me with three children age eleven, eight and six years old. The two younger ones are girls. All can cook biscuit and corn bread. The boy has cooked light bread. They can cook cakes and pies and various things. I learned to cook a large variety of things as their mother was sick some time. I find no trouble in the following of recipes. Wife and I believed in starting children to doing light things early as they are not so awkward as when older, or at least we did not expect so much of them and their mistakes are more easily forgiven.

I remember a saying, "If we could see ourselves as other see us." I have in mind the topic of interest to so many of you and right it should be—that of pleasing our companions. Being of the opposite sex, I can see you as you can't see yourselves so to speak.

In the first place I considered my wife my equal in all things, except strength. Because I took a load of farm produce to market and collected the money and because I cultivated the crops that I sold and didn't sell anything out of the garden, didn't make me feel that she had no part in the making of it. She was helping me make it while she kept the house, garden, tended the cows and chickens. We always went 50-50 in the pocketbook. First we got the things necesasry to make a living and later when we had more than a living we got nice furniture and labor-saving things we both had to use. I would spend her butter-and-egg money for myself, tools to use, or provisions and I would use the money for the regular products. She would do the same. In other words what was hers was mine and we never said we'd let the other pay for anything just because we were not to use it. While we lived in the city and there was only my pay check, I felt that she was half owner still, because she kept our home, tended the children, and made life worth living for me. I learned lots more about a woman's work during her illness and since her death, than I would have dreamed I could.

I suspect my letter is getting long, so will end by saying that what I prized the most in my wife was her virtue honesty and cleanliness. She couldn't always be togged up, but was pleasing to me at any time because I had sense enough to understand; however, I enjoyed to see her have a chance to look her best. She had a wasteful mother, but was very saving herself. Mrs Wilkinson has my address and I will answer all correspondence. I would appreciate recipes for cooking canning, etc. I am 38 years young, have brown eyes and auburn hair; five feet, ten inches tall and weigh 183 pounds, medium built, live in the best climate in the world and enjoy the best of health.

JUST-A-HOME-LOVER.

SLATY FORK, WEST VIRGINIA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT SISTERS:

As you have been talking about your Ideal Husband I want to say a few words about my Ideal Wife. First, she must love me and the children above everybody else. We are taught in the Scripture that wives should love and obey their husbands. Second, she must have a good, quiet disposition. Third, she must tend strictly to her own business and not meddle with others. Fourth, she must be able to shoot a rifle and slip through the mountains like a cat. I live in the mountain state of West Virginia.

S. R. COLEMAN.

Mr. Coleman.—I hope you aren't a moonshiner. —Ed.

BANDON, R. R. 5, BOX 97, GEORGIA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

Owing to the fact that you've turned the Corner over to the men for them to express their opinions of an Ideal Wife, I will describe my Ideal.

First, she should be a Christian and a home lover; regardless how humble home is it can be made cheerful by two home lovers.

Second, she must be a non-flapper and not too much of a powder puff and rouge user.

Third, she must be an excellent cook and housekeeper. Charitable and friendly to all, helping those who are in need but not stooping to degradation, last but not least, she must be a lover of children. She must be willing to help her husband provide a home and a living for the kiddies, or, in other words, she must be an allround woman and of a good family.

My Ideal should be above doing the following things that are done by girls of today, smoking cigarettes, drinking, flirting, gabbing at everything that wears breeches. She must have no enemies. My Ideal should be content to follow Mother Nature and remain in the style of wearing dresses.

We are all lovers of women because our mothers are women, but don't let us expect too much of them.

I've met my Ideal and am satisfied.

Love to all and a hundredfold to Mrs. Wilkinson and all officers of dear old COMFORT. My wife has been a subscriber for three years.

WILLIAM D. RAY.

COOPER, TEXAS.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT READERS:

Since Mrs. Wilkinson promised to let us menfolks have a whole issue of the Sisters' Corner to give us a chance to tell of our Ideal Wife, I've been wondering if Mrs. Wilkinson would let a man from Texas come in. I'll promise not to stay long and I'll make a long story short.

I am a new subscriber to COMFORT, having joined them this year, but my sister or some one in our family of seven boys and five girls, all living too, and three girls and four boys at home, have taken COMFORT for a number of years. When one of my sisters got married she took COMFORT with her and I've been a member of the COMFORT family ever since.

But to tell you of my Ideal Wife is what I came in for. Yes, I was married about six months when I was twenty-one, and this "Mother-in-law" stuff was the cause of a divorce six months later. I am thirty-two years young now and I haven't found my Ideal mate. Now do not misunderstand me, I do not mean that I haven't seen a girl that I thought perhaps would measure up to my ideas, but I haven't been personally acquainted with one. I do not think my ideas are too high, for I do not expect her to be perfect in every way; we all have our faults, and naturally she will have hers. Each man or woman, when mated, should adjust his or her faults to meet the faults of the other. Love is the most profound and deeply rooted thing in everybody's life. It is very difficult to make this point understood, because so few people really experience love. Love is something right outside our province. Some people think they know what love is, and they think they have experienced its sweeping passion. But they confuse a means that may be associated with love—which is but a small part of love—with love itself. Consequently they cannot understand the real nature of love and its expressions. Where there is true love there can be no lust.

But here is my mental picture of my ideal future wife. She must be broad-minded, able to sit down with me and talk over business matters, intelligent enough to carry on an interesting conversation. Clean-minded and honest. She must be a Christian and may belong to any church, for I believe all good people will get to heaven regardless of what denomination they belong to. She should be a womanly woman, industrious of loving disposition and sympathetic, brown or black eyes, and a brunette. She should weigh somewhere between 120 and 150 pounds and less than five feet, ten inches tall. Of course a natural blonde girl is mighty hard to beat, and I do not mean to say that they are barred. But you asked for ideals and that's what I'm giving you. My Ideal Wife should be willing to talk over all things relating to our future life. By so doing we may learn to appreciate and respect each other more for respect is the wonderful keynote of love. We should understand each other perfectly before marriage so that we both may work toward the same goal in life.

There is a certain lady who lives at Clay City, Ind. and who is a subscriber to COMFORT that can vouch for my statements as to my ideas and I hope she sees this in print. If it hadn't been for dear old COMFORT I wouldn't have known there was such a girl in this world.

Another thing about my Ideal Wife. She should be willing to live far enough from town to have our own garden and just oodles of chickens and some fruit. Although I never intend to be a farmer still, I live on the farm, making my way as an agricultural writer.

Well, some black or brown-eyed girl might want me to describe myself before I go. I am 32 years young what most people call a blonde, gray eyes, fair complexion, weigh 145 pounds and am five feet ten inches tall.

JACK L. BAKER.

HARLOW, OREGON.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND SISTERS:

The sisters' letters in June were certainly interesting. Now we men know what to expect. We all have faults. Even the Man of Galilee did not claim to be perfect. No one is perfect but the ideal He taught.

My Ideal is a sweet, loving woman, good natured, good cook and housekeeper. Higher ideals than her mate and an everyday Christian, not merely a "church" Christian. She must have some education, a good form, freckles and red hair. A pretty face doesn't count. She must be a real helpmate and pal, sweet at all times, even in calico. Love is the real foundation, even among the heathen. Marriage is a bond of friendship, a bond that should not be lightly broken.

OLD BACH.

ATHENS, TEXAS.

DEAR MRS WILKINSON:

I have noticed many letters from the sisters asking for letters from the opposite sex on the present subject.

I wonder if Ruby Nelson would go fifty-fifty with her dream man. We shouldn't expect the wife or husband to be something we can't be ourselves.

If the girl I married had her ideals set as high as yours how badly she must have been disappointed. I didn't quite get my Ideal Woman but what she lacked in one thing she has made up for in different ways. We disagree on lots of things but kiss and make up and disagree again.

My ideal is first of all a good mother. Men are just grown up babies and we need mothering lots of times. She should be jolly, a pal, one who has her opinion of things and will hold for them. One should be fond of athletics, as swimming, boating, hunting, fishing and things like that.

Mentally, she should be able to discuss with me on any subject that might arise. She should be willing to take as she gives.

Although we have been married several years, she is still the girl, the pal and the sweetheart of our courtship days.

Mrs. B. of West Virginia, if you were my wife I shouldn't want you to tell me your past. Why ruin the lives of your children and your husband. Perhaps he is keeping something from you that you would dislike just as he does this. Men are not angels. Just quit worrying about it and it will not seem so bad. I could overlook anything in the past if I loved her enough to marry her and if she were true after marriage. We all make mistakes and most of us profit by them.

JUST ONE OF THE HIMS.

NASHUA, MONTANA.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

After reading the sisters' letters in June issue of COMFORT on the subject of an Ideal Husband, it seems an opportune time for an old bach to have a turn at the bat and tell about his Ideal Wife.

My wife would have a loving disposition, moderate temper, and a fair education; must possess personality. She would be the same wife when away from home and in company that she is at home. A neat but not extravagant dresser. Good cook and a sense of humor. A wife like this (build and look matters little) would be a Heaven on earth. Traits, to my notion are not born instincts, but can be acquired by knowledge and training.

Yes, a dryland farmer, five feet, ten inches tall, light brown hair and born in the summer-time back in the nineties.

Please don't send any endless chain letters. Others are welcome.

With best wishes, B. STENBAKKEN.

SCOTTSVILLE, R. R. 2, KY.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

May an eighteen-year-old boy join your happy circle and express his opinion on the subject suggested by Mrs. Nelson?

"An Ideal Wife" said a man who claimed he had one, "is not only a wife but a mother, pal, partner and sweetheart.

"To go with him and grow with him he needs a pal, a chum who will thrill with him before Titian and cheer with him for Babe Ruth, who knows how to serve a ball and is just as ready to take a hurdle. A pal will not take her husband from the interests that fill his life nor make them flat for the lack of her. She will fill, not divide, she will complete his life."

Of course the husband must do his part to make the thing complete.

Everybody cannot get the wife or husband they wish but they can appreciate the good points they do have.

FRAZIER HALL.

ROCK HILL, R. R. 7, SO. CAR.

HELLO FOLKS:

Mrs. Wilkinson said the men might write as to their Ideal Wife so here I am.

My Ideal Wife must have at least a high school education, be a Presbyterian, have read the Bible, be interested in medicine, must not dance but may have bobbed hair, must not be jealous, and at least five feet, three inches tall, weigh 125 to 150 pounds, of medium complexion, brown eyes and dark, but not black, hair.

I am six feet, three inches tall, weigh 150 pounds; have gray eyes, dark hair and medium complexion. I am studying medicine. I neither drink, chew nor swear, neither do I drink coffee.

Just a parting word to tell you that I am opposed to dancing both ancient and modern; also excessive powder, rouge and lipstick.

Your new brother, HORACE B. JOHNSON.

PARIS, ARK.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT FOLKS:

I have been reading COMFORT for a good many years and although I am not a sister, I am interested in the Sisters' Corne as I am married to one of your sisters who has read it for over twenty years.

As Sister Mabel Clare has asked Mrs. W. for our admission and she has granted same, I will enter and take a seat. Your discussion regarding an Ideal Husband is getting very interesting for us.

Mrs. Ida, I want to give you a few comforting words. Don't be despondent. Maybe while you are wondering if you will ever have an Ideal Husband he is wondering if he will ever have an Ideal Wife.

Now for my idea of an Ideal Wife; but first I want to tell you that I am not wanting a wife for I have one, an Ideal one, and if she were not you wouldn't find it out.

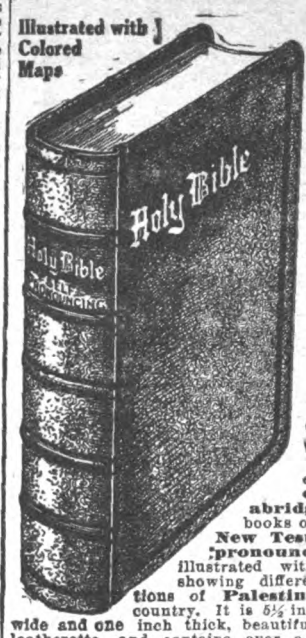
Give me a woman with a brainbox full of good, common, human sense, a good will, clean of body and soul with a tender, loving heart toward her husband and babies and she can't be but Ideal.

Wishing each and every one of you an ideal companion and hoping to hear from some of the brothers.

Sincerely, MR. SHORTY.

CENTRALIA, R. R. 1, BOX 163, WASH.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON AND COMFORT FRIENDS:



I hope, Mrs. Wilkinson, that this letter proves to you that I appreciate the fact that you have opened the door to us men, even if it is for only one issue of COMFORT. I doubt very much though if there will be room to publish all the letters that you will receive from male readers of your department. You will find, I am sure, that a great many of us are just as interested and just as eager to take part in the discussions as the opposite sex, although our letters may not be as interesting.

The sisters' letters telling of their Ideal Husband were very good; and from the various descriptions we men would do well to hold our heads up and walk the straight and narrow path. I believe it is generally agreed that men expect more of women than women do of men. If that is the case, there must be some wonderful women in this little old world.

In expecting too much of each other we are apt to fall into the same error as did the man who insisted upon governing the weather. This man wasn't satisfied with the weather so after much pleading he finally persuaded God to let him govern it for one year. Under his management the weather was most beautiful,

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 36.)

Self-Pronouncing Bible

Illustrated with 3 Colored Maps

Reward No. 8793

Given For A Club Of Three

SMALL enough to be carried conveniently in the hand or in pocket or hand bag, yet complete and unabridged containing full books of both the Old and New Testaments, is self-pronouncing and handsomely illustrated with colored maps showing different interesting portions of Palestine and surrounding country. It is 5½ inches long, 3¾ inches wide and one inch thick, beautifully bound in black leatherette and contains over a thousand pages finished with round corners and red edges. The name "Holy Bible" is stamped in gold on back and front cover. This is an unequalled opportunity for Sunday School workers, teachers, in fact all Bible students at home or in church to secure a Bible without cost and we feel that among COMFORT'S readers there must be thousands who have been waiting for us to make just such an offer as this. Remember that you are not going to receive a cheap, paper-bound book, but a splendidly made Bible, finely printed, handsomely and durably bound, and absolutely refined and perfect in every detail. We will send to any address this self-pronouncing Bible exactly as illustrated and described if you will send us only three subscriptions.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

3-Piece Toilet Set

THERE does not live a girl whose heart will not fairly jump with joy at the sight of this swell dull black finish Toilet Set.

The Brush is nine inches long, 2½ inches wide, firmly set with white bristles. The Mirror is 8½ inches long, 4½ inches wide on back, with a four-inch clear, finely beveled glass set with rich ebonized frame. The Comb is seven inches long, 1½ inches wide, with fine and coarse teeth. Both Mirror and Brush have a handsome silverine shield on the back for monogram or initials.

This fine Comb, Brush and Mirror Set comes in a specially fitted box and is yours absolutely free if you will accept the following offer.

Given To You! For only five one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each, we will send this fine Three-Piece Toilet Set free by Parcel Post prepaid. Reward No. 7635.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Genuine Gold-Filled Birthstone Rings

Any month given for ONE Subscription

Any woman who could have her choice of only one ring would probably choose a birthstone ring. Jewelers and ring manufacturers tell us that birthstone rings are the most popular rings in the world. Everyone wants one. Not only is it considered lucky to wear one but it is exceedingly stylish.

Five-year Guarantee.

Each ring is guaranteed genuine gold filled which looks exactly like solid gold and will wear for years. In fact we absolutely guarantee each ring for at least five years. The rings themselves are perfectly plain, the stones are solitaires and perfect imitations of the real gems. The setting of each ring is the ever popular "Tiffany" style. As a Birthday or all-the-year-round gift for wife, mother, sweetheart or sister nothing could be more appropriate or acceptable.

There's a stone for each month. Wear the stone corresponding to the month in which you were born: This list tells you what stone to choose:

Garnet, January; Amethyst, February; Bloodstone, March; Diamond, April; Emerald, May; Agate, June; Ruby July; Sardonyx, August; Sapphire, September; Opal, October; Topaz, November; Turquoise, December.

Given To You! For only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50c we will send you any one of these genuine gold-filled Birthstone Rings free by parcel post prepaid. Please be sure to give the number and month of the ring you wish.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Sugar, Creamer And Tray

MADE of "crushed" silver—the very latest idea. Sugar, Creamer and Tray are full standard size. The Tray is quadruple silver plated and both Sugar and Creamer are quadruple silver plated outside and gold lined inside. A very useful set and a beautiful ornament for the dining table or sideboard.

CLUB OFFER. We will send you this Crushed Silver Set free and prepaid for four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents each. Reward No. 7904.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

What A Beautiful Life-Like Doll For Some Little Girl In Your Home!

Won't She Fairly Shout With Joy When She Finds This Big, Handsome, Sleeping Dolly Is All Her Own?

OF course she will—no girl could help being delighted with this big, beautiful Dolly which is even more beautiful and lifelike than she appears in the illustration. It is a prettier and better doll even than we offered last season. And just think—a club of only six subscriptions to COMFORT brings her right to your door—yours to have and to own without one cent of expense. What a delightful surprise for some little tot in your home.

She Opens And Closes Her Eyes. She Has Real Teeth, Brown, Curly Hair And Wears A Pretty Dress With Hat And Real Stockings And Slippers.

NOW let us tell you more about this Doll. She is sixteen inches tall and jointed in such a manner that her arms, hands, legs and feet will stay in any position you place them. Her dark brown hair falls in bewitching curls, she has real teeth, her eyes are as blue as the sky and she opens and shuts them and goes to sleep like a real baby whenever you want her to. And she is always smiling and showing her pretty white teeth in a truly lifelike manner.

As shown in our illustration, she wears a very becoming hat trimmed with a large ribbon bow and a dress of the very latest style, with cute short sleeves, handsome figured lace and button trimmed waist and short skirt and she has on real stockings and slippers with silveroid buckles.

Fathers and mothers—just look at this beautiful Doll as she stands smiling and waiting for someone to pick her up, hug her and kiss her and take her out to play. Don't you think your little girl would just love to have her for her very own? Of course she would—and you should take advantage of this offer at once. Remember we have but a limited quantity of these Dolls on hand and when they are gone this offer will be withdrawn.

FOR A CLUB OF ONLY SIX!

YOU can surely find six neighbors and friends who will be glad to subscribe to COMFORT at the present bargain rate of 50 cents a year. Send us their names and addresses and the money collected ($3.00 in all) and we will send you this big, beautiful, Sleeping Doll, fully dressed and otherwise exactly as described above, packed in a strong box so that it cannot possibly get broken, free by parcel post prepaid. There will be no expense to you whatever. Your mail carrier will deliver the Doll right to your door without charge. This Doll is Reward No. 7856 and please mention this number when ordering.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

TANGOS

5¢

a Bunte-blended, chocolate covering, thick and rich, then—marshmallow, toasted peanuts, maple cream—all in one, the tasty candy treat supreme.

A Bunte Candy

BUNTE BROTHERS · CHICAGO

BEAUTIFUL NEW SLENDERIZING SILK and WOOL EMBROIDERED SERGE DRESS

Regular and Stout Sizes 32to54 Bust

$3.98

Think of it! Only $3.98 for this rich looking, smartly tailored Serge Dress! During this sale only, no extra charge for larger sizes. Picture gives only faint idea of the exquisite beauty of this ultra stylish creation. Brings slimness and grace to the heavier figure. Only limited sale—one to a customer. Be quick, before this astounding offer is withdrawn.

Send No Money

Fashioned from fine quality Longwear Serge, along lines favored as the vogue in fashion centers. Richly embroidered in contrasting color in Silk chain-stitch embroidery with distinctive medallions in wool French Knots. The V shape roll collar is all the rage. New wide flare sleeves embroidered at cuffs. Self material sash to be tied at back—front or side as desired. Splendidly made in every detail, in latest style, you will be justly proud to wear this wonderful dress. Just send your name, size and color, no money now. On arrival pay postman $3.98 and postage. After try-on if you are not more than pleased, every cent of your money will be quickly returned. COLORS: Navy Blue or Brown. SIZES: 32 to 54 bust. STATE SIZE AND COLOR.

No Extra Charge for Big Sizes Now

MoneyBack Guaranteed

C 1923, I. M. O. Co.

INTERNATIONAL MAIL ORDER CO. Dept. K149. CHICAGO

THIS BIG BEAUTIFUL SLEEPING DOLL FREE

This big doll is jointed at the Elbows, Shoulders, Knees and Hips. Has Turning Head, Closing Eyes, Beautiful Hair, Pearly Teeth. She is elaborately dressed, wears a swell little bonnet, and a complete outfit of lace trimmed underwear, also shoes and socks that you can take off and put on. We send this big doll to you, also Doll's Carriage, both free for selling only 20 packs Standard Bluing at 10 cents. Write today.

STANDARD BLUING CO., DEPT. 875, ATTLEBORO, MASS.

VIOLIN & BOW GIVEN

SEND NO MONEY

SIMPLY SEND NAME & ADDRESS NOW

WE TRUST YOU

Fairest and squarest plan for 28 yrs. makes us most reliable.

JUST GIVE AWAY 12 Big Art Pictures with 12 boxes of our famous White Cloverine which you sell at 25c a box as explained in great illustrated free catalog of 100 startling premiums. Extra free gifts and huge commissions reward you handsomely. Millions use Cloverine (a wonderful household remedy) for cuts, burns, chapped hands, sores, pimples, etc. Easy to sell. write quick. Be first in your town. The Wilson Chemical Co., Dept, V-16, Tyrone, Pa.

MONEY $ For Wise Men. Key for stamp. E. Kerste, Box 289, Ottawa, Ill.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 23.)

far as Dallas, W. L., so that you have to hook up four mules every time you want to call on a Dallas girl. Speaking of Dallas, I remember they used to have a gin barrel factory in that city in the old B. P. days. I wonder what that factory makes now, W. L.? Churns, perhaps,—or water—tight wagons in which to go after rain!

DU QUOIN, ILLINOIS.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

My dear cousins, did you ever notice that after you had finished reading all of the other cousins' letters in dear old COMFORT that you had a desire to scratch off pages and pages of—well, anything, and send it to Uncle Lisha? That is what possesses me now, that desire, only of course these letters must be interesting—which I admit mine will be! I like the kind that are cheerful and gay. Cousin Billy Mayer's is a good example, only I would not be doing justice to other girls and to myself if I did not say that I do not agree with him on some subjects. But I don't think it is necessary to discuss this now, since bobbed hair is not worn so much any more, or, as Billy expressed it, the "mania" has sort of subsided. There is almst too much expression in that term, don't you think?

Most of the cousins describe themselves, but I will not bore you with that it will suffice to say that I have been called "different"—just why I do not know. It may be because of my homeliness, though again it may be on account of my beauty. But I think it is more likely to be because I am an idealist and I will not sacrifice my ideals. For I believe if our ideals are high and good we will try and live up to them and thereby achieve a greater good.

I am interested in and enjoy those letters in which cousins describe the beautiful scenery and country in which they live. Of course, since I live] in Illinois, which is the prairie state of the Union, I cannot tell you of winding mountain streams and majestic peaks rising into the fleecy clouds or standing silhouetted against the azure sky. But, after all, it does not take those things to make beauty, for I believe a sunset can be almost as beautifully viewed across a rolling prairie, with the distant tree-tops forming an irregular skyline behind which Old Sol can hide the glory of his face. I say, almost as beautiful, because I have heard and read so much of the wonderful beauties of a sunset in the mountains or valley, or of a sunrise at sea, that it would be folly for me to say that a scene here could equal these! Some day I expect to, or at least hope to, view these wonderful and far-famed sights. When that happy day arrives I will certainly meet some of the immense family of COMFORT, although for the present I shall have to be content to send you all my very best wishes—Uncle Lisha included.

Yours sincerely, AGNES C. M. PUNDSACK.

You'll make us curious by announcing that you are different, Agnes, and then not telling us how or where or why. But I'll say you are different, and a great deal different and in a good way—if you are thus by refusing to sacrifice your ideals. for ideals, as perhaps you have found out, are the hardest sort of things to hang on to—worse than a fat eel or a greased pig. We start in on this ideal business with a firm grip, a high head and a bright eye, and we end up, a little bent, a little duller of eye and groping about trying to get another grip on the slippery and vanished things. At last we put on a sickly grin and pretend that we haven't lost anything at all—or, if we have, we don't care! That's the history, a sad one, of most ideals, of many dreams, Agnes.

When I go a-fishing, Agnes, and I want to hang on to an eel I have caught, I rub my fingers in the sand and take a new grip. That's the best way with ideals, too. I've found it takes a lot of sand to hold on to 'em, a lot of grit. Yet if we don't hang bravely on to the good we have visioned, found or achieved, we are left with nothing worthy to pass on or divide and life has been a poor battle for us in which we have played a loser's part. I'm glad, then that you are different, that you are a sand and grit idealist, Agnes. The fight is worthwhile and it's a good course worth finishing.

SANTA ANA, CALIFORNIA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA:

First of all I want to greet all of my new cousins, I hope they will let me in their family without any fuss or hard struggle, for I am a very poor fist fighter—especially when I am thinking of getting my good looks destroyed. I'll tell the cousins how I do look, for if I didn't they might throw this nationalized American-Hollander out of the first twenty-story window and destroy that Dutch face of mine. I would like to state my weight, but according to the last few years I vary between 160-190 pounds. At present I weigh 185 pounds. My weight changes according to how the world treats me. Lucky enough my height stays the same, which is five feet, seven inches, in my stockings. I am heavy built. I have blue eyes, brown hair, small nose, eyes and ears, and reddish complexion. Now I have given as much of a description of myself as most cousins do, except that I am letting you guess my age—which is between 35 and 40. I am single—always have been. But now, girls, do not expect an answer to all your letters if you write, for I am very busy at present, working through the day and cooking my meals at night.

How many of the cousins are striving to become millionaires? Well, I am, and I am one in my dreams; in reality I only lack $999,999. Now many have been striving for an education? I have, but started late in life and, learning another language when I knew but little of my mother tongue, found it very hard indeed. I would give all I have saved of that million if I could obtain an education equal to that of a school-teacher. But such is life. "It's a great world if you don't weaken." And, as the sayings go; "The world is as we make it" and "Smile and the world smiles with you." Oh, this world is hard, all right, but how much brighter it is when we meet a smile!

I am a stranger in California of only a few months. I am wondering (as I do often) what opportunities California will bring me. I would be glad to hear from any of the California cousins and COMFORT readers who could tell me where good fertile land could be bought cheap and on easy terms. Near town and close to good markets. I will thank all in advance who may write.

Uncle must thank Billy for me for being so drowsy and sleepy that my letter could be slipped by him. I'll close, wishing Uncle Lisha and all you cousins good luck.

Your cousin, GERRIT BAKKER.

Gerrit, you old Dutchman, you're right about smiles being a sovereign softener of the world's hard crust. They help a lot. Our Crowd know this. We are a Smiling Bunch and so are glad to welcome you, your smile, and your shifting pounds.

I've gotta say right here how much I admire anyone of another country who, like yourself, can make such an attainment of our language. For English must be a tricky tongue to learn, it seems to me, Gerrit. You have done well, and your victory here should encourage you in any other struggles you may have to make in your adopted country. May California treat you so that your shadow and weight may not decrease. We need such new citizens as much as they need us.

PHILADELPHIA, 1716 Mt. Vernon Street, PA.

DEAR COMFORT COUSINS:

Allow me to step in and shake hands with every cousin in the League. Just a week ago today I had the pleasure of shaking hands with Uncle Lisha, and I hope to shake hands with Mr. Gannett some day.

I was a personal friend of Uncle Charlie. I used to visit him and I admired and respected him very much. I felt sure that our new Uncle must be a fine man, too; so I visited him and I can say that I am well pleased with Uncle Lisha. I received a warm and genuine welcome, and after several hours conversation I know we have a leader in whom we can place full confidence. Like Uncle Charlie used to do, Uncle Lisha keeps well posted on the various questions of the day, so that he can supply the cousins with advice and counsel. You all saw his picture in January COMFORT, and I wish to say that in addition to being good looking he is an old bachelor. I hope that none of the girl readers will be deserting Cousin Jack Wilcox after reading this news!

Wouldn't it be nice, Cousins, if we could hold a reunion sometime? But I think we would have to have a whole state to hold it in, there are so many of us.

I work in Uncle Sam's coin factory here in Philadelphia, and I thought perhaps you would like to know how your spending money is made. Gold and silver metals and their alloys (900 hundred parts pure metal and 100 parts copper) are put into crucibles and reduced to liquid form. This is poured out into moulds and ingots made according to the size of the coins that are to be minted. Copper and nickel and their allows (copper, 95 per cent. with zinc and tin, 5 per cent.; and nickel, 25 per cent. with copper, 75 per cent.) are melted in electric furnaces, the liquid poured into moulds and the resulting ingots taken to the rolling room. There the ingots are reduced to the proper thickness of the coins that are being made. The rolled strips are then run through a cutting machine and what are called "planchets" are punched out. These planchets then go through milling machines which puts the nurling on the edges of the blanks. After these milled blanks are cleaned and annealed, they are fed into the stamping presses by an automatic arrangement and the impressions made. Then the coins are run over slowly moving reviewing tables and all the defective pieces picked out. All silver and gold coins are run through the automatic scales, and any coin that is too light or too heavy is thrown out by this ingenious piece of machinery. So you can see that only coins of the proper weight get out to the public. We make money for most of the South American countries. At the present time we are coining the new peace dollars.

Well, cousins, I am thirty-six years old and not ashamed of it. I have brown eyes, brown hair, not very good looking, weigh about 160 pounds and am five feet, six inches tall. My chief accomplishments(?) are: I don't drink, smoke, chew, lie, steal, swear or run after the girls! I'm not married.

I was in the army, but I did not get overseas. I hope Uncle Lisha will give his views on the achievements of the armament conference at Washington. Let us hope that war will never again visit the world, and that what was accomplished at the conference will help to keep war in the background.

Well, I'll close with another handshake all around and a wish for the success, prosperity and happiness of all.

Sincerely your cousin, GEORGE DREISBACH.

George, I'm sure all the cousins will be just as glad to give you a few thousand handshakes as I was to give you mine when you dropped over from Philadelphia. The cousins will all respond with a mighty chorus when I say a friend of Uncle Charlie's needs no introduction to the Big Family. I blushed so, George, when I had to write about the nice things you said about me, that the paper on my machine was all scorched along the edges. But I know the cousins will take what you have said with the necessary barrel or two of salt.

I am glad you told the cousins about that mighty interesting place in which you make your money, George. We are all interested, of course, in making money, but the difficulty for most of us is that we cannot make enough of the blame stuff. This difficulty doesn't have to bother you, George, and I suppose, if you have to, you can stay an hour overtime any night and make a few thousands extra for yourself. But I want you to take pity on the rest of us, George, my boy, and hurry up the machinery of your mint so that by making a few millions more every day there will be more to go 'round. Don't waste time manufacturing pesetas and centavos for these South American countries. Why, we can use all the cash your Philadelphia money mill can turn out without shipping any south. For there is certainly a shortage, George. I've known about it for some time. And now you prove it by what you say about these new Peace dollars you are turning out. Neither Billy nor I have had a look, much less owned one of these coins you are producing. We have lots of dollars that are piece dollars, George, and mighty small pieces at that; but we haven't been able to connect with any of your handsome new-fangled hundred-cent cartwheels. So I say don't let a wheel stop nor a belt slip until you have turned out enough of these dollars so that we can all have at least one. Bill says he wants two—but you needn't mind him. Most of us spent so many War dollars that we will be mighty glad to have you grind out a few Peace dollars to fill up the hole in the toe of our old stockings or under the lid of the sugar bowl or teapot.

And speaking of war, George, as you did and want me to, I do not think anyone should look at the results of the Washington Conference distrustfully. We must always creep before we can walk. The conference is a good big creep toward the time when we can march away from war, carrying banners of rejoicing. The great cataclysm has shown Europe how close to national bankruptcy and physical and spiritual destruction such a conflict can bring those who are in a struggle as to "who shall be greatest." While I, or you and others, may think there is not enough of turning away from old paths, not enough of sackcloth and ashes in the repentance of Germany, and in the seeking of practical ways to peace by other nations—yet we must welcome every move, however slight, that brings us out of old and dangerous ruts of national traditions. Certainly the less we have to fight with, the less fighting we can do. The more scrapping the less scraps. In New York State we have a law imposing heavy fine and imprisonment upon anyone carrying concealed weapons. We have found it best to limit by law the maintenance of a citizen's protection and community rights to an armed police force. Some day, George, we may get around to such a law of nations, and may limit our implements of force and destruction to those in the hands of an international police force that will patrol the world. National ambitions and adjustments do not seem to admit of this being done quite yet. But until we are ready and are sensible enough to do this, any little removal of fourteen-inch guns, sixty-million-dollars battleships and tricky concealed submarines from the pockets of the nations, is a decided help. Why you, George, for instance, won't have to make so much money if there are not so many war toys for Uncle Sam to swap good Peace dollars for!

TOCCOA, BOX 387, GEORGIA.

DEAR UNCLE LISHA AND COUSINS:

I am so glad that I have succeeded in getting you over my wireless! I have been trying for so long and have just been able to get you. When did you install your set? I have heard so many concerts that have been broadcasted from Boston. It is so wonderful, I think, to be able by waves of air to produce sound so many, many hundreds of miles away. I have been wanting to be a cousin for so long, but I could not get in touch with you. May I be one now? I should be so glad to be one and help carry on the business of making friendships by mail.

Now, cousins, one and all, I wonder how many of you feel very romantic tonight? Over this little city, that nestles among the foothills of the Blue Ridge Mountains, a most thrilling and enchanting Southern moon skims her way through a starlit sky. Tonight is an ideal night for a moonlight picnic. What is more fun than a congenial crowd on a moonlight picnic?

How many of you like camping? I have never been, so now you can imagine how I thrill with anticipation of a week to be spent in the heart of nature, close to a lake unexcelled in beauty in all this region. We expect to indulge in all those sports dear to nature-lovers. Sitting for hours at a time is small pay for the privilege of seeing the cork bob, playing with the ripples that murmur around it. Look! it goes under, and breathless with excitement and joy you pull to the shore a perch or bass. And we can spend a fair portion of the day enjoying a swim. A swim late in the afternoon gives to a tired and frazzled teacher a rest, and relieves her body from tension and her mind from the cares and duties that haunt her after her schoolroom door has closed behind her.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 35.)

CASH'S WOVEN NAMES 3 doz. 1.50 6 doz. 2.2 9 doz. 2.50 12 doz. 3. Make A Dainty Christmas Gift Write for Style & J. CASH, Inc. 11th St. South Norwalk, Conn.

LATEST STYLE WRIST WATCH FREE

An exquisite little Bracelet Watch in the new Platinum finish. Jeweled crown, satin finish, Roman dial, engraved design on case. Stem wind and stem set. Guaranteed to keep good time. Has a good quality black ribbon with patented adjustable clasp. A very stylish Wrist Watch for young Girls and Ladies. Illustration does not show beauty of the design and finish.

Given for a few hours work selling our Perfumed Sachet at 10c a package. Write today for 24 package order and easy plan for obtaining this handsome Wrist Watch FREE.

Jones Mfg. Co., Dept. 817, Attleboro, Mass.

3 PC Toilet Set Given

For selling only 8 boxes of Rosebud at 25c each. Easy to sell. Big premium catalogue sent with goods. Order today. We trust you. Old reliable Co, established 30 years.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO. Box 114, Woodsboro, Md.

Gold Filled Monogram Ring FREE Guaranteed for 3 years. To introduce our Sweet Smelling Sachet Powder, we will send this ring, gent's size, hand Engraved with your three initials for selling only six packages at 10c. FAIRY QUEEN PERFUME CO. Dept. 862, Attleboro, Mass.

Handsome FREE Wrist Watch

Guaranteed time keeper. GIVEN for selling only 16 cards of Dress Snap Fasteners at 10c per card. Easily sold—EARN BIG MONEY OR PREMIUMS. Order your cards TODAY. Send no money. We trust you till goods are sold.

AMERICAN SPECIALTY CO. Box 32-Z Lancaster, Pa.

VIOLINS

$20 STRADIVARIUS MODELS $6.75

SAVE 50 per cent—BUY from old established wholesale firm. Fine tone imported maple bench-made Stradivarius Models.

IMPORTED BOW & INSTRUCTION BOOK WITH EVERY VIOLIN FREE

Order now—send no money—pay postman, satisfaction guaranteed. J. Mapo Co., Wholesale Musical Dealers, 50 Fifth St., N.Y.C.

FREE

Watch Bracelet, Self Filling Fountain Pen, Lavallier or Pearls, Two Imit. Diamond Rings, and Clutch Pencil. All Six FREE for selling only 25 bottles of perfume at 15c each. We trust you. Send at once to BOSTON PREMIUM CO., Desk 79, BOSTON (15) MASS.

4 RINGS FREE

GENUINE DIAMOND YOUR BIRTHSTONE

WIDE WEDDING SIGNET—YOUR INITIAL

GENUINE DIAMOND, Signet with your initial, your Birthstone and wedding ring 14K Gold Plated Guaranteed 3 years. Write today for 12 packets Perfumed Sachet, easily sold at 10c each, send us $1.20 when sold and these four Beautiful Rings are yours. Extra Presents Free.

LANE MFG. CO., Dept. 232, MT. VERNON, N. Y.

WE GIVE YOU this beautiful Watch for selling only 40 pkgs. of beautiful Post Cards at 15 cents per package. Many people buy 4 or 5 pkgs., they are so pretty and cheap. Credit given. Satisfaction guaranteed.

STANDARD CO., 23 So. Clinton St., Dept. 41, Chicago.

ALL GIVEN 10 YEAR WATCH CHAIN AND RING

Stem Wind, Stem Set, Fancy Engraved Back, Guar. Timekeeper. Also dainty Chain & Beaut. Stone Set Ring. All Positively Given for selling only 20 Famous Colored Art & Religious Pictures at 10c ea. Order Today. Send No Money. GARR MFG. CO., 1926 Sunnyside, Dep.-101, Chicago

District Salesmen Wanted, all or spare time. Earn $1500 to $3600 yearly. We train the inexperienced.

NOVELTY CUTLERY CO. 76 Bar St., Canton, Ohio

SELL US YOUR SPARE TIME

You can earn fifteen to fifty dollars weekly writing showcards at home; no canvassing; pleasant profitable profession; easily, quickly learned by our simple graphic block system; artistic ability unnecessary. We instruct you and supply work. Wilson Methods Limited. Dept. 68, Toronto, Canada.

BIRTH STONE RINGS FREE

14K Gold filled, guaranteed to give satisfaction, with stone for any month given free for selling only 6 pieces of our fine Jewelry at 10c. each. Write for Jewelry.

Eagle Watch Co., Dept. 1, East Boston, Mass.

THIS WATCH RING AND CHAIN GIVEN

Beautiful Nickel watch. Keeps perfect time. Stem wind and set. Five year guarantee. Sell only twelve boxes of famous Mentho-Nova at twenty-five cents a box to help us advertise and this splendid watch is yours. Don't delay. Send name and address to-day—be first to earn this and other wonderful awards in our premium list. Send no money, we trust you.

U. S. Supply Co., Dept. B0-7, Greenville, Pa.

Stem Wind and Set

WATCH, RING AND CHAIN FREE

We positively give a genuine American Stem Wind and Set Watch, beautifully designed case, guaranteed time-keeper; 10-year guarantee; Sterling Set or Plain Ring all for selling 30 cards of our fast selling dress snap fasteners at 10c a card. When sold send $3 and we'll send Watch and Ring.

Home Supply Co., 428 W. 59th St., Dept. 126, Chicago

Keep Your Money

BUT SEND FOR HANDY ANDY!

SEE PAGE 28

Salesmen Wanted

Every woman wants this handy kitchen convenience

Write for FREE book. Tells how men and women are making good with Tyler's Ideal Fiber Cutter. You'll be glad you answered this ad.

M. H. Tyler Mfg. Co., Dept. C-1, Muncie, Ind.

The Famous WING

Founded 1868 Richest in Tone 55th Year

At Factory Price — Direct To You!

$295

Wing Pianos and Player Pianos sent direct on free trial till Jan. 1st in your home. Enjoy and test it to prove you save $150 to $300. 40 year guarantee. 38 styles of Wing Pianos and Players to choose from. Thousands in use throughout U.S. We will refer to owners near you. Easy terms, or—unusual savings for cash besides the savings of dealer's profits and his expense. Write at once for our offer of free trial in your home till Jan. 1, 1924, and The Book of Complete Information about Pianos sent you FREE. 140 pages (16 in full colors). Write now and get it free; with our reduced, bedrock, factory prices and free trial offer.

LARGE SAVINGS for CASH After Trial

FREE TRIAL TILL JAN. 1

One of our 38 styles

Also Player Pianos and Grands

WING & SON, Dept. 37-07 9th Avenue and 13th St. New York

Hannah Takes a Hand

By Ruth Merwin

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

"BET you a cookie, Hannah, Miss Margery marries Lee instid o' Parker," declared Caleb Hewitt, his blue-gray eyes twinkling as he watched his listener's face stiffen at his prophecy.

"Bet you two cookies she don't," Hannah Weston flung back in disgust. She took a lavender-checked apron from the basket and shook it vindictively toward him before placing it on the ironing-board.

"Wall—I donno as she's got any more sense than other females, Hannah, and you got to remember when God A'mighty made woman he made her outen a man's rib—not some o' his brains."

"How could he?" Hannah sniffed comtemptuously. "He knew a man could git along without a rib or two, but that he hadn't got no brains to spare. If Adam'd had a mite less, I don't know what would have happened him—he surely made a big enough fool o' himself as it was. Caleb, and the rest of you men have been following in his footsteps ever since."

Caleb grinned appreciatively at the thrust as he balanced his chair so that the slightest movement on his part would precipitate him on Hannah's snowy-white kitchen floor. It was such fun to tease her until her black eyes sent out fiery sparks and her plump cheeks—fresh and rosy as a girl's in spite of her forty-odd years—grew as red as poppies.

"Guess you're gittin' your Bible history mixed," he drawled, "as I remember the story, Adam was gittin' along jest fine till Eve come along and made him taste her apple."

"That's right, Caleb, lay the blame all onto Eve! If you ain't your great-great-granddad right over." Hannah drove her flatiron over the lavender apron with such vehemence that she decapitated one of its buttons.

"But I seen Miss Margery out ridin' with Lee this very mornin' and he was sittin' up that clost. They was drivin' past that new home o' hisn too."

"Call that a home? Looks more like an opery-house or a town hall. If Miss Margery'd go there to live, she'd git lost some day, and the p'lice would have to turn in and hunt her up. It sprawls all over the lot and there ain't a shade tree anywhere around that's bigger'n my thumb. If you want to see a real home now, look at Robert Parker's place. One o' them oak trees o' hisn is worth more than Lee's whole outfit."

"Lemme see—bout how old is that there house o' Parker's?" Caleb looked eager for the information.

"Never mind that!" snapped Hannah. "It's built for keeps as folks ust to build when I was young, and it'll be standin' when that new-fangled contraption o' Lee's is a pile o' junk. And convenient—why, Miss Margery's mother and Mr. Robert's mother were great friends, you know; she had this very kitchen patterned after Mis. Parker's and I'd like to have you show me a prettier anywhere."

Caleb looked critically at the spacious kitchen with its many conveniences. The afternoon sunshine, sifting through the snowy muslin curtains, made the well-polished range shine like ebony and the metal kitchen utensils glitter jewel-like.

"It sure is a pretty place, Hannah," he agreed. Then flushing to the roots of his thick sandy hair he added, "an' you seem to—to fit in mighty well!"

"Don't try any soft soap," warned Hannah, although her face vividly reflected his color. To hide this she took an unconscionable time to select the next garment from her ironing-basket. "If you'll stop sayin' things about Miss Margery, it'll be worth more to me than barrels o' soft soap."

"But s'pose they're true, Hannah, what then?" Caleb let down his chair with a thud. "Don't I have a chance to see things? The new Missus is sure bound to make a match between that there nephew o' hern and Miss Margery. You kin put that in your pipe an' smoke it. Don't she fix it so they'll have to set together in the car every time I take 'em out ridin' an' don't she keep talkin' like they was sweethearts a'ready? Even the Mister is beginnin' to say things—he's still that daffy about the new Missus that what she says goes. An' as fer Lee—don't he act like he owned Miss Margery? It's gospel truth I'm tellin' you, Hannah."

Her eyes grew alarmed although her words were still defiant. "So that's Mis. Whitney's game, is it? Well, she ain't won it yet, and she's got me to reckon with. When it comes to fightin' for Miss Margery, I can fight!" She clenched her fists as if she were facing her enemy. "Mr. Robert and Miss Margery have been sweethearts ever since they were babies, and if she thinks she's goin' to separate 'em now and marry Miss Margery to that—to that—" she struggled for a comparison—

"Cur?" suggested Caleb.

"No—puddle dog. One with long curly hair and a big bow o' pink ribbow on its neck. All that Lee fellow cares for is to look pretty and to buy everything he wants. If he thinks he's goin' to buy Miss Margery, he's made one grand mistake. She wouldn't take him if he owned all the gold mines in the world. She loves Mr. Robert and she's goin' to marry him in spite of all Mis. Whitney can do. I wish I was as sure o' gettin' to Heaven as I am o' that."

"Hello, Hannah, what is it you're so sure of?" asked a musical voice as the subject of their discussion entered the kitchen.

"Nothin' much, Miss Margery." Hannah bent low over her ironing-board with flushed face. "Caleb was lippin' me as usual and I was tryin' to give him as good as he sent."

"An' she done it, Miss Margery," chuckled Caleb. "Trust a woman for that!"

Hannah hung the garment she had ironed on the clothes-bars and smiling looked at the girl. "Why, you look like an angel just dropped down from Heaven, Miss Margery, in that pretty new dress. Don't she, Caleb?"

"Wall, never havin' seen one o' them species, I reckon I hain't no proper jedge, but you do look mighty fine, Miss Margery."

"Thank you Caleb. Have you time to see if the skirt hangs all right Hannah? I didn't know Caleb was here or I wouldn't have come just now."

"I—I come to borrer the screw-drive," explained Caleb.

"You borrowed it yesterday, Caleb, and you can't git it again till you've brought it back once," innocently remarked Hannah, her eyes glued to the girl. "Of course I always have time for you, Miss Margery."

Caleb arose reluctantly. "Miss Margery looks like a bride, don't she, Hannah?" he inquired smiling significantly as he went away.

Hannah made no reference to his remark until, with the gravity of a judge settling an important case, she had decided that the skirt hung as it should.

"Your dress is beautiful enough for a weddin' garment—only as I told you before, you look, in all that white fluffy stuff more like an angel than a human bein'. Seems a pity they ain't no marryin nor givin' in marriage in Heaven, for the brides would look so sweet. I always picture angels as havin' big, dark-blue eyes an' shinin' gold-hair jest like yours."

"You're such a flatterer, Hannah," smiled Margery, her pale cheeks flushing a delicate pink. "Aren't you afraid you'll spoil me?"

"Tellin' a body the truth never spoils anyone. Mr. Robert seen you in this dress yet?" Hannah questioned, trying hard to make the query sound casual.

"No, he hasn't. My stepmother brought it from the city yesterday. She made daddy buy it for me to wear to Mr. Lee's house-warming party next week. I didn't really need it and it cost a heap of money; it's a Paris dress. She says dresses made here haven't any style."

"What a crazy notion," sniffed Hannah. "Why, we've got dressmakers right here in this town that's as good as them Paris men that do the sewin' over there. Your dress is mighty pretty though an' I'm glad Mr. Robert'll see you in it at the party next week. He's goin', ain't he?"

"I hope so, Hannah, but—" her face shadowed. Before she finished, her stepmother appeard. Mrs. Whitney was a thin, over-dressed woman of Hannah's age. Her scanty peroxide hair was marcelled, her eyebrows visibly penciled and her sallow cheeks vividly rouged.

"Why, Margery, what are you doing in the kitchen?" she asked scornfully. "You'll be sure to soil your Paris gown in such a place! I've some news for you—that Parker fellow has sent regrets. Says he can't come to Reginald's house-warming because he's going away. Reginald says he knows it a mere pretense and is so indignant—for your sake. If he really had cared for you, he'd have come. Come on, dear! Reginald's going to take you out to the Cromwells in his new car, then he and I are going on to the city. We'll pick you up on our way back." Taking Margery's arm her stepmother hurried her away, stopping a second to call back, "you've had your orders for dinner, Hannah; see that they're carried out!"

After the two had left, Hannah ironed on like an automaton, her mind seething with indignation.

For twenty years she had been housekeeper in the Whitney home and after the death of Margery's mother she had devoted her life to the child's welfare. For her sake she had nipped in the bud her own love affairs.

"Didn't I promise Miss Margery's mother that I'd take care of her, and do you think you can make me break that promise?" she asked each persistent suitor. "Why, the man don't live who can make me leave her as long as she needs me!"

As the years passed all her love of romance centered in Margery's affairs. She carefully scrutinized all of the child's boy-lovers and finally selected Robert Parker as the most worthy. As she watched their rapidly growing attachment, she began to build gorgeous air-castles concerning the two.

Six months before had come the utterly unlooked-for marriage of Mr. Whitney. The new Mrs. Whitney heartily disapproved of the relationship existing between her stepdaughter and Hannah, and while she was too wily to do anything openly, she was constantly finding ways of interrupting their visits. Hannah's years of devotion to the girl counted as naught with her.

But dearer to her heart than the separation of the two was her determination to marry her stepdaughter to her nephew, Reginald Lee. In this way she would not only get rid of the girl but a wife like Margery would help her dissolute relative to settle down into a decent life and so free her from the anxiety she had suffered concerning him. So subtle had she been hitherto that even the Argus-eyed Hannah had been blind to her machinations.

"If I ain't been one big fool," Hannah moaned to herself as she folded the last garment and put away her ironing utensils. "And if Caleb hadn't said what he did, I wouldn't have suspected what she was tryin' to do even now. I'll always have to thank him for that. I've been blind as a bat to let that she-devil do as she has, but the game ain't finished yet. I'll beat her even now—though it'll prob'ly mean the poorhouse for me, if I go agin her."

Going to the phone she called Robert Parker's number and in a voice that shook like a wind-blown leaf told him he must come to her right away as she had something important to tell him.

"Ain't he and Miss Margery played hours and hours in my kitchen, and do you supoose I'm goin' to be afraid of him now?" she fiercely asked her trembling self as she awaited his coming. "Why he's always that smilin' and pleasant to meet that nobody needn't be scart o' him."

This reassuring image disappeared however as she admitted her visitor a few minutes later. His set face and unsmiling eyes made him seem a veritable stranger.

Dropping limply into a stiff-backed chair opposite him she remained silent a long moment wondering what to say. The kitchen clock ticked louder than she had ever heard it before. She fixed frightened eyes on a horizontal bar of sunshine that wavered on the wall—a fitting symbol of her own trembling uncertainty.

"Well, Hannah, why have you sent for me?" her visitor questioned. "You aren't in trouble, are you?"

"No—tain't me. It's you—you and Miss Margery."

"Margery in trouble?"

The consternation in his voice made Hannah surer of her ground and she hastened on, "Mr. Robert, don't you—don't you care for Miss Margery any more?"

For a moment he drew himself up haughtily. Then as he looked at Hannah's beseeching eyes, he answered as sincerely as she had hoped. "Yes, I do—care more that I ever knew a man could!"

"Why don't you come to see her as you used to?"

"She doesn't want me."

"Did she tell you she didn't?"

"Don't you think, Hannah, you're getting a little too personal?" he asked frigidly.

"Did she?"

"I'm not at liberty to say."

"You needn't, for I know jest who told you 'Twas Mis. Whitney."

"What difference does it make who told as long's it's true?" he asked impatiently.

"But it ain't!"

"What?" He sprang to his feet.

"It ain't true," Hannah repeated decisively.

"Are you sure, Hannah? Why, she said—I—I thought that Margery's fancy for me was just a childish feeling that she'd now outgrown!"

"If Mis. Whitney ain't the limit," sneered Hannah. "And you believed her. Why, Mr. Robert, I thought you had a mite o' common sense!"

"But girls don't often marry their first loves," he defended.

"Mis. Whitney's kind don't," she retorted.

"Hannah, for heaven's sake tell me the real truth! Isn't Margery in love with Lee?"

"Land sake, no!"

"But Lee has a fortune, and if a man loves a girl unselfishly he'll let her marry the man who can give her the most!"

"Quotin' Mis. Whitney again, ain't you? When folks love each other, money ain't got nothin' to do with it," she declared sentiously.

"Do you really believe, Hannah, that I could make Margery happier—with the little I have to offer—than Lee with all his money?" he asked breathlessly.

"Have you seen her lately?"

"I couldn't—under the circumstances!"

"Well, she's lookin' pretty peaked these days and I hain't heard her laugh like she does with you, for a long time. Of course I ain't sayin' for sure that she misses you—but mabby she does."

"Heaven knows I've missed——"

"A man can't feel them things like a woman," Hannah interrupted coldly superior. "Tain't in his nature." Then seeing Parker's hurt look, her eyes began to twinkle. "Miss Margery's at the Cromwells this afternoon. Her step-ma and Lee are goin' to call for her about six o'clock. Mabby you could beat his time, Mr. Robert."

"Hannah Weston, if you aren't a real sport, I never saw one," he stopped even in his haste to kiss her on each flaming cheek.

"I'm goin' to git Mis. Whitney the best dinner she's had since she come here to live," Hannah promised herself when her triumphant heart had grown calm enough for her to resume her work.

She was near the end of her elaborate preparation when Margery danced into the kitchen and flung herself into Hannah's outstretched arms.

"Oh, I'm so happy—and we owe it all to you! If you hadn't sent for Robert, I don't know what would have happened. "The color in her cheeks which outrivaled Hannah's fled but came back as she finished. "You see, Hannah, Robert thought I didn't care for him any more—that I was going to marry Reginald Lee." She lauguhed with scornful glee. "Wasn't that silly? But—but he says he believed it because he cared so much for me and wanted me to be happy—as if I could be happy with anyone else. Aren't men funny, Hannah? And he was going away tomorrow on a business trip—going without even saying good-by

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 33.)

For Oil, Gas or Electricity

16½ in. High Shade 13 in. Diameter

A jury of eleven artists — sculptors, craftsmen, painters and critics — picked this, the design of Miss Mary Bishop, as the lamp combining the most beautiful proportions, harmonious tones and practicable design of all those at the Art Alliance of America's exhibition of 1923.

The base is cast in medallium, of rich, statuary bronze finish, which not only allows the artist's delicately refined contours and gracefully proportioned masses to be faithfully preserved in their charming simplicity, but also insures their permanency. The shade, designed as a unit with the lamp, is in tones of grey-gold-brown graded into ivory brown—chosen by Miss Bishop to carry her scheme of color harmony—with deep, rich, brown stripes toward the bottom of the flare, and edges bound with strips of dull brass.

Why the Decorative Arts League Paid $2,500 for this Lamp in order to Sell Replicas of it for only $5.90

WEARIED with the drab commonplaces offered by lamp manufacturers, with their ill-proportioned, unbalanced designs and garish colors—particularly those few poor specimens adapted for burning oil—the Decorative Arts League determined to procure, for reproduction, the most beautifully designed, harmoniously colored table lamp, adaptable for either oil or gas as well as electricity, that the best artistic talent in America could produce, cost what it would.

The assistance of the Art Alliance of America was enlisted and a great national competition arranged.

Cash awards of $1,300 were offered, and eleven eminent artists and critics selected by the Art Alliance to act as jury. Over 250 artists entered the competition, from 26 different states and provinces. 307 different designs were submitted. Though all were beautiful, many of them surpassingly so, the final verdict went unanimously to the lamp of Miss Mary Bishop (illustrated above), and she received the Blue Ribbon and Grand Prize of $600.00.

$2,500 For One Lamp

Thus was secured for the League, at a total expense of something over $2,500, the one design for a table lamp unmistakably supreme for its purpose. And this, the Blue Ribbon Lamp, each one bearing the artist's signature, is now offered for a limited time by the League to those who appreciate the possession of such artistic things.

Price—the Most Amazing Point of All

The price of the Mary Bishop Lamp, like that of all articles offered by the League, is actually less than is asked in stores for even the commonplace factory designs of similar type. It is $5.90. Look about you in the stores and see how pitiably little you can get for even twice or three times that amount and then think that now through the League's plan, you can for merely $5.90 have for your home the lamp on which a jury of the most discriminating judges of art conferred the Blue Ribbon.

That is the League's purpose—to prove that the most substantial and artistic things need cost no more than drab commonplaces if the right methods of production and distribution are used.

Most of the League's offerings are never advertised to the public, but are offered privately to corresponding members. (Such membership costs nothing—it merely registers your name as wanting to be informed of the League's offerings and given the members' prices on them in case you ever wish to buy. See Coupon below). Only a few times a year some especially great triumph, like Aurora, or this Mary Bishop Prize Lamp, is publicly announced, and then only for the purpose of widening the corresponding membership to include a few more discerning people.

Sent You on Approval

All League products are sold strictly subject to the purchaser's approval. All you need to do is to sign and mail the coupon. When the lamp comes you pay the Postman $5.90 plus the postage. You then take five days to see the lamp lighted, to study its effect. If by that time you have not decided that you have never before made so good a purchase, you return the lamp to us and all your money will be refunded in full. That is the League's way of doing business. Send the coupon now for it might be months, or years, before you see another announcement of the League. So sign and mail this coupon now—without risk.

DECORATIVE ARTS LEAGUE, Gallery at 505 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Com 1

You may enter my name as a "Corresponding Member" of the Decorative Arts League, it being distinctly understood that such membership is to cost me nothing, either now or later, and is to entail no obligation of any kind. It simply registers me as one interested in hearing of really artistic new things for home decoration.

You may send me, at the member's special price, a Mary Bishop Prize Lamp, and I will pay the postman $5.90, plus the postage, when delivered. If not satisfactory I can return the lamp within five days of receipt and you are to refund my money in full.

Check whether Gas - - ☐

Oil - - ☐

Electricity ☐

Signed .....

Street or R. F. D. .....

City ..... State.....

NO EXTRA CHARGE FOR LARGE SIZES

Latest Style Silk Embroidered Serge Dress

TUXEDO COLLAR
Scalloped Tunic Panels
NAVY BLUE ONLY

ONLY 3.98 C. O. D.

ALL SIZES 36 to 54 Same Price

"Never had a dress so neat and becoming; makes me look years younger and 20 lbs lighter" write many of our customers. Order this dress on approval entirely at our risk. If not satisfied in every way we will refund every cent of your money. Selected from hundreds and hundreds of styles. Man tailored throughout, long wearing Navy Blue, Double Warp serge. Fashioned along youthful lines becoming to all ages and figures. Cut full and roomy. Contrasting two colored silk embroidery on scalloped Tunic Panels and on pointed Tuxedo revers. Silk tassels hang gracefully from revers. Neat narrow sash at waistline. Newest style scalloped cuffs on sleeves. Vestee trimmed with braid. Neat piping on revers and panels. Truly the most beautiful and most fashionable dress of the season. Don't miss this opportunity to secure such an excellent garment at such an amazing low price.

Money Back If Not Satisfied

Sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, 52, 54.

Send No Money

But rush your order! Send us your name, address and size. We will ship the dress immediately by parcel post. When the package arrives, pay the mail man as good faith deposit $3.98 and postage. Try the dress on in your own home. If not satisfied in every way, return the dress to us and we will refund every cent of your money.

Fred'k M. Dunham & Co. Dept. 1252 CHICAGO

SEND NO MONEY

CHOOSE YOUR WATCH

Your choice of the three most Popular and Fashionable wrist watches sold today at prices that save you half. Cased in the latest products of leading American Watch Case Makers. Artistically engraved and polished—positively warranted 14K WHITE GOLD Filled and guaranteed for 25 years. The movements are carefully timed, tested and adjusted. All have Six Ruby Jewels and One Sapphire Crown Jewel. They are fitted with beautifully engraved Silver Metal Dials. Each a remarkably accurate time-keeper that you will be proud to wear. Every watch comes complete with heavy Silk Ribbon and Snap in a handsome Art Leather Velvet Lined Presentation Case.

No. 4M—Fashionable Maxine Tonneau Shape.....$ 6.86
No. 6R—Small Narrow Rectangular Case and Movement $10.95
No. 9T—Small Narrow Oval Case and Movement.....$11.82

Send No Money Keep your money right at home, just send your name, address and number of watch wanted. When your watch comes by return mail, pay the postman amount shown above. You do not risk a single penny as our Binding Written Guarantee to refund all your money if you are not fully satisfied is attached to every watch. Send today.

E. RICHWINE COMPANY
19 W. Jackson Blvd., Dept. 663, Chicago, Ill.

14½¢ per oz. Peace Dale SCOTCH yarn 14½c. an oz.—in 4 oz. skeins only for 58c. each. For warm winter garments. Fashionable 4-ply SICILIAN WORSTED, 19c. an oz.—in 2 oz. skeins only at 38c. Smartest colors. 120 beautiful samples free. Peace Dale Mills, Dept. 1290, 25 Madison Avenue, New York.

Free  Free

This beautiful bracelet, moving hands, octagon shape, with extension bracelet for selling 25 packages of perfume powder at 10¢ each. We trust you. Send name and address to Brockton Premium Co., Dept. B-8 Brockton, Mass.

EASTMAN CAMERA FREE

Genuine Kodak Film Pack, loads in daylight. Takes good pictures, 2 1-4 x 3 1-4, time or snapshot. Sent Free for selling 20 packets Perfumed Sachet at 10¢ each. Send no money.

JONES MFG. CO. Dept. 811, ATTLEBORO, MASS

Factory to Rider

Saves $10 to $25 on the Ranger Bicycle you select from 44 Styles, colors and sizes. Delivered free on approval express prepaid for 30 Days' Free Trial.

12 Months to Pay if desired. Possession and use at once on our liberal year to pay plan.

Tires lamps, wheels, equipment at half usual prices. Write for marvelous new prices, wonderful 30 day trial offer and terms.

Mead Cycle Company Dept. G3, Chicago

Write us today for free catalog

Sell Shirts

Sell Madison "Better-Made" Shirts, Pajamas, and Nightshirts direct from our factory to wearer. Nationally advertised. Easy to sell. Exclusive patterns. Exceptional values. No experience or capital required. Large steady income assured. Entirely new proposition.

WRITE FOR FREE SAMPLES.

MADISON SHIRT CO., 503 B'way, N.Y. City

IMPORTED

FOUNTAIN PEN GIVEN Fine, high-class, non-leakable, self-filling imported fountain pen, genuine 14 K. Gold point for selling only six 25c boxes famous Mentho-Nova. We trust you until goods are sold. Order today.

U. S. SUPPLY CO., Dept UO-7, Greenville, Pa.

Art Corner Your Pictures—Album in an

where you can keep them safe and enjoy them always.

Engel 5 Styles "Art Corners" 3 Colors

are on sale at Photo Supply and Album counters everywhere. They are the only Quick, Easy, Artistic No Paste, No Fold way to mount Kodak Prints. A dime brings 100 and samples to try. Write

ENGEL MFG. CO. Dept. 34X, 4711 N. Clark St., Chicago

10¢ Buys 100

Earrings

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 24.)

will be necessary. Make the drops of wax, attach with wire to the ring and fastener, then cover the ring and top completely with the wax. Blue, coral, black or any color may be used.

Waxing Large Pieces

CONTINUED FROM PAGE 25.

shores. Color these with a coat of light green, dry, then outline with a darker green.

The smaller bowl shows another way of allowing one color to flow over another in a very simple but effective manner. The vase behind the bowl is a very pretty blend of apple green at the top, run over a vase of bronze blue.

The bud vase at the right is of blues and greens dotted with orange.

A set of bottles for holding toilet articles may be decorated with bands and the words Bay Rum, Cologne or Ammonia.

A silk-covered jewel box such as is shown on page 23 is doubly attractive if finished with a group of wax roses.

The small perfume bottle is completely covered with small flowers cut of court plaster and hen covered with wax as described on page 23.

A Splendid Sealing Wax Outfit Free to COMFORT Club Raisers

For those readers who wish to take up the fascinating art of wax work we have procured a handy wax craft outfit which contains everything necessary for making all kinds of novelties such as are described in the foregoing article. This outfit contains twelve 4-inch sticks of fancy craft wax, two each of the following assortment of colors: black, gold bronze, jade, green, azure, old rose and verde green. This wax is made especially for decorative work. It is quick flowing, slow to burn and hardens with a brilliant lustre. The colors included in our assortment will produce an almost endless variety of harmonies. The outfit also includes a wax melter or alcohol lamp with a wick and snuffer, a 5-inch needle, a small spatula and a wax moulder.

Special Offer for Wax—Reward No. 1882.

If you will send us only two one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents we will send you free and prepaid twelve 4-inch sticks of decorative wax, two sticks of each color mentioned above. We will also include free of all charge a beautifully illustrated book of 24 pages showing all the many ways in which wax may be used for decorative purposes.

Special Offer for Complete Outfit—Reward No. 8344.

If you will send us four one-year subscriptions to COMFORT at 50 cents a year we will send you one complete wax craft outfit consisting of all the wax included in Offer 1882, with the addition of the spirit lamp, needle, spatula and moulder, all packed in fancy compartment box. You will also receive with this complete outfit the 24-page book mentioned in Offer 1882.

Send all orders to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

COMFORT Offers You Embroidery Articles at Slight Expense

In October "Embroidery Basket," page 21, this month, are shown several interesting pieces of embroidery which many of COMFORT'S needleworkers will be anxious to make. The designs illustrated are simple but effective and described so thoroughly that anyone can quickly make them.

Designs for the embroidery can be transferred to cloth by either the Hot Iron Transfer pattern or the Perforated Stamping pattern. To stamp with the hot iron method one needs only to spread the cloth smoothly on a table or ironing board and then place the pattern printed side down on the cloth and run a hot iron over the pattern.

The perforated pattern, as the name implies, has a series of perforations which correspond with the design to be worked, but is transferred to the cloth by a brush and stencil ink. The value of the perforated pattern is in its permanence. With care it can be used dozens of times. The hot iron pattern can be used but once.

For those who prefer to purchase the cloth stamped with pattern all ready to work, COMFORT supplies all the essentials—cloth, floss or crochet thread. Whatever you want—patterns, cloth or floss—make your selections from the articles shown on page 21 and then order from this list.

SCARF—W-5
- Stamped on Pamico Cloth 75c
- Hot Iron Transfer pattern 20c
- Perforated pattern 40c
- Floss to work 15c
- Crochet thread for edge 15c

PINCUSHION—W-6
- Stamped on Pamico Cloth 20c
- Hot Iron Transfer pattern 10c
- Perforated pattern 15c
- Floss to work 15c
- Crochet thread for edge 15c

TOWEL—W-7
- Stamped on linen huck $1.25
- Stamped on cotton huck 35c
- Hot Iron Transfer pattern 10c
- Perforated pattern 25c
- Floss to work 10c

APRON—W-8
- Stamped on unbleached muslin 75c
- Hot Iron Transfer pattern 50c
- Perforated pattern 50c
- Floss to work 45c

(Transfer and perforated patterns include cutting lines)

CHILD'S EATING SET BIB—W-9
- Bib stamped on Butcher Cloth 20c
- Hot Iron Transfer pattern 10c
- Perforated pattern 20c
- Floss to work 20c

TRAY CLOTH—W-10
- Tray stamped on Butcher Cloth 20c
- Hot Iron Transfer pattern 10c
- Perforated pattern 20c
- Floss to work 20c

Poultry Farming for Women

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 28.)

dition, that I am afraid you are going to have serious trouble. Better kill the hen that is now affected, and examine the intestines. Read answer to E. R. W. and J. R. in this issue.

W. S.—From your description of the condition of comb and throat, I think the hens must have been affected by one of the bacterial diseases which cause white diarrhea. Keep a close watch on all the flock and kill any suspicious looking birds, as the chicks that you have reared this season are very liable to carry the germs. It will be better to sell off the majority of your flock during the winter. Clean up the yards or the ground where the birds usually congregate and buy what eggs you want for hatching next spring.

E. R. W.—You were quite right in thinking the hen had tuberculosis and you will find it very difficult to eradicate. Tuberculosis fowls present a constant decrease in weight and the difficulty in breathing is quite manifest. In connection with every case of tuberculosis there is to be found at work as a factor in the disease, a germ—bacillus—and this germ must be present to confirm the diagnosis. There have appeared cases enough of tuberculosis in poultry yards, apparently contracted from sick cows, to warrant our being on the watch for all sources of possible trouble. Even a case of a single bird going "light," should be quarantined as a possible source of future trouble. Your best plan will be to kill and burn the sick fowl. It is not safe to depend upon burying the bird. It may become exposed through the efforts of some dog, and so become an object of danger. The sick birds disposed of, then turn your attention to the protection of the well members of your flock. Clean out at once all litter from the houses and yards. Take off a thin layer of soil from the earth floors of the pens, and a little from the bare yards near the houses. Brush up the insides of all the buildings and remove all the dust and cobwebs from the windows. Whitewash in a thorough manner the woodwork of the buildings, not forgetting the roosts and dropping boards. Last of all, scald all drinking and feed vessels. If you have the time and inclination to doctor some of the cases in the beginning of the disease, you will find the use of good tonics and cod liver oil to give fair results in a small proportion of the sick fowls. Birds that are really tubercular are seldom cured by any treatment. Any good emulsion of cod liver oil mixed with the mash will help nourish the fowl. For a tonic there is nothing better than the arsenate of iron in pill form, 1 50th grain each, twice a day. If the breathing is at all labored, the use of the syrup of hydriodic acid, five drops three times a day in mash will do much to relieve the condition.

J. R.—I am afraid the turkey has what is called blackhead—a name which is very misleading, as the head turning black is only one of the symptoms which develop occasionally when turkeys are in an advanced stage of the disease, which is especially characterized by sores in the cecum and liver, which are caused by a protozoan which has been called Ameba meleagridis, a minute protoplasmic animal, found to vary between six and ten millionths of an inch in diameter. While they are microscopic in size, they are at least three to four times larger than the red blood corpuscles but they are, nevertheless, small enough to float in the blood capillaries of the portal system from the cecum to the liver, where they seem to be stopped from going further. This short description of the parasite contains all that is of general interest; it may be summed up as follows: The ameba is a miscroscopic animal or parasite capable of living within the tissues of the turkey, its host. It can, therefore, eat, grow and reproduce itself in large numbers, thereby causing irritations, destruction of the tissues and nearly always death of the invalid turkeys. The majority of young poults die after a day or two of droopiness. Adults may droop longer and pass into chronic stages of the disease. Refusal to eat and standing apart constitute late symptoms. Starvation in chronic cases causes thinness. When the disease in the cecum is light, it is doubtful if the affected animals have diarrhea, which is more or less present in other cases. In many of the older poults the droppings will be liquid and stained orange yellow; this is the most characteristic symptom of all. Sometimes there are blackened blood clots in the droppings, indicating slight hemorrhages. Experiments show that more than four-fifths of the young poults exposed to infected yards die before they are six weeks old. The disease has been popularly supposed to be one confined to older birds. It is notably a disease affecting young turkeys, but one from which the older turkeys do not escape. Of the one-fifth who do escape or survive its ravages, at least one to twenty per cent. may die, throughout the year, at almost any stage. Examination of the organs is the only sure means of telling the cause of death. The ameba are transmitted from diseased turkeys to others through the droppings, which contaminate the feed with which they come in contact. Evidence obtained here indicates that the ameba may also be carried by ordinary fowl, and may be transmitted to turkeys by them in the ordinary manner. So you see once again the importance of exercising strict cleanliness is impressed upon us poultry people, for if droppings are removed regularly there is little danger of infection. Plough up the old yards and ground where poultry usually congregate. Disinfect the coops and houses and don't let the turkeys roost in the same houses with the hens. An open shed is the best place for them, even in zero weather.

H. W.—Please read answer to J. R. in this issue.

A. C. H.—It is against our rules to publish breeders' addresses in this column. You must have some birds in your flock that are carrying and spreading the disease which is commonly called blackhead and which was supposed until recently to affect turkeys only, but which is now known to attack all poultry. Read answer to J. R. in this issue.

M. K.—Read answer to E. R. W. in this issue. I fear the ground on your place has been badly infested with germs from birds who are carrying tubercular germs, as both your young and old birds showed some symptoms last season.

J. B. L.—I cannot think that the birds are pure bred Buff Orpingtons, as you said that some of their legs are green. The Standard of Perfection, which is the only accepted authority, gives the following description for Buff Orpingtons: Comb, face, wattles and earlobes, bright red; beak, pinkish white; eyes, a reddish bay; shanks and toes, pinkish white; plumage, rich golden buff, bright and glossy; underbody, slightly lighter shade of buff, free from all foreign color. Weight: cock, 10 pounds; cockerel, 8½ pounds; hen, 8 pounds; pullet, 7 pounds.

R. McC.—The condition you describe of mouth and throat suggests that the birds have diptheria, which shows many of the same symptoms as roup and blackhead. The disease is strictly contagious and probably never develops as the result of exposure to cold and dampness, although these conditions favor its spread and tend to increase its malignancy. The contagion is generally introduced by newly purchased birds or by birds which have been to exhibitions and there exposed to sick fowls. Sometimes it is carried by pigeons and other small birds. Very often an outbreak is caused by contagion from an apparently well bird, which had the disease and recovered months before.

The contagion is spread through the mucus which escapes from the nostrils, or that which is forced out through the acts of sneezing or coughing, in the saliva, the secretions of the eyes, and also the excrement. When the disease appears in a flock, the floors of the houses, the drinking cups and feeding troughs are at once infected by the diseased birds, and the well ones soon contract the disease from the contaminated water and food. It is consequently but a few days before a large part of the flock shows symptoms, though some are much more severely affected than others.

Diptheria begins as a local irritation or inflammation at some point on the internal surface of the throat, mouth, nostril, or eyes. At this time the general health is not yet affected, and there is nothing but the diptheritic deposit to indicate that the bird has been attacked.

The treatment of fowls affected with diptheria requires much time and patience and as a rule does not pay. It is better to kill those affected, bury or burn their carcasses, disinfect the poultry houses and in that way eradicate the contagion as soon as possible, even if the whole flock must be sacrificed.

If it is decided to treat the sick birds, they should be removed from the flock and put in a comfortable, well-ventilated room which may be easily disinfected. Make a solution by dissolving two drams of common salt in a quart of warm water and with a soft brush or a pledget of absorbent cotton dipped in this solution gently brush or rub the false membranes until they are disintegrated or loosened from the underlying tissues. Sometimes it is necessary to scrape them off with a spoon or knife, but it must be done carefully so that bleeding will not be caused or the sensitive tissues injured. After the false membrane has been removed, moisten a pledget of absorbent cotton in a two per cent. solution of lysol or carbolic acid and apply it for a minute or two to the diseased surface. A solution which gives good results is made by dissolving 35 grains of chlorate of potash and two grains of salicylic acid in one ounce of water and adding one counce of glycerine. This may be applied to the diptheritic spots three or four times a day with a pledget of absorbent cotton.

A quarter of a billion dollars is the annual fee paid by the unsophisticated to the promotors of fake oil wells.

Gorgeous Fur Scarf Manchurian Wolf

In your choice of rich dark brown or lustrous black. Lined throughout in silk, rich and soft. A big lovely scarf—the latest and smartest style—beautifully made from glossy long silky fur with all that chic elegance you so much admire. With animal head and large bushy tail—chain fastening. A wonder fur piece for stylish women. And at a bargain price that must cause you to send for one this very minute.

Rich Silk Lined

Extra Value!

Only $2.97 Plus a Few Pennies Postage

A bargain price that will startle keen buyers! Nowhere else could you obtain such an exquisite fur at so low a price—only $2.97 plus a few pennies postage on arrival.

SEND NO MONEY

Just send your name and address—not one cent—and this gorgeous scarf will be delivered right to your door. Pay the postman—and we will quickly refund every penny, including postage, if you are not more than delighted. ORDER BY No. 619, and be sure and state your choice rich brown or lustrous black.

Gordon Bates Co., Dept. 1018 Minneapolis, Minn.

SALE OF FINE WRIST WATCHES $6.69

25 YEAR CASE

An amazing offer to make new friends! The lucky ones will order quick! Beautiful genuine gold filled bracelet watch—guaranteed 25 years. Newest Octagon shape fancy hand engraved, small size model, with reliable 6-Jewel New Cylinder Imported Movement. Polished bridge style of latest design with grosgrain silk ribbon adjustable sliding snap buckle. Comes in silk lined leather case.

Send No Money With each watch we send as a gift—absolutely free—a pretty engraved ring to match, set with sparkling Rovanian Diamond—dazzles like a genuine stone. Send quick—no money now. Pay postman on arrival only $6.69 for watch, nothing for ring. Satisfaction guaranteed or your money back.

RING FREE

WALTERS, YOUNG & CO., Dept. M110 CHICAGO

HOUSE FREE

Built Anywhere In U. S. Six Rooms

I Will Buy the Lot This means just what it says. I don't want your money. This is a true offer and I positively mean what I say. I give the house FREE, and if you don't own a lot, I arrange for the lot for you. This is your chance to free yourself from the landlord's clutches. Rush me your name and address quick for a big picture and full description and plans of the home. You risk nothing.

PAY ME NOTHING

Now or Any Time. Remember, I don't want any of your money. The house is FREE. Address:

C. E. MOORE, Pres., Home Builders Club Dept. 120 Batavia, Illinois

Book Free

Get Your Stove Direct from Factory

SAVE $5.00 to $40.00—get finest quality stove, range, heater or furnace made, direct from manufacturers. 200 styles and sizes. Easy payments, 30 days' trial. Quick safe delivery guaranteed. 22 years' successful dealing—500,000 pleased customers. Write today—get our new big "Factory to family Bargain Book" Free.

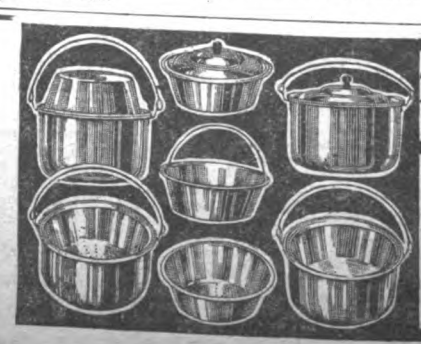
KALAMAZOO STOVE CO., Mfrs. 901 Rochester Ave. Kalamazoo, Mich.

A Kalamazoo Direct to You

REMNANTS 66c A Yd.

Beautiful assortment of serges, Tricotines and Suitings at less than wholesale prices. All newest colors. Each Remnant Sufficient To Make Complete Suit or Dress. MONEY BACK IF NOT SATISFIED. Save money. Make your own clothes. These mill remnants save you up to $1.50 a yard. WRITE FOR FREE LIST.

TEXTILE MILLS CO., DEPT. 222, KANSAS CITY, MO.



Keep Your Money

BUT SEND FOR HANDY ANDY!

SEE PAGE 28

SILK REMNANTS, LARGEST Packages yet offered. Square of Stamped Satin free with every package. MFRS. AGENCY, X, Portland, Maine 20c

$$ FOR WISE PEOPLE. Key Free. B. A. FERRINGER, Mayport, Pa $$

Send NO MONEY

This ALUMINUM SET GIVEN

GREATEST ALUMINUM COMBINATION EVER GIVEN

Quickly obtained for Giving Away 12 Big Colored Art Pictures to friends and neighbors with 12 Boxes famous White Cloverine at 25c each, as explained in new big illustrated catalog of 100 other amazing gifts. Twelve practical uses possible with this highly polished set of four pieces. Made for lifetime of hard service. Nationally advertised Cloverine sells on sight. Millions demand it for burns, bruises, pimples, chapped hands, face, etc. Easiest and fairest plan for twenty-eight years makes us most reliable. Write quick. Be first in your town. Cloverine and pictures sent same day order received.

THE WILSON CHEMICAL CO., Dept. A16, TYRONE, PA.

Through the columns of this department subscribers may have free advice from our eminent legal adviser on all questions of law except divorce matters.

Address Home Lawyer, COMFORT,. Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published.

D. B., Iowa.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will and having a surviving widow and children, such surviving widow, in addition to certain allowances from the personal estate, would receive one-third of the personal and real estate; we think such widow would also be entitled to homestead rights in case decedent owned a homestead at the time of his death; we do not think widow's share can be cut off by will; we do not think that property in which decedent had but a life estate would form any part of decedent's estate; we think such property would be disposed of in the manner set forth in the will or other instrument under which decedent received his life estate.

P. H., Kentucky.—We think if you have a proper reason for having your name legally changed you should make your application to your local courts; we think it will be necessary for you to employ a local attorney to prepare your papers for you.

Miss M. K., Iowa.—We do not think there is any basis for the superstition that the finding of a four-leaf clover will bring you luck, except that it may make you happy and all happy people are lucky.

Mrs G. I. I., Nebraska.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that children may be legally disinherited by will provided the will is legally drawn and executed and the testator possesses testamentary capacity and no undue influence is exercised upon him at the time the wi l is made; we can form no opinion as to the advisability of signing the paper you mention without an examination of the same. (2.) We think that if the man from whom you purchased the house refuses to live up to his guarantee, it will be necessary for you to bring an action against him for the amount of damages you have suffered by reason thereof.

M. F. E., West Virginia.—If the young man to whom you loaned the ring refuses to return same it will be necessary for you to bring an action or proceeding against him for its recovery.

Mrs. J. B., Iowa.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that subject to right of dower and other charges thereon the estate of an intestate, if such intestate leaves no issue would all go to the surviving spouse if the estate does not exceed $7,500 in value, after payment of debts and expenses, such surviving spouse would also receive one-half of the excess above this amount, the balance of such excess going to the intestate's parents or their descendants depending upon who is left.

M. A. T., Alabama.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that children may be disinherited by will, provided the testator possesses testamentary capacity and is not under undue influence of any other person at the time of making the will and provided the will is legally drawn and executed.

E. C., Ohio.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that the real and personal estate of any person dying without a will, which came to such intestate in any manner except by descent, devise or deed of gift, shall all go to the decedent's surviving husband or wife provided such decedent left no child nor descendant of a child.

A. E. W., Illinois.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that the holder of the note you mention can enforce the payment of the same against either of the endorses of such note in case the maker of the note has defaulted in the payment of such note.

Mrs. L. O. J., South Carolina.—Under the laws of both your state and the state of Missouri, we are of the opinion that in cases where the parents are separated the custody of the small children of the marriage is one for the court to decide taking into consideration the best interests of such children, the award of such custody being sometimes made to the father and sometimes to the mother and sometimes divided between them depending upon the evidence produced by such parents upon a hearing before the court.

Mrs. C. P., Texas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that children may be disinherited by will provided the testator possesses testamentary capacity and no undue influence is exercised upon him at the time the will is made, and provided the will is legally drawn and executed. In the absence of a will we think your husband would inherit a child's part from his father's estate.

Mrs. L. S., Minnesota —We think the statute of Limitations has long since run against any claim you or your ancestors may have had to property formerly owned by your great-great grandfather.

Mrs. J. N. W., California.—It may be possible that you and your husband's property is held so that upon the death of one the whole property becomes the sole property of survivor, but we can form no opinion as to this without an examination of your title deeds and other documents; such property as stands in your husband's name alone would upon his death, without a will and without descendants, go one-half to you and the other half to his parents, if no parent, brother or sister, nor descendant of brother or sister it would all go to you, and in addition to above you would have certain small allowances and your homestead and community rights if there is any homestead or community property.

I. M., Texas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that you cannot compel your brother to build you a house nor is he liable for your support; we think you can compel him to repay the money you loaned him, and that you are entitled to your share of the property left by your mother.

N. B., New Jersey.—If your neighbor's insanity is of such a nature as to make her a menace to the public she should be committed to an institution for the insane.

Mrs. R. R., Oregon.—We do not think that marriages between first cousins are prohibited by the laws of Alabama, California, Colorado, Delaware, Georgia, Kentucky, Maine, Massachusetts, New Mexico, New York, New Jersey, North Carolina, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Texas and Washington.

Mrs. A. S., Pennsylvania.—If your local assessor has assessed your property for an excessive amount you can appeal to your county or state boards of taxation but we think it might be wise for you to go further into the matter before taking any such steps as the amount you mention does not seem to us to be as high as the assessments in many places.

Mrs. M. S., Oklahoma.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man, leaving no will and leaving a surviving widow and more than one child, such widow, in addition to certain small allowances would receive one-third of the estate after payment of debts and expenses, regardless of whether the decedent's children were the children of such widow or by a previous marriage.

Mrs. B. L. G., Arkansas.—We think that if your mother-in-law resided in your state at the time of her death you could procure information from the county clerk of the county in which she resided as to whether any will has been filed for probate; we think she had a legal right to cut off your daughter's inheritance rights by will provided she, at the time of the execution of the will, possessed testamentary capacity, and no undue influence was exercised upon her, and provided the will was legally drawn and executed.

Mrs. W. T. T., Ohio.—We think the person who holds the note you mention should bring an action against the maker of the note to enforce the payment; we think the holder is entitled to enforce his right of payment as soon as there is any default in the payment of either principal or interest; we think that if the holder of the note neglects to enforce the payment of the same his right to enforce such payment will in time be barred by the statute of inheritance if the same is not already barred, in which event it would, of course, be too late to sue.

L. M. H., Maine.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married woman, leaving no will and having no child nor descendant, the surviving husband, in addition to certain small allowances, would receive one-half of the estate after payment of debts and expenses, the balance of the estate going to decedent's kindred, if no kindred, the husband would receive the whole estate; we think the husband would be entitled to be appointed administrator of the estate, but that any person in interest, upon the proper application to the probate court, can object to, and compel him to account if he neglects to account to the court and to the persons interested in the estate after a proper period of time for administration has expired.

Mrs. E. G. H., Maryland.—We think you should make your application for adoption of the child you mention to your local court, if both parents are dead, the consent of the child's nearest friend should be procured.

Mrs. E. P., Texas.—Under the laws of Arkansas, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man having no will and leaving no child nor descendant, his surviving widow would receive dower of one-half of the lands and one-half of the personalty in her own right if the estate be a new acquisition, as against collateral heirs; but as against creditors, to one-third; and if the estate be ancestral, to one-third of the personalty absolutely and a one-third life estate in lands.

Mrs. M. N., Texas.—Under the laws of your state, we are of the opinion that upon the death of a married man leaving no will, his widow would receive one-third of his separate personal estate and a life estate in one-third of his separate real estate, the balance of his separate property going to his children, the descendants of any deceased child taking their parent's share; the widow would also receive her one-half share of the common or community property of the husband and wife.

Mrs. S. B., Missouri.—We think the property left by your uncle who died in Kansas, would be disposed of in the manner set forth in his will unless such will is set aside; we think any person who would inherit from him in case of intestacy would have a legal right to contest same, provided there were any grounds for such a contest; we think the usual grounds for a will contest are lack of testamentary capacity, undue influence, that the will was not legally drawn or executed, or that such will did not express the testator's true interest.

Mrs. J. B. W., Minnesota.—We think that the payment of the note given by the young man you mention can, when the same becomes due, be enforced against any property this young man may own except such as is exempt by law from levy under execution.

R. A. J., Kentucky.—If the road you mention has been thrown open to the public for a long period of years, we think it cannot now be closed by any of the adjoining owners.

Hannah Takes a Hand

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 31.)

to me, and he was going to stay away for months and months. Now I'm going to marry him and go too. And I'm going to be married in the Paris dress—you know Hannah, you said it looked like a wedding dress. Aren't you glad?"

"Of course I am, dear," Hannah answered although she caught her breath at the words. Miss Margery going to be away for months and months—that had not entered into her calculation. How could she live without her? But she mustn't let Miss Margery know how she felt—there would be time enough for mourning after.

So she rejoiced unreservedly in the girl's happiness until Margery finally danced away, calling back mischievously, "If you miss me while I'm gone, Hannah, Caleb Hewitt will console you!"

Hannah blushed furiously. It was true that his company would help much in her loneliness. She liked his teasing ways and couldn't she take him down several pegs by telling him that his prophecy concerning Miss Margery's marriage had failed?

A few minutes later the I-told-you-so expression on her face faded quickly as the kitchen door flew open and Caleb stamped in—his face a veritable thundercloud.

"Why, Caleb, what is the matter?" she asked in alarm.

"That blasted Whitney woman. She's madder than a hatter about something an' she tried to take it out on me. I wouldn't have minded that so much but when she told the Mister that you were a meddlin' woman—I told her I wouldn't work for her if she'd pay me a million a minute. I'm goin' up stairs right now, pack up, an' git out o' her house tonight!"

"O Caleb—don't," she began; but her heart sank down like a bombed submarine as he shot up the stairs regardless of her appeal.

She thought Miss Margery's going was trouble enough but here was another terrible calamity! With Caleb gone there was nothing left. Mrs. Whitney wouldn't let her stay here even if she herself had been willing to stay. Where could she go? She was too old to get another place. When people couldn't stay where they were and there was no other place for them to go, what did they do? She sat still, for her very muscles seemed paralyzed and her usually active mind atrophied.

At last, hearing Margery's voice in the hall, she went to the door, forcing her tense lips into a mechanical smile.

"Hello, Hannah," Robert Parker cried as he entered the kitchen with Margery. "We're in an awful hurry so I can't stop to tell you again what a brick you are. I'm after Hewitt now—thought he was here".

"He just went up stairs, Mr. Robert."

Parker called up the stairs and a moment later Caleb Hewitt came into the kitchen.

"Miss Margery and I are going to be married tomorrow—" Parker began——

"You be, ' Caleb interrupted in surprise. "Wall, if that don't beat me! Hannah 'lowed as how you two would git married. Trust a woman for knowin' how things are coming out." His blue eyes began to twinkle as he took a step toward her, then stopped short at Parker's next words.

"Mr. Whitney says you are leaving his service and as we're going away to be gone for months I wondered if I couldn't get you to stay at my place and take care of things while we're gone—and after we come back too. I'm willing to pay you the same wages as you've been getting here."

"Thank you, Mr. Parker, I sure like the job—if—if—" he shifted from one foot to the other, his face getting redder and redder as he tried to finish.

"If what, Caleb? I'm willing to do anything I can do to induce you to take the job."

"'Tain't you, Mr. Parker," Caleb waved aside his offer in embarrassment. "It's—it's Hannah. If I kin git her to go too—as my wife—I'll be mighty glad to take it."

"Good!" Parker clapped Caleb on the shoulder encouragingly. "The very best possible thing for you both—and for us. What do you say, Hannah?"

"Please say yes, Hannah, please do," Margery begged "Of course you were to live with us after we came back, so you'll just be going to your own home a little sooner."

Hannah turned her astonished eyes first to one then to the other. Was it all a joke? Then as Caleb with earnest pleading eyes came toward her, she threw her gingham apron over her head and began to sob softly.

Margery reached her first and encircled her with protecting arms. "Don't cry, Hannah dear,—please don't. You needn't marry Caleb if you don't want to!"

Hannah removed her apron in quick alarm. "'Tain't that," she explained smiling tearfully. "I ain't cryin' 'cause I don't want to marry Caleb. I'm jest cryin' 'cause I'm too happy—to stop!"

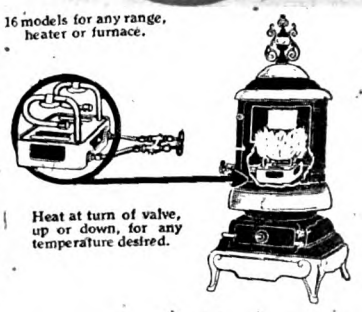
During 50 years John Wesley preached 40,000 sermons and rode 250,000 miles.

IVORY FINISH Toilet Set FREE

Sell only 20 packages of Perfumed Sachet Powder at 10c each and get this handsome Ivory finish Comb Brush and Mirror absolutely Free. You will be proud of this set. Send no money.
JONES MFG. Co.,
Dept. 814, ATTLEBORO, MASS.

FREE GENUINE EASTMAN CAMERA & RING
Takes wonderful pictures. Easy to operate.

Both Camera and Ring given for selling 20 pkgs. beautiful Post Cards at 15 cents per package. All sent Postpaid. EXTRA PREZE for promptness. ORDER TODAY.
D. R. LEE, 29 So. Clinton St., CHICAGO.



© 1923 O O-G B CO

Don't Buy Coal or Wood
—Burn New Kind of Fuel
Just Turn a Valve to Cook or Heat

Amazing Invention Fits Any Stove or Furnace

16 models for any range, heater or furnace.

Heat at turn of valve, up or down, for any temperature desired.

No changes to your present hot air, steam or hot water plant.

No more dread of the heavy, dirty coal and wood to lift and carry after a hard day's work—no more clouds of ashes and dust to breathe and filter to every corner of the house—no more cold, unevenly heated rooms in Winter—no more suffering from lack of quick fires in uncertain Fall weather—and no more worry about coal strikes and outrageously high prices! An amazing invention ends all this FOREVER. And, GOOD NEWS, it can be installed without change in your range, heater, or furnace—and at a cost any family can afford.

3 Times Heat of Coal

This amazing invention, Oliver Oil-Gas Burner, burns a fuel called "oil-gas" because it is a combination of 95% air and only 5% oil, the cheapest fuel there is. A wonderful, even, hot flame is produced, actually giving three times the heat of coal. No wicks, no odor, no smoke. Wonderful heat, at a minute's notice, any degree, when and as you want it, at the turn of a valve. It is absolutely safe—will last a lifetime.

SPECIAL LOW PRICE
Introductory Offer

And right now you can get the wonderful Oliver at a Special Low Introductory Price that Mr. Oliver is making to the readers of this magazine.

The coupon below entitles you to this offer, if you act immediately—without obligation it will bring you an interesting book, "New Kind of Heat," and full details of this Special Low Price Introductory offer. Fill out and mail the coupon at once. No obligation.

AGENTS AND DISTRIBUTORS

Oliver representatives make big money—$500 and more a month. Thousands of spare time workers, agents and salesmen are needed—$75.00 a week easy.

Exclusive territory—real co-operation. Write at once for Free Sample Case Offer, interesting literature and full details. No obligation. Write B. M. Oliver, President, at address below.

OLIVER OIL-GAS BURNERS

OLIVER OIL-GAS BURNER CO.
2074-J Oliver Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

CANADIAN DISTRIBUTOR
2074-J Oliver Bldg. Toronto, Ontario

OLIVER OIL-GAS BURNER CO.
2074-J Oliver Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

Send me your Free Book, "New Kind of Heat," and Special Low Price Introductory Offer. I am interested in a burner for a

☐ Coal Range ☐ Heating Stove
☐ (Steam) (Hot Water) ☐ (Hot Air) Furnace

Name.....

Address.....

City.....State.....

One of the most marvelous discoveries of science is Inecto Rapid. It brings back to naturally gray, streaked or faded hair all its original color, beauty and texture. It has given to the world the new art of hair tinting and brought into being the expression

Gray Hair Banished in fifteen minutes

Inecto Rapid is used by discriminating and refined women everywhere. In New York it is used constantly in such ultra-fashionable shops as the Biltmore, Pennsylvania, Waldorf-Astoria and many others. Thousands of women apply it in the privacy of their own homes.

If your hair is not all you wish it to be as to color and texture you should get full information.

Merely fill out the coupon below and we will send full particulars and our Beauty Analysis Chart which will enable you to determine which of the 18 Inecto Rapid shades is most becoming to you.

INECTO, Inc.
33-35 West 46th Street New York

INECTO, Inc., 33-35 West 46th St., New York, N. Y.
Please send me gratis full details of Inecto Rapid and the "Beauty Analysis Chart."
Form D D-6

Name .....
Address .....
City..... State.....

INECTO RAPID

$1.75 EARNED IN 30 MINUTES selling Mary Rose Frocks.
Commissions daily. Easy and dignified.
MARY ROSE FROCKS
District managers wanted.
Rodasl Company, 1202 4th St., Cin'ti, O.

EARN MONEY AT HOME DURING YOUR SPARE TIME
painting lamp shades, pillow tops for us. No canvassing. Easy and interesting work. Experience unnecessary.
NILEART COMPANY, 2285 Ft. Wayne, Indiana

$1200 to $2600 Year
MEN, WOMEN, 18 up
U. S. Government Jobs
Common education sufficient. Send coupon Immediately.
STEADY WORK
SEND COUPON BELOW
Franklin Institute
Dept. C217, Rochester, N.Y.

This coupon, filled out as directed, entitles the sender to (1) free specimen examination questions;* (2) a free copy of our book, "Government Positions and How to Get Them"; (3) free list of positions obtainable.

COUPON

...Railway Postal Clerk ($1800 to $2300)	...City Mail Carrier ($1400 to $1800)
...Bookkeeper ($1400 to $1800)	...Rural Mail Carrier ($1800 to $2600)
...Postoffice Clerk ($1400 to $1800)	...Customs Positions ($1100 to $2000)

Name .....
Address C217
Use it before you lose it. Write plainly.

13 WEEKS FOR 15 CENTS
The Pathfinder
SHOWS THE WAY THROUGH THE JUNGLE OF EVENTS
You've heard your neighbor praise the Pathfinder, the wonderful weekly news and story magazine with over half a million subscribers. Unbiased digest of national and world affairs. Chock full of just the kind of reading you want. Fun, fashions, question box, books, health—entertainment and instruction for all. Exciting serial and short stories. Send 15c (coin or stamps) today for this big $1 paper 13 weeks. Money back if not satisfied. Sample copies free.
PATHFINDER, 511 Langdon Sta., Washington, D. C.

31-PC. ROSE DINNER SET GIVEN

SEND NO MONEY SEND NAME AND ADRESS WE TRUST YOU
EXQUISITE DINNER SET
Just Give Away 12 Big Colored Art Pictures Free
Easy to Earn
TO YOUR FRIENDS, WITH 12 BOXES OF OUR FAMOUS
White CLOVERINE
Easy to Sell
which you sell at 25c a box and give one picture free as explained in new big illustrated catalog of 100 marvelous gifts; musical instruments, aluminum ware, new octagon dish set, wrist watches, and many other startling new gifts for home and personal use. Millions use Cloverine (a wonderful household necessity) daily the year 'round for chapped hands, faces, lips, pimples, colds, etc. Easiest and squarest plan for twenty-eight years makes us most reliable. Write quick. Be first in your town. Orders shipped same day received.
THE WILSON CHEMICAL COMPANY Dept. L-D.16 TYRONE, PA.

Brownie's Triumph

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 7.)

"My precious one," Adrian continued, "I have been searching for you all night long. I came hither to see you last evening, and they told me you had disappeared in the most mysterious manner. Not knowing which way to turn to find you, I started for Dunforth again in despair, but something seemed to be holding me back, and I have roamed over the park and the forest, the highways and byways, all night. As daylight approached, I resolved to return to the Hall and inquire if any clew had been gained during the night and then I saw you coming through this grove. Dearest, how cold you are," he added, tenderly, "and how you tremble. Did I frighten you? Come back into the shadow of yonder chapel, and tell me how it is that I find you thus alone and unprotected from the cold night air?"

He wrapped his cloak about her, for the mist was settling down into a fine rain, while the air grew more piercing and chill, and he almost bore her back to the door of the old chapel, where they were screened from observation and protected somewhat from the wind.

He chafed the little icy, quivering hands, and kissed the warmth and color back to her pale cheeks. But it was long before she was herself again, for now that she realized that she was safe, her strength all forsook her, and she lay almost lifeless in his arms. But at last she was able to whisper something of the story of her fearful experience, and a mighty wrath arose in his heart against the authors of it all.

"I mistrusted they might have had some hand in it last night, but they shall pay dearly for this shameless insult to you, my dearest," he muttered, between his set teeth.

Then he became suddenly silent and thoughtful, but still holding her hand in his loving embrace, until she grew warm and strong again, while a sense of security and happiness began to steal over her, until she felt that she could return to the Hall, if need be, and face them without a tremor, with him by her side.

But he had been revolving other matters in his mind. He had been greatly startled and surprised to learn that Lady Randal had another son, and had been criminally concealing it all these years, and he classed her with the others as a false and heartless woman.

He knew that Lady Ruxley was very fond of her companion, but he knew her temperament, and was unwilling that Brownie should remain longer with her in that capacity, while, after the events which had so recently transpired, he did not deem it wise to seek her as a protector for the young girl, as he had planned to do, for any length of time. He could not feel safe about her while the Coolidges were near.

Finally, he raised the beautiful face which was resting against his bosom, and, with a look of infinite tenderness, asked:

"Darling, it is settled, is it not, that you belong to me now?"

"Yes, Adrian, wholly."

"And you will trust me fully, from this time forth?"

"I trust you fully," and the little hands fluttered confidingly in his.

"Then, little one—my Brownie, will you come to me now, and let me make you my own wife today—or at least as soon as that is possible? I feel that I cannot allow you to be exposed to such suffering and insult for another hour."

He felt her heart leap against his own at his words, but she did not reply.

"Darling," he questioned, "am I putting your love and faith in me to too severe a test?"

"Today! so soon—oh, Adrian!" she whispered, and he could see wave on wave of rich color surging up over her lovely face.

"Will you love me better by waiting a week—a month— or a year?" he asked, gravely.

"No, oh, no!" she said, quickly.

"Can you bear for a moment to think of going back to the old life?"

She nestled closer to her lover, and he answered for her:

"No, dear, you cannot; and you have nowhere else on earth to go but to the one who loves you best. Brownie," he continued, with tender authority, "you are mine—you have freely given yourself to me, and now I am not willing that you should go back to face those wolves until I have an indisputable right to go with you to demand proper respect for you, and the restitution of your property, without the possibility of a repetition of the insult and suffering to which you have heretofore been subjected. I know all the objections you would raise," he went on, "I have thought them all over carefully. Lady Ruxley's anxiety upon your account; the misconstruction which will be put upon your mysterious absence; the notoriety of a clandestine marriage, etc. But I think it will do them all good to suffer a little upon your account, without it is Lady Ruxley. And as to the other reasons, I do not care a straw for them. In fact, our marriage will not be so very secret, since I announced the fact of our engagement to the whole company assembled in the drawing-room last evening, and told Sir Charles I should marry you just as soon as possible."

"Adrian! did you do that?" demanded Brownie, looking up astonished.

"Certainly I did. You do not suppose I could sit tamely by and listen to all their remarks and surmises without making an effort to silence them, do you?"

"But it was very brave and noble in you—few would have braved public opinion like that," and she lifted her red lips to give him a voluntary kiss of gratitude.

"What had I to brave, my darling? I shall be proud to call you by that dearest name in the world—wife; and since they all know now that I mean to make you such, they cannot say that you have run away with me. We will go to London today. I will get a special license, and you shall be my wife tomorrow."

"But—but—" she began, with a troubled face.

"No, dear," he interrupted, smiling, as he read her thought, "you shall not go alone with me. My old nurse and her daughter shall go with us to make everything proper. Nurse Clum will do anything in the world for me, and keep any secret I intrust to her. Milly, her daughter, has long been trying to get a situation as lady's maid, and we will make one for her at once, thus doing a charitable deed, as well as make ourselves happy. In a week's time, less if you desire, we will return to Vallingham Hall, claim your property, and right that other wrong; while with me by your side, you will be freed from the possibility of insult from any one. Will you go with me, dear?"

"But you have relatives, I fear——"

"I am my own master, my darling, and no one can say me nay upon this most vital point," he replied, gravely, yet with decision.

"I will go with you, Adrian," she said, simply.

"Bless you, my own!" he exclaimed, joyfully, then added, in tones of regret: "It is not a fitting way to wed you, I know—not as I had fondly hoped it would be, when I planned to lead you before my friends, and wed you openly, as befits your station and mine; but," he added, lightly, "when once we are settled we will make a great feast, and all shall do honor to my wife. But we must not delay longer if we would escape observation. But, first, I have something for you—I brought it last evening." He then took the ring from his pocket and put it upon her finger, saying as he did so: "There, that seals our vows so far."

He then took his cloak from his own shoulders, and, wrapping it closely around her, led her by an unfrequented path to the spot where he had left his carriage.

He drove directly to Nurse Clum's where, giving his betrothed into Milly's hands to be fed and cared for, he secured a private interview with the former, told her his plans, and what he thought necessary of the circumstances which seemed to make them advisable.

The faithful old nurse shook her head when he told her that he was braving his grandfather's displeasure; but she saw he was determined upon the course he had marked out, and she could not say him nay.

Milly was delighted at the prospect of being lady's maid to a bride, and was charmed with the sweet lady who was to be Master Adrian's wife.

They took as early a train as possible from West Malling, in order to escape observation, and before noon they were a l comfortably settled in London. Brownie and her two companions having an elegant suite of rooms at the Langham Hotel, in Portland Place, the most fashionable quarter of the city, while Adrian returned to his own private apartments in St. James street.

Before sundown he had procured the special license, and believed himself the happiest man alive, the only cloud being the disapproval of his grandfather, and this he trusted that time would overcome.

Meantime, Brownie, in company with Milly, visited a fashionable ladies' furnishing house, and procured the most suitable outfit it was possible to procure at so short a notice, and gave orders for several other articles of apparel which she would need in the future.

The next morning a quiet little wedding party alighted at St. George's Church, Hanover Square, at eleven o'clock, and, leading his beautiful betrothed proudly up the grand aisle, Adrian Dredmond stopped before the gray-haired rector, and the twain were made one.

It was a very sweet but solemn face which looked up into Adrian's when he paused a moment in the vestibule and whispered, tenderly:

"God bless my own wife!"

But her eyes, as he pressed that first kiss upon her lips, were full of happiness and trust, and he knew that he had it in his power to make her life very bright. It was well for him, however, that he had not betrayed to her the fact of his grandfather's disapproval, nor what he was likely to forfeit by his alliance with her, else all the pride of a royal race would have risen within her, and that fair April day would not have seen Brownie Douglas, Adrian Dredmond's bride!

TO BE CONTINUED.

Get The Book FREE! If you would like to read the whole of this wonderful story at once and learn its thrilling conclusion, rather than wait for the monthly installments as they appear in COMFORT, we will be glad to make you a present of the complete story in book form. Send us only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50 cents, and we will send you a copy of the book free and postpaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

The Pretty Girls' Club

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 14.)

NEBRASKA GIRL.—Yes, you are a little over weight for your height. Taking this into consideration, and your statement that you are very constipated always, I should judge that you are eating improperly, choosing foods which make fat and constipate. You can overcome constipation merely by eating the proper foods, and omitting the improper ones. You should cut out all potato and white bread, at once, and eat very few sweets, none at all between meals. Do not eat griddle cakes, biscuits, pies, or fried foods, all of which, in your condition, certainly will make you constipated. Eat a large dish of prunes every morning, soaked for twenty-four hours, then cooked slowly until soft, no sugar. Eat an orange at night, eat apples, raw or baked. Bran muffins will be good for you, spinach, plenty of water to drink. Omit coffee and tea. Chew all your food, each mouthful, until it is liquid before swallowing. Your oily hair may be due to the bodily irregularities caused by your constipation. Get your whole body in good shape and your hair will probably follow suit. In the meantime, you may wash it once a week if its oily condition makes this necessary.

SIBYL.—With a height of five feet, four inches, you should weigh one hundred and thirty-five pounds when you are fully developed; you do not give your age, but whatever it is you are much below weight, evidently. Go to work to build up. This will make your hair grow, it is not getting sufficient nouishment from the body now. As to "reducing bust," my dear, I do not see any indication that you need to reduce your bust; it certainly cannot be very large when your weight is only 102. You should have a 38-inch bust, 38-inch hips, 28-inch waist. The shiny nose should be bathed regularly, not only when you take an entire body bath every day, as of course you do, but during the day. Use a soft cloth and bathe it carefully. Rub a tiny bit of cold cream into the facial skin, including the nose, wipe off any surplus thoroughly with a soft bit of cotton, then apply a very little powder. This is if you are a fully grown young woman. If you are still in your teens, it will be better for your skin and your beauty if you omit powder and cream, merely bathing thoroughly, and keeping the bowels open twice daily. As to the pimples, they, too, come from improper feeding. As soon as you regulate your diet properly, eat plenty of nourishing food, and not too many sweets, the pimples will go away.

BOBBY.—For your height, you should weigh 135 pounds, which means that you are 47 pounds over weight. You are right in deciding to cut out all sweets and fat-building materials, but your menu contains many of them. You could never reduce on that menu. Sausage, cereals, white bread, ham, butter, wheat bread, are all fattening. So is corn bread. The foods which are forbidden if you wish to reduce as much as need to are: pork in any form, butter, wheat in any form, rice, oats, corn, cheese, cream, milk, olive oil, macaroni, sugar, potato, green corn, figs, bananas, grapes, grape juice, chestnuts, walnuts, raisins. If you will write to the Bureau of Argiculture, Washington, D. C., and ask them to send you one of their pamphlets containing dietary charts, they will do so. While the forbidden list seems long, the list of what you may eat is quite generous. You can eat lean meat of any kind, except pork, you can eat practically all green vegetables, you can eat fish and fresh fruit, chicken, duck, geese, eggs oysters, etc. You could have for instance Hamburg steak with onions, sliced tomatoes on lettuce, but without any oil dressing, and sliced oranges, or you could have roast turkey, cauliflower, celery and apple salad. Or boiled beef with spinach, string beans, baked apple. Only you must remember that you cannot put butter with your vegetables, nor sugar with any dish. You can make a salad dressing by adding one teaspoonful of tomato catsup to two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, a quarter of a teaspoonful of mustard and a pinch of salt and paprika. Or you can use a boiled salad dressing, without any sugar in it, made with eggs, vinegar, mustard, salt, pepper, paprika, according to recipes you will find in any cookbook. A good meal would be boiled tongue, mashed turnips, apple salad with celery and boiled dressing. Left-over tongue you can chop fine and mix with string beans or other vegetables to give them a flavor which you have been accustomed to getting from butter. You can eat cold chicken with sliced tomatoes, eggplant, grapefruit salad. There are a hundred and one things you can eat, but you must not fry anything or cook with butter or any other fat in them, and you must not use sugar, milk or cream. You eat too hearty a breakfast in any case. If you are really in earnest about reducing, you would better eat nothing for breakfast but a grapefruit or orange or a dish of prunes. Then eat a meal at noon, but you must not eat a large quantity of anything. At night have a simple supper. There is only one way to reduce when one has gone so much over weight, and that is to eat nothing which supplies fat to the body. In this way, the body will use up some of its own fat. You can reduce, after the first two or three weeks, about two pounds a week, if you are faithful. I have a friend who lost ten pounds the first two weeks, and after that two pounds a week. But there is nothing more fattening than the breakfast you have outlined! The amount of food eaten at a meal has something to do with the size of the hips and waist, so eat less. Then see that the bowels are active. Your bust should measure 38 inches, your hips 38, your waist 28. It will be hard work, but it is worth it!

Address all letters containing questions to KATHERINE BOOTH, care COMFORT, AUGUSTA, MAINE.

GRAY HAIR BANISHED
USE this wonderful new liquid preparation that is highly praised by fourteen Fifth Avenue Beauty Salons.
HENALFA RAPIDE
Guaranteed to tint gray or faded hair any shade. Only one application needed. Takes less than five minutes to apply. No previous washing necessary. Will not stain the scalp nor rub off. Leaves hair soft and glossy. Not affected by washing. Every shade, Jet Black to Golden Brown. Sent anywhere for $2.10 postpaid. Money refunded if not satisfactory.
B. Clement, Dept. C-1, 67W. 49th St., New York, N.Y.
Consultation and booklet free.

GOODBYE! Chapped Hands!
For 75 cents we send concentrated ingredients to make full pint of wonderful, healing Lemon Cream Lotion. Enough to make full quart for $1.25. Easy to mix in your home. Would cost many times as much at store. Thousands of men, women and children customers keep hands and faces soft and smooth in winter. Especially fine for Corn Huskers and School Children. Enclose money for amount you want and write today to The House of Rands, 1524 34th St., Des Moines, Ia. Money back if not satisfied. We want agents. Write.

Clear Your Skin
Your skin can be quickly cleared of Pimples, Blackheads, Acne Eruptions on the face or Body, Barbers Itch, Eczema, Enlarged Pores, Oily or Shiny Skin.
FREE Write today for my FREE Booklet, 'A CLEAR-TONE SKIN," telling how I cured myself after being afflicted for 15 years.
$1000 Cash says I can clear your skin of the above blemishes.
E. S. GIVENS, 306 Chemical Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

How Would You Like To Grow Hair in a Month?
Getting bald, hair falling and fading? If you want to grow new healthy hair right away I will send you absolutely Free a sample of the famous Alexander Glandahair. No cost, no obligation, just send name to ALEXANDER LABORATORIES, 5100 Gateway Station, Kansas City, Mo.

7 JEWEL WATCH AND BRACELET $6.65
SEND NO MONEY
Sensational Watch Offer
This beautiful high grade ladies' small size, 20 year guaranteed, seven jewel octagon watch and bracelet ($15 value) now only $6.65. Can be worn either with link or ribbon bracelet. Stem wind and set—beautiful case, attractive gold dial, splendid movement, accurate timekeeper. Sent in velvet and silk lined gift case. Splendid value.
EXCELLENT GIFT SEND NO MONEY Write Us Now!
Just send name and address. Pay postman on delivery $6.65 — our low advertising price. Satisfaction guaranteed. WRITE TODAY.
Gold Seal Watch Company
Roosevelt & Peoria, Dept. 107, Chicago

30 DAYS FREE TRIAL
$10 Worth of Records FREE

Simply wonderful! The limit of value giving! Just think! A GENUINE DAVIS PHONOGRAPH on 30 Days' Free Trial, and on terms as low as
$2 A MONTH
in case you decide to buy. Magnificent instruments in quartered oak or mahogany piano finished cases, equipped with the finest worm gear motors, rich toned machines — at less than half the standard prices—and $10 worth of records FREE.
Send No Money
Just a postal with your name and address. Only a limited number of machines shipped on this extra-liberal offer. Better act quickly. This is a life-time opportunity.
DAVIS, 314 W. 43rd St., Dept., G-62, CHICAGO

EARN MONEY AT HOME
YOU can make $15 to $60 weekly in your spare time writing show cards. No canvassing or soliciting. We instruct you by our new simple Directograph system, pay you cash each week and guarantee you steady work. Write for full particulars and free booklet.
WEST-ANGUS SHOW CARD SERVICE LIMITED
Authorized Capital $1,250,000.00
139 Colborne Building Toronto, Can.

Be Independent
You can have a dignified, big-paying electric appliance business, soon employ salesmen, make substantial profits from beginning. Electrical industry offers rich future. Two Hundred Million Dollars worth of electric home appliances sold last year. We are old established manufacturers, rated at $1,000,000.00. Product approved by Good Housekeeping. High grade men and women only will be considered. "Own An Independent Business", sent FREE. Write The P. A. Geier Company, Plant No. 2, 546 East 105th Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

Amazing Offer

Genuine Wm. A. Rogers

only 22¢ a piece

Just a few sets for readers of this magazine at this unbelievable price. Genuine Wm. A. Rogers set usually selling at $12 to $15. Our lucky purchase of stock from retired silverware dealer makes this amazing offer possible. Order today as the offer may never be repeated again.

$5.72 Complete—Send No Money

Twenty-six pieces in all—6 knives, 6 forks, 6 tablespoons, 6 teaspoons, 1 butter knife, 1 sugar shell. All SOLID-not plated-genuine ROGERS WARE. Beautifully and uniformly engraved patterns. Each piece stamped Wm. A. Rogers. Get a set for home use or present or future gift purposes. Just send your name and address—no money. Pay postman $5.72 plus few cents for postage when set arrives. Money refunded if not delighted. Address Dept. 417

Fulton Mercantile Co., 359 Third Ave., New York

GUARANTEE

GET THIS WONDERFUL RING. If You Can Tell It From a Genuine Diamond Send It Back

These amazing, beautiful CORODITE diamonds positively match genuine diamonds in every way—same blazing flash and dazzling play of living rainbow fire. They, alone, stand the diamond tests, including terrific acid test of direct comparison. Lifetime experts need all their experience to see any difference. Prove this yourself.

Wear a Corodite Diamond 7 Days Free

Make this test. You risk nothing. Wear a genuine Corodite and a diamond side by side on the same finger for 7 days. If you or your friends can tell the difference, send it back; you won't be out a single penny. That's fair enough. If you keep the ring, the price printed here is all you pay. No installments. Remember, Corodites alone have the same cutting as genuine stones.

No. 1—Ladies' Solitaire 14K Gold S. Ring . . . $2.84
No. 4—Ladies' Hand-Carved Basket Setting, plat. finish $3.96
No. 5—Ladies' Solitaire Bridal Blossom, Engraved . . $3.54
No. 7—Gents' Heavy Belcher 14K Gold S. Ring . . . $3.68
No. 8—Gents' Massive Hand-Carved Octagon Gypsy . $4.28

Carat size gems. Beautiful mountings of most modern design. Choice of gold or latest white platinum finish. Unqualified 20-year guarantee. Handsome art-leather case free with each ring.

SEND NO MONEY Keep your money right at home. Just send name, address and number of ring wanted and size as shown by slip of paper, fitting end to end around finger joint. Your ring will come by return mail. When ring arrives deposit amount shown above with postman. If you decide not to keep ring after 7 days' wear, send it back and your money will be immediately returned. Send today.

E. RICHWINE CO.
19 W. Jackson Blvd., Dept. 692, Chicago, Ill.
Sole Importers Genuine Corodite Diamonds

WHY ENVY OTHERS?

You can now own this superb watch

Through enormous purchases we can offer superb watches at absurdly low prices. High grade timekeepers and prettiest watches imaginable. You can't get better looking ones for more money. First in a Ladies' Watch of beautiful 14k White Gold filled (very popular) 25 years guarantee; elegantly carved tonneau case; imported 6 jewel movement; clean-cut hand made dial with distinct figures; sapphire crown. Attractive grosgrain ribbon with clasp. Guaranteed fully for one year. Price only $6.75

You can secure this watch with latest style rectangular case and rectangular movement for only $11.75

Send No Money. We Prepay Postage

Pay postman. Money back if not O. K. These are selling so fast that we cannot guarantee to hold offer open indefinitely. These are good time-keepers.

ORDER NOW

Precious Wares Co.
ART JEWELRY
389 FIFTH AVE., DEPT. 4110
NEW YORK NY

HOMEWOOL YARN

Makes Beautiful Garments at ½ THE COST

This stylish crocheted vest can be made for only $1.37 in your favorite colors. Other garments and novelties accordingly cheap. Send for samples of yarn showing colors and directions for attractive knitted things.

HOME WOOLEN MILLS
786 Main St.
Eaton Rapids, Mich.

$1.37

Undecided ?

Are you undecided about your future? Are you groping blindly wondering what you ought to do? Would you like to know for just what kind of work you are best fitted? Would you like to Earn MORE MONEY Immediately? We can help you decide. We can show you how to get ahead quickly—how you can make most of your abilities and how you can be a big money maker. You will be under no obligation if you will drop a line for full information.

DIRECTOR PERSONAL ANALYSIS
Dept. PA717 Drexel Ave. and 58th St., Chicago

All Wool hand and machine knitting yarns for sale from manufacturer at 95c and up per lb. Golf and plain socks. Free samples. H. A. BARTLETT, Harmony, Maine.

Conducted by Cousin Marion

In writing this department always sign your true name and give your address; if not, your letter will receive no attention. Name will not be published.

"There are plenty of little joys in life
But I don't know one that is better Than the feeling of satisfaction that comes
When I've answered my very last letter."

THAT'S the way I feel when I've answered all your letters, much as I like to do it. But to tell the truth, and I do enough to keep in practice, this exalted feeling was forced upon me several days earlier than usual. The Power behind the Press came to me and said, "Marion" (sometimes he's very familiar, calls me Marion 'n' everything, just as though I wasn't grown up and wore short dresses) "hurry up and get your Talks with Girls ready." Think of that! But I hurried, they were almost done anyway, because he is the sort of person you just naturally like to please, and I don't mind if he does call me "Marion." It's more friendly and I like friendly peop e. Don't you?

RUBIE, ARKANSAS.—Maybe he couldn't live without you, but he manages to keep alive long enough to go around with other girls. Use your head.

LYDIA, ALABAMA.—"Almost" asking you to marry him "ain't is," so don't begin your trousseau on the strength of it. (2). Wait until you meet each other before you talk about marriage. You are taking enough of a chance then but there's no need of taking unnecessa y chances.

MARY, NEW MEXICO.—What do you mean by "dancing all the odd dances together." Mary, I didn't think that of you. If the dances in New Mexico are any odder than some I've seen here I'm going to New Mexico and take lessons and come back and open a dancing school.

ALMA, INDIANA.—If you don't mind sharing your sweetheart with other girls, far be it from me to curb your generous spirit. I don't think he loves you.

LONESOME CHERRY BLOSSOM, GEORGIA.—It is difficult for a girl to obey the command, "Honor thy father and thy mother," when Pa and Ma don't agree. The only way I can see out of the difficulty is to get your mother to intercede for you and win father's consent.

NETA, MISSOURI.—Instead of warning your girl chum against your brother and preventing their marriage, why don't you have a serious talk with him and ask him to give up his bad habits for her sake. It might be well to tell her the truth about him and enlist her aid in making a better person of him. This may be the turning point in his life. Of course if he is utterly beyond redemption and would make her very unhappy, you should prevent the marriage if you can, but at twenty-seven there should be every chance for him, particularly with two sweet girls working with him and for him. Get her to postpone the marriage until he shows signs of reforming.

TRUE BLUE, ALABAMA.—The minister of your church or town should be able and willing to advise you as to what is best for you to do Tell him how your father mistreats you and your younger brothers and sisters and surely he will suggest some way of making your life easier.

LITTLE ONE, NEW YORK.—Because your life has been so devoid of affection you would be likely to think yourself in love with the first man who was kind and affectionate. I don't say you are not in love now, but be careful. If he shouldn't be faithful (I think he will be) remember it was kindness and love you were in love with and not the man himself. By all means let him bring you an engagement ring. You could be very practical and tell him to save the money he would spend for a ring but you would be cheating him and yourself out of the thrill that goes with the engagement ring that is truly a love token and not a symbol of a bank account. Save money but not at the expense of everything beautiful in your life.

HEARTBROKEN GIRL, TEXAS.—My dear, your heart isn't broken; it isn't dented, even, though the varnish may be a scratched a trifle; but that isn't serious. Is it your love that is hurt or just your vanity? Be honest with yourself and admit that if he still wanted you, you wouldn't care whether you had him or not. Anyway, you have only yourself to blame and you can't say that he "has done you wrong," because you were the one to do all the heavy giving up. However, if you think you truly love him and want him, you can't afford to keep on chasing him. You apologized and asked him to come back and that's enough for you to do. In the future, act as if he didn't mean a thing to you; don't weaken for an instant nor show that you care, but be indifferently friendly at all times, and always a wee bit nicer to some other fellow than you are to him. If this doesn't bring him back you are likely to find consolation elsewhere.

SEVENTEEN, KANSAS.—Being "very fond" of a boy doesn't mean that you love him, and unless you are actually unhappy over the cessation of his letters, why bother to find out "why" he doesn't write. There's a streak of Pandora in all women. Know who she was? If your mother has asked him to stop writing to you, then both he and you should respect her wishes. When you are older—but that's another story.

CLARE, INDIANA.—Of the two, the poor boy seems the more desirable. He is resourceful, as shown by his method of keeping the other one away from you, and because of that and the fact that he knows the value of money, he may be rich himself someday If the rich boy lost the money his parents left him, he wouldn't know how to work, or more important, how to save, and you'd be worse off than if married to the poor one.

L., ALABAMA.—A wrist watch shouldn't be given instead of a wedding ring, even if you have one ring already. I suppose you have a book too. If he was too busy to put on his socks before he came to see you, he was too busy for visiting. That's a new one. Tell me, did he bring them with him, rolled up and put into his pocket, and put them on after he got there? Some girls have all the luck. Nothing exciting like that ever happened to me. All the men that come to see me are fully dressed.

RAVEN LOCKS, WISCONSIN.—It is gratifying to know you followed my advice and that it helped you. You will find that as you grow older and meet more people you will become less bashful. The expression, "I'll show you that my heart's in the right place," is not an anatomical one. It means that the person has good intentions and is generous.

BLUE EYES, GEORGIA.—It would have been just as easy to have been introduced to you as to have given a girl a note for you, and much more respectful. After meeting you he could have asked you to correspond with him. You shouldn't have written to him and certainly you should not write now that he doesn't answer your letters. Be pleasant when you meet him at school, but don't let him take any of your time or thoughts away fron your studies.

BLUE-EYED LUE—What do I think of a boy who calls on one girl five or six nights a week and goes to see another on Sunday? I think he must be able to do without sleep, another Edison maybe. I think he needs a change, too, and if I were the girl I'd be grateful for a little time to myself—to have another fellow.

INEZ AND MARY, OKLAHOMA.—Don't leave parties to go car riding with boys your senior or junior either. (2). Don't let a boy kiss you good night or good morning. (3). If I loved a boy and wanted to win his love how would I do it? Theoretically, I'd find out what kind of a girl he admired most and make myself like her. Actually, I haven't the slightest idea how I'd go about it. (4). Don't go to the theater or anywhere else with a boy you've "picked up." It is very dangerous. (5). A courtship of one month is rather too short and I wouldn't advise marriage at the end of that time unless the participants were 69 and 74 years of age. At that age they can't afford to waste much time, but at your age you can afford to wait a year or two.

BROWN EYES, NEW MEXICO.—My dear girl, don't be nasty-nice and let your brown eyes see evil where only beauty should be seen. Besides, if you are going to be so modest and object to the incident in the movies, be cinsistent about it and don't watch people in bathing. Doesn't that offend you? I'll bet you put ruffles on your tablecloths so the legs of the table can't be seen. Be modest, but in the right way. (2). The man should walk on the outside always and it wasn't necessary that he should take your arm unless to assist you over a rough place. Doubtless he means all right but is just thoughtless, as evinced by things you have told me, and if you don't like him, don't go around with him. I should say he wasn't especially refined. Surely you are clever enough to find a plausible excuse for not going.

BOBBY, TENNESSEE.—It seems to me it would be best for your fiance to let you live with your sister in the west, until you know your own mind. It may be that you love him as you should love the man you marry, but because you have always been fickle and flirtatious you are not capable of recognizing real love when you experience it. He has four years of hard study ahead of him and if you marry him you must make up your mind to give up your present habits because flirting would be likely to worry him and unfit him for serious study. If you can't help him, don't hinder him.

BROWN EYES, ALA.—Let him come to you. (2). Always, the lady speaks first.

A. B., TENNESSEE.—How could anyone named "Cloud" be the "sunlight" of your life? Your parents are right, you are too young to marry now. They may think differently about it by the time you are through training. Don't get the fool idea into your head that because you are going to be married there is no need of you completing your training. You will be a better wife and mother for it and able to care for yourself and children if the need arises.

TROUBLED HEART, TEXAS.—If his declaration of love was accompanied by an offer of marriage, then you could allow him to kiss you, but because you are so young I'd advise you to wait a year or two before getting married. Better be sure than sorry.

TROUBLED WIFE, OHIO.—Don't wait until living with and working for your in-laws has got to be a settled thing. Your husband should work for you and for a home for you and himself. If necessary, tell him your reasons for not wanting to live with his mother and if she continues to be disagreeable, make your home a long distance from her. That's better than living near and quarrelling all the time. Let him help them in a financial way if they need it, but don't sacrifice your home happiness by living with them.

Yours, with good intentions,
COUSIN MARION.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 30.)

I would like to write a longer letter to you, but the hours of the night are slipping away fast and it is necessary for me to stop this chatter. I wish that I could meet you and give you all a good hearty, friendly handshake—the kind you wouldn't forget, or couldn't forget if you tried. But some of you live so far away that I fear my arm, which is long and flexible, would even then never, never reach to where you are. So tonight I am sending you my best regards and thoughts—and remember that I am thinking of all of you. If you, by chance, have no radio, I should enjoy hearing from you all by aid of another of our Uncles—Uncle Sam. You can get in touch with me by addressing "them" to

A niece and cousin, FRANCES HARRIS.

I was mighty glad to get your signal, Frances. I listened to your call for quite a while before I recognized it. Bill insisted it was a rat gnawing at our potato barrel in the front cellar, and, anyway, he has got the headpiece so adjusted for his slightly lengthy ears that I cannot hear well through the darn thing at all. But now that I have heard it, I say, of course you shall be a cousin, Frances, and a niece as well. You may carry on friendship by freight, mail or radio, just as you please. If the telegraph was thought to be a wonder-worker upon arrival, what should be said of the wireless? All these discoveries that help to link sections, nations and individuals are the ones that count. The radio, in its present accomplishment, is like a puling infant of science—but its adult possibilities are stupendous.

Speaking of camping, Frances, you did not mention all the joys. For instance, sitting for hours watching the mosquitoes bob and murmur playfully about one's head and ankles, or trying to light a fire with damp wood at 5 A. M. of a rainy morning by the lakeside. Sifting the ants out of the sugar and removing them forcibly from the cake is another restful joy that relieves tension and might make a frazzled teacher think of clean silver and a white table-cloth. Yet I like to camp, Frances, and I have camped, literally, for years of my life. Sometimes by the shore and sometimes in mountains perhaps no less lovely than your Cherokee playground. To camp, is to satisfy the primitive instincts we all have and which civilization cruelly irons and starches out of us until we are, most of us, as stiff and useless as a hard-boiled shirt or high collar. It's good to get this civilized armor off as often as possible and be for a while as free as—well, as a mosquito or black ant.

I hope you enjoy your camping trip, Frances. I think when you get back you will find that your two uncles, working together, have well started you off in the happy business of carrying on friendship by mail—and perhaps male.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 37.)

Lye—a Dangerous Poison

The carelessness with which lye is placed within the reach of children would not be so common if the fact that it is a dangerous poison were more generally known. Lye may be purchased at any grocery, and the labels of the most of the commercial brands print no warning whatever that the contents of the package are poisonous. Death within a short time after lye is swallowed is not uncommon. If the patient survives the results are lamentable.
—Hygeia.

GEARHART CHECKS PAID FOR MANY THINGS WE NEEDED

Earns $10 to $12 a week "They always come at the right minute—just when I need the extra dollars for something I want. I knit two or three hours a day—during otherwise wasted spare time—or longer if I have the leisure. With my Gearhart Knitter I make $10 or $12 a week."

Gearhart makes no extravagant claims Some Gearhart home workers make even more than this. But we believe in conservative understatements rather than exaggerations. We will not make claims that your hand-knitter earnings will buy you a house or an auto or anything else costing many, many hundreds of dollars,—and, bear in mind, the Gearhart Knitter is the fastest knitter made.

Dignified, easy to earn money at home Easy to make extra money during spare time, in the privacy and comfort of the home, and thousands of women are each knitting dozens and dozens of pairs of socks on the Gearhart Knitter, receiving substantial checks for the time given to this interesting work.

Adds to income. Buys luxuries You want to add to your income. Isn't there something you want, that your regular income can't afford? A new fur coat, some extra furniture, or other luxuries? You can have them by knitting Standard Allwear Hosiery on the Gearhart Knitter.

Start at once with our easy "Instructor" The Gearhart Knitter is very simple to operate—the instruction book carries you quickly through the preliminary steps. Soon you are making beautiful Allwear Hosiery, from yarn furnished by Gearhart, and Gearhart pays you generously, under a definite contract, for any quantity you have time to make. You mail the socks in to Gearhart. Soon comes your check and new yarn of the exact quantity to replace the socks you sent in. You continue knitting, and getting checks and yarn until you have earned everything you want.

Original, simplest, fastest knitter The Gearhart is the "Original" home knitter, best and fastest of all. With hardly any physical effort, you can knit a pair of fine Allwear socks in 40 minutes. Experienced workers readily knit a pair in 20 to 30 minutes.

Workers recommend Gearhart Knitter We will gladly send you complete information about the knitter, with free samples of the knitting it does, and our booklet "The Guide Book to Home Earnings;" also letters—convincing evidence—from many Gearhart home earners, who recommend our knitter and the profit plan. This is all sent FREE.

Write us today. Begin at once to turn your spare time into money.

GEARHART KNITTING MACHINE CO.
1027 West 4th St., Clearfield, Pa.

BIG FREE BOOK BEAUTIFUL FURNISHINGS

just what you need now. Latest styles. Low Factory-to-Family prices. Save big money. Furnish a room or whole home. As little as $3 down; a year or more to pay. Also Pianos, Players, and Phonographs on longer time.

FOR PARLOR, DINING-ROOM, BEDROOMS

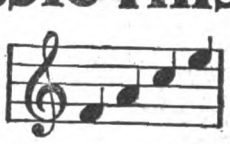
Before you buy any Furnishings be sure to cut out this adv.—write TODAY, for new "Larkin Book of Better Homes".

Larkin Co Inc.
Dept. 1011. BUFFALO, N. Y.
Peoria, Ill., Chicago, Ill.

Send for YOUR COPY Today

Larkin Co Inc. Buffalo, N.Y., Chicago, Ill. Peoria, Ill.

Send me your Better Homes Catalog, 1011, Easy Terms, etc.



Name .....

Address .....

.....

See How Easy It Is To Learn Music This New Way

YOU know how easy it is to put letters together and form words, once you have learned the alphabet. Playing a musical instrument is not very much different. Once you learn the notes, playing melodies on the mandolin, piano or violin is simply a matter of putting the notes together correctly.

The first note shown above is F. Whether you are singing from notes, playing the piano or banjo or any other musical instrument, that note in the first space is always F. The four notes indicated are F, A, C, E, easy to remember, because they spell the word "face." Certain strings on the mandolin, certain keys on the piano represent these same notes—and once you learn them, playing melodies on the instrument is largely a matter of following the notes.

Any one can now learn to play a musical instrument at home without a teacher. A new, simplified method of teaching reduces all music to its simplest possible form. You can now master singing, piano playing or any musical instrument you wish right at home, quickly, easily, without endless study and practice.

You don't have to know anything whatever about music to learn to play a musical instrument this new way. You don't have to pin yourself down to regular hours, to regular classes. You practice whenever you can, learn as quickly as you please. All the intricate "mysteries" of music have been reduced to a method of amazing simplicity—each step is made as clear as ABC. Thousands have already learned to play their favorite musical instruments this splendid, new, quick way.

Learn To Play Any Instrument

Mandolin	Saxophone
Drums and Traps	Piano Organ
Harmony and Composition	Violin Banjo
Sight Singing	Clarinet
Ukulele	Flute
Piccolo	Harp
Trombone	Cornet
Hawaiian Steel Guitar	'Cello Guitar

Voice and Speech Culture
Automatic Finger Control

You Can Play Your Favorite Instrument Three Months from Today

If you are dissatisfied with your present work, let music act as a stepping-stone into a new career. If you long for a hobby, a means of self-expression, let music be the new interest in your life. If you wish to be a social favorite, if you wish to gain popularity—choose your favorite instrument and, through the wonderful home-study method of the U. S. School of Music, play it three months from today.

You can do it. Youngsters of 10 to 12 have done it and men as old as 60 have found new interest and enjoyment in learning how to play a musical instrument. You don't have to listen while others entertain any longer. YOU can be the center of attraction, the talented person who holds the audience fascinated.

Free Book and SAMPLE LESSON Explain All SEND TODAY

Every one who is interested in music should send at once for our valuable book "Music Lessons in Your Own Home." It not only explains the wonderful new simplified method of learning music but tells about a special short-time offer now being made to music lovers. With it will be sent a FREE Sample Lesson which proves, better than words, how delightfully quick and easy the famous Print-and-Picture Method is.

Mail this coupon at once for your copy. Remember, it obligates you in no way whatever—ALL free. But act now before the supply is exhausted. U. S. School of Music, 410 Brunswick Building, N. Y. C.

U. S. SCHOOL of Music, 410 Brunswick Bldg., New York City

Please send me your free book, "Music Lessons in Your Own Home." Sample Lesson, and particulars of your special offer. I am interested in the following course:

.....
(Name of Instrument or Course)

Name .....
(Please write plainly)

Address .....

City ..... State .....

Don't Send 1 Penny

Delivery FREE
$3.48
Silk Lined

Manchurian Fox Scarf

Just send your name and address—no money—and I will send this scarf to you. This is a wonderful opportunity of getting a $7.50 fur scarf for $3.48. Our price is amazingly low. Compare it with others and see for yourself.

A Fashion Necessity

Every fashionable woman is wearing a fur scarf with her coat, suit, dress or waist. It is appropriate for all occasions. This scarf is made of Manchurian fox which has long, soft, silky hairs. It is not the genuine American fox, but will wear much better. Animal shape, with head at one end and tail and paws at the other. Lined with all-silk messaline. Also has silk ruffle around neck. Very large and graceful. COLORS: Black, Lucille brown or taupe gray.

Send Now just your name and address—no money. When the furscarf arrives, pay the postman $3.48 for it. We have paid the transportation charges. Wear the scarf. If it is not better than you expected, return it at our expense and we will cheerfully refund your money. Be sure to give color. Order by No. 19.

Walter Field Co. Dept. X-4077, Chicago

Prices Reduced On All Standard Make TYPEWRITERS

Lowest Prices in Years

We will ship any make you choose for one week's trial. Underwood, Royal, L. C. Smith, Remington, Oliver, etc.

Easy Terms Pay less than rent each month and own a typewriter. Guaranteed as good as new. Perfectly rebuilt by experts—the famous "Young Process." Send for our free trial offer and new low price list now. WRITE TODAY.

Young Typewriter Co.
World's Largest Dealers in Standard Typewriters
654 W. Randolph St., Dept. 125A, Chicago, Ill.

REAL PHONOGRAPH GIVEN SEND NO MONEY WE TRUST YOU

Send Name and Address

Simply GIVE AWAY 12 BIG ART PICTURES with 12 handsome boxes of our world FAMOUS WHITE CLOVERINE at 25c each, returning to us the $3.00 collected and we will send this marvelous phonograph to you at once, postage paid to your door. Big Illustrated Catalog of 100 Appealing Gifts Sent With Order. Millions demand Cloverine (a wonderful household necessity) for chapped hands, face and lips, burns, pimples, cuts, etc. Easiest and squarest plan for twenty-eight years makes us most reliable. SHIPPED SAME DAY ORDER RECEIVED. WRITE QUICK. BE FIRST IN YOUR TOWN.

The Wilson Chemical Co., Dept. P 16, Tyrone, Pa.

FREE Novelty and Gun Catalog

Hundreds of Bargains!

Don't fail to write for our FREE catalog of novelties, firearms and Gifts

WRITE TODAY!

Ask for Catalog E-43,

AMERICAN NOVELTY COMPANY
2410 Archer Avenue • CHICAGO

Ma Ma! Ma Ma! BIG Ma-Ma DOLL FREE

When you lay her down she says Ma-Ma loud and plain, not a little squeak. You don't have to press her or squeeze her to make her talk, just lay her down and she does the talking herself. She is 13 inches tall, has Bisque Head and Arms, Stuffed Body, and is dressed like picture—Patent Leather Shoes, etc. We send her Free for selling only 24 packets of Perfumed Sachet at 10c each. Also Walking Dolls, Crying Dolls, Sleeping Dolls, all free. Everybody wants to buy Sachet. Write today. Send no money!

JONES MFG. CO.
Dept. 809, Attleboro, Mass.

Ma Ma! Ma Ma! Ma Ma! Ma Ma! Ma Ma! Ma Ma! Ma Ma! Ma Ma!

Comfort's Information Bureau

Under this heading all questions by COMFORT subscribers on subjects not relating to the special departments elsewhere in the paper, will be answered, as far as may be. COMFORT readers are advised to read carefully the advertisements in this paper, as they will often find in them what they seek through their questions addressed to this Bureau. They will thus save time, labor and postage.

No attention will be given any inquiry which lacks the sender's full name and address but we will print only initials if so requested.

Mrs. L. W. D., Maine.—Hams to be smoked should be hung up for a week or ten days in a cool place before smoking. This adds much to the tenderness of the meat. Care must be taken that the meat remains sweet and untainted during this period of keeping. A teacupful of salt, a tablespoonful of molasses and an ounce of saltpeter should be mixed together for each ham that is to be cured. The hams or bacon should be put into some large receptacle and rubbed with this mixture—which should be heated before applying. Let the meat remain for two days after this mixture has been rubbed in. Now make a brine from one and a half pounds of salt, one-half pound of sugar and one-eighth ounce of saltpeter to each gallon of water. The saltpeter should be first dissolved in a little hot water and then added to the mixed brine. In this brine let the hams or bacon remain for three weeks, then remove from brine, soak in cold water overnight, and hang up for a week longer. The smoking may then be done and should last for a period of three or more days, being careful not to heat the hams. Apple tree wood and corn cobs are best to burn. The ham should be suspended hock down and far enough from the fire so that overheating does not occur. If you have no regular smoke house, meats may be smoked on a small scale by suspending under a hogshead. The smoked meat may be tied up in cheese-cloth or burlap and kept until used. It takes time and care to cure meats well, but the time taken is well spent—when a juicy slice of broiled ham or some crisp appetizing home-cured bacon can appear on the breakfast table as a result of thought and effort. The chief fault with most home-cured ham or bacon is that it is tough and oversalted. Follow the above directions and you will avoid these defects.

L. H. Oklahoma.—All large hospitals in our largest cities maintain, as a part of their activities, a "training school for nurses" where girls, who fulfill certain requirements, can enter as "probationers" for a certain period of training. While the requirements differ, it is usual to pay these student nurses a small wage. They must, however, supply their own aprons and uniforms upon entering. Let your local physicians supply you with the names of hospitals in St. Louis to which you might write—addressing the superintendent of such hospitals and asking for information concerning their requirements for "probationers" who wish training in the profession of nursing. Enclose a stamp when you write. Those who plan to take up nursing should have a fair amount of preliminary education, the more the better, and should be of strong nerves and robust physique. We know of many girls who have not lasted out the probationery period in city hospitals. The work is hard; some of it is distasteful, and all of it requires ambition, strength and nervous energy. But to those who complete a course in nursing and can fill the duties of a nurse intelligently, financial reward is certain, and also the satisfaction of having part in work whose service is real. For many modern professions or forms of service contribute to work which is inhuman, artificial or destructive.

Mrs. S. F. Trojan, S. D.—It is difficult to tell, at this distance, what ails your canaries and why they did not mate this last spring. Generally speaking, canaries should mate in February. It aids in mating to supply the birds with nesting material and to add the yolks of hard-boiled eggs to their food. Illness might come from improper or too heavy feeding. Canaries should have light, fresh air, plenty of clean water to drink and bathe in, sand and gravel always at hand, and occasionally chickweed or a leaf of lettuce to eat in addition to the canary seed, rape and hemp seed which best forms their daily diet. Feed carefully, watch out for cleanliness, light and air, and see if your birds do not mate another year after this treatment.

A SUBSCRIBER, Johnson City, Tenn.—Ole Bull, whose real name was Bornemann, was a Norwegian violinist, born at Bergen, February 5, 1810. Ole Bull toured this country with great success and became widely known here. This was in the years 1843-45. After his return to Europe, the violinist met with disastrous losses of fortune and came to this country again where he had previously been so successful. In 1852 he bought a huge tract of wild land in Potter county, Pa. Here he founded a colony called Oleana. This became a failure and was abandoned. Ole Bull then returned to the concert stage. He married a second time in this country and resided here until his death. Your violin is undoubtedly an instrument which has been named after the famous violinist and therefore has his name placed on the back. This would add nothing to its value—which must depend upon the violin's natural qualities and tone. These could only be passed upon by an expert.

Mrs. W. B. R., San Angelo, Tex.—Yes, indeed, there is plenty of free acreage left in Oregon. The vacant public lands total 13,323,501 acres. Oregon is a big state and ranks ninth in size, although only thirty-fourth in rank of population. So you see there is plenty of room for ambitious homesteaders! The state can offer all varieties of climate and soil that are known to the temperate zone. Along the coast section the vegetation is heavy and the rains frequent. In the southeastern portion of the state there are great stretches of semi-arid land. The coast climate, while moist, is never very hot nor cold. East from the Cascade range, the climate is colder and much drier. Oregon has great forests and the state ranks third in lumber production. The state's fruit industry is important and Oregon apples are famous. Irrigation is rapidly aiding the arid lands of the state. As a place of residence, it is important to remember Oregon's progressiveness: the state initiated the national movement for direct primaries, the initiative and referendum and the recall, and adopted Prohibition independently of the national amendment. The state's rivers and mountains offer great scenic beauty and fine playgrounds. Write to the Register of the U. S. Land Office at Portland, Oregon for further information concerning homesteading.

D. F. B., Colorado.—If you are a reader of this column, you should have read what we have often printed here concerning the fraudulent "old violins" which bear inscriptions calculated to make the credulous believe the instrument to be the handiwork of some old master of violin-making. We do not believe your violin to be a genuine Stradivarius. Experts declare that there are only some thirty-odd genuine Strads now in existence. The actual value of your instrument could only be judged by some musician, or dealer in violins who might have the violin in his hands for test. Wait your chance to exhibit it in this way for trial.

Mrs. C. M., West Virginia.—The Society of Cincinnati was founded in 1783 and its present headquarters are at 214 Chamber of Commerce Bldg., Baltimore, Md. Address the secretary, Gen. J. C. Davies, for any particulars you wish regarding the order.

B. P., Youngsville, N. C.—Write to the Superintendent of U. S. Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., concerning regulations governing admission to the Academy. Also read reply to R. S. R., Louisiana, which appeared in this department of COMFORT in August of this year.

Goodyear Raincoat Free

Goodyear Mfg. Co., 3168-R Goodyear Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., is making an offer to send a handsome raincoat free to one person in each locality who will show and recommend it to friends. If you want one, write today.—Advt.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 29.)

consisting of sunshine all the time, but the lack of rain caused a crop failure. Therefore, it may be a good thing that most people do not insist, when looking for a life partner, that he or she measure up to their Ideal.

I, however, will confess that I have a mental picture of my Ideal Wife. This woman is, of course, a real Christian, a genuine pal, and fully my equal mentally. Consequently I would respect her views and seek her advice on all things of importance. I cannot imagine myself talking rough or cross to such a dear pal but instead would show my appreciation in every way possible. I wouldn't expect her to agree with me on everything, because she would naturally, at times, see things from a different and perhaps a higher point of view. But, by kindly explaining it from her viewpoint, I would see it through her eyes, so to speak, and thereby lift my thoughts to a higher standard. If we always agreed with each other, we would both become narrow minded.

I haven't mentioned love and purity; but if a woman is a real Christian she is, of course, loving, kind and true; she will ever be found seeking her own in another's good. This "other" first of all will be the best friend she has on earth—her husband. That, also, applies to men in regard to their wives. Anything short of that is being a Christian in name only.

I would like for my wife to be musically inclined, for I am very fond of music, both vocal and instrumental. I would also be glad if she could be good looking and graceful. However, since I am not blessed with these qualities, I couldn't expect her to possess them.

Sometimes as I look at this mind picture, I dream of the bliss and happiness of married life, lived as it should be, but it soon vanishes, for I am numbered among that large class of young people that have to be contented with such dreams, known as Invalids.

In her last letter, Ruby Nelson gave a wonderful description of this part of the northwest, but she forgot to mention our beautiful scenery and paved highways. The Columbia River Highway is considered one of the wonders of America.

I must say a few words about dear old COMFORT before I close. Of course you sisters know what a cozy corner you have and how motherly Mrs. Wilkinson is, but I am sure you will agree that the Cousins' department is a close second. I admire Uncle Lisha and think that his heart-to-heart talks in his leading articles are just wonderful.

Best wishes to all, HENRY KREGER.

WAUKESHA, 157 TENNEY AVE., WIS.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON, BROTHERS AND SISTERS:

I have been a reader of good old COMFORT for many years and the subjects carried on there are splendid. After reading the June issue and the request for the brothers to write about their Ideal wives here are a few requirements:

1. Someone whom I can look in the eye and call my equal, be a good pal and love the great out-of-doors.
2. Must be able to cook a good plain meal.
3. Must be home loving and broad minded.
4. Willing to attend socials, parties and other places where good clean entertainment is provided.
5. Last but not least must not nag or whimper, and must be of Protestant faith.

I may be rather exacting as to my ideal but will try to find one that measures up to it if possible. I also prefer the little dark-eyed and dark-haired misses.

A description of myself is in order. I am five feet, eleven inches tall, weigh 160 pounds, have red hair and lots of freckles and am in the first part of the twenties.

A. J. PETERSON.

BELTON, R. R. 5, TEXAS.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON, SISTERS AND BROTHERS:

Will you make room for a big brother from Texas? I have been a silent reader of COMFORT for quite a while and you will see by this that I read the Sisters' Corner.

The subject of the Ideal Husband and Wife bids fair to be interesting.

Mabel Clare, I appreciate your thoughtfulness in giving us boys a chance to tell of our Ideal Wife, and Mrs. Wilkinson for the privilege she extends in the use of the Sisters' Corner.

I will tell of my Ideal Wife. First of all I should like for her to be a Christian, then neat in dress, kind and affectionate. Would like for her to be educated, especially in music, be a good housekeeper, a lover of good literature and nature, fond of home, children and good society. Color of hair and eyes are of minor importance.

On the question of powder, paint and bobbed hair, if these things improve your appearance and make you feel more comfortable I say, "Help yourself dearie."

I am six feet, two and three-quarters inches tall, weigh 175 pounds, have black hair and blue eyes and am thirty-four years young. I shall never grow old in spirit. My occupation is farming.

BEN GOOSMAN.

TENNESSEE.

DEAR MRS. WILKINSON:

Here comes a husband knocking for admittance to your "Corner" for a few remarks on the "Ideal Wife."

First of all, she should be a Christian, for what can you expect of the future generations without christian mothers and christian influence in the home? I am assuming that the "Ideal Husband" is a Christian, which he should be if he has children. The boy of today is the man of tomorrow and needs the proper teaching and home environments.

The wife should belong to the same church as the husband for as Mary Scott says: "People thinking and believing the same can work together in greater harmony."

Second she should know how to cook, sew, in fact, know how to do everything to be done in the home and then if she has servants she is better fitted to direct them. Many unhappy homes are caused indirectly by husbands eating soggy, ill-prepared foods.

Third, she should take an interest in outdoor sports, books and reading, if nothing but the daily paper, and be able to discuss leading topics of the day. What husband likes to discuss a subject with his wife that she has never heard or seen mentioned?

I believe my fourth qualification is the greater cause of unhappiness in homes than all others taken together. When baby arrives she should not idolize and completely devote all time and energy to him, to the exclusion of husband and home. At nightfall when she should be prepared to spend the after supper hour with husband discussing events of the day, she should not spend this hour spoiling baby by patting, shaking and rocking him to sleep. When this task is finally accomplished she is completely exhausted and ready to retire. Why not place him in bed, turn out the light, and let him go to sleep without all the above ado? "The little thing would cry his eyes out." I hear some one say. It is all in training. If you do not teach the child a habit you do not have to continue it. The trouble with children of the present is caused, in the greater part, by the overindulgence of fond parents and the greater responsibility lies with the mother for she is with them and has more control than the father. Should the child need correcting let the father correct him, the wife not interfering, and vice versa.

Fifth she should not worry over the little things in life and should not try to care for all her trouble and the petty troubles of other brothers and sisters. She should be kind, loving, sympathetic and a good pal in all things.

I think lovers should be perfectly honest each with the other before marriage and talk over in a plain and sensible manner the problems that may come up in married life and try to come to an agreement. Then after marriage, girls, above all things, do not completely reverse your ideas and plans and do the opposite to what husband expects of you and all should be well if he carries out his part of the deal.

I wonder how many husbands will agree that if some of the above "Ideals" were put into practice

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 39.)

THE FAMOUS WHITE FLAME BURNER

MAKES your old kerosene lamps and lanterns shine with a brilliant soft white light. Non-breakable steel mantle. No smoke. No soot. Relieves eye strain. Over a million satisfied users. Guaranteed safe, durable, reliable. Complete assembly, 50 cts. post paid, stamps or coin. 3 for $1.25. Your money back if not satisfied.

Live Representative Wanted

WHITE FLAME LIGHT CO.
76 Clark Building Grand Rapids, Mich.

Watch, Knife & Chain $2.45

Send No Money

This 1922 model Men's or Boys' Popular 16 size perfect timekeeper for only $2.45. Solid Silveroid thin model case, open face, stem wind and set, positive adjustment, fully tested. A written guarantee with every watch. Present given with each watch. Send no money. Simply pay the postman $2.45 and fix when and present is yours. Fully Guaranteed

Consolidated Watch Co., Dept. 109, 20 E. Lake St., Chicago

ALL FREE

COUNT THEM Gold finished Necklace, Handsome Cameo set Bracelet, Hawaiian Ring, Cameo Ring, Persian Brooch, your Birthstone Ring and Signet Ring with your initial. Complete 14-K Gold-Plated Jewelry (with Free Instructions) selling 20 packets perfumed Sachet at 10c each. Send no money.

LANE MFG. CO., Dept. 234 MT. VERNON, N. Y.

FREE Genuine Leather

Regulation size, Genuine Seal Leather cover Football with extra quality rubber Bladder Free for selling 10 Packets Perfumed Sachet at 10c each. Easy to sell. Write today. Send no Money. Get your Football without cost.

JONES MFG. CO. Dept. 812, ATTLEBORO, MASS.

King TUT GOOD LUCK RING $1.95

Don't Send a Penny! Famous Movie Stars wear King TUT GOOD LUCK ring. They say it brings success, happiness, love. Over one million sold. Only original LUCK ring, beware of imitations. Genuine silver finish.

Order Today! Was $2.50, now only $1.95, and postage. Cash with order $1.75. 3 for $5.25. Be sure to send paper strip for finger size. State if man's, women's boy's or girl's style.

GOLD WATCH CO. Dept. 434 3501 S. Michigan Av., CHICAGO

Free

Rush your name and address; we'll tell you how you can get either of these high grade watches absolutely free. Watches are guaranteed excellent time keepers. Choice of 25 Yr. White Gold-filled or 20 Yr. Yellow Gold-filled case. Send name and address today.

RELIABLE SALES CORP.
Dept. 2 S, 434 B'way, New York

VIOLIN FREE

Beautiful Violin Bow, resin and self instructor given for selling 12 boxes Mentho-Nova at 25c. A quick seller. Return the $3.00 and receive violin or choice of 24 premiums free. Address

U. S. SUPPLY COMPANY
Dept. 60-7, Greenville, Pa.

10 YEAR GUARANTEE

Watch, Ring & Chain Given—We positively give a genuine American Stem Wind & Set Watch, beautifully designed case, warranted time-keeper, 10-year guarantee; Sparkling Set or Plain Ring all for selling 25 large Beautifully Colored Art and Religious Pictures at 10c each. When sold send us $2.50 & we'll send Watch and Ring. HOME ART CO., 426-28 West 59th Street, Dept. 56, Chicago

LOOMS $9.90 AND UP. BIG MONEY IN WEAVING AT HOME.

No experience necessary to weave beautiful rugs, carpets, etc. on UNION LOOMS from rags and waste material. Home weaving is fascinating and highly profitable. Weavers are rushed with orders. Be sure to send for free loom book. It tells all about weaving and our wonderfully low-priced, easily-operated looms.

UNION LOOM WORKS, 272 Factory St., Boonville, N. Y.

SCHOOL BOX FREE

with Fountain Pen, Pencils, Knife, Pen Holder, Eraser, for selling 30 packages Chewing Gum at 5c a pckg. Write

BLUINE MFG. CO., 202 Mill St., Concord Junction, Mass.

Keep Your Money

BUT SEND FOR HANDY ANDY!

SEE PAGE 28

GIVEN TO YOU

Guaranteed watch and chain with clasp, or Eastman camera or beautiful set ring or big flashlight or choice of many other fine premiums. Sell only twelve 25c boxes Mingo. Everybody uses for chapped skin, cuts, burns, etc. Easy to sell. Send no money. Just your name and full address and we send you premium catalog and 12 boxes Mingo postpaid and trust you till sold. We treat you square. Send today.

NOVA-DEX LABORATORIES
Box 1459-K-10, Cincinnati, O.

Don't Fuss With The Muss of Old Kerosene Lamps

New Bright—White Light For Every Home

At last you can throw away your dirty, dingy, oil lamp, and have the brightest, whitest light for your home or farm. Right now, for a limited time, I am making an amazing offer to quickly introduce my wonderful patented light invention. Table lamps, hanging lamps, wall lamps, lanterns—for every room and outdoor use. Gives 20 times light of old wick lamps at half the cost. No chimneys to break or clean, no dirty, greasy wicks to trim, no soot or smoke, no foul unhealthful odors. Positively safe.

AGENTS $60 to $100 a Week

If you want to earn big money write me quickly for sales plan. No experience — or capital required. Exclusive territory. Big season now on. Address me personally —say—"send agents Free Outfit Offer" J. C. Steese, Pres.

300 Candle Power Burns 96% Air—only 4% cheap gasoline or kerosene (coal-oil). Light as bright as daylight, soft, mellow, easy on eyes. Beats electricity or gas. Lights with match. Easy to operate. Most economical, greatest improvement and advancement in home and farm lighting of the age.

30 Days Trial without risking penny. Write today for big, attractive, descriptive catalog from which to select one of many handsome designs. Be first in your locality to write and get liberal money saving introductory offer. Send your name and address today.

J. C. Steese, President,
THE AKRON LAMP CO., 130 Lamp Bldg., Akron, O.

Price Cutting Sale

2 Gray Flannel Shirts $3.95

The Greatest Bargain Without Exception

Think of it! Men's TWO winter weight, comfortable wool mixed gray flannel shirts for only $3.95, and heavy knit wool process yarn slip-on sweater FREE. Why, you would rightfully expect to pay $4.50 to $5.00 for the two shirts alone. They are roomily made, soft turned down collar, winter weight, large extra strong pockets with buttoned down flaps. Ideal shirts for work or semi-dress. All sizes. And don't forget, sweater FREE. We are making this amazing offer just to introduce our new catalog to thousands of readers of this magazine. SEND NO MONEY. Send your name, address and size wanted, pay postman $3.95 plus postage on delivery; and understand if not delightfully Surprised, send them back and we refund your money by next mail. But act quick before this offer is withdrawn.

INTERNATIONAL COMM. HOUSE, Dept. A 51
433 Broadway, New York, N. Y.

MADE TO YOUR MEASURE Suit $14.95

NO EXTRA CHARGES Postage Prepaid

SEND NO MONEY We make this special offer to prove the wonderful value, style and fit of Progress tailoring. We will tailor to your special order one of these fine suits, send it to you postage prepaid and guarantee absolute satisfaction for only $14.95. We have other equally striking bargains in the finest made-to-order suits at from $14.95 up to $39.50.

AGENTS WANTED—Earn $30 to $35 extra every week, taking orders from your friends and neighbors for our high-class tailoring. NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY.

Big Sample Outfit FREE

Drop us a line today and we will send you absolutely free, our big assortment of woolen samples, style book and special wholesale prices, on our made-to-measure suits.

THE PROGRESS TAILORING CO., Dept. X 115 CHICAGO

$7.75 Dont Send A Penny

14 K GOLD FILLED

6 JEWELS

Vanity FREE!

You'll marvel at this bargain. Your friends will envy you this beautiful "TONNEAU SHAPE" bracelet watch. 14K, solid white gold filled, richly engraved thin model. 6 Jewel adjusted movement. Timed, tested, accurate! Grosgrain silk ribbon bracelet and clasp.

Vanity Box Free with each order for this remarkable watch if you order immediately! Send no money. If not satisfied after inspection, money gladly refunded. Order Today.

FOR LIMITED TIME ONLY

Beautiful silveroid Vanity Box Free with our $7.75 bracelet watch bargain! Bright silveroid box contains cake of powder with puff. Mirror in cover, the very latest fad.

UNIVERSAL WATCH CO.
Lincoln and Hervey Streets
Dept. 482 Chicago

$MAKE MONEY$ AT HOME

You can make 15 to 50 Dollars a week at home in your spare time, easily learned by our new simple method. No Canvassing—Experience unnecessary. We teach you how, sell your work and pay you cash no matter where you live—Write today for free sample lesson and illustrated booklet.

UNITED SHOW CARD STUDIOS,
2450 Dinan Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

10 DAYS TRIAL

Guaranteed

HOME BARBER OUTFIT HALF PRICE

COMFORT subscribers at

This half price sale for a short time only. Each Set consists of 1 close cutting barber's hair clippers, one 7-inch barber comb, 1 barber hair shears of razor like steel. This is our regular high grade $4.00 set, guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction. Special offer complete outfit only $1.98 if you decide to keep the set—less than price of clippers alone.

MOTHERS Save time, strength and money. This outfit cuts children's hair perfectly in 5 minutes. Always have the children's heads looking nice. Quicker and easier to do it with this outfit than to go to the barber shop.

GIRLS WITH BOBS

For good looking bobbed hair this splendid set is as necessary as your brush and comb. Clip it close in the back and with these shears you can always get a perfectly even bob. THE WHOLE FAMILY will use this set and save barber bills. Four hair cuts pays for it if you get in on this special offer.

SEND NO MONEY Just write today and ask for the home barber outfit. It will be sent by return mail. When it arrives pay the postman $1.98 and postage. Use the outfit for 10 days. Then if you are not perfectly satisfied return it and your money will be promptly refunded.

HOME SUPPLY CO., Dept. K, Madison, Wis.
Branch office, Topeka, Kansas. (Send to nearest address.)

GENUINE FOOTBALL GIVEN

SEND NO MONEY

OH, BOYS!

Simply send name and address. Greatest thing ever. Get this American football for simply

Giving Away 12 Big Colored Art Pictures

Send No Money to friends and neighbors with 12 boxes famous White Cloverine at 25c each. Send the $3.00 collected, and we will mail football at once, postage paid, to your door; Lots of other appealing gifts for boys offered in our new big illustrated catalog. Millions use Cloverine for burns, cuts, colds, pimples, etc. Easiest and squarest plan for twenty-eight years makes us most reliable. Write quick. Be first in your town.

THE WILSON CHEMICAL CO., Dept. FB16, TYRONE, PA.

30 DAY TRIAL

FINE STROP FREE

We will send a STERLING razor on 30 days trial. If satisfactory, costs $1.97. If not, costs nothing. Fine Horsehide Strop FREE. Write today.

STERLING COMPANY Suite 15, BALTIMORE, MD.

VETERINARY INFORMATION

Subscribers are invited to write to this department asking for any information desired relative to the treatment of animal troubles. Questions will be answered in these columns free by an eminent veterinarian. Describe the trouble fully, sign full name and give your address; direct all correspondence to the Veterinary Department, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

No attention will be given any inquiry which lacks the sender's full name and address, but we will print only initials if so requested.

"Caked Bag" of Ewes

THERE would be far less trouble from caked bag or garget in ewes were the shepherd to strip some of the milk away the day after weaning the lambs. Then stripping should be done on the third, fifth and, if necessary, the seventh day. The udder should also be well smeared with carbolized oil or vaseline to keep flies away and otherwise help to prevent infection. Do the weaning "once and for all." Letting lambs back to their dams a day or two after weaning may help to prevent garget, but it may also kill or injure the lambs, as the "stale" milk sometimes is poisonous. If garget starts the best treatment is to pen the ewe, strip the udder clean once an hour, at first, and every two or three hours during the day when improvement is seen. The udder should also be persistently bathed with water as hot as the hand can bear and containing a pound of Epsom salt per gallon. That treatment sometimes quickly aborts a starting case of garget but may not do so if delayed. When the udder is seen to be changing to a purple-red color the hot bathing should be continued as well as the frequent stripping of the milk, but in addition it is well to rub in a mixture of equal quantities of carbolized oil, camphorated oil and compound soap liniment. This may be done two or three times daily. If pain is great, add one teaspoonful each of fluid extracts of belladonna leaves and poke root to each ounce of the other mixture. If this treatment does not quickly soften the udder and remove the discoloration stop hot water fomentation and instead of the other mixture rub in mercurial ointment once daily at first and twice daily later, if that is seen necessary. It will be likely to prevent gangrene and sloughing of the udder, but a ewe that has been so attacked will not be worth retaining for breeding purposes.

ABNORMAL MILK.—I have a half Holstein cow, three years old She freshened a year ago in September I have milked her twice a day. Recently I put her milk away and a cake of blood was in the bottom of the vessel. Lots of yellow lumps float on the top when I milk her. She has been giving four gallons of milk a day but has failed until she only gives one and one-half gallons. The milk does not clabber but smells peculiar. Could she have tuberculosis and would that affect the milk? Mrs. Z. S.

A.—The bleeding in all probability was caused by injury and that may also have caused garget. To determine which quarter of the udder is affected set a sample of milk from each quarter in bottles that have been sterilized by boiling. Label them that the source of the contents of each may be known. If but one quarter is found affected better dry off the milk secretion in that quarter or let a calf nurse. If all quarters or several of them are affected better dry off all the remaining secretion and fit the cow for slaughter. Tuberculosis may be present but the only way to determine that would be to have the tuberculin test applied by a veterinarian. The disease may affect milk in the way you describe especially as regards the yellow color.

LAME MULE.—My mule, three years old is lame in right fore foot. He limps when on hard ground. J. E. P.

A.—We cannot confidently diagnose lameness without making a personal examination, but if the trouble is in the foot the mule may go better if you cover the sole with lanolin (sheep's wool fat) oakum and a leather pad and then put on a bar shoe. Afterwards clip the hair from the hoof-head and every ten days rub in a mixture of one part of powdered cantharides and 24 parts of lard, as a mild blister, until the lameness subsides. Corns or a nail prick would of course require appropriate local treatment. Write again if necessary.

FISTULA.—I have three horses that have fistula. Could you give me a remedy that will cure them? H. B.

A.—It should be understood that the discharge of pus from a fistula comes from diseased cartilage or other tissue. To effect a permanent cure the dead and diseased tissues should be removed by dissection. For that purpose you should have a veterinarian lay open each pipe and sinus which will also insure free drainage for pus. If you cannot employ a veterinarian try the effects of a proprietary fistula cure used according to directions given by the manufacturer. Meanwhile flush out the discharging places daily with a two per cent. solution of permanganate of potash and then fill them with powdered boric acid.

DEATH OF RABBIT.—Can you tell me what ails my rabbits? I am a farmer woman, living seven miles from town. My rabbits run out free. I have lost over one hundred. They can be found in the dooryard with their heads turned half way around, eyes enlarged, looking wild and fiery.—Mrs. J. C.

A.—We should advise you to make an entirely new rabbit yard and quarters on land not previously used for these animals. Then start afresh with new, sound breeding stock. Plow and crop the old yards. Hutches possibly may be used again if thoroughly scalded, cleansed, disinfected and whitewashed. For disinfecting purposes use a mixture of one part of compound cresol solution and 30 parts of water, or one part of coal tar disinfectant and 20 parts of water. Also mix one pound of chlorid of lime with every three gallons of freshly made lime wash. We suspect that coccidiosis killed the rabbits and there is no cure for that contagious disease. To determine the exact cause, however, you should arrange to send an affected rabbit to the veterinary department of the State Agricultural Experiment Station at Lincoln for examination.

IDENTITY OF COLT.—When two parties claim a two-year-old colt, and that they own the father and mother of this colt could a person get the State Veterinarian to test the blood of the horse and mare and tell who owns them?—J. F.

A.—The proposed test would not be likely to settle such a problem nor could it be made by anyone other than a professional or trained bacteriologist or pathologist having experience in such work The history of the case and comparison of the markings of the animals involved will have to be depended on to settle the dispute.

RUNNING FITS.—I have a dog five months old that takes spells of howling and barking, running under the floor and acting as though he had a fit. Do dogs have flea fits? B. D.

A.—Hookworms, rather than fleas, cause such fits which are very common among dogs in the Southern states. To expel the worms withhold feed and then give carbon tetrachlorid in soft gelatin capsules. The dose is one drop per pound of body weight for a puppy and two drops per pound for a grown dog. At time of a fit confine dog in a cool, darkened, quiet place and give 10 to 20 grains of bromide of potash in a little water. Repeat the dose in 20 minutes if seen to be necessary.

OBSTRUCTED TEAT.—A lump has formed in one of the teats of my two-year-old heifer. It takes me about twenty minutes to get the milk from that teat as it comes in a small stream. The milk is not ropy and seems all right. Mrs. H. C.

A.—Warty or fibroid growths have formed on the lining membrane of the teats. If they are just inside the orifice of the teat a veterinarian could remove them by operation but if they are higher up in the teat it would be better to let a calf nurse or to dry off the milk secretion in the affected teat. It would be possible to remove the growths by cutting through the wall of the teat when the cow is dry but that is a formidable operation and scarcely worth while unless but one teat is affected and the cow is a purebred and extra valuable on account of pedigree or performance.

FITS IN DOGS.—I have a dog, two years old that has spells running and barking. Please advise me what to do. A. J. J.

A.—Hookworms are a common cause of such excitement fits in dogs. To expel or destroy the worms withhold feed for 24 hours, then give carbon tetrachlorid in soft gelatin capsules. The dose for a puppy is one drop for each pound of body weight and for a grown dog two drops per pound. At time of an attack confine the dog in a cool, quiet, darkened place and give 10 to 20 grains of bromide of potash in a little water. Repeat the dose in 20 minutes if seen to be necessary. So far as possible prevent the dog from becoming unduly excited.

INFECTED WOUND.—I have a colt that cut its foot just below the hock joint. The wound bled freely but became infected. Please let me know what we could use to heal and take stiffness out of leg. H. H. P.

A.—Clip the hair from the entire affected part and wash the skin with soap and hot water. Then inject into the discharging places a little of a mixture of one part of iodoform and eight parts of sulphuric ether. Do not use the ether mixture where there is an open light of any kind as it is highly inflammable. After the injection dust the wound with a mixture of one part each of iodoform, calomel and boric acid and five parts of powdered starch. The colt should be supported with a veterinary sling in a box stall screened and darkened against flies.

ABNORMAL MILK.—I have a young cow, giving milk with first calf that is a little more than two months old. The milk seems to be perfectly good when sweet, but it turns to water when it begins to clabber. It is useless to churn as it will not make any butter and the buttermilk turns to water until there will not be one-half gallon of milk left out of a churning of two and one-half gallons. C. M. P.

A.—Set a sample of milk from each quarter of the udder in bottles that have been sterilized by boiling. Label the bottles so that the source of the contents of each may be known. In that way you will be able to determine if one quarter of the udder is to blame or if all the milk becomes similarly affected. You may find that the milk in the sterilized bottles remains sound showing that bacteria in the milk utensils causes the trouble. More perfectly scald, cleanse and sundry the utensils, mixing some chlorinated lime or hypochlorite of soda in the washing water. Set the milk in a new, clean place. Cleanse the udder and teats each time before milking. Feed the cow a full ration of mixed meals in addition to grass or hay. Write again, if necessary, when you have made the test suggested here.

FITS IN KITTEN.—My four-months-old kitten was taken sick, breathing rapidly, lying down as though going to sleep, but seemed stiff but in no pain, but was weak. The spells came back the next day when it died. What killed it? C. L. S.

A.—Worms caused the fits which proved fatal. To expel or destroy them in a kitten, give five to 10 drops of syrup of iodide or iron, or of fluid extract of spigelia (pink root) and senna twice daily until the passages become loose. Repeat the treatment in 10 days. Feed milk that is 12 hours old and skimmed in preference to new warm milk for kittens and cats. Allow raw beef or kidney as soon as kittens will eat solid food. The toad would not cause the derangement described.

Comfort's League of Cousins

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 35.)

League Shut-in and Mercy Work for October

"Inasmuch as you have done it unto the least of these you have done it unto Me."

Written references from doctor and postmaster must positively accompany all appeals from shut-ins. Every month brings to me many letters which disregard this simple and necessary rule. Appeals unaccompanied by the references required will be destroyed.

Mrs. Myrtle Gavin, Custer, S. D A widow, weak from a serious operation and other physical ills, and unable to support herself and two children. Clothing for a girl of eleven and herself, as well as quilt pieces, crochet thread and crochet patterns would all help this deserving struggler—and cash would aid most of all. Mrs. Susan Agee, Spencer, Va. Clothing and helping hands are needed to be held out to this old and almost blind woman. Miss Mabel Foster, R. 2, Box 62, Bentonia, Miss. Unable to stand on her feet for twelve years as a result of rheumatism, this appeal comes from a sufferer who needs dimes and dollars to buy drugs and other care for her painful condition. Mrs. Murray H. Cochran, R. 1, Box 17, Buffalo Ridge, Va. With a sick husband, this poor woman struggles along to care for three children, six years, four years and eight months old. Clothing and cash will mean cheer and comfort. Alfred Giulieri, Ferndale, Calif., R. F. D. 139. This is a crippled youth who would be made happy by postcards and letters. It's easy, cousins. Send on the smiles!

Crumbs of cash and of cheer—send on these and more than these to our list of sick and suffering. Here are cripples of heart and body. Help both in your giving. You have a chance to buy joy in this way—and not gasolene and ice cream. Every cent will cancel pain and every word of cheer help a heart.

Lovingly,

Uncle Lisha

Comfort's League of Cousins

The League of Cousins was founded as a means of bringing the scattered members of COMFORT'S immense circle of readers into one big, happy family. Its aim is to promote a feeling of kinship and relationship among all readers.

Membership is restricted to COMFORT subscribers and costs fifty-five cents, only five cents more than the regular subscription to COMFORT which is included. The fifty-five cents makes you a member of the League and gives you an attractive League button with the letters "C. L. O. C.," a handsome certificate of membership with your name engrossed thereon, and the privilege of having your name in the letter list, also a paid-in-advance subscription to COMFORT. You continue a League member as long as you keep up your subscription to COMFORT. There are no annual dues, so after you have once joined all you have to do to keep in good standing is to keep your subscription to COMFORT paid up.

How to become a Member

Send fifty-five cents to COMFORT'S Subscription Department, Augusta, Maine, with your request to be admitted into COMFORT'S LEAGUE OF COUSINS, and you will at once receive the League button and your membership certificate and number; you will also receive COMFORT for one year if you are a new subscriber; but if you are already a subscriber your subscription will be renewed or extended one full year beyond date of expiration.

The League numbering over forty thousand members, undoubtedly is the greatest society of young people on earth.

Address all letters to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and they will promptly reach the head of the department for which they are intended.

A poll of sixth-grade pupils in St. Louis revealed that of 5,376 children questioned 40 per cent. had never seen a sheep, and 17 per cent. had never looked upon a pig. Of every hundred children, 12 had never seen a cow. It has been suggested that a cow and a pig be placed in the municipal zoo.—The Dearborn Independent.

Keep Your Money

BUT SEND FOR HANDY ANDY!

SEE PAGE 28

Let Us Send You THIS Manchurian FOX SCARF WORTH $10.00 $3.95

Silk Lined

Bargain Fur Sale

SEND NO MONEY

for this lovely $10.00 value. Great, big Manchurian Fox Scarf for only $3.95. Most startling offer ever made. Just send name and address and scarf bargain will be shipped by return mail.

ON APPROVAL AT OUR RISK

Every stylish woman and miss should wear one of this season's most stylish and beautiful Manchurian Fox Scarfs with her coat, suit, dress or waist. Greatest value ever offered for this long and silky fur piece. Has natural head and large bushy tail. Lined with extra quality silk and silk ruffle at neck. Colors: Brown or Black. State color.

WE GUARANTEE to refund your money immediately if you can match this wonderful scarf for $10.00. You pay postman on arrival only our slashed Bargain Sale Price $3.95, plus a few cents postage.

Send for Big Free Catalog

BERNARD-HEWITT & CO.
Dept. F6310, CHICAGO, ILL.

$1.00 down!

Balance in easy monthly payments. The 21 Jewel

STUDEBAKER

The Insured Watch

64 Different Art Beauty Cases. 8 adjustments. Buy direct—big savings. FREE BOOK Write today for Book of Studebaker Advance Watch Styles and $1.00 down offer.

Chain FREE! With every Studebaker Watch. Limited offer. Write today.

Studebaker Watch Company, Dept. 5610, South Bend, Indiana

A Business College Course at Home

Bookkeeping — Shorthand — Salesmanship — Civil Service — Higher Accounting. Trained workers earn big salaries. Write for free catalog.

Brown's Home Study School
374B Brown Bldg., Peoria, Ill.

EARN MORE MONEY

selling Lange products direct from wagon to home. Old established house with a big line of tea, coffee, spices, extracts, medicines, toilet preparations, stock remedies and pure food specialties. Sales better every trip. You furnish horse or auto, we supply wagon on easy terms. Our contract beats all others 3 ways. Let us tell you how. 200 more men wanted at once. Write today.

THE LANGE CO., Box A. De Pere, Wisconsin

ACCORDION FREE!

Musical instrument that you can derive a great deal of pleasure from. You will be proud to have this accordion. Just write for 25 packs Post Cards to sell for 10 cts. We trust you.

Jones Mfg. Co., Dept. 818, Attleboro, Mass.

Prices Slashed Wonderful Feather Bed and Pillows

Sleep on It 60 Nights!

Yours to sleep on for 60 nights—a Magnificent Feather Bed, all new, live feathers; Best Ticking. Use as if it were your own. If you're not amazed with the quality and sensational price, return bed to us. Big factories wonder how we do it.

Amazing Bargains in Fine Feather Beds!

Prices Guaranteed Lowest in America. Quality finer than you ever dreamed possible. Full particulars in FREE book, full of astonishing bargains, also SPECIAL FREE GIFTS—nothing ever like it. Send today for Free Book, Samples of Feathers and Ticking. Read our Free Test Offer and $2500 Guarantee Bond. Mail Postal Now.

LEWIS FEATHER BED COMPANY, Dept. 1033, Nashville, Tenn.

Boys & Girls—Earn Xmas Money

Write for 50 sets Yankee Christmas Seals. Sell for 10c a set. When sold send us $3.00 and keep $2.00. No Work—Just Fun!

St. Nicholas Seal Co., Dept. 9, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Feather Beds Delivered FREE

Write at once for Free Big Bargain Book on New Sanitary Feather Beds, Pillows and Feathers. You'll be surprised at our low factory prices. We deliver all goods free and give you 10 days trial. Everything Guaranteed. Before you buy at any price, send a postcard today, get free bargain book and sample of feathers, all postpaid.

AMERICAN FEATHER & PILLOW CO.
Dept. 10, Nashville, Tenn.

Military finish air rifle. Sell 8 Boxes Mentho-Nova at 25c.

U.S. Supply Co. Dept. CO-7, Greenville, Pa.

FREE

HANDSOME 46-PIECE DECORATED FULL SIZE DINNER SET

NO MONEY NEEDED. WE PAY FREIGHT.

SELL ONLY 10 BOXES OF SOAP,

each box containing 7 cakes fine Toilet Soap and with every box, give as premiums to each purchaser all of the following articles; a Pound of Baking Powder, Bottle Perfume, Box Talcum Powder, 6 Teaspoons, Pair Shears and Package Needles, (as per Plan 2351) and this artistically decorated Dinner Set is Yours. Many other equally attractive offers and hundreds of useful Premiums or large cash Commissions.

SPECIAL EXTRA PRESENT—GRANITE SET

We give a 7 Pc. Full Size High Grade Granite Kitchen Set, consisting of Dish Pan, Preserve Kettle, Sauce Pan, Pudding Pan, Pie Pan, Jelly Cake Pan and Basting Spoon FREE of cost in addition to the Dinner Set, if you order promptly. You advance no money. We trust you. You risk nothing. WRITE TODAY for our BIG FREE CATALOG and full information.

THE PERRY G. MASON CO., 127 Culvert & 5th St., Cincinnati, O. Founded 1887.

Don't Wish for a Real Salary—Have One!

Graduate in 8 weeks—50 days—from the Rahe Auto & Tractor School; graduates making $50 to $150 a week; steady work; your future insured. Write today for big illustrated catalog. We pay your railroad fare. Don't let this opportunity slip; here is a successful career within your grasp.

Rahe AUTO, TRACTOR & ELECTRICAL School
Desk 323
9th & Walnut, CINCINNATI, O.
4445 Grand Blvd., CHICAGO, ILL.

FOLDING SAWING MACHINE $21.95
Fitted with Atkins Silver Steel Guaranteed Saw.

9 cords in 10 hours by one man. It's King of the woods. Catalog X8 free. First order gets agency. Est. 1890.
Folding Sawing Machine Co., 1005 East 75th St., Chicago, Ill.

NEW TIRE PRICE 30X3½ CORD $2 GUARANTEED 9 MONTHS AT HALF PRICE

These tires readily give our customers thousands of miles of good service—these are GOODRICH, GOODYEAR, FIRESTONE, FISK—and other well known standard make used tires. The guarantee protects you. Greater service for less money. Satisfaction assured. Order season's supply now.

Lowest Tire Prices in America

	Tires	New Tubes		Tires	New Tubes
30x3	$1.90	$ .90	32x4½	$3.75	$1.65
30x3½	2.00	.90	33x4½	3.75	1.65
32x3½	2.50	.90	34x4½	4.00	1.65
31x4	2.75	.90	35x4½	4.25	1.65
32x4	3.00	1.40	36x4½	4.25	1.65
33x4	3.25	1.40	35x5	4.25	1.95
34x4	3.50	1.40	37x5	4.25	1.95

SEND ONLY $1 for each tire shipped. Balance C. O. D. —subject to inspection if ordered by express. Tires guaranteed 9 months. Another tire given at half price for any not perfectly satisfactory. 10 per cent discount if ordered in dozen lots. WRITE—RUSH ORDERS.
LOW PRICE TIRE CO., Box 724 Dept. 22810 CHICAGO

3000 Mile GUARANTEE at half price

TIRE PRICES SMASHED 30×3½ $2.45

BUY NOW these Goodyear, Goodrich, Fisk, Firestone and other standard make tires slightly used. These tires are vastly superior to used tires you see advertised and the prices slightly more but they are Guaranteed 3000 Miles at half price. You will be satisfied with these exceptional tires.

Greatest Tire Values Ever Offered

	Tires	New Tubes		Tires	New Tubes
30x3	$2.35	$1.30	32x4½	$4.25	$2.05
30x3½	2.45	1.30	33x4½	4.25	2.05
32x3½	3.00	1.30	34x4½	4.50	2.05
31x4	3.25	1.30	35x4½	4.75	2.05
32x4	3.50	1.80	36x4½	4.75	2.05
33x4	3.75	1.80	35x5	4.75	2.35
34x4	4.00	1.80	37x5	4.75	2.35

SEND ONLY $1 as a deposit on each tire ordered. Balance C.O.D. subject to inspection. Order now.
MAIL ORDER TIRE COMPANY
Dept. M5010 1528 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill

Easy Now to Keep Your WINDSHIELD CLEAR in Rain, Fog or Storms.

A mysterious new liquid, which can be put on windshield in 30 seconds and gives a lasting transparent surface, now enables every motorist to see clearly through the glass, regardless of weather. FREE. Simply send name for absolutely free sample.
Alexander Laboratories, Dept. 3. Kansas City, Mo.

ONE MAN SAWS 15 CORDS A DAY
—Easy with the OTTAWA Log Saw! Wood selling for $3 a cord brings owner $45 a day. Write for FREE Book and Special Offer today.
OTTAWA MANUFACTURING CO.,
911-S Wood Street, Ottawa, Kansas.
Room 911-S. Magee Bldg., Pittsburgh, Pa.

GIVEN This Fine 22 Cal. Sure Shot HAMILTON Rifle or Dandy Regulation Size Leather Football. Just What You Need. We give them Free, postpaid, for selling our Fragrant Sachet Packets at 10c each. Send No Money. Just your name & address. We will send you 20 Packages promptly. When sold choose your prize according to our Big Prize List.
CHICAGO SACHET WORKS, 1920 Sunnyside, Dep. 301, Chicago

GIVEN WATCH KNIFE AND CHAIN
Real American Watch, 5 year guarantee, fine case, looks and wears like gold. Just sell 12 boxes Mentho-Nova (Wonder Menthol.) Return the $3.00 and receive watch or choice of 147 premiums free. Address
U. S. Supply Company, Dept. 80-T, Greenville, Pa.

Are You Well Dressed?

Any girl or woman, 15 or over, can easily learn DRESS DESIGNING and MAKING in 10 WEEKS, using spare moments. Designers earn
$40 to $100 a Week
Send Coupon Today
Cut Here
Franklin Institute Dept. C681, Rochester, N.Y.
Kindly send me free sample lessons in Dress Designing and Making.
Name .....
Address .....

In Need of a Husband

By Richard G. Swaringer

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

MOLLY Trexler wrinkled her smooth white forehead in thought as she counted the money she had received from her Saturday sales of milk, butter and eggs, which she had not as yet had time to deposit in the bank. Momentarily she allowed her well-trained mind to wander from business channels, pursing her red lips bewitchingly, as she calculated how many pairs of silk hose this money would buy, or how fine a dress or hat—provided she could afford such luxuries. Then she shook her head and sighed, knowing she could not—yet awhile. Molly was very human, and very feminine.

She sat in her own little office, in her own little house, on her own little farm. All of which had been hers only two years—not long enough for the sense of ownership to have lost all the charm and thrill of novelty. In fact, there were still certain debts to be paid, in connection with the newly built chicken houses and garage, both of which Molly had found necessary in her business. Hence the need for unrelaxed economy, and hence Molly's sigh.

In the parlor, across the hall, Molly's black housekeeper, Geraldine, burst into song at the top of an extremely robust voice. Molly frowned.

"Geraldine," she shouted, "please hire a hall! Or can the music for a while. Stop it! Cease! Desist! I want to think."

There followed an interval of comparative silence; then Geraldine loomed in the doorway, her eyes gleaming white in her black face.

"What'd you say, Miss Molly?' she demanded, with the tolerance of middle age for infancy. "You wants to think? La chile, you thinks too much. You ought to have a husband to do all dis thinkin' for you!"

"Maybe I had, and maybe I hadn't!" snapped Molly. "Anyway, I'll have to think for myself until I get one—if I ever do. So put a Maxim silencer on your mouth until I get out of the house."

Geraldine bobbed, grinned, departed. In less than ten minutes she was singing again as loudly as ever. Not that she meant to disobey; she just simply forgot.

Going into her bedroom presently, Molly exchanged her gingham house and work dress for one more suitable for the social amenities of business; then went out to the garage. Here she backed out the little touring car that she used in both her work and her play, and began loading into the tonneau some carefully packed crates of eggs—the over-Sunday accumulation. Her other servitor, Joshua, husband of Geraldine, was nowhere in sight.

However, when she was almost ready to start, he ambled leisurely into view from somewhere out about the long cow barn. Seeing her, he hurried forward, protesting almost with an air of injury:

"Miss Molly, why'n't you call me? You know you oughtn't do dis heavy liftin'. In fact, you needs a husband to——"

"Josh," asked Molly in a tone of extreme exasperation, "what was it Uncle Bill used to call you when you made him angry?"

"I cain't tell you dat, Miss Molly!" Joshua grinned bashfully.

"Yes, you can too. What was it?"

"Well, den, when he wasn't much mad, he'd call me a 'damn, black, kinky-haided son ob Satan.' I cain't tell you what he'd say when he was real mad!"

"Well, I feel as Uncle Josh did when he was mad with you, and I don't want any more of your advice!" said Molly. "Please remember that. I'm quite able to take care of myself. I have been doing so for two years; and during that time I've made more money than either dad or Uncle Bill ever made in three—even if I have been obliged to spend nearly all of it for improvements. Men are useful to have around sometimes, but as advisers and managers they aren't worth a hurrah in Hades!"

"Dat I should ebber live to hear Marse Bill Trexler's niece say such things 'bout Marse Bill and his brudder—de best men I ebber worked for!" Joshua lamented tragically.

"You're pretty old, Josh, but you'll probably live to hear me say worse than that, if you don't keep your black nose out of my affairs!" Molly took her seat at the wheel and set a vicious foot on the started button.

But the keen air of late autumn made glorious going and soon blew away Molly's grouch. Once away from the farm willed her by her beloved Uncle Bill, she came to where neighbors had gathered their corn and most of their cotton, leaving bare stalks standing in the fields. She passed patches of woods that were bare and drab, save for the evergreen pines and cedars, and an occasional tree with brilliant red or yellow leaves. Pale sunshine sifted between clouds that scurried aimlessly across a pale sky. Molly sometimes pressed her daintily-shod toe hard upon the throttle for the sheer joy of going fast, restrained from showing any real speed only by thought of the eggs in the tonneau.

Drawing into the main street of Maysville, she slowed to a decorous ten miles per hour, as directed by the sign at the edge of town, and proceeded thus to one of the grocery stores where she did business. Here she found a ready market for her eggs and butter, quickly disposing of all she had. Afterwards she drove sedately to the Maysville Savings Bank, before which she stopped.

It was a little after closing time, and the assistant cashier was just emerging from the door. He was young, and tall, and broad; had a red and freckled face; a short, straight nose; red hair; and blue eyes that regarded Molly with frank and friendly admiration.

"Hello, Molly!" was his greeting. "If you had come a minute later, you'd have been too late. All the others went home about five minutes ago, leaving me to lock up. Want to deposit—or borrow?" he asked teasingly, opening the door of her car and holding out a hand to help her to the sidewalk. And Molly did not object! For all her self-sufficiency, she did not mind being waited on—by some folks.

"Deposit, of course!" she answered.

"You're quite a business woman, aren't you?" admired Mark Lane, her friend since childhood, as he led the way into the bank. "That farm of yours must be paying handsomely."

"I'm doing fairly well, I guess," Molly owned conservatively. "But I'd do better if everybody who owes me would pay up. I've got to try to collect some this afternoon from H. Green and Company. I never saw such hard people to get money from!"

"Green's closer than the bark on a tree," sympathized Mark. "You ought to——"

"Don't tell me I ought to have a husband!" exclaimed Molly, pouring more of her troubles into Mark's willing ears, as she usually did whenever she had a chance. Somehow she always found him her most understanding and sympathetic listener. "I've heard that until I'm sick of it. Yesterday afternoon I drove over to see dad and mama, and told them about some of the difficulties I've been up against, naturally craving a little sympathy and encouragement. Well, they sympathized with me, all right! They said a girl shouldn't try to make her way alone, and I ought to have a husband to take care of me! Today Joshua and Geraldine have been harping constantly on the same theme. It's growing unbearable!"

"I wasn't going to say that." Lane assured her promptly. "It seems to me that you're getting along mighty well without being burdened with a husband. Besides, I don't think anybody ought to marry for convenience, or anything else but love. I was going to say you should quit selling to Green until he pays you."

"I haven't sold him a thing in three months," said Molly. "He's been owing me longer than that."

"Well, I wish you luck," said Mark. "What are you going to do after you see Green?"

"I guess I'll drive around an hour or two, as I won't have any work to do until feeding and milking time."

"Have you any objection to good company?" he asked modestly.

Molly replied that she had not; and Mark said that, as soon as he had finished locking up and mailed some letters, he would join her at H. Green and Company's store. He counted her money and entered the amount in her pass book. After which Molly went out, got into her car and drove away.

* * * * * * *

Entering the store of H. Green and Company, some minutes later, she was received by Mr. Green civilly but not cordially. He knew what she had come for, without being told. Mr. Green was a short, heavy-set man, between thirty and thirty-five years of age. In spite of the autumnal sharpness in the air, he had his shirt sleeves rolled up to the elbows, revealing hairy and muscular forearms. In his broad and florid face his little eyes gleamed greenish-gray and shifty.

"Mr. Green," Molly began pleasantly, "I'd like to get your account settled and off my books. Can you pay all or part of it today?"

Green's sound teeth gleamed in an oily smile. "Well, now, Miss Trexler, I don't see how I can, just at present," he answered. "I owe other debts too, you see, and business is dull. I'm sure nobody wants to do the right thing any more than I do. But when a man can't pay, he can't; and that's all there is to it."

"Don't tell me you aren't making money!" Molly's long-suffering patience had worn so threadbare that it no longer sufficed to veil her natural irritation. "You bought a delivery truck last week—and you had to pay cash for that, as I happen to know!"

"Sure!" Green shrugged with ill-concealed insolence. "A one-man store like mine is simply forced to keep making improvements, or the big fellows will drive me out of business. And if my business fails, I'll never be able to pay my debts. You should give me a little time."

"Time?" sniffed Molly. "I've already given you more time than you had any right to expect. I can't pay my bills that way, and don't try. I'm going to deal honestly by everybody, if I go to the poorhouse doing it!"

"Don't say I'm not honest, Miss!" snarled Green. "If you and some others don't stop pushing me, you may never get anything. You can't squeeze blood out of a turnip, you know."

"I can sue you!" Molly retorted hotly.

"Don't do that, Miss Trexler," Green urged, with a covert smile of scorn. "It would simply put us both to a lot of expense—probably cost you more than the fifty dollars I owe you."

"Then pay me!" said Molly furiously. "You know you have the money, or can get it!"

"Young lady, if you were a man, I'd call you a liar!" said Green with equal rage. "So you may draw your own conclusions as to what I think!"

His back was towards the door, else he would never have said it. There was not the courage in his measly soul to face the red hair and blazing blue eyes that were entering. Mark Lane strode forward, seized Green by the shoulder and spun him around viciously. Then he began shaking a red and hairy fist within three inches of the storekeeper's nose.

"Green, you may thank your stars that you're a lucky man!" he said in a tone of restrained fury. "I thought of killing you at once. But there would be little satisfaction in that, for then you couldn't make the apology you're going to make. Begin!"

Shaking with mingled rage and fear, Green began. When his ample apology was finished, Mark Lane said:

"Now pay Miss Trexler what you owe her!" And Green went to the cash register, where he counted out fifty dollars. "Add ten per cent interest," Lane directed tersely. "Five dollars more."

"She can't charge ten per cent. for three months!" yelped Green. "It's illegal plain robbery! I won't pay it!"

"You'll pay either her or the doctor!" Mark began drawing off his coat. "Furthermore, as you know, we have at the bank a note of yours that will soon come due. I suppose you'll want to renew it; but if my influence counts for anything you'll fail to do so, unless you do as I tell you."

"Oh, all right!" With a glance that was fairly murderous, Green took out another five-dollar bill and handed it to his tormentor.

"But I don't want that!" protested Molly. "I want only what's due me."

But the dawning light of hope in Green's face was quickly eclipsed in disappointment; for before his eyes Mark struck a match and burned the bill to ashes.

"To teach you it doesn't always pay to disregard the Golden Rule, even when dealing with women!" said the young man, eying the storekeeper with cool contempt.

Then he and Molly turned and strode out into the street.

Molly was a little surprised when Mark took the wheel of her car, without so much as a "by your leave"; but she did not resent this usurpation of her rightful place and authority. Molly was almost disturbingly conscious of a new respect for the young man by her side. Somehow it now seemed altogether right and natural for him to assume the leadership.

Mark followed the street until it changed nto a smooth and well-kept highway winding its way among fertile, rolling farms and occasional patches of wooded land. For a number of miles no words passed between them, each being busy with thoughts that as yet required no utterance.

But at length Mark turned into a rough stretch of unimproved road leading through one of the few bits of original forest left standing in all their county. Where the trunks of mighty pines reached like cathedral pillars to a green canopy overhead and a kind of sacred quiet prevailed, he stopped both car and motor.

"Molly," he said firmly, "you need a husband!"

Molly simply looked at him, saying nothing.

"You need a husband in your business," pursued Mark. "Still, I'm not advising you to marry for business reasons, convenience, nor for anything else except love. That's why I want you to marry me—because I love you! I don't know how long I've been loving you, but for a good many years. Do you think you can ever love me?"

"Certainly, my dear!" Molly told him simply, with shining eyes. "You might have known that sooner if you had only asked!"

Missing Relatives and Friends

For the convenience of its subscribers, COMFORT reopens the "Missing Relatives and Friends" column.

To the readers of COMFORT is extended the privilege of inserting three-line notices in this column if they will secure only one new yearly subscriber to COMFORT at 50c. If you wish to find a missing relative or friend you can insert a three-line notice containing not over 22 words in this column by securing only one new subscription at 50c. If a longer notice is required send one 50c subscription for each additional seven words.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Edgar P. Batten, left home Princess Anne Co., Va. 1907, last heard from July 1920 in San Francisco, Calif. please notify his sister, Elanora Henley, Munden, Va.

Anyone knowing the address of Herb Sedgiwck, last heard of was in Grand Rapids, Mich., please notify I. M. Stinebaugh, Mosquero, Box 145, New Mexico.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of George Hancock (Father), left Van Buren, Ark., 1860 went to Oroville, California to Gold mines, please notify Mrs. G. A. Wilhite, Round Timber, Texas, Route 1.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Arthur Henry Hood, left Birmingham, Alabama two years ago, please notify his sister, Mrs. Maggie Morris, Route 2, Box 207, Bessemer, Alabama.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Mrs. Lucy Fraxelle, who, before marriage, was Lucy Finch, of Floyd County, Va. Last heard of about 25 years ago, and was then living about 20 miles from Baltimore, Maryland, please notify her sister Mrs. Mary Noricle, Reidsville, 104 Montgomery St., N. C.

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of my father's brother Wyet Burt or Jack Burt's family please write to Mrs. Rebecca Hicks, Harrah, Okla., as my name was Burt before I was married.

Anyone knowing the address of Oliver Dolan, last heard from was in Delavan, Minn. please notify Mrs. Alice Barufaldi, Keystone, Box 69, S. Dak.

10,000 TIRES GUARANTEED FOR 8 MONTHS

These are Goodrich, Goodyear, Firestone, Fisk and other best known standard-make tires. All slightly used, but readily give our customers thousands of miles of splendid service.

30×3½ $2.00
ANY OTHER SIZE $2.95

The greatest tire values ever offered. Thousands of satisfied customers.

Beat These Prices

You could never even equal these prices. Send only $1.00 for each tire shipped. Balance C.O.D. Express shipments sent subject to inspection. Tires guaranteed eight months. Another tire given at half price for any not perfectly satisfactory. 10% discount when ordered in lots of 12 or more.
UNITED FINANCING SYNDICATE Dept. J644, 1626 South Wabash Avenue CHICAGO, ILL.

NEW TIRE GUARANTEED 30X3½ CORD $2.00
ACT NOW
WRITTEN GOLD BOND GUARANTEE WITH EACH TIRE

Greatest tire sale in America now on! Goodyear, Goodrich, Firestone, Fisk and other fine makes of tires going at record-breaking prices. These almost new tires will easily give thousands of miles of satisfactory service.

OUR PRICES DEFY COMPETITION

	Tires	New Tubes		Tires	New Tubes
30x3	$1.90	$ .90	32x4½	$3.75	$1.65
30x3½	2.00	.90	33x4½	3.75	1.65
32x3½	2.50	.90	34x4½	4.00	1.65
31x4	2.75	.90	35x4½	4.25	1.65
32x4	3.00	1.40	36x4½	4.25	1.65
33x4	3.25	1.40	35x5	4.25	1.95
34x4	3.50	1.40	37x5	4.25	1.95

Just send $1.00 deposit for each tire ordered. Balance C. O. D. subject to inspection. Our written gold bond guarantee with each tire positively assures you eight months satisfactory service or another tire will be given at half price. Shipment made same day order is received. Order today—NOW.
INTERNATIONAL TIRE CORP.
86 EAST 14th STREET CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

CORD TIRE SALE

10,000 Mile Guarantee 30X3½ $6.95

PRICES SLASHED

on these Cords—the tire that gives 10,000 miles satisfactory service. All tires offered in this sale are brand new treads. Cut your tire costs by these excellent tires at low prices. GET 10,000 MILES.

SEND NO MONEY ALL OUR CORDS shipped C. O. D. Take tire home and examine it; if it isn't the best buy you ever made, return the tire and get all your money back.

Size	Cords	Tubes	Size	Cords	Tubes
30x3	$6.15	$1.03	34x4	$11.95	$1.95
30x3½	6.95	1.25	32x4½	13.75	2.00
32x3½	8.95	1.55	33x4½	14.45	2.10
31x4	9.95	1.65	34x4½	14.95	2.25
32x4	10.75	1.75	35x4½	15.45	2.50
33x4	11.25	1.90	36x4½	15.95	2.50

Order now. 5% discount for cash with order
GEM RUBBER CO., 1315 S. Oakley Blvd. Dept. 571, Chicago, Illinois

NEW TIRE POLICY 30X3½ CORD $2.00
Legal Binding Guarantee with every tire.

Tire Values Smashed Tremendous sacrifice—big end-season sale. Kelly-Springfield, Goodyear, Fisk—only the best—almost new demonstrator tires—good for thousands of miles—guaranteed—unheard of prices.

	Tires	New Tubes		Tires	New Tubes
30x3	$1.90	$ .90	32x4½	$3.75	$1.65
30x3½	2.00	.90	33x4½	3.75	1.65
32x3½	2.50	.90	34x4½	4.00	1.65
31x4	2.75	.90	35x4½	4.25	1.65
32x4	3.00	1.40	36x4½	4.25	1.65
33x4	3.25	1.40	35x5	4.25	1.95
34x4	3.50	1.40	37x5	4.25	1.95

Compare prices—then ACT—orders shipped day received. Examine these practically new tires. Send deposit of only $1. for each tire ordered. Balance C. O. D. subject to inspection. Also a binding guarantee goes with each tire and insures nine months' wear or another tire at half price. Don't wait. You can't lose. ORDER NOW.
INTERSTATE TIRE COMPANY 71 E. 14th St. Chicago, Ill.
GUARANTEED 9 MONTHS

FORDS run 34 Miles (on Gallon of Gasoline)
Low Gear Seldom Used
With Air-Friction Carburetor

And we guarantee all other cars nearly double present mileage, power and flexibility, make hills on high formerly difficult on low. Models for any car, truck, tractor, marine or stationary engine. See wonderful mileage guarantees—on gallon of gasoline for other cars. Makes old cars better than new.

Ford	34 mi.	Reo	24 mi.	Chevrolet	22 mi.
Buick 4	30 mi.	Chalmers	23 mi.	Maxwl (25)	30 mi.
Buick 6	24 mi.	Olds. 6	23 mi.	Nash 6	23 mi.
Hudson	20 mi.	Paige 6	20 mi.	Lincoln 8	17 mi.
Hupp	25 mi.	Oakind 6	24 mi.	Stdbkr Lt 6	23 mi.
Dodge	28 mi.	Overl'd 4	32 mi.	Cole 8	17 mi.

If your car is not mentioned here send name and model for particulars and our guarantee on it. AGENTS WANTED.
SENT ON 30 DAY'S FREE TRIAL
You can drive any car in heaviest traffic without shifting gears. Starts off on high in any weather without priming or heating—no jerking or choking. No more foul spark plugs or carbon in cylinders. No leaking of gas into crank case. Try it 30 days on our guarantee of money back if not entirely satisfied. No strings to our guarantee. YOU ARE THE JUDGE. Anyone who can handle a wrench can attach it. Write today. New holes or changing of operating mechanism. Write today.
AIR-FRICTION CARBURETOR CO. Dayton, Ohio, U. S. A.
496 Raymond Bldg.

Learn Electricity Free Railroad Fare. Great Shops of Coyne. Complete in 8 1/2 months. Entertime. Special limited offer. Earn your way. Drafting—Radio free. Send for big FREE Catalog!
Coyne Electrical School, Dept. 3787
1300-1310 W. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

"Virtue itself offends when coupled with forbidding manners."—Bishop Middleton.

Through the columns of this department free information pertaining to Etiquette, Personal Appearance and kindred subjects will be given in answer to questions by our subscribers, but not more than two questions the same month by any one subscriber. Address Etiquette Editor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine, and give your own full name and address. Name will not be published.

L. K., Bowling Green, Fla.—A girl of fifteen, who is five feet, four inches tall, should weigh 118 pounds It should always be understood, however, that despite tables of "ideal weights" which may be compiled, the size of the bony framework of the body needs to be always taken into account in establishing a properly pleasing plumpness. These who are large-boned usually require a covering of more flesh to establish a form of good contour lines than those who may be finer-framed and smaller-boned.

M. C., Eagle Rock, Va.—The act of registering at a hotel consists in signing one's name and home address in the hotel register—a book which is open on the desk before the clerk, who will indicate to you where you should sign. (2). A person asking a blessing at a family table does so, most properly, with lowered head, closed eyes, and using a low but distinct level of utterance. The following is a form much in use: "Lord, bless this food to our use and ourselves to thy service We ask it in Christ's name; Amen."

A. P., Shelbyville, Tex.—You are correct in thinking you have learned through observance that there is no clearly established ruling of etiquette concerning a lady or a gentleman going first in the circumstances you outline We personally believe it the best and most sensible form for the gentleman to lead the way to any table or seat—following, however, any preference which may be voiced by the lady he may be escorting.

L. J., Cameron, Tex.—It is possible that red hair and freckles might interfere with marriage, although we have seen many much-freckled and red-haired brides But we assure you this type of coloring would not change a choice of wedding gown—which should always be, in the case of a girl bride, of white, cream or ivory silk or satin. (2). Certainly it is correct and courteous for you to ask this boy into your house after he has brought you home. Common sense as well as etiquette would dictate that such an invitation would not be given nor expected if the hour was one late at night.

BRUNETTE SMILES, Oklahoma.—You may keep on smiling so far as your weight is concerned, for your 115 pounds is almost exactly correct for your height of five feet, three inches. See reply to L. K., Bowling Green, Fla., in this issue.

I. D., Dunn, La.—At this shower you may wear any gown which would be correct for afternoon wear at the time of year the affair may be given. Do not attempt to gown yourself too elaborately on such an occasion. At the close and before your friends make their farewell, you might say a few words of appreciation. This is best done by expressing your thanks for their kind and generous thought of you and their wishes for your happiness Let what you say be short, simple and sincere with smiles.

G. N., Southbridge, Mass.—At a second wedding few, if any, of the customs of the wedding of a girl bride prevail. It is considered best that there be no white gown, no veil, no flower girls, maids of honor, bridesmaids, etc. One intimate friend of the bride may, however, serve as an attendant at such a second ceremony and precede the bride to the altar. Such an attendant may stand a little to the side and in the rear of the bride during the ceremony Both the bride and her attendant may wear costumes correct for street wear. Being present would constitute the chief duties of such a wedding attendant, although she should be watchful and ready to assist the bride in any way possible concerning her gown, appearance and her entrance and exit from the church. A second bride should be careful to remove the rings of a first husband from her hand before appearing at the marriage altar for a second time.

UNHAPPY GRAY EYES.—Whether you should write this man you have once refused to marry such a letter as you describe, would depend entirely upon your knowledge of how devoted he may still be to you, and whether or not you feel you could marry him and be happy, when your own affection for him is admittedly slight. You must consider these things well and decide yourself. Marriage is a serious matter and deserves serious treatment. To marry where love is only on one side is a questionable matter. Personally we doubt the success of the experiment, although you may have respect for this former suitor which you could develop into affection. You must remember that he would know himself as a "leftover" and second-choice, which might affect his feeling toward you. But as for the propriety of your writing him at all, we say that you can certainly do this if you think best. Your former close friendship and his expressed desire to marry would sanction your frank treatment of the present situation. Write to him, if you think you could marry him and be happy. If not; rest silent and wait. You are only nineteen and can afford to let your present grief dwindle and some new joy grow.

WOULD KNOW, Tennessee.—When this boy is introduced to you, offer your hand, with a bow, a smile and a simple "how do you do." Then let conversation commence as it may. (2) Yes; you should offer your hand in greeting this boy who is a caller at your house

W T., Marshfield, Mo.—Yes; it is the pleasant and correct thing to do to open any gift at once which this young man may bring you when he calls. And thank him at once in simple words. If the package be candy or something of like toothsome nature, it is proper that you should offer this to him for a tasty share.

M. M McA., North Carolina.—The light and flat shades of green, the light browns, white, dull light blue and navy blue, are all shades and colors you might becomingly wear. Because of your high coloring, you would do well to avoid all high or bright shades. Particularly beware of yellow, bright greens or dark pink or red. Wear your hair in any manner that frames your face rather closely and in some way would lenghten your profile. If your face is as round as you describe, you should not bunch or puff your hair over your ears in a manner that might increase this appearance of breadth.

BLUE BELLS, West Virginia.—We judge from your letter that your home is motherless. Otherwise it would be your mother's place to suggest the retiring hour to your overnight guest and show him to the quarters prepared for him. As the case stands, this would best be done by your father. Let your father greet him first in the morning you arranging to make your appearance shortly after with additional greetings—and more smiles. Do not think he must be entertained before breakfast. It would be expected that you and the household would be busy at this early time.

BASHFUL OF LOUISIANA.—If you play too many records on your talking machine when you have a caller, you will interfere greatly with the conversation which is not machine-made. We think that two records would furnish enough of this sort of entertainment unless a phonograph should be a distinct novelty to your guest—which can hardly be the case in these days. (2). The calls of neighbors in a rural community need not be governed by rote or formal phrases. When you say your "good-by" after your call, tell your friend and neighbor that you hope you will see her soon and that she "must not stay away too long."

JUST MERLE, Mississippi.—If a boy and girl are good friends and meet at a public gathering of any sort, it makes absolutely no difference which is the first to speak. It would make no difference whether the meeting of the two took place at his home church or at her family's place of worship Possibly you are thinking of a tradition of etiquette which rules that a man, after an introduction to a lady, should wait at a second meeting thereafter to see if she chooses to recognize him and thus acknowledge the acquaintance. However, a man need not hold too strictly to this rule, particularly in small and friendly communities such as we think is yours.

I Will Prove To You That You Can Make

$100 a Week

Yes, you can make $100 a week. You can make $5,000 a year and not work half as hard as you do now. You can do as well as H. T. Pearl, of Oklahoma, who made $750 in one month. You can begin like R. L. Marshall, of New Jersey, who made $80 in five hours. You don't have to wait. You don't have to invest any money. You don't have to take any course or do any studying. You can start right in next week. You can begin at once to make a really big income. The opportunity is waiting. The money is there for you to get. Do you want it? Then read this ad carefully and answer it, for this offer is meant for you.

700 Men and Women Wanted At Once

We are now ready to appoint 700 more Representatives in all parts of the country. You can be one of them, and by simply doing what we suggest you can make a net, clear, cold profit for yourself of anywhere from $50 to $100 a week with very little effort. Your first day will bring you big money. W. A. Webster, of Virginia, made $6 in 1½ hours; Dennis Spear, of Kansas, cleared $8.90 his first day; W. P. Stone, of Maine, made $24 in 4½ hours. All without experience or training and you can do as well, or better.

Amazing Profits For Easy Work

We are the originators and manufacturers of Zanol Products—the nationally advertised line of pure food products, toilet preparations, soaps, perfumes, household and laundry necessities—over 350 different kinds. Four million dollars worth were bought last year but none of these products are sold in stores.

We sell direct from factory to customer. By this means we give greater values and lower prices than could be secured in stores. We have thousands and thousands of customers in every section of the United States. But instead of sending their orders direct to us we appoint a Representative in each locality through whom our customers send us their orders.

Exclusive Territory

We offer to assign you an exclusive territory and let you handle all our dealings with our customers in that territory. You will simply introduce our products and let the people know that you have become the Zanol Representative. The rest is easy. Our products are nationally advertised and well known in every locality. We have been in business for 16 years and have resources of more than a million dollars. The local man or woman who becomes our Representative is given complete instructions, full equipment and everything necessary for success.

Your Profits Will Begin At Once

These records show you how our Representatives make large profits the first day. You can easily do as well.

$16 Profit First Day

That's the record of Alyse Leblanc, of Massachusetts.

$32 Profit in 8 Hours is the result of the first day's work of Adolph Montoya, of New Mexico.

$4 in One Evening is pretty good pay for 2 hours' spare time. That is what Samuel Miles, of Arkansas, made his first day.

$13 Profit First Afternoon

Jacob Myron, of Connecticut, started in the morning and cleared over $13 before evening.

$4 an Hour was what Margaret La Roux, of Michigan, averaged her first afternoon.

$40 in 24 Hours was the result of the first work of B. Collander, of Massachusetts.

More Than a Million Dollars Made By Our Representatives In 8 Months

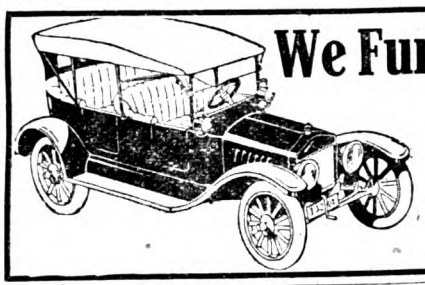
If you want your share of these big profits all you need do now is write. You won't believe how easy it is nor what wonderful profits you can make until you get started and the money begins to roll in.

We furnish all of our people with complete equipment for doing business. We furnish it free. We tell you in detail exactly what to do. We make it easy for you. We help you in every way to get started quick and to make big profits without waiting or delay.

You will be given the same proposition that has brought thousands of dollars in cash to E. S. Shelly, of Pennsylvania; Mrs. Nona Kearns, of Mississippi; Edgar Banville, of Massachusetts; and dozens of others. It has enabled G. C. Henry to make four times as much money as he ever did on a farm and G. A. Becker, of Iowa, to earn more than he did in 22 years in the grocery business.

Send No Money

Just send me your name and I will tell you how to get started. I will give you all the details. I will show you how you can make $100 a week and even in your spare time $8 to $10 a day for a few hours' work. I will show you how you can have a permanent, profitable, honorable, pleasant and fascinating business that will bring in a bigger income than you ever thought possible. It is the one opportunity that you have been waiting for. It is your chance to get ahead. It means thousands of dollars to you. And you are not risking a penny. You are not agreeing to pay anything or do anything.



So mail the coupon. Don't wait until someone else gets in ahead of you. Don't delay until it is too late. Write now.

THE AMERICAN PRODUCTS CO.
Albert Mills
President and General Manager
Dept. 8721. Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mail This NOW

Albert Mills, President,
The American Products Co.,
Dept. 8721, Cincinnati, Ohio.
Please send me, without one cent of cost and without any obligation, complete details of your new plan by means of which I can make from $50 to $100 a week.

Name .....
Address .....
(Write plainly)

We Furnish An Automobile

We want you to realize that this is a high-grade proposition. We want to help you in every way to make large profits and we offer to provide a car without any expense to you whatever. Just write for our proposition. Mail the coupon for details of the plan that will give you this automobile without expense and from $10 to $30 a day in cash.

Comfort Sisters' Corner

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 36.)

their homes would not be happier and they could take more interest and would appreciate wife more.

Wives, wake up, be a sport and admit that we husbands are not always to blame for unhappiness in the home. You play a greater part than you sometimes think

Thank you Mrs. Wilkinson for permitting my letter to escape the waste-basket.

A HUBBY.

Best Ways of Doing Things Around the Home

Stuff pin or needle cushions with hair combings and they will not rust.

Mrs. James T. Wiseman, Forest City, N C.

If your cake frosting seems a bit grainy when putting it on the cake, cut through the frosting, into desired size, while warm then it will not fall from the cake when it is cut for serving.

Add several drops of vinegar to frosting or candy while beating and it will be soft and seldom grainy

M. R. C., Farmdale, Ohio.

Use tie clasps to hold window curtains back. If window is open at bottom, the hem of the curtain can be fastented to the top without causing wrinkles, and it takes only a second to do it.

To remove rust spots on dishes, caused by hard water, put sweet milk in the dish and let it remain until it sours. The spots will then wash off easily

Happy Sister, Richland Center, Wis

Soak lamp wicks in vinegar before using and they will not smoke.—A New Sister, North Carolina.

To prevent the handle of coffee percolator from burning, place a toy kettle, filled with water, directly under the part that is nearest the stove.

A small amount of cream can be put in a milk crock and made into butter by using a large egg beater.

Mrs. J. V. M., Bussey, Iowa.

Make baby's creepers of crepe and they will require no ironing.

When baking a cake, grease only the bottom of the pan, not the sides.

If tomato plants are tied up to stakes they will ripen faster and have better fruit.—Mrs. H. T. Phelps, Tenney, Minn.

Jelly for cake filling should be beaten until smooth then spread between the layers before they are entirely cool.

To keep eggs, add one pint of common salt to one quart of freshly slaked lime, mix well and immerse newly-laid eggs and put in a cool place.

Lola Clark, Gold Dust, Tenn.

For doors that stick, rub a bar of soap over them on top, bottom or sides. Laundry soap is best for this purpose but any will do. This also applies to drawers that stick or do not open easily.

Requests

Mrs. Mickey Reynolds, Brooklyn, 4802 Ave. M., New York. Prize winner for "best" recipe (June issue) leaves November first, by automobile for Dallas, Texas. If COMFORT Sisters along the way will send her a card she will be glad to stop "for a glass of well water and a howdy."

Mrs. Augusta Nicholson, West Liberty, Iowa, would like letter and card shower from the sisters

Would like to correspond with some of the COMFORT sisters.—MISS ELIZABETH SANBORN, Salisbury, Main St., Mass.

MARY WHISENANT, Hackleburg, Ala., would like reading matter.

I should like to receive letters from sisters in Arkansas, regarding homesteading, climate, crops, schools, etc.—MRS. WALTER BOESCH, Murphysboro, Ill.

How to tan hides

I should like to hear from COMFORT readers, near my age, (26) living in Los Angeles or vicinity Miss Winifred McCracken, Los Angeles, 1027 S. Grand View St, Cal.

Poem: "They are Lighting the Christmas Candles All Over the World Tonight."

Songs: "Diving Bells," and "Sociability."

Mrs E M Campbell, Bowers Mills, R. R 3, Mo.

How to remove too thickly spread varnish from linoleum

Would like to get Dore's Complete Bible Gallery with 250 illustrations Please write first Henry Highland, Prentice, R. R. 1, Wis.

Poems: "The Gambler's Wife," "Searching for the Slain," "Bessie and I."

Mrs. W. L. Chapman, Shawnee, 703 N. B'way., Okla.

MISS RUBY BOOTH, Washington, 819 Ingraham St., D. C., wishes correspondents.

The following wish books. Write first as only one copy is desired.

Mrs. L. A. Gove, Hanover, 21½ W. Wheelock St., N. H. "The Belle of Australia," "Tattered Tom," by Alger, The Appleton Fourth reader, used in Vermont schools thirty years ago, and "Meg's Children."

Mary A. Laughlin, Islay, Alberta, Canada, "Mistakes of a Bashful Man."

Mrs. Will Hamaker, Pottsville, Ark., McGuffy's Readers, 3rd, 4th and 5th.

Mrs. Anna Lindsay, Dunnellon, Florida. "The Lives of the Lindsays," by the late Earo of Crawford.

Sisters' Circle Pin

Free! EVERY COMFORT Sister should wear this beautiful Sisters' Circle Brooch Pin—the one and only official Sisters' "badge" of membership, uniting in one grand Circle of friendship and love the thousands of COMFORT Sisters living in all parts of the world. It is the size of a 25-cent piece, gold finished, and the front is inlaid with handsome cloisonne enamel in two colors—your choice of red or blue—with the words "COMFORT Sisters" deeply embossed, as shown in the illustration.

If you are a COMFORT Sister, send us only one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50c and we will send you a Sisters' Circle Pin free and prepaid. Or, if you prefer, you may send 50c to pay for a one-year renewal (not your own), and we will send you the Pin free. Be sure to mention color wanted. Reward No. 8671.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

MAKE MONEY AT HOME

We want Men & Women to represent us everywhere. Make Big Money in your Spare time. No Canvassing. Experience Unnecessary. Be first in your territory. Cash Paid. No Delay. Write today for full particulars and free working outfit.

United Show Card Studio, 245 Dinan Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

FREE TALKING DOLL

SAYS MA-MA

This wonderful doll says Ma-Ma just like you and I. Hold its hands and it walks with you. Over a foot high. Given away free for selling only 25 packages of sachet powder or snap fasteners at ten cents each. We trust you. Send name and address at once to

RAND SALES CO. DEPT. 96
BOSTON (15), MASS.

FINE TONE VIOLIN FREE

We give this regular Musician size Violin with fine Bow and Rosin for an hour or two of your spare time. Write for $3.60 worth of Perfumed Sachet and easy plan to sell at 10c each. Send no money.

EXTRA OFFER Complete Book of Instructions if you order now

JONES MFG. CO., Dept. 815, ATTLEBORO, MASS.

ALL SIX FREE

Ivory NECKLACE, 30 inches long, these 4 lovely Gold plated RINGS and this handsome Gold plated, stone-set PENDANT & NECK CHAIN will ALL be Given FREE to anyone selling only 12 cards of our fast-selling Rosedale Dress Fasteners at 10c per card.

This fashionable Ox Blood Red Persian

WE TRUST YOU!

T. C. DALE MFG. CO.,
PROVIDENCE, R. I.

FREE!

Big, Handsome, Dressed, Sleeping Doll sent prepaid for selling ONLY SIX PACKETS new Highly Perfumed Sachet Powder AT 10c.

This is a Special Offer to introduce our sachet.

We also give Mama Dolls, Walking Dolls, and premiums for boys.

Lane Mfg. Co. Dept. 231,
Mt. Vernon, N. Y.

14 KT. GOLD FILLED $5.95

14 KT. WHITE GOLD FILLED $7.55

Save ½

Save one-half by ordering direct from us. Your choice of either high-grade watch. Octogon or round case. 14Kt. gold-filled 20-yr.-case with 20-yr. gold-filled link bracelet. Full jewel. Stem wind and set. Adjusted and regulated. $12 value, our price ONLY $5.95, prepaid. Tonneau shape 14Kt. White gold-filled, 25-yr. case. Silk grosgrain ribbon, gold-filled clasp. Beautiful white dial. Sapphire crown, 6 jewels. Regulated, adjusted. Fully guaranteed. $15 value, our special price ONLY $7.55, prepaid Order today. Send no money. Pay on arrival. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded promptly.

SUPREME JEWELRY MFG. CO.
Dept. 10241, 434 Broadway, New York

SENSATIONAL SALE
GUARANTEED TYPEWRITERS

Limited quantity fully guaranteed standard make typewriters. Five Days Free Trial. Lowest prices ever offered. Easy monthly payments. Send today for FREE booklet of Valuable Typewriter Information and Special Sale Bulletin.

SMITH TYPEWRITER SALES CO.
299-360 Grand Ave. Chicago, Ill.

BLUE WHITE Luxite Diamond
If you can tell it from a Diamond Send it Back!

$1.97 C.O.D.

1 CARAT RINGS $1.97. Not one diamond in a thousand has the blue, dazzling brilliancy of "Luxite Diamonds." They're PERFECT; few diamonds are! Stand acid and all other tests. Only experts can tell you haven't paid $150.00. High prong Tiffany solitaire ring 14K gold S., guaranteed!

DON'T SEND A PENNY! Send only name, address and paper strip which fits end to end around finger. When ring comes deposit only $1.97 with postman. We pay postage! Money back if not delighted.

Free Beautiful full-size BAR PIN, set with Luxite Diamonds, platinoid finish, free with ring.

GARFIELD IMPORTING CO., 3839 ROOSEVELT RD. Dept. 688, CHICAGO

High School Course in 2 Years

You can complete this simplified High School Course at home inside two years. Meets all requirements for entrance to college and the leading professions. This and thirty-six other practical courses are described in our Free Bulletin. Send for it TODAY.

AMERICAN SCHOOL
Dept. H717. Drexel Av. & 58th St. © A.S. 1923 CHICAGO

MUSIC LESSONS FREE

You can read music like this quickly

IN YOUR HOME. Write today for our FREE booklet. It tells how to learn to play Piano, Organ, Violin, Mandolin, Guitar, Banjo, etc. Beginners or advanced players. Your only expense about 2c per day for music and postage used.

AMERICAN SCHOOL of MUSIC, 15 Lakeside Bldg., CHICAGO

MOVING PICTURE MACHINE GIVEN

Surprise your friends with real movies. Oil or Electric. Sell only twelve 25-cent boxes of Mentho-Nova. Return $3.00, and machine with films is yours. We trust you. Write today.

U. S. SUPPLY COMPANY, Dept. DO-7, GREENVILLE, PENNA.

GENUINE NEW FEATHER BEDS
Guaranteed $6.55 Sanitary

THIS is the greatest Feather Bed bargain of the year. Guaranteed all new feathers. Dustless and odorless. Covered with 8-oz. feather-proof ticking. Full size for double bedstead. Send for details of this special offer. Your name and address on postcard brings free our latest catalog of wonderful bargains in FEATHER BEDS, BLANKETS, PILLOWS and OTHER BEDDING.

PURITY BEDDING FACTORY
401 SPARKMAN STREET • NASHVILLE, TENN.

30 DAY TRIAL

STROP HONE or BRUSH FREE

Let us send this high-grade Razor on 30 days' trial. If satisfactory, cost $1.85; if not, cost nothing. Strop, Hone or Brush FREE. Write today. JONES MFG. CO., 925 N. Lawler Ave., Dept. 248, Chicago.

BOYS and GIRLS EARN XMAS MONEY

Write for 50 sets AMERICAN CHRISTMAS SEALS. Sell for 10c a set. When sold, send us $3 and keep $2.

Neubecker Bros, 961 E. 23rd St., Dept. 22, Brooklyn, N. Y.

We pay $8 a Day

taking orders for New Kerogas Burner. Makes any stove a gas stove. Burns kerosene (coal oil). Cheapest fuel known. Fits any stove. Burns like gas.

Clean
Odorless
No smoke

Easy to get orders on account of high price and scarcity of coal. Work spare time or full time. Write for sample.

Thomas Mfg. Co. B-730 Dayton, Ohio

Her First Gray Hair

By Edward Ettinger

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

SAM left the office very early and headed straight for the barber shop. Haircut and shave? I'll tell the world! Shampoo? I should say! Massage? By all means! Manicure? Ho, what a question! The sky was the limit tonight. O barber, faithful custodian of masculine beauty, our hopes are centered in thee. Perform thy wonders this night. Transform our hero into an Appollo for this is to be the night of nights.

In the subway, Sam held his paper before him pretending to read, but in reality he was mapping out the plan of campaign. Just how was he going to propose to her? That was the momentous question. And when he finally decided upon the best method of attack, he discovered that he had passed his station long ago.

Well, he eventually did get home. Now to don the prescribed uniform. It took him just two hours to get dressed; thirty minutes to get into his evening clothes and, plague take it, an hour and a half to make his tie. Those ties are the limit, aren't they? They twist and squirm and insist upon remaining north and south instead of east and west. Lucky for Sam, he had mastered Spanish as well as English, so he was more fortunate than a great many of us in that he was able to relieve his feelings in two languages. In the end, he resolved to buy a ready-made tie for future occasions.

A taxi took him to the home of Edith Sinclair the lady of his romantic subway thoughts. The two got along very well. There was one point in particular on which they both agreed. He thought she was pretty and she did too.

Instead of finding her alone in the parlor with the lights dimmed, as he had anticipated, he discovered six or eight mutual friends at her home, boisterous and far from sentimental. That was the first blow his subway plans received. He must now use strategic tactics. Boy, page General Joffre.

By skillful maneuvering and dogged persistence he finally did get her alone in a corner.

"For goodness' sakes, Sam," she exploded, "What is the matter with you? You are acting so mysterious tonight. Why are you trying to separate me from the rest and why are you mumbling all night long. Let's sit down. Let's sit down, Once for all break the sad news to me. Did you lose your job or are your shoes too tight that you insist upon sitting in a corner. Say it and bury it."

Now, wasn't that a fine prologue to a proposal? Wasn't that an encouraging speech from the fair lady to lead on the bashful and ardent swain? Sam turned the color of ketchup.

"Well, what is it?" she insisted.

"Will—will you marry me?" he blurted out.

"What"

"I said——"

"Stop! Don't repeat it or I'll faint. What's gotten hold of you? Sam, look at me; have you been drinking?"

What a sweet romantic reply to a proposal. It fanned Sam's hopes with all the warmth of an iceberg. However, he rallied from the cruel blow and gathered his shattered forces.

"Please, Edith, be serious, I mean what I said."

"O, put on another record, please. I've heard that one before. All masculine graphophones play that tune. I'm not thinking of marrying at all. That's final."

"But you can't go on this way forever. You've got to get married sooner or later. It's only a question of time."

"You're wrong. It's not a question of time at all. Time doesn't decide it. Hair does."

"What do you mean by that?"

"I mean just this, the only time I'll think of marrying is when I find my first gray hair and not before. That is my time table for the ship of matrimony. When that gray hair comes, I embark and not a day sooner."

"And until then?"

"I shall be single and live happily. And as for you, forget that you ever proposed to me. Let us remain the same good friends we have always been. You're a good fellow and I like you, but please stop playing mystery dramas."

The next day Sam walked into the office of the president of the company.

"Mr. Talcott," he said, "I've decided to accept your offer."

"When can you leave?"

"Tomorrow on the Pizarro."

"That's fine. I like quick decisions. I'll cable instructions to the bank at Buenos Aires and they will give you every assistance you may need when you reach there. Twenty-five thousand dollars will be deposited in your name. That will carry you along for a while. I, personally, wish you lots of luck, Sam, and I hope you make a success of it. In fact, there is no reason why you shouldn't, especially with your knowledge of the language. Good-by and good luck to you."

There was but one thought in Sam's mind—to get away from Edith. He did not wish to see her nor hear of her. She had hurt him more than she had suspected. That is why he sailed for South America without bidding her good-by. There, with his new work to occupy him, he would forget about her.

And he did too at first. The new branch office which he was organizing for his firm kept him very busy and it did not permit any other thoughts to encroach. One month, two months, three months crept by. The fourth month found things whipped into shape nicely. The office was running very smoothly. He had a little time for himself too. Then, like a thief in the night, the thought of Edith crept in. Heart and Head had a bout every night. And one fine night Heart landed an uppercut on Head and knocked him out of the ring. In the morning Sam wrote Edith a letter.

This was the beginning of a correspondence which lasted for a year and terminated only at his home-coming.

The very first thing he did when he left the boat was to phone Edith and make an appointment to take her to dinner that night. Then he reported to the office and remained there until 5 P. M.

His face brightened up like a spot-light when he beheld Edith. And when he kissed her, O Romeo and Juliet, how happy that man was. He was so deliriously happy, he would even have kissed an old maid with a mustache. After all why refuse to admit the truth? He was head over heels in love with Edith. He took her to the most expensive restaurant in the city, the choicest theater seats, the finest after-the-show-supper. It seemed wonderful to sit alongside of her. She was so beautiful and seemed so pleased to be there with him. There was no other way out of it. He must propose to her again. But this time he would not plan it in the subway.

"Edith," he said as he took hold of her hand in the taxi on their way home, "it's been a wonderful evening for me. I haven't been so happy for months." He pressed her hand. "I like you."

"That's why we can be such good friends," she replied. "We are so much alike. You like me and I like me. See the similarity?"

He laughed.

"I've had a splendid time, Edith. It was certainly worth coming home for. I must repeat it. I'll be over tomorrow and we'll go out again."

"But Sam, I can't. I have made another engagement for tomorrow."

Like a blow between the eyes, her words stunned him. She noticed it immediately.

"Don't look that way Sam. It isn't my fault. How was I to know that you were going to take me out both Saturday and Sunday."

"Yes, I suppose you are right," he muttered dejectedly. "I should have gone into detail and told you every little thing I intended doing. Of course I corresponded with you for a year so that I might have the extreme pleasure of taking you out on the day I arrived and that would be all."

"O, don't be a cross patch, Sam. I made the engagement a week ago and I can't break it now. He's so handsome."

During the rest of the journey Sam sat in silence. Edith, feeling a bit sorry for him, leaned closer and kissed him. As if that was sufficient balm for the pain she caused!

On a Monday, one week later, Sam called her on the phone.

"It's three o'clock now," he said, "and I'm leaving for Cleveland at five. If you don't mind I'd like to come over and see you for a while. Then we'll take a cab and go down to the station and you'll see me off."

"O dear, please don't come. I was out so frightfully late last night I really haven't got out of bed yet. I'm so tired and sleepy. I'm a sight now and not fit to look at. I'm very sorry Sam."

"I'll give you thirty minutes to get dressed."

"Please Sam, I detest being rushed. Besides I'm too lazy to get dressed. I'm so sorry but I feel out of sorts today. I'll say good by over the phone. I hope you have a pleasant——"

He slammed the receiver on the hook.

"Sam, Sam," she cried into the phone, "Sweetheart."

But he was gone.

It takes a sudden jolt to bring some of us to our senses. And so with Edith. It was only in that moment that she realized how much she loved Sam. She was repentant. What a fool she had been to trifle with so fine a love. She sank into an armchair and cried. Cried because she had treated him so shabbily. Cried because she loved him. Cried because she had side tracked him for Mr. Lewis. That horrid Mr. Lewis whom she first thought was so handsome and discovered was nothing more than a hundred per cent. conceited puppy who wouldn't even admit that she was pretty.

There was but one thing to do. She must write Sam and apologize. She must take the matter in her own hands. She must make a fresh start and love him as he deserved.

In the meanwhile, she might do well to powder her nose which had gotten red because of the crying. She walked over to the mirror to perform the operation. She looked at her reflection. Horror of horrors! Was it possible? She looked closer. It was a gray hair. Her first gray hair. She wondered; was that what made her so tired and restless? O, if Sam were only here to take her in his arms. He loved her and would comfort her. And how happy she would be to find herself in his embrace.

In the morning she telephoned to his office and inquired for his Cleveland address.

She sent him this brief letter.

Sam dear:

I have found my first gray hair.

Edith.

Surely he would remember the conversation they had that eventful evening when he had proposed to her and when she had been so foolish and answered him so flippantly. That day when she told him that she would marry only when she found her first gray hair and not one day sooner.

She waited a day and then received a reply.

Dear Edith:

I received your brief note and cannot express how happy I was to read it. While on the train I was hoping for just such a letter. So your first gray hair has finally made its appearance. Edith, you've made me very happy by informing me of the good news so soon. After I read your letter, I dropped everything and went right out to purchase a suitable gift for you. I am sending it by registered mail and I hope you will like it.

As ever,

Sam.

"It must be a ring," she said. "He loves me still. Aren't men the fools? But, I do love him now and never will treat him rudely again. I am very fortunate that he has such a splendid forgiving nature. O, Sam, I'm very sorry. I'll make up for it though. I'll be a good wife to you, for I love you with all my heart."

It was only a short while after that the mail man brought the precious package. She opened it carefully for no doubt it was valuable. Nicely wrapped in a number of layers of felt and tissue paper was—a bottle of hair dye.

One of Solon's Achievements

Solon, the great Greek legislator and sage, is credited with having been the first to systematize the ancient methods of leaving one's property to one's heirs.

He laid down the rules according to which last wills should be drawn up, and, in a general way, his principles have been incorporated in the jurisprudence of all nations.

Directions regarding the drawing up of such documents were incorporated in the Athenian code of laws in 578 B. C.

Not until 31 B. C., however, did it occur to anyone that a last will may be amended with codicils. This innovation was due to a Roman senator from whose name the word "testament" is derived. He was Crebatius Testa, and his restrictions upon the extent of codicils, as well as his advice as to their composition, remain to this day the basic principles of all modern laws referring to the right to change one's last will by appending additional passages.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR

Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coil oil).

The inventor, G. C. Johnson, 609 W. Lake St., Chicago, Ill., is offering to send a lamp on 10 day's FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.—Adv.

Keep Your Money
BUT SEND FOR HANDY ANDY!
SEE PAGE 28

WRIST WATCH GIVEN

SEND NO MONEY
WE TRUST YOU

Simply give away 10 lots of pictures with 10 boxes of famed WHITE CLOVERINE which you will sell at 25c a box as explained in our illustrated free catalog of 100 astounding premiums. Extra free Gifts for quick sales. You are trusted. You handsomely. Millions use Cloverine for chapped hands, sores, burns, cuts, etc. Write quick. Be first in your town.

THE WILSON CHEMICAL CO.
Dept. BW16, Tyrone, Pa.

SEND NO MONEY

$4.89

Startling WATCH Offer!

This beautiful high grade ladies' small size, octagon watch, with choice of gold finished link or ribbon bracelet guaranteed gold finish ($15 value). Special advertising price $4.89. Stem wind and set, beautiful case, attractive gold dial, splendid movement, good timekeeper. Sent in Morocco finish, silk lined gift case.

Beautiful Gift Don't Send a Penny Just Write

Just send name, age and local address. Pay postman on delivery our Special advertising Price $4.89. Satisfaction guaranteed. Write TODAY.

THE CHARLES CO.
1440 S. Mich. Ave. Dept. 148, Chicago

$1.97

GUARANTEED WATCH

To advertise our business and introduce our bargain price list of Eight Watches, we will send this elegant guaranteed watch by Parcel Post C. O. D. $1.97 ONLY, nickel silver plated case, stem wind and stem set, genuine American lever movement, fully guaranteed a reliable timekeeper. Give your full P. O. address, box or St. No., and watch will be sent at once. Pay your Postmaster $1.97 and it is yours. Satisfaction guaranteed. Boston Jewelry Co. 39 W. Adams St. B 16 Chicago, Ill.

MEN OR WOMEN CAN MAKE $6 to $36 A DAY

Here's the greatest money-maker ever offered to men and women who are willing to work steadily a few hours a day. For the first time an absolute necessity in every home, auto and business house is offered on the easy payment plan of $4.00 down and $1.00 monthly. Our agents get $1.00 cash on each sale when made and remainder of commissions when payments are made. Live men and women can make as high as 20 sales a day. You can also sell to well-rated business firms on open or charge account. No past experience necessary—we tell you how. We do all delivering and collecting. All you have to do is make the sale and sell. It sells on sight when you tell the price and easy payment plan. Every woman wants one in her home. Every man wants one in his business house and automobile. If you want to earn big money write today for this Plan that has meant increased money for hundreds of ambitious men and women. Write today—there's no obligation to you.

FYR-FYTER CO., 1917 Fyr-Fyter Bldg., Dayton, Ohio

LADIES GOLD BRACELET WATCH GIVEN AWAY!

YOU will be proud to own this beautiful 6-jewelled, 20-year guaranteed gold-filled bracelet watch, complete in an exquisite velvet case. Retails at $15.00, but you can have it

Without Cost to You

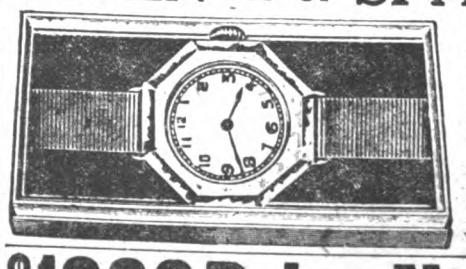
RUSH your name for our free watch plan. Remember, with this plan it won't cost you a cent. Don't delay—write now.

HOME SUPPLY CO.
131 Duane Street Dept. 218,
New York City

ESMARALDA or, the PARSON'S DAUGHTER

By LIBBIE SPRAGUE PHILLIPS.

SPECIAL SALE PRICE with a six (6) months' subscription to THE ILLUSTRATED COMPANION ONLY 25 CENTS.



"Mack grasped the insane woman just as she jumped."

This book is teeming with humor, pathos, and romance. All will admire the noble character of "Esmaralda." Mrs. Phillips portrays the story as no other could. It is a wonderfully fascinating love story, with thrilling adventures. It deals with a light hearted, gay but pure girl who gets into all sorts of trouble through the gossiping of the parish people. Because of her the Pastor nearly loses his church, when at a critical moment Esmaralda becomes the heroine of the hour and the slanderers discover their error to their own shame. It holds the reader entranced from start to finish. The book is in good clear type with illustrated covers. Libbie Sprague Phillips writes exclusively for ILLUSTRATED COMPANION; has done so for 15 years. One minister has furnished it with sermons for 18 years; other writers have contributed regularly for years. THE ILLUSTRATED COMPANION is 46 years old. The years of continued service shows that our magazine is one of real standard worth. We know you will enjoy reading it. THIS OFFER of magazine 6 months and book for 25 cents is made to get new subscribers. Book without paper, 12 cents. Address

F. B. WARNER CO., Dept. F C, 90 Chambers St., New York

One reason corn has lodges so badly is that the corn is afflicted with a root disease which causes it to go down even in a slight storm. Experiments have shown that this disease is transmitted at least partly through the seed. The United States Department of Agriculture urges that seed be field selected from healthy stalks.

GIVEN FOR BIT OF SPARETIME WORK

Don't envy the girl that has one, go her one better by owning this wonderful Pearl bracelet watch. It's yours without a penny of expense, for just a little of your spare time given to us. Ten year guaranteed Mother of Pearl, gold trim, newest model, fitted reliable imported cylinder movement, gold dial. Silk ribbon bracelet with gold clasps. In fine velvet lined box.

This wonderful watch is yours for a little help in introducing 30 packages of our exquisite colored border Ladies' Sanitary packed handkerchiefs, at introductory price of for 25c. Write at once for six packages and plan. No money required.

VERMONT SALES CO., Box 45, Orleans, Vt.

$1000 Prize Novel The Great Fiction Sensation of 1923, for 15cts

THE PATHFINDER, the popular national weekly magazine with over half a million subscribers, has made another ten-strike in securing serial rights to the $1000 Pulitzer Prize Story, "One of Ours." Willa Cather, concededly the foremost living woman novelist, has put so much of love, adventure, realism and excitement into this gripping, fascinating tale that hundreds of thousands are being sold in book form at $2.50. This story will cost regular readers of THE PATHFINDER nothing, but new trial subscribers may also have this complete prize novel by sending in applications at once, with 15 cents. Besides this complete prize novel these 13 issues of THE PATHFINDER will contain many short stories, up-to-the-minute interpretations of what is going on all over the world, and many other absorbingly interesting features that will keep the whole family informed and entertained for three months. "One of Ours" begins at once and as it will be difficult to supply back numbers your order, with 15 cents, should be mailed promptly to THE PATHFINDER, 426 Langdon Sta., Washington, D. C.

"One of the best pieces of fiction writing that has been done in America. We are almost prepared to say that "One of Ours" is that Great American Novel which has been so long in coming." New York Globe.

TRAP FOR Taylor
BEST FOR FIFTY YEARS

Headquarters for North American Furs.
Big Trapping Season Ahead. Get Ready Now!

Be Taylor Equipped Save Money

If you need Traps, Baits, a Smoke Torpedo, Shot-Gun, Rifle, Loaded Shells, Ammunition or Trapping Supplies, of any kind, you can get the very best here at lowest prices.

Big 56 Page FUR BOOK Free to Trappers

Send postal for big Catalog and Book of Information. Make money — Deal Direct.

Write Today

F. C. TAYLOR FUR CO.
685 Fur Exchange Bldg. St. Louis, Mo.

OFFICIAL TRAPPER'S GUIDE

VALUABLE BOOK FREE

You cannot afford to be without this free book—tells you the best and easiest way to trap—then the correct way to skin and handle to bring most money and also teaches you how to correctly grade and value furs of all kinds.

We Pay More for FURS and sell Supplies for Less

TRAPPER'S SUPPLY BARGAINS

Don't buy or order any trappers' supplies until you have received your copy of our Supply Catalogue. It contains some real bargains that you cannot afford to miss. Guns, Rifles, Traps, Night and Camp Lamps, Clothing, Boots, Baits and Smoke Pumps—in fact, everything you need on the trap line. Write Today.

Abraham Fur Co.
275 Main Street — 46 YEARS IN BUSINESS — St. Louis Missouri

Get Posted on Furs!

FREE Trapper's Guide
How to Grade Furs; game laws; trapping secrets; supply catalog. Also Market Reports all season.

WRITE TO FUNSTEN

Bargains in Supplies

We can save you money on smokers, baits, traps—everything you need! Get ready NOW for a BIG year. Get your name on our list to keep posted. Write TODAY for valuable helps—FREE.

FUNSTEN BROS. & CO.
894 Funsten Bldg. ST. LOUIS, MO.

The Old Original MIDWEST FUR Co.
MIDWEST IS BEST in the World's Greatest Primary Fur Market
St. Louis, Mo.

Midwest pays quickest and most spot cash for furs—pays you all the money all the time, with no 5% rake-off—gives honest, liberal grading on every fur. Experienced shippers say "Midwest is Best."

FREE: Catalogue of supplies, game laws, fur prices, etc. Write

MIDWEST FUR CO.
422 Midwest Fur Exch., St. Louis, Mo.

SEND NO MONEY FOR THESE AUTOMATICS

LOWEST PRICES IN THE COUNTRY

20 SHOT MILITARY MODEL 32 cal. with Extra Magazine FREE $8.95

25 Cal. 6-shot Blue Steel.....$6.25
25 Cal. 8-shot Mauser.....$11.95
32 Cal. 7-shot Mauser.....$12.95
30 Cal. 9-shot Luger.....$16.25

SWING-OUT CYLINDER
38 or 32.20 Cal. HAND EJECTOR $17.25
32 or 38 Cal. Break-Open REVOLVER $8.25
32 cal. 6 shot HAND EJECTOR $16.25
Brand New Guns Use Standard Ammunition.

Satisfaction Guaranteed or Money Back.
Pay Postman Our Price, Plus Postage.
EDWARDS IMPORT TRADING CORP.
258 Broadway Dept. 420. New York

Where Traplines Cross

A Story of North Woods Trails

By Kenneth Fuller Lee

CHAPTER IV. (CONTINUED.)

IN a moment the voice of the warden, shaking with repressed rage, sounded from a thicket to the left of the trail. "Come in here, Clint, an' see ef you think yer leetle friend would take a crack at you er not."

Clint hustled over to where Dave stood and gaped open-mouthed at the spring-gun, about which the smell of nitro still clung.

"See thet string?" asked Dave. "That cuts your trail 'bout knee-high, an' ef Rags hadn't set it off one uv us would hev ben luggin' the other home by now."

"By God!" gasped Clint, realizing the closeness of their escape. "I'll run that damned dwarf out of this country for that if it's the last thing I ever do."

"Don't jump at conclusions, Boy. Don't go off half-cocked. We ain't got no proof thet Humpy done this."

"No proof! Well, you know damn well he did do it."

Clint was white-hot with rage. He was a'l for going to the dwarf's cabin and charging him with the attempt at murder which had failed only through purest accident.

"Hold on, Son; maybe we can git sumthin' to work on," said Dave. "Thet dwarf would prob'ly come to see what he'd hit with thet cussed gun. Let's hide in the bresh a while an' see ef he don't show up."

Clint gave his reluctant assent, and he and Dave sought a little fir thicket on the ridge which gave a good view of the trail and dam; here they made themselves comfortable and settled down to the slow game of waiting. Hours passed; a fine doe walked by their cover, ears twitching, nose testing the air for taint of man-scent; a vagrant breeze betrayed the watchers, and the graceful doe vanished with a snort of fear. A fat beaver waddled out and sat up on his house in the middle of the pond, gnawing busily at an alder stick. Clint and Dave watched him interestedly. Suddenly the beaver hurled himself from his vantage-point, smacking his tail down on the water in the customary warning to his mates, and ripples widened from shore to shore.

"What scared that fellow?" whispered Clint.

"Shut up," hissed Big Dave savagely. "D'yuh want to scare yer lettle friend out uv here before we get an eye on him?"

Down the trail a bough waved slightly; in a moment a skulking figure appeared, and underneath the brim of an old felt hat showed the furtive features and shifty eyes of Humpy Jean. He crept along the trail, peering to right and left, till he came to the point where the fishl ne was strung across. He paused here a moment, then started in to look at the spring-gun, when Rags, who had been trembling with excitement and striving to break from Clint's restraining grasp, let out a roar and managed to break his captor's hold. Humpy heard the first bellow of rage from Rags, and took to his heels with incredible speed. His canoe was hidden in the edge of the stream; into this he dove headlong and paddled furiously with the current, Rags tearing along the bank after him for some distance before he gave up the chase.

"Well, we know he did it, so let's head for his camp now and meet him when he comes in," said Clint. "We can't let this thing hang in the air any longer. If Peggy knew what had happened this morning she would worry herself sick and I want the thing settled once and for all before we go back to camp."

Dave agreed that prompt action was essential, and hastily consulting his compass he lined a course toward the base of Bald Mountain, where Humpy's camp was located. They had lunch at noon beside a bubbling mountain spring, heating their tea over a tiny fire, taking the trail again immediately. It was nearly dark when they entered the clearing in front of the camp. They kept their weapons handy as they walked up to the door, which they found to be padlocked on the outside. There were no signs of life anywhere; Big Dave found the dead mongrel still lying where it had dropped, and muttered: "Here's some of thet leetle devil's work, Clint!" They noted the broken ribs and the bullet hole through the animal's head. Clint was angrier than he had ever been before in his life.

"Are you game to wait for him Dave? We'll put up a lean-to back a ways in the brush and stay here tonight. Maybe he'll show up before morning."

"I'm good for it if you are," assented the big warden.

They went back a short distance from the rear of the little cabin and hastily threw up a tiny bough shelter, putting in a soft bed of fir tips. After finishing the remnants of their lunch they crept into the little shelter and lay down, Clint telling Dave to try to get some sleep while he watched the camp. At nine o'clock no light had been seen from the cabin. Dave awoke and exchanged places with Clint, agreeing to rouse him at midnight. Thus they spent the night in three-hour shifts, but their vigilance was unrewarded. Humpy had evidently been badly frightened. Probably he realized that they would be watching for him. At any rate, he did not visit the camp during the night.

At daybreak Dave agreed to stay in the vicinity while Clint made tracks for his own cabin to let Peggy know what was going on. "She will be wild when I tell her, but she'll have to know sometime," said Clint, " and I'll bring back some grub, enough to last us a couple of days anyhow."

Dave settled himself to wait, as Clint struck out across country toward Bear Brook. The traveling was through swamp country, and his progress was not rapid; but at noon he found the trapline, and in an hour was back at his own camp.

"Oh, Clint! Where have you been? You didn't tell me you were going to be gone all night, and I've been so worried," Peggy wailed as her husband appeared in the door.

"Has everything been all right here?" Clint asked hurriedly.

"Why, yes. Why on earth shouldn't it be?"

Clint gave her a rather sketchy account of the happenings of the previous day, and told her that he had left the warden watching the dwarf's cabin.

"Do you think he is the same one who clubbed Rags day before yesterday?"

"I know he is. Dave told me that this Humpy Jean would resent our trapping in what he considers his territory, and the tracks leading away from the spring-gun were identical with those I found near Rags the other day. There won't be any peace for us while he is at large, and Dave will arrest him if we can find him. Can you give me a couple of lunches? We're going to run him down today if it is a possible thing."

"Clint, what if he should come here while you're gone? Why can't I go with you?"

"Peggy-Girl, you stay right in this camp and keep that 30-30 where you can reach it. If Humpy Jean shows himself in this clearing—and you can't fail to recognize him—slam the lead to him, and don't stop to ask any questions. You couldn't possibly keep up with us in the woods, and I don't want you taking any unnecessary risks. I'll leave Rags with you."

Stuffing the hurriedly prepared lunches into his pack and giving Peggy a final admonition to stay inside until his return, Clint swung off into the timber and made his way to the base of the mountain, where he found Dave still on the job.

"No one showed up while you were away," was the report from the watcher.

"Then why don't we break into his camp and see what we can locate," suggested Clint.

"I guess, under the circumstances, that we would be justified in doin' that very thing."

Prying up a window they entered the cabin. Inside was a litter of trapping gear, and the place smelled abominably of fish and animal oils. On a table Dave found a partly filled box of 38 shells. "These fit thet dam' spring-gun," he said, putting the box in his pocket; "an' here's the rest of the fishline we found across the trail," he exulted. "Guess we've got all the evidence we need. Next thing's to get Humpy."

During the next two days Big Dave and Clint scoured the surrounding country thoroughly, but failed to find the little man who had so nearly cost one of them his life. Humpy Jean evidently realized that he had been recognized, and decided that his health would benefit by a change of location—for the time being at least.

On the fourth day of his visit, Dave bade Clint and his wife a hearty farewell, assured them both of his friendly interest in their welfare, and added a warning against taking any chances with the dwarf. "Humpy'll be back, you can bet on that. When he does show up, keep yer eyes peeled, an' let me know soon's possible. I've got a bone to pick with that leetle gent, an' Peggy'll feel safer with him out of this neck o' the woods." With a parting wave of his hand, the warden took his departure.

CHAPTER V

Nothing unusual happening for severa days, the trapping went on without interruption. Clint found numerous signs of Canada lynx in the big swamp, indicating that the big cats were planning to be handy to the deer yards which were always located there in winter.

"I know just how to nail a few of those whiskered gentlemen. We'll go over there this afternoon and put out some sets for them, Peggy. First, I've got to boil the traps in cedar tea, and make some boards to stretch these 'rats on, so you can take your 22 and try for a couple of rabbits to use for bait if you'd like to."

"All right Clint, will two be enough?" replied his wife confidently, as she slipped into her hunting coat and tucked the tiny Remington under her arm. Clint laughed. "Well, you needn't top with two if they get to running all over you. They'll keep, you know." Peggy whistled to Rags, and started briskly down the trail along the stream. In an hour she was back with three fat bunnies, shot neatly through the heads; Clint glanced up proudly. "Fine work, Honey Girl, those will do the trick nicely. We'll put 'em out this afternoon, while they are still fresh."

Getting an early dinner, they piled the dishes in the sink to await their return, and started for the big swamp. Clint carried five traps, a coil of copper wire and the three rabbits. Reaching the swamp, they scoured about till they located a broad rabbit-path. Off to one side, Clint fastened one of the rabbits to a little birch in such a manner that its head swung five or six feet from the ground. Taking great pains not to disturb the snow unduly, he then secreted two of the big traps under the hanging rabbit, one on either side. "There," he remarked, "Mr. Lynx will come along the trail hunting for live rabbits, and will see this dead one swinging by the heels. When he comes prowling over to investigate he'll be gawking up at the rabbit, and will probably blunder right into one or the other of those traps. If he does, Good Night Mr. Lynx!"

They made a similar set on another trail some distance from the first one, the fifth trap being set under a big down spruce, where a lot of fresh lynx sign attracted their attention. Here the third rabbit was cut open and pushed far back into a hole among the roots, the trap being secreted in the entrance, covered lightly with dead leaves.

Peggy had brought her repeater. With it she managed to pick up a pair of partridges on the way back to camp. The birds were still very plump, making a welcome addition to the supper bill-of-fare, after being nicely browned in bacon fat. Peggy and Clint washed and wiped the dishes together and put them away.

"Bet you we'll have a Daddy Lynx hung up waiting for us in the morning, Clint."

"Most likely. There's a lot of them in the swamp. If we do, the state pays ten dollars' bounty on them, and the pelt should bring us another twenty. They are higher than ever, this season. When it gets colder and they commence to get really hungry we can pick up a few with deadfalls, using bloody meat for bait." Clint shoved a big stick of birch into the roaring stove. For a short time they continued talking, then climbed into their cozy bunk and fell asleep, while the wind sang through the spruces outside the warm cabin.

Early next morning they ate a hastily prepared breakfast, then taking their rifles, they headed for the big swamp with eager anticipation speeding their progress. The first set was untouched, so they went on to the second, but were disappointed there also. As they approached the down spruce where the third set had been made, a hissing snarl from beneath the snow-laden branches appraised them of the fact that this trap held an unwilling captive.

"Keep away, Peggy, till I see how he is caught," warned Clint, cocking his rifle and stepping cautiously in to get a look at the big, savage-looking lynx. The trap had closed over a forefoot, well above the joint, and the grapple was securely hung up in a mass of tangled roots, holding the trapped animal firmly.

"Do you want to try for some pictures of this brute before I finish him?" Clint asked, pulling away the boughs in order to let in more light.

"Oh, Clint! I'd give almost anything for a good picture of him." Peggy hastily unstrapped the little Kodak which hung at her belt, and came bravely forward. The big cat spat and hissed furiously, but Clint chopped out enough of the dense boughs to allow Peggy a good chance for several snapshots.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 42.)

FREE TO TRAPPERS ONLY

HOW TO GRADE FURS — HOW TO TRAP FURS — STATE GAME LAWS

HOW TO SAVE MONEY ON TRAPPERS' SUPPLIES

Write HILL BE WISE TODAY

Every trapper needs this great FREE book—tells inside facts—HOW TO GRADE FURS—how to trap—how to increase your catch—how to handle your furs and where to ship to get highest prices.

SENT FREE

Together with Catalog of Trappers' Supplies, Game Laws, Official Fur Price Lists, etc. Write us today—get acquainted with HILL BROS.—the old reliable house that pays the highest prices for all furs and No Commission Charged. Use coupon or a postal card will do.

MAIL COUPON TODAY

HILL BROS. FUR CO.
306 Hill Bldg., St. Louis, Mo.

Send me FREE book, "How to Grade and Trap Furs", Fur Price Lists, Supply Catalog, etc.

Name.....
Town.....
State.....R. F. D.....

FOUKE

Fur Outlook Good! ..as the largest direct buyers of raw furs in the world and as foremost outfitters to trappers we urge you to sign and send coupon below for FREE HELPS TO TRAPPERS. Fouke Fur Co., Saint Louis, Mo.

Wants your name and address if you are going to trap or buy FURS

SEND TO-DAY

FOUKE FUR COMPANY
108 Fouke Building, St. Louis, Mo.
Send me new Fouke catalog of latest, best equipment, how to trap, how to grade, game laws, etc. Unexcelled price list service all season, all FREE.

Name
Town
State R.F.D. Box

BLUSTEIN

Pays NEW YORK PRICES for FURS

SEND FOR PRICE LIST

Trappers and Collectors—for big money ship to the big market. A trial will convince you that BLUSTEIN in New York pays higher prices for furs than any other house. No Commission Charged.

FREE Send for latest New York price lists, market news and shipping tags. All sent free. Write today—our prices will surprise you.

David Blustein & Bro.
196 W. 27th St. New York City

CARDS, Dice, Magic Goods, Novelties, Catalog Free D. M. SMYTHE Co., Newark, Mo.

TRAPPERS PREPARE!!

FREE NEW TRAPPERS TREASURE BOOK

Write to-day for free books showing hundreds of useful Trapper's and Hunter's articles at bottom prices. We sell all supplies at cost, send money order, it is the safest. ALL FREE NEW TRAPPING SECRETS, how to grade, game laws, market reports, and shipping tags. GET YOUR NAME ON OUR LIST NOW!

HERSKOVITS ANIMAL BAIT
Guaranteed best on market. Nothing like it. Draws animals for miles. A different bait for each kind of animal. State kind wanted.
$1.00 bottle, postpaid, 3 bottles $2.25

No. 99 $3.98
Winchester Thumb Trigger Rifle
Sure ejecting. 18 in. barrel Walnut stock, take down model, calibre 22, at manufacturers cost. Weight 4 lbs.

KOMPAKT TRAP
Genuine Jump Style Guaranteed Trap
No. 1
Quick action, For muskrat, skunk opossum, mink, etc. A remarkable low price.
97c. Per doz. Wt. 7 lbs.

No. 27 $1.98
Hamilton Rifle
The well known Guaranteed Hamilton Rifle. Shoots 22. Round barrel. every part fully guaranteed. Weight 4 Lbs.

Send for this bargain quick while stock lasts. Postage extra.

W. IRVING HERSKOVITS FUR CO. Inc.
Dept. 5, 109-111 West 24th St., New York

SEND NO MONEY

THE WILD CAT

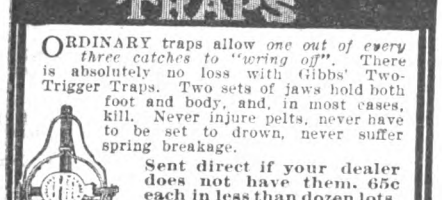
Regular Swing-Out, Hand Ejecting—Left-Hand Wheeler Revolver .22 or 38 Cal. 6 Shot

$14.50

a powerful six shot gun: made especially for Rangers, mountaineers and men working in unprotected places, requiring a safe and efficient weapon. Quick as a flash, with great penetrating power and true marksmanship. Carry this gun with you, and you will feel fully protected. Made of best tube steel, ribbed barrel. Hammer with safety. Fires regular, short and long 32.20 or 38 caliber ammunition. $14.50.

20 Shot Automatic Pistol

$9.50



20 Shot, 32 Cal.

The biggest bargain ever offered. Built of best blue steel, checkered grip, safety. Every one brand new and inspected. Shoots all standard .32 cal. cartridges 10 shot, with extra magazine, making 20 quick, hard and straight shots. Buy several while they last, at our unheard price, $9.50. (Regular $35.) Pocket size, .25 cal. 7 shot $7.80.

SEND NO MONEY Pay on arrival, our bargain price, plus few cents postage. Satisfaction guaranteed, or money back. Order today. NOW.

The PRICE CUTTING CO., Dept. 210, 55 Broadway, New York

ORDINARY traps allow one out of every three catches to "wring off". There is absolutely no loss with Gibbs' Two-Trigger Traps. Two sets of jaws hold both foot and body, and, in most cases, kill. Never injure pelts, never have to be set to drown, never suffer spring breakage.

Sent direct if your dealer does not have them. 65c each in less than dozen lots, or $7 a dozen in dozen lots or over. Prepaid.

Write for Free Folder.

W. A. GIBBS & SON
Dept. Z-2, Chester, Pa.

Lowest Prices in U. S.

Blue Steel Genuine "OWA" 6.45 Only

Send No Money

Break Open AUTOMATIC

WORLD FAMOUS GENUINE "OWA," the only 25 cal. automatic with the break-open feature. Opened and closed with a single press of the thumb. Is accurate and reliable. Highest grade material and Workmanship. Perfect grip, with safety to prevent accidents. Small, compact, does not bulge in pocket. 7 shot $6.45 only, while they last.

25 CAL. Pistol

PRICES on ALL OTHER REVOLVERS CUT to the BONE

WORLD FAMOUS GENUINE MAUSER pistol, 25 cal. 10 shot - - - - - - - - - $11.45

32 cal. 9 shot, reduced to - - - - - - - - $11.85

GENUINE GERMAN LUGER, 30 cal. 9 shot, value $30; our price - - - - - - - - $14.45

MILITARY MODEL AUTOMATIC, just like one used "over there," 32 cal. 10 shot, WITH EXTRA MAGAZINE FREE. Reduced to - - - - - - - - $9.75

All our revolvers shoot American Ammunition.

SEND NO MONEY. Order one of these revolvers today. Stock will not last long at these low prices. New shipment will mean high tariff, therefore, high prices. Pay postman price of gun plus postage on arrival. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

NEW YORK CENTRAL SUPPLY CO.
Dept. S-73, 64 THIRD AVENUE, NEW YORK, N. Y.

20 SHOT 32 CAL. AUTOMATIC SALE 9.25

SEND today sure while they last for this brand new improved 20 shot, 32 cal. automatic of the finest blue steel. 10 shots with extra magazine, making 20 quick, sure shots in all. Double safety. Special at $9.25. Also finest type 25 cal. 7 shot blue steel triple safety automatic priced unbelievably low at $6.95. Both guns shoot any standard automatic cartridge. Money back promptly if Not Satisfied.

PAY POSTMAN ON DELIVERY PLUS POSTAGE

CONSUMERS CO., Dept. 10-BP, 1265 Broadway New York

Davis Guns

THEY "SHOOT WELL AND STAND The Wear and Tear"

Have done so continuously since 1853 (70 years). Prices lower than others of equal prestige. Inquire of all dealers or address for catalogue.

DAVIS GUNS, Dept. DC 10, 90 Chambers St., New York

GIVEN 22 RIFLE

22 Cal. This Fine Sure Shot HAMILTON Rifle or Dandy Regulation Size Leather Football. Just What You Need. We give them Free, postpaid for selling our Famous Art and Relig. Pictures at 10c ea. Send No Money. Just your name & address. We will send you 30 Pictures promptly. When sold choose your prize according to our Big Prize List.

CAIR MFG. CO., 1926 Sunnyside Ave., Dept. 301, CHICAGO

Where Traplines Cross

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE 41.)

"I don't want to injure his pelt. Let me take your 22, Peggy."

"Let me shoot him, Clint! You've killed lots of them, and I never shot any dangerous game in my life," she answered eagerly.

"All right, then. Step around where you can see the side of his head, and give it to him through the ear-drums, low down," advised her husband.

His wife showed that she was capable of following directions, for, with the faint crack of the tiny Remington the big cat wilted forward and died without a struggle. "Poor old cat. You never had a chance, did you?" she remarked compassionately.

"No, and neither do the deer have a chance with these big brutes when the snow gets deep. That shot will very likely save a dozen deer this winter," remarked Clint sententiously, drawing his sheath-knife and commencing to skin out the long-furred feline. "This pelt is in dandy prime condition, how would you like to have it made up into a scarf?" he asked.

"Oh Clint I'd love it! The first really dangerous animal I ever shot, and such a beauty! Would it cost a great deal?"

"No, and you could have it dyed black if you wanted to. They dye lynx a great deal, these days, so that they closely resemble black fox, except that the fur is longer."

"I wouldn't have it dyed for the world," declared Peggy. "That soft gray is lovely, and will go well with 'most anything, too."

"Not much fat on this fellow," Clint pointed out, as he rolled the skin back for a sinewy shoulder; "he's all muscles and cords."

He finished skinning out the pelt and rolled it, fur side out, stuffing it into his pack-basket. Then they circled back to the cabin, finding a mink in one of the blind sets in the stream trail. Clint picked the mink up and put it in the pack with the lynx hide, saying, "We'll get enough for this little fellow to more than pay for making up your lynx scarf, Honey, and that, with the ten dollars' bounty, makes a mighty good day's work for today."

CHAPTER VI.

Big Dave had not been mistaken when he made the assertion that Humpy Jean would certainly be back. Far up on the side of Bald Mountain, in a deep cavern in the rocks, the dwarf was even then planning to rid his territory of those he considered his enemies. He well knew that it was unsafe for him to venture out to the neighboring towns, for Big Dave would notify the officers in all towns within striking distance to be on the lookout for him. For all he knew to the contrary warrants were already out for him, and for the present he was sticking pretty close to his retreat.

In the big cavern, Humpy was equipped with blankets, a skillet and coffee-pot, some bacon and flour, with a few potatoes, beans and oatmeal. It had long been his custom to keep a few necessaries stored here for just such an emergency, his lawless manner of living making such a precaution imperative.

But now he was getting worried. His slender stock of provisions decreased with alarming rapidity, with no means of adding to the fast shrinking supply.

"If it'll jest snow, I'll take my ax and kill me some meat. Big Dave wont stay in here all winter, an' mebbe, later on, I kin even up with that dam' trapper on Bear Brook." Humpy was talking to himself again, and his thoughts still rankled. In his perverse way, he blamed Clint and the warden for his present predicament and his anger ran high. He weighed his chances of sneaking into Clint's camp and stealing some supplies during the night, but came to the immediate decision that it could not be done; "Not with that tarnation Airedale on the job," he grunted savagely.

As he spoke the dwarf poured the last of his coffee into the tin pot, placed the bale over a green stick hanging above his stone fireplace, crumpled up a sma l roll of birch-bark and shoved a few sticks of dried spruce under the coffee-pot, applied a match, and sat back to await the boiling of the pot. He sliced and broiled a little of the scanty stock of bacon, pondering meanwhile a method of getting even with Clint, at the same time obtaining a supply of provisions to tide him over in case he found it necessary to remain in hiding throughout the winter. He thought for some time, and finally arrived at a decision.

"I'll go over on the ridge back of their camp an' build me a lean-to, so'st I kin spy on the cabin. When she goes out with him to look over the beaver sets, mebbe I kin break in an' pick up some grub, lug out some fur, an' burn the dam' critter's camp before lightin' out for the mountain." Humpy chuckled to himself, vastly pleased with this program of thievery and arson, and he at once prepared to carry out his rascally designs.

Unaware that trouble was again brewing, Clint and Peggy were keeping very busy with their line of traps, and their evenings were occupied with the work of skinning and stretching the pe ts of mink, muskrat, fox and beaver. With the exception of the beaver, the skins were cased, being pulled on over stretcher boards with the fur side in. The heavy-furred beaver pelts were pulled as nearly as possible into the form of a drum-head and stretched onto ash bows, so that the dried hide assumed a nearly round shape.

"The beaver will pay us better than anything else we are getting. When the freeze-up comes, I know a set that will land us a lot more of these fat fellows, an old-timer who used to trap for the state showed me how to make it and it's a sure thing. We will chop holes in the ice and drive down spruce poles, then fasten a bunch of poplar twigs to each pole, a couple of feet from the bottom of the pond. The traps are placed under these twigs, and do not have to be covered at all. It is possible to set them to catch the beaver by either the front or hind foot, simply by changing the height of the bunch of twigs on the pole."

"I'll go with you, Clint, and help make the sets, so that some day I can go and look them over when you are busy with something else," said Peggy, pulling a big muskrat pelt on over the board as she spoke.

When their work for the evening was over, Clint took the dozen or more of stretched hides and put them in the storeroom to dry. He glanced at the long rows of covered stretcher boards with approval, and, coming back into the warm kitchen, he said: "We will make a mighty good thing of the trapping if the fur holds out as well as it has been doing. There is right close to five hundred dollars' worth in the storeroom now, and we haven't got fairly started yet."

"Isn't that just fine?" Peggy enthused. "We can make good money later with the spruce gum, too, and in the spring maybe we can buy those camps we've been wanting so long."

That night the cold settled down, trees cracked with the sharp frost, the little streams and pond froze over, only the bubbling springs and very swift places in the brooks remained unfettered by ice. When this happens, trapping becomes much more difficult for the inexperienced, but Clint was capable of doing wel under the changed conditions.

After breakfast he filled his pack with traps, Peggy put up a big lunch, and they started out to make the new beaver sets, planning to pull the old ones and pick up what fur they contained. Rags went with them, frisking and barking with joy at being allowed to accompany the couple. Of late they had been leaving him tied up in camp, as he had been showing a dangerous tendency to run deer, and Clint was afraid that some game warden would shoot Rags if he caught him on a warm deer-trail, this being the law.

The young couple had scarcely disappeared in the timber when a crouched form arose from a clump of firs on the ridge above the little clearing, and came swiftly skulking toward the cabin. True to Big Dave's prophecy, Humpy Jean was back. It was plain that he did not intend to stand on ceremony, nor let his fear of the law prevent him from breaking into the cabin.

Waiting until he was certain that Clint and Peggy were out of hearing, the little miscreant inserted the blade of his ax under a window sash, hastily pried the window up, then casting a backward glance over his shoulder, he clambered inside.

Clint's 30-30, hanging on two forked sticks nailed over the door, caught the intruder's eye immediately. He had to pull over a stool to stand on before he could reach it, and was delighted to find both the chamber and magazine loaded to capacity. Humpy climbed down from the stool with the rifle, which he passed out of the open window, leaning the gun barrel against the logs.

"Now I can take care of myself if he does show up, an' I'll see what else he's got that I can use," he muttered, prying open the door of the little storeroom. "Criminy, this guy ain't no slouch of a trapper. Lookit them beaver!" he went on; "They wont do him much good, though, not if Humpy Jean knows hisself." His keen blade sliced through the thongs which bound the beaver pelts to the ash bows, and in a very few minutes the precious pelts, fruits of a hard month of work on the part of Clint and Peggy, were stuffed into the dwarf's pack-basket. On top of the flat hides, Humpy piled as much bacon, coffee, beans and potatoes as he could walk under, a big ham topping off the pile. He did not intend to starve while he was hibernating in the cave, figuring that he might as well carry off as much as possible, as he intended to burn the cabin with all that it still contained.

CHAPTER VII.

Clint and Peggy made good time to the beaver pond, where they found many of their traps frozen solidly into the ice. "We'll have to do some chopping to get these out, Peggy Girl," said Clint, as he reached for his belt-ax. "Now wasn't that a kid trick?" he ruefully ejaculated, "I've come away and left that ax in camp. Get some boughs and make yourself a comfortable seat, while I hike back and get it. We can't do a thing without the little chopper."

"All right, Clint, but hurry all you can. I'm not comfortable while you are away, with that horrible little dwarf not yet accounted for," his wife answered, starting for a little spruce with her sheath-knife.

"I'm not worried about you, while you've got your rifle. Remember what you did to that lynx!" Clint laughed back over his shoulder as he hustled down the stream trail in the direction of camp, leaving Rags with Peggy. He made a quick trip, and when he came in sight of the cabin was startled to note the open window, and to see his Winchester leaning against the logs underneath it. Working around so as to approach the camp from the side where there was no window, he crept in until very close, then dashed forward and caught up the weapon.

He slid the lever back, noting with satisfaction the brass case of a cartridge in the chamber . . . . . a crash of glass from the opposite side of the cabin came to his ears. He darted swiftly around the corner, rifle poised for a quick shot. Humpy Jean, staggering under the weight of the big pack, was almost in the edge of the sheltering timber when he heard an angry voice behind him: "Stop where you are or I'll drill you. Take off that pack and turn around so I can see your face."

Humpy sullenly did as he was ordered, and Clint walked toward him, with the little gold bead over his rifle muzzle never leaving the thief's chest. A crackle of burning wood caught his attention; turning his head slightly he was dumfounded to see gray smoke filtering between the logs of the storeroom. For a moment he was tempted to shoot the incendiary and robber in his tracks, but suddenly he hit upon a better scheme.

"Get over and climb into that window. Hustle, or I'll bore you through the back!" he ordered sternly. Humpy hastened to obey. Clint set the rifle against the logs and hastily climbed in behind the dwarf, his automatic pistol in hand for use in case his prisoner turned ugly.

Inside the storeroom a pile of dry fir boughs was blazing merrily, on one side the logs had already caught and were starting to burn with the fierce heat inherent in resinous woods. Seizing a big woods-blanket, Clint thrust it into the dwarf's unwilling hands, taking another one himself.

"Get busy now, and smother that fire. If the camp burns I'll leave you in the ashes," he promised savagely, throwing his blanket over the blazing pile of brush and jumping on it. It was the work of a very few minutes to extinguish what would otherwise have been a disastrous fire. With the exception of two ruined blankets and a big hole through the floor, little real damage was done, but Clint still seethed inwardly.

"Well, this makes twice that you have tried to put me out of the trapping game, Humpy Jean. How, you and I are going to take a nice little walk in to see Dave Burns, and you will be charged with attempted murder and arson. Unless I'm greatly mistaken, you'll be put where you can't set any more spring-guns or burn any camps for the next ten years or so."

Humpy did not reply, and Clint ordered him to walk ahead up the stream trail, toward where Peggy waited at the beaver pond. Neither was in a mood for conversation, so they proceeded silently. Clint mad cleaf through, and Humpy trying desperately to figure out a means of avoiding imprisonment. A fallen log across the stream afforded a dry crossing, and here the dwarf went across more slowly than was necessary. Clint started to follow, but as Humpy Jean reached the bank on the other shore, a sudden shove of his foot sent the young trapper sprawling and floundering into the stream. Instinctively he let go of his rifle and struck out for shore, but the swift current carried him down for some distance before he was able to land, and he was disgusted to find that the silent timber had swallowed up all trace of his late prisoner.

Chilled to the marrow, and crestfallen at the loss of Humpy, Clint made his bedraggled way to the beaver pond.

"What happened to you? It took you an awfully long time to get back, and you've been into the water." Peggy was thoroughly excited, and her husband's story of the afternoon did little to reassure her.

"That terrible little beast! He would have burned us out of house and home, and this is the second time he has tried to kill you, Clinton."

"Well, he didn't do it. What's more, he didn't get away with the furs, nor burn our camp, so we've got quite a lot to be thankful for after all," her husband replied soberly.

They gathered up the traps, and started at a rapid pace for camp; Clint was chilled through, and rapidly forged to the front in an effort to speed up his sluggish circulation. Once inside the cabin, a roaring fire in the little stove soon put new life into him, several cups of strong coffee aiding in the process.

Peggy looked regretfully at the mess the fire had made of her neat storeroom, and thankfully at the rescued bales of fur. "It's fortunate that you forgot your belt-ax, Clint. If you hadn't, we would be sleeping under a lean-to tonight, with no furs and no food, either. From now on, I shall not dare to leave camp when you are not here," said the little woman.

"I almost wish I had taken a crack at him when I had the chance," Clint answered.

"No, I wouldn't have had you do that for anything. He is a human being, even if he is bad," Peggy remonstrated.

"He may be, but he's got darn few human characteristics, and fewer human feelings. He'd better not repeat this afternoon's performance if he wants to remain healthy."

TO BE CONTINUED.

$31.50 All Wool Suit Free

The Bell Tailors, Dept. 1437, Chicago, Ill., will make a fine tailored to measure suit or overcoat free for one man in each locality who will show and recommend their high grade made-to-measure clothes to a few friends. Simply send them your name and address and they will send you a large assortment of wool samples, style book, self-measuring chart and their free suit offer.—Adv.

Ever try painting your traps white for use in the snow? It will add considerably to their effectiveness if done a month or so before you intend to use them. After painting the trap it should be buried in dry earth for some time, this will absorb all odors. For trapping in snow near civilization, chicken heads used in conjunction with scent baits are very effective for fox, and have an added advantage in that dogs will pay no attention to them.

Military Model REVOLVER

6 Shot Swing Cylinder Hand Ejector .38 CAL.

Reduced to $14.35

WE PAY POSTAGE

Here is a gun that is absolutely superior in make and dependability to any 38 calibre gun made. Gun is made especially for rangers, mountaineers, and men working in unprotected places, requiring a safe and efficient weapon. Quick as a flash, with great penetrating power and true marksmanship. This revolver is made of tested blue steel, rifled barrel. Hammer with safety to prevent accidental discharge. Shoots standard ammunition.

Other Specials Military model automatic just like one used "over there." 32 calibre, 10 shots, extra magazine free, reduced to..... $9.45

Top Break Open Automatic Ejecting Double Action Revolver

32 Cal. 6 shot $7.95
38 Cal. 6 shot $8.95

SEND NO MONEY

Order one of these revolvers Now. Don't put it off, protect yourself and your home. Our prices are the lowest, and revolvers the best there are in the market. Pay postman price of gun ONLY on delivery. WE PAY POSTAGE. Money back if not satisfied.

INTERNATIONAL COMM. HOUSE
Dept. P-27, 443 Drodway NEW YORK, N. Y.

FREE Length 30 inches. Steel Barrel and Parts—Walnut stock—a Powerful accurate air rifle. Free for selling 20 pks. beautiful Post Cards at 10 cents pack.

JONES MFG. CO., Dept. 819, ATTLEBORO, MASS.

TRAPS

to trappers who ship furs to Gillespie this season, as per our new 1923-24 announcement now ready for mailing. Write us TODAY—be first to get traps in your locality.

FREE

GILLESPIE FUR Co 361 Gillespie Bldg. ST. LOUIS, MO.

There Is a Big Job Awaiting You!

Be an auto and tractor expert; graduate from the Rahe School in 50 days, earn a real salary; Rahe graduates in instant demand.

Don't WISH for success; HAVE it. Here is your opportunity. Write today for illustrated catalog. We pay your railroad fare. Classes limited; write at once if you are ambitious to earn from $50 to $150 a week the year round.

Rahe AUTO, TRACTOR & ELECTRICAL School
Desk 323,
9th & Walnut, CINCINNATI, O. 4445 Grand Blvd. CHICAGO, ILL.

AGENTS: $72 A WEEK

New Can't Clog Coal-Oil-Burner Newest Invention

Most perfect burner ever invented. Intense blue flame. Can't clog up. Turns any coal or wood stove into a gas stove. Heats oven to baking point in 10 minutes. Cheapest fuel known. Low priced. Sells everywhere. Nothing else like it. Not sold in stores. Write quick for agency.

PARKER MFG. CO., Burner 517, Dayton, Ohio

GIVEN CHOOSE WHAT YOU WANT NOW

Here they are! Just as shown. Your chance to get one or more of these useful articles—a fine radio set, dandy baseball suit, handsome watch with knife and chain, strong Rugby football, fine violin and bow, Boy Scout knife, genuine Eastman camera or Daisy air rifle. Any of these are yours for selling only twelve 25c. boxes famous Mentho-Nova. Choose now. Order Mentho-Nova today. Send no money, just name and address. We trust you for goods.

U. S. SUPPLY COMPANY
Dept. YO-7, Greenville, Pa.

FREE

This 14 Karat Wrist Watch GIRLS here is your chance to get this 6 Jewel 14 Karat White Gold Filled WRIST WATCH FREE, an excellent timekeeper guaranteed 25 years. COSTS YOU NOTHING but a few hours of your time. Send your name immediately for full details.

CRESCENT PRODUCTS CO., Dept. T. 1, 872 Prospect Av., New York

FREE WATCH & RING

Send No Money-We Trust You Gladly-Send name and Address Just give away 12 beautiful big art pictures with 12 full boxes of famous White Cloverine which you will sell at 25c a box returning the $3.00 and receive this wonderful watch and ring absolutely free. Great free catalog of 100 amazing premiums. Millions use Cloverine for chapped hands, face and lips, burns, cuts, pimples, sores, etc. Fairest and squarest plan for 28 years. Write quick. Be first in your town.

Wilson Chemical Co., Dept. W18, Tyrone, Pa.

WATCH FREE

This fine American made Watch, new style, stem wind and set, GUARANTEED to keep time; Given for selling only 8 boxes of ROSEBUD at 25c each and returning the $2.00. EASY TO SELL. We TRUST YOU. Order today.

ROSEBUD PERFUME CO., Box 142, Woodsboro, Md.

ARTIFICIAL EYES
IMPROVED

So that they are not easily broken, Do not get rough, Do not Discolor, Do not irritate, Look natural, Defy Detection, gives natural motion and COST LESS. You can be fitted better now right in your own home, and try the eye three days before you purchase. Our booklet tells you everything from A to Z about artificial eyes, and is sent sealed in a plain envelope FREE. Send your name and the name of all you know who wear an Artificial eye, for a free booklet today. Cut out this ad. as it may not appear again. Our low price will surprise you.

DENVER OPTIC CO.,
915 Barclay Block, Denver, Colo.

BUNIONS!

Pain Stops Instantly—
Hump Vanishes
TRY IT AT MY RISK

New, marvelous solvent to treat bunions. Stops pain instantly—banishes the ugly hump and tired, achey, swollen, burning condition. You can wear a smaller shoe with comfort. Test it at my risk. First trial convinces.

No clumsy apparatus, no rubber mold or protector, no uncomfortable leather shield or felt pad, no plaster, nor mussy liquid.

It is PEDODYNE, The Complete Bunion Treatment. You will say it is wonderful—amazing, so quick, so sure does it act. Don't waste time and money on useless methods. Don't suffer. Try PEDODYNE at my risk. Write today before you do another thing. Just say "I want to try PEDODYNE" Address

KAY LABORATORIES, Dept. K-386
186 No. LaSalle St., Chicago, Illinois

"DON'T SHOUT"

"I hear you. I can hear now as well as anybody. 'How?' With the MORLEY PHONE. I've a pair in my ears now, but they are invisible. I would not know I had them in, myself, only that I hear all right.

"The Morley Phone for the

DEAF

is to the ears what glasses are to the eyes. Invisible, comfortable, weightless and harmless. Anyone can adjust it." Over one hundred thousand sold. Write for booklet and testimonials

THE MORLEY CO., Dept. 766, 26 S. 15th St., Phila.

Don't Wear a Truss

BE COMFORTABLE—Wear the Brooks Appliance, the modern scientific invention which gives rupture sufferers immediate relief. It has no obnoxious springs or pads. Automatic Air Cushions bind and draw together the broken parts. No salves or plasters. Durable, Cheap. Sent on trial to prove its worth. Beware of imitations. Look for trade-mark bearing portrait and signature of C. E. Brooks which appears on every Appliance. None other genuine. Full information and booklet sent free in plain, sealed envelope.

MR. C. E. BROOKS

BROOKS APPLIANCE CO., 157T State St., Marshall, Mich.

$65 A WEEK —It's Easy!

Free Auto and Big Weekly Cash Bonus offers. Newton made $1900 in 20 weeks. Hundreds start at $15 a day. Everybody wants our New, Wonderful household necessity. A SENSATION! Full or spare time—$1.50 Gift Free to customers. Write quick.

NEW ERA MFG. CO., Dept. 2068 803 Madison St., CHICAGO

50 Articles FREE

3 Pencils, 2 Penholders, Pens, Ink and Pencil Erasers, Ruler, Pencil Clips, Rubber Bands, Note Book, Pads, 8 colored Crayons, Calenders, Metal Paint Box with 12 Water color Paints, Brushes, and many other articles, all with handsome School Case.

We give this Big 50-piece Combination FREE for selling 18 packets Perfumed Sachet at 10c each. Order today. Send no Money.

JONES MFG. CO., Dept. 810, ATTLEBORO, MASS.

All this jewelry is yours for selling only six boxes of Mentho-Nova at 25c. Send no money, we trust you. Order today. When sold return $1.50 and all five pieces are yours.

U. S. Supply Co., Dept. EO-7, Greenville, Pa.

Ford Given

A LUXURIOUS SEDAN
The Wonderful ALL-YEAR CAR — Electric STARTER and LIGHTS —Drive Your Own Car

A school girl of 14 recently won Auto

Join our great Auto Club and win Grand Prizes including Ford Sedan! Can you make out two words spelled by figures in picture? The alphabet is numbered—A is 1, B is 2, etc. What are the two words? Other valuable prizes and hundreds of dollars in cash given. Everybody wins! So easy you will be surprised. We've already given away many Autos. Why not you? Send answer today.

Ford Willson, Mgr., 141 W. Ohio St. Dept 2497, Chicago, Ill.

Dialogs, Monologs, Musical Comedies and Revues, Minstrel Opening Choruses, Darky Plays. Catalog FREE.

PLAYS

Vaudeville Acts How to Stage a Play Make-up Goods

T. S. DENISON & CO., 623 So. Wabash, Dept. 6, CHICAGO

The Bee Cell Supporter

A BOON TO WOMANKIND

Made from the purest, softest rubber. Six cups of faces render misplacement absolutely impossible. Endorsed by the medical profession. Send us $2.50 and we will mail you one postpaid in plain package. Money back if not entirely satisfactory. Write for descriptive circular. It's FREE.

The Bee Cell Co., Dept. 168 White Bldg., Buffalo, N. Y.

The Family Doctor

The remedies and advice here given are intended only for simple cases; serious cases should be taken to your local doctor. Address, The Family Doctor, COMFORT, Augusta, Maine. Sign your true name and give your address. Name will not be published.

Mrs. M. C., Topeka, Kans.—For the painful menstruation, try after meals, for five days prior to expected period, a teaspoonful of Hayden's Viburnum Compound well diluted.

Mrs. E. C., Kenton, Ohio.—You should be examined and find out the cause of your sterility. There is no other way for you to find out the reason for condition mentioned. You might be cured by a simp e operation.

Miss R. Q., Santa Paula, Calif.—Operation is advisable in your case for the hemorrhoids. For the neuralgia, take after meals a teaspoonful of Warburg's tincture well diluted.

Mrs. C. A. S., Stratford, Iowa.—For the constipation take at night two teaspoonfuls of fluid extract of cascara sagrada in water. As a tonic take a tablespoonful of Basham's mixture well diluted after meals.

Mrs. L. W. K., Alvord, Texas.—Get some of Fairchild's peptogenic milk tablets and predigest the milk according to directions on package. You can also take after meals a tablet of compound bicarbonate of sodium, which will help digestion and no doubt get rid of intestinal gas.

Mrs. J. Y., Lexington, N. C.—Have the hairs removed by use of the electric needle. All glands are likely to have hairs growing near or on them.

Mrs. M. S., Eveleigh, Ky.—Have some high-up intestinal irrigations. Avoid sweets of all kinds. Take after meals for the gas and indigestion a compound bicarbonate of sodium tablet. Your nasal catarrh will be benefited by using a spray of Dobell's solution three times a day. If you have enlarged tonsils and adenoids have them removed at once.

Mrs S J., Freeport, Pa.—Loss of smell may be due to adenoids and tonsils. Better both of you have them removed and find out if this condition is due to enlarged tonsils and adenoids. You can safely have them removed. Do this at once. Have your husband take for constipation two teaspoonfuls of fluid extract of cascara sagrada morning and night. Have him also avoid sweets of all kinds, which applied equally to your condition. Headaches are in many cases due to eye-strain. Avoid in any case so-called headache remedies, for they are dangerous and may cause weak heart action if not something worse. Keep your hands out of water and apply cocoa-butter to them. You can also apply to the pimples Lassar's paste.

Mrs. J. F. K., Coalgate, Okla.—Probably the best way to remove tattoo marks is by use of carbon dioxide snow. Used for deep effect. Of course this remedy must be used by one accustomed to its use.

Mrs. J. W. W., Mt. Olive, N. C.—There is no remedy that will add flesh worth considering. Just live on foods that agree with you and in time you will no doubt put on flesh.

Mrs. A. E. T., Topeka, Kansas.—Remove the blackheads with the comedo extractor, steam the face and apply lotio alba. Of course regulate your diet and avoid sweets and pastries of all kinds. Keep the bowels open at all times

Mrs. D. A. B., Petroleum, West Va.—If the breast has a lump in it and the lump seems to be adherent to the skin, have the entire breast removed at once.

Miss N. J. M., Corydon, Ky.—For the rheumatic condition take after meals a five-grain tablet of salicylate of sodium. Spray the nose and throat with Dobell's solution. This will relieve the sneezing condition and also the local catarrh. Also keep bowels free at all times.

Mrs. J. H. N., Winters, Texas.—Take after meals for the choking sensation in throat five-grain pills of asafetida.

Mr. R. M., Ohio.—Your trouble is probably a chronic rheumatic condition due to your several attacks of gonorrhœa. Take after meals a five-grain tablet of salicylate of sodium. To the joints apply oil of wintergreen at night.

Mrs. G. C. H., Pittsburg, Kans.—You are overworked. Take a tablespoonful of Basham's mixture well diluted after meals as a tonic.

Mrs. M. E. W., Blissfield, Mich. The foot condition may be due to a fallen arch. Have your shoes made to order and the arch condition looked after.

Miss C. P., Morris, Ala.—Take after meals for your nervous indigestion ten drops of tincture of nux vomica in a wine glass of water. For your constipation take two teaspoonfuls of fluid extract of cascara sagrada, also well diluted. Avoid sweets and pastries of all kinds There are no foods for the condition mentioned worth-while.

Mrs. W. O. P., Ratcliff, Texas.—For your catarrhal condition spray the nose with Dobell's solution. Take after meals a ten-grain tablet of bicarbonate of sodium. The latter remedy will also in time help your rheumatic condition. Of course avoid sweets of all kinds and keep the bowels free. For the ovarian condition apply locally a mustard plaster, or paint the parts with tincture of iodine once or twice a week. Use soap suppositories for the baby's constipation and have the rupture operated on soon as the the baby's condition will admit. In the mean time you can apply a cork over the parts to retain the rupture in place. Of course the cork must be covered and properly adjusted to the parts.

Mrs. I. G., Sulphur Rock, Ark.—Better have your blood examined and find whether or not you have some blood condition that needs treatment. Maybe after you have proper treatment you will carry child to term as you desire.

Mrs. S. McD., Peculiar, Mo.—For the cramping of limbs at night, massage the limbs and take after meals five-grains of bromide of potassium in tablet form.

Mrs. C. B., Roseboro, N. C.—Take as a tonic a tablespoonful of Basham's mixture well diluted, after meals. You are undoubtedly anemic and need some good tonic for the blood.

Mrs. G. G., Ravenwood, Mo.—Give up eating willow charcoal, and live normally. You will in time gain flesh and no doubt be well again. You should be examined and find out the condition of the womb and perineum. May be you were torn during confinement and the parts need restoration to normal.

Mrs. M. C. B., Oshkosh, Neb.—Apply at night a seven per cent. ointment of salicylic acid. Apply only two or three times and the corn will disappear.

Miss R. W., Faceville, Ga.—Yours is a condition of auto-suggestion Get your mind on something else and you will get rid of your introspection until you are married and can satisfy your desire for motherhood.

Mrs. R. Q. C., Chismville, Ark.—The only way to get rid of the birthmark is by use of carbon dioxide snow Have your local doctor use this and he will succeed in getting rid of the blemish without scar.

Mr. J. L. F., Smithton, Pa.—You have a neuritis. Take after meals two teaspoonfuls of Warburg's tincture well diluted. Locally apply a hot flatiron over several thicknesses of flannel wrung out of hot mustard water. This application will relieve the local pain.

Miss L. F., Princeton, Minn.—Both your throat condition and the swelling in the limbs may be due to poor blood. Take after meals a tablespoonful of Basham's mixture well diluted.

Miss G. S., Lakeville, Ohio.—Virgins can have so-called "whites." Use a vaginal douche for this condition. A teaspoonful of salt to the quart of hot water will help you. This condition will not prevent pregnancy later on.

Mrs. J. A. S., Portland, Oregon.—There is no treatment by absorption of senile cataracts.

Mrs. C. P., Hulburt, Okla.—Better not diet or take any medicine to reduce your weight while you are nursing your baby.

Mrs. H. C. H., Noel, Mo.—Better consult some good ear and nose specialist as discharge from the ear is always dangerous and needs careful personal care and treatment.

Mr. A. S., Yankton, So. Dak.—Would not advise any operation on the skin to reduce pores or remove blackheads. Remove the blackheads with a comedo extractor, then steam the face and apply lotio alba at night. Of course avoid sweets of all kinds and keep your bowels free.

Getting Inside Information.

"SHUCKS! I wish there never was such things as Pyramids and Sphinx," and Bob Jr. closed his school-book with a bang.

"Why—what's wrong now?" and Uncle Ned turned around from his letter-covered desk.

"Oh—nothng much, but I'll be glad if I ever get through studying about the Sphinx. Here I've got a four hundred word composition to write, and whatever can I say that hasn't been said a dozen times already!"

Uncle Ned looked sympathetic—perhaps he remembered his schoolday compositions.

"Well, to begin with, what and where are they—the Pyramid and Sphinx?"

Bob Jr. hastily replied: "Why, in Egypt; built with a man's head on a lion's body."

"Bob Jr.," exclaimed Uncle Ned a bit sternly, "is that really all you know about it or is it just a beginning of more?"

Bob Jr. did know a little more than but—but it was so little that Uncle Ned was astonished at his ignorance, especially when the subject was such an interesting one.

"Well, listen carefully, then, and I will tell you a few facts about the Sphinx. To begin with, it was not built at all. It was chipped from the living rock and dedicated to the sun,—for in those days, you know, the people worshiped idols—the sun, moon and stars—instead of the God we worship now. This huge statue is far more interesting than most people think, for instead of being just a statue it has been discovered by Prof. G. A. Reisner, of Harvard, to contain a series of temples. He had considerable difficulty in getting the Egyptians to help him dig a hole into the top of the head, they were so superstitious, but when they finally did gain an entrance they found themselves in an old-time temple room fourteen feet wide by sixty feet long, which led into another one directly below—just back of the nose and mouth.

"Several more rooms were found in the body with passages leading through tunnels, in various directions.

"This statue is also supposed to contain the tomb of Menes, the first Pharaoh of Upper and Lower Egypt.

"So you see you can say something about the Sphinx, after all.

"Just imagine how many people have worshiped the sun there!

"Of course you know that the Pyramids are sepulchers?"

Bob Jr. hesitated a moment. "Why, no. I supposed they were just blocks of stone."

Uncle Ned really was astonished to hear that, but he went on:

"Why, during the first twelve dynasties the kings were buried in those Pyramids. The size of the structure depended largely upon the length of the ruler's reign and were built of oblong blocks of stone around thirty inches thick. These stones were placed in layers, each layer being about one block's width smaller than the one below—until the summit was reached. The first great Pyramid was erected by King Cheops about 3700 B. C. and covers thirteen acres of ground.

"The mummy king was placed in the sepulchral chamber and a stone weighing around fifty tons was placed in the entrance, which fitted so perfectly that it sealed it."

Bob Jr. was so interested that he could hardly wait to begin the essay, and before he knew it the dreaded task was done.

"Not such a bad job to do, after all, was it?" asked Uncle Ned.

Bob Jr. looked sheepish for a moment then declared: "I'll never say I can't do anything again. Why, it was just—fun!"

February, 1886, had no full moon, the first instance of the kind in history, and according to astronomers will not occur again for possibly 2,500,000 years.

Crooked Spines made Straight

Cure Yourself or Your Child at Home, Without Pain or Inconvenience, of any Spinal Deformity with the Wonderful PHILO BURT METHOD.

No matter how old you are, or how long you have suffered, or what kind of spinal deformity you have, there is benefit and a possible cure for you. The Philo Burt Appliance is as firm as steel and flexible and very comfortable to wear. It gives an even, perfect support to the weakened or deformed spine. It is as easy to take off or put on as a coat, causes no inconvenience, and does not chafe or irritate. No one can notice you wearing it.

Cure Yourself At Home

The Appliance is made to fit each individual case. It weighs ounces where other supports weigh pounds. The price is within the reach of all. Hundreds of doctors recommend it.

We GUARANTEE Satisfaction and LET YOU USE IT 30 DAYS

If you or your child are suffering from spinal trouble of any nature, write us at once for our new book with full information and references. Describe case fully so we can advise you intelligently. The Philo Burt Method consisting of a scientific appliance and a course of especial exercises, has produced wonderful benefit or cure in over 50,000 cases.

PHILO BURT MFG. CO.
334-10 Odd Fellows' Bldg., JAMESTOWN, N. Y

IF YOU ARE DEAF

Or growing deaf and have head noises, don't neglect it! A host of people are today overjoyed as a result of a remarkable new kind of ear phone that enables them to hear perfectly not only human voices but the entire range of sounds. They are no longer lonely, unhappy, embarrassed. Thanks to a secret parchment-like diaphragm, the marvelous new tiny ear phone is inconspicuously helping them to communicate with others, and to clearly hear even the faintest musical sounds. Used and highly recommended by thousands of deaf people, to whom you can write. Here is one letter received recently:

"Your instruments have greatly improved my father's hearing. The head noises from which he suffered greatly have completely disappeared. Miss R. Hauptman, 1313 Washington Ave., New York City."

Free Pamphlet tells you all about the ear phone and about the special 10-day offer. Just mail a postal today, or if possible call for free office demonstration. Mears Ear Phone Company, Dept. 7510, 45 West 34th Street, New York City.

You can be quickly cured, if you

STAMMER

Send 10 cents for 288-page book on Stammering and Stuttering, "Its Cause and Cure." It tells how I cured myself after stammering 20 yrs. E. N. Bogue, 1636 Bogue Bldg., 1147 N. Ill. St., Indianapolis.

Not More Than One Free Trial Bottle To Any Family

Anyone anywhere can have one free bottle of Syrup Pepsin — What is your address?

THERE is someone in every family who is constipated, bilious, dyspeptic. They need Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and will be better off for using it. It may be a woman, an old man, a tiny baby. Syrup Pepsin is as effective for grownups as it is safe for babies. Thousands of mothers can testify to that.

Perhaps you have reached the stage where you take pills every night and think there is nothing else for you to do. Don't believe it! No matter how chronically constipated or dyspeptic you are, Syrup Pepsin will regulate you. It is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin that acts on the stomach and intestines, and in a short time trains the digestive organs to do their work naturally and without help.

Yes, Dr. Caldwell Took His Own Medicine

Dr. Caldwell knew what old people suffered with their bowels, for he was a family physician for 47 years; born in 1839. No remedy is better for old people than his own Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and here is why: it is mild and gentle in action; it doesn't gripe and it doesn't lose its effect when you take it regularly. You can form your own opinion by sending for a free trial bottle.

Who Needs Syrup Pepsin?

We will send a free trial bottle of Syrup Pepsin to anyone who suffers from one or more of the following: Constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia, biliousness, headache, belching, bad taste, bad breath, dizziness, drowsiness and the many other symptoms of sluggish bowels. If you have children who suffer in this way, write for them.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL, Originator of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin

Send for a Free Trial Bottle

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is on sale in every drug store in the U. S., we want you to become acquainted with it at our expense, and then if you find it as claimed, buy it of your nearest dealer. Just now send your name and address in any way most convenient to yourself. Many thousands of these bottles have been given and we know you will appreciate it as keenly as others have. Write today, simply addressing your envelope as shown in the coupon.

"Syrup Pepsin", 553 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois

I want to try your Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Kindly send a free trial bottle to the address below, all charges prepaid.

Name .....

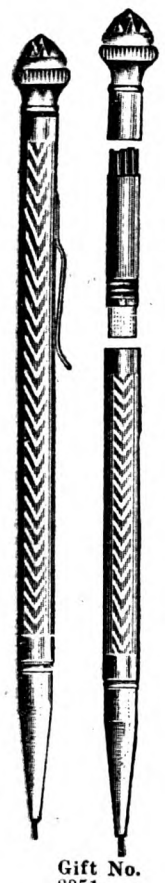
St. or R. F. D. .....

Town and State .....

NOT MORE THAN ONE FREE TRIAL BOTTLE TO A FAMILY.

Club Raisers—Here's Your Chance to Get FREE Gifts

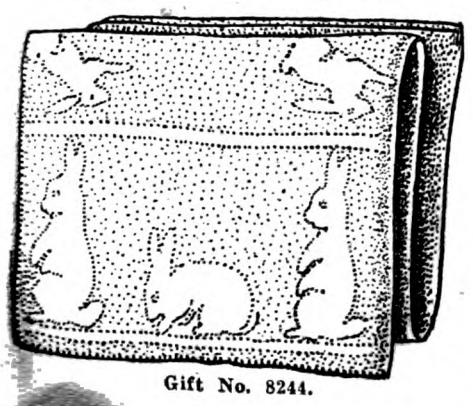
Gift No. 8344.



10-INCH TEDDY BEAR
Gift No. 9992.

LOVEY TEDDY

Gift No. 5561.
PATCH SILK



Gift No. 7696.

Gift No. 8851.

Gift No. G 45.

Gift No. 8244.

Gift No. 8581.

Your desires and your wants have been anticipated in this big collection of free Gifts. Here are our most popular and biggest value gifts. A few pleasant hours among your friends getting subscriptions for COMFORT and you will soon find yourself in possession of one of these gifts.

Gift No. 8581—Three Beautiful Ferns.
Given for one subscription. In this collection are three of the largest and handsomest varieties of ferns ever grown for house culture. The picture shows the hardy "Roosevelt" fern. The other two varieties are the Boston or "Fountain fern and the Whitmani or "Ostrich Plume" fern. Every fern guaranteed to grow.

Gift No. 9223—Bon Bon Dish. Not only for candies but also for nuts, pickles, small fruits and jellies this real cut glass dish makes a beautiful and serviceable piece for the sideboard, table or tea wagon. Stars and floral wreath cuttings adorn the sides and a large many-pointed star decorates the bottom. Diameter 6 inches. Sent prepaid. Safe delivery guaranteed. Given for Three Subscriptions.

Gift No. 9233—Spoon Tray. The pattern on this cut glass piece matches that of the bon bon dish described in the paragraph above. The dish is well suited for serving relishes as well as for holding spoons. Length 6 inches, width about 4 inches. We prepay carrying charges and guarantee safe delivery.
Given for Three Subscriptions.

Gift No. 8344—Aluminum Percolator
Given for Four Subscriptions.
Delicious, fragrant, amber-colored coffee is a pleasant certainty if you brew it in this sure-working aluminum percolator. Made of 99 per cent. pure aluminum, highly polished; ebonized stay-cool handle. Capacity 1½ quarts.

Gift No. 9992—Lovey Teddy
Given for Two Subscriptions.
Dear old Teddy playmate to millions of boys and girls all over the nation! He's a dandy, big, lovable, hugable, cuddly fellow and best of all he's made to stand all kinds of rough usage. Ted is 10 inches tall. No collection of playthings is complete without a Teddy Bear. Here he is with arms extended to you.

Gift No. 5561—Patch Silk
Big Package for One Subscription.
Real silk in all sizes, shapes and colors, just the thing for making quilts, tidies, pillow tops and all kinds of "crazy" patchwork. Each package contains more than one hundred silk pieces, five skeins embroidery cotton and a book of instructions.

Gift No. 7696—Watch and Chain
For Only Six Subscriptions.
An accurate time keeper and a handsome looking watch. Open face, highly-polished nickel case, stem wind and set. Full size. The chain is included in our offer.

Gift 8851—Everpointed Pencil
Yours for One Subscription.
A brand new self-pointing pencil made of a new substance as bright as gold but which will not wear off. With its delicate chasing and flashing jeweled top it makes one of the most beautiful pencils you ever saw. Point is always ready. A magazine full of extra leads—a year's supply—is contained in the barrel; also an eraser. This pencil is supplied in two styles—one with a safety pocket-clip for men, the other slightly shorter without the clip for women. Say which model we shall send you. The American Lead Pencil Company makes this new pencil which is sufficient guarantee of its high quality and perfect writing qualities. Either model will be sent for only one subscription.

Gift No. G 45—Zane Grey's Famous Book, "The Mysterious Rider"
Given for Three Subscriptions.
Lovers of a splendid Western story will revel in this stirring romance, told only as Zane Grey can tell it. Cloth bound, illustrated. If Zane Grey rested his reputation solely on this great book he would be considered one of the great writers of our present day. He interprets the West to his own people of the West and he brings its glamour and restless, roving spirit to the enjoyment of the East. Wherever you live in this broad land, if you like adventure, mystery, love, action, you will like this splendid and thrilling story.

Gift No. 8244—Soft, Warm Crib Blanket
For Four Subscriptions.
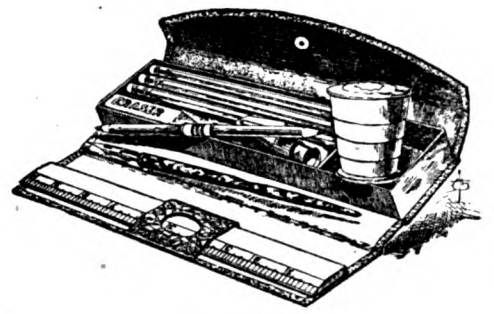
For the wee tot who must be kept snug and warm these soft blankets are a great blessing. They are 30x40 inches, are as soft as a rabbit's fur and as warm as the big blankets on mother's bed. Every blanket double thick—really a pair in one. Pretty bunny figures woven into the soft, warm texture. Two color combinations—Pink and White or Blue and White. Will wash without running. Specify color when ordering. The artist didn't begin to do justice to this handsome blanket. A drawing cannot picture the warmth-giving qualities, nor can it give you any idea of the soft, furry texture. Only when you examine a blanket in your own hands and with your own eyes can you begin to appreciate its dependable quality and serviceability.



Gift No. 7645.

Rock-A-Bye Baby Swing

Given for Five Subscriptions.

Baby likes this bouncing, swinging basket and has such a delightful time all by himself that mother can leave him to his own amusement while she does the housework. Made of heavy white duck sewed securely to a strong iron frame about 12 inches square and suspended with heavy duck straps. Strong steel spring included which will hold 100 lbs. Attach it to ceiling, or in doorway, and watch baby have a good time. Great for strengthening legs.

Gift No. 9972.

Gift No. 9143—Neverbreak Self-Filling Fountain Pen
Given for Three Subscriptions.
Women will delight in this new style pen because they can carry it in their hand bags without fear of breaking it. The ring on cap is for neck cord. Cap and barrel are made entirely of handsomely chased nickel and are non-breakable. Holds more ink than a rubber fountain pen. Fills by raising little lever on side. 14-K gold pen guaranteed.

Gift No. 9972—Scholar's Writing Set
For Two Subscriptions.
Three high-grade pencils with erasers, one good quality penholder with pen, one twin pencil (in reality two pencils in a combination holder), one pencil sharpener, one large rubber eraser, one 10-inch ruler and an aluminum collapsible drinking cup with cover, are compactly held in this convenient folding case. A big value.

Gift No. 9153—Superb Pencil Set
Given for Three Subscriptions.
The particular features of this box are the Everpointing pencil and the handy compartment bank for pennies, nickles and dimes.
In addition to these two useful pieces, each box contains a compass with pencil attached, a penholder with rubber finger grip, a box of four extra pens, an eraser-tipped pencil, Indian No. 2, a combination red and blue pencil, a pencil sharpener and a large soft rubber eraser. There is also a box of 12 Venus thin leads and one dozen Perpetual Point refill leads for the Ever-pointing pencil. The partitions in the box hold everything securely in place.

Gift No. 1742—Good Luck Ring
For Two Subscriptions.
A novel and attractive finger ring which ought to bring you good luck if anything can.

Gift No. 1692—Wedding Ring
For Two Subscriptions.
A gold-filled ring of fine wearing qualities in the oval band style now so popular.

Gift No. 1552—Silver Thimble
For Two Subscriptions.
A serviceable, carefully-made thimble that ought to be in every woman's work basket. Sizes 5 to 11.

Gift No. 1042—2 Huck Towels
For Two Subscriptions.
New large, pure white towels of excellent quality. Size 15x30 inches, full bleached and white as snow; these beautiful towels are a satisfaction to the eye. Not only do they make delightful toilet towels but are adapted to use as standard or bureau covers, tray cloths, etc., etc. We can positively guarantee entire satisfaction as regards their laundering qualities. A pair for 2 subscriptions.

Gift No. 9183—Three Aluminum Sauce Pans
For Three Subscriptions.
Sizes: 1, 1 1-2 and 2-quart. Made of 99 per cent. pure aluminum with silver-bright finish. Seamless, sanitary. Will not peel, chip, crack or rust.

Gift No. 9882—Rope of Pearls
For Two Subscriptions.
Full opera length—52 inches—of Parisian pearls of uniform size, perfect finish and lustre. Can easily be wound twice around the neck.

Gift No. 8351—Oval Tray Cloth
Given for One Subscription.
Beautiful design, 10x16 inches, stamped on fine linen-finished cotton cloth, all ready for embroidering. May be worked in light shades if desired, but looks more attractive when done all in white. Basket may be worked in solid embroidery, French knots or eyelets, the spray in solid embroidery or satin stitch.

Gift No. 8084—Sweet Grass Sewing Basket
Given for Four Subscriptions.
Of ample size—eight inches in diameter and three inches deep—and with its close-fitting top, this sweet-grass Basket is just what you need in which to take along your sewing or fancy work when calling or visiting. And at home it holds your work, along with scissors, buttons, thread and other necessities, so that you always know just where to look for them.

Every Gift Guaranteed

We unconditionally guarantee every gift illustrated and described to be exactly as represented. If at any time you receive a gift from us that is not entirely satisfactory please return it. We will make it right.

NEVERBREAK SELF-FILLING FOUNTAIN PEN.
Gift No. 9143.

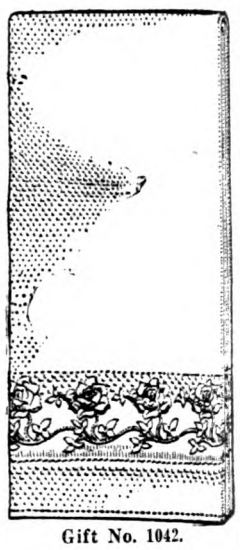
EVERYTHING GIVEN TO YOU

You can have any gift on this page if you will send us the required number of subscriptions to COMFORT. Look the gifts over, make your selection and then send us the number of yearly subscriptions called for at 50c a year. If a gift calls for only one subscription that subscription can not be your own. Your own subscription, though, counts one in any club of two or more. All gifts sent free and prepaid.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

Cut Glass Bon Bon Dish (Gift No. 9223) and Spoon Tray (Gift No. 9233)

Gift No. 9153.



Gift No. 1742.

Gift No. 1692.

Gift No. 1552.

Gift No. 1042.

Gift No. 9183.

Gift No. 9882.

Gift No. 8351.

Gift No. 8084.

Four Wheel Chairs in September

706 is COMFORT'S Total to Date

The recipients of the four September wheel chairs are: Eunice Lorine Camp, La., 150; O. A. Yarnell, Inskip, Tenn., 150; Leota Yeates, Beeville, Texas, 97; Mrs. Amanda Wilkinson, Toledo, Mo., 57. The figures following their respective names indicate the number of subscriptions sent in by them or by their friends for them.

Eunice Lorine Camp, Age 7, has been a helpless cripple all her life, caused by spastic (spasmodic) paralysis. She can not walk, talk, or sit alone without support of some kind. She is bright mentally and enjoys being out in the fresh air and sunshine. As she weighs 29 pounds, the wheel chair will not only be a joy to her but a great help to her mother, who weighs only 96 pounds, in caring for her.

Mr. O. A. Yarnell sent his 150 subscriptions all in one letter with his order for a COMFORT wheel chair to be shipped to him but did not give the name or condition of the person for whose use the chair is intended.

Leota Yeates is the daughter of Mrs. W. A. Yeates who sent in all the subscriptions for Leota's wheel chair, but did not give me any information regarding the girl or her condition except that she is "her little daughter" and in need of a wheel chair.

LITTLE LINDA MOROCONI ENJOYING HER COMFORT WHEEL CHAIR.

Mrs. Amanda Wilkinson is 63 years old and has not walked for years, and is much in need of a wheel chair but not financially able to provide one for herself. This information, which is all I know about this unfortunate lady, was contained in a letter from her good neighbor, Mrs. Ella A. Burkdoll who sent in all the subscriptions for Mrs. Wilkinson's wheel chair.

As I predicted last month, the Wheel-Chair Club is quickening its pace with the advent of autumn. This is shown in the increase of one more chair awarded and sent out in September than in August. Next month being the Thanksgiving season, I ask you all to make an extra effort through October and help boost the November distribution. Your own Thanksgiving will be the happier for the knowledge that you have done something to help relieve a crippled shut-in's suffering by means of a COMFORT wheel chair.

Sincerely yours,

W. H. GANNETT,

Publisher of COMFORT.

P. S. For the information of our many new subscribers let me explain that for each and every 150 one-year subscriptions to COMFORT, at 50 cents each, sent in either singly or in clubs by persons who direct that they are to be credited to COMFORT'S WHEEL-CHAIR CLUB instead of claiming the premiums to which they would be entitled, I give a FIRST-CLASS INVALID WHEEL CHAIR to some needy crippled Shut-in and pay the freight, too. It is a large and expensive premium for me to give for that number of subscriptions, but I am always glad to do my part a little faster each month than you do yours.

Our Little Linda Surely Enjoys Her COMFORT Wheel Chair

Frontenac, Kansas.

Dear Mr. Gannett:

We are sending you a picture of our little Linda enjoying her COMFORT wheel chair. Words cannot express our thanks for the chair. She surely enjoys it. We wish also to thank our neighbors and friends for their kindness in helping to get the chair for her, and especially do we thank Mrs. Emile Carrier and Mrs. Isaac Descampe for getting the subscriptions. May God bless you all.

Gratefully yours,

Mr. and Mrs. August Moroconi.

SAM J. MCABEE ENJOYING HIS COMFORT WHEEL CHAIR.

Certainly Is Enjoying His COMFORT Wheel Chair

Roebuck, S. C.

Dear Mr. Gannett:

I am sending you two pictures of Sam J. McAbee in his COMFORT wheel chair. Neither picture is very good, but I hope one of them may do to print in COMFORT, for he certainly does enjoy his wheel chair. I also enclose four more subscriptions to be credited to his wheel-chair account. Thanking you again and wishing you success in your good work,

Sincerely your friend,

Mrs. A. L. McAbee.

COMFORT'S Roll of Honor

The Roll of Honor comprises the names of those who have sent five or more subscriptions, or a dollar or more in money, to credit of the Wheel-Chair Club during the month previous. Following each name is the number of subscriptions or amount of cash sent.

O. A. Yarnell, Tenn., for own, 150 subs; Mrs. Claude Camp, La., for Eunice Camp, 106; Mrs. W. A. Yeates, Tex., for Leota Yeates, 67; Mrs. Anna Boswell, Mo., for Raymond Boswell, 35; Mrs. T. T. Sherrill, La., for Finley Sherrill, 35; Mrs. Bert Null, La., for Finley Sherrill, 20; Edward A. Krause, D. C., for Mrs. E. W. Belfield, 20; Miss Eddie McKleroy, Ala., for Mrs. Francis McKray, 33; Mrs. Ruby Greer, Texas, for W. A. Greer, 9; Mrs. John Tolliver, Ohio, for Mrs. Carrie Taylor, 8; Lafayette Swanson, N. C., for own, 5 subs, and $6.00 cash; Myrtle Idell Hall, Ark., for Mrs. Albert Philips, 5 subs; Mrs. Minnie Owen, Mo., for William J. Lightfoot, 5; Virgie T. Myles, W. Va., for Lafayette Swanson, $2.00 cash; Mrs. A. R. Walker, Minn., for Mrs. Varnell's son, $1.00; Mrs. Sarah R. Smith, Fla., for general, $1.00; Mrs. A. R. Walker, Minn., for Mrs. Varnell's son, $1.00.

Your Family's Buttons

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

WHERE do all the bottons go? Are you one of the many housewives who each week in looking over the laundry ponder over the old question, "Button, button, who's got the button?" If all the buttons made in the United States were distributed yearly there would be 182 buttons for every one in your family.

Few women shoppers at button counters realize that at least eight countries are represented by the buttons that they see before them. The most American button of all, of course, is the fresh-water pearl button, made from Mississippi valley river shell. Most of the shell for ocean pearl buttons comes from Australian waters. A button used extensively on men's suits and coats is made from a nut grown in the northern part of South America and Panama. Clay found in Europe, sour milk, glass, metal, horn, papier mache, are among the many other materials used for buttons.

The eternal sewing on of buttons to replace those broken or lost can be largely avoided if you will take care to see that every new garment has good buttons and that these buttons are sewed on tightly. Women who buy garments ready-made will find that the buttons a garment carries are one of the best criterions of its value. Shoppers might well bear in mind the slogan, "A good button means a good garment."

Thirty years ago when pearl buttons were first made from fresh-water mussel shells in this country all buttons were drilled with four holes through which to pass the thread. Today about 75 of every 100 buttons the woman shopper finds on the button counter will be found to have two holes. Garment manufacturers unlike the home dressmaker do not buy their buttons on cards; they buy them in bulk.

A "14-line or 26-line" button carries no meaning to the average woman, although she acts as caretaker for the buttons of her entire family. A "shirt button" however instantly calls to mind a special size in buttons. All buttons are measured on the scale of 40 lines to the inch. The 14-line and 16-line buttons are popularly known as shirt buttons for these are the sizes to be found on men's shirts. There is a demand today for the rather large button for women's clothing. In pearl buttons the 30-line button or the button three-quarters of an inch in diameter is popular for trimming on wash skirts and dresses.

The ordinary pearl button, which is in universal use in America today, has a history filled with romance and glamour. The shell from which it was made was without doubt taken from the river in the search of a pearl. Pearlers and shellers along Mississippi valley streams are like miners in that the rewards of their labors are uncertain. Added to the price they will receive for shells there is always the chance that they may find a pearl.

The modest little button which every woman finds in her mending basket is thus the first cousin of the queen of gems, the pearl, which often is the associate of royalty. In the same shell with the pearl button on your kitchen apron, your husband's workshirt or your child's romper, there may have been a pearl worth several thousands of dollars.

And now we have the woman dental hygienist. She does not pull nor fill teeth, and consequently is not a terror to children. Instead, she limits her work to cleaning and polishing the teeth above the gums. The U. S. Public Health Service says that this is most helpful in making the gums healthy and preventing decay. Twelve states have already legalized such practice by women.

BED BLANKET

SEND NO MONEY WE TRUST YOU

Simply Send NAME and ADDRESS

Give away 12 big art pictures to your friends with 12 big full and neat boxes of World-famed White Cloverine at 25c each, as explained in big free catalog of nearly 100 wonderful premiums for ambitious boys, girls, men and women. Fastest selling product with free pictures. Millions demand Cloverine (a wonderful household remedy) for chapped hands, face and lips, sores, burns, pimples, etc., daily the year 'round. Discovered by great physician. Twenty-eight successful years. Easiest, quickest and squarest plan. We are reliable. Act now. Be first in your town.

The Wilson Chem. Co., Dept. B-16, Tyrone, Pa.

GIVEN! GENUINE HAWKEYE CAMERA as pictured. Regular size, uses films; snap-shot and time exposures. It's a beauty. Yours for selling only $3.00 worth (12 boxes) famous Mentho-Nova which everybody should buy on sight. Send no money. We trust you till goods are sold. Many other valuable premiums. What do you want? Write today.

U. S. SUPPLY CO., Dept. H 0-7, Greenville, Pa.

ALL GIVEN

This Up-to-Date, Serviceable, Stem Wind, Stem Set Wrist Watch, Popular Size & Guar. Timekeeper & Beautiful Stone Set Ring or Solid Gold 14 K. Self-Filling Fountain Pen & Gold Fin. Always Sharp Pencil. Given for selling only 30 of Our Famous Art & Religious Pictures at 10c ea. Order Pictures Today. Send No Money.

GAIR MFG. CO., 1926 Sunnyside, Dept. 201, CHICAGO

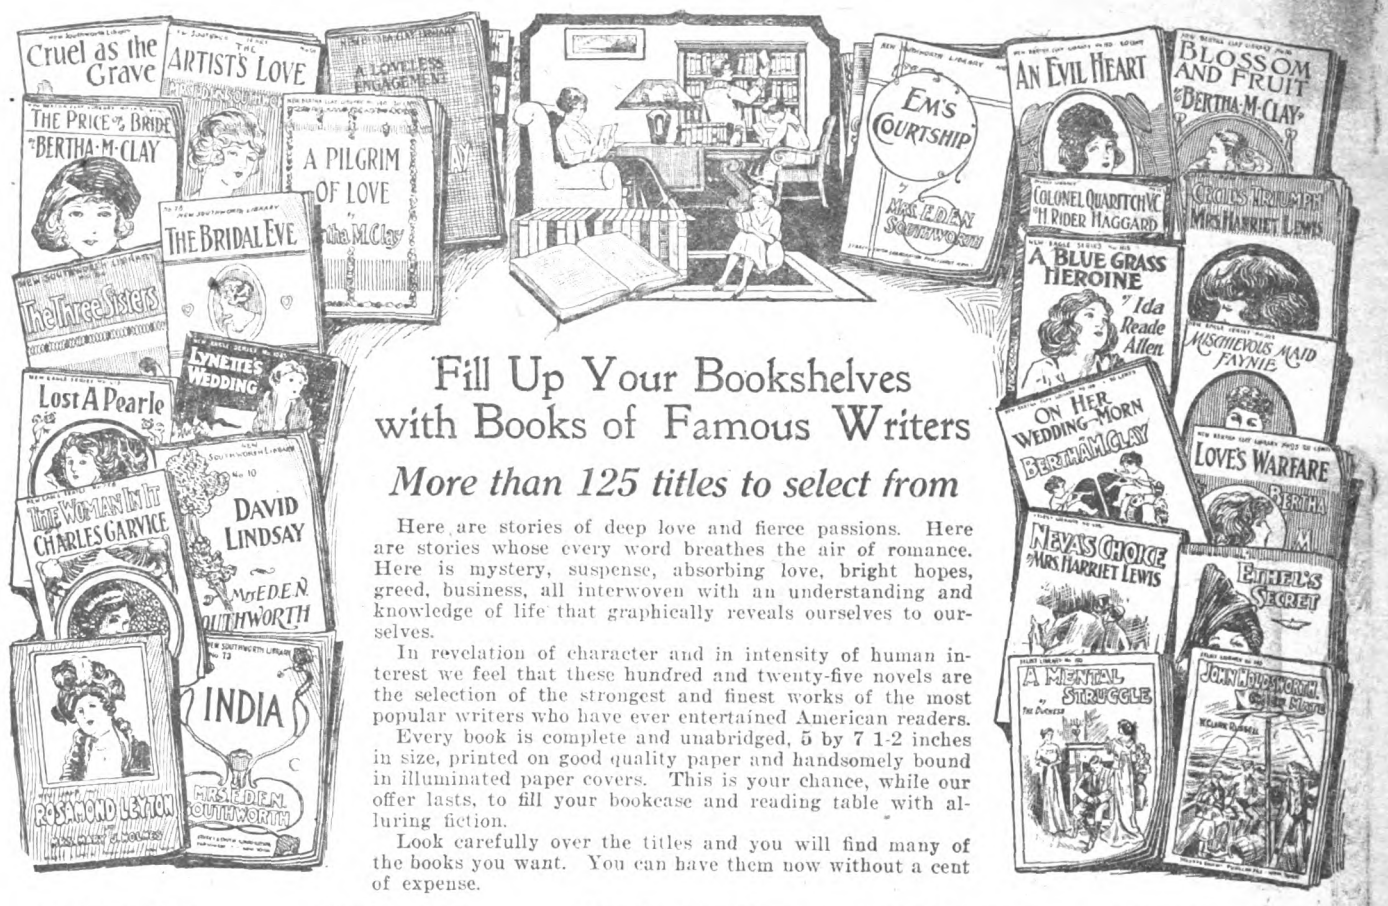
"Lustro PEARL" NECKLACE FREE

Genuine Imported "Lustro Pearls," matched and graduated like all high-priced Pearl Necklaces. Have beautiful opalescent shade and luster. We give this 18 in. "Lustre Pearl" Necklace, fitted with Gold-plated Clasp for selling 24 packets Perfumed Sachet at 10c each. Order today. Send no Money. Handsome Box Free if you order now.

JONES MFG. CO., Dept. 816, Attleboro, Mass.

For SELLING 6 BOXES

ROSEBUD at 25c each and remitting $2.00. Knife has best steel blades. A SPECIAL OFFER. Order at once.



ROSEBUD PERFUME CO., Box 232, Woodsboro, Md.

Military finish air rifle. Sell 8 Boxes Mentho-Nova at 25c.

U.S.Supply Co. Dept.CO-7, Greenville, Pa.

The Pick of the Country's Favorite Fiction

Fill Up Your Bookshelves with Books of Famous Writers

More than 125 titles to select from

Here are stories of deep love and fierce passions. Here are stories whose every word breathes the air of romance. Here is mystery, suspense, absorbing love, bright hopes, greed, business, all interwoven with an understanding and knowledge of life that graphically reveals ourselves to ourselves.

In revelation of character and in intensity of human interest we feel that these hundred and twenty-five novels are the selection of the strongest and finest works of the most popular writers who have ever entertained American readers.

Every book is complete and unabridged, 5 by 7 1-2 inches in size, printed on good quality paper and handsomely bound in illuminated paper covers. This is your chance, while our offer lasts, to fill your bookcase and reading table with alluring fiction.

Look carefully over the titles and you will find many of the books you want. You can have them now without a cent of expense.

Ida Reade Allen

E 1124 The Breath of Slander
E 1115 A Blue Grass Heroine
E 1066 No Man's Wife

Bertha M. Clay

C 95 Love's Warfare
C 102 The Price of a Bride
C 107 A Woman's Temptation
C 108 On Her Wedding Morn
C 109 A Struggle for the Right
C 116 Blossom and Fruit
C 117 Lady Muriel's Secret
C 123 The Hidden Sin
C 128 Lady Latimer's Escape
C 129 A Woman's Error
C 130 A Loveless Engagement
C 133 The Chains of Jealousy
C 138 When Love and Hate Conflict
C 140 A Pilgrim of Love
C 142 Lost for Love
C 147 A Fateful Passion
C 150 An Evil Heart
C 158 Lady Ona's Sin
C 165 A Poisoned Heart

Marie Corelli

S 16 A Romance of Two Worlds
S 42 Vendetta

"The Duchess"

S 150 A Mental Struggle
S 141 Lady Valworth's Diamonds
S 134 A Modern Circe

Geraldine Fleming

E 1120 Sold for Gold
E 1062 The Curse of Beauty
E 1043 Love That Was Cursed

May Agnes Fleming

E 481 Wedded, Yet No Wife
E 136 The Unseen Bridegroom
E 9 The Virginia Heiress

Wenona Gilman

E 1087 The Tide of Fate
E 1070 Evelyn the Actress

Charles Garvice

E 17 Leslie's Loyalty
E 50 Her Ransom
E 84 Imogene
E 95 A Wilful Maid
E 250 A Woman's Soul
E 272 So Fair, So False
E 304 Stanch as a Woman
E 305 Led by Love. Sequel to "Stanch as a Woman"
E 635 A Coronet of Shame
E 655 Linked by Fate
E 758 The Woman in It

H. Rider Haggard

S 152 Colonel Quaritch, V. C.
S 108 Allan Quartermain
S 80 King Solomon Mines
S 75 She

Mary J. Holmes

S 2 Rosamond Leyton
S 216 Georgie's Secret
S 230 The Unloved Husband

Rudyard Kipling

S 166 The Phantom Rickshaw
S 31 The Light That Failed
S 72 Plain Tales From the Hills

Laura J. Libbey

E 1112 Mischievous Maid Faynie
E 138 A Fatal Wooing

Mrs. Harriet Lewis

E 213 The Heiress of Egremont
S 232 Neva's Choice
S 221 Sundered Hearts
S 213 Cecil's Triumph

Mrs. Alex McVeigh Miller

E 1085 Lynette's Wedding
E 1078 The Shadow Between Them
E 1050 Married in Error

W. Clark Russell

S 143 John Holdsworth, Chief Mate
S 129 Love and Shipwreck

Mrs. Georgie Sheldon

E 2 Ruby's Reward
E 7 Two Keys
E 1 Queen Bess
E 12 Edrie's Legacy
E 44 That Dowdy
E 66 Witch Hazel
E 111 Faithful Shirley
E 122 Grazia's Mistake
E 133 Max
E 166 The Masked Bridal
E 177 A True Aristocrat
E 188 Dorothy Arnold's Escape
E 210 Wild Oats
E 219 Lost: A Pearle
E 244 A Holden's Conquest
E 266 The Wellfleet Mystery
E 415 Trixy
E 511 The Golden Key
E 512 A Heritage of Love. Sequel to "The Golden Key"
E 519 The Magic Cameo
E 520 The Heatherford Fortune. Sequel to "The Magic Cameo"
E 676 My Lady Beth

Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth

4 Em's Courtship. Sequel to "Em"
10 David Lindsay. "Sequel to "Gloria"
22 A Leap in the Dark
23 The Mysterious Marriage. Sequel to "A Leap in the Dark"
24 Her Mother's Secret
29 The Unloved Wife
30 When the Shadow Darkens
31 Lilith. Sequel to "When the Shadow Darkens"
44 The Changed Brides, or "Winning Her Way"
45 The Bride's Fate. Sequel to "The Changed Brides"
48 Cruel as the Grave, or "The Hallowe'en Mystery"
49 Tried for Her Life. Sequel to "Cruel as the Grave"
73 India, or "The Pearl of Pearle River"
78 The Bridal Eve
86 The Three Sisters
91 The Artist' Love

Robert Louis Stevenson

S 149 The Suicide Club
S 125 The Master of Ballantrae
S 83 Kidnapped
S 58 Treasure Island

Miscellaneous

E 1100 An Angel of Evil, Effie Adelaide Rowlands
E 1096 A Bachelor Girl, Lucy May Russell
S 78 Beyond the City, A. Conan Doyle
S 51 Camille Alexandre Dumas
S 67 The Cruise of the Cachalot," Frank T. Bullen
E 1127 Daredevil Betty, Evelyn Malcolm
S 147 The Dead Secret, Wilkie Collins
S 60 Dead Man's Rock, "Q" (A. T. Quiller-Couch)
S 14 East Lynne, Mrs. Henry Wood
S 138 Elsie Venner Oliver Wendell Holmes
E 1084 Ethel's Secret, Charlotte M. Stanley
E 1088 Her Husband's Other Wife, Emma Garrison Jones
E 1128 Her Life's Dark Cloud, Lillian E. Drayton
S 35 Inez, Augusta J. Evans
S 61 The Iron Pirate, Max Pemberton
S 117 John Halifax, Gentleman, Miss Mulock
E 1083 Lola Dunbar's Crime, Barbara Howard
S 63 Lorna Doone, R. D. Blackmore
S 69 The Last Days of Pompeii, Sir Bulwer Lytton
S 100 Led Astray, Octave Feuillet
S 131 Lady Audley's Secret, Miss M. E. Braddon
S 89 A Perilous Secret, Charles Reade
S 148 Ships That Pass in the Night, Beatrice Harraden
S 81 She's All the World to Me, Hall Caine
S 126 The Toilers of the Sea, Victor Hugo
S 118 The Tragedy in the Rue de la Paix, Adolphe Belot
S 53 Uncle Tom's Cabin, Harriet Beecher Stowe
S 27 Under Two Flags, "Ouida"

Given To You Without Expense

For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50c we will send you any one book free. For a club of two one-year subscriptions at 50c we will send you any 3 books. Be sure to order the books by number and also give the author's name so that you will be sure to get the book you want. Suggest one extra title which we can substitute if necessary.

ADDRESS COMFORT BOOK DEPARTMENT, AUGUSTA, MAINE.

Across the Rose Hedge

By A. W. Peach

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

LANE Alvord looked at his pleasant-faced nurse with somber eyes, and begged her to wheel him over to the rose hedge and leave him. She hesitated a moment and then complied: Then he said with a faint smile: "And now please leave me; I'll promise to be good."

When the sound of her rustling skirts had passed from hearing, he leaned forward in his invalid's wheel-chair, and stared bitterly at the bandaged arm in his lap. The hand was gone.

"Of all beastly strokes of fate, that is it!" he muttered to himself, feeling that he had ground for bitterness. A lover of outdoor life, of horses and automobiles, that lost hand would forever bar him from some of his happiest interests, would make him an object of pity as long as he lived. The thought stung him to a savage word.

A slight sound drew his attention. He lifted his head and saw on the opposite side of the hedge, thick coils of golden hair, and beneath the white fair face of a girl whose blue eyes looked at him with some hidden amusement. He saw that she too was in an invalid's chair. Evidently each nurse had not been aware that they were leaving their patients in such close proximity in the private hospital's garden.

"I beg your pardon, "he said hastily," but I am out of tune with most everything."

The deep amusement left her attractive eyes, and she said quietly: "So am I, and I would like to swear about it: Does it do any good?"

He grinned. "I can teach you if you wish to learn how, but I'm not just sure about its being of much use. It helps for the time being —that's all."

"I wonder if you have as much to thank fate for as I have," she said gently, and he guessed that her intention was to show him that he was luckier than she after all, and should be therefore more cheerful.

He lifted the bandaged arm. Her face went pale at the sight. "And you?" he questioned.

"My foot," she said simply. "I shall hobble along the rest of my life."

The deep hurt in her soul shadowed her fair face for a moment, but her eyes were brave just the same.

The look stirred him. He stretched his left hand across the hedge. "Shake!" he said. "If I swear again——"

"Or I complain," she added, laying a small hand in his.

"May the gods wreck vengeance upon us!" he ended.

A nurse appearing up the walk looked startled and then quietly withdrew at the sight of the two smiling faces, evidently reasoning that a process of course was under way over the rose hedge that was more effective than any remedy the hospital could offer.

And so it proved. With reluctant eyes, later on, Lane saw the chair of his comrade in misery wheeled from his sight, but a memory remained of a sweet face and whimsical voice that had shamed him out of his black and bitter frame of mind; and his own nurse coming afterward looked at him with surprise when she noted the change in him.

He sensed her surprise, and said with mischief in his mood, "Look here, Miss Ferguson, you are to remember that I want to be at this hedge every afternoon at two o'clock; and woe unto them who try to shift me elsewhere!"

She laughed and agreed to obey his orders; and so it came about that the pleasant afternoons found him chatting with the golden-haired girl whose spirit was to him like the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. The vow they had taken they kept; and the sunny hours found them growing nearer to each other in the mysterious way that heart approaches heart.

Then came the day when, for the first time, his strength returned, he walked weakly down the path and stood before her. She gave a little cry at the sight of him.

"Gracious, I did not know you were so tall."

"That's all I am." He looked down into eyes that vainly tried to conceal an inner tenderness. "Blue Eyes, I am long enough to do the walking for both of us; and right here and now, I am——"

Miss Ferguson suddenly appeared, agitation in her manner. "Mr. Alvord, you better return——"

"Miss Ferguson, I shall not be good any more. You run along back——"

"But I have just discovered——"

"Not what I am going to discover. Now—please."

The nurse retreated slowly, fear and doubt in her going.

Lane leaned over the chair. "Now there is no one here save us and the roses, and they won't listen. But I want you to." He spoke very gently, "You know what it is—I love you. That is all that is very important now except this—do you love me?"

Tears were in her eyes, her lips trembling. In the old, old evasion of love, she answered, "But I don't even know your name——"

"That is easy—Lane Alvord," he replied.

Her face drew into horror. "Alvord—Alvord—then you—you are the one—who ran into me with—with that great car and crippled me—me for life—No! No! No!"

He shrank from her, his blood chilling at the sight of her averted face and slight quivering form. Before his eyes with all its old panic came the memory of the scene; the dusky street, the speeding car that suddenly shot in front of him, his wild effort to avoid it, then the crash that hurled his car and himself to the sidewalk, and then a deeper darkness than the night. And here was the fair girl he had made a cripple for life, even if unknowingly.

He sank back upon the stone seat beside her chair and buried his face in his hands, going down the steep steps of pain into an abyss of misery beside which physical pain is almost pleasure. Into the darkness came a faint fragrance that recalled him slowly—a rose lay in his fingers. He started up, and looked down into grieving blue eyes.

"Forgive me," she whispered, "I know it was not your fault, but, I have felt so badly about it——"

He leaned over and kissed from her lips the tear-tinged words.

An approaching step drew them apart. The gray-headed surgeon looked at them keenly. "I judge you young people have introduced each other. Well, Miss James, we are going to let you take a practice walk this afternoon."

The surgeon stepped forward. Lane pushed his friend back. "Doc she walks with me, not only now, but to the end of time. Game hand and game foot down the world together. You get the idea?"

The surgeon nodded, "I'll be at the wedding."

"Ancient History" Concerning Autos

By L. L. Harned

Copyright, 1923, by W. H. Gannett, Pub., Inc.

AT the recent automobile shows held in the Pacific Northwest, some facts were resurrected that, in comparison with the present evolution of the automobile, almost might be classed as "ancient history."

We are told that the first steam-operated car was invented one hundred and sixty-three years ago by a Frenchman, Captain Nicholas Joseph Cugnot, and that, four years later, an American, Oliver Evans, applied for a patent on an automobile. In 1771, eleven years after the first recorded invention, a Britisher, Richard Trovittnich, startled the people by operating the first steam-driven machine ever seen on London streets.

Passing over numerous attempts to make a practical machine, we learn that the first American automobile was built by Thomas Blanchard, of Springfield, Mass. That was nearly one hundred years ago, in 1825. During the years that intervened between 1825 and 1891, the efforts to perfect a workable automobile were greatly lessened; but three events stand out during this period very prominently because they contributed to ultimate success. These events, in order, are:

The working out of a process for vulcanizing rubber by Charles Goodyear, in 1844.

The taking out of patents, in England and in America, in 1845 and 1847, on a pneumatic tire, by R. W. Thompson.

The discovery of gasolene in 1860.

In 1891 was built the first practical electric car, and in 1892, the first workable gasolene car.

In 1894 occurred the first automobile race, covering 80 miles, from Paris to Rouen.

The first American automobile race was held in 1895, and in the same year, the first pneumatic tires were used.

In 1895, in a race in France, an average of nearly 15 miles an hour was reached.

Barnum and Baily, in 1896, charged ten cents for a look at the "horseless carriage." At that time, only four automobiles were running in this country. At the present date, according to statistics, considerably more than twelve million cars and trucks are registered in the United States.

The first sale of a machine to an American was in 1898. The buyer was Robert Allison, of Port Carton, Pa., and the seller was Alexander Winton, of Cleveland.

The Oldsmobile "Pirate" made a world's record in 1903 of five miles in six and one-half minutes. This rate was more than doubled by Jimmy Murphy in France in 1921, when he made a record of more than 100 miles per hour.

A great event of 1905 was the first cross-country trip, made by two curved-dash Oldsmobiles in a race from New York to Portland, Oregon. The first car to reach its destination was "Old Scout," piloted by Dwight B. Huss, the time being 44 days. "Old Steady," driven by Percy Megargel, arrived in Portland a little more than a week later. This race was considered a thrilling achievement in those days and attracted wide attention.

Considering the evolution of the automobile during the past twenty-five years, what may we expect in the next quarter century?

Almost "Ancient History"

Comments on motor cars, contained in an article in McClure's Magazine for May, 1899, make interesting and amusing reading for the present generation, who still are wondering over the speed of 100 miles an hour reached by Jimmy Murphy in the Grand Prix race in France in 1921. The McClure article says, among other things:

"In the race from Parjs to Bordeaux and back, on June 11, 1895, seventeen motor vehicles competed for prizes aggregating $16,000. The first carriage covered the distance of 726 miles at an average rate of nearly fifteen miles an hour for both night and day running, the exact time record being forty-eight hours and fifty-three minutes.

"This demonstrated conclusively the power of motor vehicles to cover long distances at high rates of speed, for it is plain that neither horse nor bicycle could accomplish such a feat."

The following advice is needed as much today as it was twenty-four years ago: "It should be borne in mind that the carriage without a horse is also without the convenience of a horse's intelligence, which really in ordinary traffic and driving relieves the person holding the reins of a large part of his responsibility. Not even the best made motor can think, and the slightest carelessness on the part of its driver, or failure of the guiding apparatus, might precipitate an accident."

Before and After Vaccination

Few people today appreciate the suffering and terror that belonged to smallpox before the days of vaccination. In Boston, in 1721, with a population of 10,565, 5,989 persons were attacked with smallpox within a few months, and history is replete with similar examples. Macaulay stated that in the early part of the eighteenth century it was unusual to meet any one on the streets of London whose face was not scarred by the disease. Edward Jenner, the centenary of whose death is commemorated this year, performed the first vaccination with the virus of cowpox, May 14, 1796, and later proved that the boy was immune to smallpox. In spite of the most bitter opposition, this simple, safe and certain remedy has won its way and is now practiced in every civilized country. But the disease is not eradicated and wherever vaccination is not rigidly enforced, serious epidemics are certain sooner or later to develop and to bring death and mutilation in their train. Probably no greater boon has been given to mankind by the medical profession and yet, because of its success, many fail to appreciate what has been gained and refuse to accept its benefits. The history of the disease and its conquest as told by Dr. V. C. Vaughan in the July issue of Hygeia should convince the most skeptical.

Building Sound Bones

Sunlight and nourishing food mean a sturdy youngster, almost too active for the mother's peace of mind; the lack of them means a round bellied little child waddling on bowed skinny legs. It isn't always the child of the wealthy who is sturdy, however, for although his parents can afford sunlight, they also afford food too rich for his little digestive system and entertainment too frequent and too exciting for his little nervous system."—Hygeia.

Beautiful Pendant And Chain

15-inch Chain and Pendant of Rolled Gold Plate with Baroque Pearl and Stone

You can have this charming Neck Ornament for only One Subscription

From a big assortment of pendants and neck ornaments recently submitted to us we selected this one for its unusual beauty and dainty design. Style, dignity and unassuming elegance, you will all combined in a marked degree. The pendant which is of rolled-gold-plate hangs gracefully from a 15-inch rolled-gold plate cable chain. A charming diamond-shaped solitaire stone is set in the circle and a beautiful synthetical Baroque pearl is attached to the bottom of the pendant.

Given To You! For one one-year subscription (not your own) to COMFORT at 50c we will send you this beautiful Pendant and 15-inch neck chain. Reward No. 8961.

Address COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

The Happy Man

Ole Ander, a yokel, visiting in town one day, asked a restaurant proprietor:

"Got any squirrel whiskey?"

"No," said the restaurant man, "but I can slip you a little Old Crow."

"Aye don't vant to fly," said the Swede, "aye just vant to yump around a little bit."

—Youngstown Telegram.

Winter and Summer Enjoy the Beauty of an Everblooming Garden of Flowers

Winter or summer you can enjoy a perpetual garden of everblooming flowers and plants. Winter's frosts and snows need not shut out the pleasant companionship and beauty of growing things. This collection of house plants and bulbs will make the long winter months radiant with an unending series of brilliant blossoms, foliage and fragrance. And when the springtime comes again they will continue to bloom in your summer garden outdoors.

The collection consists of 5 favorite house plants and 6 popular bulbs. The plants are all well rooted, hardy stock and guaranteed to grow. The bulbs are from tested stock and should any fail to grow they will be cheerfully replaced.

Read the description below and the terms of our Free Offer. Then send your order.

Boston Ivy—No. 1

This beautiful Ivy, with its thick, dark, glossy leaves is just what you want to climb around the window. It is a rapid grower and hardy.

Two Narcissi—No. 2

Narcissus bulbs can be grown in a shallow dish partly filled with water and small stones. You will enjoy these beautiful fragrant flowers during the coming months. The flowers are double and extra large and retain their fragrance for a long time.

Fuschia—Black Prince—No. 3

This well-known house plant needs very little description except to say that the variety that we are including in this collection is the prettiest of them all. The flowers are dark purple and extra large. The foliage is glossy, giving the appearance of being waxed. You will like this plant.

Two Hyancinths—1 Blue, 1 White —No. 4

These double flowers may be grown in pots or in the water the same as the Narcissi. The flowers grow on long spikes and are especially fragrant. You will want these flowers for your indoor window garden. They will give your rooms a cheerful atmosphere.

Coleus—Brilliancy—No. 5

This is the most beautiful plant to be seen anywhere. It is literally alive with color. The foliage is its chief attraction. Every shade of the rainbow is to be found on its leaves. This is an exceptionally attractive plant that will give the home a cheerful appearance.

Geranium—Ricard—No. 6

The flowers are a brilliant scarlet, each bloom being large and full. This variety is a heavy bloomer and has dense foliage. The Ricard is a new variety which is much prettier than the common red varieties.

Calla Lily—No. 7

This wonderful lily needs but little description with its large leaves and waxen white flowers which are from five to seven inches long. Plant this bulb now and have it in full bloom during the winter months.

Chinese Sacred Lily—No. 8

This is one of the most beautiful of all known lilies. Its coloring is exquisite and with its dark green foliage makes an exceptionally pretty plant. The outside of the flower is white with a slight tinge of yellow. The inside of this lily is a canary yellow shading to pink at the top. When you see this lily in bloom you will thank us for offering it to you. This lily will be included as an extra free gift if you send your order for both collections within 15 days.

Cyclamen—White—No. 9

This attractive plant is one of the prizes of this collection. Large plants in full bloom sell from $3.50 to $5.00 each at the greenhouses. The young plants that we supply will be in bloom by Christmas or soon after and you will have a plant that will fill your neighbors with envy. The beautiful white flowers closely resemble Orchids and the attractive variegated foliage combine to make this the most pleasing plant of the lot.

How To Get the Plants and Bulbs

5 House Plants—Collection No. 8901. Consisting of one each of the following plants: GERANIUM, ENGLISH IVY, COLEUS, FUSCHIA, CYCLAMEN, will be sent to you free and postpaid for only one one-year subscription (not your own).

5 Bulbs—Collection No. 8911. This collection consists of 2 Hyacinth, 2 Narcissus and 1 Calla Lilly Bulb and will be sent to you free and postpaid for only one one-year subscription (not your own).

Order Both Collections and Get Free the extra gift of Chinese Sacred Lily.

Collection 1802. This collection consists of both the 5 house plants and the 5 bulbs and if you send us the two subscriptions required within 15 days we will send you as an extra gift, the Chinese Sacred Lily.

Send all Orders to COMFORT, Augusta, Maine.

COMFORT'S Emporium of Bargains and Opportunities

AGENTS WANTED

Make $30.00 Daily, taking orders for ...s Union-made raincoats. Factory prices, ...st sellers. Wonderful values. Your pay ...ily. We deliver and collect. American Eagle ...incoat Mfg. Co., 155 N. Union St., Dept. 29, ...icago.

Agents—$10 to $15 daily possible selling a ...e of factory priced rubber goods specialties ...r women direct from manufacturer. Free ...talogue. American Rubber Products Co. ... 105, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Agents—Answer this advertisement—our ...position is too good to pass up. $15 a day ...monstrable free; exclusive territory. Write ...day for details of this sound, high-grade ...investment proposition. American Products ...., 2-6 American Bldg., Cincinnati, O.

Big Money and Fast Sales. Every Owner ...s Gold Initials for his auto. You charge ...$1 make $1.35. Ten orders daily easy. Write ...r particulars and free samples. American ...ogram Co., Dept. 61, East Orange, N. J.

Portraits, photo pillow tops, frames, sheet ...sic, medallions, merchants' signs, waiter ...s and tea aprons, silk and wool hose ...ing 50 specialties free. 30 days credit. ...C. Bailey Co., Desk K10, Chicago.

$300 Profit:—Easy seller. "Klean-Rite" ...ks clothes without rubbing. Samples free ...ker Prod. Co., 1940-E Irving Park, Chicago.

Start Your Own Business as our sole ...ent selling 100 famous home products. All ...e time. Dr. Blair Laboratories, Dept. ... Lynchburg, Va.

Agents. Sell rich looking 36x68 imported ...s, $1 each; Carter, Tenn., sold 115 in 4 ...s, profit $57; you can do same. Write for ...ial offer selling plan; exclusive territory. ...gle rug by parcel post prepaid $1.39. ...Condon, importer, Stonington, Maine.

We Start You without a Dollar. Soaps, Ex...cts, Perfumes—Toilet Goods. Experience un...essary. Carnation Co., Dept. 131, St. Louis.

Men's Shirts. Easy to sell. Big demand ...ywhere. Make $15.00 daily. Undersell ...rs. Complete line. Exclusive patterns. ...e Samples. Chicago Shirt Manufacturers, ...W. Van Buren, Factory 122, Chicago.

Agents: C. T. A. prices lower than ever. ... $15.00 made to order, any size or style. ...ers easy to get. Big profits. Agents outfit ...ee. Sample suit at cost. Write Chicago ...lors Ass'n, Dept 405, Sta. C, Chicago.

Agents—Make a Dollar an Hour. Sell ...ndets, a patent patch for instantly mending ...aks in all utensils. Sample package free. ...ollette Mfg. Co., Dept. 452-B, Amsterdam, N.Y.

Large Jewelry firm wants representa...ives. Sell high-grade jewelry direct. Full or ...are time. Factory prices. Satisfaction guar...teed. Your generous profits in advance. ...irect Jewelry Co., 12 Central Parkway, Cin...nnati, Ohio.

Everybody uses Extracts. Sell Duo Double ...trength Extracts. Complete line necessities. ...Write today Duo Co., Dept. E 41, Attica, N.Y.

Agents—Steady income. Large manufact...rer of handkerchiefs and dress goods, etc., ...ishes representative in each locality. Factory ...o consumer. Big profits, honest goods. Credit ...ven. Send for particulars Freeport Mfg. ...o., 60 Main St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Agents—the best seller in years is our ...ger Fyr-Fyter. Not a cheap tin can at "a ...dollar a throw" but a real high grade arti...le, approved by the Underwriters. School ...oards, factories, garages, buy in quantities. ...e's fast seller to farmers, auto owners, homes, ...tc. Hustlers make $100 a week and more. ...xclusive territory to the right men. Write ...uick for our plan. Fyr-Fyter Company, ...ept. 2217, Dayton, Ohio.

Greatest Sensation! Eleven Piece Toilet ...rticle Set selling like blazes at $1.75 with ...,00 dressmakers shears free to each cus...omer. Spring rush on. Foster Reid Co., ...3 Winslow Bldg., Station C, Chicago.

Agents:—Free sample Dr. Elliott's Vege...ble Oil Soap—19 Full-sized packages right ...ut of stock. Tea, Coffee, Extracts, Spices, ...ood Products, Laundry and Toilet Soap ...amples. Everything furnished. Send postal ...oday. Dept. 56, Harley Co., Dayton, Ohio.

Agents—Our soap and toilet article plan is ...wonder; get our free sample case offer. ...Jo-Ro-Co., 117 Locust, St. Louis.

Agents: Steady big income. Take orders ...or newest style written guaranteed hosiery. ...Complete line men, women, childrens, in...luding finest silks. Written guarantee with ...each pair. Pay you in advance daily. Expe...rience unnecessary. Spare time will do. Write ...for samples. Jennings Mfg. Co., Dept. 923, ...Dayton, Ohio.

Tailoring Agents: Get our powerful ...proposition. $35.00 suits for $21.85, including ...good profit for you. Big swatch line of samp...les in handsome carrying case. Hustlers make ...$75.00 a week. Territory going fast. Write at ...once. Address Dept. 271, Knickerbocker ...Tailoring Company, 131 So. Peoria, Chicago.

General Agents. Something new. Whirl...wind seller. "Repeat" washing powder. Washes ...clothes without rubbing. Women throw away ...washboards. Big Profits. Exclusive territory. ...Write today free package. Kittredge Co., 2 ...Putnam St., Tunkhannock, Pa.

Agents: Make 100%, Toilet Articles, ...Perfumes, Extracts, Home Necessities. Sample ...Case Free. LaDerma Co., Dept. H, St. Louis.

AGENTS WANTED

Agents: $8 to $15 daily easy. New Patented Combination Kitchen Set. You take orders. We deliver and collect. Your pay daily. No experience necessary. Men or women. Full or spare time. Mac-O-Chee Company, 11210 Kennedy Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Agents—$15 a day—Easy, quick Sales—Free Auto—Big weekly Bonus. $1.50 premium Free to every customer. Simply show our Beautiful, 7 piece, Solid Aluminum Handle Cutlery Set. Appeals instantly. We deliver and collect. Pay daily. New Era Mfg. Co., 803 Madison St., Dept. 32-S, Chicago.

Agents Free Offer Captivates Customers. 20 first day—$20.00 profit. 100 celebrated necessities. National Products Co., 846 Grand St., St. Joseph, Mo.

Earn $10 to $25 a Day. Sell beautiful, durable, "Novo," Hosiery, Knitted Neckwear and Full-cut Shirts. Direct Mill to Wearer. Complete famous line, silks, sport wools. Customer satisfaction defies competition. All or spare time. Investigate. Novo Mills, Dept. R, 3rd & Sedgley, Phila., Pa.

Agents! A sale in every home for our beautiful Dress Goods, Silks and General Yard Goods. Quick sales! Big profits! Large book of nearly 1000 handsome fabric samples furnished to agents. National Importing & Mfg. Co., Dept. 24X, 573 Broadway, New York.

Make $120 Weekly In Spare Time. Sell what the public wants—long distance radio receiving sets. Two sales weekly pays $120 profit. No big investment, no canvassing. Sharpe of Colorado made $900 in one month. Representatives wanted at once. This plan is sweeping the country—write today before your county is gone. Ozarka, 809 Washington Blvd., Chicago.

Agents $5 to $12 a day. Sell Interlock guaranteed hosiery for men, women, children. Full line. All styles, colors. No experience needed. Full or spare time. Repeat orders run 90%. Prompt deliveries. Samples to start you. Parker Mfg. Co., Sample 417, Dayton, Ohio.

Agents Make $10 Daily—Big line guaranteed Extracts, Food Products, Perfumes, Toilet Goods, Household Necessities. No capital or experience needed. Free Sample Case and instructions. Write for amazing offer. Perkins Products Co., Desk 10, Hastings, Nebr.

Gloves easy to sell; big demand everywhere; motoring or dress. From factory. Samples free. John Rogalley, Gloversville, N.Y.

$250.00 for you before Christmas. Easily! with new Scripture Mottos so beautiful none can resist. You'll enjoy it. Sample and particulars free at once. This is the thing. H. A. Swank Co., B 12[illegible], Greensboro, N. C.

Bring Home the Bacon—selling Stuart's Stain Remover. Removes ink, iron rust, grass and fruit stains. Write for free samples and terms today. C. H. Stuart & Co., 5917 B'way, Newark, New York.

Agents—Sell shoes direct to ladies at home or at work. Fast selling line. Liberal pay. Splendid opportunity. Apply now. Style-Arch Shoe Company, 502 Butler Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Make Old Rugs look like new. Re-dyed on the floor with Fibertint, applied with scrub brush. $1.00 box dyes 9x12 rug. Red, Blue, Green, Brown. Sample for 6x9 rug 25c. Agents write. Teaply Co., Box 3, Somerville, N.J.

New—Unusual—Different line. With it you can earn $10 a day—everyday. The Entrancing Loveliness of Things from the Treasure House, the Dainty, Delightful, Differentness of those Wonderful, Luxurious, Low priced, Daily Necessities—these Alluring Treasures gathered from Every Quarter of the Globe—from Every Age, from Cleopatra's to the Present—Give an Atmosphere to them, a Tone that is irresistable. Big line—many novelties—many quick selling repeaters—old Million Dollar Company Display Case free. Territory going fast. Write or wire today for details. Treasure House 10 H 4 Vandalia Ave., Cincinnati, Ohio.

Agents: A Brand New Hosiery proposition for men, women and children. Must wear 12 months or replaced free. All styles, colors and finest silk hose. You can sell at less than store prices. Write for samples. Thomas Mfg. Co., Class 619, Dayton, Ohio.

Tailoring Salesmen—$50.00 extra profit guaranteed. Sell Wright's mens suits and overcoats made-to-measure $23.50, $26.50, $29.50 retail. Boys suits too! Lowest prices, biggest money-making line in America. Every sale boys suit gives you live prospect for man's suit. Women buy too. You double your sales and profits. You get your profit in advance, we deliver and collect. Large samples men and boys clothes in handsome carrying case, free. Write for full particulars. Wright & Co., Congress, Throop & Harrison Sts., Dept. C 47, Chicago.

Agents. Sell Wolverine Laundry Soap. Wonderful repeater, and good profitmaker. Free Auto to hustlers. Wolverine Soap Co., Dept. E, Grand Rapids, Mich.

Why not sell us your spare time. $2.00 an hour, $19.70 daily easy for full time, introducing New Style Guaranteed Hosiery. 57 styles, 17 colors. No capital or experience required. Just write orders, we deliver and collect. Your pay daily, also monthly bonus. Free auto offer. Elegant outfit furnished, all colors, grades including silks. Mac-O-Chee Mills Co., Desk 20610, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Rummage Sales make $50.00 daily. We start you. Representatives wanted everywhere. "Wholesale Distributors", Dept. 72, 609 Division Street, Chicago.

AGENTS WANTED

We manufacture an article of wearing apparel that can be sold in most every home by men or women agents. Enormous demand and no competition. No other firm is selling same article direct to consumers. Prices 50% less than retail stores. Our agents make big profits and get them in advance. We deliver and collect. No experience necessary. Full instructions accompany handsome selling outfit Free. We can use part or full time workers. If you want a big money-making proposition—easy sales and no competition—write at once for full details. Wright & Co., Congress, Throop & Harrison Sts., Dept. B 47, Chicago.

Sells Like Hot Cakes; Big Profits: New Ironing Wax Pad and Asbestos Rest; Clamps Board; Perfumes Clothes; Outfit 10c. Yankee Mfg. Co., 380 Atlantic Ave., B'klyn, N. Y.

Tailoring Salesmen—Make $10.00 profit on sales. Get our outfit made-to-measure suits, 160 fabrics. Six prices $18.00 to $30.00. Finest goods. Union made. Fix your own selling prices. Make all the profit you want. Undersell all competition. Lower prices than any other line you get big profits in advance. We deliver and collect. Guaranteed quality by firm established 1850. Write for full particulars. Fred Kauffmann, the American Tailor, 1300 W. Harrison St., Dept. E 47, Chicago.

We pay $8 a day taking orders for Insyde Tyres. Guaranteed to prevent punctures and blowouts. Double tire mileage. Any tire. Tremendous demand. Low priced. Write quick for agency. American Accessories Co., 220, Cincinnati, Ohio.

AUTOMOBILES

Automobile owners, garagemen, mechanics, send for free copy of America's popular motor magazine. Contains helpful, money-saving articles on repairing, overhauling, ignition, carburetors, batteries, etc. Automobile Digest, 525 Butler Bldg., Cincinnati.

FARMS FOR SALE

Strout's Farm Catalog Just Out! Save time and money by quickly finding just the farm you want. It's in new 160-page illustrated book money-making stock, dairy, poultry, grain, fruit farms. Hundreds, all kinds, all prices, near cities and throughout many states. Copy free. Call or write today. Strout Farm Agency, 150 BG, Nassau St., New York City.

Good Farm Lands!—Near thriving city in Mich. 20, 40, 80 acre tracts, $15 to $35 per acre. Easy terms. Write for free booklet. Swigart Land Co., C-1246 First Nat'l. Bank Bldg., Chicago

Small Farms in Winterless California require less capital and you can work outdoors all year. State Land Board offers choice twenty-acre farms near Merced, on 36 years time. Kings County offers ready-made farms of twenty acres or more with house, electric pump furnishing abundant water, and part of land in alfalfa. Rancho Santa Fe, San Diego County near the sea offers small farm tracts, with ample water for irrigation, climate delightful and ideal surroundings, on favorable terms. Investigate California's reasonably priced lands. Illustrated folders mailed free. C. L. Seagraves, General Colonization Agent, Santa Fe Ry., 913 Ry. Exch., Chicago.

FEMALE HELP WANTED

$6-$18 a dozen decorating pillow tops at home; pleasant work; experience unnecessary; particulars for stamp. Tapestry Paint Co., 104, LaGrange, Ind.

Ladies—Earn Money Crocheting, Tatting, making aprons and caps. Material furnished. Patterns and plans 35c. Send remittance now. Returned if desired. Kenwood Pattern Co., 6238 So. Park Ave., Chicago, Ill.

Wanted—Girls—Women. Become Milliners. $35 week. Big Fall Demand. Learn while earning. Experience unnecessary. Sample lessons free. Write immediately. Franklin Institute, Dept. C-800, Rochester, N. Y.

Earn $20 weekly, spare time, at home, addressing, mailing, music, circulars. Send 10c for music, information. American Music Co., 1658 Broadway, Dept. C-2, N. Y.

Ladies wanted everywhere: opportunity earn money home spare time. Particulars for stamp. Elier Co., D-3,236 Broadway, New York.

Wanted—Women—Girls. Learn Dressmaking—Designing at home. $35 week. Big demand. Sewing experience unnecessary. Sample lessons free. Write immediately. Franklin Institute, Dept. C-501, Rochester, N.Y.

Women wanted as representatives of Priscilla Dress Fabrics, Dry Goods, Hosiery, etc. Pleasant work. Good pay. Beautiful samples, instructions furnished. Write Fitzcharles Dry Goods Co., 619 Fitzcharles Bldg., Trenton, N. J.

Lady Agents to sell on commission table cloths and napkins. A new idea with the initial woven in them. Every home a good prospect. S. Gilmartin, Arlington, Maryland.

Wanted—$90—$150 month. Girls—Women, 18 up. Steady. Sure pay. Short hours. Pleasant. Common education sufficient. U. S. Government life positions. Write today for list. Franklin Institute, Dept. C-9, Rochester, N.Y.

REMNANTS

Gordon Remnant Store Dexter, Maine, 5 Pound bundle Bates gingham ¼ to 2 yd. lengths $3.98 Postpaid, free samples ladies wool coating, mens shirting, Circular.

Remnant Store, 1510 Vine St., Cincinnati, O. Greatest Dry Goods Bargains on Earth. Agents and Storekeepers supplied.

PATENT ATTORNEYS

Patents—Write for free Guide Book, and Evidence of Conception Blank. Send model or sketch and description for free opinion of its patentable nature. Highest References. Prompt Service. Reasonable Terms. Victor J. Evans & Co., 641 Ninth, Washington, D. C.

Inventions Commercialized on cash or royalty basis. Patented or unpatented. Write Adam Fisher Mfg. Co., 91 St. Louis, Mo.

Patents promptly procured. Moderate Fees. Best References. Send Sketch or Model. George P. Kimmel, Master of Patent Law, 27-N, Loan & Trust Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Patents Procured; Trade Marks Registered—A comprehensive, experienced, prompt service for the protection and development of your ideas. Preliminary advice gladly furnished without charge. Booklet of information and form for disclosing idea free on request. Richard B. Owen, 18 Owen Bldg., Washington, D. C.

Inventors—Desiring to secure patent should write for our book, "How To Get Your Patent." Send model or sketch and description for opinion of its patentable nature. Randolph & Co., Dept. 112, Washington, D. C.

MALE HELP WANTED

Young Men Wanted at Once. Become Draftsman and earn $50 to $100 a week. No experience required. Big demand: Splendid opportunities; clean work. Learn in spare time at Home. Send for our Free book. Just out. No charge. Address: Department 2280, Chicago Tech., 118 E. 26th St., Chicago.

Railway Postal Clerks: Start $133 month. Railroad pass; expenses paid; questions free. Columbus Institute, A-2, Columbus, Ohio.

U. S. Government wants Railway Mail Clerks. Commence $133 month. Steady positions. Travel see the country. List free. Franklin Institute, Dept. C-12, Rochester, N.Y.

Firemen, Brakemen, Baggagemen, Sleeping car, train porters (colored). $140-$200. Experience unnecessary. 828 Railway Bureau, E. St. Louis, Ill.

Firemen, Brakemen, for railroads nearest their homes—everywhere; beginners $150-$250 monthly (Which position?). Railway Association, Desk M-17, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Earn $110 to $250 monthly, expenses paid as Railway Traffic Inspector. Position guaranteed after completion of 3 months' home study course or money refunded. Excellent opportunities. Write for Free Booklet G-5, Stand. Business Training Inst., Buffalo, N. Y.

HELP WANTED

Wanted—Railway Mail Clerks. Free list of Government positions obtainable. Men and Women 17 to 45 years, Salary $1600 to $2400. Write today for booklet, free list and sample lessons. United Business Tr. Ass'n, 2451 Dinan Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

Be a Finger Print Expert. Demand increasing. Write for special free offer. American Finger Print System, 1966C, Broadway, N. Y.

Gov't Positions, $1400-$2300 yearly. Many openings. 36-page information booklet free. Chicago Civil Service College, Dept. K, Chicago.

Make Money silvering mirrors, all kinds plating, knives, spoons, auto headlights. Outfits furnished. Free booklet. International Laboratories, Dept. D6, 311 Fifth Ave., New York

Earn money at home during spare time painting lamp shades, pillow tops for us. No canvassing. Easy and interesting work. Experience unnecessary. Nileart Company, 2233, Ft. Wayne, Indiana.

All men, women, boys, girls, 17 to 60, willing to accept Government Positions, $117-$200, traveling or stationary, write, Mr. Ozment, 104, St. Louis, immediately.

We Start You In Business, furnishing everything; men and women, $30 to $100 weekly operating our "New System Candy Factories" home anywhere. Booklet free. W. Hillyer Ragsdale, Drawer 5, East Orange, N. J.

FARM WANTED

Wanted—To hear from owner of good Farm for sale. State cash price, full particulars. D. F. Bush, Minneapolis, Minn.

Want to hear from owner having farm for sale; give particulars and lowest price. John J. Black, Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin.

ENTERTAINMENTS

Tricks, magic cards, books, puzzles, novelties. Catalogue free. G. Fenner, 2401 Jefferson, Louisville, Ky.

MISCELLANEOUS

Switches—Made the sanitary way $2. From your own combings $1.50. Booklet free. Mrs. E. Mack, Canton, N. Y.

Switches made from combings. The new way. Write for Style Booklet. Mrs. E. Vandervoort, Davenport, Ia.

"From The Ballroom To Hell."—Mailed anywhere, 25c. L. E. Muncy, 136 E. Pleasant Ave., G, Syracuse, N. Y.

PHOTOPLAYS, STORIES

Wanted—Men and women ambitious to make money writing Stories and Movie Plays. Send for wonderful Free Book that tells how. Address Authors' Press, Dept. 31, Auburn, N.Y.

Writers—Attention! Stories, poems, plays, etc., are wanted for publication. Submit Mss. or write Literary Bureau, C6, Hannibal, Mo.

Photoplay Ideas Wanted by 48 Companies $25-$500 paid. Experience unnecessary. Details Free. Producers League, 311, St. Louis.

Earn $25 Weekly, writing for newspapers, magazines. Experience unnecessary; details Free. Press Syndicate, 451, St. Louis, Mo

$$$ For Ideas. Photoplay Plots accepted any form; revised, criticised, copyrighted, marketed. Advice free. Universal Scenario Corporation, 200 Security Bldg., Santa Monica & Western Ave., Hollywood, Calif.

Big Money In Writing photoplays, short stories, poems, songs, etc. Send today for free copy America's greatest magazine for writers. Filled with practical help in writing and selling. Writer's Digest, 609 Butler Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

FOR SALE

Leaf Tobacco. Chewing, five pounds $1.75; ten $3.00. Smoking, five pounds $1.25; ten $2.00. Send no money. Pay when received. Pipe & Recipe free. United Tobacco Growers, Paducah, Ky.

WANTED: TO BUY

Cash for old gold, silver, platinum points, diamonds, false teeth, Liberty Bonds, unused stamps, and precious articles. Goods returned immediately if not satisfactory. Busch Products, 141 Fifth Ave., New York.

MOVING PICTURE BUSINESS

$35.00 Profit Nightly. Small capital starts you. No experience needed. Our machines are used, endorsed by Govt. institutions. Cat free. Atlas Moving Picture, 471 Morton Bldg., Chicago.

PHOTO FINISHING

Kodak Prints 3c, Developing 5c per roll. This is our regular price. Altine Photo Co., Dept. A, 1982 Kinney Ave., Cincinnati, O

Enlarged Picture, 5x7, from any Kodak film, dime. Commercial Studio, Carthage, Missouri.

Films developed 5c; Prints 3c each. The new Davo finish. Davis Photo Shop, Dept. C, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Special Trial Offer. Your next Kodak film developed 5c, Prints 2c each. Moser & Son, 2122 St. James Ave., Cincinnati, O.

Special Trial Offer: Any size Kodak film developed for 5c; prints 3c each. Over-night service. Get a Free Auto. Ask for details. Roanoke Photo Finishing Co., 228 Bell Ave. Roanoke, Va.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Use Tailor's Mending Tissue to mend your garments. Needed in every home. Three yards 25c. The A. Bauer Co., 3 Arcade, Chattanooga, Tenn.

STAMPING NAMES

Stamp Names on key checks. Make $19 per 100. Send 25c for sample and inst. Either Sex. C. Keytag Co., Cohoes, N. Y.

HEMSTITCHING AND PICOTING

Hemstitching and Picoting Attachment, works on all sewing machines. Easily adjusted. Price $2.00 prepaid. Cash or C. O. D. Fully guaranteed. Ladies' Art Sales Co., Box 71-G, Hamtramck, Mich.

Guaranteed Hemstitching and Picoting Attachment. Fits any sewing machine. Makes beautiful work. Literature and testimonials free. $2.00 prepaid or sent C. O. D. LaFleah Hemstitching Co., Dept D, Sedalia, Mo.

BUSINESS BY MAIL

$25,000. I made it small Mail Order Business. Booklet Free. Tells How Plan 25c Free. 12 Articles worth $3. A. C. Scott, Cohoes, N.Y.

MUSIC

Piano Jazz, note or ear. Short mail course. Beginners or advanced. Learn 92 Bass Styles, Novelty Solos, 215 Syncopated Fillers, Endings, Blues. Waterman School, 277 Tait Bldg., Los Angeles.

POULTRY

Purebred Chicks: 7c up. Twelve best varieties. Catalog free. Missouri Chickeries, Box XC, Clinton, Mo.

Carbon Made from Gas

When a smoky flame of gas is burned against a metal surface, it deposits carbon black, an almost impalpable black ...uff, like that found on the chimney of a smoky lamp.

Nearly 50,000,000 pounds of carbon black are produced yearly in the United States, according to the United States Bureau of Mines, for which some forty billion cubic feet of gas are needed.

Twenty million pounds of carbon black go into rubber tires, twelve million pounds into printer's ink, and five million pounds into stove polish, while smaller quantities are used in the production of paint, phonograph records, carbon paper, crayons, typewriter ribbons, leather, and insulating materials.

Imagination is one of the First Aids to successful achievement. We must learn to think ahead of the job we are doing at the moment, and get ready for the next undertaking. It is to people who are prepared, who get the opportunity when the time comes. The person with imagination, backed up by a willingness to work, is usually the one who succeeds in doing something worth while and different. Sid says: "The danger is that you may not be taking your imagination out of the garage often enough." Imagination like a motor vehicle, needs to be carefully steered, however.

One of the finest exercises in the world, is to learn to think all the way around a problem, instead of part way around it. Then we are sure not to be misled by superficial thinking or false conclusions. Many a big man has succeeded because he followed this principle; and many a man has been good and happy because he did the same.

Because some people break the law and get away with it, is no sign that the law is wrong or they are clever. It merely proves that the law is not properly enforced, and there are still stupid and ignorant people ready to do wrong because they have the chance. Wrong doing is always stupid—a sign of shortsightedness, blindness, and extreme foolishness.

It is true that the world will beat a path to the door of the individual who can do some one thing exceptionally well. But sometimes the world is slow in getting the path made. That's why it's a good plan for us to be fairly efficient road builders ourselves, and then we can start the path and go out to meet those who may not be in a great hurry to find us.

Predetermination

The question of predetermining sex is still a matter for debate by biologists, but long ago an old philosopher said: "Boys will be boys."—Hygeia.

Defined at Last

A reformer is a fellow
Who picks out something
He doesn't like to do
And won't let any one Else do it either.
—Brooklyn Eagle.

Will Boss Everything

Mr. Vincent Rose and Miss Mary Drube of Waukegan were married Thursday at St. Mary's Church. Father Barry officiated. Miss Irene Rose assisted the bride as bridesmaid and the bride's mother was best man.—Lake Forest, Ill., Forrester.

A Divided House Falls

Cecile House obtained a divorce from W. O. House.
—News item in Dallas, Texas, Times.

Step Lively

All pedestrians it is predicted, will become motorists sooner or later. Perhaps. If they don't become angels first.—Nashville, Tennessean.

No Gentlemen Present

Young Sambo was dead broke and remarked to his fellow workmen:

"Say, which one o' yo' gentlemen gwine to loan me two bucks?"

After waiting a few minutes, and hearing no answer, he continued:

"Wat's de matter? Ain't dar no gentlemen in dis bunch?"—Automobilist.

It Happens Every Day

"Do you think the motor will entirely supersede the horse?"

"I hope not," replied Farmer Jones. "There must be some market for hay. I depend on what I make on hay to buy gasolene."—Washington Star.

A Chip of the Old Block

"What you need is a car," said Salesman McGurk "to take a ride when you've finished your work. After dinner on Sunday you can go for a spin across valleys and hills to a roadside inn." I believed what he said and bought a machine, but then something happened which I hadn't foreseen; for my son took the car across valleys and hills, while I stayed at home and settled the bills.—The Automobilist.

There are Waterloos

"Whenever we have a run-in with a traffic cop, I let my wife do the talking."

"Does that do any good?"

"Not a bit, except to convince her she can't win every argument she gets into."—American Legion Weekly.

In Lecture

Prof.—Wake that fellow next to you, will you?

Student—Aw, do it yourself—you put him to sleep.—Whirlwind, Oklahoma University.

More Spares

If pedestrians will watch their step and motorists will take care in stepping on the gas, there will be less bowling over of balled-up persons on the streets as well as on the alleys.—"Topics of the Day" Films.

Aptly Put

"Papa, what is a pedestrian?"

"An individual, my son, that is always found in front of automobiles."—Le Rire (Paris).

FREE!

Genuine Cut Glass 7-Piece Set

As an extra special offer to those who hurry their order for the handsome 110-Piece Good Luck Dinner Set which we are offering below on such an amazing, slashed price offer, we shall include, absolutely free, this entire 7-piece set of GENUINE CUT GLASS: Pitcher of 2 qt. capacity and 6 tumblers of 9 oz. capacity. Each piece is pure, sparkingly clear, thin and dainty; hand cut decorations consisting of large floral design with appropriate foliage. A useful set for water, lemonade or other home beverage; a handsome display among your other glassware. Given FREE on this offer. But remember, this offer is entirely special. Our prices are figured at rock-bottom. A limited number of these Genuine Cut Glass Sets given free just to get new customers. Get yours while this offer lasts. Read our offer below now—and act today.

$1.00 Down

Complete Service for 12 People:

This splendid set consists of:

12 dinner plates, 9 inches
12 breakfast plates, 7 1-4 in.
12 coupe soups, 7 1-2 in.
12 fruit saucers, 5 1-4 in.
12 oatmeal dishes, 6 1-4 in
1 oval open vegetable dish, 9 1-2 inches
1 round vegetable dish, 9 1-2 inches
1 sugar bowl and cover (2 pieces)
1 butter dish, 7 inches
12 cups
12 saucers
12 bread and butter plates, 6 1-4 in.
1 platter, 11 1-2 in.
1 platter, 13 1-2 in.
1 covered vegetable dish (2 pieces)
1 gravy boat
1 gravy boat stand
1 bowl, 1 pint
1 cream pitcher
1 pickle dish

Beautiful new "Good Luck" pattern showing the Goddess of Good Luck framed in a lucky horseshoe pendant, hanging from a blue ribbon bow and surrounded by a wish-bone and six green four-leaf clovers, all emblems of Good Luck—all tied together with lavender roses by a pretty ribbon scroll. Colonial design with gold decorated edges and many sided shape; each piece fired in the glaze and guaranteed not to check or craze. That splendid old English finish is applied to the clay before firing and gives that everlasting snow-white glaze. With ordinary care will last a lifetime. Weight packed about 100 lbs.

Order by No. G7603A. Send $1 With order. $2.70 monthly. Price of 110 pieces, $29.90.

"Good Luck" Dinner Set-110 Pieces

Gold Decorated Colonial Design

Madam, here's a dinner set worthy to grace the table of the most refined homes—on a simply amazing smashed price, easy payment offer. Yes, only $1.00 brings this 110-piece set to your home on trial. Now don't judge these dishes by that amazingly low price. They have that beautiful everlasting snow-white glaze that you see only in the highest grade chinaware; and that beautiful new "Good Luck" pattern with a design composed of the well known emblems which, since olden times, many have believed bring good fortune to all who possess them; and that rich, artistic Colonial design with the gold decorated edges and many-sided shape which is everywhere the choice of people with taste. This is your opportunity to get, on a bargain offer, a dish set that will give you wonderful everyday service and that you will be proud of. Special Now — FREE — 7-Piece Set of Genuine Cut Glass with hand cut decorations, if you send at once.

30 Days Trial! — $2.70 a Month!

The coupon with only $1.00 brings the 110 piece set of "Good Luck" dishes to your home on 30 days trial. Use them, examine them, compare our price with equal value anywhere else. After 30 days, decide: If you don't agree that these are simply beautiful dishes and amazing quality at the price send them back and we'll refund your $1.00 cheerfully plus any transportation charges you paid. But if you decide to keep them, start paying only $2.70 a month until you have paid—what do you think? —only $29.90 for a 110-piece set of dishes of such superb quality! You risk not a cent on this trial offer. What family isn't willing to lay aside a few cents a day for something that is needed in the home? We trust honest people anywhere in the U. S. No discount for cash; nothing extra for credit; no C. O. D.

Cut Price—Send NOW!

Free Bargain Catalog

Shows thousands of bargains in home furnishings: furniture, jewelry, carpets, rugs, curtains, silverware, phonographs, stoves, dishes, aluminum ware, porch and lawn furniture, etc. All sold on easy terms. Catalog sent free, with or without order. See coupon.

We have only a limited number of these sets for this bargain offer—so act quick while they last. If you are going to need dishes any time within the next six months, don't let this opportunity pass now. Remember, the 7-piece set of Genuine Cut Glass FREE if you hurry your order. Send the coupon now

Straus & Schram, Dept. 3047 Chicago, Ill.

Straus & Schram, Dept. 3047 Chicago, Ill.

Enclosed find $1.00. Ship special advertised 110-Piece "Good Luck" Pattern Dinner Set No. G7603A. with 7-Piece Genuine Cut Glass Set, Free. I am to have 30 days free trial. If I keep the set I will pay $2.70 monthly, $29.90 in all. If not satisfied, I am to return the dinner set and cut glass set within 30 days and you are to refund my money and any express or freight charges I paid.

Name _____

Street, R.F.D. or Box No. _____

Shipping Point _____

Post Office _____ State _____

If you want ONLY our free catalog of home furnishings mark X here: ☐

3 2044 092 773 811